

quality of being insubordinate; want of subordination; refractoriness; disobedience; resistance to lawful authority.

The insubordination of the demoralized army was beyond the influence of even the most popular of the generals.

Military insubordination is so grave and, at the same time, so contagious a disease, that it requires the promptest and most decisive remedies to prevent it from leading to anarchy.

insubstantial (in-sub-stan'shəl), a. [= F. insubstantiel = Sp. insubstantial, < ML. insubstantialis, not substantial, < L. in- priv. + LL. substantialis, substantial: see substantial.] Unsubstantial.

The great globe itself.
Yes, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind.

Shak., Tempest, iv. 1, 155.

We elders . . . are apt to smile at the first sorrow of lad or lass, as though it were some insubstantial creature of the element, which has no touch of our afflictions.

E. Dowden, Shelley, l. 98.

insubstantiality (in-sub-stan-shi-āl'-tē), n. [insubstantial + -ity.] The quality of being insubstantial; unsubstantiality.

insubstantiated (in-sub-stan'shi-ā-tēd), a. [in- + substantiate + -ed.] Embodied in substance or matter; substantially manifested.

A mind or reason . . . insubstantiated or embodied.

insuccation (in-su-kā'shən), n. [L. insucatus, pp. of insucare, improp. insuccare, soak in, < in, in, + sucus, improp. succus, juice: see succulent.] The act of soaking or moistening; maceration.

As concerning the medicating and insuccation of seeds, . . . I am no great favourer of it.

Evelyn, Sylva, l. i. § 6.

insuccess (in-suk-sēs'), n. Same as unsuccess.
insuccessfulness (in-suk-sēs'fūl-nēs), n. Unsuccessfulness. Davenant, Gondibert, Pref.

insucken (in'suk-n), a. [in + sucken.] In Scots law, in the servitude of thirlage, pertaining to a district restricted to a certain mill: as, an insucken millstone or toll. See millstone, outsucken, sucken, and thirlage.

insudate, a. [L. insudatus, pp. of insudare, sweat in or at a thing, < in, in, + sudare, sweat: see sudation.] Accompanied with sweating. Nares.

And such great victories attain'd but sell'd,
Though with more labours, and insudate toyles.

Haywood, Trola Britannica (1699).

insuet, v. An obsolete form of enueue.
insuetude (in'swē-tūd), n. [= It. insuetudine, < L. insuetudo (-din-), < insuetus, unaccustomed, < in- priv. + suetus, accustomed, pp. of suescere, be accustomed; cf. consuetudo, desuetudo.] The state of being unaccustomed or unused; unusualness. [Rare.]

Absurdities are great or small in proportion to custom or insuetude. Lander.

insufferable (in-suf'ér-g-bl), a. [in- + sufferable.] Not sufferable; not to be endured; intolerable; unbearable: as, insufferable cold or heat; insufferable wrongs.

Then turn'd to Thracia from the field of fight
Those eyes that shed insufferable light.

Pope, Iliad, xlii. 6.

Though I say nothing to your own conduct, that of your servants is insufferable.

Goldsmith, She Stoops to Conquer, iv.

The fine sayings and exploits of their heroes remind us of the insufferable perfections of Sir Charles Grandison.

Macaulay, History.

insufferably (in-suf'ér-g-bli), adv. In an insufferable manner; to an intolerable degree: as, insufferably bright; insufferably proud.

His [Persius'] figures are generally too bold and daring; and his tropes, particularly his metaphors, insufferably strained.

Dryden, tr. of Juvenal, Ded.

insufficiency (in-su-fish'ēns), n. [ME. insufficiens (in older form insuffiance, q. v., < OF. (also F.) insuffiance; < OF. insufficiens = Pr. Fg. insufficiencia = Sp. insufficiencia = It. insufficienza, < LL. insufficiencia, insufficiency, < insufficiens (-ē), insufficient: see insufficient.] Insufficiency. [Rare.]

And I confess my simple insufficiency:
I'll haf I sene, and reportit well less,
Of this materia to haf experience.

Books of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), l. 102.

We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Shak., W. T., l. i. 1, 16.

insufficiency (in-su-fish'gn-si), n. [As insufficiency: see -cy.] Lack of sufficiency; deficiency in amount, force, or fitness; inadequacy.

ness; incompetency: as, insufficiency of supplies; insufficiency of motive.

If they shall perceive any insufficiency in you, they will not omitte any occasion to harm you.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 178

At the time when our Lord came, the insufficiency of the Jewish religion, of natural religion, of ancient tradition, and of philosophy, fully appeared.

Jortin, Christian Religion, iv.

Active insufficiency of a muscle, the inability of the muscle to act, owing to too close approximation of the points of origin and insertion, as in the case of the gastrocnemius when the knee is bent.

insufficient (in-su-fish'ent), a. [ME. insufficient (also insuffiant, q. v., < OF. (also F.) insuffiant; < OF. insuffient = Sp. insuficiente = Pg. It. insufficiente, < LL. insufficient (-ē), not sufficient, < L. in- priv. + sufficiens (-ē), sufficient: see sufficient.] Not sufficient; lacking in what is necessary or required; deficient in amount, force, or fitness; inadequate; incompetent: as, insufficient provision or protection; insufficient motives.

All other insufficient [to play in the pageants] personages, either in connyng, voice, or personage, to discharge, ammove, and avoid.

Quoted in York Plays, Int., p. xxxvii.

The bishop to whom they shall be presented may justly reject them as incapable and insufficient.

Spencer, State of Ireland.

It may come one day to be recognized that the number of legs, the villosity of the skin, or the termination of the os sacrum, are reasons insufficient for abandoning a sensitive being to the caprice of a tormentor.

F. P. Cobbe, Peak in Darien, p. 145.

insufficiently (in-su-fish'ent-li), adv. In an insufficient manner; inadequately; with lack of ability, skill, or fitness.

insufficiency, n. [ME. < OF. insuffiance, insufficiency: see insufficiency.] Insufficiency. Halliwell.

Alle be it that I didde none my self for myne unable insuffiance, now I am comen home.

Manderiville, Travels, p. 315.

insuffisant, a. [ME. < OF. insuffisant, insufficient: see insufficient.] Insufficient.

What may ben ynow to that man, to whom alle the world is insuffisant?

Manderiville, Travels, p. 298.

insufflate (in-suf'lat), v. t.; pret. and pp. insufflated, ppr. insufflating. [LL. insufflatus, pp. of insufflare, blow or breathe into, < L. in, in, into, upon, + sufflare, blow from below, < sub, below, under, + flare = E. blow: see flatus.] 1. To blow into; specifically, in med., to treat by insufflation. See insufflation, 3.—2. Eccles., to breathe upon, especially upon catechumens or the water of baptism. See insufflation, 2.

insufflation (in-su-fā'shən), n. [= F. insufflation = Pg. insufflacio = It. insufflazione, < LL. insufflatio (-n-), a blowing into, < insufflare, pp. insufflatus, blow or breathe into: see insufflate.] 1. The act of blowing or breathing on or into.

The Journal of the Franklin Institute observes the method of insufflation and evaporation referred to is simply the blowing of streams of air, not necessarily heated, into a liquid warmed by some usual means to some desired temperature, which may or may not be the boiling point of the liquid.

Ure, Dict., IV. 550.

2. Eccles., the act or ceremony of breathing upon (a person or thing), symbolizing the influence of the Holy Ghost and the expulsion of an evil spirit. This ceremony is used in some ancient and Oriental rites, in exorcism of the water of baptism, and in the Greek and Roman Catholic churches and elsewhere in exorcism of catechumens. See exsufflation.

Thus St. Basil, expressly comparing the divine insufflation upon Adam with that of Christ, John xx. 22, upon the apostles, tells us it was the same Son of God, "by whom God gave the insufflation, then indeed together with the soul, but now into the soul."

Ep. Bull, State of Man before the Fall.

They would speak less alightingly of the insufflation and extreme unction used in the Romish Church.

Cotteridge.

3. In med., the act of blowing air into the mouth of a new-born child to induce respiration, or of blowing a gas, vapor, or powder into some opening of the body.

insufflator (in-su-fā-tor), n. [NL. < LL. insufflatus, pp. of insufflare, blow into: see insufflate.] 1. A form of injector for impelling air into a furnace. It is practically an injector blower.

By a slight change in the apparatus it becomes a hydrocarbon burner or blower, for delivering a stream of oil mingled with air and steam under pressure to a furnace.

2. A medical instrument for blowing air, or a gas, vapor, or powder, into some opening of the body. See insufflation, 3.

insult (in'sūt), n. A word found only in the place cited, and undoubtedly a printer's error. Most modern editions have "infinite cunning" in place of the old "insulte comming."

And, in fine,
Her sweet coming with her modern grace,
Subdued me to her rate.

Shak., All's Well, v. 2, 215.

insuitability (in-sū-tā-bil'-tē), n. [insuitable: see -bility.] Unsuitableness; incongruity.

The inequality and the insuitability of his arms, and his grave manner of proceeding.

Shelton, tr. of Don Quixote, iv. 19.

insuitable (in-sū-tā-bl), a. [in- + suitable.] Unsuitable.

Many other rites of the Jewish worship seemed to him insuitable to the divine nature.

By Burnet, Life of Rochester.

insula (in'gū-lā), n.; pl. insule (-lā). [L., an island: see isole.] In anat., a portion of the cerebral cortex concealed in the Sylvian fissure, consisting of five or six radiating convolutions, the gyri operi. It lies just out from the lenticular nucleus. Also called island of Reil, lobule of the Sylvian fissure, lobule of the corpus striatum, and central lobe. See under gyrus.—Insula Reil. Same as insula.

insular (in'gū-lār), a. and n. [= F. insulaire = Sp. Fg. insular, < L. insularis, of or belonging to an island, < insula, an island, perhaps < in, in, + salum, the main sea, = Gr. oálōr, surge, swell of the sea. Hence ult. (< L. insula) E. isole, isolate, etc.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to an island; surrounded by water: opposed to continental.

Their insular situation defended the people from invasions by land.

J. Adams, Works, IV. 605.

2. Hemmed in like an island; standing alone; surrounded by what is different or incongruous: as, an insular eminence in a plain.

But how insular and pathetically solitary are all the people we know!

Emerson, Society and Solitude.

3. Of or pertaining to the inhabitants of an island; characteristic of insulated or isolated persons; hence, narrow; contracted: as, insular prejudices.

England had long been growing more truly insular in language and political ideas when the Reformation came to precipitate her national consciousness.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 140.

4. In entom., situated alone: applied to galls which occur singly on a leaf.—5. In anat., of or pertaining to the insula of the brain, or island of Reil.—Insular scleremia. See scleremia.

II. n. One who dwells in an island; an islander.

It is much to be lamented that our insulars . . . should yet, from grossness of air and diet, grow stupid or doat sooner than other people.

Ep. Berkeley, Siris, § 100.

insularism (in'gū-lār-izm), n. [insular + -ism.] The quality of being insular in personal character; narrowness of opinion or conception; mental insularity.

His [Alfred's] freedom from a narrow insularism.

J. H. Green, Conq. of Eng., p. 95.

insularity (in'gū-lār'-tē), n. [= F. insularité; as insular + -ity.] The state of being an island, or of being insular in situation or character; restriction within or as within an island; that which is characteristic of an island or of the inhabitants of an island; insularism.

In his first voyage to the South Sea, he discovered the Society Islands, determined the insularity of New Zealand, . . . and made a complete survey of both.

Cook, Third Voyage, v. 2.

We may rejoice in and be grateful for the insularity of our position, but we cannot escape from the inherent solidarity of all civilized races.

W. R. Greg, Misc. Essays, 1st ser., p. 25.

Cosmopolitanism is greater than selfish insularity.

Westminster Rev., CXXV. 515.

insularly (in'gū-lār-li), adv. In an insular manner.

insulary (in'gū-lār-i), a. and n. [L. insularis, insular: see insular.] I. a. Same as insular. [Rare.]

Druma, being surrounded with the sea, is hardly to be invaded, having many other insulary advantages.

Howell.

II. n. Same as insular. [Rare.]

Clearly, therefore, it is not for us, poor insulars that we are, to judge of the moral aspect of the "Naturalist" movement.

Contemporary Rev., LI. 61.

insulate (in'gū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. insulated, ppr. insulating. [LL. insulatus, made like an island, pp. of insulare (> It. isolare (> ult. E. isolate) = F. insuler), make like an island, < insula, island: see insular.] 1. To make an island of (a place) by surrounding it with water.

An impetuous torrent boiled through the depth of the chasm, and, after eddying round the base of the castle rock, which it almost insulated, disappeared in the obscurity of a woody glen.

Peacock, Melincourt, l.

2. To place in an isolated situation or condition; set apart from immediate contact or association with others; detach; r

In Judaism, the special and insulated situation of the Jews has unavoidably impressed an exclusive bias upon its principles. De Quincey.

Everything that tends to insulate the individual—to surround him with barriers of natural respect, so that each man shall feel the world as his, and man shall treat with man as a sovereign state with a sovereign state—tends to true union as well as to greatness. Emerson, Misc., p. 95.

3. In elect. and thermotics, to separate, as an electrified or heated body, from other bodies by the interposition of a non-conductor; more specifically, in the case of electricity, to separate from the earth (since an electrified body tends to part with its electricity to the earth). This is accomplished by supporting the body by means of silk, glass, resin, or some other non-conductor, or surrounding it with such materials. See insulator. Also isolate.
4. In chem., to free from combination with other substances.

insulate (in-sū-lāt), a. [L. insulatus, insulated: see the verb.] In entom., detached from other parts or marks of the same kind.—Insulate vein, a discal vein or nervure of the wing not connected with another.

insulation (in-sū-lā'shon), n. [L. insulate + -ion.] 1. The act of insulating or detaching, or the state of being detached, from other objects.—2. In elect. and thermotics, that state in which the communication of electricity or heat to other bodies is prevented by the interposition of a non-conductor; also, the material or substance which insulates. See insulate and insulator.—3. The act of setting free from combination, as a chemical body; isolation.

insulator (in-sū-lā-tor), n. [L. insulate + -or.] One who or that which insulates; specifically, Insulators.

A, glass insulator used on Western Union lines, usually supported by an oak stalk.
B, double-cup insulator used on English lines: c, c', cups of brown earthenware; A, an oak stalk by means of which the insulator is fixed to the cross-arm of the telegraph pole.
In the case of electricity the commonest insulators for supports are glass, porcelain, and vulcanized rubber; and for covering wires conveying currents, silk, cotton, gutta-percha, and rubber. These substances do not absolutely prevent the communication of electricity, but a good glass Leyden jar, for example, will hold a charge for months. No perfect insulator for either electricity or heat is known, and the distinction between conductors and insulators is somewhat arbitrary.

insulous (in-sū-lus), a. [L. insulosus, full of islands, L. insula, island: see insular.] Abounding in islands. Bailey.

insulet (in-sul'), a. [= Sp. Pg. It. insulso, L. insulcus, unsalted, insipid, in- priv. + salus, salted, pp. of salere, salt: see salt, sauce.] Dull; insipid; stupid; as, "insulese and frigid affectation." Milton.

insulity (in-sul'si-ti), n. [L. insulitia (-t), tastelessness, insipidity, insulcus, unsalted, insipid: see insulac.] Dullness; insipidity; stupidity.

To justify the counsels of God and fate from the insulity of mortal tongues. Milton, Divorce, ll. 3.

insult (in-sult'), v. [F. insultor = Sp. Pg. insultar = It. insultare, L. insultare, leap or spring at or upon, behave insolently toward, insult, ML. attack, freq. of insilire, leap at or upon, in- on, at, + salire, leap: see salient, and cf. assault, cault, result.] 1. trans. 1. To leap upon; specifically, to make a sudden, open, and bold attack upon; attack in a summary manner, and without recourse to the usual forms of war. [Rare.]

An enemy is said to insult a coast when he suddenly appears upon it, and debarks with an immediate purpose to attack. Steuqner.

2. To offer an indignity to; treat contemptuously, ignominiously, or insolently, either by speech or by action; manifest scorn or contempt for.

Not so Atreides: he, with wonted pride,
The sire insulted, and his gifts deny'd.
Pope, Iliad, l. 483.

A stranger cannot so much as go into the streets of the town [Damascus] that are not usually frequented by them without being insulted.

Pococke, Description of the East, l. 19.

I shall not dare insult your wits so much
As think this problem difficult to solve!
Browning, Ring and Book, ll. 271.

II. intrans. 1†. To leap or jump.

And they know how,
The lion being dead, even hares insult.
Daniel, Funeral Poem.

There shall the Spectator see some insulting with joy; Others fretting with melancholy. B. Jonson, Discoveries.

2. To behave with insolent triumph; exult contemptuously; with on, upon, or over. [Obsolete or archaic.]

You I afford my pity; baser minds Insult on the afflicted.

Fletcher (and another?), Prophetess, iv. 5.
I insult not over his misfortunes, though he has himself occasioned them. Dryden, Duke of Guise.

What then is her reward, that out of perverseness, Contemns the honest passion of her lover, insult (in'sult), n. [LL. insultus, insult, scolding, lit. a leaping upon, L. insilire, pp. insultus, leap upon, insult: see insult, v.] 1†. The act of leaping on anything.
Insults upon his virtue? Shirley, Love Tricks, iv. 2.

The bull's insult at four she may sustain.

Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, ll. 99.

2. An assault; a summary assault; an attack. [Rare.]

Many a rude tower and rampart there Repelled the insult of the air.
Scott, Marmion, vi. 2.

3. An affront, or a hurt inflicted upon one's self-respect or sensibility; an action or utterance designed to wound one's feelings or ignominiously assail one's self-respect; a manifestation of insolence or contempt intended to provoke resentment; an indignity.

To refuse a present would be a deadly insult—enough
To convert the would-be donor into an inveterate and implacable enemy. O'Donovan, Merv, xiv.

And I heard sounds of insult, shame, and wrong,
And trumpets blown for war. Tennyson, Fair Women.

4. Contemptuous treatment; outrage.

Yet e'en these bones from insult to protect.

Gray, Elegy.

To take an insult, to submit without retaliation to something regarded as insulting: as, I will take no insults from you.—Syn. 3. Indignity, etc. See affront.

insultable (in-sul'ta-bl), a. [in- + insult + -able.] Capable of being insulted; apt to feel insulted; quick to take insult.

Civility has not completed its work if it leave us unsocial, morose, insultable. Alcott, Tablets, p. 71.

insultance (in-sul'tans), n. [insultant (-t) + -ce.] Insult; insolence.

I staid our oars, and this insultance used;
Cyclop! thou shouldst not have so much abuse Thy monstrous forces. Chapman, Odyssey, ix.

insultant (in-sul'tant), a. [L. insultant (-t), pp. of insultare, insult: see insult, v.] Inflicting insult; wounding honor or sensibility; insulting. [Rare.]

Meanwhile for thy insultant ambassage, Cherub, abide in chains, a spy's desert.
Dickens, Yesterday, To-day, and Forever, viii. 376.

insultation (in-sul-tā'shon), n. [= OF. insultation = It. insultazione, L. insultatio (-n), a leaping upon, a scolding, insultare, leap upon: see insult, v.] The act of insulting or treating with indignity; manifestation of contempt or scorn.

When he looks upon his enemies dead body, 'tis with a kind of noble heaviness, not insultation.

Sir T. Overbury, Characters, A Worthy Commander.
The impudent insultations of the basest of the people.

Prideaux, Euchologia, p. 185.

insulter (in-sul'ter), n. 1†. One who attacks.

Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth.

Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 550.

2. One who insults or offers an indignity.

insulting (in-sul'ting), p. a. 1†. Attacking; injurious.

And the fire could scarcely preclude against the insulting tyrannic of the cold, to warm them.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 484.

2. Containing or inflicting insult; derogatory or abusive: as, insulting language.—Syn. Insolent, Insulting (see insolent); abusive, blackguard, ribald.

insultingly (in-sul'ting-li), adv. In an insulting manner; with insolent contempt.

insultment (in-sul'tment), n. [in- + insult + -ment.] The act of insulting; an insult.

Be on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body.

Shak., Cymbeline, ll. 5, 145.

insumer (in-sūm'), v. t. [L. insumere, take, assume, in- in, + sumere, take: see sumption. Cf. assume, consume, etc.] To take in; absorb.

In dressing the roots be as sparing as possible of the fibres, . . . which are as it were the sanguiferous veins, which insume and convey the nourishment to the whole tree.

Boehm, Terra (ed. 1885), p. 25.

insuperability (in-sū'pə-rā-bil'i-ti), n. [in- + superable: see -bility.] The quality of being insuperable.

insuperable (in-sū'pə-rā-bl), a. [OF. insuperable, insuperable = Sp. insuperable = Pg. insuperavel = It. insuperabile; as in- + superable.] Not superable; incapable of being passed over, overcome, or surmounted.

Overhead up grew Insuperable height of loftiest shade,
Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm.
Milton, P. L., iv. 138.

The difficulties of his task had been almost insuperable, and his performance seemed to me a real feat of magic.

H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 272.

—Syn. Insurmountable, impassable, unconquerable, invincible.

insuperableness (in-sū'pə-rā-bl-nes), n. The character of being insuperable or insurmountable; insuperability.

insuperably (in-sū'pə-rā-bl), adv. In an insuperable manner; insurmountably; inextricably.

Many who toll through the intricacy of complicated systems are insuperably embarrassed with the least perplexity in common affairs. Johnson, Rambler, No. 180.

insupportable (in-su-pōr'ta-bl), a. [= F. insupportable = Pg. insupportavel, LL. insupportabilis, not supportable, in- priv. + supportabilis, supportable: see supportable.] 1. Not supportable; incapable of being supported or borne; insufferable; intolerable.

To those that dwell under or near the Equator this spring would be a most pestilent and insupportable Summer.

Bentley.

Too weak to bear
The insupportable fatigue of thought.

Cowper, Task, vi. 108.

2†. Irresistible.

That when the knight he spide, he gan advance,
With huge force and insupportable mayne,
And towards him with dreadful fury prance.

Spenser, F. Q., l. vii. 2.

insupportableness (in-su-pōr'ta-bl-nes), n. The quality of being insupportable; insufferableness; the state of being beyond endurance.

insupportably (in-su-pōr'ta-bl), adv. 1. So as not to be supported or endured; intolerably.

Who follows his desires, such tyrants serve
As will oppress him insupportably.

Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, v. 1.

2†. Irresistibly.

When insupportably his foot advanced.

Milton, S. A., l. 136.

insupposable (in-su-pō'za-bl), a. [in- + supposable.] Not supposable; incapable of being supposed.

insuppressible (in-su-pres'i-bl), a. [in- + suppressible.] Not suppressible; incapable of being suppressed or removed from observation.

insuppressibly (in-su-pres'i-bl), adv. So as not to be suppressed or concealed.

insuppressive (in-su-pres'iv), a. [in- + suppressive.] Incapable of being suppressed; insuppressible. [Rare.]

But do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor th' insuppressive metal of our spirits.

Shak., J. C., ll. 1, 134.

Man must soar;
An obstinate activity within.

An insuppressive spring, will toss him up
In spite of fortune's load.

Young, Night Thoughts, vii.

insurable (in-shōr'a-bl), a. [in- + insure + -able.] Capable of being insured against loss, damage, death, and the like; proper to be insured.—Insurable interest. See insurance, 2.

The French law annuls the latter policies so far as they exceed the insurable interest which remained in the insured at the time of the subscription thereof. Wales.

insurance (in-shōr'ans), n. [= OF. ensurance, assurance, C. ensurer, insure: see insure.] 1.

The act of insuring or assuring against loss; a system of business by which a company or corporation (called an insurance company, or, rarely, assurance company or society) guarantees the insured to a specified extent and under stipulated conditions against pecuniary loss arising from such contingencies as loss of or damage to property by fire or the efforts to extinguish fire (fire-insurance), or by shipwreck or disaster at sea (marine insurance), or by explosion, breakage, or other accidents to property, or the loss of future earnings, either through disablement (accident-insurance) or through death (life-insurance), etc. Also called assurance. Specifically—2. In law, a contract by which one party, for an agreed consideration (which is proportioned to the risk involved), undertakes to compensate the other for loss on a specified thing, from specified causes. The party agreeing to make the compensation is usually called the insurer or underwriter, the other the insured or assured, the agreed consideration the premium, the written contract a policy, the events insured against risks or perils, and the subject, right, or interest to be protected the insurable interest. Bourier.

8. The premium paid for insuring property, life, etc.—4t. Engagement; betrothal.

Dyd I not knowe afore of the insurances Betweene Gawyn Goodlucke and Christian Custance?
Udall, Boister Doister, iv. 6.

Agreement for insurance. See agreement.—Co-insurance, insurance in which two or more parties are jointly responsible for any loss which may come upon certain specified property; specifically, a form of insurance in which the insured, in consideration of a reduced rate of premium, agrees to maintain insurance upon his property to a certain specified extent, say 80 per cent. of its actual cash value, and failing to do so becomes his own insurer for the difference, and in case of partial loss is jointly responsible with the insurance company in that proportion.—Graveyard insurance, a method of swindling insurance companies by means of insurance effected on the life of a very old or infirm person, who, through collusion with the medical examiner, may be personated by one of robust health, or otherwise falsely passed upon.—Hazardous insurance. See hazardous.—Insurance broker, one whose business it is to procure insurance for other persons, or to act as broker between owners of property and insurance companies.—Insurance commissioner, in some of the United States, a State officer who in behalf of the public maintains a supervision over the affairs of insurance companies.—Insurance company, a company or corporation whose business is to insure against loss or damage.—Insurance policy. See def. 2, above.—Syn. Assurance, Insurance. See the extract.

The terms insurance and assurance have been used indiscriminately for contracts relative to life, fire, and shipping. As custom has rather more frequently employed the latter term for those relative to life, I have in this volume entirely restricted the word assurance to that sense. If this distinction be admitted, assurance will signify a contract dependent on the duration of life, which must either happen or fail, and insurance will mean a contract relating to any other uncertain event, which may partly happen or partly fail.

Babbage, Comparative View of Institutions for Assurance (of Lives (1836), quoted in Encyc. Brit., XIII. 109.

[The distinction here made has not become established, although it is observed to some extent, especially in Great Britain.]

insurancet (in-shŭr'ən-sēr), n. [insurance + -et.] An insurer; an underwriter.

The far-fam'd sculptor, and the laurell'd bard,
Those bold insurancers of deathless fame,
Supply their little feeble aids in vain.

Blair, The Grave.

insure (in-shŭr'), v.; pret. and pp. insured, ppr. insuring. [Also insure; ME. insuren, insuren, ensuren, < OF. (AF.) ensurer, assure, < en-scur, sure. Cf. assure, which is earlier.] I. trans. 1. To make sure, certain, or secure; give assurance of; assure: as, to insure safety to any one.

The knight ensured hym his feith to do in this maner.
Morlin (E. E. T. S.), III. 684.

I ensure you, very many godly men in divers places give daily thanks unto God in prayer for you.

T. Lever, in Bradford's Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 137.

It is easy to attend debts on succeeding ages, but how to ensure peace for any term of years is difficult enough.

Swift.

Specifically—2. To guarantee or secure indemnity for future loss or damage (as to a building from fire, or to a person from accident or death) on certain stipulated conditions; make a subject of insurance; assure: as, to insure a ship or its cargo, or both, against the dangers of the sea; to insure a house against fire.

Take a whiff from our fields, and your excellent wives
Will declare it's all nonsense insuring your lives.

O. W. Holmes, Berkshire Festival.

3t. To pledge; betroth.

There grew such a secret love between them that at length they were insured together, intending to marry.
G. Cavendish, Wolsey (ed. Singer, 1825), I. 57.

—Syn. Assure, Assure. Assure may express the making certain in mind: as, I was assured of safety by his friendly manner; insure has not this sense. Insure is a possible word to express the making certain in fact, and is more common than assure: as, his lack of money insured his early return; assure has not this sense. Insure and assure are both used of the act of pledging a payment of money upon loss or death, but assure is rarely used in that sense in the United States.

II. intrans. To undertake to secure or assure against loss or damage on receipt of a certain payment or premium; make insurance: as, the company insures at a low premium.

insurer (in-shŭr'ēr), n. 1. One who or that which insures or makes sure or certain.

The mysterious Scandinavian standard of white silk, having in its centre a raven, . . . the supposed insurer of victory.
Proble, Hist. of the Flag, p. 164.

2. One who contracts, in consideration of a stipulated payment called a premium, to indemnify a person or company against certain perils or losses, or against a particular event; an underwriter.

That the chance of loss is frequently undervalued, and scarce ever valued more than it is worth, we may learn from the very moderate profit of insurers.

Adam Smith, Wealth of Nations, I. 10.

insurge (in-sērj'), v.; pret. and pp. insurged, ppr. insurgir. [Early mod. E. insurge; < F. insurger = Sp. Pg. insurgir = It. insurgere, < L. insurgere, rise upon, rise up against, < in, upon, + surgere, rise: see surge.] I. trans. To rise against anything; engage in a hostile uprising; become insurgent.

It is the devilish sort of men that *insurge*th and relisteth garbille against the verities. J. Udall, On Luke xlii.

What mischief hath insurged in realms by intestine division.
Hall, Hen. IV., I, I, Int.

If in the communication or debating thereof, either with her some or his counsell, their shulde insurge any doubts or difficultie, . . . she wolde interpone her authority.

State Papers, Wolsey to Hen. VIII., 1527.

II. trans. To stir up to insurrection. [Rare.]

The news of the dispute between England and Spain about Nootka Sound in 1790 recalled him [Miranda] to England, where he saw a good deal of Pitt, who had determined to make use of him to insurge the Spanish colonies, but the peaceful arrangement of the dispute again destroyed his hopes.

Encyc. Brit., XVI. 498.

insurgence (in-sēr-jens), n. [= F. insurgence; as insurgent + -ce.] Same as insurgency.

There was a moral insurgence in the minds of grave men against the Court of Rome.

George Eliot, Romola, lxxi.

insurgency (in-sēr-jen-si), n. The state or condition of being insurgent; a state of insurrection.

Our neighbors, in their great revolutionary agitation, if they could not comprehend our constitution, imitated our arts of insurgency. I. D'Israeli, Amen, of Lit., II. 363.

insurgent (in-sēr-jent), a. and n. [< F. insurgent = Sp. Pg. It. insurgente, < L. insurgens (t) n., ppr. of insurgere, rise up or to, rise up against: see surge.] I. a. Rising against lawful authority or established government; engaged in insurrection or rebellion: as, insurgent chiefs.

In the wildest anarchy of man's insurgent appetites and sins, there is still a reclaiming voice.

Chalmers.

Many who are now upon the pension rolls, and in receipt of the bounty of the Government, are in the ranks of the insurgent army, or giving them aid and comfort.

Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 174.

II. n. One who rises in forcible opposition to lawful authority; one who engages in armed resistance to a government or to the execution of laws.

Rich with her spoils, his sanction will dismay,
And bid the insurgents tremble and obey.

Falconer, The Demagogue.

The insurgents rode about the town, and cried, Liberty! liberty! and called upon the people to join them.

J. Adams, Works, I. 108.

To advance is the only safety of insurgents.

R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., xv.

—Syn. Insurgent, Rebel, Traitor. An insurgent differs from a rebel chiefly in degree. The insurgent opposes the execution of a particular law or scheme of laws, or the carrying out of some particular measure, or he wishes to make a demonstration in favor of some measure or to express discontent; the rebel attempts to overthrow or change the government, or he revolts and attempts to place his country under another jurisdiction. A traitor is one who breaks faith or trust by betraying his country or violating his allegiance, especially a sworn allegiance: the word is applied in strong reprobation to one who, even without express breach of faith, makes war upon his sovereign or country, or goes over from the side to which his loyalty is due. See insurrection.

insurmountability (in-sēr-moun-ta-bil'i-ti), n. [< insurmountable: see -bility.] The character of being insurmountable.

insurmountable (in-sēr-moun'ta-bl), a. [= F. insurmountable; as in-3 + surmountable.] Not surmountable; incapable of being surmounted, passed over, or overcome.

The face of the mountain towards the sea is already by nature, or soon will be by art, an insurmountable precipice.

H. Swinburne, Travels through Spain, viii.

insurmountableness (in-sēr-moun'ta-bl-nes), n. The state of being insurmountable.

insurmountably (in-sēr-moun'ta-bli), adv. So as not to be surmounted or overcome.

insurrect (in-su-rekt'), v. t. [< L. insurrectus, ppr. of insurgere, rise up: see insurge, insurgent.] 1t. To rise up.

Richard Franck, in his Northern Memoirs, p. 202, uses insurrect of "vapour."

F. Hall, False Philol., p. 73.

2. To rise; make an insurrection. [Colloq.]

If there's any gratitude in free niggers, now they'll insurrect and take me out of prison.

Venety Fair, April 5, 1862.

insurrection (in-su-rek'shon), n. [= F. insurrection = Sp. insurrección = Pg. insurreição =

It. insurrezione, < L.L. insurrectio (n-), (in a gloss), a rising up, insurrection, < L. insurgere, pp. insurrectus, rise up: see insurgent.] 1t. A rising up; uprising.

He [an impulsive man] lies open to every insurrection of ill humour, and every invasion of distress.

H. Blair, Works, II. II.

2. The act of rising against civil authority or governmental restraint; specifically, the armed resistance of a number of persons to the power of the state; incipient or limited rebellion.

It is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

Ezra iv. 13.

In the autumn of 1806 his [Napoleon's] troops penetrated into Prussian Poland, where French agents had stirred up an insurrection, and in 1807 the Russians, Prussia's only hope, were defeated at Friedland.

Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, App. II., p. 403.

It is not the insurrections of ignorance that are dangerous, but the revolts of intelligence.

Lowell, Democracy.

Whisky Insurrection or Rebellion, an outbreak in Pennsylvania in 1794 against the enforcement of an act of Congress of 1791 imposing an excise duty on all spirits distilled within the United States. A large body of militia was sent to the disturbed district, but the insurrection was suppressed without bloodshed.—Syn. 2. Insurrection, Sedition, Rebellion, Revolt, Mutiny, Riot. The first five words are distinguished from the last in that they express action directed against government or authority, while riot has this implication only incidentally if at all. They express actual and open resistance to authority, except sedition, which may be secret or open, and often is only of a nature to lead to overt acts. An insurrection goes beyond sedition in that it is an actual rising against the government in discontent, in resistance to a law, or the like. (See insurgent, n.) Rebellion goes beyond insurrection in aim, being an attempt actually to overthrow the government, while an insurrection seeks only some change of minor importance. A rebellion is generally on a larger scale than an insurrection. A revolt has generally the same aim as a rebellion, but is on a smaller scale. A revolt may be against military government, but is generally, like insurrection, sedition, and rebellion, against civil government. A mutiny is organized resistance to law in an army or navy, or sometimes a similar act by an individual. All these words have figurative uses. When literally used, only insurrection and revolt may be employed in a good sense. The success of a rebellion often dignifies it with the name of a revolution. A riot is generally a blind and unguided outburst of fury, with violence to property and often to persons: as, the draft-riots in New York city in 1863.

insurrectional (in-su-rek'shon-al), a. [= F. insurrectionnel = Sp. insurreccional; as insurrection + -al.] Of or pertaining to insurrection; consisting in insurrection.

insurrectionary (in-su-rek'shon-ē-ri), a. [< insurrection + -ary.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of insurrection; favoring or engaged in insurrection: as, insurrectionary acts.

The author writes that on their murderous insurrectionary system their own lives are not sure for an hour, nor has their power a greater stability.

Burke, A Regiole Peace, iv.

A proclamation was issued for closing the ports of the insurrectionary districts by proceedings in the nature of a blockade.

Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 143.

insurrectionist (in-su-rek'shon-ēr), n. An insurrectionist. [Rare.]

What had the people got if the Parliament, instead of guarding the Crown, had colliequed with Venner and other insurrectionists?
Roger North, Examen, p. 418.

insurrectionize, v. t. See insurrectionize.

insurrectionist (in-su-rek'shon-ist), n. [< insurrection + -ist.] One who favors, excites, or is engaged in insurrection; an insurgent.

It would tie the hands of Union men, and freely pass supplies from among them to the insurrectionists.

Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 143.

insurrectionize (in-su-rek'shon-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. insurrectionized, ppr. insurrectionizing. [< insurrection + -ize.] To cause an insurrection in. Also spelled insurrectionise. [Rare.]

"The Western Powers," he [Bismarck] wrote, "are not capable of insurrectionizing Poland."

Loze, Bismarck, I. 201.

insusceptibility (in-su-sep-ti-bil'i-ti), n. [< insusceptible: see -bility.] The character or quality of being insusceptible; want of susceptibility.

The remarkable insusceptibility of our household animals to cholera.

Science, III. 557.

insusceptible (in-su-sep-ti-bl), a. [= F. insusceptible; as in-3 + susceptible.] Not susceptible. (a) Incapable of being moved or affected in some way or by something: with of.

It is not altogether insusceptible of mutation, but a friend to it.

Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 354.

Who dares struggle with an invisible combatant? . . . It acts, and is insusceptible of any reaction.

Coleridge, quoted in Chate's Addresses, p. 136.

(b) Not liable to be moved or affected by something: with to.

Venomous snakes are insusceptible to the venom of their own species.

The Academy, May 25, 1890, p. 332.

insusceptive (in-su-sep-tiv), a. [< in-3 + susceptive.] Insusceptible. [Rare.]

The sailor was wholly insusceptive of the softer passions, and, without regard to tears or arguments, persisted in his resolution to make me a man.

Johnson, Rambler, No. 198.

insusurratio (in-sū-sū-rā'shōn), n. [< L. insusurratio (n.), a whispering to or into, < insurrare, whisper into or to, insinuate, suggest, < L. in, in, to, + surrare, whisper, murmur: see sursum.] The act of whispering into the ear; insinuation.

The other party insinuates their Roman principles by whispers and private insusurrations.

Legenda Ligneæ, Præf. A. 4 b: 1653. (Latham.)

inswathe (in-swā'thē), v. t. [< in-1 + swathe.] Same as enwathe.

int. An abbreviation (a) of interest and (b) of introduction.

intack (in'tak), n. Same as intake, 4.
intact (in-takt'), a. [= F. intact = Sp. Pg. intacto = It. intatto, < L. intactus, untouched, uninjured, < in-priv. + tactus, pp. of tangere, touch: see tangent, tact.] Untouched, especially by anything that harms or defiles; uninjured; left complete, whole, or unimpaired.

When the function is needless or even detrimental, the structure still keeps itself intact as long as it can.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 444.

intactable (in-tak'ta-bl), a. [< in-3 + tactable.] Not perceptible to the touch.

intactible (in-tak'ti-bl), a. Same as intactable.
E. Phillips, 1706.

intactness (in-takt'nes), n. The state of being intact or unimpaired; completeness.

The intactness of the cortical motor region is a necessary condition for the development of a complete epileptic attack.

Allen and Neurolog., VI, 449.

Inteniolata (in-tē'ni-ō-lā'tā), n. pl. [NL.; < in-3 + Teniolata.] A group of Hydrosora containing such as the Campanulariæ and the Sertulariæ: opposed to Teniolata. Hamann.

intagliate (in-tal'yāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intagliated, ppr. intagliating. [< It. intagliato, pp. of intagliare, cut in, carve: see intaglio.] To engrave or cut in the surface of, as a stone, or to form by engraving or cutting in, as a design on the stone.

Clay, plaster-of-Paris, or any artificial stone compound may be used, which is pressed into the mould, so that the intagliated lines in this will appear upon the plaque or tile.

C. T. Davis, Bricks and Tiles, p. 422.

intaglio (in-tal'yō), n.; pl. intagli, intaglios (-yō, -yōz). [< It. intaglio (= F. entail), intaglio, < intagliare, cut in, carve: see intail, entail.] 1. Incised engraving as opposed to carving in relief; ornamentation by lines, patterns, figures, etc., sunk or hollowed below the surface.

Two large signet rings, on one of which a hunting scene and on the other a battle were engraved in intaglio.

C. T. Newton, Art and Archaeol., p. 263.

Hence—2. A figure or work so produced; an incised representation or design. Specifically—(a) A precious or semi-precious stone in the surface of which a head, figure, group, or other design is cut; an incised gem. (b) Any object ornamented by incised engraving. (c) In a more industrial sense, any incised or sunk design intended as a mold for the reproduction of the design in relief; an incised or countersunk die.

Bas reliefs beaten into a corresponding intaglio previously incised in stone or wood.

C. D. E. Fortnum, S. K. Cat. Bronzes of European Origin.

intaglio (in-tal'yō), v. t. [< intaglio, n.] To incise; engrave with a sunk pattern or design. [Rare.]

The device intagliated upon it [a finger-ring] is supposed to be flowers bursting from the bud.

Art Jour., N. 8, VIII, 48.

intaglio-rilevato (in-tal'yō-rē-le-vā'tō), n. [It.] In sculp., same as cavo-rilievo.

intagliotype (in-tal'yō-tīp), n. [< intaglio + type.] A process of producing a design in intaglio on a metallic plate, resembling somewhat the graphotype process. The plate is first coated with zinc acid rendered very uniform and smooth by hydraulic pressure. Upon this surface the design is traced with an oily ink. The coating is then washed with a solution of zinc chloride, the effect of which upon the parts not protected by the ink is to harden them, leaving the parts under the ink-tracings in a friable condition. When these friable parts are removed by brushes or other implements, the design is left in intaglio. From the plate so prepared stereotype or electrolyte plates are obtained for use in printing. Other solutions are sometimes substituted for the zinc chloride.

intail, v. and n. See entail. intake (in'tāk), n. [< in-1 + take.] 1. A taking or drawing in.—2. That which is taken in. Specifically—3. Quantity taken in.

The annual in-take and out-put of these constituents on a hectare of beech forest.

Nature, XXXIX, 511.

4. A tract of land, as of a common, inclosed; an inclosure; part of a common field planted or sown when the other part lies fallow. Waltham. Also intack. [North. Eng.]-5. The point at which a narrowing or contraction begins, as in a tube or a stocking.

After the Norman Conquest, when a great part of the first City was turn'd into a Castle by King William I, it is probable they added the last intake southward in the angle of the Witham.

Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, III, 4.

6. In hydraul., the point at which water is received into a pipe or channel: opposed to outlet.

The intakes [of the London water-supply] were removed further from sources of pollution, and more efficient arrangements for filtration were adopted.

Nature, XXX, 165.

7. In mining: (a) The airway going inbye, or toward the interior of the mine. (b) The air moving in that direction.

intakeholder (in'tāk-hōl'dēr), n. One who holds or possesses an intake. Also intackholder. [Prov. Eng.]

Poor People, as Collers, Intackholders, Prentices, and the like, who are engaged by Trades [Sale of Man].

Statute (1664), quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 446.

intaker (in'tā-kēr), n. 1. One who or that which takes or draws in.—2. A receiver of stolen goods. Spell. Gloss.

intaminat (in-tam'i-nā-tēd), a. [= It. intaminato, < L. intaminatus, unsullied, < in-priv. + taminatus*, pp. of taminare* in comp. contaminare, sully, contaminate: see contaminate.] Uncontaminated.

The inhabitants use the antient and intaminated Frisian language, which is of great affinity with the English Saxon.

Wood, Athenæ Oxon.

intangibility (in-tan'ji-bil'i-ti), n. [< intangibile: see bility.] The quality of being intangible.

intangible (in-tan'ji-bl), a. [= F. intangible = Sp. intangible = It. intangibile; as in-3 + tangibile.] Not tangible; incapable of being touched; not perceptible to the touch: often used figuratively.

Tom was not given to inquire subtly into his own motives, any more than into other matters of an intangible kind.

George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, v. 5.

A point imperceptible to the eye, a touchstone intangible by the finger, alike of a scholast and a dunce.

Swinnburne, Shakespeare, p. 234.

intangibleness (in-tan'ji-bl-nes), n. Intangibility.

intangibly (in-tan'ji-bli), adv. So as to be intangible.

intangle (in-tang'gl), v. t. See entangle.

intanglement (in-tang'gl-ment), n. Same as entanglement.

intastable (in-tās'tā-bl), a. [< in-3 + tastable.] Tasteless; unsavory.

Something which is invisible, intangible, and intangible, as existing only in the fancy, may produce a pleasure superior to that of sense.

Grew.

integer (in'tē-jēr), n. [= F. intègre = Pr. intègre, entègre = Sp. entero = Pg. It. integro, < L. integer, untouched, unhurt, unchanged, sound, fresh, whole, entire, pure, honest, < in-priv. + tangere, touch: see tangere, tact.] From L. integer, through OF., comes E. entire: see entire.] An entire entity; particularly, in arith., a whole number, in contradistinction to a fraction. Thus, in the number 54.7, 54 is an integer, and .7 a fraction (seven tenths of a unit).

integrability (in'tē-grā-bil'i-ti), n. [< integrabile: see bility.] The quality of being integrable; capability, as of a differential equation, of being solved by means of known functions.

integrable (in'tē-grā-bl), a. [= F. intégrable = Pg. integravel; as integrat (= able).] 1. Capable of being integrated; that may be formed into, or assimilated to, a whole.

An organism whose medium, though unceasingly disintegrating it, is not unceasingly supplying it with integrable matter.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 184.

2. In math., capable of being integrated, as a mathematical function or differential equation.—Integrable function. See function.—Integrable in finite terms. See finite.

integral (in'tē-grāl), a. and n. [= F. intégral = Pr. Sp. Pg. integral = It. integrale, < ML. integrālis, < L. integer, entire: see integer.] 1. a. 1. Relating to a whole composed of parts spatially distinct (as a human body of head, trunk, and limbs), or of distinct units (as a number).

The integrals partes make perfect the whole, and cause the bigness thereof. Sir T. Wilson, Rule of Reason (1552).

A local motion keepeth bodies integral and their parts together.

Bacon, Nat. Hist.

An integral whole is that which has part out of part. Parts integral, because each is endued with his proper quantity, not only differ in themselves, but also in site, or at least order; so that one is not contained in another. For this it is to have part out of part. . . . This whole is termed mathematical, because quantity is of mathematical consideration: vulgarly, integral.

Burserianus, tr. by a Gentleman, Monitio Logica, [L. xiv. 12.]

Whole integral is that which consisteth of integral parts, which though they cleave together yet they are distinct and several in number, as mana body, consisting of head, breast, belly, legs, etc.

Blundeville, Arte of Logicke.

Hence, and by a reversion to the classical meaning of integer—2. Unmanned; unimpaired.

No wonder if one . . . remain speechless . . . (though of integral principles) who, from an infant, should be bred up amongst mutes, and have no teaching.

Holder, Elem. of Speech, App., p. 115.

3. Intrinsic; belonging as a part to the whole, and not a mere appendage to it.

It is a little uncertain whether the groups of figures at either end of the verandah are integral, or whether they may not have been added at some subsequent period.

J. Ferguson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 261.

All the Teutonic states in Britain became first dependencies of the West-Saxon king, then integral parts of his kingdom.

K. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 185.

4. In math.: (a) Of, pertaining to, or being a whole number or undivided quantity. (b) Pertaining to or proceeding by integration: as, the integral method.—Integral calculus, a branch of the infinitesimal or differential calculus, which is partly the inverse of the pure differential calculus in the narrower sense. The integral calculus is sometimes taken to include the solution of differential equations, and in that case a comprehensible definition of it can be given: namely, it is the complete discussion of differential equations. So considered, it has the theory of functions as an outgrowth. But the subject of differential equations is sometimes excluded from the integral calculus; and then the latter is left without any clear unity, including the finding and discussion of integrals, a part of the theory of functions, the theory of spherical harmonics, the theory of residuation, etc. The integral calculus is distinguished from the differential calculus in the narrow sense by the far greater importance in it of imaginaries. Compare calculus, 3.—Integral curvature, function, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. An integral whole; a whole formed of parts spatially distinct, or of numerical parts.—2. An integral part.

They all make up a most magnificent and stately temple, and every integral thereof full of wonder.

Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 372.

3. In math., the result of integration, or the operation inverse to differentiation. An integral is either the integral of a quantity or the integral of an equation; and the latter phrase has two senses. (a) The integral of a function is relative to an independent variable, and is taken between limits, which, however, may remain indefinite. A definite integral is conceived as resulting from the multiplication of each value of the function by the corresponding value of the differential of the independent variable, as this variable passes through a continuous series of values from one of the limits, called the first, lower, or inferior, to the other, called the second, upper, or superior, followed by the addition of all the infinitesimal products so obtained. Suppose, for example, that the value of a quantity y depends upon that of another quantity x, so that y = f(x), where F signifies some operation performed on x; then, measuring off ox and oy upon the axes of a system of two rectangular coordinates, we shall get a plane curve. (See the figure.) Let OX and OY be the axes of x and y respectively. Let A be the point for which x = a, y = 0; and B the point for which x = b, y = 0. Let P be the point for which x = a, while y = f(a); and let Q be the point for which x = b, while y = f(b). Then conceive the whole space APQB to be filled up with lines parallel to the axis of y, at infinitesimal distances from one another. Then y dx will measure the infinitesimal area between two of these lines, the axis of abscissas and the curve; and the sum of all such infinitesimals, or the integral of y relatively to x from x = a to x = b, written $\int_a^b y dx$, will measure the whole area

OX is the axis of x, OY of y. The area APQB equals $\int_a^b y dx$.

APQB. It is to be understood that we never pass from one limit to the other through infinity; but if the first limit is greater than the second, the sign of the definite integral is reversed. This gives a distinct idea of a definite integral, in case the variable is real. If the variable is imaginary, the definite integral is still conceived as the sum of all the values of y dx from one limit to the other; only there is in this case an infinite variety of different paths by which the variable can pass from one limit to the other. It is found, however, that in the plane of the imaginary variable there are generally certain points such that integration round one of them in a closed contour gives a constant value not zero, and but for that the path of integration does not affect the result, for all ordinary functions. An indefinite integral is a function of the independent variable with an arbitrary constant or wholly indeterminate constant added to it, and such that if its value for one value of the independent variable is subtracted from another, the difference is the definite integral from the first value of the independent variable to the second. If A is the indefinite integral of B relative to C, then also B is the differential coefficient of A relative to C. (b) An integral of a differential equation or system of such equations is a system of a lower order (it may be a single equation, and it may be one or more ordinary equations) from which the first system is deducible. If the order of the second system is lower than the first by one, the former is a first integral; if by two, a second integral, etc. A complete integral is one which contains the greatest possible number of arbitrary constants for an integral of that order. A singular integral is one which contains a smaller number of arbitrary constants, but is not a particular case of any irreducible complete integral. A general integral is one which contains the greatest possible number of arbitrary functions; but the complete integral of an ordinary differential equation is also termed a general integral. A particular integral is a particular case of a complete integral having a smaller number of arbitrary constants. (c) A quantity or expression which a system of differential equations makes to be constant is also termed an integral of that system.—Abelian integral. See Abelian.—Circular integral. an integral taken round a circle in the plane of the imaginary variable, any pole of the function being the center.—Closed integral. an imaginary integral whose upper and lower limits coincide, a circuit being described by the variable in the course of the integration.—Complete integral. See complete.—Cosine integral. See cosine.—Dirichletian integral. an integral of the form which for $h = \infty$ has a finite and determinate value other than zero and independent of a . Such, for example, is

$$\int_0^a \phi(x, h) dx,$$

$$\int_0^a \frac{\sin hx}{x} dx.$$

Elliptic, Eulerian, exponential integral. See the adjectives.—First integral. the result of performing the operation of taking the integral once.—Fourierian integral. a double integral of the form which, after the performance of the integration relatively to y , becomes a Dirichletian integral.—Hyperelliptic, imaginary, etc., integral. See the adjectives.—Integral of the first kind. an Abelian integral for which the second member of Abel's formula vanishes.—Integral of the second kind. an Abelian integral for which the second member of Abel's formula is rational.—Integral of the third kind. an Abelian integral for which the second member of Abel's formula involves a logarithmic function.—Irreducible integral. an integral not a rational integral homogeneous function of integrals of lower degree.—Linear integral. an integral along one or more straight lines in the plane of the imaginary variable.—Line-integral. surface-integral. volume-integral. having different values at different points of space, the integral obtained by breaking a curve, a surface, or a solid into equal elementary portions, and taking the sum of the products obtained by multiplying each by the value of the quantity integrated at that point.—Open integral. an integral whose two limits are unequal.

$$\int_0^h dy \int_0^a dx \phi(x, y),$$

integralism (in'tē-gral-izm), n. [< integral + -ism.] Same as integrality.

The philosophy developed from universology by [Stephen Pearl Andrews] called integralism.

Appleton's Ann. Cyc., 1896, p. 663.

integrality (in'tē-gral'i-ti), n. [= F. intégralité; as integral + -ity.] The quality of being integral; entireness. [Rare.]

Such as in their integrality support nature.
Whitaker, Blood of the Grape.

integrally (in'tē-gral-i), adv. In an integral manner; wholly; completely.

integrant (in'tē-grant), a. and n. [= F. intégrante = Sp. Pg. It. integrante, < L. integrans (-t)s, ppr. of integrare; make whole, repair, renew: see integrate.] 1. a. 1. Going to the formation of an integral whole.

In the integrate whole of a human body, the head, body, and limbs, its integrant parts, are not contained in, but each lies out of, each other. Hamilton.

If the sun was not created till the Fourth Day, what becomes of the astronomic teaching that earth has been from the beginning an integrant part of the solar system?
G. D. Boardman, Creative Week, p. 140.

2. Intrinsic: same as integral, 3, but modified in form by an affectionation of precision.

A process . . . of degeneration is an integrant and active part of the economy of nature.
Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 237.

Integrant molecule. in Hally's theory of crystals, the smallest particle of a crystal that can be arrived at by mechanical division.

II. n. An integral part.

integrate (in'tē-grāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. integrated, ppr. integrating. [< L. integratus, pp. of integrare (> It. integrare = Sp. Pg. integrar = F. intégrer), make whole, renew, repair, begin again, < integer, whole, fresh: see integer.] 1. To bring together the parts of; bring together as parts; segregate and bring together like particles.

All the world must grant that two distinct substances, the soul and the body, go to compound and integrate the man.
South, Works, VII. 1.

There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts—that is, the poet.
Emerson, Nature.

2. To perform the mathematical operation of integration. The mean value of a quantity over a space or time is obtained by integrating that quantity: hence, instruments which register the mean values of quantities or the totals of their instantaneous effects are called integrating instruments: as, an integrating thermometer.—Integrating factor. See factor.—To integrate a differential in the integral calculus, to determine from that differential its primitive function.

integrate (in'tē-grāt), a. [< L. integratus, pp.: see the verb.] Summed up; resulting from the aggregation of separate parts; complete.

Phi. How liked you my quip to Hedon, about the garret? Wasn't not witty?

Mor. Exceeding witty and integrate.
B. Johnson, Cynthia's Revels, II. 1.

This whole is termed mathematical, because quantity is of mathematical consideration: vulgarly, integral, more properly, integrate. Burgermeister, tr. by a Gentleman.

integration (in'tē-grā-shn), n. [= F. intégration = Sp. integracion = Pg. integração = It. integrazione, < L. L. integratio (-n-), a renewing, restoring, < L. integrare, renew, restore: see integrate.] 1. The act of integrating, or bringing together the parts of an integral whole; the act of segregating and bringing together similar particles.

Integration of parts means the connected play of them, so that, one being affected, the rest are affected.
W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 95.

The term integration we have already partly defined as the concentration of the material units which go to make up any aggregate. But a complete definition must recognise the fact that, along with the integration of wholes, there goes on (in all cases in which structural complexity is attained) an integration of parts. This secondary integration may be defined as the segregation, or grouping together, of those units of a heterogeneous aggregate which resemble one another. A good example is afforded by crystallisation. . . . Integration is seen in the rising of cream upon the surface of a dish of milk, and in the frothy collection of carbonic acid bubbles covering a newly-filled glass of ale.
J. Fiske, Cosmic Philos., I. 336.

2. In math., the operation inverse to differentiation; the operation of finding the integral of a function or of an equation.—3. The inference of subcontrariety from "Some A is B" to "Some A is not B."—Constant of integration. the constant which must be added to every integral with one limit fixed, in order to get the complete expression for an indefinite integral: denoted by the letter C.—Finite integration. the summation of any number of terms of a series whose law is known.—Gaussian method of approximate integration. See Gaussian.—Indefinite, definite integration. See indefinite integral, under integral.—Integration by parts. integration by the formula by means of which many expressions are integrated.—Integration by quadratures. the numerical approximation to the value of an integral.—Limits of integration. the initial and terminal values of the variable, between which a definite integral is taken.—Path of integration. the path on the plane of imaginary quantity along which a complex variable is supposed to vary in integration.—Sign of integration. the character \int , modified from a long S for summa (sum), used to signify the process of integration. It was invented by Leibnitz.

$$\int u v dt = u \int v dt - \int (v du) \frac{du}{dt} dt,$$

integrative (in'tē-grā-tiv), a. [< integrato + -ive.] Tending to integrate or complete; conducive to integration or the formation of a whole.

The integrative process which results in individual evolution.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 333.

integrator (in'tē-grā-tor), n. [< integrare + -or.] An instrument for performing numerical integrations. There are a great variety of such instruments, as planimeters, tide-integrating machines, integrating thermometers, etc.

integripalliate (in'tē-grī-pal'i-āt), a. An infrequent but more correct form of integropalliate.

integrity (in'teg-ri-ti), n. [= F. intégrité = Pr. integritat = Sp. Pg. It. integritad = Pg. integridade = It. integrità, < L. integrīta (-t)s, unimpaired condition, wholeness, entireness, purity, innocence, honesty, < integer, untouched, unimpaired, whole: see integer. From L. integrīta (-t)s, through the OF., comes E. entirety, q. v.] 1. The state of being integral; unimpaired extent, amount, or constitution; wholeness; completeness.

In Japanese eyes every alien became a Bateria (padre), and therefore an evil person harbouring mischievous designs against the integrity of the empire.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XII. 681.

To violate the integrity of one part of the Key of India is to impair the value of the whole of it.
Merrin, Gates of Herat, v.

2. Unimpaired condition; soundness of state; freedom from corruption or impurity.

Your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and becomes the state
Of that integrity which should become it.
Shak., Cor., III. 1. 158.

We plead for no more but that the Church of God may have the same purity and integrity which it had in the primitive times.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. ix.

3. Unimpaired morality; soundness of moral principle and character; entire uprightness or fidelity.

The moral grandeur of independent integrity is the sublimest thing in nature.
Buckminster.

Our foe.
Tempting, affronts us with his foul esteem
Of our integrity.
Milton, P. L., ix. 329.

There is no surer mark of integrity than a courageous adherence to virtue in the midst of a general and scandalous apostasy.
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. xii.

Law of integrty. in logic, the principle that in any inquiry all the known facts should be taken into account.—Syn. 1. Completeness.—2. Probiti, Uprightness, etc. See honesty.

Integropallia (in'tē-grō-pal'i-ā), n. pl. [NL., pl. of "integropallia": see integropallial.] A subdivision of the lamellibranchiate mollusks, in which the pallial line in the interior of the shell is unbroken in its curvature and presents no indentation, and which have either no siphons or short unretractile ones.

integropallial (in'tē-grō-pal'i-ā), a. [< L. integer, whole, + pallium, mantle.] Same as integropalliate.

integropalliate (in'tē-grō-pal'i-āt), a. [< L. integer, whole, + pallium, mantle: see palliate.] In conch., having the pallial line integral or unbroken by a notch or sinus, as a bivalve mollusk or lamellibranch: opposed to sinuopalliate. Also integripalliate, integropallial.

Left Valve of Oyster (Ostrea virginiana), showing unbroken pallial impression, m. m. m.

Integropalliate and sinuopalliate, . . . applied to lamellibranchs which have the pallial line evenly rounded or notched.
Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 412.

integument (in'teg-ū-ment), n. [= F. intéguement = Sp. It. integumento, < L. integumentum, a covering, < integere, cover, < tñ, upon, + tegere, cover: see tegmen, tegument.] 1. In general, a covering; that which covers or clothes.

Many and much in price
Were those integumenta they wrought, 't adorned thy exequies.
Chapman, Illud, xiii.

Specifically—2. That which naturally covers or invests any animal or vegetable body, as a skin, shell, case, crust, or rind; especially, a continuous investment or covering, as the cutaneous envelop or skin of an animal body, with or without its special appendages. The integument may be thin, soft, and membranous, as a flexible skin, or variously thickened, hardened, crustaceous, chitinous, etc., as the shells of crustaceans and mollusks or the hard cases of insects; and it often bears particular outgrowths or appendages, as hairs, feathers, or scales.

integumental (in'teg-ū-men'tal), a. [< integument + -al.] Same as integumentary.

An integumental pit or genital cloaca.
Huxley and Martin, Elementary Biology, p. 276.

integumentary (in'teg-ū-men'tā-ri), a. [< integument + -ary.] 1. Covering or investing in general, as a skin, rind, or peel.—2. Pertaining to or consisting of integument; tegumentary; integumental; cutaneous.

integumentation (in'teg-ū-men-tā'shn), n. [< integument + -ation.] The act of covering with integument; the covering itself.

intellect (in'te-lect), n. [= F. intellect = Sp. (obs.) intelecto = Pg. intelecto = It. intelletto, < L. intellectus, a perceiving, perception, understanding, < intellegere, intellegere, perceive, understand: see intelligent.] 1. The understanding; the sum of all the cognitive faculties except sense, or except sense and imagination. The Latin word intellectus was used to translate the Greek noûs, which in the theory of Aristotle is the faculty of the cognition of principles, and that which mainly distinguishes man from the beasts. Hence, the psychologists of the Scotch school use intellect as the synonym of common sense, or the faculty of apprehending a priori principles. The agent or active intellect, according to Aristotle, is the impersonal intellect that has created the world (see phrase below); the passive, patient, or possible intellect is that which belongs to the individual and perishes with him. But with St. Thomas Aquinas the distinction is quite different, the possible intellect being the faculty receptive of the intelligible species emitted by things, while the agent intellect is the power of operative thought. The term pure intellect, said to be used by St. Augustine, and certainly as early as Socrates Frigens, had always denoted the divine intellect, unmixed with matter, until Kant (adopting, as was his frequent practice, the terminology of Liebscher) applied it to intellect as separated, in its use or application, from sense. Practical intellect is distinguished from theoretical or speculative, by Aristotle and all other psychologists, as having an end in view. The Platonists at all periods during the middle ages made intellect a special cognitive faculty, higher than reason and lower than intelligence—namely, the faculty of understanding and conceiving of things natural but invisible, as soul and its faculties and operations. (Intellectus more often means the cognitive act, product (concept), or habit than the faculty.) With Kant the intellect is first, in a general sense, the non-sensuous, self-active faculty of cognition; the faculty of producing representations of bringing unity into the matter given in sense, of conceiving objects, and of judging; the faculty of concepts, or rules, of discursive cognition; the faculty of a priori synthesis, of bringing the manifold of given representations under the unity of self-consciousness; and secondly, in a narrower sense, the faculty of conceiving of intuited objects and of forming concepts and judgments concerning them, but excluding the pure use of the understanding, which in the Kantian system is reason.

Intellect, sensitivity, and will are the three heads under which the powers and capacities of the human mind are now generally arranged. In this use of the term intellect includes all those powers by which we acquire, retain, and extend our knowledge, as perception, memory, imagination, judgment, &c. Fleming, Vocab. of Philos.

The intellect is only a subtler and more far-seeing sense, and the sense is a short-sighted and grosser intellect. W. Wallace, Episcopalianism, p. 63.

I was readily persuaded that I had no idea in my intellect which had not formerly passed through the senses. Descartes, Meditations (tr. by Veitch), vi.

2. Mind collectively; current or collective intelligence: as, the intellect of the time.

The study of barbaric languages and dialects—a study that now absorbs so much of the most adventurous intellect of philology. Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 255.

3. pl. Wits; senses; mind: as, disordered in his intellects. [Obsolete or vulgar.]—Agent intellect (L. intellectus agens, tr. Gr. νοῦς ποιητικός, creative reason), in the Peripatetic philosophy, a being, faculty, or function, the highest form of mind, or the highest under the Deity. To determine with precision what Aristotle meant by it is an insoluble problem, and it has been understood in the most widely different senses by different philosophers: sometimes it is regarded as consisting of the intellectual relations really existing in outward things and acting upon the understanding as upon a perceptive faculty; sometimes it is conceived as a divine life which at once animates the soul and creates the objects of its knowledge; sometimes it is believed to be a living being, a sort of angel, imparting knowledge to the mind; sometimes it is made a faculty creative of the ideas which the possible intellect then apprehends; sometimes it is little more than the power of abstracting general notions from singulars; sometimes it is treated as an unconscious activity of thought; and each of the senses of the term has had its varieties. —Syn. 1. Soul, Spirit, etc. See mind.

intellected (in-te-lek-ted), a. [< intellect + -ed.] Endowed with intellect; having intellectual powers or capacities. [Rare.]

In body and in bristles they became All swine, yet intellected as before.

Cooper, Odyssey, x. 297.

intellectible (in-te-lek'ti-bl), a. [< ML. intellectibilis, < L. intelligere, pp. intellectus, understand: see intellect.] In metaph., of the nature of a pure self-subsistent form, apprehended only by the reason. See intelligible, 2.

intellection (in-te-lek'shon), n. [= F. intellection = Pr. intellectio = Sp. inteleccon = Pg. intelloccio = It. intelligenza, < L. intellectio (n.), understanding (in L. used only in a technical sense, synecdoche, but in ML. in lit. sense), < intellegere, intelligere, perceive, understand: see intellect, intelligent.] 1. An act of understanding; simple apprehension of ideas; mental activity; exercise of or capacity for thought.

I may say frustra to the comprehension of your intellection. B. Jonson, Case is Altered, i. 2.

The immortality of man is as legitimately preached from the intellections as from the moral volitions. Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 301.

So exquisite was his [Spenser's] sensibility that with him sensation and intellection seem identical, and we "can almost say his body thought." Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 176.

In thinking, or intellection, as it has been conveniently termed, there is always a search for something more or less vaguely conceived, for a clue which will be known when it occurs by seeming to satisfy certain conditions. J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 75.

2. In rhet., the figure also called synecdoche.

Intellection . . . is a trope, when we gather or judge the whole by the part or part by the whole. Sir T. Wilson, Art of Rhetoric (1558), p. 177.

intellective (in-te-lek'tiv), a. [= F. intellectif = Pr. intellectivus = Sp. intelectivo = Pg. intelectivo = It. intellectivo, < ML. as if intellectivus*, < L. intellegere, intelligere, pp. intellectus, understand: see intellect, intelligent.] 1. Of or pertaining to the intellect; having power to understand, know, or comprehend.

According to his power intellective, to understand, to will, to will, and such like. Blunderville.

For the total man, therefore, the truer conception of God is as "the Eternal Power, not ourselves, by which all things fulfil the law of their being;" by which, therefore, we fulfil the law of our being so far as our being is aesthetic and intellective, as well as so far as it is moral. M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma.

2. Produced by the understanding. Harris.—
3. Capable of being perceived by the understanding only, not by the senses.

Instead of beginning with arts most easy, . . . they present their young unarticulated novices with the most intellective abstractions of logic and metaphysics. Milton, Education.

4. Intellectual; intelligent.

In my judgment there is not a beast so intellective as are these Elephants. Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 235.

Intellective cognition. See cognition.

intellectively (in-te-lek'tiv-ly), adv. In an intellectual or intelligible manner.

Not intellectually to write
Is learnedly they troe.

Warner, Albion's England, ix. 44.

intellectual (in-te-lek'tū-əl), a. and n. [= F. intellectuel = Pr. intellectuel = Sp. intelectual = Pg. intelectual = It. intellettuale, < LL. intellectialis, pertaining to the understanding, < L. intellectus, understanding: see intellect.] I. a. 1. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of intellect or understanding; belonging to the mind; performed by the understanding; appealing to or engaging the intellect or the higher capacities of man; mental: as, intellectual powers or operations; intellectual amusements.

What is the whole history of the intellectual progress of the world but one long struggle of the intellect of man to emancipate itself from the deceptions of nature? Locky, Europ. Morals, I. 66.

Knowledge of books, and a habit of careful reading, is a most important means of intellectual development. J. P. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 312.

2. Perceived by the intellect; existing in the understanding; ideal.

In a dark vision's intellectual scene. Cowley.

3. Having intellect, or the power of understanding; characterized by intellect, or the capacity for the higher forms of knowledge: as, an intellectual being.

Could have approach'd the eternal light as near
As th' intellectual angels could have done.

Sir J. Davies, Immortality, Int.

Intellectual cognition. See cognition.—Intellectual distinctness, the separate apprehension of the different marks which enter into any idea.—Intellectual feelings. See the extract.

It will also be convenient to include under the one term intellectual feelings not only the feelings connected with certainty, doubt, perplexity, comprehension, and so forth, but also what the Herbartian psychologists—whose work in this department of psychology is classical—have called par excellence the formal feelings—that is to say, feelings which they regard as entirely determined by the form of the flow of ideas, and not by the ideas themselves. J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 69.

Intellectual indistinctness. See indistinctness, 2.—Intellectual intuition, an immediate cognition, or an intuition of a general truth: a phrase invented by Kant for the purpose of denying the existence of the thing, which was afterward asserted by Michta.

II. n. The intellect or understanding; mental powers or faculties: commonly in the plural. [Now rare.]

By these Extravagancies and odd Chimeras of my Brain you may well perceive that I was not well, but distemper'd, especially in my Intellectuals.

Hovell, Letters, II. 29.

Her husband . . . not nigh,
Whose higher intellectual more I shun.

Milton, P. L., ix. 483.

A person whose intellectuals were overturned, and his brain shaken out of its natural position. Swift, Tale of a Tub, ix.

intellectualisation, intellectualize. See intellectualization, intellectualize.

intellectualism (in-te-lek'tū-əl-izm), n. [< intellectual + -ism.] 1. Exercise of intellectuality; devotion to intellectual occupation or thought.

The whole course of study is narrowed to a dry intellectualism. The American, V. 278.

2. Belief in the supremacy of the intellect; the doctrine that all knowledge is derived from pure reason.

Here again he [Carneades] opposed a free intellectualism to what was, in reality, the slavish materialism of the Stoics. J. Owen, Evenings with Skeptics, I. 314.

intellectualist (in-te-lek'tū-əl-ist), n. [< intellectual + -ist.] One who intellectualizes; a devotee of the intellect or understanding; one who believes or holds that all knowledge is derived from pure reason.

Upon these intellectualists, which are, notwithstanding, commonly taken for the most sublime and divine philosophers, Horacitus gave a just censure.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, I.

These pure and seraphic intellectualists forsooth despise all sensible knowledge as too gross and material for their nice and curious faculties.

Sp. Parker, Platonick Philos., p. 62.

To satisfy all those intellectualists who might wish to do the computing and theorizing for themselves.

Piazzi Smyth, Pyramid, p. 173.

intellectualistic (in-te-lek'tū-ə-lis'tik), a. [< intellectualist + -ic.] Of or pertaining to intellectualism, or the doctrine of the intellectualists.

Of what may be called spiritualistic or intellectualistic pantheism. T. Whittaker, Mind, XII. 456.

intellectuality (in-te-lek'tū-əl'i-ti), n. [= F. intellectualité = Sp. intelectualidad = Pg. intelectualidade = It. intellettualità, < LL. intellettualitas (t-s), < intellectus, intellectual: see intellect.] The state of being intellectual; intellectual endowment; force or power of intellect.

A certain plastic or spermatik nature, devoid of all animality or conscious intellectuality.

Hallywell, Melampus (1681), p. 84.

He [Hogg] was protected by a fine non-conducting web of intellectuality and of worldliness from all those influences which startle and waylay the soul of the poet, the lover, the saint, and the hero. E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 57.

intellectualization (in-te-lek'tū-əl-i-zā'shon), n. [< intellectualize + -ation.] A making intellectual; development of the intellect. Also spelled intellectualisation.

A superficial intellectualization is to be secured [in schools] at the cost of a deep-seated demoralization. E. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 272.

intellectualize (in-te-lek'tū-əl-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. intellectualized, pp. intellectualizing. [= F. intellectualiser; as intellectual + -ize.] 1. To treat or reason upon in an intellectual manner.—2. To inform or endow with intellect; cause to become intellectual; develop the intellect or intellectuality of.—3. To give or attribute an intellectual or ideal character or aspect to; idealize.

Leibnitz intellectualized perception, just as Locke sensualized the conceptions of the understanding.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 506.

The biological bond which binds man to the past and to the outer world has an intellectualizing effect upon our conceptions. N. A. Rev., CX. 266.

Also spelled intellectuaise.

intellectually (in-te-lek'tū-əl-ly), adv. In an intellectual manner; by means of the understanding; with reference to the intellect.

intellectualness (in-te-lek'tū-əl-ness), n. The quality of being intellectual; intellectuality.

Is it impossible to combine the hardness of these savages with the intellectualness of the civilized man?

Thoreau, Walden, p. 16.

intelligence (in-tel'i-jens), n. [< ME. intelligencia, intelligens, < OF. (also F.) intelligence = Pr. intelligencia, entelligencia = Sp. inteligencia = Pg. intelligencia = It. intelligenza, < L. intellegentia, intelligentia, discernment, understanding, intelligence, < intellego (t-s), intelligo (t-s), discerning, intelligent: see intelligent.] 1. The quality of being intelligent; understanding; intellect; power of cognition.

God, of himself incapable to sense,
In 's Works, reveals him t' our intelligence.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, I. 1.

The intelligence is not one thing among others in the intelligible world, but the principle in reference to which alone that world exists, and . . . therefore, there is nothing in the nature of intelligence to prevent it from understanding a universe which is essentially the object of intelligence. E. Caird, Hegel, p. 153.

Intelligence is that which sees itself, or is at once object and subject. J. Watson, Schelling's Transcendental Idealism, p. 37.

2. Cultivated understanding; acquired knowledge; information stored up in the mind.

An ancient, not a legendary tale,
By one of sound intelligence rehear'd.

Cooper, Tank, vi. 480.

Common instinct is sufficient to guard against palpable causes of injury; intelligence alone can protect us from the latent and deeper agencies of physiological mischief. Huxley and Yountana, Physiol., § 380.

3. Exercise of superior understanding; address; skill: as, he performed his mission with much intelligence.

Odes sung in the marches tho;
Sagfly hym ruled to intelligens.

Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), I. 6816.

4. Mutual understanding; interchange of information or sentiment; intelligent intercourse: as, a glance of intelligence passed between them; to have intelligence with the enemy.

From whence I found a secret means to have Intelligence with my kind lord, the King.

Drayton, Pierce Gaveston.

The inhabitants could not long live in good intelligence among themselves; they fell into dissensions.

J. Adams, Works, IV. 516.

5. Information received or imparted; communicated knowledge; news: as, intelligence of a shipwreck.

I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

Shak., Much Ado, I. 3, 44.

6. An intelligent being; intellectual existence; concrete understanding: as, God is the Supreme Intelligence.

How fully hast thou satisfied me, pure Intelligence of heaven, angel serene!

Milton, P. L., viii. 181.

The great Intelligences fair

That range above our mortal state.

Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxxv.

Intelligence department, a bureau of statistics or of information with regard to certain specified matters; especially, in the military and naval establishments of several countries, a department which collects and prepares abstracts of all the information attainable concerning the resources of all the civilized nations for waging offensive or defensive wars. The subjects of information relate chiefly to organization of armies, topography and routes, speed and armament of naval vessels, defenses, strategy and tactics, etc.—Intelligence office, an office or place where information may be obtained, particularly respecting servants to be hired.—Syn. 1. Understanding, intellect, mind, perception, common sense.—2. Advice, tidings, etc. (see news), notification.

Intelligence (in-tel'i-jens), v. t. [< Intelligence, n.] To convey intelligence; tell tales; tattle.

If you stir far in this, I'll have you whipt, your ears nailed for intelligencing o' the pillory, and your goods forfeit.

Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, III. 1.

Intelligencer (in-tel'i-jen-sér), n. [< intelligence, v., + -er.] One who or that which sends or conveys intelligence; one who or that which gives notice of private or distant transactions; a messenger or spy. [The word was formerly much used in the specific sense of 'a newspaper.']

Alas, I know not how to feign and lie,

Or win a base intelligencer's meed.

Middleton, Father Hubbard's Tales.

It was a carnival of intellect without faith, . . . when prime ministers and commanders-in-chief could be intelligencers of the Pretender, nay, when even Algernon Sidney himself could be a pensioner of France.

Lovell, Stady Windows, p. 400.

Intelligency (in-tel'i-jen-si), n. Same as intelligence.

From flocks, herds, and other natural assemblages or groups of living creatures, to human intelligency and correspondence, or whatever is higher in the kind.

Shaftebury, Misc. Reduct., III. 2.

Intelligent (in-tel'i-jent), a. [< I. intelligent = Sp. Pg. It. intelligente, < L. intellegens (-s), intelligens (-s), discerning, understanding, ppr. of intellegere, intelligere, see into, perceive, discern, distinguish, discriminate, understand, < inter, between, + legere, gather, collect, pick, choose, read: see legend.] 1. Having the faculty of understanding; capable of comprehending facts or ideas: as, man is an intelligent being.

If worms have the power of acquiring some notion, however rude, of the shape of an object and of their burrows, as seems to be the case, they deserve to be called intelligent.

Darwin, Vegetable Mould, p. 97.

2. Having an active intellect; possessing aptitude or skill; well informed: as, an intelligent artisan or officer.

There is nothing that . . . may more easily deceive the unwary, or that may more amuse the most intelligent observer.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1836), II. 381.

3. Marked by or indicating intelligence; guided by knowledge or comprehension: as, the intelligent actions of ants; an intelligent answer.

Vallandigham . . . was too far away for intelligent and efficient direction.

The Century, XXXVIII. 563.

4. Having knowledge; cognizant: followed by of.

The eagle and the stork

On cliffs and cedar-tops their eyries build:

Part loosely wing the region; part, more wise,

In common, ranged in figure, wedge their way,

Intelligent of seasons.

Milton, P. L., vii. 427.

5. Bearing intelligence; giving information; communicative.

Servants, who seem no less;

Which are to France the spies and speculations

Intelligent of our state.

Shak., Lea, III. 1, 25.

—Syn. 2. Common-sense, etc. (see sensible); quick, bright, acute, discerning, sharp-witted, clear-headed.

Intelligential (in-tel'i-jen-shal), a. [< intelligence (L. intelligentia) + -al.] 1. Pertaining to the intelligence; relating to or capable of understanding; intellectual.

That grand prerogative of our nature, a hungering and thirsting after truth, as the appropriate end of our intelligential, and its point of union with our moral, nature.

Coleridge, The Friend, II. 9.

The generality of men attend . . . hardly at all to the indications . . . of a true law of our being on its æsthetic and intelligential side.

M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, I.

2. Consisting of intelligence or concrete mind.

Food alike those pure

Intelligential substances require.

Milton, P. L., v. 408.

3. Intelligent.

In at his mouth

The devil enter'd; and his brutal sense,

In heart or head, possessing, soon inspired

With not intelligential.

Milton, P. L., ix. 180.

4. Conveying intelligence; serving to transmit information.

The New York telegraph office, radiating 250,000 miles of intelligential nerves to ten thousand mind-centers in America.

The Century, XXVI. 602.

Intelligentiary (in-tel'i-jen-shi-ā-ri), n. [< intelligence (L. intelligentia) + -ary.] One who conveys intelligence; one who communicates information; an intelligencer. Holmes.

Intelligently (in-tel'i-jen-ti), adv. In an intelligent manner; so as to manifest knowledge or understanding.

Intelligibility (in-tel'i-jen-bil'i-ti), n. [< F. intelligibilité = It. intelligibilità, < L. as if "intelligibilis (-t), < intellegibilis, intelligible: see intelligible.] 1. The quality or character of being intelligible; capability of being understood.

I call it outline, for the sake of immediate intelligibility; strictly speaking, it is merely the edge of the shade.

Ruskin, Elem. of Drawing.

2. The property of possessing intelligence or understanding; intellection.

The soul's nature consists in intelligibility.

Glanville.

Intelligible (in-tel'i-jen-bil), a. [< F. intelligible = Sp. intelligent = Pg. intelligível = It. intelligibile, < L. intellegibilis, intelligibilis, that can be understood, < intellegere, intelligere, understand: see intelligent.] 1. That can be understood; capable of being apprehended by the intellect or understanding; comprehensible.

If Charles had been the last of his line, there would have been an intelligible reason for putting him to death.

Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist.

2. In the Kantian philosophy, capable of being apprehended by the understanding only; incapable of being given in sense or applied to it. In the middle ages intelligible and intellecible were carefully distinguished, the former word having its ordinary present sense, and the latter that of being apprehended only by the intellect acting alone, without the senses. The distinction became later somewhat broken down, and finally Kant introduced the use of intelligible defined above.

A real division of objects into phenomena and noumena, and of the world into a sensible and intelligible world, is therefore quite inadmissible, although concepts may very well be divided into sensible and intelligible. No objects can be assigned to noumena, nor can they be represented as objectively valid. . . . With all this, the concept of a noumenon, if taken as problematical only, remains not only admissible, but, as a concept to limit the sphere of sensibility, indispensable. In this case, however, it is not a purely intelligible object for our understanding, but an understanding to which it could belong is itself a problem. If we ask how I could know an object not discursively by means of categories, but intuitively, and yet in a non-sensuous intuition—a process of which we could not understand even the bare possibility. . . . If by purely intelligible objects we understand things which, without all schemata of sensibility, are thought by mere categories, such objects are simply impossible.

Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Max Müller, II. III.

Intelligible form, in metaph. See form.—Intelligible matter, in metaph., that which is distinguished as matter by the understanding.

Aristotle divides matter into intelligible and sensible: and intelligible is that when in accidents or other simple things the mind distinguishes between material and formal. So letters are said to be the matter of words, words of speech.

Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman.

Intelligible species. See species.—Syn. 1. Comprehensible, perspicuous, plain, clear.

Intelligibleness (in-tel'i-jen-bil-nes), n. The quality of being intelligible; intelligibility.

Intelligibly (in-tel'i-jen-bil), adv. In an intelligible manner; so as to be understood; clearly; plainly: as, to write or speak intelligibly.

Intemperate (in-tem'p-er-āt), a. [< OF. intemperé = Pg. It. intemperato, < L. intemperatus, undefiled, < in-priv. + temeratus, pp. of temerare, defile: see temeration.] Pure; undefiled.

The entire and intemperate comeliness of virtues.

Parthenia Sacra, Pr. A. III. b: 1633. (Latham.)

Intemperateness (in-tem'p-er-āt-nes), n. The state of being intemperate, pure, or undefiled.

They [letters] shall therefore ever keep the sincerity and intemperateness of the fountain whence they are derived.

Doane, Letters, x.

Intemperament (in-tem'p-er-ā-mēt), n. [< Pg. intemperamento; as in-priv. + temperament.] A physically bad state or constitution. [Rare.]

The intemperament of the part ulcerated.

Harvey.

Intemperance (in-tem'p-er-āns), n. [< F. intemperance = Sp. intemperancia = Pg. intemperança = It. intemperanza, < L. intemperantia, want of mildness, inclemency (as of weather), want of moderation, excess (intemperantia vini, immoderate use of wine), insolence, arrogance, < intemperan (-s), immoderate, given to excess, intemperate, incontinent, prodigate: see intemperant, temperance.] 1. The quality of being intemperate; lack of temperance or moderation; immoderateness or excess in any kind of action; excessive indulgence of any passion or appetite.

Boundless intemperance

In nature is a tyranny.

Shak., Macbeth, IV. 3, 67.

God is in every creature; be cruel toward none, neither abuse any by intemperance.

Jer. Taylor.

Their fierce and irregular magnificence, their feverish and strenuous intemperance of rhetoric.

Nineteenth Century, XXIV. 536.

2. In a restricted sense, excessive indulgence in intoxicating drink; habitual lack of temperance in drink, with or without actual drunkenness.

The Macedonians trained up their children to hate drunkenness and intemperance by bringing a drunken man into their company.

Watts.

Intemperancy (in-tem'p-er-ān-si), n. Same as intemperance.

North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 619.

Intemperant (in-tem'p-er-ant), a. and n. [< L. intemperant (-s), ppr., intemperate, immoderate, given to excess, prodigate, < in-, not, + temperant (-s), ppr. of temperare: see temper, temperate.] 1. a. Intemperate.

Soche as be intemperant—that is, folowers of their naughty appetites and lustes.

Udal, tr. of Apophthegms of Erasmus, p. 15.

II. n. One who is intemperate; especially, one who uses alcoholic liquors intemperately.

Dr. Richardson.

Intemperate (in-tem'p-er-āt), a. [< ME. intemperat = F. intemperé = It. intemperato, < L. intemperatus, untempered, inclement (of the weather), immoderate, excessive, < in-priv. + temperatus, tempered, moderate, temperate: see temperate.] 1. Immoderate in conduct or action; not exercising or characterized by proper moderation: as, intemperate in labor or in zeal; intemperate in study.

They understand it not, and think no such matter, but admire and dote upon worldly riches and honours, with an ease and intemperate life.

Milton, Church-Government, II. Concl.

2. In a restricted sense, immoderate in the use of intoxicating drink; given to excessive drinking.—3. Immoderate in measure or degree; excessive; inordinate; violent: as, intemperate language; intemperate actions; an intemperate climate.

The fitful philosophy and intemperate eloquence of Tully.

Sumner, Orations, I. 141.

Intemperate habits, habitual and excessive indulgence in the use of alcoholic drinks; in law, the habit of drinking to intoxication when occasion offers, sobriety or abstinence being the exception.

Stone, J., in Tatum vs. State, 68 Ala., 152.

Intemperately (in-tem'p-er-āt-li), adv. In an intemperate manner; immoderately; excessively.

As little or rather less am I able to coerce the people at large, who behaved very unwisely and intemperately on that occasion.

Burke, Conduct of the Minority.

Intemperateness (in-tem'p-er-āt-nes), n. 1. The state of being intemperate; want of moderation; excessive indulgence: as, the intemperateness of appetite or passion.

For a Christian to excuse his intemperateness by his natural inclination, and to say I am borne choleric, sullen, amorous, is an apology worse than the fault.

Sp. Hall, Heaven upon Earth, § 7.

2. Disturbance of atmospheric conditions; excess of heat or cold.

I am very well aware that divers diseases . . . may be rationally referred to manifest intemperateness of the air.

Boyle, Works, V. 50.

Intemperature (in-tem'p-er-ā-tūr), n. [< OF. intemperature; < in-priv. + temperature, temperature: see temperature.] Intemperance; excess.

The prince was layed upon his bed bare headed, in his jerkin, for the great heat and intemperature of the weather.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 37.

Yet doth it not follow that any one man, with the multitude, should run to Rome to suck the infection of dissolute intemperature.
Forde, Line of Life.

Great intemperatures of the air, especially in point of heat.
Boyle, Works, V. 68.

intemperous (in-tem'per-us), a. [Irreg. < intemper(ate) + -ous.] Intemperate.

And rather would, hearts so intemperous Should not enjoy mee, than employ mee thus.
Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas.

intempestive (in-tem-pes'tiv), a. [= F. intempestif = Sp. Pg. It. intempestivo, < L. intempestivus, untimely, unseasonable, < in- priv. + tempestivus, timely, seasonable: see tempestive.] Unseasonable; untimely.

Intempestive laughing, weeping, sighing.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 238.

intempestively (in-tem-pes'tiv-ly), adv. Unseasonably.

That sound true opinion that in all Christian professions there is way to salvation (which I think you think) may have been so inconveniently or intempestively sometimes uttered by you.
Donne, Letters, xc.

intempestivity (in-tem-pes-tiv'i-ty), n. [< L. intempestivitas (-t)-s, untimeliness, < intempestivus, untimely: see tempestive.] Untimeliness; unseasonableness.

Our moral books tell us of a vice which they call akopia, intempestivitas; an indiscretion by which unwise and unexperienced men see not what befits times, persons, occasions.
Hales, Sermon at Eton, p. 4.

in tempo (in tem'pō), [It.: in, in; tempo, time: see tempo.] In music, in strict rhythm.

intenable (in-ten'a-bl), a. [= F. intenable; as in- + tenable.] 1. Not tenable; untenable; not to be held or maintained.

His Lordship's proposition may be expressed in plainer terms, "That the more the world has advanced in real knowledge, the more it has discovered of the intenable pretensions of the Gospel." Warburton, Works, IX. xlii.

2. Incapable of containing. Also intensible.

I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious and intensible sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still.
Shak., All's Well, I. 3. 208.

intend (in-tend'), v. [Early mod. E. also entend; < ME. intenden, entenden, < OF. entendre, F. entendre = Pr. entendre = Sp. Pg. entender = It. intendere, intend, < L. intendere, stretch out, extend, aim at, stretch toward, direct toward, turn to, purpose, intend, ML. also attend, < in, in, upon, to, + tendere, stretch: see tend. Cf. attend, contend, extend, etc.] 1. trans. 1†. To stretch forth or out; extend or distend.

With sharpe intended sting so rude him smott
That to the earth him drove, as stricken doo.
Spenser, F. Q., I. xi. 38.

Unless an age too late, or cold Climate, or years, damp my intended wing.
Milton, P. L., ix. 45.

By this the lungs are intended or remitted. Sir M. Hale.

2. To direct; turn; fix in a course or tendency. [Archaic.]

Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharuns Intend my travel. Shak., Pericles, I. 2. 116.
Guide him to Fairy-land who now intends That way his flight. Crabbe, Works, I. 183.

For example, a man explores the basis of civil government. Let him intend his mind without respite, without rest, in one direction. Emerson, Intellect.

Our forefathers, by intending their minds to realities, have established a harmony of thought with external nature which is a pre-established harmony in our nature.
Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 11.

3†. To fix the attention upon; attend to; superintend.

There were Virgins kept which intended nothing but to weave, and spinne, and dye clothes, for their Idolatrous services.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 882.

Herodotus . . . did nothing all his life long but intend his health.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. 270.

I pray you intend your game, sir; let me alone.
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, v. 3.

Intend at home,
While here shall be our home, what best may ease
The present misery. Milton, P. L., II. 457.

4. To fix the mind upon, as something to be done or brought about; have in mind or purpose; design: often used with the infinitive: as, I intend to write; no deception was intended.

Whateoever mischief they intend to practise against a man, they keepe it wonderfully secreta.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 55.

When he intends any warres, he must first have leave of the Great Turke. Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 38.

Sir John North delivered me one lately from your Lordship, and I send my humble Thanks for the Venison you intend me.
Housell, Letters, I. iv. 21.

For why should man ever intend to repent, if they did not think it necessary? Stillington, Sermons, II. iii.

5. To design to signify; mean to be understood; have reference to.

The words . . . sounded so as she could not imagine what they might intend. Sir F. Sidney, Arcadia, II.

By internal war we intend movements more serious and lasting than sedition. Woolsey, Introd. to Inter. Law, § 180.

6†. To pretend; make believe; simulate.

Intend a kind of seal both to the prince and Claudio.
Shak., Much Ado, II. 2. 85.

Ay, and amid this hurly I intend
That all is done in reverend care of her.
Shak., T. of the S., iv. 1. 206.

7†. To look for; expect.

I that alle trouble in yow entende.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 1649.

8†. To intensify; increase.

The magnified quality of this star [Sirius], conceived to cause or intend the heat of this season.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 13.

II. intrans. 1†. To stretch forward; extend; move; proceed.

When your mayster intendeth to bedward, see that you have fyre and Candell suffycient.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 69.

He intended homewards. He by this Needs must have gain'd the city.
Chapman, Revenge for Honour, III. 1.

Now breaks, or now directs, intending lines.
Pope, Moral Essays, iv. 68.

2†. To attend; pay attention.

Ech to his owen nedes gan entende.
Chaucer, Troilus, III. 424.

A man that Intendyth to mynstrelle, shalle soone be weddyd to povertie, & his sonne shalle hys derlone.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 81.

They were the first that intended to the observation of nature and her works.
Puittenham, Arts of Eng. Poetrie, p. 4.

3. To have intention; be inclined or disposed. [Rare.]

If you intend so friendly as you say, send hence your armes.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 210.

To intend fort, to design to go to.

I shall make no stay here, but intend for some of the electoral courts.
Richardson.

intendable (in-ten'da-bl), a. [< intend + -able.] Attentive. Halliwel.

intendence (in-ten'dans), n. [< ME. entendunce, < OF. (and F.) intendence = Sp. Pg. intendencia = It. intendenza; as intend + -ance.] 1. Intendancy; superintendence; direction; business management; specifically, in France, official superintending authority, or a body of official intendants, especially of the army.

Probably in the history of modern organisations there is no greater instance of stupendous and abject failure than the French Intendances.

Arch. Forbes, Experiences of War, 1871, II. 338.
As to improving the arrangements . . . for making the staff and the intendance [in France, 1867] more efficient, not a thought was bestowed on these important matters.
Edinburgh Rev., CLXIV. 808.

2†. Attention; care; guidance.

But the malde whom we would have specially good requieth all intendance both of father and mother.
Vives, Instruction of a Christian Woman, I. 1.

intendancy (in-ten'dan-si), n. [Formerly also intendency; < intendant + -cy. Cf. intendence.] The office or employment of an intendant; the district, duties, direction, etc., committed to the charge of an intendant.

Hence we went to see Dr. Gibbs, a famous poet and countryman of ours, who had some intendancy in an Hospital built on the Via Triumphalis.

Evelyn, Diary, Jan. 25, 1645.
Promoted to the intendancy of Hispaniola.
Jefferson, Correspondence, I. 234.

intendant (in-ten'dant), n. [Formerly also intendent; < F. intendant = Sp. Pg. It. intendente, a steward, surveyor, intendant, < L. intendens (-t)-s, ppr. of intendere, exert oneself, endeavor, intend, ML. also attend: see intend. Intendant, after the F., is the common form, while intendent, after the L., is the reg. form in the compound superintendent. Cf. dependant, dependent.] One who has the oversight, direction, or management of some public business; a superintendent; a manager: used as a title of many public officers in France and other European countries: as, an intendant of marine; an intendant of finance.

Subordinate to him are four other intendents.
 Evelyn, State of France, Lewis XIV.
Nearchus, who commanded Alexander's fleet, and Onesicrates, his intendant general of marine, have both left relations of the Indies.
Arbuthnot.

Yon young gallant—
Your miserly intendant and dense noble—
All—all suspected me. Byron, Werner, III. 1.

A French medical officer of the navy who was going back to his duties as Intendant of Pondicherry.
W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I. 5.

Specifically—(a) In Canadian law, the second officer in Canada under the French rule, having civil and maritime jurisdiction. (b) In Mexican law, the chief officer of the treasury or of the district; a high functionary having administrative and some judicial power: in this use also written, as Spanish, intendente.

intended (in-ten'ded), p. a. and n. 1. p. a. Purposed; to be, or to be done, according to an agreement or design: as, an intended entertainment; her intended husband.

II. n. An intended husband or wife: with a possessive pronoun preceding. [Colloq.]

If it were not that I might appear to disparage her intended, . . . I would add that to me she seems to be throwing herself away. Dickens, David Copperfield, xxii.

intendently (in-ten'ded-ly), adv. With purpose or intention; intentionally.

To add one passage more of him, which is intendently related for his credit. Stypps, Abp. Parker.

intendancy, intendant, n. See intendancy, intendant.

intender (in-ten'dér), n. One who intends.

intender (in-ten'dér), v. t. Same as entender.
Night opens the noblest scenes, and sheds an awe
Which gives those venerable scenes full weight,
And deep reception in th' intender's heart.
Young, Night Thoughts, ix. 781.

intendiment (in-ten'di-mənt), n. [< ML. intendimentum, attention: see intendunt.] Attention; patient hearing; consideration; understanding; knowledge; intention.

Into the woods thenceforth in haste shee went,
To seeke for herbes that mote him remedy;
For shee of herbes had great intendiment.
Spenser, F. Q., III. v. 82.

The noble Mayd still standing all this vewd,
And mervell at his straunge intendiment.
Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 6.

intending (in-ten'ding), p. a. Designing or purposing to be or become.

If the intending entomologist should content himself with merely learning a string of names by rote, he must expect to find his lesson a hard and repulsive one.
J. G. Wood, Insects at Home, p. 18.

And what to intending emigrants will prove very useful.
Contemporary Rev., L. 303.

The construction of a roof for an equatorial room (technically called the "dome," whatever may be its precise form) is a great crux to the intending builder of an observatory.
Nature, XXXIII. 57.

intendment (in-tend'mənt), n. [Early mod. E. also entendment; < ME. entendement, understanding, sense, < OF. (also F.) entendement = Pr. entendement, entendemen, entendemen = Sp. entendimiento = Pg. entendimento = It. intendimento, < ML. intendimentum, attention, intent, purpose, understanding, < L. intendere, intend, ML. also attend: see intend. Cf. intendiment.] 1†. Understanding; intelligence.

Mannes hedde imaginen ne can,
Ne entendement considere, ne tonge teile
The cruel peynes of this sorwful man.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 1696.

By corruption of this our flesh, man's reason and entendment . . . were both overwhelmed.
Sir T. Wilson (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 464).

2†. Intention; design; purpose.

We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,
But fear the main intendment of the foot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us.
Shak., Hen. V., I. 2. 144.

See the privacy of this room, how sweetly it offers itself to our retired intendments.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, II. 1.

Therefore put in act your resolute intendments.
Dekker and Webster, Sir Thomas Wyatt.

3. True intention or meaning: specifically used of a person or a law, or of any legal instrument.—In the intendment of law, in the judgment of law; according to the legal view; by a presumption of law.

The time of their absence is in the intendment of law bestowed to the Church's great advantage and benefit.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 81.

intenebrate (in-ten'ē-brāt), v. t. [Cf. It. intenebrare, darken; < L. in, in, + tenebrare, darken, < tenebræ, darkness: see tenebræ.] To darken; obscure; make shadowy.

A pretty conjecture intenebrated by antiquity.
Sir H. Wotton, Beliquia, p. 251.

intenerate (in-ten'g-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intenerated, ppr. intenerating. [< ML. inteneratus*, pp. of intenerare* (> It. intenerare), make tender, < L. in, in, + tener, tender: see tender.] To make tender; soften. [Rare.]

So have I seen the little purls of a stream sweat through the bottom of a bank and intenerate the stubborn pavement till it hath made it fit for the impression of a child's foot.
Jer. Taylor, Sermons (1651), p. 204.

Thus she [Nature] contrives to intenerate the granite and feldspar.
Emerson, Compensation.

intenerate (in-ten'g-rāt), a. [< ML. inteneratus*, pp.: see the verb.] Make tender; tender; soft; intenerated.

inteneration (in-ten-sā'shōn), n. [< intensate + -ation.] The act of intensifying or making soft or tender. [Rare.]

Restoration of some degree of youth, and inteneration of the parts. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 55.

intenable (in-ten-i-bl), a. [*< in- + tenible for tenable.] Same as intenable, 2.

intensate (in-ten'sāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intensated, ppr. intensating. [< intens + -ate.] To make intense or more intense; intensify. [Rare.]

Poor Jean Jacques! . . . with all misfortunes of Nature intensated to the verge of madness by unfavourable fortune. Curlye, Diderot.

intensation (in-ten-sā'shōn), n. [< intens + -ation.] The act of intensifying; elevation to a higher degree of intensity. [Rare.]

There are cooks too, we know, who boast of their diabolic ability to cause the patient, by successive intensions of their art, to eat with new and ever new appetite, till he explodes on the spot. Curlye, Diderot.

intensative (in-ten'sā-tiv), a. [< intensate + -ive.] Making intense or more intense; adding intensity; intensifying. [Rare.]

intense (in-ten's), a. [< F. intense = Sp. Pg. It. intenso, < L. intensus, stretched tight, pp. of intendere, stretch out: see intend.] 1. Existing in or having a high degree; strong; powerful: as, intense pain; intense activity; hence, extreme or absolute of its kind; having its characteristic qualities in a high degree.

I fear that your Love to me doth not continue in so constant and intense a degree. Howell, Letters, I. v. 1.

The national and religious prejudices with which the English were regarded throughout India were peculiarly intense in the metropolis of the Brahminical superstition. Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

From the intense, clear, star-sown vault of heaven, O'er the lit sea's unquiet way. M. Arnold, Self-dependence.

A passion so intense One would think that it well Might drown all life in the eye. Tennyson, Maud, xiv. 8.

I prefer a winter walk that takes in the nightfall and the intense silence that are long follows it. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 51.

2. Exhibiting a high degree of some quality or action.

[He was] studiously intense in acquiring more knowledge. N. Morion, New England's Memorial, p. 341.

3. Susceptible to strong emotion; emotional. [Recent cant.]

Scene, a drawing-room in Passionate Brompton. Fair Bethotic (suddenly, and in deepest tones, to Smith, who has just been introduced to take her in to dinner). Are you intense? Du Maurier, English Society at Home, pl. 49.

4. In photog., same as dense, 3.

intensely (in-ten's-ly), adv. 1. In an intense degree; with intensity; extremely; very: as, weather intensely cold.—2. Attentively; earnestly; intently.

To persons young, and that look intensely if it be dark, there appear many strange images moving to and fro. J. Spencer, Vanity of Vulgar Prophecies, p. 103.

3. With intense feeling or emotion.

He lived intensely in his own imaginings, wise or idle, beautiful or feebly extravagant. E. Duval, Shelley, I. 41.

intenseness (in-ten's-ness), n. The state or character of being intense, in any sense of that word; intensity.

He was in agony, and prayed with the utmost ardency and intenseness. Jer. Taylor.

intensification (in-ten's-i-fi-kā'shōn), n. [< intensify + -ation.] 1. The act of intensifying or of making intense.

The result of training for prize-fights and races is more shown in the prolongation of energy than in the intensification of energy. H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 808.

Specifically.—2. In photog., the process of thickening or rendering more opaque the chemical deposits in the film of a picture. Intensification is required to improve the printing quality of a negative, when the exposure has been ill-timed or the subject badly lighted. It is sometimes effected, in the case of too short exposure, by carrying the development to an extreme, but more commonly the negative is intensified by a new chemical process after development.

intensifier (in-ten's-i-fi-er), n. One who or that which intensifies. Specifically.—(a) In photog., one of the substances which, when applied to a negative, increase the opacity of the deposit already formed. (b) In physical and mechanical appliances, an apparatus for intensifying or increasing the pressure upon a mass of confined air or other fluid. Two directly connected pistons of different areas, working in separate cylinders supplied with proper valves, constitute the main features of the apparatus. The smaller cylinder receiving the fluid at a given pressure on one side of its piston, the latter is thereby moved to the end of its stroke, and its valve is closed to prevent escape of the fluid. Next, the fluid is, at the same pressure, admitted into the larger cylinder, on the opposite side of its piston to that upon which the admission was effected in the smaller cylinder. The fluid in the smaller cylinder is thus compressed, and its pressure upon each unit of interior surface of the cylinder is intensified in the exact ratio of the areas of the pistons. By a series of these intensifiers, or by properly proportioning the cylinders and pistons, pressure is thus increased without limit, except such as is introduced by the limits of strength in materials.

intensify (in-ten's-i-fi), v.; pret. and pp. intensified, ppr. intensifying. [= F. intensifier; < L. intensus, intense, + -ficare, < facere, make.] 1. To render intense or more intense; heighten the action or some quality of.

We have seen the influence of universal empire expanding, and the influence of Greek civilisation intensifying, the sympathies of Europe. Lecky, Europ. Morals, II. 280.

2. Specifically, in photog., to render more opaque, as the chemically affected parts of a negative. See intensification, 2.

II. intrans. To become intense or more intense; act with greater effort or energy.

intension (in-ten'shōn), n. [= Sp. intension = Pg. intensiondo = It. intensione, < L. intensio(n-), a stretching out, < intendere, pp. intensus, stretch out: see intend, intense.] 1. Intensity, quantity, or degree of a quality, action, or effect.

The greatness of the glory eternal consists not only in the eternity of its duration, but in its intension also, as being supreme. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1836), I. 370.

Art demands, in addition to the dimension of extension, a dimension of intension or degree. J. Sully, Sensation and Intuition, p. 348.

2. The act of making intense; intensification. [Rare.]

It is by alternate intension and remission of effort that rhythm is made obvious to our senses. J. Hadley, Essays, p. 95.

3. In logic, a term used by Sir William Hamilton for the sum of the characters given in the definition of a term: intended to replace the term comprehension.—Intension and remission of forms, in metaph., higher and lower degrees of substantial forms as they exist in the individuals; for instance, one thing may be supposed to possess the elemental form of fire in a more intense state than another thing. This doctrine was held by Duns Scotus and his followers, but was denied by the rest of the scholastic doctors.

intensity (in-ten's-i-ti), n. [*= F. intensité = Sp. intensidad = Pg. intensidade = It. intensità, < L. as if intensita(-)s, < intensus, tight: see intense.] 1. The character or state of being intense; the quantity or degree of a quality, action, or effect; degree; specifically, a high degree. Intensity (as opposed to extension) is a quantity which is not apprehended by a successive synthesis, but all at once; a quantity the parts of which are not separately identifiable, and which has an absolute minimum.

The intensity of the heat was tremendous: the tar melted in the seams of the deck; we could scarcely bear it even when we were under the awning. R. Curzon, Monast. in the Levant, p. 2.

It is no doubt also true that intensity of antecedent desire intensifies the pleasure of fruition when that comes—the pleasure not only appears, as Plato thought, but actually is greater. H. Sidgwick, Methods of Ethics, p. 124.

The intensity and persistence of grief at the loss of a friend measures the depth of the affection. J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 491.

Wealth of expanded and convoluted cerebral hemispheres is, in some general way, a measure of the richness and intensity of mental life. G. T. Ladd, Physiol. Psychol., p. 248.

2. In physics and mech., the amount or degree of energy with which a force operates or a cause acts; effectiveness, as estimated by the result; the magnitude of a force, measured in appropriate units: as, the intensity of gravitation. In electricity, the intensity of a current is properly its strength (expressed in amperes); in popular language, however, it is often used of the electromotive force or potential difference of the current, as when a voltaic battery, coupled in series, is said to be arranged for intensity.

The intensity of light depends upon the extent of the vibrations of the height of the waves. Spottiswoode, Polarization, p. 32.

The intensity of magnetization of a uniformly magnetized body is defined as the quotient of its moment by its volume. J. D. Everett, Units and Phys. Constants, p. 121.

3. Used absolutely: Intense feeling or emotion; also, the exhibition or embodiment of intense feeling or emotion.

But this led him to search the Bible and dwell upon it with an earnestness and intensity which no determination of a calmer mind could have commanded. Southey, Bunyan, p. 32.

In proportion to the intensity needful to make his (Wordsworth's) nature thoroughly aglow is the very high quality of his best verses. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 248.

4. In photog., opacity or density, as of a negative. See intensification, 2.—Chromatic, colorific, magnetic, etc., intensity. See the adjectives.—Intensity of a pressure or other stress, the total force divided by the area over which it is distributed.

intensive (in-ten'siv), a. and n. [= F. intensif = Sp. Pg. It. intensivo, < NL. intensivus, < L. intensus, intense: see intense.] I. a. 1. Pertaining or referable to intensity or degree; increasing in intensity or degree; making or becoming intense; intensifying.

The pressure [of population], from being simply extensive, has also become intensive. Amer. Anthropologist, I. 17.

Those persons requiring the intensive treatment (in vaccination) have to come again in the afternoon. Nineteenth Century, XXIV. 858.

2. Intense.

A very intensive pleasure follows the passion or displeasure. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 255.

The elevating force is more intensive in the Chilian Andes than in the neighboring countries. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXVI. 90.

3. Intent; unremitting; assiduous.

Hereupon Salomon said, kisse me with the kisse of thy mouth, to note the intensive desire of the soul. Benvenuto, Passengers' Dialogues (1612).

4. In gram., expressing intensity or a high degree of action or quality; serving to give force or emphasis: as, an intensive particle or prefix. Many particles and prefixes, as well as verbs, are called intensive, especially in Latin and Greek grammar, even when their force is not expressible by paraphrase or translation. Prefixes originally intensive often become neutral.—Intensive distance, difference in the degree of some quality.

The intensive distance between the perfection of an angel and of a man is but finite. Sir M. Hale.

Intensive distinctness, distinctness and completeness in logical depth.—Intensive gas-burner. See gas-burner.—Intensive proposition, a proposition in which the subject is viewed as the containing whole.—Intensive quantity. (a) A continuous quantity the parts of which cannot be separately identified, and which has an absolute minimum; degree; intensity.

That quantity which can be apprehended as unity only, and in which plurality can be represented by approximation only to negation = 0, I call intensive quantity. Every reality therefore in a phenomenon has intensive quantity—that is, a degree. Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Max Müller.

(b) Logical comprehension or depth; the sum of the characters predicable of a term; the sum of consequences from a given fact.—Intensive sublimity, sublimity due to the high degree of some quality.

II. n. Something serving to express intensity, or to give force or emphasis; specifically, in gram., an intensive particle, word, or phrase. intensively (in-ten'siv-ly), adv. In an intensive manner; by increase of degree; as regards intensity or degree.

An object is intensively sublime when it involves such a degree of force or power that the imagination cannot at once represent, and the Understanding cannot bring under measure, the quantum of this force; and when, from the nature of the object, the inability of the mind is made at once apparent, so that it does not proceed in the ineffective effort, but at once calls back its energies from the attempt. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaph., xvi.

Frequently the linguistic material available is of a precarious quality, intensively and extensively. Trans. Amer. Philol. Ass., XVI. App., p. xii.

intensiveness (in-ten'siv-ness), n. The character or quality of being intensive; intensity.

He chose a solitary retired garden, where nothing might or could interrupt or divert the intensiveness of his sorrow and fear. Sir M. Hale, Christ Crucified.

intent (in-ten't'), a. [= OF. intent = Sp. Pg. It. intento, < L. intensus, stretched, strained, eager, intent, pp. of intendere, stretch, intend, attend: see intend. Cf. intent, n.] 1. Firmly or steadfastly fixed or directed (upon something); fixed with strained or earnest attention: as, an intent look or gaze; his thoughts are intent upon his duty.

People whose hearts are wholly bent towards pleasure, or intent upon gain, never hear of the noble occurrences among men of industry and humanity. Steele, Spectator, No. 248.

But this whole hour your eyes have been intent On that veiled picture. Tennyson, Gardener's Daughter.

2. Having the mind bent or earnestly fixed upon something; sedulously engaged or settled: usually with on or upon: as, a person intent upon business or pleasure.

The patient fisher takes his silent stand, Intent, his angle trembling in his hand. Pope, Windsor Forest, l. 123.

Her head erect, her face turned full to me, Her soul intent on mine through two wide eyes. Browning, King and Book, l. 302.

3. Earnestly attentive; strongly devoted: with to.

Distractions in England made most men intent to their own safety. Elton Bastille.

intent (in-ten't'), n. [Early mod. E. also entent; < ME. intent, usually entent, entente, < OF. entent, m., entente, F. entente, f., = Pr. entem, m., ententa, f., = Sp. Pg. It. intento, m., intent, < L.

intendus, m., purpose, intent, ML. also a stretching out, < L. intendere, pp. intensus, stretch out, intend: see intend. Cf. intent, a.] 1. That which is intended; purpose; aim; design; intention; meaning.

Ne no thing wist that what it ment
That that bound with gude intent.

Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 88.

I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?
Acts x. 29.

He [my guide] too went readily in with me; it may be not knowing my intent was to buy.

Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 91.

But Dante recked not of the wine;
Whether the women stayed or went,
His visage held one stern intent.

D. G. Rossetti, Dante at Verona.

2. In law: (a) Personal intention; the state of mind in respect of intelligent volition; the voluntary purposing of an act: often distinguishable from the motive which led to the formation of the intent. See criminal intent, below. (b) The tendency imputable by law to an act; the constructive purpose of an action, for which the doer may be responsible, although the actual intent was not wrongful: as when a conveyance is said to be intended to defraud creditors, because, although it may have been without actual dishonest intention, it necessarily has that tendency.—3†. Notion; idea; thought; opinion.

To myn intent ther is best abyding,
I wote he will be gladd of your cunying.

Geoffrey Chaucer (E. E. T. S.), l. 629.

4†. Attention; heed.

Awake, daughter myne,
And to my talking take intent.

Early Eng. Poems, p. 141.

The lesse lyght all-way to the nyght sail take intent.

York Plays, p. 11.

Criminal intent, the intent to do the criminal act or to omit the duty, if the law makes the act or omission an offense, irrespective of whether the person knew of the law, and in many cases irrespective of whether he knew the facts which bring the act or omission within the law, and irrespective of motive. Thus, for example, if a person, whether from the motive of pleasure in the noise, or anger at a cat, discharges a firearm from his window in a city with reckless disregard of human life, and kills a person who is unknown to him, within range, the criminal intent is the intelligent purpose to discharge the gun in a highly dangerous manner, as distinguished alike from the motive, from any purpose to violate law, and from any purpose to kill a human being. If he was insane in the legal sense, or if the discharge was accidental, there was no criminal intent; otherwise the intent was criminal, although he had an innocent motive, and was ignorant of the law and of the existence of the bystander.—Specific intent, actual intent.—To all intents and purposes, in every respect; in all applications or senses; in a looser use, practically; substantially, but not literally.

To all intents and purposes, he who will not open his eyes is for the present as blind as he that cannot.

South, Sermons.

intenti, v. t. [L. intendere, stretch out toward, freq. of intendere, stretch out: see intend.] To accuse; charge. Nares.

For of some former she had now made known
They were her errors, whilst she intended Browne.

Verbes prefixed to Browne's Pastorals.

intentionat (in-ten-tā'shon), n. [= It. intenzione, < L. intentio(n)-], a stretching out toward; < intendere, stretch out toward: see intend.] The act of intending, or the result of such an act; intention. Bp. Hall, Ahab and Naboth.

intention (in-ten'shi-ō), n. [L., a stretching out: see intention.] In anc. music, the process or act of passing from a lower to a higher pitch.

intention (in-ten'shon), n. [< ME. intencion, entencion, < OF. intencion, entencion, intention, F. intention = Pr. entencio, entencio = Sp. intencion = Pg. intenção = It. intenzione, < L. intentio(n)-], a stretching out, exertion, attention, design, purpose, intention, < intendere, pp. intensus, stretch out, intend: see intend.] 1. Direction of the mind; attention; hence, uncommon exertion of the intellectual faculties; closeness of application; fixedness of attention; earnestness. [Archaic.]

O, she did so course o'er my exterior with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass! Shak., M. W. of W., l. 3, 73.

I suffer for their guilt now, and my soul (like one that looks on ill-affected eyes)
Is hurt with mere intention on their follies.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, l. 5.

When the mind with great earnestness, and of choice, fixes its view on any idea, considers it on all sides, and will not be called off by the ordinary solicitation of other ideas, it is that we call intention or study.

Locke, Human Understanding, II. xix. 1.

It [reading well] requires a training such as the athletes underwent, the steady intention almost of the whole life to this object. Thoreau, Walden, p. 110.

2. The act of intending or purposing.

It is evident that "good intention" is of the very essence of an act of duty, and not "good results" nor "pleasurable feelings" felt in its performance.

Mivart, Nature and Thought, p. 150.

3. That which is intended, purposed, or meant; that for which a thing is made, designed, or done; intent; purpose; aim; meaning; desire: often in the plural, especially (in colloquial use) with regard to marriage.

The chief intention of pillars, in Egyptian buildings, being to support a weighty covering, it was necessary they should be very strong.

Pococke, Description of the East, I. 216.

Therefore have they ever been the instruments of great designs, yet seldom understood the true intention of any.

Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err.

So little intention had we of shooting bears that we had not brought rifle or even gun with us.

Froutie, Sketches, p. 79.

He unbosomed himself with the simplicity of a rustic lover called upon by an anxious parent to explain his intentions.

O. W. Holmes, Essays, p. 100.

4†. A straining or putting forth of action; exertion; intension.

The operations of agents admit of intention and remission. Locke.

5. In surg., and figuratively in other uses, natural effort or exertion; course of operation; process: as, the wound healed by first or by second intention. See below.

The third intention is deligation, or retaining the parts so joined together. Wiseman, Surgery.

You discern at a glance that it is only what was natural to him and reached by the first intention.

Steinman, Vict. Poets, p. 45.

6†. A mental effort or exertion; notion; conception; opinion.

A monk, by our lordes gras,
Of Malliers it is myn intention.

Rom. of Parthenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 2648.

7†. Understanding; attention; consideration.

This passoun & thi mercy
We take to oure entencion.

Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 21.

8. In law, intent; the fixing of the mind upon the act and thinking of it as of one which will be performed when the time comes. Stephen; Harris. It depends on a joint exercise of the will and the understanding.—9. In scholastic logic, a general concept of the mind. [This use of the word (Latin intentio), first found in a translation from Avicenna, was common throughout the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries. Aquinas says that the intelligible species or first apprehension is the beginning, while the intention is the end of the process of thought.]

—Declaration of intention. See declaration.—First intention, in logic, a general conception obtained by abstraction from the ideas or images of sensible objects.—Second intention, in logic, a general conception obtained by reflection and abstraction applied to first intentions as objects. Thus, the concepts man, animal, and thing are first intentions; but if we reflect that man is a species of animal, and animal a species of organism, we see there is no reason why this process should not be continued until we have a concept embracing every other object or being (ens); and this concept, not obtained by direct abstraction from the species offered by the imagination, but by thinking about words or concepts, is a second intention. In particular, the concepts of a genus, of a species, of a specific difference, of a property, and of an accident were considered to be derived from the consideration of particular genera, species, differences, properties, and accidents, and so to be second intentions par excellence. At the present day such terms as being, nothing, identity, negation, and the like are called terms of second intention when it is desired to emphasize the fact that they are obtained by abstraction from the logical relations of other terms.—Special intention, the celebration of the eucharist for a specific object. Lee's Glossary.—To heal by first intention, in surg., to cicatrize without suppuration, as a wound.—To heal by second intention, in surg., to unite after suppuration, as the borders of a wound.

intentional (in-ten'shon-al), a. and n. [= Sp. Pg. intencional = It. intenzionale = F. intentionnel; as intention + -al.] 1. Done with intention, design, or purpose; intended; designed.

The glory of God is the end which every intelligent being is bound to consult, by a direct and intentional service. Rogers.

2. In metaph., pertaining to an appearance, phenomenon, or representation in the mind; phenomenal; representational; apparent.—Intentional abstraction, being, etc. See the nouns.—Intentional exist. Same as intentional, n.—Intentional existence, existence as an immediate object of consciousness.—Int. 1. Premeditated, contemplated, studied.

2. In metaph., an appearance having no substantial existence.

To a true being are opposed beings of reason, as genus, species, etc., . . . secondly, the fictitious or feigned, as chimeras, centaurs, etc., . . . thirdly, appearances, or as they commonly say intentionals, as the rainbow, colours appearing, species and spectres of the senses and understanding, and other things whose essence only consists in their apparition.

Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman.

intentional (in-ten'shon-al'i-ti), n. [< intentional + -ity.] The character or fact of being intentional; designedness.

To render the analysis here given of the possible states of the mind in point of intentionality absolutely complete, it must be pushed to such a farther degree of minuteness, as to some eyes will be apt to appear trifling.

Bentham, Intro. to Principles of Morals, viii.

intentionally (in-ten'shon-al-i), adv. In an intentional manner; with intention or design; of purpose; not casually.

intentioned (in-ten'shon-d), a. [< intention + -ed.] Having intentions or designs, of a kind specified by some qualifying term: as, well-intentioned; ill-intentioned.

intention (in-ten'tiv), a. [< ME. ententif, < OF. ententif = Pr. ententiu = It. intenzio, < LL. intensus, intensive (said of adverbs), < L. intendere, pp. intensus, stretch out: see intend. Cf. intensive.] 1. Having an intent or purpose; intent; attentive.

Who is so trewe and eke so ententif

To kepe him, syk and hool, as is his make?

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 44.

While Vortimer was thus intention for his Country's liberty, Rowena the former King's Wife, being Daughter to Hengist, was as intention to bring it into Servitude.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 4.

But her most intention care was how to unite England and Scotland in a solid friendship.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 367.

Objects

Worthy their serious and intention eyes.

E. Johnson, Every Man out of his Humour, Ind.

2. Of or pertaining to attention.

Our souls for want of spirits cannot attend exactly to so many intention operations. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 256.

intentionly (in-ten'tiv-li), adv. [< ME. ententifly; < intensive + -ly.] Attentively; intently.

And for his grete bewte the maydenys be-hilde hym often intentionly. Martin (E. E. T. S.), III. 608.

Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionly.

Shak., Othello, I. 3, 155.

intentionness (in-ten'tiv-nes), n. Closeness of attention or application of mind; attentiveness. W. Montague, Devoute Essays, ii. 224.

intently (in-ten'ti), adv. In an intent manner; with close attention or application; with eagerness or earnestness; fixedly.

And he be-helde hym intently that he looked on noon other, and after that he be-helde his fellows, that were stille and koy, that seiden not a worde, but be-helde hym that spake. Martin (E. E. T. S.), II. 318.

intentionness (in-ten'tiv-nes), n. The state of being intent; close or earnest attention or application.

inter (in-ter'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interred, ppr. interring. [Formerly enter; < ME. enteren, < OF. enterrer, F. enterrer = Pr. Pg. enterrar = It. interrare, < ML. interrare, put in the earth, bury, < L. in, in, + terra, earth: see terra.] 1. To place in the earth and cover with it. [Rare in this general sense.]

The best way is to inter them as you furrow pease.

Mortimer, Husbandry.

Specifically—2. To bury; inhumate; place in a grave, or, by extension, in a tomb of any kind.

The princes entred in to the town gladd and joyfull, and dide entere the dead corpe.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), III. 608.

To be enterit in a townebe, as a trist qweue,

And laid by hir legis, that the lond aght.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 11608.

The evil that men do lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones.

Shak., J. C., III. 2, 81.

inter (in-ter'), prep. [L., in the midst, between, during, among (in comp. also under, down: see inter-) (= Skt. antar, within), < in, in, within, + -ter, a compar. suffix, = E. -der, -ther, -ter, in under, other, after, etc. Cf. under.] A Latin preposition meaning 'between' or 'among,' used in some Latin phrases occurring in English books, as in inter nos (between or among ourselves), inter arma silent leges (laws are silent among arms—that is, in time of war), etc., and very common as a prefix. See inter-.

inter, v. A Middle English form of enter.
inter-, [Early mod. E. also enter- (a form still extant in entertain, enterprise, etc.); ME. enter-, entra-, rarely inter-, < OF. entre-, inter-, < F. entre-, inter- = Sp. Pg. entre-, inter- = It. enter-, inter-, < L. inter- (changed to intel- before l, namely, in intellegere, intelligere, understand: see intellect, intelligent, etc.), a very common prefix, being the adv. and prep. inter used with verbs and nouns, with the meaning 'between, among, amid, during,' in some instances 'under, down': see *inter*². A common prefix meaning 'between' or 'among' or 'during,' occurring in many English words taken from the Latin, either directly or through Middle English and Old French or French forms (being then in Middle English also enter-, and so retained in some modern forms: see enter-), or formed in English on the Latin model. Words formed in English with this prefix may have the second element of non-Latin origin, as in interdash, interknow, intertangle, interweave, etc. The second element is (in the original) either a verb, as in interact, v., intercalate, intercept, interchange, etc., or a noun, as in interact, n., intercalation, intercalary, etc. The prefix is freely used in English in the making of new compounds, often without immediate reference to its Latin status. In such cases, in the following etymologies, it is for the sake of brevity, usually treated as an English prefix, and not carried back to the Latin preposition, as in other cases. For the relation of inter- to the second element in adjectives, compare the similar relation of ante-, anti-, etc.

interaccessory (in-tér-ak-ses'-q-ri or in-tér-ak'-se-ə-ri), a. [< inter- + accessory.] In anat., situated between accessory processes of vertebrae: as, an interaccessory muscle.

interacineous (in-tér-as'-i-nus), a. [< L. inter, between, + NL. acinus, q. v.] Situated or occurring between the acini.

The growth (of a tumor) is accompanied by a strong vascularization of the interacineous connective tissue. Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, III, 353.

interact (in-tér-akt'), n. [= F. entracte = Sp. Pg. entracte; as inter- + act, n.] In the drama, the interval between two acts, or a short piece between others; an interlude; hence, any intermediate employment or time.

interact (in-tér-akt'), v. t. [< inter- + act, v.] To act reciprocally; act on each other.

The two complexions, or two styles of mind—the perceptive class, and the practical finality class—are ever in counterpoise, interacting mutually.

Nimerson, English Traits, xiv.

interaction (in-tér-ak'shon), n. [< interact, v., after action.] Mutual or reciprocal action; action or influence of things upon each other.

The interaction of the atoms throughout infinite time rendered all manner of combinations possible. Tyndall.

There can be no morality when there is not interaction between the moral subject and the moral object. H. N. Day, Princeton Rev., Sept., 1879, p. 311.

interactional (in-tér-ak'shon-al), a. [< interaction + -al.] Pertaining to or of the nature of interaction. [Rare.]

The sum of being consists of the two systems of substantial forms and interactional relations, and it reappears in the form of concept and judgment, the concept representing being and the judgment being in action. Encyc. Brit., XXI, 412.

interactive (in-tér-ak'tiv), a. [< inter- + active.] Mutually active; acting upon or influencing each other.

These phenomena are ever intermingled and interactive. J. Fiske, Cosmic Philos., I, 39.

interadditive (in-tér-ad'i-tiv), a. [< inter- + additive.] Inserted parenthetically, or between other things, as a clause in a sentence. Cole-ridge.

interagency (in-tér-ā'-jen-si), n. [< inter- + agency.] The act or acts of one acting as an interagent; intermediate agency.

interagent (in-tér-ā'-jent), n. [< inter- + agent.] An intermediate agent.

Domitian . . . tried by secret interagents to corrupt the fidelity of Cerialia. Gordon, tr. of Tacitus.

inter alia (in-tér ā'lī-ā), [L.: inter, among; alia, neut. pl. acc. of alius, other: see alias.] Among other things or matters: as, he spoke, inter alia, of the slavery question.

interall, n. An obsolete variant of entail.

When sephyr breathed into the watery interall. G. Fletcher.

interalveolar (in-tér-al-vē'ō-lār), a. [< inter- + alveolar.] 1. In zool., situated between the alveoli: applied to the transverse muscles which connect the apposed surfaces of the five alveoli of the dentary apparatus of a sea-urchin. See lantern of Aristotle, under lantern.—2. In anat., situated between or among the alveoli of the lungs.

interambulacra, n. Plural of interambulacrum. interambulacral (in-tér-am-bū-lā'krā), a. [= F. interambulacral; as inter- + ambulacral.] 1. In echinoderms, situated between ambulacra; interradial. See out under Astrophyton.

Transverse muscles connect the two interambulacral plates, the oral edges of which are articulated with a long narrow plate, the torus angularis. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 433.

2. Of or pertaining to interambulacra.

interambulacrum (in-tér-am-bū-lā'krum), n.; pl. interambulacra (-krā). [< inter- + ambulacrum.] In zool., one of the imperforate plates which occupy the intervals of the perforate plates, or ambulacra, in the shells of echinoderms. See ambulacrum.

interamniian (in-tér-am'ni-ān), a. [< L. interamnis, between two rivers, < L. inter, between, + amnis, a river.] Situated between two rivers: applied specifically to Mesopotamia.

From one end of the interamniian country to the other. Piazzi Smyth, Pyramid, p. 75.

interanimate (in-tér-an'i-māt), v. t.; pret. and pp. interanimated, ppr. interanimating. [< inter- + animate.] To animate mutually.

When love with one another so interanimates two souls. Donne, The Ecstasy.

interantennal (in-tér-an'ten'al), a. [< inter- + antennae + -al.] Situated between the antennae: as, the interantennal clypeal region of a myriapod.—Interantennal ridge, a longitudinal ridge or carina between the antennae, seen in many Hymenoptera.

interarboration (in-tér-ār-bō-rā'shon), n. [< inter- + arbori + -ation.] The intermixture of the branches of trees standing in opposite ranks.

And though the interarboration do imitate the Arcstylas, or thin order, not strictly answering the proportion of intercolumnations: yet in many trees they will not exceed the intermission of the columns in the court of the Tabernacle. Sir T. Browne, Garden of Cyrus, iv.

interarticular (in-tér-ār-tik'ū-lār), a. [= F. interarticulaire; as inter- + articular.] Situated in a joint (that is, between the articular ends of the bones that compose the joint).—Interarticular cartilage, fibrocartilage. See cartilage.

interarytenoid (in-tér-ari-tē'noid), a. [< inter- + arytenoid.] Situated between the arytenoids.

This inflammatory action in the interarytenoid space is responsible for the spasmodic attacks characterizing pertussis. Medical News, LII, 801.

interatomic (in-tér-a-tom'ik), a. [< inter- + atom + -ic.] Existing or acting between atoms, especially those of a single molecule.

It may be also [admitting] an interatomic energy, between the atoms of the individual molecules. Encyc. Brit., XVI, 611.

interaulic (in-tér-ā'lik), a. [< L. inter, between, + aula, a hall: see aulic.] Existing between royal courts: as, "interaulic politics," Motley. [Rare.]

interauricular (in-tér-ā-rik'ū-lār), a. [< inter- + auricula, auricle, + -ar.] In anat., situated between the auricles of the heart: as, the interauricular septum.

interaxial (in-tér-ak'si-al), a. [< interaxis + -al.] In arch., situated in an interaxis.

interaxillary (in-tér-ak'si-lār), a. [< L. inter, between, + axilla, axil, + -ary.] In bot., situated between the axils of leaves.

interaxis (in-tér-ak'sis), n. [< L. inter, between, + axis, axis: see axis.] In arch., the space between axes.

interbastation (in-tér-bas-tā'shon), n. [< inter- + bastis + -ation.] Patchwork. [Rare.]

A metaphor taken from interbastation, patching or piecing, sowing or clapping close together.

J. Smith, Portrait of Old Age (1666), p. 184.

interbedded (in-tér-bed'ed), a. Same as interstratified.

Interbedded or contemporaneous [rock]. Geibis, Encyc. Brit., X, 307.

interblend (in-tér-blend'), v. t.; pret. interblended, pp. interblended or interblent, ppr. interblending. [< inter- + blend.] To blend or mingle so as to form a union.

Three divisions of the Apocalypse, though the first and second interblend imperceptibly with each other. E. H. Sears, Fourth Gospel (the Heart of Christ), p. 100.

interbrachial (in-tér-brā'ki-al), a. [< inter- + brachium + -al.] Situated between brachia, arms, or rays, as of a starfish; interradial; interambulacral: as, the interbrachial area of an ophiurian.

The reproductive organs . . . open by orifices on the ventral surface of the body or in the interbrachial areas. H. A. Nicholas, Zool. (5th ed.), p. 196.

interbrain (in-tér-brān), n. [< inter- + brain.] The diencephalon.

interbranchial (in-tér-brang'ki-al), a. [< inter- + branchia + -al.] Situated between or among branchiae or gills.

interbreed (in-tér-brēd'), v. [< inter- + breed.] I. trans. To breed by crossing species or varieties; cross-breed.

II. intrans. 1. To practise cross-breeding, as a farmer.—2. To procreate with an animal of a different variety or species: as, hens and pheasants interbreed.

interbreeding (in-tér-brē'ding), n. The process of breeding between different species or varieties; cross-breeding; hybridization.

interbring (in-tér-bring'), v. t. [< inter- + bring.] To bring mutually.

Bless'd pair of swans, oh may you interbring Daily new joys, and never sing. Donne, Elegia, Dec. 23, 1613.

intercalary (in-tér-kā-lār), a. [= F. intercalaire = Sp. Pg. intercalare = It. intercalare, < L. intercalaris (also intercalarius), of or for insertion (dies or mensis intercalaris, an inserted day or month), < intercalare, insert: see intercalate.] Intercalary.

Which is the cause that the king's reputed the third of these intercalary dates to be disastrous and dismal. Holland, tr. of Flutarch, p. 1082.

intercalare (in-tér-kā-lār), n.; pl. intercalaria (-ri-ā). [NL., neut. of L. intercalaris: see intercalary.] The opisthotic bone of the skull. Gegenbaur; Cope.

intercalary (in-tér-kā-lār), a. [= It. intercalario, < L. intercalarius, equiv. to intercalaris: see intercalate.] 1. In chron., inserted in the calendar out of regular order, as an extra day or month; having an additional day or month, as one of a cycle of years. The lunar reckoning and other features of the Greek, Roman, and other ancient calendars made the year of twelve months too short, and intercalary days and months were officially added at intervals to adjust the difference. Since the reformation of the calendar by Julius Caesar, in 46 B. C., only one intercalary day in every fourth year, or leap-year, has been required, the 29th of February.

Ve Adar was an intercalary month, added, some years, unto the other twelve, to make the solar and lunar year agree. Raleigh, Hist. World, II, iii, § 6.

The names of the Parthian months were as follows: . . . together with an intercalary month inserted occasionally, called Embolimus.

B. V. Head, Historia Numorum, p. 692.

Hence—2. Inserted or coming between others; introduced or existing interstitially: as, intercalary beds in geology.

How shall these chapters be annominated? Intercalary they shall not. That word will send some of my readers to Johnson's Dictionary for its meaning; and others to Sheridan or Walker for its pronunciation.

Southey, Doctor, interchapter I.

The truth was that the poet began his career at an intercalary transition period. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 200.

3. In biol., intermediate in character between two types, yet not representing the actual genetic passage from one form to the other; interposed or intercalated, yet not biologically transitional.

It seems not improbable that these ancient corals represent an intercalary type between the Hexacorallia and the Octocorallia. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 140.

Intercalary days. (a) In chron., see def. 1, and biacutus. (b) In med., the days intervening between the critical days or crises of a disease.—Intercalary growth. In bot., a form of growth observed in certain fungi and algae, in which the new part is intercalated into the old. In Edogonium, for example, the cells frequently present a striated appearance at one extremity, the striation being the result of intercalary growth—that is, just below the septum of the cell a ring or cushion of cellulose is formed, and at this point the cell-wall splits, as if by a circular cut, into two pieces, which separate from each other, but remain attached to the ring or cushion. The process is repeated, the next ring forming a little further away from the septum.

The typical form of intercalary growth takes place in definite belts which surround the cell.

Beesey, Botany, p. 22.

Intercalary verse, a refrain.

intercalate (in-tér-kā-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intercalated, ppr. intercalating. [< L. intercalatus, pp. of intercalare (> It. intercalare = Sp. Pg. intercalare = F. intercaler), proclaim the insertion of a day or month in a calendar, < inter, between, + calare, call: see calende.] 1. In chron., to insert in the calendar by proclamation or authority, as an extra day or month. See intercalary, 1.

In the time of Solon, and probably that of Herodotus also, it was the custom with Greeks to add, or, as it is termed, to intercalate a month every other year. Priestley, History, xiv.

Hence—2. To insert between others; introduce interstitially; interject or interpolate, as something irregular or unrelated.

So wrote Theodoret in days when men had not yet intercalated into Holy Writ that fine line of an obscure modern hymn, which proclaims . . . that "There is no repentance in the grave." C. Kingsley, Hypatia.

intercalation (in-tér-kā-lā'shon), n. [= F. intercalation = Sp. intercalacion = Pg. intercalação = It. intercalazione, < L. intercalatio (n-), < intercalare, intercalate: see intercalate.] 1. In chron., an official insertion of additional time, as a day or a month, in the regular reckoning of the calendar, to make the year of the right length. See intercalary, 1.

The number of days required to bring the lunar year into correspondence with the solar had been supplied by irregular intercalations at the direction of the Sacred College. Froude, Caesar, p. 472.

Hence—2. The insertion of anything between other things; irregular interposition or interjection, as, in geology, the intrusion of layers or beds between the regular rocks of a series.

Intercalations of fresh-water species in some localities. Mantch.

Effective scale of intercalations, in math. See effective.

intercalative (in-tér-ká-lá-tiv), a. [< intercalate + -ive.] Tending to intercalate; that intercalates; in philol., same as incorporative.

intercanal (in-tér-ka-nal'), n. [< inter- + canal.] In sponges, an incurrent canal.

These canals are the intercanals of Haeckel, now generally known by their older name of incurrent canals. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 418.

intercarotid (in-tér-ka-rót'ik), a. [< inter- + carotid + -ic.] Situated between the external and internal carotid arteries; as, the intercarotid ganglion or glandule. See ganglion.

This gland (Luschka's) should be considered as an arterial gland, of which the intercarotid ganglion is another example. Holden, Anat. (1888), p. 507.

intercarotid (in-tér-ka-rót'id), a. [< inter- + carotid.] Same as intercarotid.

intercarpal (in-tér-kár-pál), a. [< inter- + carpus + -al.] Situated between or among carpal bones; as, intercarpal ligaments.

intercede (in-tér-séd'), v.; pret. and pp. interceded, ppr. interceding. [= F. intercedere = Sp. Pg. interceder = It. intercedere, < L. intercedere, come between, intervene, interpose, become surety, etc., < inter, between, + cedere, go: see cede.] 1. Intrans. 1. To come between; pass or occur intermediately; intervene.

Miserable losses and continual had the English, by their frequent eruptions, from this time till the Norman conquest: 'twixt which interceded two hundred and seventy-nine years.

Selden, Illustrations of Drayton's Polyolbion, I. 2. To make intercession; act between parties with a view to reconcile those who differ or contend; plead in favor of another; interpose; mediate: followed by with, formerly sometimes by to.

I to the lords will intercede. Milton, S. A., I. 920. She being certainly informed, that they first sued to the French K. for help, denied the Request, yet promised to intercede earnestly with the K. of Spain for Peace.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 351.

II. trans. To pass between.

Those superficies reflect the greatest quantity of light which have the greatest refracting power; that is, which intercede mediums that differ most in their refractive densities. Newton, Opticks, II. III. 1.

intercedence (in-tér-séd'ens), n. [< intercede + -ence.] Intercession; intervention; intermediation.

Without the intercedence of any organ. Ep. Reynolds, The Passions.

intercedent (in-tér-séd'ent), a. [= OF. intercedent, < L. intercedent (t-s), ppr. of intercedere, go between: see intercede.] Passing between; mediating; pleading. Ash. [Rare.]

interceder (in-tér-séd'ér), n. One who intercedes; a mediator; an intercessor.

intercellular (in-tér-sel'ü-lär), a. [< L. inter, between, + NL. cellula, cellule, + -ar.] Situated between or among cells; interstitial in a cellular tissue; as, the intercellular substance or matrix of cartilage. In a broad sense, all tissues or histological structures consist of intercellular substance except in so far as they are composed of cells themselves.—Intercellular passages, in anat., the ultimate ramifications of the lobular bronchial tubes, beset with air-cells or alveoli.—Intercellular spaces, in bot., spaces or passages of greater or less size which occur within the tissues of plants. They are formed by the separation of the walls of the cells through unequal growth, or by the breaking down of intermediate cells. These spaces may contain only air or watery sap, or some of the substances usually formed in cells, as resin, crystals, etc. The intercellular spaces occurring within plants of loose tissue are generally connected with one another, and with the outer air by means of stomata.

intercensal (in-tér-sen'sal), a. [< L. inter, between, + census, census: see census.] Occurring between the taking of one census and another. [Rare.]

a, a, a, Intercellular Spaces.

Experience, however, has shown the rate of increase of the London population to have been very steady in previous intercensal periods. The Lancet, No. 3438, p. 26.

intercentra, n. Plural of intercentrum. intercentrum (in-tér-sen'trál), a. [< intercentrum + -al.] Passing between or connecting centers; situated between vertebral centra; having the character of an intercentrum.

Intercentral Nerve-Fibres. These, which do not convey impulses to or from peripheral parts and nerve-centres, but connect one centre with another, form a final group in addition to efferent and afferent nerve-fibres.

Martin, Human Body (3d ed.), p. 187.

intercentrum (in-tér-sen'trüm), n.; pl. intercentra (-trá). [NL., < L. inter, between, + centrum, center (centrum).] In anat., an intermediate vertebral centrum; a centrum interpolated between two others, as in the extinct batrachian order Ganocephala. Such a centrum occupies the position, and to some extent has the relations, of the intervertebral substance of ordinary vertebrae.

intercept (in-tér-sept'), v. t. [< F. intercepter = Sp. Pg. interceptar = It. intercettare, < L. interceptare, pp. interceptus, take between, intercept, < inter, between, + capere, take: see capable.] 1. To take or seize by the way; interrupt the passage or the course of; bring to a halt or a stop: as, to intercept a letter or a messenger; to intercept rays of light.

I then . . . March'd toward Saint Alban's to intercept the queen. Shak., 3 Hen. VI., II. 1, 114.

I believe in my conscience I intercept many a thought which heaven intended for another man. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, viii. 11.

If we take any gas, such as oxygen, and pass light through it, we find that that gas intercepts, or weakens, certain particular colors. W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 109.

2. To interrupt connection with or relation to; cut or shut off by interposition or interference; obstruct: as, to intercept one's view or outlook.

We must meet first and intercept his course. Dryden.

From the dry fields thick clouds of dust arise, Shade the black host, and intercept the skies. Pope, Iliad, xl. 198.

3†. To interrupt; break off; put an end to.

To intercept this inconvenience, A piece of ordinance 'gainst it I have plac'd. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., I. 4, 14.

God will shortly intercept your breath. Joyce, Expos. of Daniel, x.

4. In math., to hold, include, or comprehend.

Right ascension is an arc of the equator, reckoning toward the east, intercepted between the beginning of Aries and the point of the equator which rises at the same time with the sun or star in a right sphere. Bailey.

Intercepted axis, in geom., the abscissa.—Intercepting trochanter, a trochanter intervening between the coxa and the femur so as to separate them entirely.

intercept (in-tér-sept'), n. [< intercept, v.] That which is intercepted; specifically, in geom., the part of a line lying between the two points at which it is intersected by two other lines, by a curve, by two planes, or by a surface.

intercepted (in-tér-sept'ed), p. a. In astronol., included between two cusps.—Intercepted sign, in astronol., a sign found between the cusps of two houses and not in either of them.

interceptor (in-tér-sep'tér), n. One who or that which intercepts; an opponent.

Thy interceptor, full of despight, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end. Shak., T. N., III. 4, 242.

interception (in-tér-sep'shön), n. [= F. interception = Fr. interception = Sp. interceptio = Pg. interceptio = It. intercettazione, < L. interceptio (n-), a taking away (interception), < interceptare, take between, intercept: see intercept.] 1. The act of intercepting; a stopping or cutting off; obstruction; hindrance.

The pillars, standing at a competent distance from the outmost wall, will, by interception of the sight, somewhat in appearance diminish the breadth.

Sir H. Wotton, Elem. of Architecture.

Loving friends, as your sorrows & afflictions have bin great, so our crosses & interceptions in our proceedings hear have been small. Quoted in Bradford's Plymouth Plantation, p. 128.

2†. Intrusion; intervention.

We might safely suppose the ice to be as solid as entire pieces of ice are wont to be with us, and not to be made up of icy fragments cemented together, with the interception of considerable cavities filled with air. Boyle, Works, II. 542.

interceptive (in-tér-sep'tiv), a. [< intercept + -ive.] Serving to intercept or obstruct.

intercerebral (in-tér-ser'é-brál), a. [< inter- + cerebral.] Situated between the right and left cerebral hemispheres, or connecting two cerebral ganglia: as, an intercerebral commissure.

intercession (in-tér-sesh'ön), n. [= F. intercession = Sp. intercesion = Pg. intercessio = It.

intercessione, < L. intercessio (n-), a coming between, intervention, intercession, < intercedere, pp. intercessus, come between, intercede: see intercede.] 1. The act of interceding; mediation; interposition between parties; solicitation or entreaty in behalf of, or sometimes against, a person or an action.

And when he was in tribulation, he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself exceedingly before the God of his fathers, and made intercession to him. Bible of 1551, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 18.

His perpetual intercession for us (which is an article of faith contained in plainest words of Holy Scripture) does not interfere with that one atonement made upon the Cross. Pusey, Eirenicon, p. 35.

2. In liturgies, a petition or group of petitions for various orders of men and classes in the church, whether living or departed; a form of conjoint or mutual prayer for or with the living, the departed, saints, and angels.—Great intercession, in liturgy, the intercession in the canon of the liturgy, as distinguished from intercessions outside the canon.—Intercession of Christ, the pleading of Christ with God in heaven on behalf of the redeemed (Heb. vii. 25).—Intercession of saints, prayer offered in behalf of Christians living on earth by saints—that is, by the faithful departed in the intermediate state or in heaven (especially those canonized as saints) and by angels. The doctrine of the intercession of saints was generally believed in among the Jews and early Christians, and is authoritatively taught by the Orthodox Greek and other Oriental churches and by the Roman Catholic Church.

intercessional (in-tér-sesh'ön-ál), a. [< intercession + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or containing intercession or entreaty: as, an intercessional hymn.

intercessionate (in-tér-sesh'ön-ät), v. t. [< intercession + -ate.] To intercede with. [Rare.]

To intercessionate God for his recovery. Nash, Terrors of the Night.

intercessor (in-tér-ses'ör), n. [= F. intercesseur = Sp. intercesor = Pg. intercessor = It. intercessore, < L. intercessor, one who intervenes, a mediator, surety, fulfiller, performer, etc., < intercedere, pp. intercessus, intervene, intercede: see intercede.] 1. One who intercedes or makes intercession, especially with the stronger for the weaker; a person who pleads with one in behalf of another, or endeavors to reconcile parties at variance; a mediator.

Christ doth remain everlastingly a gracious intercessor, even for every particular penitent. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vi. 5.

The generality of the Moonlins regard their deceased saints as intercessors with the Deity. E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, I. 304.

2. Eccles., in the early African Church, an officer who during a vacancy of a see administered the bishopric till a successor was elected. Also called interventor.

intercessorial (in-tér-se-só'ri-ál), a. [< intercessory + -al.] Pertaining to an intercessor or to intercession; intercessory. [Rare.]

intercessory (in-tér-se-só'ri), a. [= OF. intercessoire, < ML. intercessorius, intercessory, < L. intercessor, intercessor: see intercessor.] Containing intercession; interceding.

The Lord's prayer has an intercessory petition for our enemies. Barbery, Modern Fanaticism (1780), p. 39.

interchain (in-tér-chän'), v. t. [< inter- + chain.] To chain or link together; unite firmly.

Two bosoms interchained with an oath. Shak., M. N. D., II. 3, 49.

interchange (in-tér-chän'), v.; pret. and pp. interchanged, ppr. interchanging. [Formerly also entchange; < ME. entcheragen, entcheaungen, < OF. entrechangier, < entre, between, + changer, changer, change: see change, v.] 1. Trans. 1. To exchange mutually or reciprocally; put each of in the place of the other; give and take in reciprocity: as, to interchange commodities; to interchange compliments or duties.

The hands she sears that lately grasp'd, Still in the mailed gauntlet clasp'd, Were interchanged in greeting dear. Scott, L. of L. M., v. 6.

With whom, friends And foes alike agree, throughout his life He never interchanged a civil word. Browning, Ring and Book, I. 179.

Sweet is the scene where genial friendship plays The pleasing game of interchanging praise. O. W. Holmes, An After-Dinner Poem.

2. To cause to follow one another alternately: as, to interchange cares with pleasures.

But then hee had withall a strange kind of interchanging of large and unexpected pardons with severe executions. Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII., p. 236.

II. intrans. To change reciprocally; succeed alternately.

His faithful friend and brother Eucarchus came so mightily to his succor that, with some interchanging changes of fortune, they begat of a just war the best child—peace.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, II.

interchange (in'tér-chán'), n. [= OF. entrechange; from the verb.] 1. The act of exchanging reciprocally; the act or process of giving and receiving with reciprocity: as, an interchange of civilities or kind offices.

Ample interchanges of sweet discourse.
Shak., Rich. III., v. 8, 39.

Their encounters, though not personal, have been royal, ly attended with interchange of gifts, letters, loving em-Shak., W. T., I. 1, 30.

It is this recognition of something like our own conscious self, yet so widely sundered from it, which gives something of their exquisite delight to the interchanges of feeling even of mature men and women.
J. Sully, Sensation and Intuition, p. 262.

2. Alternate succession: as, the interchange of light and darkness.

Sweet interchange
Of hill, and valley, rivers, woods, and plains.
Milton, P. L., ix. 115.

interchangeability (in'tér-chán-jú-bil'i-ti), n.
[< interchange: see -bility.] The state of being interchangeable; interchangeableness.

interchangeable (in'tér-chán-já-bl), a. [= OF. entrechangeable; as interchange + -able.] 1.
Capable of being interchanged; admitting of exchange.

So many testimonies, interchangeable warrants, and counterfoliots, running through the hands and resting in the power of so many several persons, is sufficient to argue and convince all manner of falsehood.
Bacon, Office of Alienations.

2. Appearing in alternate succession.

Darkness and light hold interchangeable dominions.
Sir T. Browne, Garden of Cyrus.

interchangeableness (in'tér-chán-já-bl-nes), n.
The state of being interchangeable.

interchangeably (in'tér-chán-já-bl-i), adv. In an interchangeable manner; reciprocally; alternately.

The lovers interchangeably express their loves.
L. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, Arg.

The terms clearness and distinctness seem to be employed almost interchangeably.
J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 223.

interchangeably posed, in her, placed or lying across one another, as three fishes, three swords, three arrows, etc., the head of each appearing between the tails, hilts, or butts of the others.

interchanged (in'tér-chán-já-d'), a.
In her, same as counterchanged, 2.

interchangeable (in'tér-chán-já-bl-i), adv. In an interchangeable manner; reciprocally; alternately.

A contract . . .
Strengthen'd by interchangeable of your rings.
Shak., T. N., v. 1, 162.

interchanger (in'tér-chán-jér), n. One who or that which interchanges; specifically, in artificial ice-making, a tank containing a coil of pipes, or its equivalent, through which the brine cooled by the ice-machine, after extracting all the heat possible from the ice-molds in the ice-making tank, is caused to flow. Water placed in the interchanger in contact with the exterior surface of the coil is cooled preparatory to being placed in the molds for freezing it, thus increasing the economical efficiency of the apparatus.

interchapter (in'tér-chap-tér), n. [< inter-
+ chapter.] An interpolated chapter. Southey.

interchondral (in'tér-kon'drál), a. [< inter- + chondrus + -al.] Situated between any two costal cartilages: as, an interchondral articulation.

intercidence (in'tér-si-dens), n. [< inter- + cedere (to go).] A coming or falling between; an intervening occurrence.

Talking of the instances, the insults, the intercurrences, communities of diseases, and all to shew what books we have read, and that we know the words and terms of physick.
Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 508.

intercident (in'tér-si-dent), a. [< inter- + cedere (to go).] 1. Intercedent, fall between, < inter- between, + cadere, fall: see cadent, case.] 2.
Falling or coming between other things; intervening.

Nature rouses herself up to make a crisis, not only upon improper, and as physicians call them, intercurrent days, such as the third, fifth, ninth, &c., . . . but also when there appear not any signs of coction.
Boyle, Free Enquiry, p. 220.

intercillium (in'tér-sil'i-um), n. [< inter- + cilium.] The space between the eyebrows;
the glabella. See cut under craniometry.

intercipient (in'tér-sip'i-ent), a. and n. [< L.
intercipiens (to intercept), ppr. of intercipere, intercept: see intercept.] 1. a. Intercepting; seizing or stopping on the way.

2. n. One who or that which intercepts or stops on the way. Wiseman.

intercision (in'tér-sizh'on), n. [= OF. inter- cision = it. intercisione, < L. intercisio (to cut), a cutting through, < L. intercidere, pp. intercisus, cut through, cut asunder, < inter, between, + cadere, cut.] A cutting off; interception. [Rare.]

Whenever such intercision of a life happens to a vicious person, let all the world acknowledge it for a judgment.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 257.

Some sudden intercisions of the light of the sun.
J. Spencer, Prodiges, p. 233.

intercitizenship (in'tér-sit'i-zn-ship), n. [< inter- + citizenship.] The principle of citizenship of a person in different political communities at the same time; the right to the privileges of a citizen in all the states of a confederation.

The Articles of Confederation were framed with the grand principle of intercitizenship, which gave to the American confederation a superiority over every one that preceded it.
Bancroft, Hist. Const., II. 121.

interclavicle (in'tér-klav'i-kl), n. [< inter- + clavicle.] In zool. and anat., a median membrane bone developed between the clavicles, or in front of the breast-bone, in many Ver- tebrata. Different names have been given to a bone answering to this definition. In the monotremes, where alone in Mammalia a true interclavicle occurs, it is the large T-shaped bone which prolongs the sternum anteriorly, bearing upon its arms the small splint-like clavicles. In a bird, when developed, it is always incorporated with the clavicles, as the hypocleidum.
(See cut under furcula.)
In a reptile, when developed, it is distinct from the clavicles, and in a turtle it is the en-toplaston or ento-sternum, the median anterior piece of the plastron.
(See second cut under Chelonia.) In a frog it appears to be represented by the omosternum.
(See cut under omosternum.) Certain pre-sternal elements in placental mammals are sometimes called interclavicles.
In some fishes the interclavicle is an intermediate element of the scapular arch, and like the supraclavicle and postclavicle, is variously homologized by different writers.
See postclavicle, and quotation under supraclavicle.

interclavicular (in'tér-klav'ik-ü-lär), n.; pl. in- terclaviculæ (-lë). [< NL, < L. inter, between, +
NL. clavícula, q. v.] Same as interclavicle.

In many Vertebrata, the inner ends of the clavicles are connected with, and supported by, a median membrane bone which is closely connected with the ventral face of the sternum. This is the interclavicle, frequently called episternum.
Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 36.

interclavicular (in'tér-klav'ik-ü-lär), a. [= F. interclaviculaire; < L. inter, between, + NL. clavícula, q. v., + -ar.] 1. Situated between clavicles: as, the interclavicular space; inter- clavicular ligament. Specifically used—(a) In herpet., with reference to the entoplaston of t. tortoise or turtle:
as, the interclavicular suture. See plastron, and cut under carapace (fig. 2). (b) In ornith., with reference to the internal inferior air-sac of the neck of birds.

2. Of or pertaining to an interclavicle.

interclose (in'tér-klöz'), v. t. [Also enterclose
(cf. OF. entreclos, pp.); < inter- + close. Cf.
interclude.] To shut in or within; confine.

I see not why it should be impossible for art to inter- close some very minute and restless particles, which, by their various and incessant motions, may keep a metalline body in a state of fluidity.
Boyle, Works, I. 638.

intercloud (in'tér-kloud'), v. t. [< inter-
+ cloud.] To shut within clouds.

None the least blackness interclouded had So fair a day, nor any eye look'd mad.
Daniel, Civil Wars, v.

interclude (in'tér-klüd'), v. t. [= OF. entre- clorre, entreclore = it. intercludere, intercludere, < L. intercludere, shut off, shut in, < inter, between, + claudere, shut, close: see close. Cf.
interclose.] To shut off from a place or course by something intervening; intercept; cut off.

Laying siege against their cities, intercluding their ways and passages, and cutting off from them all commerce with other places or nations.
Pococke, On Hoses, p. 53.

interclusion (in'tér-klüz'on), n. [= Sp. inter- clusión, < L. interclusio (to shut), < intercludere, pp.

intercludere, shut off: see interclude.] Interception; a cutting or shutting off.

The interclusion of commerce. Bleett, Burke, I. 411.

intercoecygeal (in'tér-kok-sij'ë-äl), a. [< inter- + coecyge (coecyge) + -al.] Situated between portions of the coecyx.—Intercoecygeal striae.
See striae.

intercoecygean (in'tér-kok-sij'ë-an), a. Same as intercoecygeal.

intercollegiate (in'tér-kol-ë-jä-ät), a. [< L. inter- ter, between, + collegium, college: see collegi- ate.] Between colleges: of or pertaining to different colleges in participation: as, an intercol- legiate contest or discussion.

intercolline (in'tér-kol'in), a. [< L. inter, between, + collis, a hill: see colline.] Lying between hills or hillocks: as, an intercolline hamlet. Specifically, in geology, applied by Lyell to the hollows which lie between the conical hillocks made up of accumulations from volcanic eruptions. [Rare.]

intercolonial (in'tér-kol-ë-ni-äl), a. [= F. inter- colonial; < L. inter, between, + colonia, colony, + -al.] Between colonies: of or pertaining to different colonies in intercourse: as, inter- colonial commerce.

Happily for the national interests of British North America, its public men agreed at this critical juncture in their affairs to a political union, which has stimulated intercolonial trade.
Westminster Rev., CXXV. 404.

intercolonially (in'tér-kol-ë-ni-äl-i), adv. As between colonies.

intercolumnar (in'tér-kol-um-när), a. [= F. inter- columnaire = Fr. intercolumnar, < L. inter, between, + columna, column: see column.] Between two columns; specifically, in anat., extending between the pillars or columns of the external abdominal ring.

Recurrent figures fill the spandrels of the arches thrown over the intercolumnar spaces.
C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, p. 190.

intercolumnar fascia. See fascia.—Intercolumnar fibers, transverse fibers on the surface of the spongy of the external oblique muscle, extending across the upper part of the external abdominal ring, between its pillars or columns.

intercolumniation (in'tér-kol-um-ni-ä-shon),
n. [< L. intercolumnium, the space between two columns (< inter, between, + columna, column: see column), + -ation.] 1. In arch., the space between two columns, measured at the lower part of their shafts, usually taken as from center to center. This space, in the practice of the ancients, varied in proportion in almost every building. Vitru-vius enumerates five varieties of intercolumniations, and assigns to them definite proportions expressed in measures of the inferior diameter of the column. These are: the pycnostyle, of one diameter and a half; the synstyle, of two diameters; the diastyle, of three diameters; the aeostyle, of four or sometimes five diameters; and the eustyle, of two and a quarter diameters.

It is found, however, on examining the remains of ancient architecture, that the intercolumniations rarely if ever agree with the Vitruvian dimensions, which must therefore, like nearly all other theories of Vitruvius, be regarded as arbitrary.

2. The system of spacing between columns, particularly with reference to a given building.
The position of the other two [columns] must be determined either by bringing forward the wall enclosing the stairs, so as to admit of the intercolumniation east and west being the same as that of the other columns, or of spacing them so as to divide the inner roof of the pronaos into equal squares.
J. Ferguson, Hist. Arch., I. 208.

intercombat (in'tér-kom'bat), n. [< inter- + combat.] A combat; fight.

The combat granted, and the day assign'd,
They both in order of the field appear,
Most richly furnish'd in all martial kind,
And at the point of intercombat were.
Daniel, Civil Wars, I.

intercome (in'tér-kum'), v. t. [< inter-
+ come.] To intervene; interpose; interfere.

Notwithstanding the pope's intercoming to make himself a party in the quarrel, the bishops did adhere to their own sovereign. Proc. against Garnet (1606), 2r. 3. (Rak.)

intercommon (in'tér-kom'on), v. [< ME. en- tercommonen, entercommonen, < OF. entrecommer, entrecommer, intercommon; as inter- + com- mon, v. Cf. intercommune.] 1. Intercommune. 1. To participate or share in common; act by inter- change; also, to keep commons or eat together.
[Rare.]

Ventral View of Shoulder-girdle of a Young Duckbill (Ornithorhynchus paradoxus).
ic, interclavicle, or taubone; cl, clavicle; cr, coracoid; cr, coracoid; o, omosternum; r, two pairs of lateral ribs; rl, glenoid fossa of shoulder joint.

Intercolumniation.

A, areostyle; B, coupled columns; C, diastyle; D, eustyle.

That thow cannot nat, percase anoder can,
To onygroon as a brodyr dothe with a noder.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 22.

To this add that precept of Aristotle, that wine be for-borne in all consumptions: for that the spirits of the wine do prey upon the rascid joyce of the body, and intercom- mon with the spirits of the body, and so deceiver and rob them of their nourishment. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 55.

2. In Eng. law, to graze cattle reciprocally on each other's common; use two commons interchangeably or in common.

Common because of vicinage, or neighbourhood, in where the inhabitants of two townships which lie contiguous to each other have usually intercommoned with one another. Blackstone, Com., II. iii.

II. trans. To denounce for criminal communication or fellowship. See intercommoning.

But it appeared that there had been no such designs, by this, that none came into it but those desperate inter- commoned men who were as they were hunted from their houses into all those extravagances that men may fall in.
Sp. Burnet, Hist. Own Times, an. 1679.

intercommonage (in-tér-kom'gn-áj), n. [< inter- common + -age.] Mutual commonage; in Eng. law, a privilege enjoyed by the inhabitants of two or more contiguous manors or townships of pasturing their cattle in common.

intercommoner† (in-tér-kom'gn-ér), n. One who intercommons or intercommones; specifically, a joint communicant.

They are intercommoners by suifrance with God, children, and servants. Gaaker.

intercommoning† (in-tér-kom'gn-ing), n. [Verbal n. of intercommon, v.] Denunciation or outlawing for criminal communication or fellowship.

And upon that great numbers were outlawed; and a writ was issued out, that was indeed legal, but very seldom used, called intercommoning; because it made all that harboured such persons, or did not seize them, when they had it in their power, to be involved in the same guilt. Sp. Burnet, Hist. Own Times, an. 1676.

intercommune (in-tér-kq-mün'), v. i.; pret.
and pp. intercommuned, ppr. intercommuning.
[In older form intercommon, v.; < OF. entre- communier, < ML. intercommunicare, communicate, < L. inter, between, + communicare, communicate, commune: see commune.] 1. To commune together or jointly; unite in communion or intercourse: as, to intercommune with rebels. [Scotch.]—Letters of intercommuning, in Scotch Hist., letters from the Privy Council prohibiting all persons from holding any kind of intercourse or communication with those therein denounced, under pain of being regarded as art and part in their crimes. E. D.

In the year 1676 letters of intercommuning were published. Hallam.

intercommunicability (in-tér-kq-mü'ni-käbil'i-ti), n. [< intercommunicable: see bil-ity.]
The quality of being intercommunicable; capability of being mutually communicated.

The intercommunicability of scarlet fever and diphtheria. Quoted in Mullan's Morbid Germs, p. 23.

intercommunicable (in-tér-kq-mü'ni-kä-bl), a.
[< intercommunicate + -able. Cf. communi- cable.] Capable of being mutually communicated. Coleridge.

intercommunicate (in-tér-kq-mü'ni-kät), v.; pret. and pp. intercommunicated, ppr. intercommuni- cating. [< ML. intercommunicatus, pp. of intercommunicare, communicate: see intercom- mune and communicate.] I. intrans. To have or hold reciprocal communication.

II. trans. To communicate reciprocally; transmit to and from each other.

The rays coming from the vast body of the sun, and carried to mighty altitudes, receive one from another and intercommunicate the lights, as they be sent to and fro.
Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 364.

intercommunication (in-tér-kq-mü'ni-kä-shon), n. [= F. intercommunication, < ML.
intercommunicatio (n.), < intercommunicare, communicate: see intercommunicate.] Reciprocal communication or intercourse.

The free intercommunication between the basal spaces into which the auricles open and from which the arteries proceed. Owen, Anat.

It is hard to say what . . . may be due to the more highly organized state of society, the greater activity of its forces, the readier intercommunication of its parts.
Gladstone, Gleanings, I. 133.

Common felons are allowed almost unrestricted inter- communication and association in the forwarding prisons, and are deported as speedily as practicable to Siberia.
G. Kennan, The Century, XXXV. 761.

intercommunion (in-tér-kq-mü'nyon), n. [< inter- + communion.] Communion one with another; intimate intercourse.

That seemingly insensible spirit so necessary in them to prevent . . . an entire intercommunion with the idolatrous religions round them. Low, Theory of Religion, II.

intercommunity (in-tér-kq-mü'ni-ti), n. [< inter- + community.] 1. Reciprocal communication or possession; community.

It admits of no tolerance, no intercommunity of various sentiments, not the least difference of opinion.

Sp. Louth, To Warburton, p. 13.
2. The state of living or existing together in harmonious intercourse.

When, in consequence of that intercommunity of Paganism, . . . one nation adopted the gods of another, they did not always take in at the same time the secret worship or mysteries of that god.

Warburton, Divine Legation, II. 4. intercomplexity (in-tér-kq-m-plok'gí-ti), n. [< inter- + complexity.] A mutual involvement or entanglement.

Intercomplexities had arisen between all complications and interweavings of descent from three original strands.

De Quincey, Spanish Nun, § 20.

intercondylar (in-tér-kon'di-lär), a. [< inter- + condyle + -ar.] Same as intercondyloid.

intercondyloid (in-tér-kon'di-löid), a. [< inter- + condyle + -oid.] In anat., situated between two condyles: as, the intercondyloid fossa of the femur, a depressed space between the inner and the outer condyle of that bone.

interconnect (in-tér-kq-nekt'), v. t. [< inter- + connect.] To connect or conjoin mutually and intimately.

So closely interconnected, and so mutually dependent.
H. A. Nicholson.

interconnection (in-tér-kq-nek'shon), n. [< inter- + connection.] The state or condition of being interconnected; intimate or mutual connection.

There are cases where two stars dissemble an intercon- nection which they really have, and other cases where they simulate an interconnection which they have not.

De Quincey, System of the Heavens.

intercontinental (in-tér-kon-ti-nen'täl), a. [= F.
intercontinental, etc.; < inter- + continental.] Subsisting between different continents: as, intercontinental trade.

intercontradictory (in-tér-kon-tra-dik'tö-ri),
a. [< inter- + contradictory.] Contradictory one of the other, as statements or depositions.

interconversion (in-tér-kon-ver'shon), n.
[< inter- + conversion.] Reciprocal conversion; interchange of form or constitution.

Till it shall be shown . . . how their interconversion (that of forms of molecular movement) is effected.
Sir J. Herschel, Pop. Lects., p. 473.

interconvertible (in-tér-kon-ver'ti-bl), a. [< inter- + convertible.] Convertible each into the other; capable of being exchanged equivalently, the one for the other: as, interconvertible terms.

intercoracoid (in-tér-kor'a-köid), a. [< inter- + coracoid.] Situated between the coracoids:
as, the intercoracoid part of the sternum.

intercorallite (in-tér-kor'a-lit), a. [< inter- + corallite.] Situated between corallites; noting space or substance so placed: as, intercorallite walls; intercorallite tissue.

intercosmic, intercosmical (in-tér-köz'mik,
-mi-käl), a. [< inter- + cosmos, the universe:
see cosmical.] Between the constituent parts of the universe.

The doctrine of attenuated matter scattered through the intercosmic spaces of organized systems is distinct.
Winchell, World-Life, p. 49.

intercostal (in-tér-kos'täl), a. and n. [= F. inter- costal = Sp. Pg. intercostal = It. intercostale, < NL. intercostalis, < L. inter, between, + costa, rib: see costal.] I. a. Situated or intervening between successive ribs of the same side of the body: as, intercostal muscles, vessels, spaces.—Intercostal artery, an artery, generally a branch of the thoracic aorta, situated in an intercostal space. There are generally as many such arteries as there are such spaces, and the artery usually hugs the under border of a rib. In man there are 11 pairs, the one or two uppermost of which are branches of the subclavian artery, the remaining pairs being derived directly from the aorta.
They run to some extent in a groove inside the lower border of the rib, and between the external and the internal layer of intercostal muscles.—Intercostal fascia. See fascia.—Intercostal gland, a lymphatic gland situated in an intercostal space. In man there are several intercostal glands, of small size, near the heads of the ribs, and between the layers of intercostal muscles. They empty for the most part into the thoracic duct.

We have seen these intercostal glands enlarged and diseased in phthisis. Holden, Anat. (1885), p. 213.

Intercostal keelson, muscle, etc. See the nouns.—Inter- costal nerve, an anterior branch of any spinal nerve which runs in an intercostal space to a greater or less extent. In man there are 12 pairs of such nerves. They are sometimes divided into upper and lower, or pectoral and abdominal, sets of 6 pairs each.—Intercostal neu- ralgia, neuralgia of an intercostal nerve.—Intercostal vein, a vein running with and corresponding to an intercostal artery, and usually emptying into an axillary vein.

—Intercostal vessel, an intercostal artery, vein, or lymphatic duct.

II. n. An intercostal structure, as an artery, and especially a muscle; an intercostalis.
The intercostals are two layers of muscular fibers occupying the intercostal spaces, running obliquely, and for the most part between any two successive ribs. They are respiratory in function.—External intercostals, the outer layer of intercostal muscles, running obliquely downward and forward from one rib to another. In man there are 11 on each side of the chest.—Internal inter- costals, the inner layer of intercostal muscles, the direction of whose fibers crosses that of the external layer.
Some of them usually run over more than one intercostal space; such are called subcostals or infra-costals.

intercostalis (in-tér-kos-tä'lis), n.; pl. inter- costales (-lész). [NL.: see intercostal.] In anat., an intercostal; one of the intercostal muscles.

intercostohumeral (in-tér-kos-tö-hü'mq-räl),
a. and n. [< intercostal + humeral.] I. a.
Proceeding from an intercostal space to the upper arm; specifically applied to certain nerves.

II. n. An intercostohumeral nerve.

The posterior lateral branch of the second intercostal nerve . . . is larger than the others, and is called the inter- costohumeral, because it supplies the integuments of the arm. . . . The corresponding branch of the third in-tercostal is also an intercostohumeral nerve.

Holden, Anat. (1885), p. 332.

intercostohumeralis (in-tér-kos-tö-hü-mq-rälis), n.; pl. intercostohumerales (-lész). [NL.: see intercostohumeral.] An intercostohumeral nerve.

intercourse (in-tér-körs), n. [Formerly also entrecourse; < ME. entrecourse, entrecourse (also entrecours, after L.), < OF. entrecours, entrecours, entrecours, entrecours, < L. intercursus, a running between, intervention, interposition (ML. also intercommunication), < intercurrere, pp.
intercursum, run between, intervene: see inter- cur, intercurrent.] 1. Communication between persons or places; frequent or habitual meeting or contact of one person with another, or of a number of persons with others, in conversation, trade, travel, etc.; physical interchange; reciprocal dealing: as, the intercourse between town and country.

At the last shall ye come to people, cities, and towns, wherein is continual intercourse and occupying of merchandise and chaffare.

Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), I.
Even then when in Assyria it selfe it was corrupted by entrecourse of strangers. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 47.

By which [bridge] the spirits perverse
With easy intercourse pass to and fro.
Milton, P. L., II. 1081.

2. Mental or spiritual interchange; reciprocal exchange of ideas or feelings; intercommunion.

Food of the mind [talk] or this sweet intercourse
Of looks and smiles. Milton, P. L., ix. 233.

Thou wast made for social intercourse and gentle greetings. Sterne, Sentimental Journey, p. 84.

The neighboring Indians in a short time became accustomed to the uncouth sound of the Dutch language, and an intercourse gradually took place between them and the new comers. Irvine, Knickerbocker, p. 101.

His intercourse with heaven and earth becomes part of his daily food. Emerson, Nature.

Sexual intercourse, coition.

intercoxal (in-tér-kok'säl), a. [< inter- + coxa
+ -al.] In entom., situated between the coxae or bases of the legs.—Intercostal process, a projection of the hard integument between the coxae: specifically applied to a process of the first ventral segment of the abdomen extending between the posterior coxal cavities. It is found especially in many Coleoptera.

intercross (in-tér-kros'), v. [< inter- + cross.]
I. trans. To cross reciprocally; specifically, in biol., to fertilize by impregnation of one species or variety by means of another; inter-breed.

These plants [those capable of self-fertilization] are frequently intercrossed, owing to the propensity of pollen from another individual or variety over the plant's own pollen. Darwin, Cross and Self Fertilization, p. 2.

Natural species . . . are nearly always more or less sterile when intercrossed.

A. R. Wallace, Fortnightly Rev., N. 8, XL. 801.

II. intrans. In biol., to become impregnated by a different variety or species, or, in the case of hermaphrodites, by a different individual.

Cultivated plants like those in a state of nature frequently intercross, and will thus mingle their constitutional peculiarities.

Darwin, Cross and Self Fertilization, p. 255.

intercross (in-tér-kros'), n. [< intercross, v.] An instance of cross-fertilization. Darwin.

intercrural (in-tér-krü'äl), a. [< inter- + crura
+ -al.] In zool.: (a) Of or pertaining to the space between the crura or rami of the under jaw; in-terramal; submental. (b) Situated between the crura cerebri, as the interpeduncular space or area at the base of the brain.

bercultural (in-tér-kul'túr-ál), a. [< inter- + culture + -al.] Intermediate in the process of altivation.

By "intercultural tillage," Dr. Sturtevant means tilling, tiring the soil, while the plant is growing. The value of bercultural tillage has long been understood.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XIII, 376.

The intercultural tillage should be applied whenever the poor soil has regained . . . its connection with the lower strata.
Nature, XXXVII, 534.

bercurt (in-tér-kér'), v. i. [Early mod. E. encorre, < OF. entrecorre, entrecorre, < L. inter-rere, run between, run along with, mingle with, intercede, < inter, between, + curre, run: see current. Cf. concur, decur, incur, etc.] To in or come between; intervene.

I [Wolsey] as your lieutenant being awakes propies and dy to entrecorre, as a loving mynister for the establishing of good amitye betwene your highnes and hym.
State Papers, Wolsey to Hen. VIII, 1537.

So that there entrecor no sin in the acting thereof.
Shallum, tr. of Don Quixote, II, iv, 9.

bercurl (in-tér-kér'l'), v. t. [< inter- + curl.] a. To curl or twine between; entwine.

Queen Helen, whose Jacinth-hair curled by nature, but bercurled by art (like a fine brook through golden sands), id a rope of fair pearl.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, I.

bercurrence (in-tér-kur'gna), n. [< intercur- + -ence.] 1. A running or coming between; intervention. [Rare.]

We may . . . consider what fluidity salt-petre is capable of, without the intercurrence of a liquor.
Boyle, Hist. Fluidity, xvi.

bercurrence (in-tér-kur'gna), n. [< intercur- + -ence.] 1. A running or coming between; intervention. [Rare.]

To be sagacious in such intercurrences is not superfluous, but wary and pious discretion.
Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., I, 29.

bercurrent (in-tér-kur'gnt), a. and n. [= F. tercurrent = Sp. intercurrente = Pg. intercorrente, < L. intercurrent (-is), ppr. of intercurrere, in between, intervene: see intercur.] I. a. Running between or among; occurring between; intervening. [Rare.]

Transacts with the Dane, with the French, the rupture (th both; together with all the intercurrent exploits at (thy, the Mediterranean, West Indies, and other signal riculars.
Boyle, To my Lord Treasurer.

The ebbing and flowing of the sea Des Cartes scribeth the greater pressure made upon the air by the moon, d the intercurrent ethereal substance, at certain times f the day, and of the lunar month) than at others.
Boyle, Works, I, 41.

Specifically, in pathol., occurring in a patient already suffering from some disease: said 'a second disease.
He died of intercurrent disease.
Athen. and Neurol., VI, 404.

II. n. Something that intervenes; an intervention; an incident.

[Fortune] having diversified and distinguished even om the beginning our enterprise, like a play or ente- de, with many dangerous intercurrents, was assistant d ran with us, at the very point and upshot of the ex- olation thereof.
Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 908.

bercurset, n. An obsolete form of intercourse.
bercut (in-tér-kut'), v. t. [< inter- + cut.] To terrace.

The country whence he sprung . . . is so inlaid and everywhere so intercut and indented with the sea or sah navigable rivers that one cannot tell what to call it, ther water or land.
Howell, Parly of Beasts, p. 5.

bercystic (in-tér-sis'tik'), a. [< inter- + cyst- + -ic.] Lying or occurring between cysts: as, is intercystic tissue of a cystic tumor.
berdash (in-tér-dash'), v. t. [< inter- + dash.] To intersperse. [Rare.]

A prologue interdash'd with many a stroke.
Cooper, Table-Talk, I, 538.

berdeal (in-tér-dél'), n. [Also enterdeal; < ter- + deal.] 1. Intercourse; conduct.

To learn the enterdeals of Princes strange,
To mark th' intent of counsells, and the change
Of states.
Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, I, 785.

Commerce; traffic.

The trading and interdeals with other nations rounde out have chaunged and greatly altered the dialect ther.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

berdental (in-tér-den'tál'), a. [< L. inter- + den- + -tal] = F. tooth: see dental.] Occurring or produced between the teeth.

The interdental sound of s.
Braye, Brit., XXII, 350.

berdental space, the space or interval between the is of a geared wheel.

berdental, interdental (in-tér-den'til, -tel), [< inter- + dental, dental.] In arch., the space between two dentils.

interdependence, interdependency (in'tér-pen'dgns, -dgn-si), n. [= F. interdépen- dance; as inter- + dependence, dependency.] Mutual dependence.

There is an intimate interdependence of intellect and morals.
Emerson, Conduct of Life.

The wonderful interdependences shown by Darwin to exist between insects and plants in the fertilization of the latter.
E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 145.

interdependent (in'tér-dē-pen'dent), a. [< inter- + dependent.] Mutually dependent.

And this because phenomena are independent not less than interdependent.
G. H. Lewes, Proba. of Life and Mind, I, 88.

Ignorance, intemperance, immorality, and disease—these things are all interdependent and closely connected.
Westminster Rev., CXXV, 16.

Painting, for example, is an interdependent process, and both in its execution and results its interdependence lies in purely physical combinations of visible and touchable materials.
Argyll, Nineteenth Century, XXIII, 152.

interdestructiveness (in-tér-dē-struk'tiv-nēs), n. [< inter- + destructiveness.] Mutual destructiveness.
Godwin, Mandeville, II, 103.

interdict (in-tér-dikt'), v. t. [In ME. entrediten, < OF. entredit (pp. of entredire); < L. interdicitus, pp. of interdicere (> It. interdicer, interdicere = Sp. entredicer, interdecir = Pg. entredizer, interdicir = OF. entredirc, F. interdirc), interpose by speaking, contradict, forbid, < inter, between, + dicere, speak, say: see diction.] 1. To declare authoritatively against, as the use or doing of something; debar by forbidding; prohibit peremptorily.

Let the brave chiefs their glorious toils divide,
And whose the conquest, mighty Jove decidu;
While we from interdicted fields retire,
Nor tempt the wrath of heav'n's avenging ire.
Pope, Iliad, v, 43.

Nature, however, . . . is an excellent friend in such cases; sealing the lips, interdicting utterance, commanding a placid dissimulation. Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, vii.

2. To prohibit from some action or proceeding; restrain by prohibitory injunction; estop; preclude.

To prevent their seeking relief from the slow agonies of this torture, they would be interdicted the use of knives and forks, and every other instrument of self-destruction.
Kierulff, Orations, I, 500.

They [the Plantagenets] were interdicted from taxing; but they claimed the right of begging and borrowing.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., I.

Specifically—3. Eccles., to cut off from communion with a church; debar from ecclesiastical functions or privileges.

The reame was therefore nygh thre yere enderdicted, and stode a-cursed that neuer manns body ne womanis was byried in noon halowed place.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), III, 406.

Becket had gotten him more friends at Rome, and by their means prevailed with the Pope to give him power to interdict some Bishops in England that had done him wrong.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 57.

= Syn. Prohibit, etc. See forbid.
interdict (in'tér-dikt'), n. [In ME. entredit, < OF. entredit, F. interdicit = Fr. entredich = Sp. entredicho, interdicto = Pg. interdito = It. interdito; < L. interdicium, a prohibition, neut. of interdicere, pp. of interdicere, forbid, prohibit: see interdict, v.] 1. An official or authoritative prohibition; a prohibitory order or decree.

No interdict
Defends the touching of these vlands pure.
Milton, P. R., II, 369.

2. In Rom. law, an adjudication, by a solemn ordinance issued by the pretor, in his capacity of governing magistrate, for the purpose of quieting a controversy, usually as to peaceable possession, between private parties. More specifically—(a) in earlier times, a prohibition or injunction incidental or introductory to an action, forbidding interference with possession until the right should have been determined; (b) in later times, the extension of this remedy so as to include not merely such injunctive relief, but also production or discovery (called exhibitory interdict or interdict for production), and the delivery of possession, the reinstatement of a previous situation, or other undoing of a wrong (called interdict of restitution). Throughout the various extensions of the term the characteristic idea seems to have been the act of the pretor in assuming in some sense the functions of a plaintiff or a prosecutor on grounds of public policy, somewhat as in modern practice the court makes orders or decrees upon some subjects, which, though made in a private controversy, it will enforce in the name of the people by proceedings for contempt.

3. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., an ecclesiastical sentence which forbids the right of Christian burial, the use of the sacraments, and the enjoyment of public worship, or the exercise of ecclesiastical functions. Interdicts may be general, as applied to a country or city, or particular, as applied to a church or other locality; they may be local, as applied to places, personal, as applied to a person or some class of persons, or mixed, as directed against both places and persons. General and local interdicts have rarely been pronounced since the middle ages.

The pope sent his nuncio to no purpose, and then put the city under an interdict.
J. Adams, Works, V, 32.

4. In Scots law, an injunction. See suspension.
interdiction (in-tér-dik'shon), n. [= F. interdiction = Sp. interdiccion = Pg. interdiccio = It. interdizione, < L. interdictio (-n), a prohibiting, < interdicer, pp. interdicere, prohibit, forbid: see interdict, v.] 1. The act of interdicting; authoritative prohibition; declaratory estoppel.

The truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands secure'd.
Shak., Macbeth, iv, 3, 106.

Sternly he pronounced
The rigid interdiction, which rebounds
Yet dreadful in mine ear. Milton, P. L., viii, 334.

By this means the Kingdom was released of the interdiction.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 73.

2. In law, judicial restraint imposed upon one who, from unsoundness of mind, weakness, or improvidence, is incapable of managing his own affairs, or is liable to imposition. An inquisition of lunacy relates to the present or past. The interdiction expressed or implied by the confirmation of the inquisition and the appointment of a guardian relates to the future, and from the time of interdiction no act of the person is valid without the intervention of the court.

3. In Rom. law, an edict or decree of the pretor to meet the circumstances of a particular case, but granted usually from considerations of a public character. See interdict, n., 2.—4. Same as interdict, n., 4.—Interdiction of fire and water, banishment by an order that no man should supply the person banished with fire or water, the two necessities of life. Rapallo and Laurenco.

interdictive (in-tér-dik'tiv), a. [< interdict + -ive.] Of the nature of an interdict; constituting an interdict; prohibitory.

A timely separation from the flock by that interdictive sentence; lest his conversation unprohibited, or unbranded, might breathe a pestilential murrain into the other sheep.
Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonat.

interdictory (in-tér-dik'tō-ri), a. [< L. interdictorius, prohibitory, < L. interdicer, pp. interdicere, prohibit: see interdict, v.] Serving to interdict or prohibit.

interdifferentiation (in-tér-dif-gren-shi-ā'shon), n. [< inter- + differentiation.] Differentiation between or among.

interdiffuse (in'tér-di-fūz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interdiffused, ppr. interdiffusing. [< inter- + diffuse.] To diffuse or spread among or between. North British Rev. [Rare.]

interdiffusion (in'tér-di-fū'zhon), n. [< inter- + diffusion.] The act of interdiffusing; mutual diffusion.

In the case of molten metals the interdiffusion may be extremely rapid.
Sci. Amer. Supp., p. 8738.

interdigital (in-tér-dij-i-tál'), a. [= F. interdigital; < L. inter, between, + digitus, finger: see digital.] Situated between digits; connecting fingers or toes one with another. The webbing of a duck's foot is interdigital; so is most of the membrane of a bat's wing.

interdigitate (in-tér-dij-i-tāt'), v.; pret. and pp. interdigitated, ppr. interdigitating. [< L. inter, between, + digitus, finger: see digitate.] I. trans. To insert between the fingers; interweave like the joined fingers of the two hands. [Rare.]

II. intrans. 1. To be interwoven; commingle like interlocked fingers.

The groups of characters that are essential to the true definition of a plant and animal interdigitate, so to speak, in that low department of the organic world from which the two great branches rise and diverge.
Owen.

2. In anat., specifically, to interpose finger-like processes or digitations between similar processes of another part, as one muscle may do to another; inosculate by means of reciprocal serrations: followed by with. Thus, the human serratus magnus muscle interdigitates by several of its serrations with similar processes of the external oblique muscle of the abdomen.

In certain species of Mustelus . . . a rudimentary placenta is formed, the vascular walls of the umbilical sac becoming plaited, and interdigitating with similar folds of the wall of the uterus.
Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 120.

interdigitation (in-tér-dij-i-tā'shon), n. [< interdigitate + -ation.] 1. The act of inserting between the fingers, or of inserting the fingers of one hand between those of the other; hence, the state of being inextricably interwoven or run into each other, as is the case with the characters of the lowest classes of plants and animals; intermixture.—2. In anat., specifically—(a) Reciprocal digitation; the state or quality of being interdigitated or reciprocally interposed by means of digitate processes. Interdigitation presents an appearance as of two saws with the teeth of one set in the spaces between the teeth of the other. (b) The set of spaces between digits or finger-like processes.

interduce (in'tér-dūs), n. [L. inter, between, + ducere, lead: see duct.] In carp., same as intertio.

interepimeral (in-tér-ep-i-mé'ral), a. [L. inter + epimera + -al.] Situated between epimera: as, the interepimeral membrane. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 289.

interepithelial (in-tér-ep-i-thé'li-al), a. [L. inter + epithelial.] Situated between or among epithelial cells. Also intra-epithelial.

interequinoctial (in-tér-é-kwi-nók'shal), a. [L. inter + equinoctial.] Coming between the equinoxes.

Spring and autumn I have denominated equinoctial periods. Summer and winter I have called interequinoctial intervals. Astoric Researches.

interest (in'tér-es), v. t. [Also interesse; < OF. interesser, F. intéresser (formerly chiefly in pp. intéressé), interest, concern, OF. also damage, = Pr. interessar = Sp. interesar = Pg. interessar = It. interessare, concern, interest, < L. interesse, be between, be distant, be different, be present at, be of importance, import, concern (impers. interest, it concerns), < inter, between, + esse, be: see be. Cf. interest.] To interest; concern; affect; especially, to concern or affect deeply.

To whose young love
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy
Strive to be interested. Shak., Learn, i. 1, 187.

To love our native country, and to study its benefit and its glory, to be interested in its concerns, is natural to all men, and is indeed our common duty. Dryden, Epic Poetry.

interest (in'tér-es), n. [Also interesse; < ME. interesse (= G. Dan. interesse = Sw. intresse), < OF. interesse = Pr. interesse = Sp. interés = Pg. interesse, < ML. interesse, n., concern, interest, premium on money lent, right, etc., < L. interesse, v., concern: see interest, v.] Interest; concern; deep concern.

That false forswearing have there noon interesse.
Lydgate, Minor Poems, p. 210.

But wote thou this, thou hardy Titaness,
That not the worth of any living wight
May challenge ought in Heavens interesse.
Spenser, F. Q., VII. vi. 33.

interesse termini (in-tér-es' té' mī-nī), [ML. interesse, interest (see interesse, n.); termini, gen. of terminus, end, ending: see term, n.] The right of entry upon land vested in a lessee. It is not an estate, but an interest for the term; and the right may be exercised by the executors or administrators of the owner if he dies without having entered.

interest (in'tér-es), n. [Late ME. interest (= D. interest), < OF. interest, interest, concern, also damage, prejudice, F. intéret, interest, profit, advantage, < L. interest, it concerns, it is to the advantage, 3d pers. sing. pres. ind. impers. of interesse, concern: see interest, v. Practically interest is a later var. of interest, n.] 1. That which concerns or is of importance; that which is advantageous, or connected with advantage or welfare; concern; concernment; behoof; advantage: as, the common interests of life; to act for the public interest.

We destroy the Common-wealth, while we preserve our own private Interests, and neglect the Publick.
Selden, Table-Talk, p. 58.

'Tis for the fowler's interest to beware
The bird intended should not 'scape the snare.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love, l. 444.

Inglorious slave to int'rest, ever join'd
With fraud, unworthy of a royal mind!
Pope, Iliad, l. 195.

By the term interests I mean not only material well-being, but also all those mental luxuries, all those grooves or channels for thought, which it is easy and pleasing to follow, and painful and difficult to abandon.

Lacky, Europ. Morals, II. 203.

The provinces were ruled, or rather plundered, in the interest of the privileged class, above all in the interest of the leading members of the privileged class.

E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 832.

2. The feeling that something (the object of the feeling) concerns one; a feeling of the importance of something with reference to one's self; a feeling of personal concernment in an object, such as to fix the attention upon it; appreciative or sympathetic regard: as, to feel an interest in a person; to excite one's interest in a project; a subject of absorbing interest.

From all a closer interest flourish'd up,
Tenderness touch by touch.
Tennyson, Princess, vii.

Something further is necessary to that lively interaction of mind and object which we call a state of attention; and this is interest. J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 92.

A little more than a year ago the whole world was following with intense interest the fortunes of the English flying column dispatched by Lord Walseley from Korti to cross the desert of Matammeh.

Westminster Rev., CXXV. 557.

3. Personal or selfish consideration; regard to private benefit or profit: as, his actions are controlled by interest; the clashing of rival interests.

"Interest and passion" may "come in, and be too strong for reflection and conscience," but still reflection and conscience are always present with us to bear witness against them.

Powder, Shaftesbury and Hutcheson, p. 145.

A man never pleads better than where his own personal interest is concerned. Addison, Trial of the Wine-brewers.

Interest . . . ought in reason to be treated as an objection to the credit of a witness, and not to his competence. Nineteenth Century, XX. 455.

4. Influence from personal importance or capability; power of influencing the action of others: as, he has interest at court; to solicit a person's interest in behalf of an application.

Come, come, Lydia, hope for the best—Sir Anthony shall use his interest with Mrs. Malaprop.

Sheridan, The Rivals, l. 2.

Ingeniously made interest with the Pope
To set such tedious regular forms aside.

Bransby, Ring and Book, l. 191.

5. Personal possession or right of control; share or participation in ownership: as, to have great interests in a county; an interest in a stock company; also, anything that is of importance from a commercial or financial point of view; a business; property in general: as, the mining interests.

Anjou, a Dutchy, Maine, a County great,
Of which the English long had been possess;
And Manau, a city of no small repute,
To which the duke pretended interest.

Drayton, Miseries of Queen Margaret.

All your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you: all is lost.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1, 84.

The Priests and Levites they bid consider what would become of them all if the Law of Moses was abrogated, by which their interest was upheld.

Stillington, Sermons, I. iii.

The contest was for an interest then riding at single anchor.

De Quincey, Essays, ii.

6. In law, in the most general sense, legal concern of a person in a thing or in the conduct of another person, whether it consist in a right of enjoyment in or benefit from property, or a right of advantage, or a subjection to liability in the event of conduct; more specifically, a right in property, or to some of those uses or benefits from which the property is inseparable. In a narrower sense it was used in the English common law of real property, to designate a right less than an estate, such as a lease or an easement, etc.

7. Payment, or a sum paid, for the use of money, or for forbearance of a debt. The interest bears a fixed rate (agreed upon by the parties) to the sum loaned, and is to be paid at certain stated times, as once or twice a year. The money lent or due is called the principal, the sum paid for the use of it the interest, the fixed ratio, which is so many units in one hundred, the rate per cent., or simply the per cent. The rate per cent. is usually so much a year, or per annum. Sometimes the rate is mentioned as so much per month; $100 at 1 per cent. per month is equal to $100 at 12 per cent. per annum. Legal interest is the rate established by law, and it is always understood that legal interest is intended when no specific rate is mentioned. Interest greater than the legal rate is usury, and is prohibited by law. In certain jurisdictions, however, it is allowable to give and receive higher than legal rates by special contract between the parties. Interest may be either simple or compound. Simple interest is the interest arising from the principal sum only, and, though not paid, is not itself chargeable with interest. Compound interest is the interest paid not only on the original or principal sum, but also on the interest as it falls due and, remaining unpaid, is added to the principal.

Who pawn their souls and put them out at interest for a very small present advantage, although they are sure in a very little time to lose both their interest and the Principal too. Stillington, Sermons, I. xii.

Hence—8. Something added or thrown in by way of premium or enhancement; an added quantity over and above what is due, deserved, or expected.

With all speed,
You shall have your desires, with interest.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iv. 3, 49.

Beneficial interest, a right or interest to be enjoyed for one's own benefit, as distinguished from the right of a trustee for the benefit of another.—Chattel interest. See chattel.—Equitable interest, such an interest as is recognized and protected by courts of equity, although it might not be at common law.—Insurable interest. See insurance.—Interest or no interest, a provision in a policy of insurance signifying that the contract will be executed even though the insured have no insurable interest in the subject-matter.—Landed interest. See landed.—Maritime interest. See maritime.—Party in interest, a person who, though he may not be named in a contract as a contracting party, or in a suit as a party on the record, has a legal interest in the subject.—To make interest for a person, to secure influence on his behalf.

I made interest with Mr. Bogg the beetle to have him as a Minder. Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, l. 12.

Vested in interest, conferred in title or ownership, although it may be as yet expectant, and not with a present right of possession. See vested.—Vested interest, an interest completely assured, and constituting such a right as a change in the law generally ought not to take away except for public use and upon compensation.

interest (in'tér-es), v. t. [A var. of earlier interesse, t., prob. through confusion of interested = interest, pret. and pp. of the verb, with interest, n.: see interest.] 1. To concern; affect; be of advantage or importance to.

After his return for England, he endeavored by his best abilities to interest his Country and state in those faire Regions. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 266.

(Or rather, gracious sir,
Create me to this glory, since my cause
Doth interest this fair quarrel. Ford.

2. To engage the attention of; excite concern in; stimulate to feeling or action in regard to something.

The multitude is more easily interested for the most unmeaning badge, or the most insignificant name, than for the most important principle. Macaulay, Milton.

To interest the reader in a contest against heresy in the East, and then transport him to a battle against Christianity in the West. J. M. Neale, Eastern Church, l. 8.

We are interested in a thing when we are affected by it either pleasantly or painfully.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 88.

3. To cause to take a personal concern or share; induce to participate: as, to interest a person in an enterprise.—4. To place or station.

Interested him among the gods. Chapman.

interested (in'tér-es-ted), p. a. 1. Concerned in a cause or in consequences; hence, biased by personal considerations; concerned chiefly for one's private advantage; also, springing from or influenced by self-interest or selfishness: as, an interested witness.

His familiars were his entire friends, and could have no interested views in courting his acquaintance.

Steele, Spectator, No. 497.

All successes did not discourage that ambitious and interested people.

Arbutnot, Anc. Coins.

We have no interested motive for this undertaking, being a society of gentlemen of distinction.

Goldsmith, Magazine in Miniature.

2. Having an interest or share; having money involved: as, one interested in the funds.

interestedly (in'tér-es-ted-li), adv. In an interested manner; with interest.

interestedness (in'tér-es-ted-nes), n. The state of being interested, or of having an interest in a question or an event; hence, regard for one's own private views or profit.

I might give them what degree of credit I pleased, and take them with abatement for Mr. Solmes's interestedness, if I thought fit. Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, II. 243.

interesting (in'tér-es-ting), p. a. Exciting or adapted to excite interest; engaging the attention or curiosity: as, an interesting story.

Our pleasures and pains make up the interesting side of our experience. J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 450.

interestingly (in'tér-es-ting-li), adv. In an interesting manner.

interestingness (in'tér-es-ting-nes), n. The quality of being interesting.

No special beauty or interestingness of the locality can directly cause the delight.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 54.

interface (in'tér-fās), n. [L. inter + facies.] A plane surface regarded as the common boundary of two bodies.

The interface of the two liquids in the arial line.

Boyc, Brid., XV. 204.

interfacial (in-tér-fā'shal), a. [L. inter, between, + facies, face: see facial, and cf. interfacies.] 1. In geom., included between two faces: thus, an interfacial angle is formed by the meeting of two planes.—2. Pertaining to an interface.

interfascicular (in'tér-fa-sik'ū-lār), a. [L. inter + fascicle + -ar.] 1. In anat., situated or occurring between fascicles: as, interfascicular veins; interfascicular spaces.—2. In bot., lying between the fascicles or fibrovascular bundles. Interfascicular cambium is that part of the cambium zone which lies between the fibrovascular bundles in the stems of gymnosperms and dicotyledons. Bastin.

interfection (in-tér-fek'shon), n. [L. interfectio (n.), a killing, < interficere, pp. interfectus, kill, destroy, interrupt, lit. put between, < inter, between, + facere, do: see fact.] Killing; murder. Bailey.

interfemoral (in-tér-fem'ō-rāl), a. [L. inter, between, + femur, pl. femora, thigh: see femoral.] Situated between the thighs; connecting the hind limbs: as, the interfemoral membrane of a bat.

interfere (in-tér-fér'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interfered, ppr. interfering. [Formerly also entferre; < ME. entferren, < OF. entferer, exchange blows, F. interferer, interfere, < ML. interferre*, strike between, < L. inter, between, + ferre, strike.] 1. To take a part in the affairs of others; especially, to intermeddle; act in such a way as to check or hamper the action of other persons or things.

So cautious were our ancestors in conversation, as never to interfere with party disputes in the state. Swift.

Our war no interfering kings demands,
Nor shall be thrust to Barbarian hands.

Rome, tr. of Lucan's Pharsalia, viii.

A Sheik Arab, who lives here [Suez], has really all the power, whenever he pleases to interfere.

Pococke, Description of the East, I. 188.

2. To clash; come in collision; be in opposition: as, the claims of two nations may interfere; the two things interfere with each other.

Nature is ever interfering with Art. Emerson, Art.

3. In farriery, to strike one hoof or the shoe of one hoof against the fetlock of the opposite leg (of the same pair): said of a horse.—4. In physics, to act reciprocally upon one another so as to modify the effect of each, by augmenting, diminishing, or nullifying it: said of waves of light, heat, sound, water, etc. See interference, 5.

When two similar and equal series of waves arrive at a common point, they interfere, as it is called, with one another, so that the actual disturbance of the medium at any instant is the resultant of the disturbances which it would have suffered at that instant from the two series separately.

P. G. Tait, Encyc. Brit., XIV. 608.

—Syn. 1. Intermeddle, Intervene, etc. See interpose. interference (in-tér-fér'ens), n. [= F. interférence = Pg. interferencia = It. interferenza; as interfere + -ence.] 1. The act of interfering; interposition; especially, intermeddling.

This circumstance, which is urged against the bill, becomes an additional motive for its interference.

Burke, On Fox's East India Bill.

A part of the European powers have attempted to establish a right of interference to put down revolutionary principles in that continent.

Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, § 46.

2. A clashing or collision; the act of coming into violent contact.—3. In farriery, a striking of one foot against the one next to it, as one hind foot against the other.—4. In Amer. patent law, the conflict between two patents or applications for patent which claim in whole or in part the same invention. Hence, to go into interference (of an application for a patent) is to be reserved for the purpose of litigating the question in the patent office before the application shall be granted.

5. In physics, the mutual action of waves of any kind (whether those in water, or sound, heat, or light-waves) upon one another, by which, under certain conditions, the vibrations and their effects are increased, diminished, or neutralized. The term was first employed by Dr. Young to express certain phenomena which result from the mutual action of the rays of light on one another. In general, if two systems of waves come together, they interfere; that is, they unite to reinforce or destroy one another, the actual disturbance of the medium at any instant being the resultant of the two disturbances considered separately. For example, if the two systems are of equal intensity and in the same phase, the result will be a doubled disturbance; if, however, they are half a wave-length apart, the result will be rest. Thus, two sounds of the same pitch and intensity produce a note of double the intensity when they meet in the same phase, the point of condensation of one corresponding to that of the other; when, on the other hand, the point of maximum condensation of the first corresponds to that of rarefaction of the other, they destroy each other. Again, if two notes differing but slightly in pitch (say one vibration per second) are sounded together, there will be one instant in each second when the two wave-systems will nearly coincide in phase, and one when they will be half a wave-length apart; the result is that they alternately strengthen and weaken each other at these moments, and the ear perceives the pulsations in the tone called beats (see beat, 7). The same principles hold true in the case of light, as was first shown by Young. The interference of light-waves is illustrated in the phenomena of diffraction (see diffraction); thus, a diffraction grating gives with monochromatic light a series of light and dark bands (interference fringes), corresponding respectively to the points of maximum and minimum motion resulting from the mutual action of the two wave-systems; for the former they are in the same phase, for the latter they differ in phase by half a wave-length. If white light is employed, a series of spectra (interference spectra) of different orders is obtained. Newton's rings, obtained, for example, when ordinary light is reflected from a convex lens of long focus pressed upon a plate of glass, are circular interference spectra. The colors of thin films, as of oil on water or of a soap-bubble, are due to interference, as is also the iridescence of some antique glass or of mother-of-pearl. Still again, the beautiful figures produced when a section of a uniaxial crystal cut normal to the axis, or of a biaxial crystal cut normal to the bisectrix, is viewed in converging polarized light are similar phenomena, and are hence called interference figures. Recently (1888-9) Hertz Interference Figures of a Biaxial Crystal: (1) when the axial plane (passing through the two ovals) is inclined 45° to the vibration-planes of the polarizer and analyzer, and (2) when it is respectively parallel and perpendicular to them.

has shown that electric waves, produced, for example, by induction discharges between two metal surfaces and propagated through space, also exhibit under proper conditions interference phenomena. These waves may have a length of several feet. See wave. —Syn. 1. Mediation, Intercession, etc. See interposition.

interferer (in-tér-fér'ér), n. One who or that which interferes.

interferingly (in-tér-fér'ing-li), adv. In an interfering manner; by interference; by intermeddling.

interfibrillar (in'tér-fi-bril'ár), a. [= F. interfibrillaire; as inter + fibrilla + -ar.] Situated between fibrils.

Tumours in which we have . . . a swollen and semi-liquid condition of the interfibrillar substance.

Kluger, Pathol. Anat. (trans.), I. § 148.

interfibrillary (in-tér-fi'bril-lár-i), a. Same as interfibrillar.

interfibrous (in-tér-fi'brus), a. [< inter + fibro + -ous.] Situated between fibers.

Pressing the combined lime and interfibrous matter out of the tissue.

Encyc. Brit., XIV. 884.

interfilamentar (in-tér-flá-men'tár), a. [< inter + filament + -ar.] Situated between filaments. E. R. Lankester, Encyc. Brit., XVI. 689.

interfillet (in-tér-flét), v. t. [< inter + fillet.] To bind in and over; weave. [Rare.]

There is an actual predominance of the practical or ethical aim, not only as the immediate motive and ultimate goal of his endeavor, but constantly interfilleted and interwoven with the theoretical tissue.

Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 387.

interflow (in-tér-fló'), v. i. [< inter + flow.] To flow between.

What way the current cold
Of Northern Ocean with strong tides both interflow and swell.

Holland, tr. of Camden, p. 12.

interfluent (in-tér-flú-ént), a. [< L. interfluens, ppr. of interfluere, flow between, < inter, between, + fluere, flow: see fluent.] 1. Flowing between; flowing back and forth.

The agitation of some interfluent subtle matter.

Boyle, Works, II. 503.

2. Flowing together; harmoniously blending: of sounds, forms, etc.

As written by Chaucer, it was picturesque, full of music and color—the interfluent, luxurious pentameter couplet, revived by Hunt and Keats.

Sedman, The Century, XXIX. 508.

interfluous (in-tér-flú-us), a. [< L. interfluous, flowing between, < interfluere, flow between: see interfluent.] Same as interfluent.

Hated to hear, under the stars or moon,
One nightingale in an interfluous wood Saturate the hungry dark with melody.

Shelley, The Woodman and the Nightingale.

interfold (in-tér-fóld'), v. t. [< inter + fold.] To fold one into the other; fold together.

Life's most beautiful Fortune
Kneels before the Eternal throne; and, with hands interfolded, Praises thankful and moved the only Giver of blessings.

Longfellow, tr. of Tegner's Children of the Lord's Supper.

interfoliaceous (in-tér-fó-li-á'shi-us), a. [< L. inter, between, + folium, leaf: see foliaceous.] In bot., situated between opposite leaves: as, interfoliaceous stipules in the Rubiaceae.

interfoliate (in-tér-fó-li-át), v. t.; pret. and pp. interfoliated, ppr. interfoliating. [< L. inter, between, + folium, leaf: see foliate.] To interleave.

So much [improvement of a book] as I conceive is necessary, I will take care to send you with your interfoliated copy.

Evelyn, To Mr. Place, Aug. 17, 1696.

Almost immediately upon receiving information that a new work is to be produced, he [the stage-manager] interfoliates the piano score with blank leaves, upon which he notes what is to occur simultaneously with the playing of certain bars of music on the page opposite.

Scribner's Mag., IV. 443.

interfretted (in-tér-fret'ed), a. [< inter + fret + -ed.] In her., same as interlaced, but applied especially to objects which are closed so that the interlacing cannot be separated: as, two keys interfretted by their bows.

interfriction (in-tér-frik'shən), n. [< inter + friction.] A rubbing together; mutual friction. [Rare.]

Kindling a fire by interfriction of dry sticks.

De Quincey, Spanish Nun, § 18.

interfrontal (in-tér-fron'tál), a. [= F. interfrontal; as inter + frontal.] Situated between the right and left frontal bones, or the right and left halves of the frontal bone: as, an interfrontal suture.

interfulgent (in-tér-ful'jént), a. [< L. interfulgens, ppr. of interfulgere, shine between, < inter, between, + fulgere, shine: see fulgent.] Shining between. Bailey.

interfuse (in-tér-fúz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interfused, ppr. interfusing. [< L. interfusus, ppr. of (LL.) interfundere, pour between, < inter, between, + fundere, pour: see found, fuse.] 1. To pour or spread between or among; diffuse throughout; permeate or cause to permeate.

The kingdom of China is in all parts thereof interfused with commodious rivers.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. li. 89.

The ambient air, wide interfused,
Embracing round this florid earth.

Milton, P. L., vii. 80.

Ice upon ice, the well-adjusted parts
Were soon conjoin'd, nor other cement ask'd Than water interfus'd to make them one.

Cooper, Taak, v. 148.

And through chaos, doubt, and strife,
Interfuses Thy calm of life

Whittier, Andrew Rykman's Prayer.

2. To fuse together or interblend; associate; make interdependent.

A people amongst whom religion and law were almost identical, and in whose character both were so thoroughly interfused.

Hawthorne, Scarlet Letter, II.

interfusion (in-tér-fú'zhən), n. [< LL. interfusio(n), < interfundere, pp. interfusum, pour between: see interfuse.] The act of pouring or spreading between; an intimate intermingling.

I foresaw that I should find him a true American, full of that perplexing interfusion of refinement and crudity which marks the American mind.

H. James, Jr., Pasa. Pilgrim, p. 24.

interganglionic (in-tér-gan'gli-on'ik), a. [< inter + ganglion + -ic.] Situated between ganglia; connecting ganglia: specifically applied to the commissures or connecting nervous cords of ganglia, especially of the sympathetic system.

intergatory (in-tér-gū-tō-ri), n. A contraction of interrogatory.

Let us go in;
And charge us there upon intergatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.

Shak., M. of V., v. 1, 90.

I have an entrapping question or two more
To put unto them, a cross intergatory.

B. Jonson, Staple of News, v. 2.

intergenital (in-tér-jen'i-tál), a. [< inter + genital.] Situated between the genitals: applied to the calcareous plates of echinoderms which are attached to and come more or less between those which bear the orifices of the genital organs.

intergerm (in-tér-jérn'), v. t. [< inter + germ.] To exchange grins or snarls. Davies.

The angry beast [a badger] to his best chamber flies,
And (angled there) sits grimly intergerming.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Decay.

interglacial (in-tér-glá'shi-ál), a. [< inter + glacial.] In geol., formed or occurring between two periods of glacial action: as, interglacial beds; an interglacial period.

interglandular (in-tér-glan'dū-lár), a. [< inter + glandular.] Situated between glands.

interglobular (in-tér-glob'ū-lár), a. [< inter + globular.] Situated between globules.

Interglobular spaces are represented as black marks.

Micra. Sciences, XXIX. 1. 16.

intergradation (in'tér-grā-dā'shən), n. [< intergrade + -ation.] Intermediate gradation.

intergrade (in-tér-grād'), v. t.; pret. and pp. intergraded, ppr. intergrading. [< inter + grade, v.] To become alike gradually, or approach in character by degrees, as one animal or plant compared with another; be graduated with diminishing degrees of difference, or graded into one another, as two or more species. See the extract.

I compromised the matter by reducing to the rank of varieties the nominal species that were known or believed to intergrade. . . . We treat as "specific" any form, however little different from the next, that we do not know or believe to intergrade.

Coues, Key to N. A. Birds, p. 79.

Interference Figure of a Uniaxial Crystal.

ergrade (in'tér-grād), n. [< inter- + gradel,] An intermediate grade.

That nephels, north of the belt, breeds true, is certain, cause the intergrades and alope are not found here. Nature, XXXIX, 194.

ergrowth (in'tér-grōth), n. [< inter- + owt.] A growing together; a growth between.

There are not wanting signs of an intergrowth of the o minerals. Geol. Jour., XLIV, 449.

ergyral (in-tér-jí'ral), a. [< inter- + gyrus -al.] Situated between gyri of the brain.

erhemal, interhemal (in-tér-hē'mal), a. [< inter- + hemal.] I. a. Situated between hemal spines. — Interhemal bone, interhemal spine, in scat., one of the dermal bones or spines which support the rays of the median or unpaired fins of the hemal or lower side of the body: so called in their situation deep in the flesh between hemal spines. e. interhemal.

II. n. An interhemal bone.

A series of interhemals. Encyc. Brit., XII, 641.

erhemispherical (in-tér-hem-i-sér'ē-bral), a. [inter- + hemispherical.] Situated between e hemispheres of the brain.

erhyal (in-tér-hí'al), a. and n. [< inter- + (oid) + -al.] I. a. Situated between or among erts of the hyoid arch of a fish, in relation ith the hyomandibular and symplectic bones.

The lower part of the (hyoid) arch retains its connection with the upper part, by means of an inter- al piece. Stand. Nat. Hist., III, 21.

II. n. An intermediate osseous or cartilaginous element of the hyoid arch of a fish, connecting its upper and lower parts, in relation ith the hyomandibular and symplectic bones; i element connecting the hyomandibular with e branchiostegal arch.

erim (in'tér-im), adv. [L., in the mean hile, meantime, < inter, between, + im*, equiv. eum, acc. of is, that: see hel.] In the mean hile; meantime.

I hope some gentleman will soon be appointed in my om here who is better able to serve the publick than I m. Interim. I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant.

Benedict Arnold, Letter, May 23, 1775 (Amer. Archives).

erim (in'tér-im), n. and a. [< interim, adv.] n. 1. The mean time; time intervening.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream. Shak., J. C., II, 1, 64.

. A provisional arrangement for the settlement of religious differences between Protestants and Roman Catholics in Germany during e Reformation epoch, pending a definite settlement by a church council. There were three interim: the Ratisbon Interim, promulgated by the emperor Charles V., July 25th, 1541, but ineffective; the Augsburg Interim, proclaimed also by Charles V., May 15th, 1548, it not carried out by many Protestants; and the Leipzig interim, carried through the diet of Saxony December 22d, 48, by the efforts of the elector Maurice, and enlarged id published as the Greater Interim in March, 1549; it et with strenuous opposition. Religious toleration was eured for the Lutherans by the peace of Passau, 1562.

II. a. Belonging to or connected with an intervening period of time; temporary; as, an interim order.

The first and second interim reports of the Royal Commission appointed to enquire into the Depression of Trade. Quarterly Rev., CLXIII, 161.

interim decree, in Scots law, a decree disposing of part of cause, but leaving the remainder unexecuted. — Interim factor, a receiver or curator appointed for temporary rvice. In Scots law it was formerly usual for creditors a bankrupt to appoint a manager, called an interim fac-, to preserve the estate until a trustee should be chosen. his practice was superseded by that of the court appoint- g a judicial factor.

erimist (in'tér-im-ist), n. [< interim + -ist.] ecles., a German Protestant who accepted one f the interims.

erimistic (in'tér-i-mis'tik), a. [< interimist -ic.] Pertaining to the decree of Charles V. 1548 at Augsburg, known as the Interim, or e subsequent agreement of Melancthon and others partially in accord with this.

The Emperor had strongly urged upon the ambassadors e settling of a form of religion agreeable to the inter- stic doctrine. Byromann, to Bullinger, Dec., 1549, in R. W. Dixon, Hist. (Church of Eng., III, 98, note).

erinhibitive (in'tér-in-hib'it-iv), a. [< in- + -inhibitive.] Mutually inhibitive. An impairment of the inhibitive functions.

Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 287.

erior (in-tér-ri-or), a. and n. [Early mod. E. terior, < OF. interior, interieur, F. intérieur = R. Sp. Pg. interior = It. interiore, < L. interior, ner, compar. of interus*, < inter, within, be- tween: see inter.] I. a. 1. Being within; inside of anything that limits, incloses, or con- ceals; internal; further toward a center: op- posed to exterior or superficial: as, the interior parts of a house or of the earth.

Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred, That in your outward action shows itself. Shak., Rich. III., I, 3, 65.

This fall of the monarchy was far from being preceded by any exterior symptoms of decline. . . . The interior were not visible to every eye. Burke, A Regicide's Peace, I.

2. Inland; remote from the limits, frontier, or shore: as, the interior parts of a country; an interior town. — 3. Of or pertaining to that which is within; inside: as, an interior view.

O that you could . . . make but an interior survey of your good selves! Shak., Cor., II, 1, 48.

4. Pertaining to the immediate contents of consciousness; relating to that which one can perceive within one's self; inward; inner; in- most; mental.

The Earle of Northumberland . . . began secretly to communicate his interior imaginations and priate thoughts with Richard Scrop, Archbishop of York. Hall, Hen. IV., an. 6.

Rather desir'ing sooner to die then longer to live, and peraventure for this cause, that her interior lye sawe priully, and gane to her a secrete monition of the great calamities and adversities which then did hang over her head. Hall, Edw. IV., an. 10.

Sense, inmost, interior, internal. This was introduced, as a convertible term with consciousness in general, by the philosophers of the Cartesian school, and thus came to be frequently applied to denote the source, complement, or revelation of immediate truths. It is however not only in itself vague, but is liable to be confounded with internal sense in other very different significations. We need not therefore regret that in this relation it has not (though Hutcheson set an example) been naturalized in British Philosophy. Sir W. Hamilton.

5. In entom., inner; lying next to the body or the median line. — Interior angle. See angle, 1. — Interior epicycloid, in geom., a hypocycloid. — Interior palpi, in entom., the labial palpi. — Interior planets, in astron., the planets that are between the earth's orbit and the sun. — Interior screw, a screw cut on the interior surface of anything hollow, as a nut or a tap-hole. — Interior slope, in fort., the slope from the superior slope to the tread of the banquette. See cut under parapet.

= Syn. Inward, Internal, etc. See inner.

II. n. 1. The internal part; the inside.

The fool multitude, that chooses by show, Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach, Which prides not to th' interior. Shak., M. of V., II, 9, 28.

2. In art.: (a) An inside part of a building, considered as a whole from the point of view of artistic design or general effect, convenience, etc.

There is a grandeur and a simplicity in the proportions of this great temple (the Pantheon) that render it still one of the very finest and most sublime interiors in the world. J. Perugiam, Hist. Arch., I, 311.

(b) A picture of such an inclosed space, or of any subject considered as within such an inclosure, or under the conditions of lighting, etc., obtaining therein. — 3. That part of a country or state which is at a considerable distance from its frontiers.

Her frontier was terrible, her interior feeble. Burke, A Regicide's Peace, II.

In some regions . . . rivers afford, if not the only means of access to the interior, still by far the easiest means. H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 112.

4. The internal or domestic affairs of a country as distinguished from its external or foreign affairs. — Department of the Interior. See department. — Interiority (in-tér-ri-or'it-i), n. [= F. intérieurité = Sp. interioridad = It. interiorità, < ML. interiorita (-t)s, < L. interior, being within: see interior.] The quality of being interior; inwardness. [Rare.]

He had been a breaker of the law in its essential spirit, in its interiority, still by the way through. H. W. Beecher, Plymouth Pulpit, March 19, 1884, p. 408.

interiorly (in-tér-ri-or-li), adv. In the interior part; internally; inwardly.

The divine nature sustains and interiorly nourisheth all things. Donne, Hist. Septuagint, p. 205.

interj. An abbreviation of interjection.

interjacence (in-tér-ják'sen), n. [< interjacen (t) + -ce.] A lying or being between.

interjacency (in-tér-ják'sen-si), n. 1. Same as interjacence.

England and Scotland [are] . . . divided only by the interjacency of the Tweed and some desert ground. Sir M. Hale.

2. That which is interposed or lies between. [Rare.]

Its fluctuations are but motions subservient; which winds, storms, shores, . . . and every interjacency ir- regulates. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii, 17.

interjacent (in-tér-ják'sent), a. [= Pg. interjacent; < L. inter, between, + jacen (-t)s, ppr. of jacere, lie: see jacent. Cf. adjacent, etc.] Lying or being between; intervening: as, interjacent isles.

Observations made at the feet, tops, and interjacent parts of high mountains. Boyle, Works, I, 89.

The Saxon forces were employed in subduing the mid- land parts of Britain, interjacent between their two first established colonies. Sir W. Temple, Hist. England, Int.

interjaculate (in-tér-ják'ū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. interjaculated, ppr. interjaculating. [< inter- + jaculate.] To ejaculate in the midst of conversation; interject (a remark).

"O Dieu! que n'ai-je pu le voir?" interjaculates Made- moiselle. Thackeray, Newcomes, vii.

interjangle (in-tér-jang'gl), v. i.; pret. and pp. interjangled, ppr. interjangling. [< inter- + jangle.] To make a dissonant, harsh noise one with another.

The divers disagreeing cords Of interjangling ignorance. Daniel, Musophilus.

interject (in-tér-jekt'), v. [< L. interjectus, pp. of interjacere, interjacere, throw between, put between, < inter, between, + jacere, throw: see jet.] Cf. abject, adject, conject, deject, eject, in- ject, etc.] I. trans. To throw in between other things; insert; interpolate.

But Athryllatus, the physician, a Thasian born, inter- jected some stay of farther searching into this cause. Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 564.

II. intrans. To come between; interpose. [Rare.]

The confluence of soldiers, interjecting, rescued him. Sir G. Buck, Hist. Rich. III., p. 61.

interjection (in-tér-jek'shon), n. [= F. interjection (n) = Pr. interjectio = Sp. interjaccion = Pg. interjeção = It. interiezione, < L. interjec- tio (n), a throwing or placing between, in gram. an interjection, in rhet. a parenthesis, < inter- jacere, interjacere, throw between: see inter- ject.] 1. The act of throwing between; an interjecting. — 2. The act of ejaculating, exclaim- ing, or forcibly uttering.

Laughing causeth a continual expulsion of the breath, with the loud noise which maketh the interjection of laugh- ing. Bacon.

3. In gram., an interjected or exclamatory word; a word thrown in between other words or expressions, but having no grammatical relation to them, or used independently, to indi- cate some access of emotion or passion, and commonly emphasized to the eye in writing by a mark of exclamation, as oh! ah! alas! hur- rah! Interjections are regarded as constituting a part of speech by themselves, although they are properly no "part of speech," but holophrastic utterances, originally mere or less instinctive, though coming like the rest of speech, to be used conventionally. Some interjections, however, are transformations or abbreviations of ordinary words, as alas, wounds, death, gad. Abbreviated interj.

Dij vestram fidem, O good Lord, it standeth always in the place of an interjection of merrynaying, and not of call- yng on. Udall, Flowers (trans.), fol. 98.

As I am choleric, I forbear not only swearing, but all interjections of fretting, as pugh! pish! and the like. Tatler, No. 1.

4. A manner or means of expressing emotion with the effect of an interjection. [Rare.]

"He rent his garments" (which was the interjection of the country, and custom of the nation).

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 238.

interjectional (in-tér-jek'shon-al), a. [< inter- jection + -al.] 1. Thrown in between other words or expressions; interjected: as, an inter- jectional remark.

Another explanation understands this clause as an inter- jectional suggestion of the evangelist himself. . . . But why should both evangelists make the same interjectional sug- gestion at the same place? J. A. Alexander, On Mark xiii, 14.

2. Partaking of the character of an interjec- tion; consisting in or characterized by excla- mations.

Demosthenes, . . . in an interjectional form, . . . in- vokes the vengeance of the gods on Philip of Macedon. G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

The staccato sharpness of interjectional croaks and brit- tle calls from the river edge and swamp. Harper's Mag., LXXVIII, 48.

interjectionally (in-tér-jek'shon-āl-i), adv. In an interjectional manner; by way of interjec- tion.

She had said interjectionally to her sister, "It would be a mercy, Fanny, if that girl were married!" George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, ix.

interjectionary (in-tér-jek'shon-ār-i), a. [< inter- jection + -ary.] Same as interjectional.

interjectural (in-tér-jek'tjū-ral), a. [*< inter- jectura (< L. interjectura, an insertion, < inter- jacere, interjacere, throw between: see inter- ject) + -al]. Same as interjectional. [Rare.]

He started back two or three paces, rap out a dozen interjectural oaths, and asked what the devil had brought you here. Sheridan, The Rivals, II. 1.

interjoin (in-tér-join'), v. t. [< OF. entrejoindre, < L. interjungere, join together, < inter, between, + jungere, join; see join. Cf. interjunction.] To join one with another; combine.

So, fellest foes . . . shall grow dear friends,
And interjoin their issues. Shak., Cor., IV. 4, 22.

interjoint (in-tér-join'), n. [< inter- + joint.] In building, the space or interval between two joints.

interjunction (in-tér-junk'-shon), n. [< inter- + junction. Cf. interjoin.] A mutual joining. Smart.

interknit (in-tér-nit'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interknitted or interknit, ppr. interknitting. [< inter- + knit.] To knit together. [Rare.] interknot (in-tér-not'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interknotted, ppr. interknitting. [< inter- + knot.] To knot together mutually and intricately. [Rare.]

Millennial oaks interknotted their python roots below its surface, and vouchsafed protection to many a frailer growth of shrub or tree. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 743.

interknow (in-tér-nô'), v. t. [< inter- + know.] Same as enter-know.

How familiarly do these prophets interknow one another! Bp. Hall, Rapture of Elijah.

interknowledge (in-tér-nôl'-ej), n. [< inter- + knowledge.] Reciprocal knowledge.

See them in mutual inter-knowledge, enjoying each other's blessedness. Bp. Hall.

interlace (in-tér-lās'), v.; pret. and pp. interlaced, ppr. interlacing. [Formerly also entrelace; < ME. entrelacen, < OF. entrelacier, entrelacer, entrelasser, interlace, < entre-, between, + lacer, lacer, tie, entangle, lace; see lace, v.] I. trans. To cross one with another; interweave: as, to interlace wires; hence, to mingle; blend. In the mathematical theory of knots, to interlace three or more closed bands is to put them together so that no two are linked together, and yet so that they cannot be separated without a breach of continuity.

St. Paul, when he boasts of himself, doth oft interlace "I speak like a fool." Bacon, Prause (ed. 1887).

Very rich flesh coloured marble interlaced with veins of white. Coryat, Crudities, I. 62.

They acknowledged what services he had done for the commonwealth, yet interlacing some errors, whereby they seemed to reproach him. Hayward.

The innermost layer . . . is composed wholly of fine interlaced fibres of the optic nerve. Le Conte, Sight, p. 55.

II. intrans. To cross one another as if woven together, as interlacing branches; intertwine; blend intricately.

Her bashful shamefastness wrought
A great increase in her faire blushing face,
As roses did with lilies interlace.

Spenser, F. Q., V. III. 23.

Interlacing arches, in arch., an arcade of which the arches intersect as in the figure. They are frequent in mediæval architecture of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

Interlacing Arches, Norwich Cathedral, England.

interlaced

(in-tér-lāst'), p. a. In her, represented as interwoven: said of sickles, crescents, and the like, two or three in number. Compare interfretted.

interlacement (in-tér-lās'-ment), n. [< OF. entrelacement, entrelasement, an interlacing, < entrelacer, interlace; see interlace and -ment.] An interlacing; interweaving; intertwining. Imp. Dict.

interlacing (in-tér-lās'-ing), n. [Verbal n. of interlace, v.] The act of interweaving or crossing threads or lines; the threads or lines so interwoven or crossed.—Animal interlacings, a name given to the decoration of early Northern and especially Irish manuscripts, and other works of art, distinguished by a free employment of interwoven bands which are finished with heads, paws, etc., of animals.

interlamellar (in-tér-lām'-e-lār), a. [< inter- + lamella + -ar.] Between lamellæ: as, the interlamellar spaces of the cornea.

interlaminar (in-tér-lām'-i-nār), a. [< inter- + laminar.] Same as interlamellar.

interlaminated (in-tér-lām'-i-nā-ted), a. [< inter- + laminated.] Placed between laminae or plates; inclosed by laminae.

Three Crescents Interlaced.

interlamination (in-tér-lām-i-nā'-shon), n. [< inter- + lamination.] The state of being interlaminated.

interlap (in-tér-lap'), v. i.; pret. and pp. interlapped, ppr. interlapping. [< inter- + lap.] To fold or infold mutually; lap one with another.

Thus, in case of any serious accident, the whole of the mains can, by one turn of a screw, be disconnected from the dynamo, the interlapping pieces all dropping out. Elect. Rev. (Eng.), XXIV. 281.

interlapse (in-tér-laps), n. [< inter- + lapse.] The lapse or flow of time between two events; interval. [Rare.]

These dreams are calculated into such salts, which, after a short interlapse of time, produce coughs. Harvey.

interlard (in-tér-lārd'), v. t. [< OF. entrelarder, mix in between, mingle (different things, as fat and lean) together, lit. put fat in between (the loan), < entre, between, + lard, fat; see lard, n. and v.] 1. To mix, as fat with lean; hence, to insert between or among other things; sandwich.

Your fourth [verse] of one bisyllable, and two monosyllables interlarded.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 103.

2. To mix; diversify by mixture or by interjection: as, to interlard discourse with oaths.

Those other Epistles less question'd are yet so interlarded with Corruptions as may justly induce us with a wholesome suspicion of the rest. Milton, Prelatical Episcopacy.

Ignorant and illogical persons are naturally very prone to interlard their discourse with these fragmentary expressions [expletives].

G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

-Syn. 2. To intersperse, intermix.

interlardment (in-tér-lārd'-ment), n. [< OF. entrelardement, an interlarding, < entrelarder, interlard; see interlard and -ment.] The act of interlarding, or the state of being interlarded; intermixture.

I know thou cheerest the hearts of all thy acquaintance with such detached parts of mine [letters] as tend not to dishonour characters or reveal names; and this gives me an appetite to oblige thee by interlardment.

Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, III. 89.

interlay (in-tér-lā'), v. t. [< inter- + lay.] To lay or place among or between. Daniel, Civil Wars, iv.

interleaf (in-tér-lēf'), n.; pl. interleaves (-lēvz). [< inter- + leaf.] One of a number of (blank) leaves inserted between the leaves of a book for notes and additions.

interleague (in-tér-lēg'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interleaguied, ppr. interleaguining. [< inter- + league.] To combine in a league; engage in joint action.

Their strength the Fire, the Water gave
In interleaguied endeavor.

Bulwer, Fridolin (tr. from Schiller).

interleave (in-tér-lēv'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interleaved, ppr. interleaving. [< inter- + leaf (leave).] 1. To insert a leaf or leaves in: as, to interleave a book with blank leaves or with illustrations.

If he may be said to have kept a commonplace, it was nothing more than a small interleaved pocket-almanack, of about three inches square.

Bp. Hurd (Warburton's Works, I. 87).

An interleaved copy of Bailey's Dictionary, in folio, he [Johnson] made the repository of the several articles.

Sir J. Hawkins.

2. To insert between leaves: as, to interleave engravings, or blank leaves for notes or additions, in a book.

interlibel (in-tér-lī'-bel), v. t.; pret. and pp. interlibeled, interlibelled, ppr. interlibeling, interlibelling. [< inter- + libel.] To libel mutually or reciprocally. Bacon.

interline (in-tér-līn'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interlined, ppr. interlining. [< OF. entrelinier, < ML. interlineare, write between lines, < L. inter, between, + linea, line; see line.] 1. To insert between lines: as, to interline corrections in a writing.—2. To write or print between the lines of, as of something already written or printed.

Then the accuser will be ready to interline the schedules of thy debts, thy sins, and insert false debts.

Donne, Sermons, ix.

The minute they had signed was in some places dashed and interlined. Bp. Burnet, Hist. Reformation, an. 1580.

3. To write or print in alternate lines: as, to interline Greek with Latin.

When, by . . . interlining Latin with English one with another, he has got a moderate knowledge of the Latin tongue, he may then be advanced.

Locks, Education, § 108.

interline (in-tér-līn'), n. [< OF. entrelinne; as inter- + line.] 1. (f. interline, v.) A line between two other lines.

There is a network of wrinkles at the temple, and lines and interlines about the brow and side of the nose.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XL. 11.

interline (in-tér-līn'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interlined, ppr. interlining. [< inter- + line.] To insert, as a thickness of fabric or material, between the lining and the outer surface of (a garment): as, a cloak lined with silk, and interlined with flannel.

interlineal (in-tér-līn'-ē-āl), a. [= Sp. Pg. interlineal; as inter- + line + -al. (f. lineal.)] Between lines; interlinear. Imp. Dict.

interlinear (in-tér-līn'-ē-ār), a. [= F. interlinéaire = Sp. interlineal = It. interlineare, < ML. interlinearis, being between lines, < L. inter, between, + linea, line; see line.] 1. Situated between the lines; inserted between lines; hence, intermediate: as, interlinear corrections. Also interlineary.

He sometimes saved his cash
By interlinear days of frugal hash.

Crabbe, Works, IV. 110.

2. Having interpolated lines; interlined: as, an interlinear translation (one in which a line of the translated text is followed by a corresponding line of the translation).—Interlinear system, the Hamiltonian system of teaching languages, by using texts with interlined translations.

interlinearly (in-tér-līn'-ē-ār-ē-ly), adv. Same as interlinearly. Bp. Hall, Great Impostor.

interlinearly (in-tér-līn'-ē-ār-ē-ly), adv. In an interlinear manner; by interlineation.

interlineary (in-tér-līn'-ē-ār-ē-ly), a. and n. [< ML. interlinearis; see interlinear.] I. a. Same as interlinear.

Devotion is no marginal note, no interlineary gloss, no parenthesis that may be left out; it is no occasional thing, no conditional thing. Donne, Sermons, xxiii.

II. n.; pl. interlinearies (-rīz). A book having interlined matter. [Rare.]

The infinit helps of interlinearies, brevities, synopses, and other loitering gear. Milton, Arcopagitica, p. 41.

interlineation (in-tér-līn'-ē-ā'-shon), n. [< ML. interlineatio(n)-, < interlineare, interline; see interline.] The act of interlining; alteration or correction, as of written or printed matter, by interlinear insertion; also, that which is interlined; specifically, in law, an alteration made in a written instrument by inserting any matter after it is engrossed.

Of these lines, and of the whole first book, I am told that there was yet a former copy, more varied, and more deformed with interlineations.

Johnson, Pope.

Gerald took a slip of manuscript from his hand. It was written in pencil and showed many corrections and interlineations.

The Century, XXXVII. 308.

interlining (in-tér-lī'-ning), n. [Verbal n. of interline, v.] Same as interlineation.

We blot out this hand-writing of God's ordinances, or mingle it with false principles and interlineations of our own.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 800.

interlining (in-tér-lī'-ning), n. [Verbal n. of interline, v.] A layer of textile fabric or other material placed between the lining and the outer surface, as of a garment.

interlink (in-tér-līng'-k'), v. t. [< inter- + link.] To join together by or as by links; unite by strong ties, as of interest or affection.

These are two chains which are interlinked, which contain and are at the same time contained.

Dryden, tr. of Dufrenoy's Art of Painting, § 71.

Many an incomparable lovely pair
With hand in hand were interlinked seen, Making fair honour to their sovereign queen.

Sir J. Davies, Dancing.

interlink (in-tér-līng'-k'), n. [< inter- + link.] A link in a chain; hence, an intermediate step in a process of reasoning. Coleridge.

interlobular (in-tér-lōb'-ū-lār), a. [< inter- + lobule + -ar.] Situated between or among lobules: specifically said of structures in the liver, and correlated with intra-lobular.—Interlobular veins, branches of the portal vein which ramify between the lobules of the liver. Also called peripheral veins, as distinguished from central or intra-lobular veins.

interlocation (in-tér-lō-kā'-shon), n. [< inter- + location.] A placing between; interposition.

Your eclipse of the sun is caused by an interlocation of the moon betwixt the earth and the sun.

Buckingham, Rehearsal.

interlock (in-tér-lok'), v. [< inter- + lock.] I. intrans. To be locked together; mutually engage, clasp, or cling; embrace: as, the interlocking boughs of a wood.

In the first, the edges of the bones are in close contact, often interlocking by means of projections of one bone fitting into corresponding depressions of the other.

W. H. Flower, Osteology, p. 2.

Interlocking system of signals, in railroading, any system of devices whereby signals denoting the positions of switches at stations, junctions, and bridges are, by means of locking mechanism, connected with and controlled by the switch mechanism, in such manner that any movement of the switches operates the proper signal to indicate to engine-drivers and others the position in which the switch is set. Various systems have been introduced, and they have added greatly to the safety of modern railway traffic.

II. trans. To lock or clasp together; lock or hitch one in another: as, cattle sometimes interlock their horns.

My lady with her fingers interlocked.
Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

interocular (in-tér-lok'ŭ-lār), a. [< inter- + oculus + -ar.] Situated between loculi; of or pertaining to an interoculus.

The internal cavity of the corallites is divided into a series of closed longitudinal chambers or interocular spaces.
Geol. Jour., XLIV. 209.

interoculus (in-tér-lok'ŭ-lus), n.; pl. interoculi (-li). [NL., < inter- + oculus.] A space or chamber between any two loculi, as of a coral.

This matrix usually infills the cups and some of the interoculi in the specimens.
Geol. Jour., XLV. 130.

interlocution (in-tér-lō-kū'shon), n. [= F. interlocution = Sp. interlocucion = Pg. interlocução = It. interlocuzione, < L. interlocutio(n), a speaking between, < interloqui, speak between, interrupt, < inter, between, + loqui, speak; see locution.] 1. Interchange of speech; alternation in speaking; dialogue.

It [rehearsal of the Psalms] is done by interlocution, and with a mutual return of sentences from side to side.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. § 37.

A good continued speech, without a good speech of interlocution, shewes slowness.
Bacon, Discourses.

The Hearer of prayer invites interlocution with man.
Is. Taylor, Nat. Hist. Enthusiasm (ed. 1853), p. 47.

2. Intermediate discussion or argument; in law, an intermediate act or decree before final decision.

interlocutor (in-tér-lok'ŭ-tor), n. [= *F. interlocuteur = Sp. Pg. interlocutor = It. interlocutore, < L. as if interlocutor, < interloqui, speak between; see interlocution.] 1. One who speaks in a dialogue or takes part in a conversation.

The interlocutors in this dialogue are Socrates and one Minos, an Athenian, his acquaintance.
Bentley, On Phalaris.

2. In Scots law, a judgment or sentence pronounced in the course of a suit, but which does not finally determine the cause. The term, however, in Scotch practice, is applied indiscriminately to the judgments or orders of any court of record, whether they exhaust the question at issue or not.

interlocutory (in-tér-lok'ŭ-tō-ri), a. [= *F. interlocutoire = Sp. Pg. It. interlocutorio, < L. as if interlocutorius, < interloqui, speak between; see interlocutor.] 1. Consisting in or pertaining to the character of dialogue; pertaining to, characterized by, or participating in conversation; conversational: as, interlocutory instruction; an interlocutory encounter.

There are several interlocutory discourses in the Holy Scriptures.
Fiddes.

The recitative consequently is of two kinds, narrative and interlocutory.
Jago, Adam, an Oratorio.

2. Spoken intermediately; interjected into the main course of speech; specifically, in law, uttered or promulgated incidentally; not determinative or final in purport: as, an interlocutory argument; an interlocutory order, decree, or judgment (that is, one relating to a particular question or point in a case, but not to the final issue).

It is easy to observe that the judgment here given is not final, but merely interlocutory.
Blackstone, Com., III. xxiv.

The effect of the Governor's eloquence was much diminished, however, by the interlocutory remarks of De Herpt and a group of his adherents.
Molloy, Dutch Republic, II. 259.

3. In law, intermediately transacted; taking place apart from the main course of a cause.

The interlocutory hearings before the judges in chambers were numerous.

R. J. Hinton, Eng. Radical Leader, p. 321.

Interlocutory injunction. See injunction.—Interlocutory judgment or decree, a judgment or decree which, though it may determine the substantial rights of the parties, yet is preliminary to a further hearing and decision on details, or amounts, or other questions involving such matters, and necessary to be determined before a judgment can be awarded that can be executed or appealed from: as, a decree adjudging that plaintiff is entitled to an accounting from defendant, and directing the account to be taken, in order that he may have a final decree for the balance found due.

interlocutress (in-tér-lok'ŭ-trees), n. [< interlocutor + -ess. Cf. interlocutrice.] A female interlocutor.

For ten minutes Longmore felt a revival of interest in his interlocutress.
H. James, Jr., Pass. Pilgrim, p. 307.

interlocutrice (in-tér-lok'ŭ-tris), n. [= *F. interlocutrice = It. interlocutrice, < L. as if interlocutrix: see interlocutrice.] An interlocutress.

Have the goodness to serve her as auditrice and interlocutrice.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xiv.

interlocutrix (in-tér-lok'ŭ-triks), n. [As if *L., fem. of interlocutor: see interlocutor.] An interlocutress.

interlope (in-tér-lōp'), v. i.; pret. and pp. interloped, pp. interloping. [< interloper, q. v.] 1. To run between parties and intercept the advantage that one should gain from the other; traffic without a proper license; forestall.

Saints may not trade, but they may interlope.
Dryden, The Medal, l. 41.

The patron is desired to leave off his interloping trade, or admit the knights of the industry to their share. Tatler.

2. To obtrude one's self into a business in which one has no right.

interloper (in-tér-lō-pér), n. [D. enterlooper, a coaster, a coasting vessel, hence a smuggler, smuggling vessel (one that runs in and out along the coast), < F. entre, between (see enter-, inter-), + D. looper (= E. leaper), a runner, < loopen = E. leap, run: see leap, lope. The F. interlope, Sp. interlope, an interloper (vessel), interloping, are from E.] 1. One who trades without license.

Whatever privileges are allowed your company at Dort will be given by the other towns, either openly or covertly, to all those interlopers who bring their woollen manufacture directly thither.

Sir W. Temple, To the Gov. and Comp. of Merchant Adventurers, March 26, 1675.

2. One who interferes obtrusively or officiously; one who thrusts himself into a station to which he has no claim, or into affairs in which he has no interest.

The untrained man, . . . the interloper as to the professions.
Is. Taylor.

interlucate (in-tér-lū-kāt), v. t. [< L. interlucatus, pp. of interlucare, let the light through (sc. trees, by cutting away some of the branches), < inter, between, + lux (luc-), light: see light.] To admit light through, as by removing branches of trees. Cockeram.

interlucation (in-tér-lū-kā'shon), n. [< L. interlucation(n), < interlucare: see interlucate.] The act of thinning a wood to let in light. Evelyn.

interlucen (in-tér-lū-sent), a. [< L. interlucen(t)-s, pp. of interlucere, shine through, be visible, < inter, between, + lucere, be light, shine: see lucid.] Shining between.

interlude (in-tér-lūd), n. [Formerly also entrelude; < ME. entrelude, < OF. entrelude, < ML. interludium, an interlude, < L. inter, between, + ludus, play: see ludicrous.] 1. In dramatic art, an intermediate entertainment; a short independent performance introduced on the stage between the parts or in the course of the main entertainment; also, any similar by-play or episode or incident occurring in other circumstances.—2. In the early English drama, a play; particularly, a play from real life, distinguished from the mysteries and moralities. They were generally short and coarse. The first plays distinctly so called were those of John Heywood, beginning about 1521, although the name had previously been applied occasionally to dramas of any kind, and at an early date to the moralities.

Their new comedies or chival entreludes were played in open pavilions or tents of linen cloth or leather, half displayed that the people might see.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 29.

Comedy is the immediate successor of the Interludes, which are themselves only a popularized form of the Moralities, abstractions having been converted into individual types. A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., Int., p. xxi.

The Interlude—a short humorous piece, to be acted in the midst of the Morality for the amusement of the people—had been frequently used, but Heywood isolated it from the Morality, and made of it a kind of farce. Out of it, we may say, grew English comedy.

Singford Brooke, Primer of Eng. Lit., p. 79.

3. In music, a subordinate passage or composition inserted between the principal sections of a work or performances. Specifically—(a) A short instrumental or vocal piece inserted between the acts of a drama or an opera; an intermezzo. (b) An instrumental passage between the stanzas or the lines of a hymn or metrical psalm.

Interludes are played, in Germany, not between the verses of the Choral, but between the separate lines of each verse.
Grove, Dict. Music.

(c) An instrumental piece between successive parts of a church service.

interluded (in-tér-lūd-ded), a. Inserted as an interlude; having interludes.

interluder (in-tér-lūd-der), n. One who performs in an interlude. [Rare.]

They make all their scholars play-boys! Is 't not a fine sight to see all our children made interluders?
B. Jonson, Staple of News, III. 2.

Here are a certain company of players— . . . Country comedians, interluders, str.

Middletown (and another), Mayor of Queensborough, v. 1.

interludial (in-tér-lū-di-āl), a. [< ML. interludium, interlude, + -al.] Pertaining to or of the nature of an interlude.

At first [comedy was] wholly unregarded as a sphere for art uses, then admitted for interludial purposes in a fabrication styled intermezzo, that was played between the acts of a serious composition. Shays, Brk., XVII. 94.

interlucency (in-tér-lū-en-si), n. [< L. interlucen(t)-s, pp. of interlucere, wash under, flow between, < inter, between, + luere, wash: see lave, lotion.] A flowing between; interposition of water. [Rare.]

Those parts of Asia and America which are not disjoined by the interlucency of the sea might have been formerly in some age of the world contiguous to each other.
Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 128.

interlunar (in-tér-lū-nār), a. [= F. interlunairo = Pg. interlunar; < L. inter, between, + luna, the moon: see lunar.] Pertaining to the moon's monthly interval of invisibility; between the periods of moonlight: as, interlunar nights. The interlunar cave is the place of seclusion into which the moon was anciently supposed to retire at such times.

And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night,
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.
Milton, S. A., l. 93.

Prometheus . . . repairs to a certain exquisite interlunar cave, and there dwells in tranquillity with his beloved Asia.
S. Lamer, The English Novel, p. 100.

interlunary (in-tér-lū-nār-i), a. Same as interlunar.

If we add the two Egyptian days in every month, the interlunary and plenilunary exemptions, eclipses of sun, etc.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 13.

interly, adv. A Middle English form of entirely.

He telles tham so that like aman may fele,
And what thei may interly knowe
Yf thei were dymc [obscure],
What the prophetis saide in their sawe,
All longis to hym.
York Plays, p. 206.

intermarriage (in-tér-mar'ij), n. [< inter- + marriage.] 1. Marriage contracted between members of two families, classes, tribes, or races; connection or relation by virtue of such marriage: as, the estates of the families were united by intermarriage.—2. Consanguineous marriage; marriage between persons nearly related by blood. [Rare.]

Intermarriage certainly predisposes to disease.
Quain, Dict. of Med., p. 324.

intermarry (in-tér-mar'i), v. i.; pret. and pp. intermarried, pp. intermarrying. [< inter- + marry.] To become connected by marriage, as two families, clans, classes, or tribes.

About the middle of the fourth century from the building of Rome, it was declared lawful for nobles and plebeians to intermarry. Swift, Contests in Athens and Rome.

As the Gentoos tribe never intermarry, India may properly be said to contain four different nations.

Macle, Inq. into the Bramin Philosophy.

intermaxilla (in-tér-mak-sil'ā), n.; pl. intermaxillæ (-ē). [< inter- + maxilla.] The intermaxillary or premaxillary bone; the premaxilla. See intermaxillary, n.

intermaxillary (in-tér-mak'sil-lā-ri), a. and n. [< L. inter, between, + maxilla, jaw: see maxillary.] 1. a. (a) Situated between the maxillary or upper jaw-bones: specifically applied to the intermaxilla or premaxilla. (b) Of or pertaining to the intermaxilla: as, intermaxillary teeth (that is, in mammals, incisors). (c) In Crustacea, situated between those somites of the head which bear the maxillæ: as, the intermaxillary apodeme (which is developed from the membrane connecting the two maxillary somites).—Intermaxillary lobe, in entom., a name given by Straus-Durckheim to the maxillary lobe or apex of the maxilla.

II. n.; pl. intermaxillaries (-riz). 1. The intermaxilla or premaxilla; one of a pair of bones of the upper jaw, situated between or rather in front of the maxillary bones, and in relation with its fellow of the opposite side. In man it is small, and speedily unites with the supramaxillary, with obliteration of all signs of its previous distinctness. In most mammals it is large, permanently distinct, and prominent; and, being usually rather in front of the superior maxillaries than between them, it is often called premaxillary. Whatever its size, shape, or situation, it is the bone of the upper jaw which bears the incisor teeth, when these occur. In birds it is by far the largest and principal bone of the upper mandible. It is single and median, representing a coalesced pair of bones; it represents that part of the upper jaw which is sheathed in horn, and its shape conforms with that of the beak. It has usually three prongs, one of which mounts to the forehead, the other two running along the palate. See outs under Awara, Balamida, Crotalus, and Gallina.

2. One of the foremost pair of the upper jaw-bones in most teleostean fishes, once generally supposed to be homologous with the intermaxillary of the higher vertebrates.—3. The intermaxillary lobe of an insect. See I.
intermean (in-tér-mén), n. [< inter- + mean³.] Something done in the mean time; an intercat.

The propensity to laugh at the expense of good sense and propriety is well ridiculed in the Intermean at the end of the first act of the "Staple of News" by Jonson.
Strut, Sports and Pastimes, p. 232.

intermeation (in-tér-mé-á-shon), n. [*< L. as if intermeatio(n), < intermeare, pass through or between, < inter, between, + meare, pass: see meatus.] A flowing or passing between. Bailey, 1731.

intermeddle (in-tér-med'l), v.; pret. and pp. intermeddled, ppr. intermeddling. [< ME. entermedlen, entermedlen, < OF. entermedler, entermedler, < ME. intermollen: see intermell.] F. entremêler (= Pr. entremesclar = Sp. entremezclar = It. intramischiare), intermeddle, < entre, between, + medler, mesler, etc., mix, meddle: see inter- and meddle.] I. intrans. 1. To take part in some matter; especially, to interfere officiously or impertinently; take part in business with which one has no concern.
 Henry, Earl of Northumberland, who, though on King Richard's side, intermeddled not in the Battle, was incontinently taken into favour, and made of the Council.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 233.

And [they] over boldly intermeddled with duties whereof no charge was ever given them.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 62.
 It is usually thought, with great justice, a very impertinent thing in a private man to intermeddle in matters which regard the state.
Steele, Guardian, No. 123.

2. To give one's self concern.
 Through desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddled with all wisdom.
Prov. xviii. 1.
 = Syn. Interfere, Intervene, etc. See interpose.

II. trans. To intermix; mingle; mix up.
 Again the people of Pounce Anthony, that all were intermeddled with the people of Arthur, that foughten full hard on that oo part and the tother.
Morlin (E. E. T. S.), III. 402.
 He hath intermeddled in his historie certain things contrary to the trueth.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 572.
 This kynde of workmanhippe intermeddled of stone and timber . . . is no enill syght.
Golding, tr. of Caesar, fol. 191.

Veritie is perfect when it is not intermeddled with falsehood.
Devil Confuted (1598).
intermeddler (in-tér-med'ler), n. One who intermeddles; a meddler in affairs which do not concern him, or with which he cannot properly interfere.
 Nor did I ever know a Man that touch'd on Conjugal Affairs could ever reconcile the jarring Humours, but in a common hatred of the intermeddler.
Steele, Grief A-la-Mode, I. 1.
 "The consequence was, as but too often happens," wrote the afflicted intermeddler, "that all concerned became inimical to me."
E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 104.

intermeddlesome (in-tér-med'li-sum), a. [< intermeddle + -some.] Prone to intermeddle; meddlesome. Imp. Dict.

intermeddlesomeness (in-tér-med'li-sum-ness), n. The quality of being intermeddlesome. Imp. Dict.

intermedia, n. Plural of intermedium.
intermediacy (in-tér-mé-di-á-si), n. [< intermediat(e) + -cy.] The state of being intermediate, or of acting intermediately; intermediate agency; interposition; intervention.
 In birds the auditory nerve is affected by the impressions made on the membrane by only the intermediacy of the opiumella. Berham, Physico-Theology, iv. 3, note 20.

intermedial (in-tér-mé-di-ál), a. [< L. intermedium, that is between (see intermedium), + -al.] Intermediate; intervening; intervenient.
 Since all thy creatures obey thy word, I alone may not disorder the creation, and cancel those bands and intermedial links of subordination.
Jos. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 64.

Black, white, red, or any other of the intermedial colours.
Evelyn, Sculptura, I. 3.
intermedian (in-tér-mé-di-gn), a. [< L. intermedium, that is between (see intermedium), + -an.] Lying between; intermediate. Blount.

intermediary (in-tér-mé-di-á-ri), a. and n. [= F. intermédiaire = Sp. intermediario = It. intermediario; < L. intermedius, that is between (see intermedium), + -ary.] I. a. Being or occurring between; having an intermediate position or action: as, an intermediary process.—Intermediary function, in math., a function homologous in the whole plane which satisfies the conditions where a and a' are quasi-periods.

$$f(x + u) = ax + b \text{ or } f(x + u) = ax + b' \text{ or } f(x + u) = ax + b''$$

 II. n.; pl. intermediaries (-ris). One who or that which interposes or is intermediate; an intermediate agent; a go-between.
 They [senates] have been instruments, but never intermediaries.
Landor.
 England was acting only as an intermediary.
The Atlantic, XLIX. 701.
 Sometimes two or three intermediaries would be employed.
J. R. Soley, Blockade and Cruisers, p. 183.
 The enterprising Hellenes becoming the intermediaries between the native Libyan population of the interior and the outer world. B. V. Head, Historia Numorum, p. 725.

intermediate (in-tér-mé-di-át), v. i.; pret. and pp. intermediated, ppr. intermediating. [< ML. intermediatus, pp. of intermediare, come between, act as a mediator, < L. intermedius, that is between: see intermedium. Cf. mediate.] To act intermediately; intervene; interpose.
 I'll tell ye what conditions threaten danger, Unless you intermediate.
Ford, Lady's Trial, v. 1.
 By interposing your intermediating authority, endeavour to avert the horrid cruelty of this edict.
Milton, Letters of State, Oliver to Gustavus Adolphus.

intermediate (in-tér-mé-di-át), a. and n. [= F. intermédiaire, < ML. intermediatus: see intermediate, v.] I. a. Situated between two extremes; coming between, in either position or degree; intervening; interposed; generally followed by between when the extremes are mentioned: as, an intermediate space; intermediate obstacles.
 Arviragus, the king's son, . . . having escaped with life in the late battle, had employed the intermediate time in privately collecting his father's scattered forces, to put him again into a condition of facing the enemy.
W. Mason, Caractacus, Arg.

These plants are beautifully intermediate between the oxlip and the primrose.
Darwin, Different Forms of Flowers, p. 70.
Intermediate area, a part of an insect's wing between the subcostal and the internal vein.—Intermediate genus, in logic, a genus narrower than the widest and wider than the narrowest class.—Intermediate grade or school, in the system of graded common schools in the United States, the grade or department next above the primary and below the grammar grade. See grammar-school.—Intermediate palpi, the maxillary palpi of those insects in which the outer lobes of the maxillae are palpiform, so that apparently there are three pairs of palpi, two on the maxillae and one on the labium, as in the Cicadellidae and Carabidae.—Intermediate rafter. See rafter.—Intermediate state, in theol., the state or condition of souls after death and before the resurrection of the body; by extension of meaning, the place of departed spirits, as distinct from both earth and heaven; Hades.—Intermediate terms, in arith. and alg., the terms of a progression or proportion between the first and last, which are called the extremes: thus, in the proportion 2:4::6:12, four and six are the intermediate terms.—Intermediate witness or authority, one who witnesses to a thing not by virtue of his own direct knowledge of it, but resting on other testimony.

II. n. 1. In math., a syzygetic function: thus, if U and V are quantities of the same order, and if λ and μ are indeterminate constants, λU + μV is an intermediate of U and V.—2. An intermediary. [Rare.]
 That sea he had read of, though never yet beheld, . . . gladly would he have hailed it as an intermediate betwixt the sky and the earth.
G. Macdonald, Warlock o' Glenwarlock.

intermediately (in-tér-mé-di-át-l), adv. In an intermediate manner; by way of intervention. Johnson.

intermediation (in-tér-mé-di-á-shon), n. [< intermediat(e) + -ion, after mediation.] The act of intermediating, or the state of being intermediate; intervention; interposition; intermediacy.
 An external action being related to a feeling only through an intermediate nervous change, the intermediation cannot well be left out of sight.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 77.

The latter consists of a lateral arch upon each side, united . . . by the intermediation of medial basal elements below.
Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 114.

intermediator (in-tér-mé-di-á-tor), n. [< ML. intermediator, a middleman, < L. inter, between, + LL. mediator, one who mediates: see mediator.] A mediator between parties; any person or thing that acts intermediately.
 In touch, it is the epidermis . . . which is the intermediator between the nerve and the physical agent.
Huxley and Young, Physiol., § 240.

intermedietto (in-tér-mé-di-et-ò), n. [It., dim. of intermedio, an interlude: see intermediosus.] A short interlude.
intermedioust, a. [= F. intermédiaire = Sp. Pg. It. intermedio, intermediate, as a noun, an interlude; < L. intermedius, that is between: see intermedium.] Intermediate.
 There was nothing intermedioust, or that could possibly be thrust in between them.
Outworth, Intellectual System.

intermedium (in-tér-mé-di-um), n.; pl. intermedia (-i). [< L. intermedium, neut. of intermedius, that is between, < inter, between, + medius, middle: see medium.] 1. Intermediate space. [Rare.]—2. That which intervenes; an intervening agent or medium.
 The influence of the elastic intermedium on the voltaic arc.
W. R. Grove, Corr. of Forces, p. 7.

3. In anat. and zool., a median carpal or tarsal bone of the proximal row, so called from its situation between the ulnare and the radiale in the carpus, and between the tibiale and the fibulare in the tarsus. See cuts under carpus and Ichthyosaurus.

intermeti, v. i. [Early mod. E. entremete; appar. < inter- + meti, but perhaps for intermete, old form of intermit, mingle.] To meet together; mingle.
 Upon her cheeks the Lillies and the Rose Did entremete with equal change of hews.
Gascogne, Dan Bartholomew of Bath.

intermell (in-tér-mel'), v. [< ME. intermollen, entermellen, < OF. entremoller, var. of entremesler (F. entremêler), intermix: see intermeddle.] I. trans. To intermix; intermingle.
 II. intrans. To interfere; meddle.
 But they loved echo other passynge well, That no spyer durst with theme intermell.
MS. Lanol. 908, f. 19. (Halliwell)

To . . . boldly intermell With sacred things.
Marsden, Scourge of Villains, Satire, ix. 110.
intermembral (in-tér-mem'brál), a. [< L. inter, between, + membrum, member, + -al.] Existing (as a relation) between the limbs: as, intermembral homology (the homological correspondence between the fore and hind limbs of vertebrates or the corresponding members of other animals).

intermenstrual (in-tér-men'strú-ál), a. [< inter- + menstruus + -al.] Occurring between the menstrual periods.
interment (in-tér'ment), n. [< ME. enterrment, enterrment, < OF. enterrment, < ML. interramentum, burial, < interrare, bury, inter: see inter- and -ment.] The act of interring or depositing in the earth; burial; sepulture.
 Achilles had appetite, & angardly disreist, The Cille for to se, and the solemne farre At the enterrment full triot of the tri prinse.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 910a.

interment in churches of favourite martyrs and apostles was at one time much sought after. Encyc. Brit., IX. 833.
intermention (in-tér-men'shon), v. t. [< inter- + mention.] To mention among others; include in mentioning. [Rare.]
 There is scarce any grievance or complaint come before us in this place wherein we do not find him [Archbishop Laud] intermentioned.
Grindstone, (Latham).

intermesenteric (in-tér-mez-en-ter'ik), a. [< inter- + mesentery + -ic.] Situated between mesenteries; in Actinostion, noting specifically the chambers between the partitions or mesenteries which radiate from the gastric sac to the body-wall. See cut under Actinostion.
 As the mesenteries increase in number, the tentacles grow out as diverticula of the intermesenteric spaces.
Huxley, Encyc. Brit., I. 130.

intermesst, n. [< OF. entremes, F. entremets, something put between, a side dish: see entremets.] An interlude.
 I likewise added my little History of Chalcography, a treatise of the perfection of Paynting . . . with some other intermessts which might divert within doores.
Boelyn, To Lady Sunderland.

intermeti, v. [< ME. intermetten: see intermit.] Same as entormit.
 For Ioue of hir even cristens thei intermettid hem with worldly besynes in helpynge of hir augettis; and sothy that was charite.
Hampole, Prose Treatises (E. E. T. S.), p. 25.

intermetacarpal (in-tér-met-a-kár'pal), a. [< inter- + metacarpus + -al.] Situated between metacarpal bones: as, intermetacarpal ligaments.

intermetatarsal (in-tér-met-a-tár'spal), a. [< inter- + metatarsal.] Situated between metatarsal bones: as, intermetatarsal ligaments.

intermew (in-tér-mū'), v. i. [< inter- + mew². Cf. I.L. intermutatus, interchanged.] To molt while in confinement; said of hawks.

intermezze (in-tér-med'zò), n. [It., < L. intermedius, that is between: see intermedium.] 1. A light and pleasing dramatic entertainment introduced between the acts of a tragedy, comedy, or grand opera; later, a ballet divertissement introduced in like manner.

The theatre itself came to supplement its waning attractions by every species of illegitimate intermeso.
A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., I. 10.

2. In music: (a) A short musical work of light character inserted between the acts of a serious drama or opera; a burlesque or comedy. The intermeso was the germ of the opera bouffe or comic opera. (b) A short composition, without any definite musical form, introduced in an extended musical work, or a piece composed in a similar style.

intermicat (in-tér-mi-kát), v. t. [L. intermicatus, pp. of intermicare, glitter among, < inter, between, among, + micare, glitter, shine; see micra.] To shine between or among. Blount.

intermication (in-tér-mi-ká-shon), n. [< intermicat + -ion.] A shining between or among. Blount.

intermigration (in-tér-mi-grá-shon), n. [< inter + migration.] Reciprocal migration; exchange of persons or populations between districts or countries.

Nay, let us look upon men in several climates, though in the same continent, we shall see a strange variety among them in colour, figure, stature, complexion, humour; and all arising from the difference of the climate, though the continent be but one, as to point of access and mutual intercourse, and possibility of intermigrations.
Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 200.

interminable (in-tér-mi-ná-bl), a. [= F. interminable = Sp. interminable = Pg. interminable = It. interminabile, < L. interminabilis, endless, < in-priv. + terminabilis*, terminable; see terminable.] Without termination; endless; having no limits or limitation; unending; long drawn out; as, interminable space or duration; interminable sufferings.

As if they would confine the Interminable,
And tie him to his own proscript,
Who made our laws to bind us, not himself.
Milton, S. A., I. 307.

The word
Unoccupied, has filled the void so well.
Cresper, Task, v. 556.

=Syn. Limitless, illimitable.
interminableness (in-tér-mi-ná-bl-ness), n. The state of being interminable; endlessness.

The interminableness of those torments which after this life shall incessantly vex the impious.
Annotations on Glanville, etc. (1682), p. 59.

interminably (in-tér-mi-ná-bl-ly), adv. In an interminable manner or extent; endlessly.

interminate (in-tér-mi-nát), a. [= OF. interminé = It. interminato, < L. interminatus, unbounded, < in-priv. + terminatus, bounded; see terminate, a.] Not terminated; unbounded; unlimited; endless.

Within a thicket I repose; when round
I ruffled up false leaves in heaps, and found (Let fall from heaven) a sloop interminate.
Chapman, Odyssey, vii.

The Epicurean hypothesis admits not of such an interminate division of matter, but will have it stop at certain solid corpuses, which, for their not being further divisible, are called atoms, átomoi.
Boyle, Works, III. 601.

interminate decimal, a decimal conceived as carried to an infinity of places; thus, the decimal .010010001 +, where the number of ciphers between successive ones is conceived to increase in arithmetical progression to infinity, is an interminate decimal.

interminate (in-tér-mi-nát), v. t. [< L. interminatus, pp. of interminari, also interminare, threaten, < inter, between, + minari, threaten; see menace.] To menace.

Enough, enough of these interminated judgements, wherewith . . . I might strike your hearts with just horror.
Sp. Hall, Remains, p. 168.

intermination (in-tér-mi-ná-shon), n. [< L. interminatio(n), < L. interminari, threaten; see interminate.] A menace or threat.

It were strange that it should be possible for all men to keep the commandments, and required and exacted of all men with the intermination or threatening of horrid pains.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 430.

intermine (in-tér-mín'), v. t.; pret. and pp. intermined, ppr. intermining. [< inter + mine.] To intersect or penetrate with mines.

Her large oaks so long green, as summer there her bowers
Had set up all the year, her air for health refin'd,
Her earth with allom veins so richly intermin'd.
Dryden, Polyolbion, xxviii. 344.

intermingle (in-tér-ming-gl), v.; pret. and pp. intermingled, ppr. intermingling. [< inter + mingle.] I. trans. To mingle or mix together; mix up; intermix.

I'll intermingle everything he does With Cassio's suit. Shak., Othello, III. 3. 25.

II. intrans. To be mixed or incorporated.

They will not admit any good part to intermingle with them.
Shak., Much Ado, v. 2. 64.

So sportive is the light
Shot through the boughs, it dances as they dance, Shadow and sunshine, intermingling quick.
Cresper, Task, I. 347.

intermingledom (in-tér-ming-gl-dum), n. [< intermingle + -dom.] Something which intermingles. [Humorous.]

The case is filled with bits and ends to ribbons, patterns, and so forth, of all manner of colours, faded and fresh; with intermingledoms of gold-beater's skin plasters for a cut finger.
Richardson, Sir Charles Grandison, VI. 184.

interministerium (in-tér-min-is-tér-ri-um), n. [Formed after the analogy of interregnum; < L. inter, between, + ministerium, ministry; see ministry.] The period between the dissolution of one ministerial government and the formation of another. [Rare.]

The regency is so temporizing and timid, especially in this interministerium, that I am in great apprehension of our having the plague. Walpole, To Mann, July 31, 1743.

intermiset (in-tér-miz), n. [< F. entremise, intervention, interference, < entremettre, pp. entremis, intervene; see intermit.] Interference; interposition. Bacon.

intermisist, n. [< L. intermissus, an intermission, < intermittere, pp. intermisus, intermit; see intermit.] Intermission.

In which short intermisist the King relapseth to his former error.
E. Fennant, Hist. Edw. II. (1680), p. 94.

intermission (in-tér-mish-on), n. [= F. intermission = Pr. intermissio = Sp. intermisión = Pg. intermisão = It. intermissione, < L. intermissio(n), a breaking off, interruption, intermission, < intermittere, pp. intermisus, break off; see intermit.] 1. The act of intermitting, or the state of being intermitted; temporary cessation; pause; as, to labor without intermission; intermission of the pulse.

Thou hast no intermission of thy sin,
But all thy life is a continued ill.
Beau. and Fl., Moll's Tragedy, v. 4.

The spirit of man cannot demean it selfe lively in this body without some recreating intermission of labour, and serious things.
Milton, Church-Government, Pref., II.

2. In med., the temporary cessation or subsidence of a disease, as fever; interval between paroxysms. Intermission is an entire cessation, as distinguished from remission or abatement of fever.

3. Period of cessation; an intervening time; interval; specifically, recess at school.

But, gentle heavens,
Cut short all intermission; front to front Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself.
Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 232.

Times have changed since the jockets and trouters used to draw up on one side of the road, and the pottloots on the other, to salute with bow and courtesy the white neckcloth of the parson or the squire, if it chanced to pass during intermission.
Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 242.

4†. Interference.

No other . . . towns, whom those Countries did no way concern, shall in any part meddle by way of friendly intermission tending to an accord.

Huylin, Hist. Presbyterians, p. 126.
=Syn. 1 and 2. Rest, Suspension, etc. (see stop. n.) interval, interruption, respite.

intermissive (in-tér-mis-iv), a. [< L. intermissus, pp. of intermittere, intermit, + -ive.] Intermitting; coming by fits or after temporary cessations; not continuous.

Wounds will I lend the French, instead of eyes,
To weep their intermissive miseries.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., I. 1. 88.

Make pleasure thy recreation or intermissive relaxation, not thy Diana, life, and profession.
Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., III. 23.

intermit (in-tér-mit'), v.; pret. and pp. intermitted, ppr. intermitting. [< ME. intermetten, entremettre, < OF. entremettre, entremettre, F. entremettre = Pr. entremettre = It. intermettere, < L. intermittere, pp. intermisus, leave off, break off, interrupt, omit, leave an interval, cease, pause, < inter, between, + mittere, send; see mission. Cf. omit, admit, commit, omit, etc.] I. trans. 1. To put a temporary stop to; suspend or delay; interrupt; as, to intermit one's efforts.

Yet once again, my muse, I pardon pray,
Thine intermitted song if I repeat.
Wyatt, Death of the Countess of Pembroke.

If nature should intermit her course, and leave altogether, though it were but for a while, the observation of her own laws, . . . what would become of man himself?
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, I. 8.

Thou intermittest not Thine everlasting journey.
Byron, River by Night.

2†. To omit; pass by or over; neglect.

Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.
Shak., J. C., I. 1. 58.

Wer't your case,
You being young as I am, would you intermit
So fair and sweet occasion?
Webster and Rowley, Cure for a Cuckold, v. 1.

II. intrans. To cease or break off for a time; come to a temporary stop; stop or pause at intervals: as, a spring that intermits once in three minutes; an intermitting pulse.

Why intermits, of what thou hast to do?
Cartwright, Ordinary, iv. 2.

That power [of self-dissolution] by which a sequence of words that naturally is directly consecutive commences, intermits, and reappears at a remote part of the sentence.
De Quincey, Rhetoric.

=Syn. Subside, etc. See abate.
intermittence (in-tér-mit-ens), n. [< intermit(ten) + -ce.] The state or condition of being intermittent; intermitting character or quality; as, the intermittence of a fever, or of a spring.

The intermittence [of the heart] continued until the end of the voyage. B. W. Richardson, Prevent. Med., p. 471.

intermittency (in-tér-mit-én-si), n. Same as intermittence.

Thirteen [tobacco-users] had intermittency of the pulse.
Science, XII. 223.

intermittent (in-tér-mit-ent), a. and n. [= F. intermittent = Sp. intermitente = Pg. It. intermitente, < L. intermit(ten) + -s, ppr. of intermittere, leave off, cease, pause; see intermit.] I. a. Ceasing at intervals; that alternately stops and starts; intermitting; as, an intermittent fever; an intermittent spring.

As to me, I was always steadily of opinion that this disorder was not in its nature intermittent.
Burke, A Regicide Peace, II.

Good water is spoiled and bad water rendered worse by the intermittent system of supply.
E. Frankland, Exper. in Chemistry, p. 557.

Intermittent current. See electric current, under current.—Intermittent earth, fever, etc. See the nouns.—Intermittent gear, any arrangement of geared wheels, as a mutilated gear, or a cog-wheel with a part of the cogs left out, or a rack, pinion, segment, or cam, devised to produce a regular pause or change of speed in the motion of any machine, as in many printing-presses, motors, counters, etc.; an intermittent wheel.—Intermittent or intermitting spring, a spring which flows for a time and then ceases, again begins to flow after an interval, and again ceases, and so on. Such alternations may depend directly on the rainfall; but the name of intermittent spring is more properly applied to a spring whose periods of flowing are pretty regular, and are determined by the fact that the water is conveyed from a reservoir in the interior of a hill or rising ground by a siphon-shaped channel which is able to discharge a greater quantity of water than the reservoir regularly receives. When the cavity is filled till the surface of the water is as high as the bend of the siphon, the water begins and continues to flow till it sinks as low as the inner aperture of the siphon, whereupon the outflow ceases till the water is again as high as the bend of the siphon, and so on.—Intermittent wheel, a general name for all kinds of escape-wheels, counting-wheels in registers and meters, stop-motions in watches, clocks, etc.

II. n. [L. febris intermit(ten) + -s, an intermittent fever.] Intermittent fever.

The symptoms of intermittents are those of a decided and completely marked "cold stage." After this occurs the "hot stage."
Dungham.

intermittently (in-tér-mit-ent-li), adv. In an intermittent manner; by alternate stops and starts.

intermitting (in-tér-mit-ing), p. a. Ceasing for a time; stopping or pausing at intervals.

The vast intervals between the local points from which the intermitting voice ascends proclaim the storm-like pace at which he travels.
De Quincey, Style, II.

Intermitting spring. See intermittent.

intermittingly (in-tér-mit-ing-li), adv. In an intermitting manner; with intermissions; at intervals.

intermix (in-tér-miks'), v. [< inter + mix, after L. intermiscere, mix among, < inter, between, + miscere, mix.] I. trans. To mix together; intermingle.

They sing praises unto God, which they intermix with instruments of music.
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), II. 11.

He doth ever intermix the correction and amendment of his mind with the use and employment thereof.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, I. 97.

II. intrans. To be mixed together; become intermingled.

intermix (in-tér-miks), n. [< intermix + -s.] An intermixing or intermixture. [Rare.]

Just so are the actions or dispositions of the soul, angry or pleasant, lustful or cold, querulous or passionate, according as the body is disposed by the various intermixtures of natural qualities. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 61.

intermixedly (in-tér-mik-sed-li), adv. In an intermixed manner; with intermixture; indiscriminately. Locke.

intermixtion, n. [< intermix + -tion.] Same as intermixture.

The whole congregation of true christen people in this world, which, without intermixture of obstinate heretics, profess the right catholic faith.

Sir T. More, Works, p. 302.

intermixture (in-tér-miks'tyūr), n. [< intermix + -ture, after mixture.] 1. The act of intermixing or intermingling.

But for intermixture of rivers, and contiguity of situation, the islands of Montgomery, Radnor, and Brecknock are partly infolded.

Selden, Illustrations of Drayton's Polyolbion, vi.

2. A mass formed by mixture; a mass of ingredients mixed.—3. Admixture; something additional mingled in a mass.

In this height of impiety there wanted not an intermixture of levity and folly.

Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII.

intermobility (in-tér-mō-bil'i-ti), n. [< inter + mobility.] Capability of moving amongst each other, as the particles of fluids. Brande.

intermodillion (in-tér-mō-dil'yōn), n. [< inter + modillion.] In arch., the space between two modillions.

intermolecular (in-tér-mō-lek'q-lār), a. [< inter + molecule + -ar.] Between molecules; among the smallest particles of a substance: as, "intermolecular action." A. Daniell.

intermontane (in-tér-mon-tān), a. [< L. inter, between, + mont-, a mountain: see mountain.] Lying between mountains: as, intermontane soil. Moose.

intermundane (in-tér-mun'dān), a. [< L. inter, between, + mundus, world: see mundane.] Lying between worlds, or between orb and orb.

The vast distances between these great bodies [sun, planets, and fixed stars] are called intermundane spaces.

Locke, Elem. of Nat. Phil., ii.

intermundian (in-tér-mun'di-ān), a. [< L. intermundia, neut. pl., spaces between the worlds (in which, according to Epicurus, the gods reside), < inter, between, + mundus, world. Cf. intermundane.] Intermundano. Coleridge.

intermural (in-tér-mūr'al), a. [< Pg. intermural, < L. intermuralis, between walls, < inter, between, + murus, a wall: see mural.] Lying between walls.

intermure (in-tér-mūr'), v. t. [< L. inter, between, + murus, a wall. Cf. immure.] To surround with walls; wall in.

A bulwark intermured with walls of brass,
A like can never be, nor ever was.

Ford, Faunt's Memorial.

intermuscular (in-tér-mus'kū-lār), a. [< L. inter, between, + musculus, muscle: see muscular.] Situated between muscles or muscular fibers.—Intermuscular fascia. See fascia.—Intermuscular ligaments. In lower vertebrates, tendinous bands separating myocommata.—Intermuscular septum. (a) An interspace between muscles, or between myotomes.

The interspaces between them appearing as intermuscular septa.

Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 44.

(b) A fascia of white fibrous connective tissue separating two muscles or muscular fibers.

intermusculary (in-tér-mus'kū-lār-i), a. Same as intermuscular. Beverley.

intermutation (in-tér-mū-tā'shōn), n. [< L. L. as if "intermutatio(n), < intermutare, interchange, < L. inter, between, + mutare, change: see mutate, mutation.] Interchange; mutual or reciprocal change.

Mutation is the replacement or substitution of elements, and when the change occurs between vowels we may term it intermutation.

S. S. Haldeman, Etymology, p. 17.

intermutual (in-tér-mū'tū-āl), a. [< inter- + mutual.] Mutual.

A solemn oath religiously they take,
By intermutual vows protesting there
This never to reveal, nor to forsake
So good a cause for danger, hope, or fear.

Daniel, Civil Wars, iii.

intermutually (in-tér-mū'tū-āl-i), adv. Mutually. Daniel, Civil Wars, vii.

intern (in-térn'), a. and n. [Also interno (as F.); < F. interno = Sp. Pg. It. interno, < L. internus, inward, internal, < inter, between, < in, in, within: see in¹, in², inter², interior, etc. Cf. extern.] 1. a. Internal. [Rare.]

Your predicaments, substance and accident, Series extern and intern, with their causes.

B. Jonson, Alchemist, iv. 1.

II. n. An inmate, as of a school; especially, an assistant resident physician or surgeon in a hospital, usually a student or recent graduate, acting in the absence of the attending physician or surgeon. [A recent use, from the French.]

intern (in-térn'), v. t. [< F. interner = Sp. Pg. internar = It. internare, send into the interior, confine in a certain locality, < L. internus, internal: see intern, a.] 1. To send into the interior of a country, as merchandise.—2. To confine within fixed or prescribed limits; specifically, to cause to reside in an interior locality without permission to leave it. [Chiefly used in connection with French subjects, in either sense.]

Calderon is a greater poet than Goethe, but even in the most masterly translation he retains still a Spanish accent, and is accordingly interned (if I may Anglicise a French word) in that provincialism which we call nationality.

Lowell, Wordsworth.

internal (in-tér-nal), a. [= OF. internal; as intern + -al.] 1. Situated or comprised within, or in an inner part or place; inclosed; on the finite side of a bounding surface or line; within the outer boundary of; visceral.

If all depended upon the frame of our bodies, there must be some internal organs within us as far above the organs of brutes as the operations of our minds are above theirs.

Stillingfleet, Works, III. vii.

2. Pertaining to the subject itself, and independent, or relatively so, of other things. Thus, the internal affairs of a country are the affairs of its people with one another. [This is the most proper sense of the word, which no other expresses so well.]

Mine eyes he closed, but open left the cell
Of fancy, my internal sight.

Milton, P. L., viii. 461.

His [Warren Hastings's] internal administration, with all its humbles, gives him a title to be considered as one of the most remarkable men in our history.

Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

The question of internal improvement within the States by the federal government took a new and large development after the war.

T. H. Benton, Thirty Years, I. 3.

3. Inner; pertaining to the mind, or to the relations of the mind to itself. [In this sense the word interior is preferable.]

With our Saviour internal purity is everything. Paley.

Inasmuch as consciousness is the condition of all internal experience whatsoever, we cannot deduce or explain the essential nature of consciousness from other forms of such experience.

G. T. Ladd, Physiol. Psychology, p. 544.

4. In anat. and zool., in general, inner or interior; not superficial; deep-set; away from the surface or next to the axis of the body or of a part: as, the internal carotid or iliac artery; the internal head of the gastrocnemius.—5. In entom.: (a) Nearest the axis of the body: as, the internal angles of the elytra; the internal surfaces of the tibia. (b) On that surface of the tegumentary parts or organs which is opposed to the external or visible surface: as, the internal plicæ of the elytra in certain Coleoptera. [In all senses opposed to external.]—Internal adjunct. an adjunct which belongs to its subject irrespective of other things.

Adjuncts are divided into internal and external. Adjuncts internal are those which inhere in the subject. External, which are ordered and disposed externally about it. A subject receives adjuncts internal into itself: as snow, whiteness; the soul, science or knowledge;—external to itself: as the sight, colour; soldiers, arms, etc.

Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman.

Internal bisector, capsule, carotid, etc. See the nouns.—Internal cause, a cause constituting a part of its effect: the matter or form, according to the peripatetic philosophy. See internal proximate cause, below.—Internal cell, a cell behind the internal vortice distinguished in many Hymenoptera. It is sometimes divided into two.

Internal criticism, judgment concerning the authenticity of a writing based on the contents thereof.—Internal denomination: See denomination.—Internal epicondyle. See epicondyle.—Internal evidence, evidence in regard to a thing or a subject afforded by its intrinsic character or quality.

There is strong internal evidence that he himself wrote the last part of the work.

Ticknor, Span. Lit., I. 144.

Internal forces. See force.—Internal friction. See friction.—Internal gage, gear, good, etc. See the nouns.—Internal intercostals. See intercostal.—Internal multiplication, that kind of multiplication in which the order of the factors is indifferent. See multiplication.—Internal necessity, a necessity springing from the very nature of the subject.—Internal proximate cause, a cause which resides in the same subject in which the effect is produced, as the emanative and syncretic or continent cause of Galen and the physicians.—Internal quantity, in logic, the sum of the marks of a logical term; logical depth or comprehension.—Internal revenue. See revenue.—Internal sense, or inner sense, the impressions produced on the mind by what is within the soul or organism; immediate empirical consciousness; self-consciousness; the apprehension of what passes in the world of thought; reflex perception.

The other fountain from which experience furnisheth the understanding with ideas is the perception of the operations of our own mind within us, as it is employed about the ideas it has got; which operations, when the soul comes to reflect on and consider, do furnish the understanding with another set of ideas, which could not be had from things without; and such are perception, thinking, doubting, believing, reasoning, knowing, willing, and all the different actions of our own minds; which we being conscious of, and observing in ourselves, do from these receive into our understandings as distinct ideas, as we do from bodies affecting our senses. This source of ideas every man has wholly in himself; and though it be not sense, as having nothing to do with external objects, yet it is very like it, and might properly enough be called internal sense. But as I call the other sensation, so I call this reflection.

Locke, Human Understanding, II. i. 4.

Internal or spiritual sense of the Word, according to Swedenborg, the symbolic or spiritual meaning of those parts of the Bible which are written according to the correspondence of all natural things with spiritual principles or things in the spiritual world, and which alone, therefore, he regards as constituting the true Divine Word. These parts are the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, the books of Samuel and Kings, the Psalms and the prophets, the Gospels, and the Apocalypse.—Internal triangle, a small triangular cell, adjoining the inner side of the larger or discoidal triangle, found in the wings of some dragon-flies.—Internal vein, a longitudinal vein, nearly parallel with and close to the inner margin, found in the wings of many Lepidoptera and Hymenoptera.—Internal wheel, an annular cogged wheel, with presentation of the cogs on the interior periphery.—Internal work, in physics. See work.—Policy of internal improvements. See improvement.—Syn. 1 and 2. Inward, Interior, etc. See inner.

internality (in-tér-nal'i-ti), n. [< internal + -ity.] The quality of being internal; the state of being interior; inwardness.

All ligaments (of bivalve shells) are external (in relation to the body of the animal), and their internality or externality is in respect of the hinge-line.

Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 408.

internally (in-tér-nal-i), adv. 1. Interiorly; within or inside of external limits; in an inner part or situation; in or into the interior parts: as, to take or administer medicine internally.—2. With regard to internal affairs.

There never was seen so strong a government internally as that of the French municipalities.

Burke, On French Affairs.

3. Inwardly; spiritually.

We are symbolically in the sacrament, and by faith and the Spirit of God internally united to Christ. Jer. Taylor.

internasal (in-tér-nā'si-āl), a. [< L. inter, between, + naris, nostrils: see nasal.] Situated between or separating the nostrils; internasal.

internasal (in-tér-nā'si-āl), a. [< L. inter, between, + naris, nose: see nasal.] Situated between nasal parts or passages, or dividing them right and left.

A thin vertical lamella—the internasal septum.
Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 546.

internation (in-tér-nā'shōn), n. [< Sp. internacion; as intern + -ation.] The act of interning; internment.

Importations and internations which are made from the 1st of April to the date on which this ordinance takes effect, through the frontier custom-house of Paso del Norte, shall be subjected to the provisions in the tariff laws of November 8, 1890.

U. S. Cons. Rep., No. 584 (1896), p. 282.

international (in-tér-nash'ōn-āl), a. and n. [= F. international = Sp. Pg. internacional = It. internazionale (all after E.); as inter- + national.] I. a. 1. Pertaining to or mutually affecting two or more nations; concerning different nations in common: as, an international exhibition; international law; international relations.

With regard to the political quality of the persons whose conduct is the object of the law. These may, on any given occasion, be considered either as members of the same state, or as members of different states: in the first case, the law may be referred to the head of internal, in the second case, to that of international jurisprudence. . . . The word international, it must be acknowledged, is a new one; though, it is hoped, sufficiently analogous and intelligible. It is calculated to express, in a more significant way, the branch of law which goes commonly under the name of the law of nations: an appellation so uncharacteristic that, were it not for the force of custom, it would seem rather to refer to international jurisprudence. The Chancellor D'Aguesseau has already made, I find, a similar remark: he says that what is commonly called droit des gens ought rather to be termed droit entre les gens.

Bentham, Introd. to Principles of Morals, xvii. 29, note.

2. [cap.] Of or pertaining to the society called the International.

The essence of the International movement was a federal association, a combination of movements in part already begun, with the social end in view of raising the operatives up over against the employers and capitalists.

Woolsey, Communism and Socialism, p. 133.

International alphabet. See More's alphabet, under alphabet.—International copyright. See copyright.—International embargo. See embargo.—1.—International law, the law of nations; those maxims or rules which independent political societies or states observe, or ought to observe, in their conduct toward one another; "the system of rules which regulates the intercourse and determines the rights and obligations of sovereign states" (Minor). More specifically, international law is the aggregate of the rules which Christian states acknowledge as obligatory in their relations to each other's subjects. The rules also which they unite to impose on their subjects, respectively, for the treatment of one another, are included here, as being in the end rules of action for the states themselves.

The classical expression for international law is Jus Fœdiale, or the law of negotiation and diplomacy.

Maine, Ancient Law, p. 58.

International law, as we have viewed it, is a system of rules adopted by the free choice of certain nations for the purpose of governing their intercourse with each other, and not inconsistent with the principles of natural justice. Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, § 203.

Private international law, the rules by which the laws of one state are recognized and applied, in the courts of another, to civil or private rights of persons, or of property within the former.

It is the province of private international law to decide which of two conflicting laws of different territories is to be applied in the decision of cases; and for this reason this branch is sometimes called the conflict of laws. It is called private, because it is concerned with the private rights and relations of individuals. Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, § 69.

II. n. [cap.] 1. A society (in full, "the International Workingmen's Association"), formed in London in 1864, designed to unite the working classes of all countries in promoting social and industrial reform by political means. Its chief aims were: (1) the subordination of capital to labor through the transference of industrial enterprises from the capitalists to bodies of workmen; (2) the encouragement of men on strike by gifts of money, or by preventing laborers of one locality from migrating to another when the laborers in the latter are on strike; (3) the overthrow of all laws, customs, and privileges considered hostile to the working classes, and the encouragement of whatever aids them, as the shortening of hours of labor, free public education, etc.; (4) the end of all wars. By 1867 the International had become a powerful organization, though strenuously opposed by the continental European governments; but its manifestation in 1872 of sympathy with the doings of the Paris Commune in the preceding year, and internal dissensions, caused a great loss of reputation and strength.

Of the International Marx was the inspiring and controlling head from the beginning; and the German social democracy, though originated by Lassalle, before long fell under Marx's influence. Encyc. Brit., XXII, 214.

2. A member of the International, or a believer in its principles and methods.

Internationalism (in-tér-nash'ón-gl-izm), n. [< international + -ism.] The principles, doctrine, or theory advocated by Internationalists.

Internationalist (in-tér-nash'ón-gl-ist), n. [< international + -ist.] 1. A student, expounder, or upholder of international law.

In the days of Elizabeth, the publicists of England, both as constitutionalists and internationalists, in so far as international law was then understood, had nothing to fear from a comparison with their continental rivals. North British Rev.

2. [cap.] A member of or a believer in the International.

internationalize (in-tér-nash'ón-gl-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. internationalized, ppr. internationalizing. [< international + -ize.] To make international; cause to affect the mutual relations of two or more countries; as, to internationalize a war.

internationally (in-tér-nash'ón-gl-i), adv. With reference to the mutual relations or interests of nations; from an international point of view.

Internationally speaking, they may be looked upon as export duties. J. S. Mill.

interne, n. Same as intern.

internecary (in-tér-né'shi-á-ri), a. [< L. internecium, slaughter (see intersecion), + -ary.] Same as internecine. [Rare.]

internecinal (in-tér-né'shi-nál), a. [< internecine + -al.] Same as internecine. [Rare.]

internecine (in-tér-né'shi-n), a. [< L. internecinus, another reading of internecivus, deadly, murderous: see intersecive.] Destructive; deadly; accompanied with much slaughter.

Th' Egyptians worshipped dogs, and for Their faith made internecine war. S. Butler, Hudibras, I. i. 772.

intersecion (in-tér-né'shi-n), n. [< L. internecio(n-), internecio(n-), slaughter, destruction, < internecare, slaughter, kill, < inter, between, + necare, kill.] General slaughter or destruction. [Rare.]

The number of internecions and slaughters would exceed all arithmetical calculation. Str. M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 215.

internecive (in-tér-né'shi-v), a. [< L. internecivus, deadly, destructive, < internecare, kill: see internecion.] Internecine. [Rare.]

intersecion (in-tér-né'shi-n), n. [< L. internecio(n-), bind together, < inter, between, + necere, tie, bind. Cf. connecion, etc.] Reciprocal connection; interrelation.

He coupled his own goodness and man's evils by so admirable an intersecion that ev'n the worst parts of the chain drew some good after them. W. Montague, Devoute Essays, II. iv. 1.

internesural (in-tér-nú'ral), a. and n. [< inter + neural.] 1. In anat., situated between the neural spines or spinous processes of successive vertebrae.—Internesural spine, in ichth., one of the spiniform bones more or less interspersed between the neural spines, and usually connecting with rays or spines of the dorsal fin or fins of fishes. They are generally dagger-shaped, and are plunged, as it were, up to the hilt in the flesh between the neural spines. See interhemal.

II. n. An internesural part or formation, as in a fish.

Groups of cartilaginous parts representing internesurales. Beau, Proc. U. S. Nat. Mus., 1887, p. 682.

A series of flat spines . . . called internesurales. Encyc. Brit., XII, 640.

internity (in-tér-ní-tí), n. [= It. internità, < L. internus, inner, internal: see intern and -ity.] The state or condition of being internal; inwardness. [Rare.]

The intensity of His ever living light kindled up an extensity of corporeal irradiation. Brooke, Fool of Quality, II. 249.

internment (in-tér-n'ment), n. [< intern + -ment.] The state or condition of being interned; confinement, as of prisoners of war, in the interior of a country.

internodal (in-tér-nó'dál), a. [< internode + -al.] 1. Of, pertaining to, or situated on an internode, as a flower-stalk proceeding from the intermediate space of a branch between two leaves.—2. Constituting or including an internode, as the space between two nodes or joints in a plant or an animal.

internode (in-tér-nód), n. [= F. entrenœud = Sp. It. internodio, < L. internodium, the space between two knots or joints, < inter, between, + nodus, a knot, joint: see node.] A part or space between two knots or joints. (a) In bot., the space which intervenes between two nodes or leaf-joints in a stem. (b) In anat.: (1) The continuity of a part, as a bone, between two nodes or joints. (2) Especially, one of the phalangeal bones of the fingers or toes, as extending between the nodes or joints of the digits.

The individual bones of the fingers and thumb are termed internodes. F. Warner, Physical Expression, p. 155.

(c) In zool., the part of a jointed stem between any two joints, as of a polyp, a polyzoon, etc.

internodia, n. Plural of internodium.

internodial (in-tér-nó'di-ál), a. [< L. internodium, internode, + -al.] Same as internodal.

But the internodial parts of vegetables, or spaces between the joints, are contrived with more uncertainty. Str. T. Browne, Garden of Cyrus, iii.

internodium (in-tér-nó'di-um), n.; pl. internodia (-â). [NL.: see internode.] In anat. and zool., an internode; specifically, one of the phalanges or bones of a finger or toe.

internomedial (in-tér-nó-mé'di-ál), a. [< L. internus, inner, internal, + (LL.) medialis, middle: see medial.] Same as internomedian.

internomedian (in-tér-nó-mé'di-án), a. [< L. internus, inner, internal, + medianus, middle: see median.] In entom., within the median line or vein; between the median and the internal vein.

Internomedian cell, a basal cell of the wing, between the median and internal veins, distinguished in the Hymenoptera. Also called submedian cell.—Internomedian vein or nervure, a strong longitudinal vein in the tegmina of orthopterous insects, running from the base obliquely or in a curve to the posterior margin beyond the middle, and limiting the anal or posterior area.—Internomedian veinlet, in Lepidoptera, a longitudinal veinlet between the internal and the median vein, found in a few butterflies.

inter nos (in-tér nôs). [L.: inter, between, among; nos, acc. pl. of ego, I: see I.] Between ourselves; a parenthetical phrase implying that something is said in confidence. In French form, entre nous.

internuclear (in-tér-nú'klé-är), a. [< inter + nucleus + -ar.] Situated between or among nuclei.

By a parity of reasoning, muscular tissue may also be considered a cell aggregate, in which the inter-nuclear substance has become converted into striated muscle. Huxley, Crayfish, p. 190.

internuncial (in-tér-nun'shál), a. [< internuncio, internuncius, + -al.] 1. Of or belonging to an internuncio or his office.—2. In physiol., pertaining to, resembling, or possessing the function of the nervous system as communicating between different parts of the body.

It is more probable that "Kleinberg's fibres" are solely internuncial in function, and therefore the primary form of nerve. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 63.

internuncio (in-tér-nun'shi-ô), n. [Formerly also internuncio; < L. internuncius, now internuncio, < L. internuntius, less prop. internuncius, a messenger, mediator: see internuncius.] 1.

An official representative or ambassador of the papacy at a minor court, in distinction from a nuncio, who is its representative at a more important court.

The internuncio at Brussels proceeded to censure those that were for it, as enemies to the papal authority. Sp. Burnet, Hist. Own Times, an. 1662.

Hence—2. A messenger between two parties. [Rare.]

They only are the internuncios or the go-betweens of this trim devis'd mummy. Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

internuncius (in-tér-nun'shi-us), n. [F. internonce = Sp. Pg. internuncio = It. internuncio, formerly internuncio; < L. internuntius, less prop. internuncius, a messenger between two parties, a mediator, < inter, between, + nuntius, a messenger: see nuncio.] Same as internuncio.

interoceanic (in-tér-ô-shé-an'ik), a. [< inter + ocean + -ic.] Between oceans; extending from one ocean to another: as, interoceanic traffic; an interoceanic canal or railroad.

Difficulties concerning interoceanic transit through Nicaragua are in course of amicable adjustment. London, in Raymond, p. 417.

interocular (in-tér-ok'ü-lär), a. [< L. inter, between, + oculus, eye.] Situated between the eyes, as the antennæ of some insects; interorbital.

interolivary (in-tér-ol'i-vä-ri), a. [< inter + olivary.] Lying between the olivary bodies of the brain.

interopercle (in-tér-ô-pér'kl), n. Same as interoperculum.

interopercula, n. Plural of interoperculum.

interopercular (in-tér-ô-pér'kü-lär), a. [< interoperculum + -ar.] Situated among opercular bones in the gill-cover of a fish; having the character of an interoperculum; pertaining to an interoperculum: as, an interopercular bone.

Interoperculum (in-tér-ô-pér'kü-lum), n.; pl. interopercula (-lä). [< inter + operculum.] In ichth., one of the four bones of which a teleost fish's gill-cover usually consists. It lies behind the angle of the jaw, is more or less covered by the preoperculum, and generally has a posterior process interposed between the preoperculum in front and the suboperculum and operculum behind. In some types it is rudimentary or lost. Also interopercle. See cut under teleost.

interoptic (in-tér-op'tik), a. [< NL. interopticus, < L. inter, between, + NL. opticus, optic (lobe).] Situated between the optic lobes of the brain: applied to a lobe of the brain of some reptiles.

interopticus (in-tér-op'ti-kus), n.; pl. interoptici (-â). [NL.: see interoptical.] The interoptie lobe of the brain of some reptiles.

interorbiseptha (in-tér-ôr-bi-sép'tum), n.; pl. interorbiseptha (-tâ). [< L. inter, between, + orbis, orb (orbit), + septum, partition.] An interorbital septum; a partition between the right and left orbits of the eyes.

interorbital (in-tér-ôr-bi-täl), a. [< inter + orbit + -al.] In anat. and zool., situated between the orbits of the eyes: as, the interorbital septum. See cut under Esox.—Interorbital foramen. See foramen.

interosculant (in-tér-os'kü-lant), a. [< inter + osculant.] Interosculating; connecting by or as if by osculation. The epithet is sometimes applied to a genus or family connecting two groups or families of plants or animals by partaking somewhat of the characters of each.

interosculate (in-tér-os'kü-lät), v. t.; pret. and pp. interosculated, ppr. interosculating. [< inter + osculate.] To form a connecting-link between two or more objects; be interosculant.

interosculation (in-tér-os'kü-lä'shôn), n. [< interosculate + -ion.] Interconnection by or as if by osculation.

Without allowing nearly enough for the intermediate stages and the infinite interosculation of emotional, intellectual, and associational disturbances. G. Allen, Mind, XII, 121.

interosseal (in-tér-os'ê-ál), a. Same as interosseous. [Rare.]

interossei, n. Plural of interosseus.

interosseous (in-tér-os'ê-us), a. [= F. interosseux = It. interosseo, < NL. interosaeus, < L. inter, between, + os (oss-), bone: see ossous.] Situated between two bones, or among several bones: specifically applied to different ligaments, as the various intercarpal ligaments, the radio-ulnar and the tibiofibular ligaments, and others.—Interosseous cartilage, ganglion, etc. See the nouns.—Interosseous muscle. Same as interosseus.—Interosseous saw, a fine thin saw with which surgeons work between bones, as those of the forearm, the ribs, etc.

interosseus (in-tér-os'ê-us), n.; pl. interossei (-â). [NL.: see interosseous.] An interosse-

Portion of Stem of Ayenia, showing a, internode.

ous muscle; a muscle lying in an interosseous space, as between the metacarpal bones of the hand or the metatarsal bones of the foot. Those which appear upon the back of the hand or instep of the foot are called dorsal interossei or dorsales; those appearing on the palm and sole are respectively called palmar and plantar interossei or palmares and plantales. In man there are 7 interossei of the hand, 4 dorsal and 3 palmar. They all arise from the sides of the metacarpals, and are inserted into the bases of the proximal phalanges and into the aponeuroses of the extensor tendons. They flex the proximal phalanges on the metacarpal bones, and extend the second and third phalanges. The dorsal interossei abduct the fingers from an imaginary line drawn through the middle finger, and the palmar adduct them toward the same. There are in man the same number of both dorsal and plantar interossei of the foot, arranged like those of the hand. In birds there are two muscles of the manus, called interossei palmaris and interossei dorsalis, which respectively flex and extend the phalanges of the longest digit.

interpage (in-tér-páj'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interpaged, ppr. interpaging. [< inter- + page¹.] 1. To insert intermediate pages in.—2. To insert on intermediate pages.

"Troilus and Cressida" is interpaged between histories and tragedies. Athenaeum, No. 3187, p. 707.

interpale (in-tér-pál'), v. t. [< inter- + pale¹.] To divide by pales, as in horadry; arrange with vertical divisions.

He wore upon his head a diadem of purple interpaled with white. J. Brenda, tr. of Quintus Curtius, fol. 161.

interpapillary (in-tér-pap'i-lá-ri), a. [< inter- + papilla + -ary.] Lying or occurring between the papillae; as, the interpapillary portion of the epidermis (that which lies between the papillae of the corium).

interparenchymal (in-tér-pa-réng'ki-mal), a. [< inter- + parenchyma + -al.] Situated in the parenchyma of an infusorian, as a vacuole. S. Kent.

interparietal (in-tér-pá-ri-o-tal), a. and n. [< inter- + parietal.] I. a. Situated between the right and left parietal bones of the skull; as, the interparietal suture.—Interparietal bone, a membrane bone lying between the supraoccipital and the parietal bones. It is peculiar to mammals. In man it coossifies with the rest of the occipital, and forms the uppermost part of the supraoccipital. It is occasionally separate, as in the Peruvian mummies, where it has been termed os Inca. It is frequently separate in mammals other than man. The bone in fishes so called by some old authors is the supraoccipital. See cut under Pisces.—Interparietal crest. Same as parietal crest (which see, under crest).

II. n. In ichth., the median bone of the posterior part of the roof of the skull, now generally called supraoccipital. See cut under parasphenoid.

interparietale (in-tér-pá-ri-e-tá'lé), n.; pl. interparietalia (-li-á). [NL.: see interparietal.] An interparietal bone.

interpariet (in-tér-pá-ri), n. Same as enterpariet.
interparietal (in-tér-pá-ri), n. [< inter- + pariet.] A stop or pause between; a temporary cessation.

Outwardly these inward hates agreed,
Giving an interpariet to pride and spite;
Which breath'd but to break out with greater might. Daniel, Civil Wars, vi.

interpel (in-tér-pél'), v. t. [< OF. entrepeler, interrupt: see interpel. Cf. appeal.] 1. Same as interpel.—2. To intercede with.

Here one of us began to interpel
Old Mnemon. Dr. H. More, Psychosia, iii. 31.

interpeduncular (in-tér-pé-dung'kü-lär), a. [< inter- + pedunculus + -ar².] Situated between peduncles; intercrural: specifically applied in anatomy to the space or area between the right and left crura cerebri.

interpelt (in-tér-pél'), v. t. [< F. interpellator, OF. interpellor, entrepeler (> E. interpel) = Sp. interpelar = Pg. interpellar = It. interpellare, < L. interpellare, interrupt in speaking, disturb, address, < inter, between, + pellere, drive, urge; see appeal, compel, expel, impel, propel, repel, etc.] To interrupt; break in upon; distract.

Why should my tongue or pen Presume to interpelt that fulness? B. Jonson, Underwoods, cii.

No more now, for I am interpelted by many Businesses. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 1.

interpellate (in-tér-pel'át), v. t.; pret. and pp. interpellated, ppr. interpellating. [< L. interpellatus, pp. of interpellare, interrupt in speaking; see interpel.] To address with a question; especially, to question formally or publicly; demand an answer or explanation from: used originally in connection with French legislative proceedings: as, the ministry were interpellated with regard to their intentions.

In the Chamber the Government was angrily interpellated as to the Convention between Italy, Switzerland, and Germany, which was described as highly detrimental to the interests of the Empire. Lowe, Bismarck, I. 492.

interpellation (in-tér-pe-lá'shqn), n. [< F. interpellation = Sp. interpelacion = Pg. interpellacio = It. interpellazione, < L. interpellatio(n-), an interruption, < interpellare, interrupt: see interpel.] 1. The act of interpellating, or of interrupting or interfering by speech; verbal interruption.

Good sir, I crave pardon,
If I so chance to break that golden twist
You spin by rude interpellation. Dr. H. More, Psychosia, ii. 44.

2. The act of interceding; interposition by entreaty or request; solicitation.

"Praying without ceasing," St. Paul calls it; that is, with continual addresses, frequent interpellations, never ceasing renewing the request till I obtain my desire. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 231.

He was to mention the urgent interpellations made to him by the electors and princes of the Empire in their recent embassy. Molloy, Dutch Republic, II. 269.

3. A summons; a citation.

In all extrajudicial acts one citation, monition, or extrajudicial interpellation is sufficient. Ayliffe, Paragon.

4. A question put by a member of a legislative assembly to a minister or member of the government: used originally with reference to proceedings in the French legislature.

Interpellation followed upon interpellation, and Rignor Mancini could only answer that the Red Sea expedition was a first step in the way to that colonial expansion which the country had shown its desire to achieve. Contemporary Rev. (trans.), LI. 289.

interpenetrate (in-tér-pen-é-trát), v.; pret. and pp. interpenetrated, ppr. interpenetrating. [< inter- + penetrate.] I. trans. 1. To penetrate or pass into reciprocally; unite with by mutual penetration.

We feel that in a work of art [classical poetry] thought and language, idea and form, so interpenetrate each other that the impression produced is a result of substance and expression subtly interblended. J. Caird.

2. To penetrate between or among (the component parts of a body or substance); pass into or within the different parts of (a body); penetrate in various directions or throughout.

II. intrans. To penetrate mutually; become united by mutual penetration.

interpenetration (in-tér-pen-é-trá'shqn), n. [< interpenetrate + -ion.] 1. The act of interpenetrating; reciprocal or mutual penetration; the occupation of the same space by the parts of two bodies.

We meet as water meets water, or as two currents of air mix, with perfect diffusion and interpenetration of nature. Emerson, Compensation.

The view of Kant that matter is not absolutely impenetrable, and that chemical union consists in the interpenetration of the constituents.

C. S. Peirce, Amer. Jour. Sci., Jan., 1863.

2. In late medieval arch., from the end of the fifteenth century, the system of continuing moldings which meet each other independently past the intersection, and generally of considering the identity of various architectural members as preserved after one has come to coincide partly with another or to be swallowed up in it, so that, for instance, the angles and edges of a square member which has become united with a member having a curved surface are shown on the curved surface as if projecting through it. Interpenetration is characteristic of the so-called continuous impost. (See impost.) It is inartistic, and contrary to sound architectural principles, as purporting to represent a false method of construction.

interpenetrative (in-tér-pen-é-trá-tiv), a. [< interpenetrate + -ive.] Reciprocally penetrating; mutually penetrative.

interpersonal (in-tér-pér'son-al), a. [< inter- + person + -al.] Existing or occurring between individuals. [Rare.]

A very pleasant chatty tea with the Owens, talking over phrenology, mesmerism, and interpersonal influence. Caroline Fox, Journal, p. 171.

interpetalary (in-tér-pet'a-lá-ri), a. [< inter- + petal + -ary.] In bot., between the petals. Thomas, Med. Dict. [Rare.]

interpetaloid (in-tér-pet'a-lóid), a. [< inter- + petal + -oid.] Intervening between petaloid parts, as of an echinoderm.

The interpetaloid spaces [on parts of recent and fossil crinoids] are plain, and devoid of sculpture. Science, IV. 223.

interpetiolar (in-tér-pet'i-ó-lär), a. [< inter- + petiole + -ar².] In bot., situated between the petioles.

interphalangeal (in-tér-fá-lan'jé-al), a. [< inter- + phalanx (-ang-) + -al.] Situated between any two successive phalanges of a finger or toe; nodal, of a digit: as, an interphalangeal articulation (one of the joints of a finger or toe).

interpilaster (in-tér-pi-lás'tér), n. [< inter- + pilaster.] In arch., the interval between two pilasters.

interplace (in-tér-plás'), v. t. [< inter- + place.] To place between or among.

Your nature, virtue, happy birth,
Have therein highly interplaced your name,
You may not run the least course of neglect. Daniel, To Lady Anne Clifford.

interplanetary (in-tér-plan'et-á-ri), a. [< inter- + planet + -ary¹.] Situated between the planets; within the solar system, but not within the atmosphere of the sun or any planet.

Light moves in interplanetary spaces with a speed of nearly 186,000 miles per second. Tait, Light, § 64.

interplay (in-tér-plá), n. [< inter- + play.] Reciprocal action or influence; interchange of action and reaction, as between the parts of a machine; concurrent operation or procedure; interaction.

Indicating rhythms merely with the interplay of strokes between hands and thighs, feet and floor, is capable of a considerable degree of complexity.

S. Lawler, Sci. of Eng. Verse, p. 247.

The interplay of manly affection in the two admirals. The Century, XXVI. 291.

interplead (in-tér-pléd'), v. [Formerly also enterplead; < inter- + plead¹.] I. intrans. In law, to litigate with each other, in order to determine who is the rightful claimant. See interpleader².

Two several persons being found heirs to land by two several officers in one county, the king is brought in doubt whether livery ought to be made; and therefore, before livery be made to either, they must interplead; that is, try between themselves who is the right heir. Cowell.

II. trans. In law, to cause to litigate with each other.

interpleader¹ (in-tér-plé'dér), n. [< interplead + -er¹.] A party who interpleads.

interpleader² (in-tér-plé'dér), n. [Formerly also enterpleader; < inter- + pleader², a plea, < OF. plaidier, plead, inf. as a noun; see plead.]

1. A suit by which a person having property belonging to or subject to the claim of others, but uncertain which of adverse claimants is entitled, brings the adverse claimants before the court, that the right may be determined and himself exonerated: as, a bill of interpleader. The court usually allows him to surrender the property or pay the debt into the custody of the law, and be discharged, and allows the claimants to interplead—that is, to proceed to trial against each other.

2. The process of trial between adverse claimants in such a case: as, the court awarded an interpleader.

interpledge (in-tér-plej'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interpledged, ppr. interpledging. [< inter- + pledge.] To give and take as a mutual pledge.

In all distress of various courts and war,
We interpledge and bind each other's heart. Sir W. Davenant, Gondibert, l. 5.

interpleural (in-tér-plü'ral), a. [< inter- + pleura + -al.] Situated between the right and left pleurae or pleural cavities.—Interpleural space, the mediastinum.

A space is left between them [the right and left pleura] extending from the sternum to the spine. . . . This interval is called by anatomists the interpleural space or the mediastinum. Holden, Anat. (1885), p. 151.

inter pocula (in-tér pok'ü-lä), [L.: inter, between, among; pocula, acc. pl. of poculum, a cup; see poculent.] Literally, between cups; during a drinking-bout.

interpunct (in-tér-point'), v. t. [< inter- + punct.] To distinguish by stops or marks; punctuate.

Her heart commands her words should pass out first,
And then her sighs should interpunct her words. Daniel, Civil Wars, li.

interpolable (in-tér-pó-lá-bl), a. [*< L. as if interpolabilis, < interpolare, interpolate: see interpolate.] Capable of being interpolated or inserted; suitable for interpolation. De Morgan.

interpolar (in-tér-pó-lär), a. [< inter- + pole² + -ar².] Situated between or connecting the poles, as of a galvanic battery.

Connect them by a certain interpolar wire of which the wire of a galvanometer forms a part.

J. Troubridge, New Physics, p. 216.

interpolarity (in-tér-pó-lä-ri), a. [< interpolate (ate) + -ary.] Pertaining to interpolation.—Interpolarity function. See function.

interpolate (in-tér-pó-lát), v. t.; pret. and pp. interpolated, ppr. interpolating. [< L. interpolatus, pp. of interpolare (> It. interpolare = Sp. Pg. Pr. interpolare = F. interpoler), polish, furnish, or dress up, corrupt, < interpolis, also interpolis, dressed up, altered in form or appearance, falsified, < inter, between, + polire, polish: see polish.] 1. To insert in a writing; introduce, as a word or phrase not in the original text; especially, to foist in; introduce surreptitiously, as what is spurious or unauthorized.

The Athenians were put in possession of Salamis by another law, which was cited by Solon, or, as some think, interpolated by him for that purpose. Pope.

I should give here what I have thus found so strangely interpolated among the fragmentary remains of the Returns sent up by the old Gilds.

T. Smith, English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 134, note.

2. To alter, as a book or manuscript, by insertion of new matter; introduce new words or phrases into; especially, to corrupt or vitiate by spurious insertions or additions.

How strangely Ignatius is mangled and interpolated you may see by the vast difference of all copies and editions, Greek and Latin.

Bp. Barine, Romains, p. 116.

3. In math. and physics, to introduce, in a series of numbers or observations (one or more intermediate terms), in accordance with the law of the series; make the necessary interpolations in: as, to interpolate a number or a table of numbers.

The word interpolate has been adopted in analysis to denote primarily the interposing of missing terms in a series of quantities supposed subject to a determinate law of magnitude, but secondarily and more generally to denote the calculating, under some hypothesis of law or continuity, of any term of a series from the values of other terms supposed given.

Boole, Finite Differences (2d ed.).

4. To carry on with intermissions; interrupt or discontinue for a time.

The alluvion of the sea upon these rocks might be eternally continued, but interpolated.

Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 96.

5. To interpose; place in an intermediate position.

It is quite certain that one can pass from a high state of pleasure to one of intense pain without any interpolated neutral feeling.

G. T. Ladd, Psychol. Psychology, p. 610.

interpolation (in-tér-pô-là'shən), n. [= F. interpolation = Pr. interpolacio = Sp. interpolacion = Pg. interpolação = It. interpolazione, < L. interpolatio (n.), a dressing up, alteration, < interpolare, dress up, alter: see interpolate.] 1. The act of interpolating; the insertion of new words or expressions in a book or manuscript; especially, the falsification of a text by spurious or unauthorized insertions.—2. That which is interpolated; new or (especially) spurious matter inserted; an unannounced or unauthorized insertion in a text.

Sir, I beseech you to accept or pardon these trifling interpolations which I have presumed to send you: not that they add any thing to your work, but testify the disposition I have to serve you.

Erskyn, To Mr. Aubrey, Feb. 1675.

3. In math., the process of finding, from the given values of a function for certain values of the variable, its approximate value for an intermediate value of the variable. The formulae ordinarily used for this purpose assume that the function is expressible as a polynomial in powers of the variable of the lowest order consistent with the given values.

interpolator (in-tér-pô-là-tôr), n. [L. interpolator, one who corrupts or spoils, < L. interpolare, dress up, alter, spoil: see interpolate.] One who interpolates; one who inserts in a book or manuscript new or spurious words or passages; one who adds something deceptively or without authority to an original text.

interpolish (in-tér-pol'ish), v. t. [< inter- + polish, after L. interpolare, polish, furbish, or dress up: see interpolate.] To furbish up, as a writing; improve by interpolation or alteration.

All this will not fadge, though it be cunningly interpolated by some second hand with crooks and emendations.

Milton, Church-Government, l. 6.

interpolity (in-tér-pol'i-ti), n. [< inter- + polity.] Intercourse between communities or countries; interchange of citizenship. [Rare.]

An absolute sermon upon emigration, and the transplanting and interpolity of our species.

Bulwer, Cartons, xlii. 1.

interponer (in-tér-pôn'), v. t. [= Sp. interponer = Pg. interponer = It. interporre, < L. interponere, put, lay, or set between, < inter, between, + ponere, put, set, place: see poner. Cf. interpose.] To set or insert between; interpose.

Porphyrius interposed it (the Psyche or soul) betwixt the Father and the Son, as a middle between both.

Cudworth, Intellectual System.

interponent (in-tér-pô'nent), n. [< L. interponens (-t-), pp. of interponere, put between: see interpone.] One who or that which interposes or interposes.

Lop down these interponents that withstand
The passage to our throne.

Heywood, Rape of Lucrece.

interportal (in-tér-pôr'tal), a. [< inter- + port + -al.] Existing between ports; specifically, carried on between ports of the same country or region.

The total exports by sea exceeded 57 millions, of which 32 millions represent interportal, and 25 millions foreign trade.

Encyc. Brit., xlii. 764.

(Owing to the competition by foreigners in the interportal trade of the East, it is the cargo steamers which "rule the freight market."

The Engineer, LXVI. 517.

interposai (in-tér-pô'zai), n. [< interpose + -al.] The act of interposing; interposition.

How quickly all our designs and measures, at his [God's] interposai, vanish into nothing.

H. Blair, Works, II. xiii.

interpose (in-tér-pôz'), v.; pret. and pp. interponere, pp. interponing. [< OF. interposer, entreposer, F. interposer, < L. inter, between, + F. ponere, place: see inter- and poner, and cf. interpone.] 1. trans. 1. To place between; cause to intervene: as, to interpose an opaque body between a light and the eye.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves Betwixt your eyes and night? Shak., J. C., II. 1, 96.

Were not this banke interposed like a bulwark betwixt the Citty and the Sea, the waves would utterly overthrow and deface the Citty.

Coryat, Crudities, I. 199.

The sun, though so near, is never seen, but a thick screen of watery clouds is constantly interposed, and yet the heat is such that Fahrenheit's thermometer rises to 100° in the shade.

Bruce, Source of the Nile, II. 495.

2. To place between or among; intrude; present as an obstruction, interruption, or inconvenience, or for succor, relief, or the adjustment of differences: as, the emperor interposed his aid or services to reconcile the contending parties.

The Queen interposed her Authority, and would not suffer it to be enacted.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 345.

You, Sir, who listen but interpose no word,
Ask yourself, had you borne a halting thus?

Browning, King and Book, I. 89.

II. intrans. 1. To come between other things; assume an intervening position or relation; stand in the way.

Clouds interpose, waves roar, and winds arise.

Pope, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 246.

2. To step in between parties at variance; interfere; mediate: as, the prince interposed and made peace.

A stout seaman who had interposed and saved the Duke from perishing by a fire-ship in the late war.

Evelyn, Diary, May 25, 1673.

With clashing falchions now the chiefs had clod'd,
But each brave Ajax heard, and interposed.

Pope, Iliad, xvii. 601.

3. To put in or make a remark by way of interruption.

The office of this goddess consisted in interposing, like the Roman tribunes, with an "I forbid it" in all courses of constant and perpetual folly.

Bacon, Political Fables, v., Expl.

=Syn. 2. Interpose, Interferer, Intermeddle, Intervene. To intermeddle is both unwelcome and unpertinent. To interfere is unwelcome to the one interfered with, and often but not necessarily improper: as, the court interfered to prevent further injustice. In this sentence interposed would have been a very proper word to express the benevolence and helpfulness of the action of the court, while interfere suggests the chocking of what was going on and the balking of selfish plans. Interpose in its personal application is generally used in a good sense. Interfere may be used of a person or of a thing; intermeddle only of a person or the act of a person. Intervene is used only of things literally or figuratively coming between, and hence without either praise or blame: as, several weeks intervened; an intervening piece of woods. A piece of woods may interfere with a view; we must interfere in a quarrel when life is threatened. See intrude.

interposer (in-tér-pôz'), n. [< interpose, v.] Interposai; interposition.

Such frequent breakings out in the body pollicke are indications of many noxious and dangerous humours therein, which, without the wise interpose of state physicians, pressage ruin to the whole.

J. Spencer, Prodigies, p. 119.

interposer (in-tér-pô-zér), n. One who interposes or comes between others; a mediator or agent between parties.

I must stand first champion for myself Against all interposers.

Beau, and Fl., Laws of Candy.

interposit (in-tér-pôz'it), n. [< L. interpositus, a putting between, < interponere, pp. interpositus, put between: see interpone, interpose.] A place of deposit between one commercial city or country and another. Mitford.

interposition (in-tér-pô-zish'qn), n. [= F. interposition = Pr. interposicio = Sp. interposicion = Pg. interposiço = It. interposizione, < L. interpositio (n.), < interponere, pp. interpositus, put between, interpose: see interpone, interpose.] 1. A being, placing, or coming between, as of something that obstructs or interferes; intervention.

It is a mere privation of the sun's light by reason of the interposition of the earth's opacous body.

Sp. Wilkins, That the Moon may be a World.

2. Interventient agency; agency between parties; interference; mediation.

Great and manifold have the instances been of God's interposition to rescue this church and nation, when they most needed it.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. ix.

This overhanded retribution of justice, so uncommon in human affairs, led many to discern the immediate interposition of Providence.

Prescott, Ferd. and Is., II. 8.

3. That which is interposed.

A shelter, and a kind of shading cool
Interposition, as a summer's cloud.

Milton, P. R., III. 322.

=Syn. 2. Interposition, Interference, Intervention, Mediation. The first three of these have the same differences as the corresponding verbs. (See interpone.) Interposition and interference are used of persons or things; intervention and mediation only of persons. Mediation is a friendly act performed in order to reconcile those who are estranged or opposed: as, France refused all offers of mediation, and seemed bent upon war. The word mediation is rarely used where the friendly interposition is not consented to by the parties to the controversy, or where it is not at least in some degree successful.

interposur (in-tér-pô'gür), n. [< interpose + -ur.] Interposition.

Some extraordinary interposures for their rescue.

Glanville, Pre-existence of Souls, xiv.

interpret (in-tér'prot), v. [< ME. interpreten, < OF. interpreter, F. interpréter = Fr. interpréter, interpretar = Sp. Pg. interpretar = It. interpretare, < L. interpretari, explain, expound, interpret, < interpres (interpres), an agent, broker, explainer, interpreter, < inter, between, + -pres (-pret-), prob. connected with Gr. φράσσω, point out, show, explain, declare, speak, > φράσσω, understanding, φράσις, speech: see phrase.] 1. trans. 1. To expound the meaning or significance of, as by translation or explanation; elucidate or unfold, as foreign or obscure language, a mystery, etc.; make plain or intelligible.

There were none that could interpret them [his dreams] to Pharaoh.

Gen. xli. 15.

Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

Mat. I. 23.

A third interprets motions, looks, and eyes.

Pope, E. of the L., III. 15.

2. To show the purport of; develop or make clear by representation: as, to interpret a drama or a character by action on the stage.—3. To construe; attribute a given meaning to: as, the company interpreted his silence unfavorably.

Nothing new is free from detraction, and when Princes alter customs, even heave to the subject, best ordinances are interpreted innovations.

Habington, Castara, Author's Preface.

No evil can befall the Parliament or City, but he positively interprets it a judgement upon them for his sake.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxvi.

=Syn. 1. Render, Construe, etc. (see translate); Expound, Elucidate, etc. (see explain).

II. intrans. To practise interpretation; make an interpretation or explanation; tell or determine what something signifies.

Do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

1 Cor. xii. 30.

My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further.

Shak., Macbeth, III. 6, 2.

interpretable (in-tér'pre-ta-bl), a. [= F. interprétable = Sp. interpretable, < L. interpretabilis, that can be explained or translated, < L. interpretari, explain, translate: see interpret.] Capable of being interpreted or explained.

But howsoever the law be in truth or interpretable (for it might ill become me to offer determination in matter of this kind), it is certain that, etc.

Selden, Illustrations of Drayton's Polyolbion, xvii. 307.

Even the differences arising among the limbs, originally alike, were seen to be interpretable by a principle mentioned.

H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 335.

interpretament (in-tér'pre-ta-ment), n. [< L. interpretamentum, explanation, < interpretari, explain: see interpret.] Interpretation. [Rare.]

This bold interpretament, how commonly soever sided with, cannot stand a minute with any competent reverence to God or his law, or his people.

Milton, Tetrachordon.

interpretate (in-tér'pre-tât), v. t. [< L. interpretatus, pp. of interpretari, interpret: see interpret.] To interpret.

How dare they interpretate these words, "my sheep," "my lamb," to be the universal church of Christ?

J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1855), II. 148.

If one consult the critics thereupon,
Some places have a note, some others none;
And when they take interpreting pains,
Sometimes the difficulty still remains.

Byron, Critical Remarks on Horace.

interpretation (in-tér-pre-tá'shən), n. [< ME. interpretacio, interpretacioun, < OF. entrepretation, interpretation, F. interpretation = Pr. interpretacio = Sp. interpretacion = Pg. interpretacão = It. interpretazione, < L. interpretatio(-n-), explanation, < interpretari, explain: see interpret.] 1. The act of interpreting, expounding, or explaining; translation; explanation; elucidation: as, the interpretation of a difficult passage in an author; the interpretation of dreams or of prophecy.

Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our lyrics.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., v. 2, 13.

This habit, carried into the interpretation of things at large, affects it somewhat as the mathematical habit affects it.
H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 321.

2. The sense given by an interpreter; assumed meaning; apparent meaning; signification: as, varying interpretations of the same passage or event; to put a bad interpretation upon anything. In law, interpretation in this sense usually implies either (1) that a word or phrase, read in the light of other parts of the instrument or of extrinsic evidence, is found to have a meaning different from that first apparent on its face; or (2) that a word or phrase not clear in itself is found, by transposition or reconstruction of the order of words or by different punctuation, to have a clear meaning; and hence the maxim that it is not allowable to interpret that which has no need of interpretation.

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.
2 Pet. I. 20.

We beseech thee to prosper this great sign, and to give us the interpretation and use of it in mercy.
Bacon.

3. The representation of a dramatic part or character, or the rendering of a musical composition, according to one's particular conception of it: as, an original and spirited interpretation of "Hamlet."—Allegorical interpretation. See allegorical.—Interpretation clause. See clause.—Interpretation of nature. In Bacon's philosophy, scientific reasoning leading to discovery. This Bacon teaches, consists in successive inductive inferences, each carrying irresistible and immediate conviction, the entire series leading up to widely general principles.—Syn. 1 and 2. Elucidation, construction, version, rendering. See translation.

interpretative (in-tér-pre-tā-tiv), a. [= F. interprétatif = Pr. interpretatiu = Sp. Pg. interpretatiu, < L. as if "interpretativus, < interpretari, explain: see interpret.] 1. Designed or fitted to explain; explaining; explanatory.

The rigour of interpretative lexicography requires that the explanation and the word explained should be always reciprocal.
Johnson, Eng. Dict., Pref.

So that by this interpretative compact each party hath made that lawful in time of war which is unlawful in time of peace.
Sir M. Hale, Cont. Mat. vil. 12.

2. Inferential; implied; constructive.

The rejecting their additions may justly be deemed an interpretative sliding with heresies.
Hammond.

interpretatively (in-tér-pre-tā-tiv-li), adv. By interpretation; so as to interpret or give ground for interpretation; inferentially.

They have interpretatively joined in opposing his authority.
Clarke, To Mr. Dodwell.

interpreter (in-tér-pre-tér), n. [Early mod. E. interpretour, < OF. interprèteur, entrepretour, < LL. interpretator, an explainer, < L. interpretari, explain: see interpret.] One who or that which interprets; one who explains or expounds; an expositor; a translator; especially, one who explains what is said in a different language.

And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake to them by an interpreter.
Gen. xli. 23.

It is therefore an error to suppose that the judiciary is the only interpreter of the Constitution, for a large field is left open to the other authorities of the government.
J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I. 385.

interprise, n. An obsolete form of enterprise.
interprovincial (in-tér-prō-vin'shəl), a. [< L. inter, between, + provincia, province: see provincial.] Existing between provinces.

The state council . . . was to superintend all high affairs of government, war, treaties, foreign intercourse, internal and interprovincial affairs.
Moley, Dutch Republic, I. 309.

interpublic (in-tér-pū'bik), a. [< L. inter, between, + pubes, pubes: see public.] Situated between the right and left pubic bones; as, the interpublic articulation, or symphysis pubis; an interpublic ligament or cartilage.—Interpublic fibrocartilage. See fibrocartilage.

interpunction (in-tér-pungk'shən), n. [< L. interpunctio(-n-), a placing of points between words, < interpungere, place points between words, < inter, between, + pungero, point: see pungent, point.] The pointing of sentences, or a point or mark placed between the parts or members of a sentence; intermediate punctuation.

The whole course of our life is full of interpunctions or commas; death is but the period or full point.
Jackson, Works, III. 409.

A various interpunction, a parenthesis, a letter, an accent, may much alter the sense.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 333.

Interpunction in the wider sense of the insertion of a distinguishing point is as old as the Moabite Stone, in which every word is divided from the rest by a single point; a fashion which we find occurring in Greek MSS. of late date.
J. Rendel Harris.

interpunctuation (in-tér-pungk-tū-ā'shən), n. [< inter- + punctuation.] Same as interpunction.

The device of the letter, which by the false interpunction of the parasite conveys to the heroine the directly opposite meaning to that which his master intended it to bear, is amusing enough.
A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., I. 142.

interracial (in-tér-rā'shəl), a. [< inter- + race + -al.] Existing or taking place between races, or members of different races.

If interracial marriages were legalized (as they are not yet), such unions would always be too exceptional to give ground for alarm.
Westminster Rev., CXXV. 380.

interradial (in-tér-rā'di-əl), a. and n. [< L. inter, between, + radius, ray: see radial.] I. a. Situated between the radii or rays: as, the interradial petals in an echinoderm. Compare adradial.

II. n. A ray situated between rays, as in some crinoids; an interradiale.

interradiale (in-tér-rā-di-ā'lē), n.; pl. interradialia (-li-ā). [NL.: see interradial.] That which is situated between rays, as of an echinoderm; specifically, in Crinoidea, a plate or part between radialia.

In the calyx of the Tesselata there are plates, interradialia, present between the radialia.
Encyc. Brit., VII. 636.

interradially (in-tér-rā'di-āl-i), adv. Between or among rays: as, "an interradially placed madreporite," Encyc. Brit.

interradius (in-tér-rā'di-us), n.; pl. interradii (-i). [< inter- + radius.] An interradial part; specifically, one of the secondary or intermediate rays or radiating parts or processes of a hydrazoon, alternating with the perradii or primary rays.

The madreporite lies in the right anterior interradius of the sea-urchin.
Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 670.

interramal (in-tér-rā'māl), a. [< L. inter, between, + ramus, a branch, + -al.] In zool., situated between the forks or rami of the lower jaw; submental; interocular.

interramicorn (in-tér-rām'i-körn), n. [< L. inter, between, + ramus, a branch, + cornu, a horn.] In ornith., a separate piece of the horny sheath of the bill which is found in some birds, as the albatrosses, between the rami of the lower mandible.

The interramicorn forms the gonial element of the bill.
Cuvier, Proc. Phila. Acad., 1806, p. 276.

interreceive (in-tér-rē-sūv'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interreceived, ppr. interreceiving. [< inter- + receive.] To receive between or within.
Carliule. [Rare.]

interregal (in-tér-rō'gāl), a. [< L. inter, between, + rex (reg-), a king: see regal.] Existing between kings.

When the crime (the massacre of the Huguenots) came at last, it was as blinding as it was bloody; at once premeditated and accidental; the isolated execution of an interregal conspiracy, existing for half a generation, yet exploding without concert.
Moley, Dutch Republic, I. 261.

interregency (in-tér-rē'jen-si), n. [< inter- + regency.] The space of time, or the government, while there is no lawful sovereign on the throne; an interregnum. Blount.

interregent (in-tér-rē'jent), n. [< inter- + regent.] One who governs during an interregnum; a regent. Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 201.

interreges, n. Plural of interrex.

interregnum (in-tér-reg-nūm), n. [< L. interregnum, < inter, between, + regnum, reign: see reign. Cf. interregn.] 1. An intermission between reigns; an interval of time elapsing between the end of one reign and the beginning of the next, as in the case of a disputed or uncertain succession.

A great meeting of noblemen and gentlemen who had property in Ireland was held, during the interregnum, at the house of the Duke of Ormond in Saint James's Square.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xli.

Hence—2. An intermission in any order of succession; any breach of continuity in action or influence.

Thousand worse Passions then possess
The Inter-regnum of my breast.

Conway, The Chronicle, st. 2.

Between the last dandelion and violet . . . and the first spring blossom . . . there is a frozen interregnum in the vegetable world.
O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 179.

interregni (in-tér-rān), n. [< F. interregne = Sp. Pg. It. interregno, < L. interregnum, interregnum: see interregnum.] An interregnum.

Comparing that confused anarchy with this interregni.
Milton, Hist. Eng., iii.

interrelate (in-tér-rē-lāt'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interrelated, ppr. interrelating. [< inter- + relate.] To bring into reciprocal relation; connect intimately. [Rare.]

Spaces intervening between the areas may readily be conceived to be filled with fibrils and cells that interrelate these and other functions complexly.
Amer. Naturalist, XXII. 616.

It is a sine qua non that the experiments made with the object of solving such problems be throughout logically interrelated.
Nature, XXXVII. 267.

interrelation (in-tér-rē-lā'shən), n. [< inter- + relation.] Reciprocal relation or correspondence; interconnection. Athenæum.

interrelationship (in-tér-rē-lā'shən-shīp), n. [< interrelation + -ship.] The state of being interrelated; the condition of reciprocal relation or correspondence.

The interrelationship between Matthew, Mark, and Luke is perhaps the most complicated . . . problem in the history of literature.
Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, I. § 79.

interrepellent (in-tér-rē-pel'ent), a. [< inter- + repellent.] Mutually or reciprocally repellent. De Quincey. [Rare.]

interrer (in-tér'ér), n. One who interrs or buries.
Colgrave.

interrex (in-tér-reks), n.; pl. interreges (in-tér-rē'jēz). [< inter, between, + rex, king: see rex.] In ancient Rome, a regent; a magistrate who governed during an interregnum. On the death of a king ten interreges were appointed by the senate, each holding the chief power five days, until a new king nominated by them was approved by the curia. Under the republic interreges were appointed to hold the comitia when successors to the consulate failed to be elected at the proper time, or a vacancy occurred otherwise.

interrogate (in-tér'ō-gāt), v.; pret. and pp. interrogated, ppr. interrogating. [< L. interrogatus, pp. of interrogare (> It. interrogare = Sp. Pg. interrogar = Fr. interroger, enterrer = F. interroger), ask, question, < inter, between, + rogare, ask: see rogation.] I. trans. To question; examine by asking questions: as, to interrogate a witness.

The traveller . . . coming to the fortified habitation of a chieftain, would probably have been interrogated from the battlements.
Johnson, Jour. to Western Isles.

=Syn. Inquire, Question, etc. (see ask); catechize.

II. intrans. To ask questions.

By his instructions touching the queen of Naples, it seemeth he could interrogate touching beauty.
Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII.

interrogate (in-tér'ō-gāt), n. [< interrogate, v.] A question; an interrogation. Bp. Hall, Cases of Conscience, iii. 10.

interrogatedness (in-tér'ō-gā-ted-nes), n. That character of testimony which consists in its having been elicited, or at least supplemented and checked, by interrogation. Bentham, Judicial Evidence, II. iv. § 6.

interrogatee (in-tér'ō-gā-tē'), n. [< interrogate + -ee.] One who is interrogated. [Rare.]

interrogation (in-tér'ō-gā'shən), n. [= F. interrogation = Pr. interrogatiu, enterragaciō = Sp. interrogacion = Pg. interrogacão = It. interrogazione, < L. interrogatio(-n-), a questioning, a question, < interrogare, question: see interrogate.] 1. The act of questioning; examination by questions.

Pray you, spare me
Further interrogation, which boots nothing Except to turn a trial to debate.
Byron.

2. A question put; an inquiry.

How demurely soever such men may pretend to sanctity, that interrogation of God presses hard upon them, shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?
Government of the Tongue.

3. Any proposition doubted or called in question in the disputations with which, during the prevalence of scholasticism, boys were exercised in the schools.—4. See interrogation-point.—Fallacy of interrogations. See fallacies in things (?), under fallacy.—Note or mark of interrogation. Same as interrogation-point.

We are compelled to read them with more alertness, and with a greater number of mental notes of interrogation.
The Academy, Nov. 8, 1893, p. 262.

=Syn. 2. Query, Inquiry, etc. See question, n.

interrogation-point (in-ter-ō-gā-shon-point), n. A note, mark, or sign (?) placed after a question (or in Spanish both before and after it, in the former position inverted) in writing or printing.

interrogative (in-ter-rog'ā-tiv), a. and n. [= F. interrogatif = Pr. interrogatiu = Sp. Pg. It. interrogativo, < L. interrogativus, serving to question, < interrogare, question: see interrogate.] I. a. Asking or denoting a question; pertaining to inquiry; questioning: as, an interrogative phrase, pronoun, or point; an interrogative look or tone of voice.

The regular place of the interrogative word, of whatever kind, is at the beginning of the sentence, or as near it as possible. Whitney, Essentials of Eng. Grammar, § 470.

Interrogative accent. See accent, 7.—Interrogative judgment, in logic, a mental product corresponding to an interrogative sentence: opposed to determinative judgment (which see, under determinative).

II. n. 1. In gram., a word (pronoun, pronominal adjective, or adverb) implying interrogation, or used for asking a question: as, who? what? which? why?—2. A question; an interrogation. [Rare.]

"Who are you, sir, and what is your business?" demanded the Marquis. . . . "That is a fair interrogative, my lord," answered Delagety.

Scott, Legend of Montrose, xii.

interrogatively (in-ter-rog'ā-tiv-li), adv. In an interrogative manner; in the form of a question; questioningly.

interrogator (in-ter-rog'ā-tor), n. [= F. interrogateur = It. interrogatore, < LL. interrogator, < L. interrogare, question: see interrogate.] One who interrogates or asks questions.

interrogatory (in-ter-rog'ā-tō-ri), a. and n. [= F. interrogatoire = Pr. interrogatori = Sp. Pg. It. interrogatorio, < LL. interrogatorius, consisting of questions, < L. interrogare, question: see interrogate.] I. a. Interrogative; containing or expressing a question; pertaining to or consisting of questions: as, an interrogatory sentence; the interrogatory method of instruction.

II. n.; pl. interrogatories (-riz). A question or inquiry; in law, usually, a question in writing: as, to file interrogatories to be answered by a party or a witness. Formerly also interrogatory.

Their speech was cut off with this one brief and short interrogatory: whether Philip would quit those throned cities aforesaid or no? Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 332.

Cross interrogatory. See cross, 4.—Demurrer to interrogatory. See demurrer, 2.—Syn. Query, Inquiry, etc. See question, n.

in terrorem (in te-rō'rem). [L. in, in, to, for; terrorem, acc. of terror, terror: see terror.] As a warning; by way of intimidation.

interrule (in-ter-rū'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. inter-ruled, pp. interruling. [< inter- + rule.] To rule between; mark with intervening ruled lines.

The picture being completed, it is ruled over in squares, each of about twelve inches. These are again interruled with small squares. Ure, Dict., III. 303.

interrupt (in-ter-rup't), v. t. [ME. interruyten (corruptly intrippe), < L. interrumpere, pp. of interrumpere (> It. interrompere = Pg. interromper = Sp. interrumpir = Pr. entrompre = F. interrompre), break apart, break to pieces, break off, interrupt, < inter, between, + rumpere, break: see rupture. Cf. abrupt, corrupt, etc.] 1. To make a break or gap in; break the course or continuity of; hence, to break off; bring to a pause or cessation; hinder the continuation of.

He interrupt his reading. Shak., T. and C., III. 3, 93.

This would surpass Common revenge, and interrupt his joy In our confusion. Milton, P. L., II. 371.

2. To break in upon or disturb the action of; stop or hinder in doing something.

Intrippe no man where so that thou wende, No man in his tale, till he have made an ende. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 31.

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story, And never interrupt you. Shak., Pericles, v. 1, 167.

Th' emphatic speaker . . . had a world of talk With one he stumbled on, and lost his walk. I interrupt him with a sudden bow, Adieu, dear sir! lest you should lose it now.

Cowper, Conversation, l. 231.

interrupt' (in-ter-rup't'), a. [ME. interrupt, interript, < OF. interrumpit; < L. interrumpit, pp.: see the verb.] 1. Gaping; spreading apart, as the sides of anything.

Our adversary, whom no bounds Prescribed, no bars of hell, nor all the chains Heap'd on him there, nor yet the main abyss Wide, interrupt, can hold. Milton, P. L., III. 84.

3. Irregular; interrupted.

Mourning, ghastly looks; broken pace; interrupt, precipitate, halt turns. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 612.

3. Disturbed; interrupted.

We will do to you our homage and of you holds our honours, and we beseech you to respite your sacrifice in to Pentecoste, ne therefore shall ye nothing be interrupt, but that ye shall be our lords and our kynge.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), l. 106.

They are in paradise for the time, and cannot well endure to be interrupt. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 244.

interrupted (in-ter-rup'ted), p. a. 1. Broken; intermitted; fitful; acting irregularly or unequally.

How is it that some wits are interrupted, That now they daisied are, now clearly see? Sir J. Davies, Immortal. of Soul, xlii.

All is silent, save the faint And interrupted murmur of the bee. Dryden, Summer Wind.

2. In bot.: (a) Having the principal leaflets divided by intervals of smaller ones: applied to compound leaves. (b) Having the larger spikes divided by a series of smaller ones: applied to flowers: opposed to continuous.—3. In soöl., suddenly stopped; having a gap or hiatus: as, an interrupted stria.—Interrupted cadence, current, screw, etc. See the nouns.

interruptedly (in-ter-rup'ted-li), adv. With breaks or interruptions.—Interruptedly pinnate, in bot., same as abruptly pinnate (which see, under abruptly).

interrupter (in-ter-rup'ter), n. One who or that which interrupts. Also interruptor.

For, on the theater of France, The tragedy was ment Of England too: wherefore our queene Her interruptors sent. Warner, Albion's England, x.

Specifically.—(a) In elect., any instrument for interrupting an electrical current, as the automatic arrangement used with the induction-coil.

The interruptors of induction coils are usually self-acting. S. P. Thompson, Elect. and Mag., p. 364.

(b) In induct. engin., an electrical device which forms part of a system of apparatus for determining the velocity of projectiles, used in connection with wire targets and chronographs. The passage of the ball or shell through a target serves to interrupt a closed electrical circuit, and thus release the automatic registering mechanism of the chronograph at the instant of passage. Often a number of targets are used, placed at accurately measured and uniform intervals in the path of the projectile, and the registered data serve as a basis for determining the variation of velocity in different parts of the path.

interruption (in-ter-rup'shon), n. [< ME. interrupcion, < OF. (also F.) interrupcion = Sp. interrupcion = Pg. interrumpido = It. interruzione, < L. interrumpere (> It. interrompere, < interrumpere, pp. interrumpit, interrupt: see interrupt.] 1. The act of interrupting or breaking in upon anything.

Places severed from the continent by the interruption of the sea. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind.

Dissonance, and capricious art, And snip-snap short, and interruption smart. Pope, Dunciad, II. 240.

2. The state of being interrupted; the state of being impeded, checked, or stopped.

Had they held a steady hand upon his Majesty's restoration, as they might easily have done, the Church of England had emerged and flourished without interruption.

Evelyn, Diary, March 12, 1672. Persons who eminently love, and meet with fatal interruptions of their happiness when they least expect it. Steele, Tatler, No. 82.

3. Obstruction or hindrance caused by a breaking in upon any course, current, progress, or motion; stoppage: as, interruptions in the execution of a work.

They shall have full power to give sentence upon ye same, & that sentence to be obeyed wout interruption. Fabian, Cur. & an. 1377. (Richardson.)

4. Cessation; intermission; interval.

Amidst the interruptions of his sorrow, seeing his point overwhelmed with grief, he was only able to bid her be comforted. Addison, Spectator.

No one, in the face of Church-history, can or does maintain that all interruptions of intercommunion destroy unity. Pusey, Eirenicon, p. 62.

5. A prerogation of Parliament: used in the seventeenth century. Nares.

interruptive (in-ter-rup'tiv), a. [< interrupt + -ive.] Tending to interrupt; interrupting.

Interruptive forces. Bushnell.

interruptively (in-ter-rup'tiv-li), adv. By interruption; so as to interrupt.

interruptor (in-ter-rup'tor), n. See interruptor. interscalm (in-ter-skalm), n. [< L. interscalmum, the space between two oars in a galley, < inter, between, + scalmus, a peg to which an oar was strapped, a thole, a thole-pin.] In an ancient Roman galley, the space between any two successive oars.

interscapulum (in-ter-skā-pil'i-um), n.; pl. interscapula (-ā). [L., the space between the shoulders, < inter, between, + scapula, shoulder-blades: see scapula.] Same as interscapulum. interscapula, n. Plural of interscapulum.

interscapular (in-ter-skāp'ū-lār), a. and n. [< inter- + scapula + -ar.] I. a. Situated between the scapulae or shoulder-blades.

II. n. In ornith., an interscapular feather; one of the feathers of the interscapulum.

interscapulary (in-ter-skāp'ū-lār-i), a. and n. Same as interscapular.

interscapulum (in-ter-skāp'ū-lum), n.; pl. interscapula (-ā). [NL., < L. inter, between, + scapula, shoulder-blades: see scapula. Cf. interscapulum.] In ornith., the fore part of the back; the dorsum anticum; the region of the upper back between the shoulder-blades. Also interscapillum. See cut under bird 1.

intersecent (in-ter-sen'sent), a. [< L. inter, between, + secent (-s), ppr. of secentere (in comp. secentere), climb: see scan.] In alg., containing radicals in the exponents: thus, x^2 or x^3 is an intersecent expression: so called by Leibnitz as being intermediate between algebraic and transcendental quantities, but properly belonging to the latter category. intersece (in-ter-sen), n. [< inter- + sece.] A pause, interval, or transition between two scenes, as in a play. Amer. Jour. Philol., IX. 343.

interseind (in-ter-sind'), v. t. [< L. interseindere, cut off, separate, break down, < inter, between, + seindere, cut: see seision. Cf. seind.] To cut in two in the midst. Bailey, 1731.

interscribet (in-ter-skrib'), v. t. [< L. interscribere, write between, < inter, between, + scribere, write: see scribe.] To write between; interline. Bailey, 1731.

interscription (in-ter-skrip'shon), n. [< L. as if interscriptio* (-n), < interscribere, pp. interscriptus, write between, < inter, between, + scribere, write.] A writing between, or interlining. Bailey, 1731.

inter se (in-ter sē). [L.] Among or between themselves.

intersecant (in-ter-sē'kant), a. [= OF. intersequant, < L. intersecant (-s), ppr. of intersecare, cut between, cut off: see intersect.] Dividing into parts; cutting across; crossing. [Rare.] intersect (in-ter-sekt'), v. [< L. intersectus, pp. of intersecare (> It. intersecare = Sp. (obs.) intersecar), cut between, cut off, < inter, between, + secare, cut: see section.] I. trans. 1. To cut or divide into parts; lie or pass across: as, the ecliptic intersects the equator.

The surface of Norway, as it is shown flat upon a chart, is lined and intersected by these water-ways as the surface of England is by railways. Froude, Sketches, p. 64.

2. To cut apart; separate by intervening. [Rare.]

Lands intersected by a narrow frith Abhor each other. Cowper, Task, II. 16.

II. intrans. To cut into one another; meet and cross each other; have, as two geometrical loci, one or more points in common: as, intersecting lines. In the ordinary language of geometry a curve and its tangent are not said to intersect, but in a more careful use of language they no doubt would be said to do so. See extract under intersection, 2.

intersection (in-ter-sek'shon), n. [= F. intersection = Sp. interseccion = Pg. interseccão = It. intersecazione, < L. intersecchio (-n), < intersecare, cut between, intersect: see intersect.] 1. The act of intersecting; a cutting or dividing, or cutting across: as, the intersection of a map by lines of latitude and longitude.

The frequent intersections of the sense which are the necessary effects of rhyme. Johnson, Thomson.

2. A place of crossing; specifically, a point common to two lines or a line and a surface, or a line common to two surfaces: as, a house at the intersection of two roads; the intersection of two geometrical lines or figures.

The locus (if any) corresponding to a given aggregate relation is the locus common to and contained in each of the loci corresponding to the several constituent relations respectively, or, what is the same thing, it is the intersection of these loci. Cayley, On Abstract Geometry, § 27, Phil. Trans., 1870, p. 55.

3. In logic, the relation of two classes each of which partly excludes and partly includes the other.—Apparent intersection, a point where two curves not in one plane appear to intersect when viewed from any center of projection.

intersectional (in-ter-sek'shon-al), a. [< intersection + -al.] Relating to or formed by an intersection or intersections.

intersegmental (in-tér-seg'men-tál), a. [L. inter, between, + segmentum, segment, + -al.] Pertaining to two or more segments; situated between, separating, or connecting segments: as, an intersegmental septum between myotomes or other metameric parts.

interseminate (in-tér-sem'i-nát), v. t. [L. interseminatus, pp. of interseminare, sow between or at intervals, < inter, between, + seminare, sow: see seminate.] To sow between or among. Bailey, 1731.

interseptal (in-tér-sep'tál), a. [< inter + septum + -al.] Situated between septa.

The interruption of the cavities of the loculi [in Otocrallus] may be more complete by the formation of shelves stretching from septum to septum, but lying at different heights in adjacent loculi. These are interseptal dissepiments. Huxley, Encyc. Brit., I. 130.

insert (in-tér-sért'), v. t. [L. interserere, pp. of inserere (> It. interserere = Sp. insertar), put or place between, < inter, between, + serere, join, weave: see series. Cf. insert.] To insert, or set or put in between other things.

If I may insert a short speculation. Brewster.

insertion (in-tér-sér'shún), n. [< L. as if "insertio(n)", < inserere, put or place between: see insert.] The act of inserting between other things, or that which is inserted.

They have some insertions which are plainly spurious, yet the substance of them cannot be torn off their then holy and ancient. Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

insert (in-tér-sét'), v. t. [< inter + set.] To set or put between. Daniel, Civil Wars, viii.

intershock (in-tér-shók'), v. t. [< inter + shock.] To shock mutually. Daniel, Chorus in Philotas.

intersidereal (in-tér-si-dé-ré-ál), a. [< L. inter, between, + sidus (sider-), star: see sidereal.] Situated between or among the stars; interstellar: as, intersidereal space.

intersocial (in-tér-só'shál), a. [< inter + social.] Pertaining to intercourse or association; having mutual relations or intercourse; social. [Rare.]

intersomnious (in-tér-som'ni-us), a. [< L. inter, between, + somnus, sleep: see somnolent.] Occurring between periods of sleep; done or happening in a wakeful interval. Dublin Rev. [Rare.]

internant (in-tér-sō-nant), a. [< L. internant (-), pp. of internare, sound between or among, < inter, between, + sonare, sound: see sonant.] Sounding between. Imp. Dict.

intersour (in-tér-sour'), v. t. [< inter + sour.] To mix with something sour. Daniel, Octavia to M. Antonius.

interspace (in-tér-spās), n. [< ME. entespaco, < LL. interspatium, space between, interval, < L. inter, between, + spatium, space: see space.] 1. A space between objects; an intervening space; an interval.

Thyne entespaco in oon maner thou keps. Palladius, Husbandrie (R. E. T. S.), p. 47.

Posteriorly to the mouth, we come, in the larva, to a rather wide interspace without any apparent articulation or organ. Darwin, Cirripedia, p. 28.

The lucid interspace of world and world, Where never creeps a cloud. Tennyson, Lucretius.

Specifically—2. In entom., the space between two longitudinal veins or veinlets of the wings: used especially in describing the Lepidoptera.

interspace (in-tér-spās'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interspaced, pp. interspacing. [< interspace, n.] To make or fill the space between; occupy the interval between.

Fog and storms blur the glory of the sky, and foul days . . . interspace the bright and fair. Bushnell, Nature and the Supernat., p. 192.

A series of circular zinc plates interspaced with the platinum. Elect. Rev. (Eng.), XXIV. 58.

interspatial (in-tér-spā'shál), a. [< LL. interspatium, interspace, + -al.] Of or pertaining to an interspace; in entom., situated on the interspaces of the wing: as, interspatial dots.

interspatially (in-tér-spā'shál-lí), adv. In the interspace or interspaces; in entom., so as to correspond to the interspaces of an insect's wing: as, a mark interspatially angulated.

interspecific (in-tér-spé-sif'ik), a. [< inter + specific.] Existing between species.

As the description of the relations of organs characterized the physiology of the individual, so that of interspecific adaptations is the physiology of the race. Nature, XXXIX. 287.

interspeech (in-tér-spéch), n. [< inter + speech.] A speech interposed between others. Blount.

intersperse (in-tér-spér's'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interspersed, pp. interspersing. [< L. interspersus, pp. of interspergere, scatter or sprinkle between or among, < inter, between, + spargere, scatter, sprinkle: see spare. Cf. asperse, disperse.] 1. To scatter between; place here and there among other things: as, to intersperse shrubs among trees.

There, interspersed in lawns and opening glades, Thin trees arise, that shun each other's shades. Pope, Windsor Forest, l. 21.

2. To diversify by scattering or disposing various objects here and there.

The actors . . . interspersed their hymns with sarcastic jokes and altercation. Gudmund, Origin of Poetry.

interspersion (in-tér-spér'shún), n. [< intersperse + -ion. Cf. aspiration, dispersion, etc.] The act of interspersing, scattering, or placing here and there.

These sentiments have obtained almost in all ages and places, though not without interspersions of certain corrupt additions. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 62.

For want of the interspersions of now and then an elegiac or a lyric ode. Watts, Improvement of Mind.

interspicular (in-tér-spik'ul-ér), a. [< inter + spicula + -ar.] Situated between or among spicules, as of a sponge.

interspinal (in-tér-spi-nál), a. [= It. interspinale, < NL. interspinalis, < L. inter, between, + spina, spine: see spinal.] In anat., situated between spines—that is, between spinous processes of successive vertebrae: as, an interspinal muscle.

interspinalis (in-tér-spi-nál'is), n.; pl. interspinales (-léz). [NL. see interspinal.] One of a number of small muscles situated between the spinous processes of any two contiguous vertebrae.

interspinous (in-tér-spi-nus), a. [< L. inter, between, + spina, spine: see spinous.] Situated between spines; interspinal. Specifically applied in ichthyology to certain bones of the dorsal fin of a teleost fish which are developed between the spines of the vertebrae. See the quotation. See also shankle-joint.

When the dorsal fin exists in the trunk, its rays are articulated with, and supported by, elongated and pointed bones—the interspinous bones. . . . Not unfrequently, the articulation between the fin-rays and the interspinous bone is effected by the interlocking of two rings, one belonging to the base of the fin-ray and its included dermal cartilage, the other to the summit of the interspinous bone—like the adjacent links of a chain. Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 181.

interspiration (in-tér-spi-rá'shún), n. [< L. interspiratio(n), < interspirare, fetch breath between, < inter, between, + spirare, breathe: see spirant. Cf. inspiration, etc.] A breathing-spell; an interval of rest or relief.

What gracious respite are here, what favourable interspirations, as if God bade me to recollect myself. Sp. Hall, Satan's Merry Darts Quenched, ll.

interstaminal (in-tér-stam'i-nál), a. [< L. inter, between, + stamen, a thread (NL. stamen), + -al.] In bot., situated between the stamens. Thomas, Med. Dict. [Rare.]

interstate (in-tér-stát), a. [< inter + state.] Existing or taking place between different states, or persons in different states; especially, carried on between the States of the American Union, or by persons in one State with persons in another.—Interstate commerce. See commerce.—Interstate Commerce Commission, a body of five commissioners appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate, under act of Congress of February 4th, 1887. The commission is charged with the regulation of the business of common carriers as provided for under this act, with the investigation of complaints, and is required to render an annual report to the Department of the Interior.

interstellar (in-tér-stel'ér), a. [< L. inter, between, + stella, star: see stella.] Existing between stars; situated among the stars: as, interstellar spaces or worlds.

Such comets as have, by a trajectory through the ether, for a long time wandered through the celestial or interstellar part of the universe. Boyle, Works, I. 379.

interstellary (in-tér-stel'g-ri), a. Same as interstellar.

internatal (in-tér-stér-nál), a. [< inter + sternum + -al.] 1. In anat., situated between the pieces of which the breast-bone is composed: as, an internatal articulation.—2. In zool., situated between the sternites or inferomedian parts of the successive somites of an arthropod.

When the abdomen is made straight, it will be found that these internatal membranes are stretched as far as they will yield. Huxley, Crayfish, p. 97.

interstice (in-tér-stis or in-tér'stis), n. [< F. interstice = Sp. Pg. intersticio = It. interstizio, < L. interstitium, a space between, < intersta- tere, pp. interstitus, stand between, < inter, between, + stare, stand: see sist, assist, etc.] 1. An intervening space; an opening; especially, a small or narrow space between apposed surfaces or things; a gap, chink, slit, crevice, or cranny.

Net. . . . Texture woven with large interstices or meshes, used commonly as a snare for animals. . . . Anything made with interstitial vacuities. . . . Network. . . . Anything reticulated or decussated, at equal distances, with interstices between the intersections. Johnson, Dictionary.

I will point out the interstices of time which ought to be between one citation and another. Aylife, Parergon.

Every change of atmospheric pressure produces, from day to day, exits or entrances of the air into all the interstices of the soil. H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 7.

2. In canon law, the interval of time required for promotion from a lower to a higher degree of orders.

intersticed (in-tér-stist or in-tér'stis), a. [< interstice + -ed.] Having an interstice or interstices: as, an intersticed ceiling; intersticed columns.

interstinctive (in-tér-sting'ktiv), a. [< L. interstinctus, pp. of interstingere, separate, divide, distinguish, mark off by pricking, < inter, between, + stingere, prick: see distinguish, extinguish.] Distinguishing; dividing.

The business of this letter . . . is to ask the favour of you . . . to consult that piece of Cyprian called "Expositio Bilecti" . . . whether the notes of Parenthesis () be used; and what care is taken of the interstinctive points; . . . Wallis, To Dr. Smith (Aubrey's Letters, I. 78).

interstitial (in-tér-stish'ál), a. [< L. interstitium, interstice, + -al.] 1. Pertaining to, situated in, or constituting an interstice or interstices: as, interstitial change.

How many chams he would find of wide and continued vacuity, and how many interstitial spaces rambled, even in the most tumultuous hurries of business. Johnson, Rambler, No. 8.

These snatches and interstitial spaces—moments literal and fleet—these are all the chances that we can borrow or create for the luxury of learning. R. Choate, Addresses, p. 211.

2. In entom., situated between striae, etc.: as, interstitial punctures on the elytra of beetles.—Interstitial emphysema. See emphysema.—Interstitial growth or absorption (as of bone), growth or absorption taking place throughout the substance of the organ, and not merely on its surface.—Interstitial inflammation, inflammation in which the morbid changes are diffuse and involve mainly the interstitial connective tissue, as distinct both from a circumscribed abscess and from parenchymatous inflammation. In this sense we have such terms as interstitial hepatitis, interstitial nephritis, interstitial pneumonia.—Interstitial lines, in entom., the spaces between striae.—Interstitial tissue, the fine connective tissue which occurs between the cells of other tissues and binds them together and supports their blood- and lymph-vessels.

interstitially (in-tér-stish'ál-lí), adv. In or by interstices; in interstitial spaces.

It (water) may be deposited interstitially. H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 308.

This thickening takes place . . . interstitially. R. Bentley, Botany, p. 19.

Chalcedonic quartz is also present, sometimes interstitially. Geol. Jour., XLIV. 85.

interstition, n. [ME., < L. interstitio(n), a pause, interval, < interstare, pause: see interstice.] Interval.

The firste periferie of all Engendred mist, and ouermore The dewes, and the frostes here, After thilke interstition, In whiche thel take impression. Gower, Conf. Amant, vii.

interstratification (in-tér-strat'i-fiká'shún), n. [< interstratify: see -fication.] The state of being interstratified, or of lying between other strata; in geol., the condition of a bed, stratum, or member of an aqueous deposit, with reference to the overlying and underlying beds.

The interstratification . . . of loess with layers of pumice and volcanic ashes. Sir C. Lyell, Manual of Elem. Geology, x.

interstratified (in-tér-strat'i-fid), a. [< interstratify + -ed.] Inclosed between or alternating with other strata; forming part of a group of stratified rocks. Also interbedded.

interstratify (in-tér-strat'i-fi), v.; pret. and pp. interstratified, pp. interstratifying. [< inter + stratify.] 1. trans. In geol., to cause to occupy a position among or between other strata; intermix as regards strata.

Adjacent to Milford the red sand is abundantly interstratified with the white, with which are also occasional seams of coarse pebbles. Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., XXIX. 43.

Dolomitic limestone is interstratified with the gneissic rocks. Nature, XXX. 43.

But interstratified with these [sandstones and shales] are many beds containing marine fossils.

A. H. Green, Phys. Geol., p. 302.

II. intrans. To assume a position between or among other strata.

interstitial (in-tér-strí'al), a. [< inter- + stria + -al.] In entom., situated between striae; interstitial: as, interstitial punctures on the elytra.

internapticular (in-tér-sin-ap-tík'q-lär), a. [< inter- + synapticaula + -ar.] Situated between or among synapticaulae.

These ligaments passing down through the internapticular spaces to be fastened, according to their position.

G. C. Bourne, Microsc. Science, XXVII, 303.

intertalk (in-tér-ták'), v. i. [< inter- + talk.] To talk to one another; exchange conversation.

Among the myrtles as I walk'd,
Love and my sighs thus intertalk'd.

Carew, Enquiry.

intertangle (in-tér-tang'gl), v. t.; pret. and pp. intertangled, ppr. intertangling. [Formerly also entertangle; < inter- + tangle.] To intertwist; tangle together.

Now also have ye in every song or ditty con corde by compass & con corde intertangled and a mixt of both.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 69.

Their intertangled roots of love.

Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, l. 3.

intertarsal (in-tér-tär'sal), a. [< inter- + tarsus + -al.] 1. Situated between the proximal and distal rows of tarsal bones; mediotarsal: as, the intertarsal joint of a bird or a reptile. — 2. Situated between or among any tarsal bones: as, intertarsal ligaments.

intertentacular (in-tér-ten-tak'q-lär), a. [< L. inter, between, + NL. tentaculum, tentacle, + -ar.] Placed between tentacles. — Intertentacular organ of Farre, a ciliated passage opening between two tentacles of the lophophore in Membranipora, Alcyonidium, and other forms of polychaeta.

intertergal (in-tér-tér'gal), a. [< L. inter, between, + tergum, back, + -al.] Situated between successive terga or tergites of an arthropod.

The transparent layer of the cuticle and the uppermost layer of the cells of the hypodermis are continued into the intertergal membrane.

Microsc. Science, XXIX, ill. 280.

interterritorial (in-tér-tér-i-tó'ri-al), a. [< inter- + territory + -al.] Between or among territories, or the people of different territories.

A call for an interterritorial convention of the four north-western Territories — the two Dakotas, Montana, and Washington.

Philadelphia Ledger, Dec. 4, 1888.

intertext (in-tér-tek's), v. t. [< L. intertexere, intertwine, < inter, between, + texere, weave; see text.] To interweave; intertwine.

Idles and roses, flowers of either sex,
The bright bride's path, embellished more than thine,
With light of love this pair doth intertext.

B. Jonson, Underwoods, xciv.

intertexture (in-tér-tek's-tür), n. [< intertex, after texture.] The act of interweaving; the condition of being interwoven; joint or combined texture.

They understood not the salt and ingenuity of a witty and useful answer or reply, as is to be seen in the intertextures of Aristophanes' comedies.

Jer. Taylor, Works, l. xciii.

And the close intertexture of the several parts is as strong a proof of unity in the design and execution as the intense life and consistency in the conception of Achilles.

De Quincey, Homer, ill.

intertidal (in-tér-tí-dal), a. [< inter- + tide + -al.] Living between high-water mark and low-water mark.

At low tide the limpet (being a strictly intertidal organism) is exposed to the air.

Encyc. Brit., XVI, 648.

intertile (in-tér-tí), n. [< inter- + tile.] A short piece of timber used in roofing, and in timber-framing generally, to bind upright posts together.

intertissued (in-tér-tish'éd), a. [< inter- + tissued.] Same as entertissued.

intertabecular (in-tér-trä-bek'q-lär), a. [< inter- + trabecula + -ar.] Situated between the cranial trabeculae.

intertafic (in-tér-traf-ik), n. [< inter- + traf-ic, n.] Traffic between two or more persons or places; reciprocal trade.

intertafficked, ppr. intertafficking. [< inter- + traffick, v.] To trade together.

And intertafficks with them, tune for pound.

Devin, Microcosmos, p. 61.

intertanspicuous (in-tér-trans-pik'q-us), a. [< inter- + transpicuous.] Transpicuous between. Shelley. [Rare.]

intertransversalis (in-tér-trans-vér-sä'lis), n.; pl. intertransversales (-lêz). [NL., < intertransversus, q. v.] In anat., one of a series of muscles situated between the transverse processes of successive vertebrae.

intertransversarius (in-tér-trans-vér-sä'ri-us), n.; pl. intertransversarii (-i). [NL., < intertransversus, q. v.] Same as intertransversalis.

intertransverse (in-tér-trans-vér's), a. [< NL. intertransversus, q. v.] Situated between the transverse processes of successive vertebrae: specifically applied to ligaments and muscles of the spinal column so placed.

intertransversus (in-tér-trans-vér'sus), n.; pl. intertransversi (-si). [NL., < L. inter, between, + transversus, transverse; see transverse.] Same as intertransversalis.

The anterior lymph-heart: lying in an interspace between the small muscles (intertransversalis).

Huxley and Martin, Elementary Biology, p. 95.

intertribal (in-tér-trí-bal), a. [< inter- + tribe + -al.] Existing or taking place between tribes; passing from tribe to tribe: as, intertribal war or commerce.

It must ever be borne in mind that African slavery is of two distinct kinds: first, inland or intertribal slavery or servitude, which . . . is the normal condition of all rude nations divided into petty contiguous tribes.

Nineteenth Century, XXIV, 443.

intertrigo (in-tér-trí-gô), n. [L., a chafing or galling of the skin in riding, walking, etc., < inter, between, + terere, pp. tritus, rub; see trite.] A slight inflammation of the skin, occurring in creases or folds where one part of skin rubs on another. B. W. Richardson, Prevent. Med., p. 252.

intertrochanteric (in-tér-trô-kan-ter'ik), a. [< inter- + trochanter + -ic.] In anat., situated between two trochanters: specifically applied to a line or ridge between the greater and the lesser trochanter of the femur. See cut under trochanter.

The posterior intertrochanteric ridge.

N. Y. Med. Jour., XL, 621.

intertrochlear (in-tér-trok'lô-jär), a. [< inter- + trochlear.] Fitting into the middle of a trochlear or pulley-like surface of a joint: as, the intertrochlear ridge along the greater sigmoid cavity of the ulna.

A tongue and groove ("intertrochlear crest") in the elbow-joint.

K. D. Cope, Origin of the Miteat, p. 348.

intertropical (in-tér-trop'i-kal), a. [< inter- + tropic + -al.] Situated between the tropics.

Round many intertropical islands, . . . the bottom of the sea is entirely coated by irregular masses of coral.

Darwin, Coral Reefs, p. 79.

Intertropical portions of the old world. Science, III, 600.

intertubular (in-tér-tü'bü-lär), a. [< inter- + tubule + -ar.] Situated between tubes: as, the intertubular cells.

interturb, v. t. [< L. interturbare, disturb by interruption, < inter, between, + turbare, disturb, trouble; see trouble, disturb.] To disturb.

Even so do I interturb and trouble you with my babbling.

J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1855), II, 22.

interturbor, n. A disturber.

The world perforce fantasizing us to be an interturbor of the peace rather than an indifferent mediator.

Henry VIII., To Wyatt, May, 1538.

intertwine (in-tér-twin'), v.; pret. and pp. intertwined, ppr. intertwining. [< inter- + twine, v.] 1. trans. To unite by twining or twisting one with another; interlace.

Wherever, under some concourse of shades,
Whose branching arms thick intertwined might shield
From dews and damps of night his shelter'd head.

Milton, P. R., iv, 405.

II. intrans. To twine together; be interwoven: as, intertwining vines.

My dwelling stands — a sweet recluse abode!

And o'er my darken'd casement intertwine

The fragrant brier, the woodbine, and the vine.

Scott, Eclogues, l.

intertwine (in-tér-twin'), n. [< intertwine, v.] A mutual or reciprocal twining or winding. [Rare.]

III

Such intertwine besseems triumphal wreaths

Strewed before thy advancing.

Cokeridge, To Wordsworth.

intertwistingly (in-tér-twí'ning-li), adv. By intertwining or being intertwined.

intertwist (in-tér-twist'), v. t. [< inter- + twist.] To twist one with another; twist or twine together.

Ye, with your tough and intertwisted roots,

Grasp the firm rocks ye sprung from.

W. Mason, Caractacus.

intertwistingly (in-tér-twí'ning-li), adv. By intertwisting or being intertwined.

interunion (in-tér-ü'nyon), n. [< inter- + union.] An interblending. [Rare.]

The . . . more eloquent interunion of human voices in the choir.

G. W. Cable, Creole Days, p. 18.

interval (in-tér-val), n. [Formerly also interval; = F. intervalle = Pr. entrevall = Sp. intervalo = Pg. It. intervallo, < L. intervallum, space between, interval, distance, interval of time, pause, difference, lit. space between two palisades or walls, < inter, between, + callum, palisade, wall: see wall.] 1. A vacant or unobstructed space between points or objects; an intervening vacancy; an open reach or stretch between limits: as, the intervals between the ranks of an army.

'Twixt host and host but narrow space was left,
A dreadful interval.

Milton, P. L., vi, 106.

2. Specifically, a low level tract of land, as along a river, between hills, etc. Also interval. [U. S.]

The winding Pemigewasset, . . .

whitening down its rocks,

Or lastly gliding through its intervals.

Whittier, Bridal of Pennacook.

In a green rolling interval, planted with noble trees and flanked by moderate hills, stands the vast white caravan-sary.

C. D. Warner, Their Pilgrimage, p. 210.

There was no wind, except in the open glades between the woods, where the frozen lakes spread out like meadow intervals.

B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 22.

3. Any dividing tract in space, time, or degree; an intervening space, period, or state; a separating reach or stretch of any kind: with reference either to the space itself or to the points of separation or division: as, an interval of rocky ground between meadows; to fill up an interval in conversation with music; an interval of ease or of relapse in disease; a lucid interval in delirium; to set trees at intervals of fifty feet; to breathe only at long intervals; the clock strikes at intervals of an hour.

This is the freshest, the most busy and stirring interval or time between, that husbands have.

Holland, tr. of Pliny, xviii, 26.

Short as the interval is since I last met you in this place on a similar occasion, the events which have filled up that interval have not been unimportant.

Canning.

There seems to be no interval between greatness and meanness.

Emerson, Horolam.

4. Specifically, in entom., one of the spaces between longitudinal striae of the elytra. When the striae are regular, both they and the intervals are numbered from the suture outward. — 5. In music, the difference or distance in pitch between two tones. If the tones are sounded simultaneously, the interval is harmonic; if successively, melodic. An interval is acoustically described by the ratio between the vibration-numbers of the two tones: thus, an octave is represented by the ratio 2:1; a fifth, by the ratio 3:2, etc. Musically the intervals between the key-note of a major scale and its several tones are regarded as the standards with which all possible intervals are compared and from which they are named. The standard intervals are as follows: do to do (C to C, F to F, etc.) is called a first, prime, or unison; do to re (C to D, F to G, etc.), a second; do to mi (C to E, F to A, etc.), a third; do to fa (C to F, F to B, etc.), a fourth; do to so (C to G, F to C, etc.), an eighth or octave, etc. These intervals are usually further designated thus: standard firsts, fourths, fifths, and octaves are perfect; standard seconds, thirds, sixths, sevenths, ninths, etc., are major. If an interval is a half-step longer than the corresponding standard interval, it is called augmented (or sharp, superfluous, extreme, redundant); thus, do to fa (C to F, F to B, etc.) is an augmented fourth; do to so (C to G, F to C, etc.) is an augmented sixth. If an interval is a half-step shorter than the corresponding major interval, it is called minor (or flat): thus, do to me (C to D, F to A, etc.) is a minor third, etc. If an interval is a half-step shorter than the corresponding perfect or minor interval, it is called diminished: thus, do to so (C to G, F to C, etc.) is a diminished fifth (also called imperfect); do to le (C to B, F to D, etc.) is a diminished sixth, etc. (This nomenclature is obviously inconsistent, and another is also in use, according to which all standard intervals are called major, all a half-step longer than the corresponding major intervals are called augmented, all a half-step shorter than the corresponding major are called minor, and all a half-step shorter than the corresponding minor are called diminished.) A given interval is measured and named by comparison with a major scale based on the lower tone of the interval. Intervals not greater than an octave are called simple; those greater than an octave, compound — compound intervals being reducible to simple ones by subtracting one or more octaves. When the upper tone of a simple interval is transposed an octave downward or its lower tone an octave upward, the interval is said to be inverted; inverted firsts become octaves, seconds become sevenths, thirds become sixths, etc.; and perfect intervals remain perfect, major intervals become minor, minor intervals become major, augmented intervals become diminished, and diminished intervals become augmented. Intervals are consonant or discordant; the perfect consonances are standard firsts, fourths, fifths, and octaves; the imperfect consonances are major or minor thirds and sixths; and the dissonances are major or minor seconds and sevenths, with all augmented and diminished intervals. The acoustical values of the more important recognised intervals are as follows:

	Pure.	Tempered.
Prime or unison.....(C to C, F to F)	1:1	1:1
Augmented prime.....(C to C \sharp , F to F \sharp)	24:25	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Minor second.....(C to D \flat , F to G \flat)	15:16
Major second.....(C to D, F to G)	8:9 (or 9:10)	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Augmented second.....(C to D \sharp , F to G \sharp)	64:75	1:2 $\frac{3}{4}$
Minor third.....(C to E \flat , F to A \flat)	5:6
Major third.....(C to E, F to A)	4:5	1:2 $\frac{3}{4}$
Perfect fourth.....(C to F, F to B \flat)	3:4	1:2 $\frac{3}{4}$
Augmented fourth (tritone).....(C to F \sharp , F to B \sharp)	32:45 (or 18:25)	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Diminished fifth.....(C to G \flat , F to C \flat)	45:64 (or 25:36)
Perfect fifth.....(C to G, F to C)	2:3	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Augmented fifth.....(C to G \sharp , F to C \sharp)	16:25	1:2 $\frac{3}{4}$
Minor sixth.....(C to A \flat , F to D \flat)	5:8
Major sixth.....(C to A, F to D)	3:5	1:2 $\frac{3}{4}$
Augmented sixth.....(C to A \sharp , F to D \sharp)	128:225	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Minor seventh.....(C to B \flat , F to E \flat)	9:16 (or 5:9)
Major seventh.....(C to B, F to E)	8:15	1:2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Diminished octave.....(C to C \flat , F to F \flat)	135:256
Octave.....(C to C, F to F)	1:2	1:2

The values given in the first column are those of the ideal intervals, such as are secured by using pure intonation; those given in the second column are those of equally tempered intonation, such as is used on keyed instruments, like the pianoforte and the organ. (See intonation and temperament.) A diatonic interval is one that occurs between two tones of a normal major or minor scale. A chromatic interval is one that occurs between a tone of such a scale and a tone foreign to that scale. An enharmonic interval is one on an instrument of fixed intonation, that is apparent only in the notation, being in fact a unison, as, on the pianoforte, the interval from F \sharp to G \flat . In musical science the theory of intervals is introductory to that of chords and to harmony in general.

6. In logic, a proposition. [Rare.]—Angular intervals, in astron. See angular.—At intervals. (a) After intervals. See def. 3. (b) During or between intervals; between whistles or by turns; occasionally or alternately: as, to rest at intervals.

Miriam watch'd and dozed at intervals.

Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

Consecutive or parallel intervals. See consecutive.—Direct interval, in music, an interval in its usual position: opposed to inverted interval. See def. 5.—Implied interval. See imply.—Natural intervals, in music, the intervals of the diatonic scale.—The extremes of an interval. See extreme.

Intervale (in-tér-vál'), n. [A var. of interval, as if < inter- + valé.] A low level tract of land, especially along a river; an interval. See interval, 2. [Local, U. S.]

At one place along the bank of a stream, there was a broad tract which Albert thought would make . . . "a beautiful piece of intervale."

Jacob Abbott, Mary Erskine, II.

The woody intervale just beyond the marshy land.

The Century, XXXI, 709.

Intervallic (in-tér-val'ik), a. [< interval (L. intervallum) + -ic.] In music, pertaining to intervals; pertaining to pitch as distinguished from force, duration, or quality.

Intervallum (in-tér-val'um), n. [< L. intervallum, an interval: see interval.] An interval.

I will devise matter enough out of this shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions, and I shall laugh without intervallum.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 1, 91.

Intervined (in-tér-vánd'), a. [< inter- + veined.] Intersected with or as if with veins.

Fair champagne with less rivers intervin'd.

Milton, P. R., III, 257.

Intervenant (in-tér-vé'nant), n. [< F. intervenant, ppr. of intervenir, intervenire: see intervenire.] In French law, an intervenor; one who intervenes.

Intervene (in-tér-vén'), v.; pret. and pp. intervened, ppr. intervening. [= F. intervenir = Pr. intervenir, entrevénir = Sp. intervenir = Pg. intervenir = It. intervenire, < L. intervenire, come between, < inter, between, + venire, come: see come.] 1. Intrans. 1. To come between; fall or happen between things, persons, periods, or events; be intermediate, or appear or happen intermediately.

I proceed to those errors and vanities which have intervened amongst the studies.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, I, 38.

No pleasing intricacies intervene.

No artful wildness to perplex the scene.

Pope, Moral Essays, IV, 115.

Between the fall of the Duke of Bourbon and the death of Fleury, a few years of frugal and moderate government intervened.

Macaulay, Mirabeau.

2. To come between in act; act intermediately or mediocrally; interfere or interpose, as between persons, parties, or states.

Another consideration must here be interposed, concerning the intervening of presbyters in the regimen of the several churches. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II, 230.

But Providence himself will intervene.

To throw his dark displeasure o'er the scene.

Cowper, Table-Talk, I, 444.

A magistrate possessed of the whole executive power . . . has authority to intervene between the nobles and commons.

J. Adams, Works, V, 67.

About the time Austria and Prussia proposed to the diet to intervene in the affairs of Schleswig on international grounds. Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, App. II, p. 423.

3. In law, to interpose and become a party to a suit pending between other parties: as, stockholders may intervene in a suit against directors.—Intervening subject, in contrapuntal music, an intermediate or secondary subject or theme.—Syn. 2 and 3. Interfere, Intermeddle, etc. See interpose.

II. trans. To come between; divide. [Rare.]

Self-grown woodlands of birch, alder, &c., intervening the different estates.

De Quincey.

Intervener, n. [< intervenire, v.] A coming together; a meeting.

They [Buckingham and Olivares] had some sharper and some milder differences, which might easily happen in such an intervene of grandees, both vehement in the parts which they awayed. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 237.

Intervener (in-tér-vé'nér), n. One who intervenes; specifically, in law, a third person who intervenes in a suit to which he was not originally a party.

Interveneance (in-tér-vé'niens), n. [< intervenire (t) + -co.] A coming between; intervention. [Rare.]

In respect of the interveneance of more successive instrumental causes. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 335.

Interveniens (in-tér-vé'niens), a. [< L. intervenire (t)-s, ppr. of intervenire, come between: see intervenire.] Coming or being between; intervening. [Rare.]

In the mathematics, that use which is collateral and interveniens is no less worthy than that which is principal and intended. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II, 172.

On the horizon's verge,

O'er interveniens waste, through glimmering haze

Unquestionably kenned, that cone-shaped hill.

Wordsworth, Near Aquapendente.

Interventum (in-tér-vé'ni-um), n.; pl. interventia (-ia). [< L. interventum, the space between veins (in the earth, in stones, etc.), < inter, between, + vena, vein: see vein.] In bot., the space or area occupied by parenchyma between the veins of leaves. Lindley.

Interventus (in-tér-vent'), v. t. [< L. intervenire, ppr. of intervenire, come between: see intervenire.] To obstruct; thwart.

To Ida he descends, and sees from thence Juno and Pallas hate the Greeks' defence:
Whose purpose his command, by Iris given,
Doth intervent. Chapman, Iliad, VIII.

I trust there is both day and means to intervent this bargain.

N. Ward, Simple Coder, p. 56.

Intervention (in-tér-ven'shon), n. [= F. intervention = Sp. intervencion = Pg. intervenção = It. intervento, < L. interventio (n-), an interposition, giving security, lit. a coming between; see intervenire.] 1. The act or state of intervening; a coming between; interposition; mediatorial interference: as, light is interrupted by the intervention of an opaque body; the intervention of one state in the affairs of another.

Till in soft steam

From Ocean's bosom his light vapours draw

With grateful intervention o'er the sky

Their veil diffusive spread.

Mallet, Amyntor and Theodora.

There was no pretext of a restraint upon the king's liberty for an armed intervention in the affairs of France.

Woolsey, Introduct. to Inter. Law, § 46.

Let us ever bear in mind that the doctrine of evolution has for its foundation not the admission of incessant divine interventions, but a recognition of the original, the immutable fiat of God.

J. W. Draper, Pop. Sci. Mo., XXXII, 180.

2. In law, the act by which a third person interposes and becomes a party to a suit pending between other parties.—Syn. Interference, Mediation, etc. See interposition.

Interventionist (in-tér-ven'shon-ist), n. [< intervention + -ist.] In med., one who favors interfering with the course of a disease for therapeutic purposes under certain circumstances, as contrasted with one who under these circumstances would leave the patient to nature.

Interventor (in-tér-ven'tor), n. [< L. intervenire, one who comes in, a visitor, LL. a surety, an intercessor, < intervenire, pp. intervenire, come between: see intervenire.] 1. Eccles., same as intercessor, 2.—2. An inspector in a mine, whose duty it is to report upon the works carried on, and upon the use made of supplies. Gregory Yale. [Western U. S.]

Interventricular (in-tér-ven-trik'ü-lär), a. [< L. inter, between, + ventriculus, ventricle, + -är.] 1. In anat., placed between ventricles, as those of the heart or brain: as, an interventricular opening in the heart.—2. In entom., coming between the chambers of the dorsal vessel or heart.—Interventricular valves, in entom., small valves opening toward the anterior end of the dorsal vessel, and separating the chambers.

Intervenue, n. [< OF. intervenue, entrevenue, intervention, < intervenire, pp. of intervenire, intervenire: see intervenire. Cf. avenue.] Intervention. Blount.

Intervennar (in-tér-ven'ü-lär), a. [< inter- + venire + -är.] In entom., lying between the veins of an insect's wing.

With the usual marginal row of minute black intervennar lunules. Packard.

Intervert (in-tér-vért'), v. t. [= F. intervenir, < L. intervertere, turn aside, turn in another direction, < inter, between, + vertere, turn: see verse. Cf. avert, divert, invert, etc.] To turn to another course or to another use; divert; misapply.

The good never intervert nor misconstrue the favour and benefit which they have received.

Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 393.

Intervertebra (in-tér-vér'té-brä), n.; pl. intervertebra (-brä). [NL., < L. inter, between, + vertebra, vertebra: see vertebra.] In Carnus's system of classification (1828), an intervertebral element of the skull; the skeleton of a sense-organ regarded as of vertebral nature and interposed between successive cranial vertebral segments. Carnus had three such intervertebra—auditive, optic and olfactory. The distinction is perfectly sound, and still endures, though Carnus's interpretation of the homologies of the parts is abandoned. The three intervertebra are now regarded as the skeletons of the ear, eye, and nose: namely, the auditory or otic capsule or otocane (the petrosal or petromastoid part of the temporal bone), the sclerotic coat of the eyeball (extensively ossified in many animals), and the ethmoid bone (mesethmoid and pair of ethmoturbinals).

Intervertebral (in-tér-vér'té-bräl), a. [= F. intervertébral; as inter- + vertebra + -al.] Situated between any two successive vertebrae.—Intervertebral disk, the intervertebral fibrocartilage or substance when of discoidal form, as in man.—Intervertebral fibrocartilage. See fibrocartilage.—Intervertebral foramina. See foramen.—Intervertebral substance, in human anat., concentric laminae of fibrous tissue and more internally fibrocartilage, with soft pulpy matter in the interior, forming an elastic cushion between any two contiguous vertebral bodies.

Interview (in-tér-vü), n. [Early mod. E. entrevue; < OF. entrevue, F. entrevue, interview, meeting, < entrevoir, refl., meet, visit, < entre, between, + voir, see, > vue, view, sight: see view.] 1. A meeting of persons face to face; usually, a formal meeting for conference.

To bring your most imperial majesties

Unto this bar and royal interview.

Shak., Hen. V., v. 2, 27.

'Twas in the temple where I first beheld her. . .

The church hath first begun our interview.

And that's the place must join us into one.

Middleton, Changeling, I, 1.

But if the busy toll-tale day

Our happy interview betray—

Let thou confesse too, melt away.

Habington, Castara, I.

2. In journalism: (a) A conversation or colloquy held with a person whose views or statements are sought for the purpose of publishing them.

Mr. ———'s refusal was full notice . . . that there would be no use in trying to get out of him through an interview what he was not willing to furnish through his own pen. The Nation, Nov. 18, 1896.

(b) A report of such a conversation.

Interview (in-tér-vü), v. [Early mod. E. entrevue, entrevue; < interview, n.] 1. trans. To have an interview with; visit as an interviewer, usually with the purpose of publishing what is said.

II. intrans. To hold an interview; converse or confer together. [Rare.]

Their mutual interviews . . . exhorted them . . . to mete and enterview in some place decent and convenient. Hall, Hen. VI., an. 12.

Interviewer (in-tér-vü-ér), n. One who interviews; a person, especially a newspaper reporter, who holds an interview or practises interviewing for the purpose of publishing what is said to him.

The interviewer is a product of over-civilization.

O. W. Holmes, The Atlantic, LI, 73.

interviewing (in-tér-vü-íng), n. [Verbal n. of interview, v.] The practice of seeking interviews and colloquy, especially with persons of some importance or conspicuousness, for the purpose of publishing their remarks in newspapers.

When interviewing began to be a regular enterprise, a few years ago, the English leader-writers denounced it as the most dreadful form which American impertinence had yet assumed. The Nation, Nov. 29, 1868, p. 440.

This led to an article on interviewing in the Nation of January 28, 1869, which was the first formal notice of the practice under that name, and caused the adoption of the term both in this country and in England.

The American, IX, 529.

interviewable (in-tér-viz'i-bl), a. [< inter- + visible, v.] Mutually visible; that may be seen the one from the other: applied to signal- and surveying-stations.

interviewist (in-tér-viz'it), v. i. [< inter- + visit, v.] To exchange visits. [Rare.]

Here we trifled and bathed, and interviewed with the company who frequent the place for health.

Bozjan, Diary, June 27, 1854.

interview (in-tér-viz'it), n. [< interviewist, v.] An intermediate visit. Quarterly Rev. [Rare.]

intervital (in-tér-vi'tal), a. [< L. inter, between, + vita, life: see vital.] Between two lives; pertaining to the intermediate state between death and the resurrection. [Rare.]

If Sleep and Death be truly one,
And every spirit's folded bloom
Thru' all its intervital gloom
In some long trance should slumber on.

Tennyson, In Memoriam, XLIII.

intervocalic (in-tér-vô-kal'ik), a. [< inter- + L. vocalis, a vowel: see vocalic.] Between vowels.

Showing that intervocalic l of the Provençal MSS. should not invariably be reproduced as j.

Amer. Jour. Philol., VIII, 490.

intervolution (in-tér-vô-lû'shon), n. [< inter- + evolve, after evolution.] The state of being inter-evolved. [Rare.]

involve (in-tér-volv'), v. t.; pret. and pp. involved, pp. involved. [< L. inter, between, among, + volv, roll: see volute.] To wind or involve reciprocally, or one within another.

Mystical dance, which yonder starry sphere
Of planets, and of fix'd, in all her wheels Revolves nearest, mazes intricate, Eccentric, involved, yet regular Then most when most irregular they seem.

Milton, P. L., v, 628.

Great Artist! Then, whose finger set aright
This exquisite machine, with all its wheels,
Though involved d, exact.

Young, Night Thoughts, ix.

interweave (in-tér-wév'), v. t.; pret. interwove, pp. interwoven (sometimes interwove, interweaved), ppr. interweaving. [< inter- + weave.] 1. To weave together into a single fabric, as two or more different materials or strands; as, to interweave silk and cotton.

A mass of silvery gauze was thrown back, revealing Closely attired in an old-fashioned ball dress made of lace interwoven with silver threads.

Harper's Mag., LXXVIII, 254.

2. To intermingle as if by weaving; blend intimately; intertwine; interlace.

Words interwove with sighs found out their way.

Milton, P. L., l. 621.

He so interweaves truth with probable fiction that he puts a pleasing fallacy upon us.

Dryden.

He has interwoven in the Body of his Fable a very beautiful and well invented Allegory.

Addison, Spectator, No. 273.

interwind (in-tér-wind'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interwound, ppr. interwinding. [< inter- + wind, v.] To move in a serpentine course, as one among others moving in the same manner. [Rare.]

Uncounted sails which . . . pass and repass, wind and interwind.

E. S. Phelps, Sealed Orders.

interwish (in-tér-wish'), v. t. [< inter- + wish.] To wish mutually.

The venoms of all stepdames, gamsters' gall,
What tyrants and their subjects interwish.

Donne, The Curse.

interwork (in-tér-wérk'), v. t. [< inter- + work.] 1. To work together; act with reciprocal effect.—2. To work between; operate intermediately.

The doctrine of an interworking providence.
E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel the Heart of Christ, p. 335.

interworld (in-tér-wérld), n. [< inter- + world.] A world between other worlds.

Other worlds, or imaginary interworlds and spaces between.

Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 640.

interwound (in-tér-wúnd' or -wúnd'), v. t. [< inter- + wound.] To wound mutually.

The Captain chuses but three hundred out;
And, arming each but with a Trump and Torch,
About a mighty Pagan Host doth march.
Making the same, through their drad sodain sound,
With their owne Arms themselves to interwound.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Captaines.

Hence discontented sects and schisms arise;
Hence interwounding controversies spring,
That feed the simple, and offend the wise.

Daniel, Musophilus.

interwound (in-tér-wúnd'). Preterit and past participle of interwind.

interwove (in-tér-wóv'). Preterit and occasional past participle of interweave.

interwoven (in-tér-wóv'n). Past participle of interweave.

interwreath (in-tér-róth'), v. t.; pret. and pp. interwreathed, ppr. interwreathing. [< inter- + wreath.] To twist or plait into a wreath. [Rare.]

Gay, happy youth, crown'd with a heav'nly ray
Of the first flame, and interwreathed bay,
Inform my soul in labour to begin,
Ios or antheus, peans or a hymn.

Longfellow, Posthuma, II, To Mr. E. B.

interwrought (in-tér-rát'). A preterit and past participle of interwork.

intersocial (in-tér-zô-si'jal), a. [< inter- + socium + -al.] Intervening between or among the zoecia of a polyzoon: as, "the intersocial pores." Nature, XXX, 306.

interygapophysial (in-tér-zí'ga-pô-fiz'i-ál), a. [< inter- + zygapophysis + -al.] Situated between the zygapophyses or articular processes of a vertebra.

intestable (in-tos'ta-bl), a. [= F. intestable = It. intestabile, < L. intestabilis, disqualified from witnessing or making a will, < in-priv + testabilis, qualified to give testimony: see testable.] Cf. intestate.] Legally unqualified or disqualified to make a will: as, an idiot or a lunatic is intestable.

Such persons as are intestable for want of liberty or freedom of will are by the civil law of various kinds: as prisoners, captives, and the like. But the law of England does not make such persons absolutely intestable.

Blackstone, Com., II, xxxii.

intestacy (in-tos'ta-si), n. [< intesta (see intestable) + -cy.] The condition of dying intestate or without leaving a valid will; the leaving of property not disposed of, or not effectually disposed of, by will. Partial intestacy exists where some of the property is effectually bequeathed, but not all.

The statute 31 Edward III. c. 11. provides that, in case of intestacy, the ordinary shall depnte the nearest and most lawful friends of the deceased to administer his goods.

Blackstone, Com., II, xxxii.

intestate (in-tos'tat), a. and n. [= F. intestat = Sp. Pg. intestado = It. intestato, < L. intestatus, having made no will, < in-priv + testatus, having made a will, pp. of testari, make a will: see test, testament. Cf. intestable.] I. a. 1. Having made no will, or no valid will; having left property not effectually disposed of by will. The decedent is properly said to have died intestate as to any part of his property not so disposed of.

In case a person made no disposition of such of his goods as were testable, whether that were only part or the whole of them, he was, and is, said to die intestate.

Blackstone, Com., II, xxxii.

The ecclesiastical jurisdiction in testamentary matters and the administration of the goods of persons dying intestate was peculiar to England and the sister kingdoms.

Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 400.

Children inherited equally as co-partners the property of intestate parents, whether real or personal.

Bancroft, Hist. U. S., I, 384.

2. Not disposed of by will; not legally devised or bequeathed: as, an intestate estate.—Intestates' Estates Act, an English statute of 1884 (47 and 48 Vict. c. 71) relating to administration of personal estate, and escheat of real estate.

II. n. A person dying without making a valid will, or leaving any property not effectually bequeathed.

intestimonium (in tes-ti-mô'ni-um). [L. in, in, for; testimonium, acc. of testimonium, witness, testimony: see testimony.] In witness.

Intestina (in-tes-ti'nâ), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of intestinus, internal: see intestine.] Intestinal worms—that is, worms living in the intestines of other animals; entozoa in general. It was the first Linnean order of the class Vermes, including worms which for the most part inhabit the bodies of other animals. The term has no exact technical meaning, and is not now in use. Also Intestinalia.

intestinal (in-tes'ti-nal), a. [= F. intestinal = Sp. Pg. It. intestinale, < NL. intestinalis, < L. intestinum, an intestine: see intestine, n.] 1. Of or pertaining to the intestine, or the intestines in general; enteric: as, the intestinal tube or tract; intestinal movements.

The cœcum has been called the second stomach, the idea once being that in it the final process of intestinal digestion was carried out.

E. W. Richardson, Prevent. Med., p. 117.

2. Having an intestine or enteron: the opposite of anenterous: applied to nearly all the Metazoa as distinguished from the Protozoa.

—3. Inhabiting the intestine; entozoic; of or pertaining to the Intestina or Intestinalia.—Intestinal fever. See fever.—Intestinal follicle. See follicle. 2.—Intestinal glands. See gland.—Intestinal juice, the secretion found in the intestine, or more strictly that secreted by the intestinal glands themselves, independently of the gastric, pancreatic, and hepatic contributions; succus entericus. It has some, but apparently unimportant, digestive power.—Intestinal naval worm, etc. See the nouns.

Intestinales (in-tes-ti-nâ'léz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of intestinalis, intestinal: see intestinal.] The intestinal ascidians, in which the intestinal canal lies entirely behind the small branchial sac, as in the salps: distinguished from the branchial ascidians.

Intestinalia (in-tes-ti-nâ'li-â), n. pl. [L., neut. pl. of intestinalis: see intestinal.] Same as Intestina.

intestine (in-tes'tin), a. and n. [= F. intestin = Sp. Pg. It. intestino, < L. intestinus, inward, internal, intestine (neut. intestinum, usually in pl. intestina, entrails), < intus, within, < in = E. in: see in. Cf. internal and entrails, from the same source.] I. a. 1. Internal; inward; pertaining to the interior part of something.

Epilipsia, ferus catarrha, Intestine stone and ulcer. Milton, P. L., xl, 484.

From chaos and parental darkness came Light, the first fruits of that intestine broil,
That sullen ferment, which for wondrous ends
Was ripening in itself. Keats, Hyporion, II.

2†. Inner; innate; inborn.

Everything labours under an intestine necessity. Cudworth.

3. Internal with regard to a company, community, or nation; domestic: usually applied to what is evil: as, intestine feuds.

Thair was not sen King Keneths days
Nis strange intestine crowl stryl.

Battle of Harlaw (Child's Ballads, VII, 180).

Hereof aryse these intestine battails betwixt the cryten kynges, to prepare the waye more easy for the Turke to invade vs.

Joye, Expos. of Daniel, v.

No country in Europe . . . was so sorely afflicted with intestine anarchy as Castile. Prescott, Ferd. and Is., Int.

The boycott thus becomes the intestine enemy of society and its peace. The Century, XXXII, 321.

Intestine motion, the motion of very small parts of a body, as of molecules.

II. n. In anat., the lower part of the alimentary canal, extending from the pyloric end of the stomach to the anus; gut; bowel: in popular use usually in the plural: the guts; bowels; entrails. In a wider sense, in biology, the term is also used to include the whole alimentary canal or enteron. (See alimentary and enteron.) In man, as in other vertebrates and many invertebrates, the intestine is the tube into which partly digested food is received from the stomach, for the completion of the digestive process by the action upon the food of certain secretions (as the hepatic, pancreatic, and intestinal), the drawing off of the assimilable material by the blood-vessels and lacteals, and the ejection of the refuse or non-assimilable substances, as feces or excrement, by the anus. The length of the human intestine is five or six times that of the body, such extent representing, perhaps, an average of relative length; the intestine is generally shorter in carnivorous animals, and longer in those which are herbivorous. It is a musculomembranous tube invested with a peritoneal coat, lined with mucous membrane, and having in its walls both longitudinal and circular muscular fibers. It lies coiled in many convolutions in the abdomen, the coils being freely movable, though the tube as a whole is held in place by mesenteric folds of peritoneum. Into it are poured the secretions of the liver and pancreas, as well as those of its own numerous glandular structures. The character of the tube in man and mammals generally has caused its division into a small and a large intestine. The former extends from the pylorus to the iliocecal valve, and is subdivided into duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. The latter consists of the cœcum or head of the colon, with its appendix vermiformis; of the colon proper, divided into ascending, transverse, and descending; and of the rectum or straight gut, continued from the descending colon by the sigmoid flexure. The small intestine is smoothly and simply tubular; the large is more or less extensively sacculated. This distinction does not hold as a rule below a, vermiform appendix; b, ascending colon; c, cecum; d, duodenum; e, descending colon; f, rectum, ending at anus; g, sigmoid flexure of colon, including ae, ce, de; h, termination of esophagus; j, pyloric end of stomach, whence the coiled small intestine (duodenum, jejunum, and ileum) extends to h; k, transverse colon.

Human Stomach and Intestines.

mammals, in many of which, also, the oesum is of comparatively enormous extent. Thus, in birds, in which there are commonly a pair of oesum, the site of these organs marks the only distinction between the preceding and succeeding portions of the tube. In many lower vertebrates, as fishes, oesum may be very numerous, and situated near the pylorus. In all vertebrates the cavity of the intestine is primitively continuous with that of the umbilical vesicle, and in those which have an allantois with the cavity of that organ. In its simplest possible form the intestine represents the interior of a gastrula. See out under gastrula.

The intestines appear to be affected with albuminoid disease next in frequency to the spleen, liver, kidneys, and lymphatic glands.

Quain, Med. Diet., p. 750.
Clavate intestine. See clavate.—Thick intestine, in certain insects, a distention of the posterior end of the ileum, forming a large blind sac which is turned back toward the ventriculus. It is thickened, and ridged on the inner surface. Its function appears to be to subject the food to a second digestion before it is passed out of the body.

intestineform (in-tes'ti-ni-fôrm), a. [L. intestinum, intestine, + forma, shape.] Resembling an intestine in form.

Stomach greatly elongated, intestineform.

Quoted in Encyc. Brit., I. 415.

intext, n. [L. intextus, an interweaving, joining together, intextere, interweave, weave into, < in, in, + texere, weave; see text, and cf. context.] The text of a book; the contents.

I had a book which none
Co'd read the intext but my self alone.

Herick, To his Closet-Gods, l. 6.

intextine (in-tek's-tin), n. [L. intus, within, + E. extine.] In bot., a supplementary membrane which is sometimes present in the outer coat (extine) of pollen-grains, as in Eriothera, where the extine separates into a true extine and an intextine.

intertexture (in-tek's-tûrd), a. [L. intextere, pp. intextus, inweave, < in, in, + texere, weave. Cf. texture.] Woven or worked in. Wright, in theist (in the'st). [L. in, in; theist, abl. of thesis, theists; see thesis.] As a proposition; in the nature of a thesis.

intest (in-ther'st), v. t. [in + thirst.] To affect with thirst; make thirsty.

Using our pleasure as the traveller doth water, not as the drunkard does wine, whereby he is inflamed and *intest*ed the more. Sp. Hall, Christian Moderation, l. 5.

intrall, intral, v. t. See enthrall.

intrallment, intrallment, n. See enthrallment.

intrhone (in-thrôn'), v. t. See enthrone.

intrhong (in-thrông'), v. t. [in + throng.] To throng in.

His people like a flowing stream intrhong. Fairfax.

intrhonzate, a. [ML. intrhonzatus, pp. of intrhonzare, enthrone; see enthrone.] Enthroned.

In the feast of all saints, the archbishop was intrhonzate at Canterbury.

Holme's Chron., II, v. 5, col. 2. (Nares.)

intrhonzation (in-thrô-ni-zâ'shon), n. See enthronzation.

intrhonzise (in-thrô-nîz), v. t. See enthronzise.

intice, inticement, etc. Obsolete forms of entice, etc.

intill (in-tîl'), prep. [ME. intill, intyl (< OSw. intil, in til, Sw. intill = Dan. intill), a var. of until; see until. Cf. into.] 1. Into; in.

It was intill a pleasant time,

Upon a summer's day.

The Earl of Mar's Daughter (Child's Ballads, I. 171).

She's ta'en on the keys intill her hand,

And threw them deep, deep in the sea.

The Knight's Ghost (Child's Ballads, I. 211).

2. Unto.

Although he sought oon intill Inde,

Rom. of the Rose, l. 624.

But ago, with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me intill the land,

As if I had never been such.

Shak., Hamlet, v. 1, 81.

intima (in'ti-mâ), n.; pl. intimas (-mê). [NL., fem. of L. intimus, inmost; see intimate.] In soöl. and anat., an intimate (that is, an innermost or lining) membrane, coating, or other structure of some part or organ; specifically, the innermost coat of an artery or vein, consisting of the endothelial lining backed by connective and elastic tissue. The full term is tunica intima.

When the larva undergoes ecdysis, the intima of a portion of the tracheal system is also cast off by means of some of these chordia. Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 220.

The coats which were found to have undergone morbid change were the intima and the middle coat.

Lancet, No. 2424, p. 749.

intimacy (in'ti-mâ-si), n.; pl. intimacies (-siz). [in + tima (cf. intimate).] 1. The state of being intimate; close union or conjunction.

Explosions occur only . . . where the elements concerned are . . . distributed among one another molecularly, or, as in gunpowder, with minute intimacy. H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 85.

2. Close familiarity or fellowship; intimate friendship.

Rectory and Hall,
Bound in an immemorial intimacy,
Were open to each other.

Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

The peculiar art of alternate gushing intimacy and cool obliviousness, so well known to London fashionable women. Peep at Our Cousins, iv.

—Syn. Familiarity, etc. See acquaintance.

intimado, n. [Appar. < Sp. Pg. intimado (pp.) = E. intimate (a. and n.); but no such use of Sp. Pg. appears.] An intimate friend; a confidant.

Did not I say he was the Earl's intimado?
Roger North, Examen, p. 23.

intima, n. Plural of intima.

intimate (in'ti-mât), v. t.; pret. and pp. intimated, ppr. intimating. [L. intimatus, pp. of intimare (> It. intimare = Sp. Pg. Pr. intimar = F. intimier), put or bring into, press into, announce, publish, make known, intimate, < intimus (> ult. E. intime), inmost, innermost, most intimate, superl. (cf. interior, compar.) of intus, within, < in, in; see interior.] 1. To make known, especially in a formal manner; announce.

The conlaturours . . . imagined wyth themselves that their enterpryse was intimate and published to the kyng. Hall, Hen. IV., an. 1.

At last he found the most gracious Prince Sigismundus, with his Colonell at Lipswick in Misenland, who gave him his Pause, intimating the service he had done.

Capt. John Smith, True Travels, l. 43.

Each Highland family has a domestic spirit called ban-shie, who intimates approaching disaster by shrieks and wallings. Chambers's Journal, No. 748.

2. Specifically, to make known by indirect means or words; hint or suggest; indicate; point out.

This fable intimates an extraordinary and almost singular thing. Bacon, Moral Fables, vii., Expl.

We intimated our minds to them by signs, beckoning with our hand. Rob. Knox (Arber's Eng. Garner), l. 421.

He did not receive us very politely, but said he wondered for what end the Franks went up to the Cataracts, and asked if I had a watch to sell: which is a way they have of intimating that they want such a present.

Povecke, Description of the East, l. 83.

—Syn. 2. Suggest, Intimate, etc. See hint, v. t.

intimate (in'ti-mât), a. and n. [L. intimatus, pp., made known, intimate; see the verb.] 1. a. 1. Inner; inmost; intrinsic; pertaining to minute details or particulars: as, the intimate structure of an organism; the intimate principles of a science.

Rough beauty of climate hangs over these Roman cottages and farm-houses, . . . but their charm for seekers of the picturesque is the way in which the lustrous air seems to illuminate their intimate desolation.

H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 148.

2. Pertaining to the inmost mind; existing in one's inner thoughts or feelings; inward: as, intimate convictions or beliefs; intimate knowledge of a subject.

They knew not

That what I motion'd was of God: I knew
From intimate impulse. Milton, S. A., l. 223.

His characteristics were prudence, coolness, steadiness of purpose, and intimate knowledge of men.

Frencott, Ferd. and Isa., II. 24.

3. Closely approximating or coalescing; near; familiar: as, intimate relation of parts; intimate union of particles; intimate intercourse.

When the multitude were thundered away from any approach, he (Moses) was honoured with an intimate and immediate admission. Smith, Sermons.

I crown thee (Winter) king of intimate delights, Fire-side enjoyments, homeborn happiness.

Cowper, Task, iv. 189.

4. Close in friendship or acquaintance; on very familiar terms; not reserved or distant.

I sent for three of my friends. We are so intimate that we can be company in whatever state of mind we meet, and can entertain each other without expecting always to rejoice. Steele, Tatler, No. 181.

Barbara . . . took Winifred's waist in the turn of her arm—as is the way of young women, especially of such as are intimate enemies.

J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 282.

5. Familiarly associated; personal.

These diminutive, intimate things bring one near to the old Roman life. . . . A little glass cup that Roman lips have touched says more to us than the great vessel of an arena. H. James, Jr., Little Tour, p. 214.

II. n. A familiar friend, companion, or guest; one who has close social relations with another or others.

Poor Mr. Murphy was an intimate of my first husband's. Mrs. Thrale-Picot, Aug., 23, 1810.

Thackeray was one of the intimates at Gore House.

W. Deane, Fifty Years Ago, p. 204.

I testify that our lord and our Prophet and our friend Mohham mad is his servant, and his apostle, and his elect, and his intimate, the guide of the way, and the lamp of the dark.

Quoted in E. W. Lane's Modern Egyptians, I. 101.

intimated (in'ti-mâ-ted), a. Made intimate or friendly; intimate.

A goodly view of majesty it was

To see such intimated league betwixt them.

O, what a gladsome sight of joy it is When monarchs so are link'd in unity!

Ford, Honour Triumphant, Monarchs' Meeting.

intimately (in'ti-mât-li), adv. In an intimate manner; inwardly; closely; familiarly: as, to know anything intimately; two fluids intimately mixed; two writers intimately associated.

intimation (in-ti-mâ'shon), n. [= F. intimation = Pr. intimation = Sp. intimation = Pg. intimação = It. intimacone, < L. intimatio (n-), an announcement, < intimare, announce; see intimate.] 1. The act of intimating or announcing.—2. An announcement; a formal declaration or notification: as, an intimation from the Foreign Office.

The intimations and surveys necessary for obtaining drawbacks, debentures, or bounties, according to the Excise laws. Ure, Dict., I. 670.

3. Information indirectly or covertly imparted; a suggestion or hint; an implied meaning: as, an intimation that one's presence is not desired; intimation of danger.

Besides the more solid parts of learning, there are several little intimations to be met with on medals, that are very pleasant to such as are conversant in this kind of study. Adams, Ancient Medals, I.

If they [the Sadducees] had rejected the prophets, he (Josephus) would have charged them with it expressly, and not have left us to collect it from oblique hints and dark intimations. Jortin, Remarks on Eccles. Hist., App.

Let us compare with the exact details of Dante the dim intimations of Milton. Macaulay, Milton.

—Syn. 3. Suggestion, Insinuation, etc. See hint, v. t.

intimer, a. [F. intime = Sp. intimo = Pg. It. intimo, < L. intimus, inmost, intimate; see intimate, v. and a.] Intimate; inward; close.

The composition or dissolution of mixed bodies . . . is the chief work of elements, and requires an intime application of the agents. Str. K. Digby, On Bodies, v. § 6.

intimidate (in-tim'i-dâ), v. t.; pret. and pp. intimidated, ppr. intimidating. [ML. intimidatus, pp. of intimidare (> Sp. Pg. intimidâr = F. intimidier), make afraid, < L. in, in, + timidus, afraid, timid; see timid.] To make timid or fearful; make afraid; inspire with fear; deter by threats. See intimidation, 2.

When a government is firm, and factions are weak, the making some public examples may intimidate a faction otherwise disheartened.

Sp. Burnet, Hist. Reformation, an. 1558.

One day a single man on horseback came and told me that there was a large cavern under the temple, where often a great number of rogues lay hid, and bid me take care, seeming to design to intimidate me.

Povecke, Description of the East, I. 91.

—Syn. To abash, frighten, scare, daunt, cow.

intimidation (in-tim'i-dâ'shon), n. [= F. intimidation = Sp. intimidacion = Pg. intimidagão, < ML. as if intimidatio* (n-), < intimidare, intimidate; see intimidate.] 1. The act of intimidating or making fearful, or the state of being intimidated; fear excited by threats or hostile acts.

Before the accession of James the First, or, at least, during the reigns of his three immediate predecessors, the government of England was a government by force: that is, the king carried his measures in parliament by intimidation. Paley, Moral Philos., vi. 7.

One party is acted on by bribery, the other by intimidation. The Times (London), Oct. 3, 1886.

2. In law, the wrongful use of violence or a threat of violence, direct or indirect, against any person with a view to compel him to do or to abstain from doing some act which he has a legal right to do or to abstain from doing.

intimidatory (in-tim'i-dâ-tô-ri), a. [intimidato + -ory.] Producing or intended to produce intimidation.

intinction (in-tink'g'shon), n. [LL. intinctio (n-), a dipping in, a baptizing, < L. intingere, intingere, pp. intinctus, dip in, LL. baptize, < L. in, in, + tingere, pp. inctus, tinge, dye; see tinge.] 1. The act of dyeing. Blount.—2. In the Greek and other Oriental churches, the act of steeping parts of the hosts or consecrated oblates in the chalice, in order thus to communicate the people with both species (of bread and of wine). For this purpose the coeliac or eucharistic spoon is used, except by the Armenians. In the Western Church intinction is mentioned in the seventh (as a method of communion for the sick already in the fifth) century, and was a general praction in the tenth and two succeeding centuries. It fell into disuse with the denial of the challenge to communicants. Intinction is to be distinguished from the act of commensuration, which is done with a particle of the host or oblate with which the priest communicates himself.

intinctivity (in-tink-tiv'i-ti), n. [L. in-priv. + tinctus, pp. of tingere, dye (see tinge, tinct), + -ive + -ity.] Formerly, < in-3 + tinctivity, < tinctive* + -ity.] Lack of coloring quality: as, the intinctivity of fullers' earth. Kirwan.

intine (in-'tin), n. [L. intus, within, + -ine.] In bot., the inner coat of the shell of the pollen-grains in phenogamous plants, of the spores of fungi, etc. It is a transparent, extensible membrane of extreme tenuity.

These become invested by a double envelope, a firm cuticle, and a thin intine. W. B. Carpenter, Microsc., § 884.

intire, intirely, etc. Obsolete or dialectal forms of entire, entirely, etc.

intiset, v. t. An obsolete form of entice.

intitler, v. t. An obsolete form of entitle. B. Johnson.

intitulation, n. [ML. "intitulatio(n)", < intitulare, intitle: see intitle.] The act of entitling, or conferring a title. Bailey.

intitule (in-tit-'ul), v. t.; pret. and pp. intituled, ppr. intituling. [Also entitule; < F. intituler = Fr. entituler, intitular = Sp. Pg. intitular = It. intitolare, intitolare; < ML. intitolare, entitle, < L. in, on, + titulus, a title: see title. Cf. entitle, a doublet of intitule.] To give a right or title to, or distinguish or call by, as a title or name; entitle or entitle. [Obsolete, or exceptionally used only in the latter sense, as in acts of the British Parliament.]

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field.
Shak., Lucres, l. 67.

I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intituled, nominated, or called Don Adriano de Armado. Shak., L. L. L., v. 1, 8.

That infamous rhapsody, intituled
"The Maid of Orleans." Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 2.

into (in-'tō), prep. [ME. into, < AS. in tō (two words), in to; in, tō, to. Cf. onto and unto.] 1. In and to; to and in: implying motion: used to express any relation, as of presence, situation, inclusion, etc., that is expressed by in, accompanied by the idea of motion or direction inward. Compare in. (a) Of motion or direction inward: after such verbs as go, come, run, fly, see, fall, bring, lead, thrive, put, look, show, etc.

Thoume enteth in to the Schyp asen, and by syde the Haven of Tyre, and come nought to Lande.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 126.
From God, the fountaine of all good, are deriued into the world all good thinges.

Juttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 79.
The governour and Mr. Winthrop wrote their letters into England to mediate their peace.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, l. 103.
The Interpreter takes them apart again, and has them first into a room where was a man that could look no way but downward.

Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 250.
(b) Of change of condition: after such verbs as pass, fall, grow, change, convert, transmute, etc. Into, as thus indicating change, may when used with an intransitive verb give it a transitive force: as, to take a man into submission; to reason one's self into error.

For many han into mischiefe fall,
And bene of ravenous Wolves preynt.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., September.

Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Rom. vi. 3.
Ramos is hilly, and like all the other islands is very rocky; it runs naturally into wood, of which there are all sorts that grow in Asia.

Pococke, Description of the East, II. ii. 24.
Those two blush-roses [on a girl's cheeks] . . . turned into a couple of damasks. O. W. Holmes, Aurora, p. 239.
2. In: not implying motion: as, he fought into the Revolution. [Prov. Eng., Scotch, and U. S.]

Lord Ingram wooed the Lady Malerey, Into her father's ha'.
Childs Pyet (Child's Ballads, II. 78).

They hadna stayd into that place
A month but and a day.
Sir Patrick Spens (Child's Ballads, III. 340).

3. Unto; until. Compare until.
Hell be thou, Marie, glorious mother hende!
Meeknes & honeste, with abstinence, me sende,
With chastite & charite into my lynnes ende.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 7.

Lete it stonde in a glas upon a litle fir into the tyme that the yreigne be colourid redde.
Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 10.

4. Within, implying deficiency: as, the pole was long enough into a foot. [Local, New Eng.]
intolerability (in-tol-'e-rā-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. intolerabilité = Sp. intolerabilidad; as intolerable + -ity: see -ibility.] The state or character of being intolerable.

The goodness of your true pun is in the direct ratio of the intolerability.
Poe, Marginalia, Int.

intolerable (in-tol-'e-rā-bl), a. [Formerly also intollerable; < ME. intollerable, < OF. intollerable, F. intolérable = Sp. intolerable = Pg. intolerável = It. intollerabile, < L. intollerabilis, that cannot bear, or cannot be borne, < in-priv. + tolerabilis, that can be borne: see tolerable.] Not tolerable; not to be borne or endured; insupportable; insufferable; insufferably objectionable or offensive: as, intolerable pain, heat, or cold; an intolerable burden.

For longer to endure it is intolerable.
Lamentation of M. Magdalen, l. 872.

That huge amphitheatre wherein those constant servants of Jesus Christ willingly suffered many intolerable and bitter tortures for his sake. Coryat, Crudities, l. 63.

(i) monstrous! but one halfpennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack! Shak., 1 Hen. IV., II. 4, 592.

And in matters of Religion there is not any thing more intolerable than a learned fool, or a learned Hypocrite.

Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

The hatred and contempt of the public are generally felt to be intolerable. Macaulay, Mill on Government.

= syn. Unbearable, unendurable, insupportable.

intolerableness (in-tol-'e-rā-bl-nēs), n. The character of being intolerable or insufferable.

intolerably (in-tol-'e-rā-blī), adv. To an intolerable degree; beyond endurance: as, intolerably noisy.

How was intolerably angry; and thenmost when he should have haad to be angry.

Holland, tr. of Ammianus, p. 353.

intolerance (in-tol-'e-rāns), n. [= F. intolérance = Sp. Pg. intolerancia = It. intolleranza, < L. intollerantia, intolerance, < intolerant (t-s), intolerant: see intolerant.] 1. The quality of being intolerant; incapacity or indisposition to bear or endure; non-endurance: as, intolerance of heat or cold.—2. Lack of toleration; indisposition to tolerate contrary opinions or beliefs; bigoted opposition or resistance to dissent.

Intolerance has its firmest root in the passion for the exercise of power. A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 124.

A boundless intolerance of all divergence of opinion was united with an equally boundless toleration of all falsehood and deliberate fraud that could favour received opinions. Locky, Europ. Morals, II. 16.

intolerancy (in-tol-'e-rān-si), n. Same as intolerance. [Rare.]

intolerant (in-tol-'e-rānt), a. and n. [= F. intolérant = Sp. Pg. intolerante = It. intollerante, < L. intolerant (t-s), intolerant, < in-priv. + tolerant (t-s), ppr. of tolerare, bear, tolerate: see tolerant.] 1. a. 1. Unable or indisposed to tolerate, endure, or bear: followed by of.

The powers of human bodies being limited and intolerant of excesses. Arbutnot.

2. Not tolerant; indisposed to tolerate contrary opinions or beliefs; impatient of dissent or opposition; denying or refusing the right of private opinion or choice in others; inclined to persecute or suppress dissent.

Intolerant, as is the way of youth
Unless itself be pleased.

Wordsworth, Prelude, vii.

Religion harsh, intolerant, austere,
Parent of manners like herself severe.

Cowper, Table-Talk, l. 612.

The gloomiest and most intolerant of a stern brotherhood. Hawthorne, Snow Image.

II. n. One who does not favor toleration.

You might as well have concluded that I was a Jew, or a Mahometan, as an intolerant and persecutor.

Sp. Lough, Letters to Warburton, p. 62.

intolerantly (in-tol-'e-rānt-lī), adv. In an intolerant manner; without toleration.

intolerated (in-tol-'e-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intolerated, ppr. intolerating. [< in-3 + tolerate.] Not to tolerate or endure.

They who observed and had once experienced this intolerating spirit could no longer tolerate on their part.

Shaftesbury, Reflections, II. 2.

I would have all intolerance intolerated in its turn.

Chesterfield.

intoleratation (in-tol-'e-rā-'shon), n. [< in-3 + toleration.] Want of toleration; intolerance.

That narrow mob-spirit of intoleratation. Chesterfield.

intomb, v. t. An obsolete form of entomb.

intonaco, intonico (in-tō-'nā-kō, -nē-kō), n. [It., rough-cast, plaster, < intonacare, intonicare, plaster, cover, < in, on, + tonica, tunic: see tunic.] The last coat of plaster laid on a wall as a ground for fresco-painting.

The intonaco being spread, the artist painted his subject in a slight manner with terra rossa, laying in the chiaro-scuro and details, after which the plaster was allowed to dry.

Encyc. Brit., IX. 770.

intonate, v. i. [L. intonatus, pp. of intonare, thunder, resound, cry out vehemently, < in, in, on, + tonare, thunder: see thunder. Cf.

detonate.] To thunder; make a rumbling noise. Bailey.

intonate (in-'tō-nāt), v.; pret. and pp. intonated, ppr. intonating. [ML. intonatus, pp. of intonare (> It. intonare = Pg. entoar = Sp. Fr. entonner = F. entonner), sing according to tone, intonate, < L. in, in, on, + tonus, tone: see tone.] I. intrans. 1. To intone.—2. To sound the tones of the musical scale; practise solmization.

II. trans. To pronounce with a tone; intone; utter with a sonant vibration of the vocal cords.

The great trinitas [It is finished] shall be intonated by the general voice of the whole host of heaven.

S. Harris, On Isa. III. (1789), p. 322.

The i sets the tip of the tongue against the roof of the mouth, but leaves the sides open for the free escape of the intonated breath. Whitney, Life and Growth of Lang., p. 66.

intonation (in-tō-'nā-'shon), n. [< intonate + -ion.] A thundering; thunder.

intonation (in-tō-'nā-'shon), n. [= F. intonation = It. intonazione; as intonate + -ion. Cf. detonation.] 1. Utterance of tones; mode of enunciation; modulation of the voice in speaking; also, expression of sentiment or emotion by variations of tone: as, his intonation was resonant or harsh.

Erskine studied her [Mrs. Siddons's] cadences and intonations, and avowed that he owed his best displays to the harmony of her periods and pronunciation.

Doran, Annals of the Stage, II. 323.

To us, whose intonations belong not to the individual word, but to the whole period, it is difficult to conceive of the tone with which a word is uttered as a constant, essential, characteristic and expressive ingredient of the word itself.

G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

2. The act of intoning or speaking with the singing voice; specifically, the use of musical tones in ecclesiastical delivery: as, the intonation of the litany.—3. In music: (a) The process or act of producing tones in general or a particular series of tones, like a scale, especially with the voice. The term is often also used specifically to denote the relation in pitch of tones, however produced, to the key or the harmony to which they properly belong; and it is then applied both to vocal and to instrumental tones, and is characterised as pure, just, true, or as impure, false intonation. (b) In plain-song, the two or more notes leading up to the dominant or reciting-tone of a chant or melody, and usually sung by but one or a few voices. The proper intonation varies with the mode used, and also with the text to be sung.—Fixed intonation, fixed pitch: applied to the organ, pianoforte, and other instruments in which the pitch of each note is fixed, and not, as in the violin, horn, etc., subject to the will of the performer.

intonator (in-'tō-nā-tōr), n. [< intonate + -or.] A monochord mathematically subdivided for the precise study of musical intervals.

intone (in-'tōn'), v.; pret. and pp. intoned, ppr. intoning. [ML. intonare, intone, intonate: see intonate. Cf. entune.] I. trans. 1. To give tone or variety of tone to; vocalize.

It is a trite observation that so simple a thing as a clear, appropriate, and properly intoned and emphasised pronunciation in reading aloud is one of the rarest as well as most desirable of social accomplishments.

G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

2. To bring into tone or tune; figuratively, to imbue with a particular tone of feeling. [Rare.]

Everyone is penetrated and intoned, so to speak, by the social atmosphere of the particular medium in which he lives.

Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 156.

3. To speak or recite with the singing voice: as, to intone the litany.

II. intrans. 1. To utter a tone; utter a protracted sound.

So swells each wind-pipe: as intones to sea. . . .
Such [twang] as from lab'ring lungs the enthusiast blows,
High sound, attemper'd to the vocal nose.

Pope, Dunciad, II. 223.

Specifically—2. To use a monotone in pronouncing or repeating; speak or recite with the singing voice; chant.

I heard no longer
The snowy-handed, dilettante,
Delicate-handed priest intone.

Tennyson, Maud, viii.

People of this province [Toledo] intone rather than talk; their sentences are set to distinct drawing tones.

Lathrop, Spanish Vistas, p. 51.

3. In music: (a) To produce a tone, or a particular series of tones, like a scale, especially with the voice; sing or chant. (b) In plain-song, to sing the intonation of a chant or melody.

intortion, n. See intortion.

intort (in-'tōrt'), v. t. [L. intortus, pp. of intorquere, curl, twist, < in, in, + torquere, twist: see torson. Cf. distortion.] To twist; wreath; wind.

With reverend hand the king presents the gold,
Which round th' intorted horns the glider roll'd.
Pope, Odyssey, III. 558.

intortion (in-tôr'shqn), n. [Also intorsion (< F. intorsion = Pg. intorsão); < L. intortio (n.), a curling, twisting, < intortus, pp. of intortere, curl, twist: see intort.] A winding, bending, or twisting; specifically, in bot., the bending or turning of any part of a plant toward one side or the other, or in any direction from the vertical.

in totidem verbis (in-tô-tî-dem vër'bis). [L.: in, in; totidem, just so many (< tot, so many, + demonst. syllable -dem); verbis, abl. pl. of verbum, a word: see verb.] In just so many words; in these very words.

in toto (in tô'tô). [L.: in = E. in; toto, abl. of totum, neut. of totus, all: see total.] In all; in the whole; wholly; without qualification.

intoxicable (in-tok'si-kə-bl), a. [ML. as if intoxicabilis*, < intoxicare, intoxicate: see intoxicate.] Capable of being intoxicated or made drunk; hence, liable to be unduly excited or controlled by the passions.

... the people [were] not so intoxicable as to fall in with their brutal assistance, no good could come of any false plot.
Roger North, Examen, p. 314.

intoxicant (in-tok'si-kant), n. [ML. intoxicant (t), ppr. of intoxicare, intoxicate: see intoxicate.] That which intoxicates; an intoxicating substance, as brandy, bang, etc.

intoxicate (in-tok'si-kāt), v.; pret. and pp. intoxicated, ppr. intoxicating. [L. intoxicatus, pp. of intoxicare (> It. intossicare = Sp. entossigar, entossicar, atosigar, atosicar, intossicar = Pg. entossicar, atosicar = Pr. entossigar, entossigar, entossigar = F. intossiquer), poison, < L. in, in, + toxicon, poison: see toxic.] I. trans. 1. To poison. [Rare.]

Meat, I say, and not poison. For the one doth intoxicate and slay the eater, the other feedeth and nourisheth him.
Lutimer, Sermons and Remains, I. 35.

2. To make drunk, as with spirituous liquor; inebriate.

He intoxicates the leper-man,
With liquor's very sweet.
Sir Hugh le Blond (Child's Ballads, III. 255).
As with new wine intoxicated both,
They swim in mirth. Milton, P. L., ix. 1008.

3. Figuratively, to excite to a very high pitch of feeling; elate to exaltation, enthusiasm, or frenzy: as, one intoxicated by success.

With grace of Princess, with their pomp and State, Ambitious Spirits he doth intoxicate.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, I. 1.

Into what phrensy lately art thou hapt,
That in this sort intoxicates thy brain?
Drayton, Pastorals, v.

II. intrans. 1. To poison. [Rare.]

Because the poison of this opinion does so easily enter, and so strangely intoxicate, I shall presume to give an antidote against it.
South, Works, III. 144.

2. To cause or produce intoxication; have the property of intoxicating: as, an intoxicating liquor.

intoxicated (in-tok'si-kāt), a. [ML. intoxicatus, pp.: see the verb.] Intoxicated.

Deep versed in books, and shallow in himself,
Grude or intoxicated, collecting toys.
Milton, P. R., iv. 328.

intoxication (in-tok-si-kā'shqn), n. [= Sp. intoxicación, < ML. intoxicatio (n.), poisoning, < intoxicare, poison: see intoxicate.] 1. Poisoning.

It has been supposed that only in the case of abraded surfaces could intoxication with solutions [of corrosive sublimate] of 1 to 1000 and 1 to 2000 occur.
E. P. Davis, Medical News, I. 310.

2. The act of inebriating, or the state of being inebriated; drunkenness; the state produced by drinking too much of an alcoholic liquid, or by the use of opium, hashish, or the like.—3. Figuratively, high excitement of mind; uncontrollable passion; frenzy.

A kind of intoxication of loyal rapture, which seemed to pervade the whole kingdom.
Scott.

—Syn. 2. Inebriety.—3. Intoxication, delirium.

intra (in'trā), adv. and prep., within, fem. abl. (sc. parte) of intorus*, within: see inter- and interior.] A Latin preposition and adverb, meaning 'within,' used in some phrases occasionally met in English.

intra-, [L. intra, being the prep. and adv. as prefix: see intra.] A prefix in many words from the Latin, meaning 'within.' In the following etymologies it is treated much like inter-.

intra-abdominal (in'trā-ab-dom'i-nāl), a. [L. intra, within, + abdomen, abdomen: see ab- dominal.] Situated within the cavity of the abdomen.

intra-arterial (in'trā-ār-tē-ri-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + arteria, artery: see arterial.] Existing within an artery.

intra-branchial (in'trā-brang'ki-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + branchia, gills: see branchial.] Situated between branchia or gills; lying within gills or among parts of the branchial apparatus.

intra-buccal (in'trā-buk'āl), a. [L. intra, within, + bucca, the cheek: see buccal.] Situated within the mouth or within the cheek.

intracalicular (in'trā-kā-lik'ū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + caliculus, a small cup: see calicular, calycle.] Placed within or inside the calycle of a polyp.

intracapsular (in'trā-kap'sū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + capsula, a small chest (NL. capsule): see capsular.] Lying or occurring within a capsule, as a fracture occurring within the capsular ligament of the hip-joint; specifically, in radiolaria, situated within the central capsule.

intracardiac (in'trā-kār'di-āk), a. [L. intra, within, + Gr. kardia = E. heart: see cardiac.] Lying or occurring within the heart.

intracarpellary (in'trā-kār'pē-lār-i), a. [L. intra, within, + NL. carpellum, carpel: see carpellary.] Produced among or interior to the carpels. Cooke, Manual of Botanic Terms.

intracartilaginous (in'trā-kār-ti-lāj'i-nūs), a. [L. intra, within, + cartilago, cartilage: see cartilaginous.] Lying or occurring within cartilage: as, intracartilaginous ossification.

intracavitary (in'trā-kāv'i-tāl), a. [L. intra + cavitas + -al.] In bot., within the cavities: said of the supposed path of water in traversing the stems of plants.

intracellular (in'trā-sel'ū-lār), a. [L. intra + cellula + -ar.] Existing or done inside of a cell: opposed to extracellular: as, intracellular circulation or digestion; intracellular formation of spores in certain fungi. Most of the vital activities or functions of the Protozoa are intracellular.

The intracellular duct of the nephridium and the intracellular duct of the vas deferens may be explained by the different functions which the organs perform.
Enyo, Birk, XXIV. 688.

intracellularly (in'trā-sel'ū-lār-li), adv. Within the cells.

Endophytes which vegetate intracellularly.
De Bary, Fungi (trans.), p. 302.

intra-cephalic (in'trā-se-fal'ik or in'trā-sef'ā-lik), a. [L. intra, within, + Gr. kephalē, head: see cephalic.] Placed within the head, or within the brain.

intra-cerebral (in'trā-ser'ē-brāl), a. [L. intra, within, + cerebrum, the brain.] Situated or occurring within the cerebrum, or within the brain.

intracitellian (in'trā-kli-tel'i-an), a. and n. [L. intra, within, + NL. citellum, q. v., + -an.] I. a. Having the ducts of the testes opening in, and not before or behind, the citellum, as certain terriolous unnelids or earthworms. II. n. An earthworm having this structure.

Perris divided earthworms into three groups:—(1) Pre-citellians (e. g. Lumbricus), where the male pores are situated in front of the citellum; (2) Intracitellians (e. g. Eudrilus), where the male pores are within the citellum; and (3) Post-citellians (e. g. Pericheta), where the male pores open behind the citellum. Enyo, Birk, XXIV. 688.

intracitelline (in'trā-kli-tel'i-nē), a. [L. intra, within, + NL. citellum, q. v., + -inē.] Placed within the extent of the citellum.

intracloacal (in'trā-klo-āk-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + cloaca, cloaca: see cloacal.] Situated inside the cloaca, as the penis of a turtle or a crocodile.

intracolomic (in'trā-sē-lom'ik), a. [L. intra, within, + coloma + -ic.] Contained in a coloma: as, intracolomic muscular bands of a worm. Proc. Zool. Soc., London, 1888, p. 217.

intracontinental (in'trā-kon-ti-nen'tāl), a. [L. intra + continent + -al.] Within the borders or in the interior of a continental land-mass; inland; not pertaining to the sea-coast.

intracostalis (in'trā-kos-tā-lis), n.; pl. intracostales (-lēz). [NL. < L. intra, within, + costa, rib: see costal.] An internal intercostal muscle; one of the intercostals internal.

intracranial (in'trā-krā-ni-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + cranium, the skull: see cranial.] Situated within the cranium.

intracurvus (in'trā-kūr-rē-us), n.; pl. intracurves (-ī). [L. intra, within, + NL. curvus.] The inner part of the curvus muscle, commonly called the vastus internus. See curvus.

intractability (in-trak'tā-bil'i-ti), n. [L. intractabilis: see intractable.] Same as intractableness.

He subdued the intractability of all the four elements, and made them subservient to the use of man.
Wardour, On Pope's Essay on Man (ed. 1761), III. 212.

intractable (in-trak'tā-bl), a. [= It. intrattabile, < L. intractabilis, that may not be handled, unmanageable, < in- priv. + tractabilis, that may be handled: see tractable.] 1. Not tractable or to be drawn or guided by persuasion; uncontrollable.

What comfort of life shall he have, when all his parishioners are soe unsociable, soe intractable, so ill-affected unto him, as they usually be to all the English?
Spenser, State of Ireland.

Hee who is intractable, he whom nothing can persuade, may boast himself invincible. Milton, Edenoklastes, ix.

2. Not to be brought into the desired order or condition; unmanageable; resisting effort: as, an intractable disposition; an intractable subject for literary treatment.

It is amazing what money can do in the way of transforming a sterile and intractable place into beauty.
C. D. Warner, Roundabout Journey, p. 321.

—Syn. Stubborn, Refractory, etc. (see obstinate); unruly, unmanageable, ungovernable, wilful.

intractableness (in-trak'tā-bl-nes), n. The character or quality of being intractable. Also intractability.

intractably (in-trak'tā-bl), adv. In an intractable manner; uncontrollably; unmanageably.

intracted (in-trak'ted), a. [L. in, in, + tractus, drawn (see tract), + -ed.] Indrawn; sunken.

With hot intracted tongue and sunken cen.
T. Hudson, tr. of Du Bartas's Judith, III. 200.

intractile (in-trak'til), a. [L. in + tractilis.] Not tractile; incapable of being drawn out. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 830.

intracystic (in-trā-sis'tik), a. [L. intra + cyst + -ic.] Situated or occurring within a cyst.

intrade (in-trād), n. [For intrata*, < It. intrata, an entrance, entry, prelude: see entry.] In music, an introduction, usually instrumental, often found in old operas and suites.

intradot (in-trādōt), n. [For intrada*, < Sp. Pg. entrada, entry: see entry.] 1. Entry.

And now my lady makes her intrade, and begins the great work of the day.
Gentleman Intruder, p. 117.

2. Income.

The statue of Mortmain, and after it that of Premunire was made: . . . those much abated his intrade.
Fuller, Church Hist., V. III. 85.

intradors (in-trā-dors), n. [F. intradors, < L. intra, within, + dorsum (> F. dors), the back: see dorsal.] In arch., the interior or lower line, curve, or surface of an arch or vault. The exterior or upper curve or surface is called the extrados. See arch, 2.

intra-epithelial (in-trā-ep-i-thē-lī-āl), a. Same as interepithelial.

intrafoliaceous (in-trā-fō-lī-ā'shūs), a. [L. intra, within, + folium, leaf: see foliaceous.] In bot., growing between the leaves of a pair: as, intrafoliaceous stipules in the Rubaceae.

intragyrar (in-trā-jī-rāl), a. [L. intra, within, + NL. gyrus, a gyre: see gyral, gyre.] Situated in a gyre or convolution of the brain.

intrahepatic (in'trā-hē-pat'ik), a. [L. intra, within, + Gr. hēpar (hēpar), the liver: see hepatic.] Situated or occurring within the liver.

intraill, v. t. Same as entrail.

intrailest, n. pl. An obsolete form of entrails.

intrain, v. t. Same as entrain.

intralamellar (in-trā-lam'e-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + lamella, a thin plate (NL. lamella): see lamellar.] In bot., situated within the lamellae. In the Hymenomycetes the intralamellar tissue is the same as the trama.

intralaryngeal (in'trā-lār-i-jē-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + larynx, larynx: see larynx.] Situated or occurring within the larynx.

intraligamentous (in-trā-lig-a-men'tūs), a. [L. intra + ligament + -ous.] Situated in a ligament; specifically, occurring between the two layers of the broad ligament of the uterus, as a tumor. Also intraligamentary.

intralobular (in-trā-lo-bū-lār), a. [L. intra + lobule + -ar.] Situated within a lobule: specifically applied to veins in the lobules of the liver. See interlobular and sublobular.

The intralobular vein returns the blood from the center of the lobule, and opens immediately into a sublobular vein.
Halden, Anat. (1895), p. 108.

intralet, n. pl. An obsolete form of entrails.

intra-mandibular (in'trā-man-dib'ū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + mandibulum, lower jaw (mandible): see mandibular.] Situated in the man-dible—that is, between the two sides of the lower jaw; interramal.

intramarginal (in-trā-mā'j-i-nāl), a. [L. intra, within, + margo (margin-), margin: see marginal.] Situated within the margin: as, the intramarginal vein in the leaves of some of the plants belonging to the nymphaeaceae.

intramatrix (in-trā-mā'trī-kāl), a. [L. intra, within, + matrix (-ic), matrix, + -al.] In bot., situated within a matrix or nidus.

intramedullary (in-trā-rī-dū'l-g-rī), a. [L. intra, within, + medulla, pith (medulla): see medullary.] Situated within the substance of the spinal cord: as, intramedullary tumors.

intramembranous (in-trā-nem-brā-nus), a. [L. intra, within, + membrana, membrane: see membranous.] Situated or occurring within the substance of a membrane: as, intramembranous ossification.

intrameningeal (in-trā-mē-nin'jē-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + Gr. mēninx, the membrane inclosing the brain: see meningeal.] Situated or occurring within the meninges of the brain.

intramercutial (in-trā-mēr-kū'ri-āl), a. [L. intra, within, + Mercurius, Mercury: see mercurial.] Lying within the orbit of the planet Mercury. The existence of an intramercutial planet has been suspected both from irregularities in the movement of Mercury and from observations during eclipses; but at present the evidence is rather against the existence of such a planet.

intramercutian (in-trā-mēr-kū'ri-an), a. Same as intramercutial.

intramolecular (in-trā-mō-lek'ū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + molecule + -ar.] Being or occurring within a molecule.

Intramolecular work [is] done within each several molecule [in the] production of intramolecular vibration. A. Daniell, Prin. of Physics, p. 323.

intramundane (in-trā-mun'dān), a. [L. intra, within, + mundus, world: see mundane.] Being within the world; belonging to the material world. Imp. Dict.

intramural (in-trā-mū'ral), a. [L. intra, within, + murus, wall: see mural.] 1. Being within the walls or boundaries, as of a city or building: as, intramural interment is now prohibited in many cities.

The same sort of impressiveness as the great intramural dome of Magdalen College at Oxford.

2. In anat. and med., situated in the substance of the walls of a tubular or other hollow organ, as the intestine.

intramuscular (in-trā-mus'kū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + musculus, a muscle: see muscular.] Located or occurring within a muscle.

A . . . very close-meshed network, the intramuscular, whose varicose fibrillae occupy the narrow passages between the contractile cells. Frey, Histol. and Histochem. (trans.), p. 325.

intranasal (in-trā-nā'sāl), a. [L. intra, within, + nasus, nose: see nasal.] Situated or occurring within the nose.

Neurotic asthma and other neurotic maladies in their relations to intranasal disease. Medical News, XLIX, 213.

intrance, n. An obsolete spelling of entrance. intrance, n. Obsolete forms of entrance, entrancement.

intranguillity (in-trāng-wīl'i-ti), n. [in- + tranquillity.] Lack of tranquillity; unquietness; inquietude.

That intranguillity which makes men impatient of lying in their beds. Str. W. Temple.

intrans. An abbreviation of intransitive.

intranscendency (in-trāns-kā'len-si), n. [L. in-priv. + trans, over, through, + calore (-t), p. pr. of calere, grow hot, calere, be hot: see calore.] Imperviousness to heat. [Rare.]

This extraordinary intranscendency of aqueous vapour to rays issuing from water has been conclusively proved by Tyndall. E. Frankland, Exper. in Chem., p. 977.

intranscendent (in-trāns-kā'lent), a. [in- + transcendent.] Impervious to heat. [Rare.]

Water is intranscendent to rays of obscure heat. E. Frankland, Exper. in Chem., p. 985.

intransformable (in-trāns-fōr-mā-bl), a. Not transformable; incapable of transformation.

The transformable gives place to the intransformable. J. Sully, Mind, XII, 118.

intransgressible (in-trāns-gres'i-bl), a. [in- + transgressible.] Not transgressible; incapable of being passed.

A divine reason or sentence intransgressible and inevitable, proceeding from a cause that cannot be diverted or impeded. Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 859.

intransigent (in-trān'ahent), a. [in- + transigent.] Not transient; not passing suddenly away.

An unchangeable, an intransigent, indefeasible priesthood. Killingbeck, Sermons, p. 32.

intransigent (in-trān'si-jent), a. and n. [= F. intransigent, also intransigent (after Sp.); Sp. intransigente, not compromising, not ready to compromise, L. in-priv. + transigen (-t), p. pr. of transigere, pp. transactus, transact, come to a settlement: see transact.] 1. a. Refusing to agree or come to an understanding; uncompromising; irreconcilable: used especially of some extreme political party. See intransigentist.

The opposition secured 88 seats out of 114 in the new Cortes, and was able to elect all its most intransigent members into the Lagthing. Nineteenth Century, XXIII, 59.

II. n. Same as intransigentist.

intransigentism (in-trān'si-jen-tizm), n. [intransigent + -ism.] The doctrine or program of the intransigentists.

Communism, intransigentism, and nihilism are not well represented in scientific reunions. Goldwin Smith, Pop. Sci. Mo., XX, 757.

intransigentist (in-trān'si-jen-tist), n. [intransigent + -ist.] 1. An irreconcilable person. 2. Specifically, in politics: (a) A member of a radical party in Spain, which in 1873-74 fomented an unsuccessful insurrection. (b) A member of a faction in France whose parliamentary program includes various radical reforms and socialistic changes. Also intransigent.

intransitive (in-trān'si-tiv), a. and n. [= F. intransitif = Sp. Pg. It. intransitivo, L. intransitivus, not transitive, in-priv. + transitivus, transitive: see transitive.] 1. a. 1. In gram., not expressing an action that passes immediately over to an object; not taking a direct object: said of verbs that require a preposition before their object, or take one only indirectly, or in the manner of a dative: as, to stand on the ground; to swim in the water; to run away. But the distinction of transitive and intransitive is not a very sharp one in English. Every transitive verb is capable of being used also intransitively, or without an expressed object; and, on the other hand, many intransitives may be used transitively (the verb being usually causal), taking a direct object, as in to run a horse, or merely a cognate object, as in to run a race; or are used factitively with a more general object, as in to breathe a prayer, to look love, or with an objective predicate, as in to sing one's self hoarse, to stare one out of countenance, and so on. (Owing, also, to the non-distinction of dative and accusative in modern English, a construction often seems transitive which is historically intransitive: as, to forgive us, where us is historically dative, the direct object being understood, or expressed as in "forgive us our debts." Abbreviated intrans.) 2. Not transitive, in the logical or mathematical sense.

II. n. In gram., a verb which does not properly take after it an object, as sit, fall, run, lie. intransitively (in-trān'si-tiv-i), adv. In the manner of an intransitive verb; without passing over to or governing an object.

in transitu (in tran'si-tū), [L. in = E. in; transitu, abl. of transitus, passage: see transit.] In transit; on the way; in course of transportation: as, if one who buys goods without paying is insolvent, the seller has a right to stop the goods in transitu. In law the important question as to the scope of this phrase is in the very common controversy as to the point at which the transit is deemed to have ceased, and the goods to have come under the dominion of the buyer.

intransmissible (in-trāns-mis'i-bl), a. [= Pg. intransmissible; as in- + transmissible.] Not transmissible; incapable of being transmitted.

intransmutability (in-trāns-mū-tā-bil'i-ti), n. [= Sp. intransmutabilidad; as intransmutable + -ity: see -ility.] The quality of being intransmutable.

intransmutable (in-trāns-mū-tā-bl), a. [= F. intransmutable = Sp. intransmutable = It. intransmutabile; as in- + transmutable.] Not transmutable; incapable of being transmuted or changed into another substance.

Some of the most learn'd and experienc'd chymists do affirm quiksilver to be intransmutable, and therefore call it liquor eternus. Ray, Works of Creation, I.

intransit (in'tran't), n. [L. intrans (-t), p. pr. of intrare, go in, enter: see enter, and cf. entrant.] 1. Same as entrant.

A new oath was imposed upon intransits. Hume, Hist. Eng., III.

2. In English universities, an elector; one who is elected to choose with others a person to fill an office.

intrannuclear (in-trān-nū'klē-ār), a. [L. intra, within, + nucleus, nucleus: see nuclear.] Situated within a nucleus: opposed to extranuclear.

intra-ocular (in-trā-ok'ū-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + oculus, eye: see ocular.] Situated within the eye—that is, within the eyeball. intra-orbital (in-trā-ōr'bi-tāl), a. [L. intra, within, + orbita, orbit: see orbital.] Situated in the orbit of the eye; lying in the eye-socket. intra-osseous (in-trā-ōs'ē-us), a. [L. intra, within, + os (oss-), bone: see osseous.] Situated within a bone.

intra-ovarian (in-trā-ō-vā'ri-an), a. [intra + ovary + -an.] Contained in or not yet discharged from the ovary, as an ovum.

intrap (in-trap'), v. t. See entrap.

intraparacentral (in-trā-pā-rā-sen'trāl), a. [intra + para + central.] Lying in the paracentral gyre of the brain: as, an intraparacentral fissure.

intraparietal (in-trā-pā-rī'e-tāl), a. [L. intra, within, + paries (pariet-), a wall: see parietal.] 1. Situated or happening within walls or within an inclosure; shut out from public view; hence, private: as, intraparietal executions. 2. In anat., situated in the parietal lobe of the brain: as, the intraparietal fissure of the cerebrum. See fissure.

intrapelvic (in-trā-pel'vik), a. [L. intra, within, + NL. pelvis, q. v.] Situated within the pelvis.

intrapertitoneal (in-trā-per'i-tō-nē'āl), a. [intra + peritoneum + -al.] Placed in the cavity of the peritoneum.

Intrapertitoneal injections cause death in two or three days. Medical News, LII, 641.

intrapetalous (in-trā-pet'ā-lus), a. [L. intra, within, + NL. petalum, a petal: see petal.] In zool., situated within a petaloid ambulacrum of a sea-urchin. See cut under Spatangoida.

intrapetiolar (in-trā-pet'i-ō-lār), a. [L. intra, within, + petiolus, a little stalk, a petiole (see petiole), + -ar.] In bot.: (a) Situated within or interior to a petiole: applied to a pair of stipules which unite by the margins that are nearest to the petiole, and thus seem to form a single stipule between the petiole and the stem or branch. (b) Inclosed by the expanded base of the petiole: applied to buds formed in the fall immediately under the base of the petiole of leaves of the previous summer, into a cavity of which they project and are not exposed until the fall of the leaf, as in Platanus, Rhus, etc. It is often confounded with interpetiolar.

intrapetiolar (in-trā-pet'i-ō-lār), a. Same as intrapetiolar.

intraprophetic (in-trā-fil'ō-sōf'ik), a. [L. intra, within, + philosophia, philosophy: see philosophic.] Within the limits of philosophic inquiry. [Rare.]

What is the nature of this or that existence in the super-scientific but intraphilosophic region? Hodgson, Phil. of Reflection, I, III, § 1.

intraplantar (in-trā-plan'tār), a. [L. intra, within, + planta, sole: see plantar.] Situated upon the inner side of the sole of the foot: opposed to extraplantar: as, the intraplantar nerve.

intraprotoplasmic (in-trā-prō-tō-plas'mik), a. [intra + protoplasm + -ic.] Being or occurring in the substance of protoplasm.

intrapulmonary (in-trā-pul'mō-nē-ār), a. [L. intra, within, + pulmo (-n-), lung: see pulmonary.] Situated within the lungs.

intraretinal (in-trā-ret'i-nāl), a. [intra + retina + -al.] Situated within the substance of the retina.

intrasemital (in-trā-sem'i-tāl), a. [L. intra, within, + semita, path: see semita.] Situated within a semita of an echinoderm.

intraspinal (in-trā-spi'nāl), a. [L. intra, within, + spina, spine: see spine.] Lying, existing, or occurring within the spinal canal, or within the spinal cord.

intratarsal (in-trā-tār'sāl), a. [intra + tarsus + -al.] Situated upon the inner side of the tarsus.

intratelluric (in-trā-te-lū'rik), a. [L. intra, within, + tellus (tellur-), the earth: see telluric.] In litol., a term first used by Rosenbusch to designate that period in the formation of an eruptive rock which immediately precedes its appearance on the surface. The mineral constituents which separate or become individualized at or during that time are called by him intratelluric.

Intrapetiolar.

It was after their slow development in the magma, during an intratelluric period, that the mass in which they floated was upraised.

intraterritorial (in-trə-ter-i-tō'ri-əl), a. [< L. intra, within, + territorium, territory: see territorial.] Existing within a territory: opposed to extraterritorial.

intrathecal (in-trə-thē's kəl), a. [< intra- + NL theca, q. v., + -al.] Contained in the theca, as a part of a coral.

The intrathecal parts of the polyp, the endoderm cells, are entirely converted into a parenchymatous tissue.

G. C. Bourne, Micros. Science, XXVIII, 31.

intrathoracic (in-trə-thō's-ik), a. [< L. intra, within, + NL thorax (-ac-), thorax.] Situated or occurring within the thorax or chest: as, the heart and lungs are intrathoracic organs.

intratropical (in-trə-trop'i-kəl), a. [< L. intra, within, + LL tropicus, tropic, + -al.] Situated within the tropics; of or pertaining to the regions within the tropics: as, an intratropical climate.

intra-urban (in-trə-er'ban), a. [< L. intra, within, + urbs, city: see urban.] Situated within a city; relating to what is within the limits of a city.

The telephone is coming more and more into use for short distances and intra-urban communications.

Edinburgh Rev., CLXIV, 15.

intra-uterine (in-trə-ū'tē-rin), a. [< L. intra, within, + uterus, womb: see uterine.] Lying, existing, or occurring within the uterus.

intravalvular (in-trə-val'vū-lār), a. [< L. intra, within, + NL valvula, a little valve: see valvular.] In bot., placed within valves, as the dissepiments of many of the Cruciferae.

intravasation (in-trav-ā-sā'shon), n. [< L. intra, within, + vas, vessel, + -ation. Cf. extravasation.] The entrance into vessels of matters formed outside of them or in their parietes.

intravascular (in-trə-vas'kū-lār), a. [< L. intra, within, + vasculum, a little vessel: see vascular.] Situated within a vessel, specifically within a blood-vessel.

intravenous (in-trə-vē'nus), a. [< L. intra, within, + vena, vein: see venous.] Situated or occurring within veins.

intraventricular (in-trə-ven-trik'ū-lār), a. [< L. intra, within, + ventriculus, ventricle: see ventricular.] Existing or taking place within one of the ventricles of either the heart or the brain.

intravertebrated (in-trə-vēr'tē-brā-ted), a. [< intra- + vertebrated.] Having an endoskeleton, as a vertebrate; vertebrated, in a usual sense.

intravescical (in-trə-ven's-i-kəl), a. [< L. intra, within, + vesica, bladder.] Situated or occurring within the bladder.

intravitelline (in-trə-vi-tel'in), a. [< L. intra, within, + vitellus, the yolk of an egg.] Situated or occurring in the substance of the vitellus or yolk.

intraxylary (in-trə-zī'lg-ri), a. [< L. intra, within, + Gr. ξύλον, wood, + -ary.] In bot., within the xylem; said of certain tissues that occur inside the xylem, as in the Combretaceae, which are characterized, with a few exceptions, by the presence of an intraxylary soft bast provided with sieve-tubes.

intreasurer, v. t. See entreasure.

intreat, v. An obsolete form of entreat. Spendor.

intreatance (in-trē'tans), n. [< intreat + -ance.] Same as entreatance. Holland.

intreatful, intreatment. Same as entreatful, entreatment.

intreaty, n. An obsolete form of entreaty. Hakluyt.

intrench (in-trench'), v. [Also entrench; < in-2 + trench.] I. trans. 1. To make a trench or furrow in; furrow; cut.

It was this very sword entrenched it (a wound). Shak., All's Well, II, 1, 46.

His face
Deep scars of thunder had entrenched.
Milton, P. L., I, 601.

2. To surround as with a trench or ditch.
A little farther is a bay wherein falleth 3 or 4 prettie brookes and creekes that halfe entrench the inhabitants of Warrackoyac.

3. To fortify with a trench or ditch and parapet; strengthen or protect by walls of defense: as, to entrench a camp or an army.

The English in the suburbs close entrenched.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., I, 4, 9.

The national troops were now strongly entrenched in Chattanooga Valley, with the Tennessee River behind them.

U. S. Grant, The Century, XXXI, 129.

Hence—4. To fortify or defend by any protecting agency; surround with or guard by anything that affords additional security against attack.

Conscience has got safely entrenched behind the letter of the law.

Sterne, Tristram Shandy, II, 17.

II. intrans. To invade; encroach: with on or upon.

Do you start
At my entrenching on your private liberty,
And would you force a highway through mine honour,
And make me paye it too?

Fletcher, Wife for a Month, IV, 2.

It entrenches very much upon impety and positive relinquishing the education of their children, when mothers expose the spirit of the child . . . to . . . the carelessness of any less-obliged person.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 41.

-Syn. Encroach upon, Infringe upon, etc. See trespass, v. t.

intrenchant (in-tren'chant), a. [< in-2 + trenchant.] Not trenchant or cutting; also, incapable of being cut; indivisible by cutting.

As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress.

Shak., Macbeth, V, 8, 9.

intrencher (in-tren'chér), n. One who intrenches; one who digs a trench, or is employed in intrenching.

Their fighting redeemed well their shortcomings as intrenchers.

The Century, XXXIX, 102.

intrenchment (in-trench'ment), n. [Also entrenchment; < intrench + -ment.] 1. The act of intrenching.—2. In fort., a general term for a work consisting of a trench or ditch and a parapet (the latter formed of the earth dug from the ditch), constructed for a defense against an enemy. See cut under parapet.—3. Figuratively, any defense or protection.—4. Encroachment.

The slightest intrenchment upon individual freedom.

Soudhey.

intrepid (in-trep'id), a. [= F. intrépide = Sp. intrepido = Pg. It. intrepido, < L. intrepidus, not alarmed, undaunted, < in-priv. + trepidus, alarmed, shaken, anxious: see trepidation.] 1. Not moved by danger; free from alarm; undaunted: as, an intrepid soldier.—2. Indicating or springing from courage.

That quality [valour], which signifies no more than an intrepid courage.

Dryden, Æneid, I, 601.

He [Stuyvesant] patrolled with unceasing watchfulness the boundaries of his little territory; repelled every encroachment with intrepid promptness.

Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 461.

-Syn. Daring, dauntless, courageous, valiant, undimmed, gallant, doughty, heroic.

intrepidity (in-trep'id-i-ti), n. [= F. intrépidité = It. intrepidità; as intrepid + -ity.] The quality of being intrepid; freedom from alarm; coolness in encountering danger; undaunted courage or boldness.

While he assumes the appearance of intrepidity before the world, he trembles within himself.

II. Blair, Works, III, vii.

He had the rare merit of combining sagacity with intrepidity in action.

Freewort, Ferd. and Isa., I, 15.

intrepidly (in-trep'id-li), adv. In an intrepid manner; fearlessly; daringly; resolutely.

in-triangle (in-tri'ang-gl), n. [< in(scribed) + triangle.] An inscribed triangle.

intricable (in-tri-kā-bl), a. [*< L. as if intricabilis, < intricare, entangle: see intricate.] Entangling.

They shall remain captive, and entangled in the amorous intricable net.

Shelton, tr. of Don Quixote, III, 7.

intricacy (in-tri-kā-si), n.; pl. intricacies (-siz). [< intricare = intricare; < -cy.] The state of being intricate or entangled; perplexity; involution; complication; maze.

The modern tragedy excels that of Greece and Rome in the intricacy and disposition of the fable.

Spectator, No. 39.

A science whose depths and intricacies he explored.

Sumner, On Story.

Intricate (in-tri-kā'tē), n. pl. [NL. (Nylander, 1854), fem. pl. of L. intricatus, intricate: see intricate.] A series or division of lichens embracing the tribes Usneae, Roccollet, Bamalinet, and Cetrariet. They are now regarded as genera of the tribe Palmellaceae.

intricate (in-tri-kāt), a. [= OF. entiqué = Sp. Pg. intrincado, entangled, < L. intricatus, pp.: see the verb.] 1. Perplexingly involved or entangled; hard to disentangle or disengage, or to trace out; complicated; obscure: as, an intricate knot; the intricate windings of a labyrinth; intricate accounts; the intricate plot of a tragedy.

You have put me upon such an odd intricate Piece of Business that I think there was never the like of it.

Houell, Letters, II, 19.

Being got about two thirds of the way up, we came to certain Grotto's cut with intricate Windings and Caverns under ground.

Maunderell, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 104.

2. In entom., having unequal elevations and depressions placed irregularly and close together, but without running into each other; said of a sculptured surface. = Syn. 1. Intricate, Complex, Complicated, Compound. Between complex and complicated there is the same difference as between complexity and complication. (See complication.) That is complex which is made up of many parts, whose relation is perhaps not easily comprehended; if this latter be true, especially if it be true to a marked degree, the thing is said to be complicated; it is also complicated if its parts have become entangled: as, the matter was still further complicated by their failure to protest against the seizure. That is intricate which, like a labyrinth, makes decision with regard to the right path or course to pursue difficult: as, an intricate question. Compound generally implies a mixture or union of parts in some way that makes a whole: as, a compound flower; compound motion; a compound idea; the word does not, like the others, suggest difficulty in comprehension. See implicate.

intricate (in-tri-kāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. intricated, ppr. intricating. [< L. intricatus, pp. of intricare, entangle, perplex, embarrass, < in, in, + tricare, trifles, vexations, perplexities. See intrigue, and cf. extricate.] To render intricate or involved; make perplexing or obscure. [Rare.]

Concerning original sin, . . . there are . . . many disputes which may intricate the question.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 130.

intricately (in-tri-kāt-li), adv. 1. In an intricate manner; with involution or infoldings; with perplexity or intricacy.

The sword (whereunto they only had recourse) Must cut this knot so intricately ty'd, Whose vain contrived ends are plain deserv'd.

Daniel, Civil Wars, VII.

2. In entom., with an intricate sculpture; closely but without coalescence: as, intricately punctured; intricately verrucose.

intricateness (in-tri-kāt-nēs), n. Intricacy.

I understand your pleasure, Eugénia, and shall endeavour to comply with it; but the difficulty and intricateness of the subject of our discourse obliges me to do it by steps.

Boyle, Works, IV, 413.

intrication (in-tri-kā'shon), n. [< OF. intrication = *Sp. (obs.) entricación, intricacion, < L. as if intricatio(n)-, < intricare, entangle: see intricate, v.] Entanglement. [Rare.]

I confess I do not see how the motus circularis simplex should need to be superadded to the contact or intrication of the cohering firm corpuscles, to procure a cohesion.

Boyle, Works, I, 240.

intriet, v. t. [< OF. intruire, intruire, contr. of intruire, introduce: see introduce.] To introduce; add.

To cley and chalk the firth part intriet
Of gesso, and doo the rootes to IIII yore,
And this wol make hir greynes white and clere.

Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. 5.), p. 116.

intrigant (in-tré-gant; F. pron. an-tré-goñ), n. [Also intrigant; < F. intrigant = Sp. Pg. intrigante, prop. ppr. of intriguer, intrigue: see intrigue, v.] A male intriguer.

Illustrate intrigants, conscious of the party strength behind them, insisted on shaping legislation according to their own fancy.

The Century, XXXIII, 33.

intrigante (in-tré-gant; F. pron. an-tré-goñ), n. [< F. intrigante, fem. of intrigant, ppr. of intriguer, intrigue: see intrigue, v.] A woman given to intrigue; a female intriguer.

intrigue (in-trég'), v.; pret. and pp. intrigued, ppr. intriguing. [= D. intriguieren = G. intriguiren = Dan. intrigere = Sw. intrigera, < F. intriguer, OF. intriquer, intriquer, intriquer, intriquer = Pr. entricar, intricar = Sp. Pg. intrigar, intricar = It. intricare, intrigare, perplex, puzzle, intrigue, < L. intricare, entangle, perplex, embarrass: see intricate, v.] 1. trans. 1. To entangle; involve; cause to be involved or entangled. [A Gallicism.]

How doth it (sn) perplex and intrigue the whole course of your lives!

J. South, Christian Life, I, 4.

Because the drama has been in times past and in other conditions the creature, the prisoner, of plot, it by no means follows that it must continue so; on the contrary, it seems to us that its liberation follows; and of this we see signs in the very home of the highly intrigued drama.

Harper's Mag., LXXIX, 513.

2. To plot for; scheme for.

The Duchess of Queensberry has at last been at court; a point she has been intriguing these two years.

Walpole, Letters, II, 22.

II. intrins. 1. To practise underhand plotting or scheming; exert secret influence for the accomplishment of a purpose; seek to promote one's aims in devious and clandestine ways.

Chesterfield, towards the end of his career, intrigued against Newcastle with the Duchess of Yarmouth.

Locky, Eng. in 18th Cent., III.

2. To have clandestine or illicit intercourse.

intrigue (in-trēg'), n. [= D. G. intrigue = Dan. intrige = Sw. intrig, < F. intrigue, a plot, intrigue, formerly also intrigue, intricateness, a maze, = Sp. Pg. intriga = It. intrigo, intrico, intricateness, a maze, plot, intrigue; from the verb: see intrigue, v.] 1. Intricacy; complication; maze.

But though this vicinity of ourselves cannot give us the full prospect of all the intrigues of our nature, yet we have thereby . . . much more advantage to know ourselves than to know other things without us.

Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 21.

2. Secret or underhand plotting or scheming; the exertion of secret influence for the accomplishment of a purpose.

Habits of petty intrigue and dissimulation might have rendered him incapable of great general views, but that the expanding effect of his philosophical studies counteracted the narrowing tendency.

Macaulay, Macchiavelli.

3. A clandestine plot; a scheme for entangling others, or for gaining an end by the exertion of secret influence: as, to expose an intrigue.

His invention was ever busy in devising intrigues, which he recommended by his subtle, insinuating eloquence.

Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., I. 3.

In the first Hanoverian reigns the most important influences were Court intrigues or parliamentary corruption.

Locky, Eng. in 18th Cent., III.

4. The plot of a play, poem, or romance; the series of complications in which a writer involves his imaginary characters.

As these causes are the beginning of the action, the opposite designs against that of the hero are the middle of it, and form that difficulty or intrigue which make up the greatest part of the poem.

Le Beau, tr. in pref. to Pope's Odyssey.

5. Clandestine intercourse between a man and a woman; illicit intimacy; a liaison.

Of the three companions I had this last half year, . . . I was obliged to send away the third, because I suspected an intrigue with the chaplain.

Goldsmith, Vicar, XI.

intriguer (in-trēg'er), n. One who intrigues; one who forms plots, or pursues an object by secret means.

intriguery (in-trēg'gēr-i), n. [< intrigue + -ery.] The practice of intrigue.

intriguement (in-trēg'gēm), n. [< intrigue + -ess.] A woman who schemes or intrigues.

His family was very ill qualified for that place, his lady being a most violent intriguement in business.

Roger North, Lord Guilford, I. 168.

intriguing (in-trēg'gīng), v. a. Forming secret plots or schemes; addicted to intrigue; given to secret machinations: as, an intriguing disposition.

There is something more intriguing in the amours of Venice than in those of other countries.

Addison, Remarks on Italy (ed. Bohn), I. 392.

= Syn. Artful, Sly, etc. (see cunning); insidious, designing, deceitful plotting, scheming.

intriguingly (in-trēg'gīng-lī), adv. With intrigue; with artifice or secret machinations.

intriguish (in-trēg'gīsh), v. [< intrigue + -ish.] Intriguing; underhand; scheming.

Considering the assurance and application of women, especially to affairs that are intriguish, we must conclude that the chief address was to Mrs. Wall.

Roger North, Examen, p. 198.

intriguer (in-trēg'gēr), n. An intriguer. Jewer.

intrinsc (in-trīns'), a. [Irreg. abbr. from intrinsicate.] Intricate; entangled.

Bite the holy cords atwain
Which are too intrinsc to unloose.

Shak., Lear, II. 2, 81.

intrinscalt, a. See intrinsical.

intrinsicate, a. See intrinsicate.

intrinsic (in-trīn'sik), a. and n. [Prop. intrinsec* (the term being conformed to -ic) = F. intrinsèque = Pr. intrinsec = Sp. intrinseco = Pg. intrinseco = It. intrinseco, intrinseco, < L. intrinsecus, on the inside, inwardly, < inter ('in-'), within, & secus, by, on the side. Cf. extrinsic.] 1. Being within; penetrating inward; intimate; familiar; intestine; domestic.

And though to be thus elemented
These creatures from home-born intrinsic harm.

Douglas, Anatomy of the World, I.

Hence—2. Pertaining to the inner or essential nature; intimately characterizing; inherent; essential; genuine; belonging to the subject in its very existence: as, the intrinsic value of gold or silver; the intrinsic merit of an action.

As Coin, which bears some awful Monarch's Face,
For more than its intrinsic Worth will pass.

Congreve, To Dryden.

The intellect pierces the form, . . . detects intrinsic likenesses between remote things, and reduces all things into a few principles. Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 281.

3. In Scots law, intimately connected with the point at issue; applied to circumstances sworn to by a party on an oath of reference that make part of the evidence afforded by the oath, and cannot be separated from it.—4. In anat., applied to those muscles of the limbs which take origin within the anatomical limits of the limb, such limits including the pectoral and pelvic arches.—Hosteler intrinsic. See hosteler.—Intrinsic divisor. See divisor.—Intrinsic equation of a plane curve. See equation.—Intrinsic mode. In logic, a mode which necessarily affects its subject as soon as the latter comes into actual existence, although the mode is no part of the definition, general conception, or formality of the subject, and, indeed, such a mode is incapable of any general description. The intrinsic modes, according to the Scotists, are nine—to wit, finite and infinite, act and power, necessary and contingent, existence, reality, and essence.—Intrinsic relation, in the Scotistic logic, a relation which necessarily exists as soon as the related things exist: such relations are, for example, similitude and paternity.—Syn. 1. Interior, Inward, etc. See inner.

II. † n. A genuine or essential quality. Warburton.

intrinsical (in-trīn'si-kal), a. and n. [Prop., as formerly, intrinsecal; < intrinsic + -al.] 1. a. Same as intrinsic.

So intrinsical is every man unto himself, that some doubt may be made, whether any would exchange his being.

Sir T. Browne, Letter to a Friend.

How far God hath given Natan power to do good for the blinding of evil men, or what intrinsical operations he found out, I cannot now dispute.

A. Wilson, Autobiography.

He falls into intrinsical society with Sir John Graham, . . . who dissuaded him from marriage. Sir H. Wotton.

II. † n. That which is intrinsic or interior; inward being, thought, etc.

This history will display the very intrinsicals of the Castilian, who goes for the prime Spaniard.

Howell, Letters, IV. 11.

intrinsicality (in-trīn'si-kal'i-ti), n. [< intrinsical + -ity.] The quality of being intrinsic; essentiality. Rogee.

intrinsically (in-trīn'si-kal-i), adv. In an intrinsic manner; internally; in its nature; essentially.

intrinsicalness (in-trīn'si-kal-nēs), n. The quality of being intrinsic; intrinsicity. Baileys, 1727.

intrinsicate (in-trīn'si-kāt), a. [Appar. < It. intrinsecato, intrinsecato, pp. of intrinsecare, make intimate, refl. become intimate, < intrinsecare, intrinsecare, inward, intimate, intrinsic: see intrinsic. The sense is appar. taken from intricate.] Entangled; perplexed. Also intrinsicate.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie. Shak., A. and C., v. 2, 807.

Yet there are certain punctations, . . . certain intrinsicate strokes and wards, to which your activity is not yet amounted.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 2.

intro- [L. intro, prefix intro-, within, on the inside, inwardly, nont. abl. of interus*, inner: see intra-, interior.] A Latin adverb used as a prefix, signifying 'within, into, in.'

introcassion (in-trō-sesh'qn), n. [< L. intro, within, & casio (n-), a yielding: see cession.] In med., a depression or sinking of parts inward.

introconversion (in-trō-kvēr'shqn), n. [< L. intro, within, & conversio (n-), conversion: see conversion.] In chem., the transformation or conversion of one of two compounds into the other.

introconvertibility (in-trō-kvēr'ti-bil'i-ti), n. [< intro + convertible + -ity.] In chem., the property common to two or more compounds of being transformed or converted the one into the other through a change in their structural formula without change in ultimate composition.

The reactions and introconvertibility of maleic and fumaric derivatives cannot be brought in harmony with the assumption.

Amer. Chem. Jour., IX. 871.

introd. An abbreviation of introduction.

introduce (in-trō-dūs'), v. t.; pret. and pp. introduced, pp. introducing. [= F. introduire = Pr. entroduire = Sp. introducir = Pg. introduzir = It. introdurre, introducere, < L. introducere, lead in, bring into practice, bring forward, < intro, within, & ducere, lead: see duct.] 1. To lead or bring in; conduct or usher in: as, to introduce a person into a drawing-room; to introduce foreign produce into a country.

Socrates is introduced by Xenophon severely chiding a friend of his for not entering into the public service when he was every way qualified for it.

Swift, Nobles and Commons, IV.

Puff. Now, then, for soft music.

Sneer. Pray what's that for?

Puff. It shows that Tibburtina is coming;—nothing introduces you a heroine like soft music.

Sheridan, The Critic, II. 2.

Homer has introduced into his Battle of the Gods every thing that is great and terrible in Nature.

Addison, Spectator, No. 388.

2. To pass in; put in; insert: as, to introduce one's finger into an aperture.—3. To make known, as one person to another, or two persons to each other; make acquainted by personal encounter or by letter; present, with the mention of names and titles.

A couple of hours later [you] find yourself in the "world," dressed, introduced, entertained, inquiring, talking.

H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 188.

4. To bring into notice, use, or practice; bring forward for acceptance: as, to introduce a new fashion, or an improved mode of tillage.

He first introduced the cultivation and dressing of vines.

Bacon, Fable of Dionysius.

5. To bring forward with preliminary or preparatory matter; open to notice: as, to introduce a subject with a long preface.—6. To produce; cause to exist; induce.

Whatever introduces habits in children deserves the care and attention of their governors. Locke, Education.

introducement (in-trō-dūs'mēnt), n. [< introduce + -ment.] Introduction. [Rare.]

Without the introducement of new or obsolete forms or terms, or exotic models.

Milton, Free Commonwealth.

introducer (in-trō-dūs'ēr), n. One who or that which introduces; one who brings into notice, use, or practice.

Let us next examine the great introducers of new schemes in philosophy.

Swift, Tale of a Tub, ix.

introdukt (in-trō-duk't'), v. t. [< L. introductus, pp. of introducere, lead in; see introduce.] To introduce. Bp. Hackett, Abp. Williams, I. 29.

introduction (in-trō-duk'shqn), n. [= F. introduction = Pr. introduccio = Sp. introduccion = Pg. introdução = It. introduzione, < L. introductio (n-), a leading in, introduction, < introducere, lead in; see introduce.] 1. The act of introducing, or leading or ushering in; the act of bringing in: as, the introduction of manufactures into a country.

For the first introduction of youth to the knowledge of God the Jews even till this day have their Catechisms.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 18.

With regard to the introduction of specific types we have not as yet a sufficient amount of information.

Dawson, Geol. Hist. of Plants, p. 261.

2. The act of inserting: as, the introduction of a probe into a wound.—3. The act of making acquainted; the formal presentation of persons to one another, with mention of their names, etc.: as, an introduction in person or by letter.—4. The act of bringing into notice, use, or practice: as, the introduction of a new fashion or invention.

The Archbishop of Canterbury had pursued the introduction of the liturgy and the canons into Scotland with great vehemence.

Clarendon.

5. Something that leads to or opens the way for the understanding of something else; specifically, a preliminary explanation or statement; the part of a book or discourse which precedes the main work, and in which the author or speaker gives some general account of his design and subject; an elaborate preface, or a preliminary discourse.

Thou soon shalt . . . see before thine eyes
The monarchies of the earth, their pomp and state; Sufficient introduction to inform Thee, of thyself so apt, in regal arts.

Milton, P. R., III. 247.

Were it not that the study of Etruscan art is a necessary introduction to that of Roman, it would hardly be worth while trying to gather together and illustrate the few fragments and notices of it that remain.

J. Ferguson, Hist. Arch., I. 223.

6. A more or less elementary treatise on any branch of study; a treatise leading the way to more elaborate works on the same subject: as, an introduction to botany.—7. In music, a preparatory phrase or movement at the beginning of a work, or of a part of a work, designed to attract the hearer's attention or to foreshadow the subsequent themes or development. Introductions vary in length from one or two chords to an elaborate movement, with its own themes and development.—Biblical introduction, the technical designation of a work devoted to a consideration of subjects properly introductory to a detailed study and exposition of the books of the Bible, as their genuineness, credibility, integrity of text, date and authorship, language, contents, and more important versions. A Biblical introduction properly includes an inquiry into the history (1) of each book, (2) of the canon or collection of the several books into the one book, (3) of the text, including a comparison of the various texts, and (4) of the translations and versions. —Syn. Exordium, Introduction, Preface, Prelude, Preamble, Prologue. Exordium is the old or classic technical word in rhetoric for the beginning of an oration, up to the second division, which may be "narration," "partition," "proposition," or the like. Introduction is a more general word, in this connection applying to spoken or written discourse, and covering whatever is preliminary to the subject; in a book it may be the opening chapter. As distinguished from the preface, the introduction is supposed to be an essential part of the discussion or treatment of the theme, and written at the outset of composition. A preface is supposed to be the last words of the author in connection with his subject, and is generally explanatory or conciliatory, having the style of more direct address to the reader. A preamble is generally an introductory piece of music (see the definition of overture); a preamble, of a resolution, an ordinance, or a law: as, the preamble to the Declaration of Independence. A prologue is a conciliatory spoken preface to a play. All these words have some freedom of figurative use.

introductory (in-trō-dūk'tiv), a. [= F. introductif = It. introduttivo; as introduc + -ive.] Serving to introduce; introductory: sometimes followed by of.

The action is of itself, or by reason of a public known indisposition of some persons, probably introductory of a sin. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 279.

introductively (in-trō-dūk'tiv-ly), adv. In a manner serving to introduce.

introducer (in-trō-dūk'tor), n. [= F. introduceur = Sp. Pg. introductor = It. introduttore, < LL. introduktor, < L. introducere, lead in; see introduce.] One who introduces; an introducer.

We were accompanied both going and returning by y introducer of ambassadors and aid of ceremonies. Evelyn, Memoirs, Sept. 15, 1651.

introductorily (in-trō-dūk'tō-ri-ly), adv. By way of introduction. Baxter.

introductory (in-trō-dūk'tō-ri), a. and n. [ME. introductorie = Sp. (obs.) introductorio = It. introduttore, < LL. introduktorius, < introduktor: see introduktor.] I. a. Serving to introduce something; prefatory; preliminary: as, introductory remarks.

This introductory discourse itself is to be but an essay, not a book. Boyle, Works, I. 303.
[Syn. Preparatory, etc. (see preliminary); preludary, proludal.]

II. n. pl. introductories (-riz). An introduction; a treatise giving the elements or simplest parts of a subject.

The 5 parts shal ben an introductorie after the statute of owre courtour, in which thow maist lerne a gret part of the general rowles of theoric in astrology. Chaucer, Prologue to Astrolabe.

introductress (in-trō-dūk'tres), n. [= F. introductrice = It. introduttrice; as introduc + -ess.] A female introducer.

introduction, introflection (in-trō-flek'shən), n. [L. intro, within, + flectio (-n-), a bending; see flection.] A bending inward or within; inward curvature or flexure.

Small, spherical chambers, formed by the introflection of the walls of the rosette. W. H. Harvey, British Marine Algae, p. 12.

introflected (in-trō-flekt'), a. [L. intro, within, + flectus, bent; see flected.] Flexed or bent inward or within.

introflection, n. See introflection.

introggression (in-trō-gresh'ən), n. [L. as if "introggressio (-n-), < introgredi, pp. introgressus, go in, enter, < intro, within, + gradi, go; see grade.] The act of going in or of proceeding inward; entrance. Blount.

introit (in-trō'it), n. [= F. introit = Pr. introit = Sp. introtito = Pg. It. introito, < L. introitus, a going in, entrance, < intro, go in, enter, < intro, within, + ire, go; see iter.] In liturgies, an antiphon sung by the priest and choir as the priest approaches the altar to celebrate the mass or communion. The name introit (introtitus, literally 'entrance') is an abridgment of antiphon at the introit (antiphona ad introitum), and has been explained as the entrance of the people into church rather than that of the priest into the sanctuary. The introit seems to have originated in the psalms sung at the beginning of the Jewish liturgy. The name antiphon has been given by preeminence to the introit, as if the Greek Church, where it is threofold, answering to the Western introit, introit, and Gloria in excelsis. The Greek antiphons consist of verses from the Psalms with a constant response, or of the psalms called Typica and the Sequentiae. In the liturgies of St. Mark and St. James the hymn "Only-begotten Son" is the introit, in the Armenian liturgy this followed by a psalm and hymn. The "Only-begotten Son" is also subjoined to the Greek second antiphon. The Roman introit (see institutory) consists of a verse (the introit in the narrower sense), followed by a verse of a psalm, the Gloria Patri, and the repetition of the first verse. In the Ambrosian rite the introit is called the ingressus. An ancient Gallican name for it was the preludium. In the Mosarabic liturgy, in certain monastic rites, and in Norman and English missals, it is called the officium or officiu. Psalms as special introits are appointed in the Prayer-book of 1549 and in the Nonjuror's communion office of 1718. In the Anglican Church at the present day a psalm or anthem is sung as the introit. The name is sometimes less properly used for a hymn or any musical composition sung or played at the beginning of the communion office.

Then shall the Clerks sing in English for the office, or introit (as they call it), a psalm appointed for that date. First Prayer Book of Edw. VI. (1549), The Communion.

intromission (in-trō-mish'ən), n. [= F. intromission = Pr. intromissio = It. intromissione, < ML. intromissio (-n-), < L. intromittere, pp. intromissus, send in; see intromit.] 1. The act of sending or putting in; insertion, as of one body within another; introduction within.

The evasion of a tragic end by the invention and intromission of Marianna has . . . received high praise for its ingenuity. Swinnburne, Shakespeare, p. 204.

2. The act of taking in or admitting; admission within.

Repentance is the first intromission into the sanctities of christian religion. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 85.

A general intromission of all sorts, sects, and persuasions into our communion. South, Works, II. xii.

3. In Scots and old Eng. law, an interfering with the effects of another. The assuming of the possession and management of property belonging to another without authority is called violent intromission. The term is also applied to the ordinary transactions of an agent or subordinate with the money of his superior: as, to give security for one's intromissions.

intromit (in-trō-mit'), v.; pret. and pp. intromitted, pp. intromitting. [L. intromittere, send in, < intro, within, + mittere, send; see mission.] I. trans. 1. To send or put in; insert or introduce within. —2. To allow to enter; be the medium by which a thing enters.

Glass in the window intromits light, without cold, to these in the room. Holder.

II. intrans. In Scots and old Eng. law, to interfere with the effects of another.

In any city, borough, town or incorporate, or other place franchised or privileged, where the said officer or officers may not lawfully intromit or intermeddle. Charter of Philip and Mary, in Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 271.

We intromitted, as Scotch law phrases it, with many family affairs. De Quincey.

intromittent (in-trō-mit'ənt), a. [L. intromitten (-t-), pp. of intromittere, intromit: see intromit.] Throwing or conveying into or within something: as, an intromittent instrument.

—Intromittent organ, in comparative anat., that part of the male sexual apparatus which conveys the seminal fluid into the body of the female. It may be directly connected with the testes, or constitute a separate seminal reservoir on some other part of the body, as on the pedipalps of a male spider, or the second abdominal ring of a dragon-fly.

intromitter (in-trō-mit'ər), n. One who intromits; an intermeddler.

Sacrilegious intromitters with royal property. South, Woodstock, Pref.

intropression (in-trō-prosh'ən), n. [L. intro, within, + pressio (-n-), a pressing, < premere, pp. pressus, press; see press.] Pressure acting within or inwardly; inward or internal pressure. Battie, Madness, § x. [Rare.]

intropreception (in-trō-rē-sep'shən), n. [L. intro, within, + receptio (-n-), reception; see reception.] The act of receiving or admitting into or within something. [Rare.]

Were but the love of Christ to us ever suffered to come into our hearts (as species to the eye by intropreception) . . . what would we not do to recompence . . . that love? Hammond, Works, IV. 564.

introrse (in-trōrs'), a. [L. introrsus, introrsum, adv., toward the inside, contr. of introversus, < intro, within, + versus, turned, pp. of vertere, turn; see verse.] Of extrorse. Turned or facing inward: an epithet used in describing the direction of bodies, to denote their being turned toward the axis to which they appertain. In botany it is applied to anthers when their valves are turned toward the style.

introrsely (in-trōrs'li), adv. To or toward the interior in position or direction.

introspect (in-trō-spekt'), v. [L. introspectare, freq. of introspicere, pp. introspectus, look into, < intro, within, + specere, look.] I. trans. To look into or within; view the inside of.

II. intrans. To practise introspection; look inward; consider one's own internal state or feelings.

We cannot cogitate without examining consciousness, and when we do this we introspect.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV. 257.

introspection (in-trō-spek'shən), n. [L. as if "introspectio (-n-), a looking into, < introspicere, pp. introspectus, look into; see introspect.] The act of looking inward; a view of the inside or interior; specifically, the act of directly observing the states and processes of one's own mind; examination of one's own thoughts or feelings. Introspection is employed in psychology as the only method of directly ascertaining the facts of consciousness; but the limits of its applicability and the value of the results attained by it are subjects of dispute.

I was forced to make an introspection into mine own mind, and into that idea of beauty which I have formed in my own imagination.

Quoted in Dryden's Parallel of Poetry and Painting.

This mutual exclusiveness receives a further explanation from the fact so often used to discredit psychology, viz. that the so-called introspection and indeed all reflexion are really retrospective. J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XXX. 94.

Introspection of our intellectual operations is not the best of means for preserving us from intellectual hesitations. J. H. Newman, Gram. of Assent, p. 204.

The curious, critical introspection which marks every sensitive and refined nature, and paralyzes action. G. W. Curtis, Int. to Cecil Drexler.

introspectionist (in-trō-spek'shən-ist), n. [L. introspection + -ist.] One who practises introspection; one who follows the introspective method in psychological inquiry.

As a rule, skeptics . . . are keen introspectionists. J. Owen, Evenings with Ekleptics, I. 512.

Little will they weigh with the introspectionist. Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 91.

introspective (in-trō-spek'tiv), a. [L. introspect + -ive.] Looking within; characterized or effected by introspection; studying or exhibiting one's own consciousness or internal state.

Most introspective poetry . . . wears its because it so often is the petty or morbid sentiment of nature's little superior to our own. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 147.

Introspective method, in psychol., the method of studying mental phenomena by attempting to observe directly what occurs in one's own consciousness. This method, though indispensable, is exposed to many difficulties, and requires the support of other methods, as those of experimental and comparative psychology.

He [Hume] further agrees with Descartes and all his predecessors in pursuing the simple introspective method: that is to say, in attempting to discover truth by simply contemplating his own mind.

Leslie Stephen, Eng. Thought, I. § 30.

introsume (in-trō-sūm'), v. t. [L. intro, within, + sumere, take; see assume, consume, etc.] To take in; absorb.

How they elect, then introsume their proper food. Evelyn.

introsumption (in-trō-sūmp'shən), n. [L. introsumere, after assumption < assume, etc.] The act of taking into or within; a taking in, especially of nourishment.

introsusception (in-trō-sū-sep'shən), n. [L. intro, within, + susceptio (-n-), a taking up or in, < suscipere, pp. susceptus, take up or in; see susceptible.] 1. The act of receiving within.

The parts of the body . . . are nourished by the introsusception of . . . aliment. J. Smith, Portrait of Old Age, p. 180.

The person is corrupted by the introsusception of a nature which becomes evil thereby. Coleridge.

2. In anat. and bot., same as intussusception.

introvenient (in-trō-vē-ni-ent), a. [LL. introvenien (-t-), pp. of introvenire, come in, enter, < L. intro, within, + venire, come; see come.] Coming in or between; entering. [Rare.]

There being scarce any condition (but what depends upon climate) which is not exhausted or obscured from the commixture of introvenient nations either by commerce or conquest. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 10.

introvenium (in-trō-vē-ni-um), n. [NL., < L. intro, within, + vena, vein; see vein.] In bot., a condition in which the veins of leaves are so buried in the parenchyma as to be only indistinctly or not at all visible from the surface. See nerivation, hypodrome.

introversibility (in-trō-vēr-si-bil'i-ti), n. [L. introversibile + -ity; see ability.] The quality of being introversible; capacity for introversion.

The telescopic introversibility of the lophophore does not advance beyond an initial stage. E. R. Lankester, Encyc. Brit., XIX. 450.

introversible (in-trō-vēr-si-bl), a. [L. intro + versibile.] Capable of being introverted.

The anterior introversible region (of Palaudocella). E. R. Lankester, Encyc. Brit., XIX. 450.

introversion (in-trō-vēr'shən), n. [= Sp. introversion = Pg. introversão = It. introversione, < L. intro, within, + versio (-n-), a turning; see Introrse Anther of Nymphaea odorata, with the floral envelope and all but four of the stamens removed.

version. Cf. introvert. The act of introverting, or the state of being introverted; a turning or directing inward, physical or mental.

This introversive of my faculties, wherein I regard my own soul as the image of her Creator.

Ep. Berkeley, Guardian, No. 89.

introversive (in-trō-vēr'siv), a. [L. introversus, turned toward the inside, + -ive.] Turning within; having an inward or internal direction. Also introvertive.

When we come to mental derangements, introversive study is obviously fruitless. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV, 207.

introvert (in-trō-vēr't), v. t. [L. intro, within, + vertere, turn: see verse. Cf. invert, etc.] 1. To turn within; direct inward or interiorly.

His awkward gait, his introverted toes.

Couper, Task, iv, 682.

Struggling with introverted effort, to disentangle a thought. L. Wallace, Ben-Hur, p. 445.

2. In soci., to turn in, or invert; insheathe a part of within another part.

introvert (in-trō-vēr't), n. [introvert, v.] That which is introverted; in soci., some part or organ which is turned in upon itself, or intus-suscepted.

We find that the anterior portion of the body of the polypide can be pulled into the hinder part, as the finger of a glove may be tucked into the hand. It is in fact an introvert. E. R. Lankester, Encyc. Brit., XIX, 481.

introvertive (in-trō-vēr'tiv), a. [introvert + -ive.] Same as introvertive.

Natures reflective, introvertive, restless.

Paths of the World, p. 87.

intrude (in-trōd'), v.; pret. and pp. intruded, ppr. intruding. [OF. intrure, intruire, L. intrudere, thrust in (refl. thrust oneself in), < in, in, + trudere, thrust, push, crowd: cf. extrude, obtrude.] I. trans. 1†. To thrust in; bring in forcibly.

An there come e'er a citizen gentlewoman in my name, let her have entrance, I pray you; . . . there she is! good master, intrude her. B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v, 2.

If it [a clyster] should be intruded up by force, it cannot so quickly penetrate to the superior parts.

Greenhill, Art of Embalming, p. 278.

2. To thrust or bring in without necessity or right; bring forward unwarrantably or inappropriately: often used reflexively.

Our fantasy would intrude a thousand fears, suspicions, chimeras, upon us. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 323.

The envy of the class which Frederic quitted, and the civil scorn of the class into which he intruded himself, were marked in very significant ways.

Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

3. To push or crowd in; thrust into some unusual, improper, or abnormal place or position: as, intruded rocks or dikes in a geological formation. In entomology an intruded part or organ is one that is nearly concealed in a hollow of the supporting parts, only the apex being visible.

Their capitals are intruded between the triforium arches, appearing as if the vault had pressed them from their proper station on the clerestory string-course.

The Century, XXXVI, 504.

4†. To enter forcibly; invade.

Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?

Shak., Lucrece, i, 848.

Intruded head, a head nearly withdrawn into the prothorax, as in certain Coleoptera.

II. intrans. To come or appear as if thrust in; enter without necessity or warrant; especially, to come in unbidden and unwelcomely: as, to intrude upon a private circle; to intrude where one is not wanted.

Where you're always welcome, you never can intrude.

Steele, Lying Lover, i, 1.

Some men are placed in posts of danger, and to these danger comes in the way of duty; but others must not intrude into their honourable office.

J. H. Newman, Parochial Hermans, i, 163.

—Syn. Encroach upon, Infringe upon, etc. See trespass, v. t. Intrude, Obtrude. The essential difference between these words lies in the prepositions: intrude, to thrust one's self into places, invading privacy or private rights; obtrude, to thrust one's self out beyond modesty or the limits proper to ourselves, and offensively against the attention, etc., of others.

intruder (in-trō-dēr), n. One who intrudes; one who thrusts himself in, or enters where he has no right or is not welcome.

Go, base intruder! overweening slave!

Shak., T. G. of V., III, 1, 167.

intrudingly (in-trō-ding-li), adv. By intruding; intrusively.

I thrust myself intrudingly upon you.

Steele, Lying Lover, i, 1.

intrudress (in-trō-dres), n. [intruder + -ess.] A female intruder.

Joshah should recover his rightful throne from the unjust usurpation of Athaliah, an idolatrous intrudress thereinto. Fuller, Pilgrimage.

intrunk (in-trung'), v. t. [< in- + trunk.] To inclose as in a trunk; incase.

Had eager lust intrunk my conquered soul,
I had not buried living joys in death.

Ford, Love's Sacrifice, v, 8.

intruse (in-trōs'), a. [< L. intrusus, pp. of intrudere, thrust in.] In bot., pushed or projecting inward. A. Gray.

intrusion (in-trō'zhon), n. [= F. intrusion = Sp. intrusión = Pg. intrusão = It. intrusione, < ML. intrusio (n-), a thrusting in, < L. intrudere, pp. intrusus, thrust in: see intrude.] 1. The act of intruding; the act of entering without warrant or justification; unbidden, unwelcome, or unfit entrance into or upon anything.

Why this intrusion!

Were not my orders that I should be private?

Addison, Cato, v, 2.

Who feared the pale intrusion of remorse
In a just deed?

Shelley, The Cenci, III, 2.

2. Specifically, in law: (a) A wrongful entry after the determination of a particular estate, say for life, and before the freehold remainderman or reversioner can enter. Minor. (b) In Eng. law, any trespass committed on the public lands of the crown, as by entering thereon without title, holding over after a lease is determined, taking the profits, cutting down timber, and the like. (c) Usurpation, as of an office.

3. A thrusting or pushing in, as of something out of place; irregular or abnormal entrance or irruption: as, an intrusion of foreign matter; the intrusion of extrinsic rocks or dikes in a geological formation. See intrusive rocks, under intrusive.

The composition is thus better than that of the front itself, as there are two harmonious stages in the same style, without any intrusion of foreign elements.

E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 240.

Action of ejection and intrusion. See ejection.—Information of intrusion. See information.

intrusional (in-trō'zhon-əl), a. [< intrusion + -al.] Of or belonging to intrusion; noting intrusion.

intrusionist (in-trō'zhon-ist), n. [< intrusion + -ist.] One who intrudes, or favors intrusion; specifically, one of those in the Established Church of Scotland who denied the right of a parish or congregation to resist or object to the settlement or appointment of an obnoxious minister by a patron. The exercise of this right of presenting or appointing a minister against the wishes of the congregation led to much controversy, and was one of the causes of the disruption in 1843, when the non-intrusionists formed themselves into the Free Church of Scotland. Church patronage was abolished in Scotland in 1874. See non-intrusionist and patronage.

intrusive (in-trō'siv), a. [< L. intrudere, pp. intrusus, thrust in (see intrude), + -ive.] 1. Apt to intrude; coming unbidden or without welcome; appearing undesirably: as, intrusive thoughts or guests.

Let me shake off the intrusive cares of day.

Thomson, Winter, i, 207.

2. Done or effected by intrusion; carried out by irregular or unauthorized entrance: as, intrusive interference.

The shaft sunk from the top [of a mound] showed several intrusive burials. Science, III, 79.

3. Thrust in out of regular place or order; introduced from an extraneous source; due to intrusion or irregular entrance.

The number and bulk of the intrusive masses of differently coloured porphyries, injected one into another and intersected by dikes, is truly extraordinary.

Darwin, Geol. Observations, II, 518.

The greater gods of Greece . . . were the intrusive gods, the divinities of new comers into the land.

Keary, Prim. Beloit, p. 214.

Intrusive rocks, in geol., rocks which have made their way up from below into another rock or series of beds. As generally used by geologists at the present time, the phrase refers only to those rocks often styled Plutonic, or such as are revealed at the surface by erosion of a certain thickness of overlying rock. Masses which have come up to the surface in the manner of ordinary volcanic rock would not be called intrusive.

intrusively (in-trō'siv-li), adv. In an intrusive manner; by intrusion.

intrusiveness (in-trō'siv-ness), n. The character or quality of being intrusive.

intrusory (in-trō'sor), n. [ML. intrusor, < ML. intrudere, pp. intrusus, intrude: see intrude.] An intruder. Lydgate.

intrust (in-trust'), v. t. [Also entrust; < in- + trust.] 1. To consign or make over as a trust; transfer or commit in trust; confide: followed by to.

I hope . . . that I may have the liberty to intrust my neck to the fidelity of my own feet, rather than to those of my horse. Occum, in Walton's Angler, II, 232.

Besides the loftiest part of the work of Providence, entrusted to the Hebrew race, there was other work to do, and it was done elsewhere. Gladiators, Might of Right, p. 108.

2. To invest, as with a trust or responsibility; endue, as with the care or fiduciary possession of something; followed by with.

The joy of our Lord and master, which they only are admitted to who are careful to improve the talents they are intrusted withall. Ep. Wilkins, Natural Religion, II, 2.

In a republic, every citizen is himself in some measure intrusted with the public safety, and acts an important part for its weal or woe. Story, Misc. Writings, p. 518.

—Syn. 1. Confiat, Consign, etc. See commit.

intubation (in-tū-bā'shon), n. [< L. in, in, + tubus, tube, + -ation.] The act of inserting a tube into some orifice.—Intubation of the larynx, the insertion of a specially designed tube into the glottis to keep it patent, as in diphtheritic obstruction: a substitute for tracheotomy.

intuit (in'tū-it), v.; pret. and pp. intuited, ppr. intuiting. [Also intuitive; < L. intuitus, pp. of intueri, look at or upon, observe, regard, contemplate, consider, < in, in, on, + tuere, look: see intuition, tutor.] I. trans. To know intuitively or by immediate perception.

If there are no other origins for right and wrong than . . . [the] unaided or intuitive divine will, then, as alleged, were there no knowledge of the divine will.

H. Spencer, Data of Ethics, p. 60.

II. intrans. To receive or assimilate knowledge by direct perception or comprehension.

God must see, he must intuit, so to speak.

De Quincey, Rhetoric.

The passage from the Known to the Unknown is one of constant trial. We see, and from it infer what is not seen; we intuit, and conclude.

G. H. Lewes, Proba. of Life and Mind, II, III, 7.

intuition (in-tū-ish'on), n. [= F. intuition = Sp. intuición = Pg. intuição = It. intuizione, < ML. intuitio (n-), a looking at, immediate cognition, < L. intueri, look at, consider: see intuit.] 1†. A looking on; a sight or view.

His [Christ's] disciples must not only abstain from the act of unlawful concubinate, but from the impurer intuition of a wife of another man.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 215.

2. Direct or immediate cognition or perception; comprehension of ideas or truths independently of ratiocination; instinctive knowledge of the relations or consequences of ideas, facts, or actions.

No doubt, with Philolaus the motion of the earth was only a guess, or, if you like, a happy intuition.

Mac Miller, Sci. of Lang., 1st ser., p. 20.

3. Specifically, in philos., an immediate cognition of an object as existent.

The term intuition is not unambiguous. Besides its original and proper meaning (as a visual perception), it has been employed to denote a kind of apprehension, and a kind of judgment. Under the former head, intuition or intuitive knowledge has been used in the six following significations: — a.—To denote a perception of the actual and present, in opposition to the abstractive knowledge which we have of the possible in imagination and of the past in memory. b.—To denote an immediate apprehension of a thing in itself, in contrast to a representative, vicarious, or mediate apprehension of it, in or through something else. (Hence, by Fichte, Schelling, and others, Intuition is employed to designate the cognition as opposed to the conception of the Absolute.) c.—To denote the knowledge which we can adequately represent in imagination, in contradistinction to the symbolical knowledge which we cannot image, but only think or conceive, through and under a sign or word. (Hence, probably, Kant's application of the term to the forms of the sensibility—the imaginations of space and time—in contrast to the forms or categories of the understanding.) d.—To denote perception proper (the objective), in contrast to sensation proper (the subjective), in our sensitive consciousness. e.—To denote the simple apprehension of a notion, in contradistinction to the complex apprehension of the terms of a proposition. Under the latter head it has only a single signification, viz.: f.—To denote the immediate affirmation by the intellect, that the predicate does or does not pertain to the subject, in what are called self-evident propositions. All these meanings, however, with the exception of the fourth, have this in common, that they express the condition of an immediate in opposition to mediate knowledge.

St. W. Hamilton, Reid's Works, p. 756, note A, § 5.

The term intuition will be taken as signifying a cognition not determined by a previous cognition of the same object, and therefore so determined by something out of the consciousness. The word intuitus first occurs as a technical term in St. Anselm's Monologium. He wished to distinguish between our knowledge of God and our knowledge of finite things (and, in the next world, of God also); and, thinking of the saying of St. Paul, "Videmus nunc per speculum in enigmate," tunc autem facie ad faciem, he called the former speculation and the latter intuition. This use of "speculation" did not take root, because that word already had another exact and widely different signification. In the middle ages the term "intuitive cognition" had two principal senses: 1st, as opposed to abstractive cognition, it meant the knowledge of the present as present, and this is its meaning in Anselm; but, 2d, as no intuitive cognition was allowed to be determined by a previous cognition, it came to be used as the opposite of discursive cognition (see Scotus), and this is nearly the sense in which I employ it. C. S. Peirce.

[Some writers hold that the German Anschauung should not be translated by intuition. But this term is a part of the Kantian terminology, the whole of which was framed in Latin and translated into German, and this word in particular was used by Kant in his Latin writings in the form intuitus, and he frequently brackets this form after Anschauung, to make his meaning clear. Besides, the cognitive intuition of Scotus, who anticipated some of Kant's most important views on this subject, is almost identical with Kant's own definition of Anschauung. Intellectual intuition, used since Kant for an immediate cognition of the existence of God, was by the German mystics employed for their spiritual illumination (the term intuitus intellectualis was borrowed by them from Cardinal de Cusa), or light of nature.]

4. Any object or truth discerned by direct cognition; a first or primary truth; a truth that cannot be acquired by but is assumed in experience.—5. Pure, untaught knowledge.

We denote this primary wisdom as intuition, whilst all later teachings are intuitions. Emerson, Self-Reliance, p. 56.

Intellectual intuition. See Intellectual.

intuitionist (in-tū-īsh'gū-n-ist), a. [< intuition + -ist.] Pertaining to or derived from intuition; based on intuition as a principle; as, the intuitionist origin of knowledge; the intuitionist school of philosophy.

intuitionism (in-tū-īsh'gū-n-izm), n. [< intuition + -ism.] In metaph., the doctrine that the absolute is known, in its existence, by an immediate cognition of the understanding.

intuitionist (in-tū-īsh'gū-n-ist), n. [< intuition + -ist.] A believer in the doctrine of intuitionism.

The great opposing theories of the experientialists and the intuitionists. J. Pike, Cosmic Philos., I, 78.

intuitionism (in-tū-īsh'gū-n-izm), n. [< intuition + -ism.] The doctrine of Reid and other Scotch philosophers that external objects are immediately known in perception, without the intervention of a vicarious phenomenon.

intuitionist (in-tū-īsh'gū-n-ist), n. [< intuition + -ist.] An adherent of the doctrine of Reid concerning immediate perception.

intuitive (in-tū-ī-tiv), a. [= F. intuitif = Sp. Pg. It. intuitivo, < ML. intuitivus, < L. intuitus, look at, consider; see intui, intuitum.] 1. Perceiving directly, without a medium, vicarious representation, symbol, or phenomenon; perceiving the object immediately as it exists.

Faith, beginning here with a weak apprehension of things not seen, endeth with the intuitive vision of God in the world to come. Hooker, Ecclies. Polity.

2. Pertaining to a knowledge (especially, but not exclusively, an immediate knowledge) of a thing as existent.—3. Not determined by other cognitions; not discursive; of the nature of a first premise; immediate; self-evident; reached without reasoning by an inexplicable and unconscious process of thought.

Whence the soul Reason receives, and reason is her being, Discursive or intuitive. Milton, P. L., v. 488.

4. Presenting an object as an individual image; not general.—Intuitive certainty, cognition, judgment, etc. See the nouns.

intuitively (in-tū-ī-tiv-ly), adv. In an intuitive manner; by instinctive apprehension; as, to perceive truth intuitively.

God Almighty, who sees all things intuitively, does not want logical helps. Baker, On Learning.

We feel intuitively that there is something not only imperfect, but absolutely repulsive, in the purely skeptical spirit. H. N. Owenham, Short Studies, p. 283.

intuitivism (in-tū-ī-tiv-izm), n. [< intuitive + -ism.] The doctrine that the fundamental principles of ethics are reached by intuition.

The difference between the two phases of intuitivism in which these notions [of the relations between right and good, and that the right is always in our power] are respectively prominent is purely formal; their practical prescriptions are never found to conflict.

H. Sidgwick, Methods of Ethics, p. 89.

intuitivist (in-tū-ī-tiv-ist), n. [< intuitive + -ist.] One who believes in intuition; one who believes in the intuitive character of ethical ideas.

The intuitivist, . . . by teaching the latent existence in the soul of the regulative moral idea, leaves open a door to a sudden, accidental, and semi-miraculous discovery of the path of duty.

J. Sully, Sensation and Intuition, p. 158.

intumescence (in-tū-mes'ens), v. i.; pret. and pp. intumescens, ppr. intumescing. [= Sp. entumescer = Pg. intumescer, < L. intumescere, swell up, < in, in, on, + tumescere, inceptive of tumere, swell; see tumid.] To enlarge or expand, as with heat; swell up; become tumid.

A number of the vesicles being half filled up with a white, soft, earthy mesotypic mineral, which intumescens under the blowpipe in a remarkable manner. Darwin, Geol. Observations, I, 31.

intumescence (in-tū-mes'ens), n. [= F. intumescence = Pg. intumescencia = Sp. intumescencia = It. intumescenza, < NL. intumescencia, < L. intumescens (-s), swelling up; see intumescens.] 1. The state or process of swelling or enlarging, as with heat; expansion; tumidity.

Had navigation been at that time sufficiently advanced to make so long a passage easily practicable, there is little reason for doubting but the intumescence of nations would have found its vent, like all other expansive violence, where there was least resistance.

Johnson, Taxation no Tyranny.

2. A swollen or tumid growth or mass; tumefaction.

intumescency (in-tū-mes'ēn-si), n. [As intumescence.] Same as intumescence. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii, 13.

intumescens (in-tū-mes'ēnt), a. [= Sp. intumescens, < L. intumescens (-s), ppr. of intumescere, swell up, < in, in, + tumescere, begin to swell; see tumescens.] Swelling up; becoming tumid.

The treatment consisted in reducing the size of the intumescens membranes. Medical News, LII, 668.

intumescit (in-tū-mē-lāt), v. t. [< ML. intumescit, ppr. of intumulare, bury, entomb, < L. in, in, + tumulus, pp. of tumulare, bury, < tumulus, a mound, tomb; see tumulus.] To place or deposit within a tomb or grave; inter or in-hume; bury.

He also caused the corpse of King Richard ye Second to be taken from the earth, whom King Henry the Fourth had intumescit in the friars Church of Langley.

Stow, Hen. V., an. 1413.

intumescit (in-tū-mē-lāt), a. [< ML. intumescit, pp.: see the verb.] Interred; buried.

Whose corpse was . . . on the right hand of the high altar, princely entered and intumescit.

Hall, Edw. IV., an. 23.

intumescit (in-tū-mē-lāt), a. [< L. intumescit, unburied, < in-priv. + tumulus, pp. of tumulare, bury; see intumescit.] Not buried. Cockeram.

intune, v. t. Same as entune.

inturbidate (in-tēr'bi-dāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. inturbidated, ppr. inturbidating. [< L. in, in, + turbidatus, pp. of turbidare, trouble, < turbidus, troubled; see turbid.] To render turbid, dark, or confused. [Rare.]

The confusion of ideas and conceptions under the same term painfully inturbidates his theology. Coleridge.

inturgescence (in-tūr-jēs'ēns), n. [< LL. inturgescere, swell up, < L. in, in, on, + turgescere, begin to swell, < turgere, swell; see turgid.] A swelling; the act of swelling, or the state of being swollen.

inturgescency (in-tēr-jēs'ēn-si), n. Same as inturgescence.

Inturgescence caused first at the bottom [of the seal, and carrying the upper part before them.

Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii, 13.

inturn (in'tern), n. [< in + turn, n.] The act of a wrestler when he puts his thigh between the thighs of his adversary, and lifts him up.

Then with an inturne following that, Upon his backe he throw him flat.

Lucan, Pharsalia (trans.), 1614.

inturned (in'tērnd), a. Turned in.

This is, I believe, only an optical effect due to the inturned edges of the cuticle. Microsc. Sci., XXIX, ill. 265.

intuse, n. [< LL. intusus, pp. of intundere, pound, bruise, < L. in, in, + tundere, pound, bruise; cf. contuse.] A bruise.

And, after having searcht the intuse deepe, She with her heart did bind the wound from cold to keepe.

Spenser, F. Q., III, v. 33.

intuspose (in-tus-pōz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. intusposed, ppr. intusposing. [< L. intus, within, + posere.] To introduce; cause to occupy an interior position; place within. J. W. Dale, Classic Baptism, p. xxi.

intusposition (in'tus-pō-zish'gūn), n. [< L. intus, within, + positio (-n-), a placing; see positus. Cf. intusposc.] Situation within; the state or condition of being within, or surrounded on all sides, as by an enveloping space or element. J. W. Dale, Classic Baptism, p. xvii.

intususcept (in'tu-su-sep'ted), a. [< L. intus, within, + susceptus, pp. of suscipere, take up; see susceptible.] Taken up into itself or into something else; invaginated; introverted; specifically applied to a part of a bowel which suffers intususception.

intususception (in'tu-su-sep'shūn), n. [= F. intususception = Sp. intususception = Pg. intususcepção, < L. intus, within, + susception (-n-), a taking up, < suscipere, pp. suscipere, take up; see susceptible.] A receiving within; reception of one part within another part of the same organ, or of one organ within another of the same kind; invagination; introversion; intususception. Specifically—(a) In pathol., the introduction of a part of the intestine into an adjacent part.

Having once commenced, the intususception goes on increasing . . . as the result of peristaltic action.

Quain, Med. Dict.

(b) In physiol., reception of foreign matter by a living organism, and its conversion into living tissue; ingestion, digestion, and assimilation of food, including the whole process of nutrition and growth. It is the mode of interstitial growth characteristic of organic life, as distinguished from any process of accretion by which a mineral may increase in size. (c) In bot., according to the theory proposed by Nageli, the growth of cell-walls by the intercalation of new solid particles between those already in existence. The intususception theory is opposed to the theory of growth by apposition, which supposes that the new particles are deposited in layers on the inner side of the cell-wall.

intususceptive (in'tu-su-sep'tiv), a. [< L. intus, within, + suscipere, pp. suscipere, take up. Cf. intususception.] In physiol., of the nature of or characterized by intususception; interstitial, as a mode of growth. See intususception (b).

The consequence of this intususceptive growth is the "development" or "evolution" of the germ into the visible bird. Huxley, Evol. in Biology.

intwine, v. See entwine.

intwist (in-twist'), v. t. Same as entwist.

inuendo, n. An erroneous spelling of innuendo, 2.

inula (in'ū-lā), n. [L., supposed to be a corrupt form of Gr. ἐλένιον, a plant, supposed to be elecampane; see helenium, elecampane.] A genus of plants of the natural order Compositae, type of the tribe Inuleae. They are usually inert, rather coarse herbs, with moderately large heads of yellow-rayed flowers, and radical or alternate entire or serrate leaves. About 80 species are known, natives of temperate Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia. I. Helenium, the elecampane, oil-dock, horseheel, horse-elder, or scabwort, is a native of central and southern Europe, Siberia, and the Himalayas, and has been extensively naturalized in England (where it may possibly also be native) and North America. The root is an aromatic tonic and gentle stimulant, and has been supposed to possess diaphoretic, diuretic, expectorant, and emmenagogic properties. It was much employed by the ancients, but its use at present is confined to chronic diseases of the lungs. (See cut under elecampane.) I. Conyza, the rigid inule or plowman's spike-nard, is a native of central and southern Europe; I. dy-senterica, the fleabane or fleabane-mulleet, has about the same distribution; I. orthoides, the samphire-inule or golden samphire, is a native of western Europe and of all the region around the Mediterranean; I. Pulicaria, the fleabane or herb-christopher, ranges over Europe and Russian Asia; and I. salicina, the willow-leaved inula, is also widely distributed over Europe.

Inulaceae (in-ū-lā'sā-sē), n. pl. [NL. (Presl, 1822), < Inula + -aceae.] A tribe of composite plants, typified by the genus Inula; now included in the Inuleae. Also Inuleae.

inule (in'ū-l), n. [< NL. Inula.] A plant of the genus Inula, particularly I. Helenium, the elecampane.

inulin (in'ū-lin), n. [< Inula + -in.] A vegetable principle (C₆H₁₀O₅) which is spontaneously deposited from a decoction of the roots of Inula Helenium and certain other plants. It is a white powder soluble in hot water, is colored yellow by iodine, and in its chemical properties appears to be intermediate between those of sugar and starch. Also called dahlin and alantinn.

inulinoid (in'ū-lin-oid), a. [< inul(in) + -oid.] Resembling or related to inulin.

Inuloides (in'ū-lōi'dē-sē), n. pl. [NL., < Inula + -oides.] A large and somewhat heterogeneous tribe of composite plants, typified by the genus Inula.

inumbate (in-um-brāt), v. t. [< L. inumbare, pp. of inumbare, cast a shadow upon, < in, on, + umbare, shadow, shade, < umbra, a shadow; see umbra.] To cast a shadow upon. Bailey.

inumbation (in-um-brā'shūn), n. [< LL. inumbatio (-n-), an overshadowing, < L. inumbare, overshadow; see inumbate.] Shade; a shadow; an overshadowing.

The obstruction and inumbation beginneth on that side. Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 966.

innuncate (in-ung'kāt), v. t. [< L. innuncatus, pp. of innuncare, hook, < in, in, + uncus, a hook; see adunc.] To hook or entangle. Bailey, 1731.

innointed (in-ung'k'ed), a. [< L. innunctus, annointed; see innunction, and cf. annointed.] Annointed.

innunction (in-ung'k'shūn), n. [< L. innunctio (-n-), an anointing, a spreading on, < innungere, anoint, spread on, < in, on, + ungere, smear; see unction. Cf. annoint, from the same verb (L. innungere).] The action of anointing; an-tion; in med., the act of rubbing in an ointment or a liniment.

When the skin is cold and dry, or cold and moist, and insufficiently nourished, as well as in certain fevers and other morbid conditions, there can be no doubt of the value of inunction.

Book's Handbook of Med. Sciences, IV, 648.

inunctuosity (in-un'k-tū-on'ī-ti), n. [< in-3 + unctuousity.] Lack of unctuousity; absence of greasiness or oiliness perceptible to the touch: as, the inunctuosity of porcelain-clay. Kirwan.

inundant (in-un'dant), a. [= Sp. Pg. inundante, < L. inundans (pp. of inundare, overflow; see inundate. Cf. abundant, redundant.] Overflowing; inundating. [Poetical.]

Days, and nights, and hours,
Thy voice, hydroplak Fancy, calls aloud
For costly draughts, inundant bowls of joy.

Shenstone, Economy, 1.

Inundatus (in-un-dā'tē), n. pl. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1761), fem. pl. of L. inundatus, overflowed; see inundate.] A division (order) of water-plants or water-loving plants, containing the genera Eippuris, Ceratophyllum, Potamogeton, Ruppia, Typha, etc., which are now referred to the natural orders Haloragaceae, Naiadaceae, Typhaceae, etc.

inundate (in-un'dāt or in-un'dāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. inundated, ppr. inundating. [< L. inundatus, pp. of inundare (> It. inondare, inondare = Sp. Pg. inundar = F. inonder), overflow, < in, on, + undare, rise in waves; see ound, and cf. abundant, redound, surround.] 1. To overspread with or as if with a flood; overflow; flood; deluge.

Nonnus reports, in the history of his embassy, that during the period when the Nile inundated Egypt, there are very violent storms in the different parts of Ethiopia.

Beloe, tr. of Herodotus, II, 39.

Hence—2. To gorge with excessive circulation or abundance; fill inordinately; overspread; overwhelm.

The calm and the magical moonlight Seemed to inundate her soul with indescribable longings.

Longfellow, Evangeline, II, 3.

The whole system is inundated with the tides of joy.

Emerson, Success.

inundation (in-un-dā'shon), n. [= F. inondation = Pr. inundacion = Sp. inundacion = Pg. inundação = It. inondazione, inondazione, < L. inundatio (n.), an overflowing, < inundare, pp. inundatus, overflow; see inundate.] The act of inundating, or the state of being inundated; an overflow of water or other fluid; a flood; a rising and spreading of water over low grounds; hence, an overspreading of any kind; an overflow or superfluous abundance.

Her father, . . . in his wisdom, hastens our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears.

Shak., E. and J., IV, 1, 12.

Seven or eight weeks we withstood the inundations of these disorderly humors.

The greater portion of the cultivable soil is fertilized by the natural annual inundation.

E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, II, 24.

inunderstanding (in-un-dēr-stan'ding), a. [< in-3 + understanding, ppr. of understand.] Void of understanding; unintelligent.

Can we think that such material and mortal, that such inunderstanding souls, should by God and nature be furnished with bodies of so long permanence?

Sp. Pearson, Expos. of Creed, x.

inurbane (in-ēr-bān'), a. [= Sp. Pg. It. inurbano, < L. inurbanus, not civil or polite, < in-priv. + urbanus, civil, polite; see urbane.] Not urbane; uncivil; discourteous; unpolished.

Just it would be, and by no means inurbane, but hardly, perhaps, Christian.

M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, vi.

inurbanely (in-ēr-bān'li), adv. Without urbanity; uncivilly.

inurbaneness (in-ēr-bān'nes), n. Lack of urbanity; incivility. Bailey, 1727.

inurbanity (in-ēr-bān'ī-ti), n. [= F. inurbanité = Sp. inurbanidad = It. inurbanità, *< L. as if inurbanitas (> It. inurbanitas, inurbane; see urbane, and cf. urbanity.] Lack of urbanity or courtesy; rude, unpolished manners or deportment; incivility.

Plants abound in pleasantness that were the delight of his own and of the following age, but which at the distance of one hundred and fifty years Horace scruples not to censure for their inurbanity.

Beattie, Laughter and Ludicrous Composition.

inure (in-ūr'), v.; pret. and pp. inured, ppr. inuring. [Also ensure; < in ure, in the phrase put in ure, put in practice; in-1, prep.; ure, work, operation, practice; see ure.] 1. trans.

1†. To establish by use; put into exercise or act; insure.

But as he sends upon his high behests
For state, as Soyan King; and to insure Our prompt obedience. Milton, P. L., VIII, 239.

2†. To use; adapt; qualify; practise; exercise; ply.

Inure the with them that byn wyse,
Then to Byches thou shalt Aryse.
Booke of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), I, 70.

I also insure my pen sometimes in that kind.
Spenser, To G. Harvey.
A prince may animate and insure some meaner persons to be scourges to ambitious men.

Bacon, Ambition (ed. 1887).

3. To toughen or harden by exercise; deaden the sensibility of; accustom; habituate: followed by to.

A nation warlike, and insured to practice
Of policy and labour, cannot brook
A feminine authority. Ford, Broken Heart, v, 8.
Inured to hardships from his early youth,
Much had he done, and suffer'd for his truth.
Dryden, Hind and Panther, III, 910.

The poor, inured to drudgery and distress,
Act without aim, think little, and feel less.
Cooper, Hope, I, 7.

II. intrans. 1. To pass in use; take or have effect; be applied; become available or serviceable as, the land will insure to the heirs, or to the benefit of the heirs.

Speaking before of the figure (Synecdoche) we called him (Quicks conceit) because he insured in a single word only by way of intendment or large meaning, but such as was speedily discovered by every quick wit.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 108.

Almost every privilege conceded by neutrals would be apt to insure more to the benefit of one than of the other of two hostile nations.

Woolsey, Introd. to Inter. Law, § 187.

2. In law, to devolve as a right. It is commonly used of a devolution by law not intended by the parties: as, if the holder of a lease with covenant for renewal assigns it, and afterward gets a renewal to himself, the renewal insures to the benefit of the assignee.

insurement (in-ūr'mēt), n. [< insure + -ment.] The act of insuring, or the state of being insured; practice; habit.

How much more may we hope, through the very same means (education being nothing else but a constant plight and insurement), to induce by custom good habits into a reasonable creature.

Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 78.

inurn (in-ēr'n'), v. t. [< in-3 + urn.] To put into an urn, especially a funeral urn; hence, to bury; inter; incomb.

The sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd.
Shak., Hamlet, I, 4, 49.

-inus. [NL., L., a common adj. suffix; see -in-1, -in-2.] A suffix forming Latin adjectives and nouns thence derived. It is frequent in New Latin generic and specific names, as in Acanthinus, etc.

inustatet (in-ū-zī-tā'tē), a. [= F. inustité, < L. inustatus, unused, unusual, < in-priv. + ustatus, used, usual, pp. of ustari, use often, freq. of uti, pp. usus, use; see use, v.] Unused; unusual.

I find some inustate expressions about some mysteries.

Abp. Bramhall, Works, II, 61.

inustation (in-ū-zī-tā'shon), n. [< L. inustatus, unused, unusual (see inustate), + -ation.] The state of being unused; neglect of use; disuse. [Obsolete or archaic.]

The mammae of the male have not vanished by inustation.

Paley, Nat. Theol., xxiii.

inustt, a. [< L. inustus, pp. of inurere, burn in, brand, < in, on, + urere, burn.] Burnt in.

That furious hot inust impression.
Dr. H. More, Psychathanasia, III, III, 69.

inustion (in-ūs'chōn), n. [*< L. as if inustio (n.), < inurere, pp. inustus, burn in; see inust.] The act of burning, or of marking by burning; a branding; in med., cauterization.

A kingdom brought him to tyranny, tyranny to . . . inustion of other countries, among which Israel felt the smart in the burning of her cities and massacring her inhabitants.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, II, 354.

in utero (in ū'tē-rō), [L. in, in; utero, abl. of uterus, womb; see uterus.] In the womb; begotten, but yet to be born. See in ventre.

inutile (in-ū'til), a. [= F. inutile = Pr. inutil = Sp. inútil = Pg. inútil = It. inutile, < L. inutilis, useless, < in-priv. + utilis, useful; see utility.] Unprofitable; useless.

To refer to heat and cold is a compendious and inutile speculation.

Bacon, Nat. Hist.

inutility (in-ū'til'ī-ti), n.; pl. inutilities (-tiz). [= F. inutilité = Sp. inutilidad = Pg. inutilidade = It. inutilità, < L. inutilitas (t)-s, uselessness, < inutilis, useless; see inutile.] 1. The quality of being useless or unprofitable; lack of utility; uselessness; unprofitableness.

It is obvious that utility passes through inutility before changing into disutility; these notions being related as +, 0, and -.

Jeans, Pol. Econ., p. 68.

Even on their own opinion of their inutility . . . I shall propose to you to suppress the board of trade and plantations.

Burke, Economical Reform.

2. Something that is useless.

"Pshaw!" replied Arminius, contemptuously: "that great rope (the Atlantic cable), with a Philistine at each end of it talking inutilities!"

M. Arnold, Friendship's Garland, vii.

inutilized (in-ū'til-īzd), a. [< in-3 + utilized.] Not utilized. Also spelled inutilised.

The application [of native ultramarine, which is worth, weight for weight, more than gold], remained inutilized for several years.

W. Crookes, Dyeing and Calico-printing, p. 80.

in utroque jure (in ū-trō'kwē jō'rē), [L. in, in; utroque, abl. of utroque, either; jure, abl. of jus, law.] In each or either law; under both laws.

inutterable (in-ut'ēr-ā-bl), a. [< in-3 + utterable.] Incapable of being uttered; unutterable.

All monstrous, all prodigious things,
Abominable, inutterable, and worse Than fables yet have feign'd. Milton, P. L., II, 698.

There,
If the wolf spare me, weep my life away,
Kill'd with inutterable unkindliness.

Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

Inuus (in-ū-us), n. [NL., < L. Inuus, a name of Pan.] A notable genus of old-world monkeys, of the family Cynopithecidae and subfamily Cynopithecinae, related to the macaques. Inuus occidatus, the well-known Barbary ape, inhabiting the rock of Gibraltar, is the only species. This animal is called an ape, and has been placed with the higher simians in the family Simiidae; but its proper position is with the lower monkeys, near the baboons. See out under ape.

in vacuo (in vak'ū-ō), [L. in, in; vacuo, abl. of vacuum, vacuum; see vacuum.] In a vacuum; in empty space.

invade (in-vād'), v. t.; pret. and pp. invaded, ppr. invading. [= OE. invader = Sp. Pg. invadir = It. invadere, < L. invadere, go, come, or get into, enter into, attack, invade, < in, in, + vadere, go; see evade. Cf. inveigh.] 1†. To go into or upon; enter.

Becomes a body, and doth then invade
The state of life, out of the grisly shade.

Spenser, F. Q., III, vi, 37.

This contentious storm
Invades us to the skin. Shak., Lear, III, 4, 7.

2. To enter or penetrate into as an enemy; go or pass into or over with hostile intent, as in a military incursion.

By cordes lo! fal fast gan they slide adown:
And straight invades the town yburied then
With wine and slepe. Survey, Aneid, II.

Flur, for whose love the Roman (Cesar first Invaded Britain. Tennyson, Geraint.

Hence—3. To come into or upon as if by a hostile incursion; make an attack upon.

Jove can endure no longer
Your great ones should your less invade.

B. Jonson, Golden Age Restored.

Our Saviour himself, coming to reform his Church, was accus'd of an intent to invade Caesar's right.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, xi.

The fumes of it [authority] invades the brain,
And make men giddy, proud, and vain.

S. Butler, Miscellaneous Thoughts.

4. To intrude upon; infringe; encroach on; violate: as, to invade the privacy of a family.

When . . . the rights of a whole people are invaded, the common forms of municipal law are not to be regarded.

A. Hamilton, Works, II, 95.

invader (in-vā'dēr), n. One who invades; an assailant; an encroacher; an intruder.

Let Erin remember the days of old,
Her faithless sons betray'd her,
When Malachi wore the collar of gold
Which he won from the proud invader.

Moore, Let Erin Remember.

Heroes and patriots have successfully resisted the invaders of their country, or perished in its defence.

Storrs, Misc. Writings, p. 341.

invadiatet (in-vā'di-āt), v. i. [< ML. invadiatus, pp. of invadiare, engage; see engage.] To engage or mortgage lands. Bailey, 1731.

invaginable (in-vā'jī-nā-bl), a. [< invagina (to) + -ble.] Capable of being invaginated; susceptible of invagination.

The great probovals of Balanoglossus may well be compared to the invaginable organ similarly placed in the Nemertines.

Enyoc. Brit., XXIV, 187.

invaginate (in-vā'jī-nāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. invaginated, ppr. invaginating. [< L. in, in, + vagina, a sheath: see vagina.] To sheathe; insert or receive as into a sheath; introvert; opposed to evaginate.

Dr. Kingsley claims that the compound eye arises as an invaginated pit of ectoderm. Amer. Naturalist, XXI. 1120.

invagination (in-vaj-i-nā'shūn), n. [< invaginate + -ion.] The act of introverting or sheathing, or the state of being sheathed; insertion or reception as into a sheath; intussusception.

invalence¹ (in-vā-les'gns), n. [< L. in-priv. + valesco(-t)s, ppr. of valescere, grow strong. Cf. convalescence.] Lack of health. Johnson.

invalence² (in-vā-les'gns), n. [< L. invalescere, become strong, < in- intensiva + valescere, inceptive of valere, be strong: see valid. Cf. convalescence.] Strength; health. Bailey, 1781.

invaletudinary (in-val-ē-tū'di-nā-ri), a. [= F. invalidudinaire = Sp. invalidudinario, < L. invaletudinarius, sick (used only as a noun), < in- intensiva + valetudinarius, sick: see valetudinary.] Sick; ill; valetudinary.

Whether usually the most studious, laborious ministers be not the most invaletudinary and infirm? Papers between the Commissioners for Review of the Liturgy (1861), p. 127.

invalid¹ (in-val'id), a. [= F. invalide = Sp. invalido = Pg. It. invalido, < L. invalidus, not strong, weak, inefficient, < in-priv. + validus, strong: see valid. Cf. invalid².] 1. Not valid; of no force, weight, or cogency; weak.

But this I urge,
Admitting motion in the heavens, to show
Invalid that which these do doubt it moved.
Milton, P. L., viii. 112.

The greater our obligations to such writers, the more desirable is it that their invalid judgments should be discriminated from their valid. F. Hall, False Philol., p. 2.

2. In law, having no validity or binding force; wanting efficacy; null; void: as, an invalid contract or agreement.

invalid² (in-vā-lid or -léd), a. and n. [Formerly also invalide; = D. invalide, a., = G. invalide = Dan. Sw. invalid, n., < F. invalide (= Sp. invalido = Pg. It. invalido), a., not strong, sick, invalid; as a noun, a disabled soldier; < L. invalidus, not strong: see invalid¹.] 1. a. Deficient in health; infirm; weak; sick.

II. n. 1. An infirm or sickly person; one who is affected by disease or disabled by any infirmity. Hence—2. Something that is damaged, or the worse for wear, but not so much as to be wholly unserviceable. [Humorous.]

The carriages were old second-class invalids of English lines: but they were luxurious enough after the long journey in dust and sun.
W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I. 158.

invalid³ (in-vā-lid or -léd), v. [< invalid², a.] 1. trans. 1. To affect with disease; render an invalid; chiefly in the past participle.

Mr. Pickwick out the matter short by drawing the invalided stroller's arm through his, and leading him away.
Dickens, Pickwick, xiv.

Rheumatica, who so largely preponderate among the invalided visitors at our sulphur springs.
Harper's Mag., LXIX. 489.

2. To register as an invalid; enroll on the list of invalids in the military or naval service; give leave of absence from duty on account of ill health.

II. intrans. To cause one's self to be registered as an invalid. [Rare.]

He had been long suffering from the insidious attacks of a hot climate, and though repeatedly advised to invalid, he never would consent.
Murray, Peter Simple.

invalidate (in-val'i-dāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. invalidated, ppr. invalidating. [*< ML. *invalidatus, pp. of invalidare (> It. invalidare = Sp. Pg. invalidar = F. invalider), make invalid, < L. invalidus, invalid: see invalid¹. Cf. validate.] 1. To render invalid; destroy the strength or validity of; render of no force or effect.

Argument is to be invalidated only by argument, and is in itself of the same force, whether or not it convinces him by whom it is proposed. Johnson, Rambler, No. 14.

The force of the objection above set forth may be fully admitted, without in any degree invalidating the theory.
H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 41.

Specifically—2. In law, to deprive of binding force or legal efficacy: as, fraud invalidates a contract.

invalidation (in-val-i-dā'shūn), n. [< F. invalidation = Sp. invalidacion; as invalidate + -ion.] The act of invalidating or of rendering invalid.

The thirty-four confirmations [of Magna Charta] would have been only so many repetitions of their absurdity, so many new links in the chain, and so many invalidations of their right.

Burke, Powers of Juries in Prosecutions for Libels. invalid¹, a. and n. An obsolete form of invalid².

invalidhood (in-vā-lid or -léd-hūd), n. [< invalid² + -hood.] The state of being an invalid; invalidism. [Rare.]

About twenty years ago she had an illness, and, on the strength of it, has kept up a character for invalidhood ever since.
K. Broughton, Red as a Rose is She, ix.

invalidism (in-vā-lid or -léd-izm), n. [< invalid² + -ism.] The condition of being an invalid; a state of debility or infirmity; especially, a chronic condition of poor health.

Invalidism is a function, to which certain persons are born, as others are born to poetry or art as their calling.
O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 109.

invalidity (in-vā-lid'i-ti), n. [= F. invalidité = Pg. invalidade = It. invalidità, invalidity, < ML. invaliditas(-s), weakness, infirmity (from a wound), < L. invalidus, not strong: see invalid¹, invalid².] 1. Weakness; infirmity.

He ordered that none who could work should be idle; and that none who could not work, by age, sickness, or invalidity, should want.
Sir W. Temple.

2. Lack of validity; want of cogency, force, or efficacy; specifically, lack of legal force: as, the invalidity of an argument or of a will.

But, however, to prevent all cavillings, in this place I'll shew the invalidity of this objection.
Granville, Pre-existence of Souls, iv.

The penalty of invalidity attaching to unstamped documents of various kinds has proved a very effective deterrent to evasion.
Encyc. Brit., XXXIII. 68.

invalidly (in-val'id-lī), adv. So as to be invalid; without validity.

Frivolously bought, and therefore invalidly obtained.
Philadelphia Times, Oct. 23, 1885.

invalidness (in-val'id-nes), n. Invalidity: as, the invalidness of reasoning. [Rare.]

invalidorous (in-val'g-rus), a. [< in- + valorous.] Not valorous; cowardly. D. O'Connell.

invaluable (in-val'ū-ā-bl), a. [< in- + valuable.] Above or beyond valuation; too valuable for exact estimate; inestimable.

The ancient amity & friendship between both our lands, with the invaluable commodity of sweet amiable peace.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 100.

There was an invaluable shrine for the head of St. John the Baptist, whose bones and another of his heads are in the cathedral at Genoa.
R. Curzon, Monast. in the Levant, p. 363.

invaluableness (in-val'ū-ā-bl-nes), n. The character of being invaluable.

Deny, if thou canst, the invaluableness of this heavenly gift.
Sp. Hall, Satan's Flery Dart, II.

invaluably (in-val'ū-ā-blī), adv. Inestimably. That invaluably precious blood of the Son of God.
Sp. Hall, Sermon of Thanksgiving, Jan., 1825.

invalued (in-val'ūd), a. [< in- + valued.] Inestimable; invaluable.

The monument of worth, the angel's pleasure,
Which hoardeth glory's rich invalued treasure.
Ford, Kane's Memorial, Epitaph.

invariability (in-vā'ri-ā-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. invariabilité = Sp. invariabilidad = Pg. invariabilidad = It. invariabilità; as invariabile + -ity.] Lack of variability or of liability to change; invariableness.

Therefore, this invariability in the birds' operations must proceed from a higher intellect.
Sir E. Dighty, Of Bodies, xxxvii.

invariable (in-vā'ri-ā-bl), a. and n. [= F. invariable = Sp. invariable = Pg. invariable = It. invariabile; as in- + variable.] 1. a. 1. Not variable; constant; uniform; unchanging.

If taste has no fixed principles, if the imagination is not affected according to some invariable and certain laws, our labour is like to be employed to very little purpose.
Burke, On Taste, Int.

The only evidence of the shells having been naturally left by the sea consists in their invariable and uniform appearance of extreme antiquity.
Darwin, Geol. Observations, II. 242.

2. Not capable of being varied; unalterable; unchangeable.—Invariable antecedent, in logic. See antecedent, 2 (c).—Invariable pendulum, a pendulum constructed to be transported unchanged from one station to another, in order to determine the relative acceleration of gravity. Such a pendulum swings upon a knife-edge (which see).—Invariable system, in dynamics, a system of points whose relative distances remain constant.

II. n. In math., a quantity that does not vary; a constant.

invariableness (in-vā'ri-ā-bl-nes), n. The state of being invariable; constancy of state, condition, or quality; immutability; unchangeableness.

A variety of dispensations [may] be consistent with an invariableness of design.

A. Tucker, Light of Nature, II. iii. 24.

invariably (in-vā'ri-ā-blī), adv. In an invariable manner; without alteration or change; constantly; uniformly.

It [time] is conceived by way of substance, or imagined to subsist of itself, independently and invariably, as all abstract ideas are.
Locke, Enquiry, Of Time, II.

Death succeeds life inevitably and invariably.
J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 187.

invariance (in-vā'ri-āns), n. [< invarian(t) + -ce.] In math., the essential character of invariants; persistence after linear transformation.

invariant (in-vā'ri-ānt), a. and n. [< in- + variant.] 1. a. Not varying or changing; remaining always the same.

However variable the visible antecedents may be, the real determinants—the coëperant factors—are in each case invariants.
G. H. Lewes, Probs. of Life and Mind, II. 94.

II. n. In math., a function of the coefficients of a quantic such that, if the quantic is linearly transformed, the same function of the new coefficients is equal to the first function multiplied by some power of the modulus of transformation.—Absolute, differential, skew, etc., invariant. See the adjective.—Theory of invariants, a branch of mathematics which studies the fundamental invariants of quantics.

invariantive (in-vā'ri-ān-tiv), a. [< invariant + -ive.] Pertaining to an invariant; persisting after a linear transformation.

A curve $u = 0$ may have some invariantive property, viz. a property independent of the particular area of co-ordinates used in the representation of the curve by its equation.
Encyc. Brit., VI. 732.

invaried (in-vā'rid), a. [< in- + varied.] Unvaried; not changing or altering. [Rare.]

Change of the particles, or the lesser invaried words, that add to the signification of nouns and verbs.
Blackwell, Sacred Classics, I. 182.

invaried (in-vā'ri-ōd), n. [< in-priv. + variare, vary, + term. -ōd, < Gr. ódōs, a path.] In math., an ultracritical function.

Sir James Cockle suggests that . . . it may be possible by means of semicritical relations to form invarieds, that is, ultra-critical functions of the calculus analogous to the invariants or ultra-critical functions of algebra.
R. Harley, Proc. Roy. Soc., XXXVIII. 57.

invasion (in-vā'zhūn), n. [= F. invasion = Pr. envasio = Sp. invasion = Pg. invasão = It. invasione, < LL. invasio(-n), an attack, invasion, < L. invadere, pp. invasus, invade: see invade.] 1. The act of invading a country or territory as an enemy; hostile entrance or intrusion.

We made an invasion upon the south of the Cherethites.
1 Sam. xxx. 14.

No Mahratta invasion had ever spread through the province such dismay as this horrid of English lawyers.
Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

Hence—2. A harmful incursion of any kind; an onset or attack, as of disease.

What demonstrates the plague to be endemic to Egypt is its invasion and going off at certain seasons. Arbuthnot.

The invasion of the symptoms [in smallpox] is sudden and severe.
Encyc. Brit., XXII. 163.

3. Infringement by intrusion; encroachment by entering into or taking away what belongs to another: as, an invasion of one's retirement or rights.

Here is no invasion and conquest of the weaker nature by the stronger, but an equal league of souls, each in its own realm still sovereign.

Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 239.

invasive (in-vā'siv), a. [= F. invasif = Sp. Pg. It. invasion, < ML. invasivus, invasive, < L. invasus, pp. of invadere, invade: see invade.] Tending to invade; characterized by invasion; aggressive.

Prohibited by the magistrates and rulers to use or wear any weapon, either invasive or defensive.
Hall, Hen. VI., an. 24.

He [Washington] had such admirable self-command that he was not at all susceptible of the opinion of others.
Theodore Parker, Historic Americans, p. 129.

invasal (in-vas'al), v. t. [< in- + vassal.] Same as envassal.

Whilst I myself was free
From that intolerable misery
Whereto affection now invasal me.
Daniel, Queen's Arcadia, II. 1.

invecked (in-vekt'), a. [Also envecked; cf. invecked, invecked.] Bordered exteriorly by small rounded lobes of slight projection as compared with their width; invecked.

The eastern window [of Whalley Church] . . . is invecked with ramified tracery.
Baines, Hist. Lancashire, II. 7.

It has no sleeves, but reveals an under coat of pale blue with invecked edges.
N. and Q., 7th ser., VII. 27.

inveckle (in-vek'k), a. [Heraldic F.; cf. inveckled.] In her., double-arched, or, more rarely, triple-arched: said of a heraldic line, or the edge of an ordinary, which is bent into large curves forming an angle with each other.

A Chief inveckle.

inveck (in-vek't), v. t. [L. invectus, pp. of invehere, inveigh: see inveigh.] To inveigh.

Fool that I am thus to inveigh against her!

Beau. and Fl. (7), Faithful Friends, III. 3.

invecked (in-vek'ted), a. [L. invectus, pp. of invehere, bring in or to, enter, penetrate, also attack: see inveigh. Cf. invecked, convex.] Formed exteriorly of small convex or outward curves, or slightly projecting rounded lobes: used in heraldry of a line or the edge of a bearing: the opposite of engrailed, in which the curves are concave or turned inward. Formerly canellé.

A Pale invecked.

invection (in-vek'shon), n. [L. invectio (n-), a bringing, an attacking, < invehere, pp. invectus, bring in, attack: see inveigh.] Investive.

Many men wish Luther to have used a more temperate style sometimes, especially against princes and temporal estates; and he himself did openly acknowledge his fault therein, especially his immoderate invection against King Henry the 8th. Pulte, Answer to P. Frarine (1596), p. 23.

invective (in-vek'tiv), a. and n. [F. invectif = It. invectio, invective (as a noun, F. invectio = Sp. Pg. invectiva = It. invectiva, i., invective), < L. invectivus, scolding, abusive, invective, < invehere, pp. invectus, attack, scold, inveigh: see inveigh.] I. a. Censoriously abusive; vituperative; denunciatory.

This is most strangely invective.

Most full of spite and insolent upbraiding.

B. Jonson, Sejanus, III. 1.

Let him rail on; let his invective muse

Have four and twenty letters to abuse.

Dryden, Abs. and Achit., II. 447.

II. n. Vehement denunciation; an utterance of violent censure or reproach; also, a railing accusation; vituperation.

In the Fathers' writings there are sundry sharp invectives against heretics.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, III. 8.

So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,

Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., I. 4, 43.

A tide of force

Invectives seem'd to wait behind her lips.

Tennyson, Princess, IV.

=Syn. Abuse, invective (see abuse); Satire, Panquinade, etc. (see lampoon); philippic, oburgation, reproach, railing, diatribe.

invectively (in-vek'tiv-ly), adv. In the manner of invective; censoriously; abusively.

Thus most invectively he pierce through

The body of the country, city, court.

Shak., As you like it, II. 1, 58.

invectiveness (in-vek'tiv-ness), n. The quality of being invective or vituperative; abusiveness. [Rare.]

I related to them the bitter mockings and scornings that fall upon me, the displeasure of my parents, the invectiveness and cruelty of the priests.

Penn. Travels in Holland, etc.

invectivist (in-vek'tiv-ist), n. [L. invectio + -ist.] One who employs invective.

It is the work of a very French Frenchman, of a gloomy and profoundly thoughtful and powerful satirist and invectivist.

The Independent (New York), June 12, 1862.

inveigh (in-vē'), v. i. [Formerly also enveigh, inveigh, invey; < *M.E. enveyen (f) (not found), < OF. envair, envoir, attack, invade, press, undertake, prob. < L. invadere, attack, invade (see invade), but also appar. in part (like the E. invectio, invection, invective, associated with inveigh) < L. invehere, pp. invehesus, carry, bear or bring in or to, also attack with words, scold, inveigh, < in, in, to, + vehere, carry: see vehicle.] To make a verbal attack; utter or write vehement denunciation or rebuke; exclaim or rail against persons or things; rail: with against, formerly with at or on.

Drances and Turnus vpon ancient hatred inveigh one at the other.

Phaer, Aeneid, XI, Arg.

T. S. . . was so negligent that . . . I can hardly inhale from inveighing on his memory.

Fuller, Hist. Cambridge Univ., VIII. 25.

He never fails to inveigh with hearty bitterness against democracy as the source of every species of crime.

Macaulay, Miltard's Hist. Greece.

inveigher (in-vē'ēr), n. One who inveighs or denounces; a railer.

On their coin they stamped the figure of Sappho. Nor less honored they Alcous, a bitter inveigher against the rage of tyrants that then oppressed this country.

Sandys, Travels, p. 13.

inveigle (in-vē'gl), v. t.; pret. and pp. inveigled, fpp. inveigling. [Formerly also inveagle, enveigle; < M.E. (not found), < AF. enveigler, blind, inveigle, equiv. to F. aveugler = Fr. avoglar = It. avocolare, blind, < L. ab, from, + oculus, eye: see ocular.] To lead astray by making blind to the truth or to consequences; mislead by deception; entice into violation of duty, propriety, or self-interest: now usually with into.

It was Cleopatra's sweet voice and pleasant speech which inveigled Antony.

Barton, Anat. of Mel., p. 481.

And thus would he inveigle my belief to think the combustion of Sodom might be natural.

Str. T. Browne, Religio Medici, I. 19.

He had inveigled the lieges into revolt by a false assertion that the Inquisition was about to be established.

Mulley, Dutch Republic, II. 132.

=Syn. To cajole, beguile, lure, insare, decoy.

inveiglement (in-vē'gl-ment), n. [L. inveigle + -ment.] The act of inveigling; seduction to evil; that which inveigles; enticement.

A person truly pious . . . may, thro' the inveiglements of the world and the frailty of his nature, be sometimes surprised, and for a while drawn into the way of sin.

South, Works, VI. iv.

inveigler (in-vē'gl-ēr), n. One who inveigles, entices, or leads astray by arts and flattery.

When after, [the youth] being presented to the Emperor for his admirable beauty, he was known, and the Prince clapt up as his inveigler.

Sandys, Travels, p. 14.

inveill (in-vā'l'), v. t. [L. in-2 + veil.] Same as enveil.

invelopt, inveloptet, v. t. Obsolete forms of envelop. Jar. Taylor.

inveindibility (in-ven-di-bil'i-ti), n. [L. inven-dibile: see -dibility.] The state or quality of being inveindible; unsalableness.

All that is terrible in this case is that the author may be laughed at, and the stationer beggared by the book's inveindibility.

Brome.

inveindible (in-ven-di-bl), a. [L. in-3 + vendi-bile.] Not veindible; unsalable.

invenom, invenomer, v. t. Obsolete forms of envenom.

invent (in-vent'), v. t. [ME. invenien, < OF. inventer, F. inventer = Sp. Pg. inventar = It. inventare, < L. invenire, pp. of inventire, come upon, meet with, find, discover, < in, on, + venire, come: see venture. Cf. advent, convent, event, prevent, etc.] 1. To come upon; light upon; meet with; find. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Far off he wonders what them makes so glad; Or Bacchus merry fruit they did invent.

Spenser, F. Q., I. vi. 15.

According to the popular belief among the Greeks, it was in a bed of this tender herb [sweet basil] that Our Lord's Cross was invented.

Athanasius, Athos, or the Mountain of the Monks (1827), p. 71, note.

2. To find out by original study or contrivance; create by a new use or combination of means; devise the form, construction, composition, method, or principle of.

To invent is to discover that we know not.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. 217.

Inventing a rare mouse-trap, with owl's wings And a cat's-foot, to catch the mice alone.

B. Jonson, Fortunate Isles.

3. In general, to produce by contrivance; fabricate; concoct; devise: as, to invent the plot of a story; to invent an excuse or a falsehood.

I say, she never did invent this letter; This is a man's invention, and his hand.

Shak., As you like it, IV. 3, 29.

Lies and falsties, and such as could best invent them, were only in request.

Milton, Hist. Kng., III.

In an evening, often with a child on each knee, he would invent a tale for their amusement.

Lady Holland, Sydney Smith, VI.

=Syn. 2 and 3. Discover, invent. See discover and invention.

inventer (in-ven'tēr), n. An obsolete form of inventor.

inventful (in-vent'fūl), a. [L. invent + -ful.] Full of invention; inventive.

The genius of the French government appears powerful only in destruction, and inventful only in oppression.

Gifford, Residence in France (1797).

inventible (in-ven'ti-bl), a. [L. invent + -ible.] Capable of being invented or contrived.

When first I gave my thoughts to make guns shoot often, I thought there had been but one only exquisite way inventible; yet, by several trials, and much charge, I have perfectly tried all these.

Century of Inventions, No. 67.

inventibleness (in-ven'ti-bl-ness), n. The state of being inventible.

invention (in-ven'shon), n. [= F. invention = Fr. inventio = Sp. invencion = Pg. invengdo = It. invenzione, < L. inventio (n-), finding, discovery, invention, < inventire, pp. inventus, come upon, find: see invent.] 1. A finding. [Obsolete, or archaic, as in the phrase Invention of the Cross. See cross.]

As Laurentius observeth concerning the invention of the staples or stirrup bone [in the ear], there is some contention between Columbus and Ingrassia, the one of Bolla, the other of Cremona, and both within this Century.

Str. T. Browne; Vulg. Err.

2. The act or process of finding out how to make something previously unknown, or how to do something in a new way; original contrivance; creation by a new use of means: as, the invention of printing; the invention of the steam-engine, or of an improved steam-engine.

The labor of invention is often estimated and paid on the same plan as that of execution.

J. S. Mill.

3. That which is invented; something previously unknown, or some new modification of an existing thing, produced by an original use of means; an original contrivance or device. When used absolutely, it generally denotes a new mechanical device, or a new process in one of the useful arts.

God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.

Ecc. vii. 29.

The invention all admired, and each, how he To be the inventor mis'd.

Milton, P. L., VI. 498.

There is no invention hath been more valued by the wiser Part of Mankind than that of Letters.

Sittingfoot, Sermons, III. II.

An invention is any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement on any art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, not before known and used.

Robinson.

4. Specifically, in music, a short piece in which a single thought is worked out, usually contrapuntally, but with the comparative simplicity of an impromptu or of a study.—5. The act of producing by the exercise of the imagination; mental fabrication or creation: as, the invention of plots or of excuses.

You divine wits of elder Days, from whom The deep invention of rare Works hath com.

Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, I. 5.

If thou canst accuse, . . . Do it without invention, suddenly.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., III. 1, 5.

Milton's Characters, most of them, lie out of Nature, and were to be formed purely by his own invention.

Addison, Spectator, No. 379.

6. The faculty or power of inventing; skill or ingenuity in original contrivance; the gift of finding out or producing new forms, methods, processes, effects, etc.; in art and lit., the exercise of imagination in production; the creative faculty.

I will prove these verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention.

Shak., I. L. L., IV. 2, 106.

I had not the assistance of any good book whereby to promote my invention, or relieve my memory.

Str. T. Browne, Religio Medici, Pref.

My own invention . . . can furnish me with nothing so dull as what is there.

Dryden, Mock Astrologer, Pref.

7. A coming in; arrival.

Whilst green Thetis' Nymphs, with many an amorous lay, Ring our invention safe unto her long-wish'd Bay.

Dryden, Polyolion, I. 68.

Invention of the Cross. See cross.—Registered invention, an invention protected by an inferior patent.—Useful invention, in the sense of American law, one not injurious or mischievous to society, and not frivolous or insignificant, but capable of use for a purpose from which some advantage can be derived. When an invention is useful in this sense, the degree or extent of its usefulness is wholly unimportant.

Curtis, Law of Pat. (8th ed.), § 449.

=Syn. 2. Invention, Discovery; fabrication, excoigation. Invention is applied to the contrivance and production of something, often mechanical, that did not before exist, for the utilization of powers of nature long known or lately discovered by investigation. Discovery brings to light what existed before, but was not known. We are indebted to invention for the thermometer, barometer, telephone, etc.; to discovery for knowledge of hitherto unknown parts of the globe, etc. By the invention of the spectroscopic we have made large discoveries as to the metallic elements in many heavenly bodies. See discovery.

Invention, Style, Amplification. Rhetoric is often divided into the departments of invention and style, invention covering all that concerns the supply of the thought, and style all that concerns the expression of the thought in language. Some writers divide rhetoric into invention, amplification, and style, but amplification is strictly a part of invention.

inventional (in-ven'shon-əl), a. [L. invention + -al.] Relating to invention; of the nature of invention.

inventious (in-ven'ahus), a. [L. inventi (on) + -ous.] Inventive.

It will be most equislate; thou art a fine inventious rogue, sirrah.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, II. 1.

inventive (in-ven'tiv), a. [F. inventif = Sp. Pg. It. inventivo; as invent + -ive.] 1. Of or pertaining to invention; characterized by or manifesting original contrivance.

The leading characteristics of modern societies are in consequence marked out much more by the triumphs of inventive skill than by the sustained energy of moral causes.

Lucky, Europ. Morals, I. 131.

A short course of lectures on the Kindergarten, on the teaching of language, on industrial and inventive drawing.

Nineteenth Century, XLIV. 499.

2. Able to invent; quick at contriving; ready at expedients.

As he had an inventive brain, so there never lived any man that believed better thereof, and of himself.

Raleigh.

Ingenious love, inventive in new arts, Mingled in plays, and quickly touch'd our hearts.

Dryden and Soame, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry, III. 91.

We should find the most remarkable instance of the difference between an imaginative and an inventive poet to be furnished by the cases of Shakespeare and Spenser.

Athenaeum, No. 3068, p. 108.

inventively (in-ven'tiv-ly), adv. By the power of invention.

inventiveness (in-ven'tiv-ness), n. The quality of being inventive; the faculty of inventing.

The knowledge that clear and appropriate ideas are requisite for discovery, although it does not lead to any very precise precepts, or supersede the value of natural sagacity and inventiveness, may still be of use in our pursuit after truth.

Whewell, Hist. Scientific Ideas.

inventor (in-ven'tor), n. [Formerly also inventer; = F. inventeur = Sp. Pg. inventor = It. inventore, < L. inventor, a finder, contriver, author, inventor, < inventire, pp. inventus, find out, invent; see invent.] One who invents or devises something new; one who makes an invention.

We but teach

Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return To plague the inventor.

Shak., Macbeth, I. 7, 10.

His sister Naamah is accounted by some Rabbines the first inventor of making Linnen and Woolen, and of vocal Musicks.

Purchase, Pilgrimage, p. 34.

The lone Inventor by his demon haunted.

Lowell, To the Future.

inventorial (in-ven-tō'ri-əl), a. [inventory + -al.] Of or pertaining to an inventory.

inventorially (in-ven-tō'ri-əl-ly), adv. In the manner of an inventory.

To divide him inventorially would disky the arithmetic of memory.

Shak., Hamlet, v. 2, 118.

inventory (in'ven-tō-ri), n.; pl. inventories (-riz). [Formerly also, erroneously, inventory; prop. inventory* (the form inventory, OF. inventore (< late ML. inventorium), involving an irreg. use of the suffix -ory) = F. inventaire = Pr. inventari = Sp. Pg. It. inventario, < LL. inventarium, a list, inventory, < L. invenire, pp. inventus, find out; see invent.] A detailed descriptive list of articles, such as goods and chattels, or of parcels of land, with the number, quantity, and value of each; specifically, a formal list of movables, as of the goods or wares of a merchant; as, an inventory of the estate of a bankrupt, or of a deceased person.

There, take an inventory of all I have, To the last penny.

Shak., Hen. VIII., III. 2, 124.

There are stores laid up in our human nature that our understanding can make no complete inventory of.

George Eliot, Mill on the Moss, v. 1.

Benefit of inventory, in civil law, the limit of liability secured by an executor, legatee, or heir, in respect of debts of the deceased, by making and filing an inventory showing the value of the assets coming to his hands.

= Syn. Schedule, Register, etc. See list.

inventory (in'ven-tō-ri), v. t.; pret. and pp. inventoried, ppr. inventorying. [< inventory, n.] To make a list, catalogue, or schedule of; insert or register in an account of goods.

I will give out divers schedules of my beauty. It shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labelled.

Shak., T. N., I. 5, 264.

The learned author himself is inventoried and summ'd up to the utmost value of his lively-cloak.

Milton, Colasterion.

in ventre (in ven'trē), [L. in, in; ventre, abl. of venter, belly, womb; see venter.] In law, in the womb.—In (in ventre) sa mare (F.), begotten but not yet born. The law recognizes the existence, and protects the rights, of an infant in ventre sa mare.

inventress (in-ven'tres), n. [< OF. inventresse; as inventor + -ess. Cf. F. inventrice = It. inventrice, < L. inventrix, fem. of inventor, an inventor; see inventor.] A female inventor.

Mistress Turner, the first inventress of yellow starch, was executed in a Cobweb Lawn Ruff of that Colour at Tyburn.

Howell, Letters, I. I. 2.

At last divine Cecilia came,

Inventress of the vocal frame.

Dryden, Alexander's Feast.

inver- [Gael. of. aber-.] An element in some Scotch place-names of Gaelic origin, meaning a confluence of a river with another or with the sea: as, Inverness, Inverary, Invergordon, Inverury, Inverloch.

inveracity (in-vēr-ā-si'ti), n.; pl. inveracities (-tiz). [< in- + veracity.] Lack of veracity or truthfulness; an untruth.

The antie aphorism still triumphs, solemnly devolving from age to age its loathsome spawn of shams and inveracities.

F. Hall, Mod. Eng., p. 145.

inverisimilitude (in-ver'is-mil'i-tūd), n. [< in- + verisimilitude.] Lack of verisimilitude; improbability. Coloridge.

invermination (in-ver-mi-nā'shon), n. [< L. in, in, + verminatio(n)-, a writhing pain, the disease called worms, < verminare, suffer from worms, < vermis, a worm; see vermin.] In pathol., the state or condition of being infested by worms; helminthiasis. [Rare.] inversatile (in-vēr'sā-til), a. [< in- + versatile.] In entom., not versatile; not moving on the supporting parts: as, inversatile antenna.

inverse (in-vēr's or in'vēr's), a. and n. [< ME. invers, envers, < OF. invers, F. inverse = Pr. envers = Sp. Pg. It. inverso, < L. inversus, pp. of invertere, turn about, invert; see invert.] 1. Turned end for end, or in the opposite direction; having a contrary course or tendency; inverted: opposed to direct.

The reigning taste was so bad that the success of a writer was in inverse proportion to his labour, and to his desire of excellence.

Macaulay, Dryden.

2. In math., opposite in nature and effect: said with reference to any two operations which, when both performed in succession upon the same quantity, leave it unaltered: thus, subtraction is inverse to addition, division to multiplication, extraction of roots to the raising of powers, etc. A direct operation produces an unambiguous and possible value, and between two operations the one which combines quantities symmetrically is preferably considered as direct. Addition, multiplication, involution, and differentiation are considered as direct operations; subtraction, division, evolution, and integration as inverse operations. Corresponding to every direct operation there are, generally speaking, two inverse operations: thus, if $F(x, y)$ be the direct operation, the two inverse operations are the one which gives x from $F(x, y)$ and y , and the one which gives y from $F(x, y)$ and x .—Inverse congruency, current, difference, etc. See the nouns.—Inverse curve, line, point, etc., a curve, line point, etc., resulting from spherical, quadric, and other varieties of geometrical inversion.—Inverse ellipsoid of inertia. See ellipsoid.—Inverse matrix. See matrix.—Inverse method of functions. See function.—Inverse method of tangents. See tangent.—Inverse mood, in logic, an indirect mood.—Inverse order of alienation, in the law of judicial or forced sales, a fixed order according to which parcels that the debtor has not aliened shall be first sold, and of those that he has aliened the later shall be sold before the earlier: a rule for the protection of earlier over later grantees.—Inverse problem, a problem like finding the equation to the ordinate of a curve when its arc is given in terms of the abscissa.—Inverse proportion, ratio, etc. See the nouns.—Inverse rule of three, the rule of three as applied to quantities in inverse proportion to one another.

II. n. An inverted state or condition; a direct opposite; something directly or absolutely contrary to something else: as, the inverse of a proposition.

inversed (in-vēr'st'), a. [ME. enversed; < inverse + -ed.] Inverted.

The bough to sette is best in gemyhyng. . . . But hem to sette enversed nought to doone is.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 115.

Inversed proportion, inverse proportion. See proportion.

inversely (in-vēr's-ly), adv. In an inverted order or manner; in an inverse ratio or proportion, as when one thing is greater or less in proportion as another is less or greater.

inversion (in-vēr'shon), n. [= F. inversion = Sp. inversion = Pg. inversão = It. inversione, < L. inversio(n)-, inversion, < invertere, pp. invertus, turn about; see invert.] The act of inverting, or the state of being inverted; a turning end for end, upside down, or inside out; any change of order such that the last becomes first and the first last; in general, any reversal of a given order or relation.

We shall one day give but an ill and lame account of our watching and praying, if, by an odd inversion of the command, all that we do is first to pray against a temptation, and afterwards to watch for it. South, Works, VI. 2. Specifically—(a) In gram., a change of the natural or recognized order of words: as, "of all vices, impurity is one of the most detestable," instead of "impurity is one of the most detestable of all vices." (b) In rhet., a mode of arguing by which the speaker tries to show that the arguments adduced by an opponent tend against his cause and are favorable to the speaker's. (c) In music: (1) The process, act, or result of transposing the tones of an interval or chord from their original or normal order. The several inversions of a chord are called first, second, and third respectively. See interval, t. and chord, t. (2) The process, act, or result of repeating a subject or theme with all its upward intervals or steps taken downward, and vice versa. Also called inversion by inversion or in contrary motion. (See imitation, t.) Retrograde inversion, however, is the same as retrograde imitation (which see, under imitation, t.) (3) In double counterpoint, the transposition of the upper voice-part below the lower, and vice versa. Inversion is the test of the correctness of the composition. The transposition may be either of an octave or of any other interval. (d) In math.: (1) A turning backward; a contrary rule of operation: as, to prove an answer by inversion, as division by multiplication or addition by subtraction. (2) Change in the order of the terms. (3) Certain transformations. Also the operation of reversing the direction of every line in a body without altering its length. (e) In geom., the folding back of strata upon themselves, as by upheaval, in such a way that the order of succession appears reversed. (f) Math., a movement in tactics by which the order of companies in line is inverted, the right being on the left, the left on the right, and so on. (g) In chem., a decomposition of certain sugars and other carbohydrates, induced by the action of a ferment or dilute acid by which the elements of water are added to a carbohydrate, each molecule of which breaks up into two molecules of a different carbohydrate. Thus, cane-sugar in solution, when heated with a dilute acid, takes up water and breaks up into equal parts of dextrose and levulose. See invert-sugar.—Circle of inversion, a circle with respect to which a given curve is its own inverse.—Geometrical inversion (usually taken to mean cyclical or spherical inversion), a transformation by which for each point of a figure is substituted a point in the same direction from a fixed point, called the center of inversion, and at a distance therefrom equal to the reciprocal of the distance of the first point.—Inversion of an organ, or pedal-point. See organ-point.—Inversion of parts. See def. (c) (3).—Inversion of subjects. See def. (c) (3).—Quadratic inversion, in math., a transformation of a figure consisting in substituting for each point one lying in the same direction from a fixed center, and on the polar of the variable point with reference to a quadric surface.—Tangential inversion, in math., a transformation by which for every straight line of a figure is substituted a parallel line passing through the pole of the first with reference to a conic.

inverse (in-vēr'siv), a. [< inverse + -ive.] Of or pertaining to inversion; capable of causing inversion.

invert (in-vēr't'), v. t. [= OF. invertir = Sp. invertir = Pg. invertir = It. invertire, < L. invertere, turn upside down, turn about, upset, invert, < in, in, to, toward, + vertere, turn; see verne. Cf. advert, convert, evert, etc.] 1. To turn in an opposite direction; turn end for end, upside down, or inside out; place in a contrary order or position: as, to invert a cone or a sack; to invert the order of words.

Invert

What best is boded me, to mischief.

Shak., Tempest, III. 1, 70.

Let no attraction invert the poles of thy honesty.

Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., I. 2.

We begin by knowing little and believing much, and we sometimes end by inverting the quantities.

George Eliot, Middlemarch, I. 215.

We invert the relation of cause and effect when we consider that our emotions are determined by our imaginative creeds.

Leahie Stephen, Eng. Thought, I. § 16.

2. To divert; turn into another channel; devote to another purpose.

Solyman charged him bitterly with inverting his treasures to his own private use.

Knolles, Hist. Turks.

= Syn. 1. Overthrow, Subvert, etc. See overturn.

invert (in'vēr't), n. [< invert, v.] 1. In arch., an inverted arch; specifically, the floor of the lock-chamber of a canal, which is usually in the form of an inverted arch, or the bottom of a sewer.

The bottom of the sewer is called the invert, from a general resemblance in the construction to an "inverted" arch. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 445.

2. In teleg., an inverted or reversed insulator.

An effort is at present being made to introduce a form of invert in which the bolt passes nearly to the top of the insulating material.

Freese and Shewright, Telegraphy, p. 234.

invertant (in-vēr'tant), a. [< invert + -ant.] In her., same as inverted.

invertebracy (in-vēr'tē-brā-si), n. [< invertebra (te) + -cy.] The condition of being invertebrate, or without a backbone; figuratively, lack of moral stamina; irresolution. [Rare.]

A person may reveal his hopeless invertebracy only when brought face to face with some critical situation.

New York Semi-weekly Tribune, Dec. 24, 1890.

invertebral (in-vēr'tē-brāl), a. [< in- + vertebral.] Same as invertebrate.

Invertebrata (in-vēr'tē-brā'tā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of invertebratus, invertebrate; see invertebrate.] That one of two great divisions of the animal kingdom (the other being the Vertebrata) which includes animals having no spinal column or backbone. It includes seven of the eight main branches into which Animalia are divisible, namely Protozoa, Ctenophora, Echinodermata, Vermes, Arthropoda, Mollusca, and Nidulata, thus leaving only the Vertebrata as the remaining subkingdom, of equal rank only with any one of the others, not with them all collectively. The word, however, no longer retains any exact taxonomic significance, being simply used to designate those animals collectively which are not vertebrated. The primary division of the animal kingdom now made is into Protozoa and Metazoa, and the Vertebrata form one of the divisions of the latter, to be contrasted with any one of the prime divisions of the metazoic Invertebrata, not with the Invertebrata collectively. Both terms (Vertebrata and Invertebrata) originated with Lamarck, about the beginning of the nineteenth century. Also called Abvertebrata.

invertebrate (in-ver'tā-brāt), a. and n. [< NL. invertebratus, < L. in-priv. + vertebratus, vertebrate: see vertebrate.] 1. a. 1. Not vertebrate; having no backbone; specifically, of or pertaining to the Invertebrata. Also invertebral, invertebrated.—2. Figuratively, flaccid, as if from lack of a backbone; wanting strength, firmness, or consistency; weak; nerveless.—invertebrate matrix. See matrix.

II. n. An invertebrated animal; any one of the Invertebrata.

invertebrated (in-ver'tā-brū-ted), a. Same as invertebrate, 1.

inverted (in-ver'ted), p. a. [Pp. of invert, v.] Turned in a contrary direction; turned upside down; reversed in order; hence, opposite; contrary.

Such forms have left only their written representatives—"Your obedient servant," "Your humble servant;" reserved for occasions when distance is to be maintained, and for this reason often having inverted meanings.

II. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 394.

Specifically—(a) In her, turned in the other way from what is usual; as, the hands inverted when the fingers point downward. Also invertant. (b) In bot., opposed to the normal or usual position, as ovules attached to the apex of the ovary or its cells, or as flowers with the normally dorsal side ventral. (c) In geom., lying apparently in inverse or reverse order, as strata which have been folded back on each other by the intrusion of igneous rocks or by crust movements.

—inverted arch, in arch., an arch with its intrados below the axis or springing line. Inverted arches are used in foundations to connect particular points, and distribute their weight or pressure over a greater extent of surface as in piers and the like.

Inverted Arches.

—inverted chord. See inversion (c). (1) and chord, 4.—inverted comma. In printing, a comma turned upside down so as to bring it into a superior position. The beginning of a quotation is marked by a pair of inverted commas or by one alone, as the end is by a pair of apostrophes or by a single apostrophe. (See quotation.) A pair of inverted commas is also often used to signify ditto, being placed directly under the word to be repeated.—inverted counterpoint. See inversion (c) (3). imitation, 3, and counterpoint, 3.—inverted-flower, the name of several little South African plants of the former genus Parasitranthus, which is now regarded as a section of the genus Lobelia. They differ from typical Lobelia by having the flowers inverted, whence the name.—inverted image. See lens.—inverted interval. See inversion (c) (1) and interval, 4.—inverted organ-point or *pedal-point. See organ-point.—inverted oscillating engine. See pendulous engine, under engine.—inverted position, turn, etc. See the nouns.

invertedly (in-ver'ted-ly), adv. In a contrary or inverted order.

Placing the fore part of the eye to the hole of the window of a darkened room, we have a pretty landscape of the objects abroad, invertedly painted on the paper, on the back of the eye. Derham, Physico-Theology, iv. 2, note 38.

invertible (in-ver'ti-bl), a. [< invert + -ible.] Capable of inversion; susceptible of being inverted. [Rare.]

invertible (in-ver'ti-bl), a. [< L. in-priv. + vertere, turn, + -ible.] Incapable of being turned; inflexible.

An indurate and invertible conscience. Cramer.

invertin (in-ver'tin), n. [< invert + -in.] A chemical ferment produced by several species of yeast-plants, which converts cane-sugar in solution into invert-sugar.

inverter (in-ver'tor), n. [< invert + -or.] That which inverts or changes the direction, as of an electric current; in elect., a commutator.

invert-sugar (in-vert'shūg'ār), n. An amorphous saccharine substance, the chief constituent of honey, and produced by the action of ferments or dilute acids on cane-sugar. It is regarded as a mixture of equal parts of dextrose and levulose. A solution of cane-sugar turns the polarized ray of light to the right, while invert-sugar turns it to the left. From this inversion of the action on polarized light the process is called inversion, and the product invert-sugar.

invest (in-vest'), v. [< F. investir = Pr. envestir = Sp. Pg. investir = It. investire, < L. investire, clothe, cover, < in, in, on, + vestire, clothe, < vestis, clothing: see vest. Cf. divest, divest.] 1. trans. 1. To cover with or as if with a garment or vesture; clothe; indue: followed by with, and sometimes in, before the thing covering: opposed to divest.

He commanded us to invest our selves in the saide garments. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 106.

Invest me in my motley. Shak., As you like it, II. 7, 68.

In the gardens are many fine fountains, the walls covered with citron trees, which being rarely spread, invest the stone-works entirely. Swynn, Diary, Nov. 28, 1644.

In dim cathedrals, dark with vaulted gloom,
What holy awe invests the saintly tomb!
O. W. Holmes, A Rhymed Lesson.

2†. To clothe or attire with; put on.

Alas! for pittle, that so faire a crew,
As like can not be seen from East to West,
Cannot find one this girdle to invest.
Spenser, F. Q. IV. v. 18.

3. To clothe or indue, as with office or authority; hence, to accredit with some quality or attribute; indue by attribution: followed by with: as, to invest a narrative with the charm of romance; to invest a friend with every virtue.

Beatrice, the unforgotten object of his early tenderness, was invested by his imagination with glorious and mysterious attributes. Macaulay, Dante.

4. In law, to put in possession of something to be held as a matter of right; instate or install: as, to invest a man with rank, dignity, etc.

The Queen in requital invested him with the Honour of Earl of Glenkare and Baron of Valence.

Mary of Orleans . . . had been invested in this principality by the three estates in 1694.
J. Adams, Works, IV. 375.

5†. To confer; give; vest.

It investeth a right of government. Bacon.

6. To surround; hem in or about; especially, to surround with hostile intent, or in such a way as to prevent approach or escape; surround with troops, military works, or other barriers; beleaguer.

I saw a town of this island, which shall be nameless, invested on every side, and the inhabitants of it so straitened as to cry for quarter. Addison, Husbands and Wives.

Leyden was thoroughly invested, no less than sixty-two redoubts . . . now girding the city.
Motley, Dutch Republic, II. 558.

A person trying to steal into an invested town with provisions would be summarily dealt with.

Wooley, Intro. to Inter. Law, App. III, p. 404.

7. To employ for some profitable use; convert into some other form of wealth, usually of a more or less permanent nature, as in the purchase of property or shares, or in loans secured by mortgage, etc.: said of money or capital: followed by in: as, to invest one's means in lands or houses, or in bank-stock, government bonds, etc.; to invest large sums in books.

—investing membrane. See membrane.

II. intrans. To make an investment: as, to invest in railway shares.

investient (in-ves'ti-ent), a. [< L. investien(-t)-e, ppr. of investire, clothe: see invest.] Investing; covering; clothing.

This sand, when consolidated and freed from its investient shells, is of the same shape as the cavity of the shell.
Woodward.

investigable (in-ves'ti-gā-bl), a. [< L. investigabilis, that can be searched into, < L. investigare, search into, investigate: see investigate.] Capable of being investigated or searched out; open to investigation.

In doing evil, we prefer a less good before a greater, the greatness whereof is by reason investigable and may be known.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, I. 7.

A few years since it would have been preposterous to speculate on the present chemical constitution of the sun's atmosphere; it would have been one of the mysteries which no astronomer would consider investigable.
G. H. Lewis, Probs. of Life and Mind, I. 1, § 21.

investigable (in-ves'ti-gā-bl), a. [< L. investigabilis, that cannot be searched into, unsearchable, < in-priv. + vestigare, that can be searched into, < L. vestigare, search into: see investigate.] That cannot be investigated; unsearchable.

Woman, what tongue or pen is able To determine what thou art,
A thing so moving and unstable,
So sea-like, so investigable.
Cotton, Woman.

investigate (in-ves'ti-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. investigated, ppr. investigating. [< L. investigatus, ppr. of investigare, track or trace out, search into, investigate, < in, in, on, + vestigare, follow a track, search, < vestigium, a track, foot-track: see vestige.] To search into or search out; inquire into; search or examine into the particulars of; examine in detail: as, to investigate the forces of nature; to investigate the causes of natural phenomena; to investigate the conduct of an agent.

He went from one room to another with eyes that seemed to be investigating everything, though in reality they saw nothing.
Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xiv.

The philosopher investigates truth independently; the sophist embellishes the truth, which he takes for granted.
Encyc. Brit., XVII. 797.

—Syn. To scrutinize, overhaul, sift, probe into, explore, study.

investigation (in-ves'ti-gā'shən), n. [= F. investigation = Sp. investigación = Pg. investigação = It. investigazione, < L. investigatio(n)-, a searching into, < investigare, search into: see investigate.] The act of investigating; the making of a search or inquiry; detailed or particularized examination to ascertain the truth in regard to something; careful research.

Your travels I hear much of; my own shall never more be in a strange land, but a diligent investigation of my own territories.
Pope, To Swift.

The intercourse of society—its trade, its religion, its friendships, its quarrels—is one wide judicial investigation of character.
Emerson, 1st ser., p. 259.

—Syn. Inquisition, Inquiry, etc. (see examination); overhauling, probing. See inference.

investigative (in-ves'ti-gā-tiv), a. [< investigate + -ive.] Of or pertaining to investigation; given to investigation; curious and deliberate in research.

We may work simply for the love of discovery—that is, the exercise of the investigative instinct and the pleasure of overcoming difficulties; or we may work with the beneficent idea of increasing the sum of human knowledge.
Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 75.

investigator (in-ves'ti-gā-tor), n. [= F. investigateur = Sp. Pg. investigador = It. investigatore, < L. investigator, one who searches, < investigate, search: see investigate.] One who investigates or makes careful research.

Not as an investigator of truth, but as an advocate labouring to prove his point.
Whately, Rhetoric.

Investigatores (in-ves'ti-gā-tō'rēz), n. pl. [NL, pl. of L. investigator, one who searches: see investigator.] An extensive heterogeneous group of birds proposed by Reichenbach and adopted by Brehm, having no characters by which it can be defined; the searchers.

investing, n. [< ML. investio(n)-, an investing, < L. investire, invest: see invest.] The act of investing; investiture.

We knew, my lord, before we brought the crown, Intending your investing so near
The residence of your despoiled brother,
The lords would not be too exasperate
To injury or suppress your worthy title.
Marlowe, Tamburlaine, I. 1, 1.

investitive (in-ves'ti-tiv), a. [< L. investitivus, ppr. of investire, invest, + -ive.] Of or pertaining to investiture. See the quotation.

The investitive event [is that] by which the title to the thing in question should have accrued to you, and for want of which such title is, through the delinquency of the offender, as it were intercepted.

Benham, Intro. to Prin. of Morals and Legislation, xvi. 35.

Investitive fact. See fact.

investiture (in-ves'ti-tūr), n. [< F. investiture = Pr. investitura = Sp. Pg. investidura = It. investitura, < ML. investitura, investing, < L. investire, invest: see invest.] 1. The act of investing, as with possession or power; formal bestowal or presentation of a possessory or prescriptive right, as to a fief or to the rights and possessions pertaining to an ecclesiastical dignity: opposed to disinvestiture.

The King claimed the investiture of Bishops to be his Right, and forbade Appeals and Intercourse to Rome.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 85.

Charles had entirely failed in his application to Pope Alexander the Sixth for a recognition of his right to Naples by a formal act of investiture.

Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., II. 2.

An excommunication was denounced against all churchmen who should accept investiture of ecclesiastical benefices from lay hands.

R. A. Freeman, Norman Conquest, V. 95.

The grant of land or a feud was perfected by the ceremony of corporal investiture or open delivery of possession.
Blackstone.

2. That which invests or clothes; covering; vestment.

While we yet have on Our gross investiture of mortal weeds. Trench.
Let him so wait until the bright investiture and sweet warmth of the sunset are withdrawn from the waters.
Ruskin.

Ecclesiastical investiture, in the Rom. Cath. Ch., the ceremony of conferring possession of the temporalities and privileges of his office upon a bishop or an abbot, by delivering to him the pastoral staff and ring, the symbols of his office. To whom the right of investiture belonged was long a point of conflict between the papacy and the monarchs of Europe. About the tenth century the monarchs controlled the bestowal of these symbols, but Hildebrand (Gregory VII.) in 1078 published a decree forbidding clergymen to receive investiture from a layman under pain of deposition. This dispute between church and state was settled by the concordat of Worms, in 1122, by which the emperor Henry V. agreed to surrender the right of investiture on condition that the election to the office be held before him or his representative. A similar compromise had been made in 1107 between Henry I. of England and Pope Pascal II. The kings of France continued the contest, and at length secured the right of conferring separate investiture by means of a written instrument. At present, in Roman Catholic countries where the church is supported by the state, special agreements, or concordats, govern investiture; in nearly all these countries the consent of both the Pope and the civil authorities is necessary before investiture.—Fundal investiture, the public delivery of the land by the lord to the tenant, which under the feudal system created the estate in fee in the tenant, and the obligation of military or other feudal service in return. See fealty.—Investiture ring, the ring used in the installation of a pope.

investive (in-ves'tiv), a. [invest + -ive.] Investing; clothing; encircling.

The horrid fire, all meretricious, did choke
The scorched wretches with investive smoke.

Mir. for Maga, p. 320.

investment (in-vest'ment), n. [invest + -ment.] ML. investimentum, L. investire, invest; see invest.] 1. That with which a person or thing is invested or covered; clothing; vestment; covering.

You, lord archbishop, . . .
Whose white investments figure innocences.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 1, 45.

Such separable investments (shells and cysts) are formed by the cell-bodies of many Protozoa, a phenomenon not exhibited by tissue-cells.

E. R. Lankester, Encyc. Brit., XIX, 334.

2. The act of investing, or the state of being invested, as with a right, office, or attribute; endowment; investiture.

What were all his most rightful honours but the people's gift,
The investment of that lustre, majesty, and honour
... which redounds from a whole nation into one person?
Milton, Elkondistates.

3. A surrounding or hemming in; blockade of the avenues of ingress and egress, as for the besieging of a town or fortress; inclosure by armed force or other obstruction.

I now had my three corps up to the works built for the defence of Vicksburg, on three roads—one to the north, one to the east, and one to the south-east of the city. By the morning of the 19th the investment was as complete as my limited number of troops would allow.

U. S. Grant, Personal Memoirs, I, 520.

4. An investing of money or capital; expenditure for profit or future benefit; a placing or conversion of capital in a way intended to secure income or profit from its employment: as, an investment in active business, or in stocks, land, or the like; to make safe investment of one's principal.—5. That which is invested; money or capital laid out for the purpose of producing profit or benefit.

A certain portion of the revenues of Bengall has been, for many years, set apart to be employed in the purchase of goods for exportation to England, and this is called the investment.

Burke, Affairs of India.

6. That in which money is laid out or invested: as, land is the safest investment.

investor (in-ves'tor), n. [invest + -or.] One who invests or makes an investment.

investiture (in-ves'ti-tur), n. [invest + -ure. Cf. investiture and vesture.] Investiture; investment.

They [the kings of England] exercised this authority both over the clergy and laity, and did at first erect bishoprics, [and] grant investitures in them.

Sp. Burnet, Hist. Reformation, an. 1531.

investiture (in-ves'ti-tur), v. t. [investiture, n.] 1. To clothe.

Our monks investured in their copes.

Fuller.

2. To put into possession, as of an office.

He . . . hath already investured hym in the dukedome of Prussia.

Ascham, Rep. of Affairs of Germany.

inveteracy (in-vet'ə-rā-si), n. [inveterate (see inveterate) + -cy.] The state of being inveterate; long continuance; firmness or deep-rooted persistence.

The inveteracy of the people's prejudices compelled their rulers to make use of all means for reducing them.

Addison.

The wicked, besides the long list of debts already contracted, carries with him an inveteracy of evil habits that will prompt him to contract more.

A. Tucker, Light of Nature, II, xxix.

inveterate (in-vet'ə-rāt), v. t. [L. inveteratus, pp. of inveterare (> It. inveterare = Sp. Pg. (refl.) inveterar = F. invétérer), keep for a long time, in pass. become old, < in, in, + vetus (veter-), old; see veteran.] To make inveterate; render chronic; establish by force of habit.

Feeling the piercing torments of broken limbs, and inveterate wounds.

Temptations, which have all their force and prevalence from long custom and inveterate habit.

Bentley, Sermons, I.

inveterate (in-vet'ə-rāt), a. [Sp. Pg. inveterado = It. inveterato, < L. inveteratus, pp.: see the verb.] 1†. Old; long established.

It is an inveterate and received opinion.

Bacon, Nat. Hist.

2. Firmly established by long continuance; deep-rooted; obstinate: generally, though not always, in a derogatory sense: as, an inveterate disease; an inveterate enemy.

The sins he is to mortify are inveterate, habitual, and confirmed, having had the growth and stability of a whole life.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 187.

Friends to congratulate their friends made haste; And long inveterate friends saluted as they passed.

Dryden, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 127.

Some gentlemen have inveterate prejudices against any attempts to increase the powers of congress.

Monroe, in Barcroft's Hist. Const., I, 445.

3. Confirmed in any habit; having habits fixed by long continuance: applied to persons: as, an inveterate smoker.

Certain it is that Thullus was not inveterate in his prejudices against a social glass.

D. G. Mitchell, Wet Days.

4†. Malignant; virulent; showing obstinate prejudice.

Would to God we could at last learn this Wisdom from our enemies, not to widen our own differences by inveterate heats, bitterness and animosities among our selves.

Stillington, Sermons, II, l.

That looks through the foul prison of thy body.

Banks.

—Syn. 2. Deep-seated, chronic.—3. Habitual, hardened. inveterately (in-vet'ə-rāt-lī), adv. In an inveterate manner; with obstinacy.

inveterateness (in-vet'ə-rāt-ness), n. Inveteracy.

As time hath rendered him more perfect in the art, so hath the inveterateness of his malice more ready in the execution.

Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii, 12.

inveteration (in-vet'ə-rā-shn), n. [L. inveteratio(n-), < inveterare, keep for a long time: see inveterate.] A growing into use by long custom.

Bailey.

invexed (in-vekst'), a. [ML. invexus, equiv. to L. convexus, arched (see convex), + -ed.] In her, arched or shaped in a curve: especially applied to a bearing which is so shaped on one side only, the curve being concave or toward the bearing.

invict (in-vikt'), a. [L. invictus, unconquered, < in-priv. + victus, pp. of vincere, conquer: see victor.] Unconquered.

Who weens to vanquish Him, makes Him invict.

Sylvester, tr. of P. Mathieu's Trophies of Hen. the Great, II, 151.

invicted (in-vik'ted), a. [L. invictus, unconquered (see invict), + -ed.] Unconquered.

A more noble worthy, whose sublime
Invicted spirit in most hard assays
Still added reverent statues to his days.

Ford, Fame's Memorial.

invidious (in-vid'i-us), a. [L. invidiosus, envious, < invidia, envy: see envy. Cf. envious, a doublet of invidious.] 1†. Envious; causing or arising from envy.

The chymist there
May with astonishment invidious view
His tolls outdone by each plebeian bee.

C. Smart, Omniscience of the Supreme Being.

2†. Envious; desirable.

Such a person appeareth in a far more honourable and invidious state than any prosperous person.

Barnes.

3. Prompted by or expressing or adapted to excite envious dislike or ill will; offensively or unfairly discriminating: as, invidious distinctions or comparisons.

What needs, O monarch, this invidious praise, Ourselves to lessen, while our sires you raise?

Pope, Iliad, iv, 456.

As the gentleman has made an apology for his style, . . . we shall not take upon us the invidious task of selecting its faults.

Goldsmith, Criticisms.

Hence—4†. Hateful; odious; detestable.

He rose, and took th' advantage of the times,
To load young Turnus with invidious crimes.

Dryden, Æneid, xi.

—Syn. 3. Invidious, Offensive. Invidious, having lost its subjective sense of envious, now means producing or likely to produce ill feeling because bringing persons or their belongings into contrast with others in an unjust or mortifying way: as, an invidious comparison or distinction. The ill feeling thus produced would be not envy, but resentment, on account of wounded pride. Offensive is a general word, covering invidious and all other words characterizing that which gives offense.

invidiously (in-vid'i-us-lī), adv. In an invidious manner.

invidiousness (in-vid'i-us-ness), n. The character of being invidious; offensiveness.

If love of ease surmounted our desire of knowledge, the offence has not the invidiousness of singularity.

Johnson, Jour. to Western Isles.

inviolance, invigilance (in-vij'i-lans, -lan-si), n. Lack of vigilance; neglect of watching. [Rare.]

invigilate (in-vij'i-lāt), v. t. [L. invigilatus, pp. of invigilare, watch diligently, be very watchful, < in-intensive + vigilare, watch: see vigilant.] To watch diligently.

Bailey.

invigilation (in-vij-i-lā'sh-n), n. [invigilate + -ion.] The act of watching; watchfulness.

It is certain that no scientific conviction that life was in danger would probably . . . draw forth the same tenderness of invigilation for the patient, or focus upon him the same degree of self-watchfulness and complaisance, as are secured by the constant presence or apprehension of pain.

Bibliotheca Sacra, XLV, 21.

invigor, invigour (in-vig'or), v. t. [OF. envigorer, envigourer (= It. invigorare), render vigorous, strengthen, < L. in, in, + vigor, strength: see vigor.] To invigorate; animate; encourage. [Poetical.]

What pomp of words, what nameless energy,
Kindles the verse, invigours every line.

W. Thompson, On Pope's Works.

To invigour order, justice, law, and rule.

Dwight, The Country Pastor.

invigorate (in-vig'or-āt), v. t.; pret. and pp. invigorated, pp. invigorating. [As invigor + -ate.] To give vigor to; give life and energy to; strengthen; animate.

This polarity from refrigeration upon extremity and in defect of a load-stone might serve to invigorate and touch a needle any where.

Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., II, 2.

Would age in thee resign his wintry reign,
And youth invigorate that frame again.

Cooper, Hopps, I, 24.

invigoration (in-vig'or-ā-shn), n. [F. invigoration; < invigorare + -ion.] The act of invigorating, or the state of being invigorated.

I find in myself an appetitive faculty which is always in the very height of activity and invigoration.

Norris.

invigour, v. t. See invigor.

invile (in-vil'), v. t. [OF. enouiller, enouiller = It. invillare, < ML. invillare, invillare, render vile (cf. LL. invillitare, account vile), < L. in, in, + vilius, vile: see vile.] To render vile.

It did no much invile the estimate
Of th' open'd and invulgar'd mysteries,
Which, now reduc'd unto the basest rate,
Must wait upon the Norman subtleties.

Daniel, Musophilus.

invillaged (in-vil'ājd), a. [in- + village + -ed.] Transformed into a village.

There on a goodly plain (by time thrown downe)
Lies buried in his dust some ancient towne;
Who now invillaged, there's only seeme
In his vast ruins what his state has beene.

W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, I, 2.

invinate (in-vi'nāt), a. [L. in, in, + vinum, wine, + -ate.] Embodied in wine.

Christ should be impanate and invinate.

Cranmer, Works, I, 206.

invincibility (in-vin-si-bil'i-ti), n. [invincibilis: see invincible.] The quality of being invincible; invincibleness; unconquerableness.

Sarah thinks the British are never beaten, while I do not put so much faith in their invincibility.

J. F. Cooper, The Spy, I.

invincible (in-vin-si-bil'), a. [F. invincible = Sp. invencible = Pg. invencível = It. invincibile, < L. invincibilis, < in-priv. + vincibilis, conquerable: see vincible.] Incapable of being conquered or subdued; that cannot be overcome; unconquerable; insuperable: as, an invincible army; invincible difficulties.

And the Romans themselves at this time acknowledged they ne'er saw a people of a more invincible spirit and less afraid of dying than these [Jews] were.

Stillington, Sermons, I, viii.

Yorick had an invincible dislike and opposition in his nature to gravity.

Stowe, Tristram Shandy, I, 11.

It was granted the dangers were great, but not desperate; the difficulties were many, but not invincible.

W. Bradford, in Tyler's Amer. Lit., I, 120.

[Some commentators and editors have been of the opinion that this word is used by Jonson, Shakspeare, Marlowe, and others as meaning invincible, but the instances on which the opinion was formed are somewhat doubtful.]

His dimensions to any thick sight were invincible.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iii, 2, 337.)

The Spanish or Invincible Armada. See armada. Invincibleness (in-vin-si-bil-ness), n. The quality of being invincible; unconquerableness; insuperableness.

Against the invincibleness of general custom (for the most part) men strive in faith.

Sp. Wilkins, Real Character, I, 5.

invincibly (in-vin-si-bil'), adv. In an invincible manner; unconquerably; insuperably.

inviolability (in-vi'ô-lâ-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. inviolabilité = Sp. inviolabilidad = Pg. inviolabilidade, < L.L. inviolabilitas (-s), inviolability, < L. inviolabilis, inviolable: see inviolable.] The character or quality of being inviolable.

The declamations respecting the inviolability of church property are indebted for the greater part of their apparent force to this ambiguity. J. S. Mill, Logic, V. vii. § 1.

When we speak of the inviolability of an ambassador, we mean that neither public authority nor private persons can use any force or do violence to him without offending against the law of nations.

Woolsey, Intro. to Inter. Law, § 92a.

inviolable (in-vi'ô-lâ-bl), a. [= F. inviolable = Sp. inviolable = Pg. inviolavel = It. inviolabile, < L. inviolabilis, invulnerable, imperishable, inviolable, < in-priv. + violabilis, violable: see violable.] 1. Not to be violated; having a right to or a guaranty of immunity; that is to be kept free from violence or violation of any kind, as infraction, assault, arrest, invasion, profanation, etc.: as, an inviolable peace or oath; inviolable territory; inviolable sanctity.

But honest men's words are Stygian oaths, and promises inviolable. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., III. 19.

For thou, be sure, shalt give account To him who sent us, whose charge is to keep This place inviolable. Milton, P. L., IV. 843.

It is, that you preserve the most inviolable secrecy. Hallock, The Recorder.

2. That cannot be violated; not subject to violence; incapable of being injured.

The inviolable saints, In cubic phalanx firm, advanced entire. Milton, P. L., VI. 309.

The inviolable body stood sincere, Though Cygnus then did no defence provide. Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., XII.

Two lambs, devoted by your country's rite, To earth a cable, to the sun a white, Prepare, ye Trojans! while a third we bring Select to Jove, th' inviolable king. Pope, Iliad, III. 144.

inviolableness (in-vi'ô-lâ-bl-nes), n. Inviolability.

inviolably (in-vi'ô-lâ-bli), adv. So as to be inviolable; without violation or violence of any kind: as, a sanctuary inviolably sacred; to keep a promise inviolably.

The path prescrib'd, inviolably kept, Uprais'd the lawless sallies of mankind. Young, Night Thoughts, IX.

inviolacy (in-vi'ô-lâ-si), n. [inviolacy (-te) + -cy.] The state of being inviolate: as, the inviolacy of an oath. [Rare.]

inviolately (in-vi'ô-lâ-ti), a. [ME. inviolate = Sp. Pg. inviolado = It. inviolato, < L. inviolatus, unhurt, < in-priv. + violatus, hurt: see violate.] Not violated; free from violation or hurt of any kind; secure against violation or impairment.

But let inviolately truth be always dear To thee. Sir J. Denham, Prudence.

In all the changes of his doubtful state, His truth, like heaven's, was kept inviolately. Dryden, Threnodia Augustalis, I. 486.

By shaping some august decree, Which kept her throne unshaken still Broad-based upon her people's will, And compass'd by the inviolately sea. Tennyson, To the Queen.

inviolated (in-vi'ô-lâ-ted), a. Inviolately; unviolated.

That faculty alone fortune and nature have left inviolated. Shirley, Love Tricks, IV. 5.

inviolately (in-vi'ô-lâ-ti), adv. In an inviolate manner; so as not to be violated; without violation.

Their liberty (which they had kept inviolately by so many ages). J. Brande, tr. of Quintus Curtius, Iul. 378.

inviolateness (in-vi'ô-lâ-tens), n. The quality of being inviolate.

invious (in-vi-us), a. [L. invidus, without a road, impassable, < in-priv. + via, road, way: see via: cf. devious, obvious.] Impassable; untrodden. [Rare.]

If nothing can oppose love, And virtue invious ways can prove, What may not be confide to do That brings both love and virtue too? S. Butler, Hudibras, I. III. 886.

inviousness (in-vi-us-nes), n. The state of being invious or impassable. [Rare.]

Inviousness and emptiness, . . . where all is dark and unpassable, as perviousness is the contrary. Dr. Ward, tr. of More's Pref. to his Philoa. Works (1710).

invisibility (in-vi-zil'i-ti), n. [in-3 + visibility.] Lack of manhood; unmanliness; effeminacy.

Was ever the invisibility of Nero, Heliogabalus, or Sardanapalus, those monsters if not shames of men and nature, comparable up to that which our artificial stageplayers continually practise on the stage? Prynne, Histrio-Mastix, I., v. 8.

inviron, v. t. An obsolete spelling of environ. Boyle.

invirtued, a. [in-2 + virtue + -ed.] Endowed with virtue.

Apolloes sonne by certaine prooffe now faysn Th' invirtued hearbes have gainst such poyson power. Haywood, Troia Britannica (1609).

inviscate (in-vis'kât), v. t.; pret. and pp. inviscated, ppr. inviscating. [L. inviscatum, pp. of inviscare (> It. inviscare = Sp. Pg. enviscar = Pr. inviscar, enviscar = F. invisquer), smear with bird-lime, < L. in, in, on, + viscum, viscus, bird-lime: see viscus.] To daub or smear with glutinous matter. [Rare.]

Its [the chameleon's] food being fyes, . . . it lath in the tongue a mucous and slimy extremity, whereby, upon a sudden emission, it inviscates and entangleth those insects. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., III. 22.

inviscerate (in-vis'g-rât), v. t. [L. invisceratus, pp. of inviscerare, put into the entrails, < L. in, in, + viscera, entrails: see viscera.] To root or implant deeply, as in the inward parts.

Our Raviour seemeth to have affected so much the inviscerating disposition in our hearts, as he claimeth the first introduction of this precept [to love one another]. W. Montague, Devoute Essayes, I. xv. § 1.

inviscerated (in-vis'g-rât), a. [L. invisceratus, pp.: see the verb.] Rooted in the inward parts.

Man sigheth (as the Apostle saith) as burthened with inviscerated interests, longing to put on this pure spiritual vesture of allil love. W. Montague, Devoute Essayes, I. xiv. § 2.

inviscid (in-vis'id), a. [in-3 + viscid.] Not viscid or viscous; without viscosity.

invisied, a. [L. invisus, unseen (< in-priv. + visus, seen), + -ed.] Invisible; unseen; uninspected. [Rare; known only in the following passage.]

The diamond—why, 'twas beautiful and hard, Whereeto his invisied properties did tend. Shak., Lover's Complaint, I. 212.

[The meaning 'inspected, tried, investigated' is also suggested by some commentators.]

invisibility (in-viz'i-bil'i-ti), n.; pl. invisibilities (-tiz). [= F. invisibilité = Pr. invisibilitat = Sp. invisibilidad = Pg. invisibilidade = It. invisibilità, < L.L. invisibilitas (-s), < L. invisibilis, not visible, unseen: see invisible.] 1. The state of being invisible; incapacity of being seen.

And he that challenged the boldest hand unto the picture of an echo must laugh at this attempt, not only in the description of invisibility, but circumscription of ubiquity, and fetching under lines incomprehensible circularity. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., V. 21.

2. That which is invisible.

Atoms and invisibilities. Landor.
invisible (in-viz'i-bl), a. and n. [ME. invisible, < OF. invisible, F. invisible = Pr. invisible, onvisible = Sp. invisible = Pg. invisible = It. invisibile, < L. invisibilis, not visible, unseen, < in-priv. + (L.L.) visibilis, visible: see visible.] 1. a. 1. Not visible; incapable of being seen; imperceptible by the sight.

To us invisible, or dimly seen In these thy lowest works. Milton, P. L., v. 187.

In vain we admire the lustre of anything seen: that which is truly glorious is invisible. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., III. 11.

The atom, then, is invisible; it never directly comes within the range of our perception. W. Wallace, Epicureanism, p. 176.

We say therefore a line has always two points in common with a cone, but these are either distinct, or coincident, or invisible. The word imaginary is generally used instead of invisible; but, as the points have nothing to do with imagination, we prefer the word invisible, recommended originally by Clifford. O. Henriot, Encyc. Brit., XIX. 798.

2. Out of sight; concealed or withdrawn from view: as, he keeps himself invisible.

I'll come in midst of all thy pride and mirth, Invisible to all men but thyself. Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, v. 1.

Invisible church, the church in heaven and in the intermediate state; the church triumphant and the church expectant, as distinguished from the church militant.

Of the Church of God there be two parts, one triumphant and one militant, one invisible and the other visible. In the invisible Church are all they who, having finished their course in faith, do now rest from their labours. Ep. Forbes, Explanation of the Nicene Creed (1688), p. 289.

Invisible green, a shade of green so dark as scarcely to be distinguishable from black.—Invisible ink. See ink.

II. n. 1. A Romicianism: so called because of the secret character of the organization.—2. One who rejects or denies the visible character or external organization of the church; specifically [cap.], a name given to certain German Protestants because they maintained that the church of Christ might be, and sometimes had been, invisible.—The Invisible, God; the Supreme Being.

The Invisible, in things scarce seen reveal'd, To whom an atom is an ample field. Copier, Retirement, I. 61.

invisbleness (in-viz'i-bl-nes), n. The state of being invisible; invisibility.

invisibly (in-viz'i-bli), adv. In a manner to escape the sight; so as not to be seen.

Dear madam, think not me to blame; Invisibly the fairy came. Gay, Fables, III.

invision (in-vizh'on), n. [in-3 + vision.] Lack of vision; blindness.

This is agreeable unto the determination of Aristotle, who computeth the time of their anapty or invision by that of their gestation. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., p. 174.

invita Minerva (in-vi'tâ mi-nér'vâ), [L. invitâ, abl. fem. of invitus, unwilling; Minerva, abl. (absolute) of Minerva, Minerva, the goddess of wisdom and genius: see Minerva.] Minerva being unwilling or unpropitious—that is, when without inspiration; when not in the vein or mood: used with reference to literary or artistic creation.

invitation (in-vi-tâ'shon), n. [F. invitation = Sp. invitación = It. invitazione, < L. invitatio (-n), < invitare, invite: see invite.] 1. The act of inviting; solicitation to come, attend, or take part; an intimation of desire for the presence, company, or action of the person invited: as, an invitation to a wedding; an invitation to sing.

The tempter now His invitation earnestly renew'd: What doubts the Son of God to sit and eat? Milton, P. L., II. 387.

I was by invitation from Monsieur Cassini at the Observatoire Royal. Leter, Journey to Paris, p. 62.

2. The written or spoken form with which a person is invited.

He received a list, and invitations were sent to all whose names were in it. Daily Telegraph (London), Sept. 11, 1884.

3. A drawing on by allurement or enticement; inducement; attraction; incitement.

The leer of invitation. Shak., M. W. of W., I. 3, 80.

There is no work that a man can apply himself to, no action that he can perform, to which there are greater invitations, greater motives—nay, I was going to say, greater temptations of all sorts, than to this of prayer. Alp. Sharp, Works, I. xv.

How temptingly the landscape shines! the air Breathes invitation. Wordsworth, Excursion, IX.

4. In the Anglican communion office, the brief exhortation beginning "Ye that (or who) do truly and earnestly repent you," and introducing the confession. It is first found in the "Order of the Communion" (1548), and in the Prayer-book of 1549, and has been continued, with gradual modifications, in the various revisions of the Prayer-book. Also called, less properly, the invitory.

invitatorium (in-vi-tâ-tô-ri-um), n.; pl. invitatoria (-â). [ML., neut. of I.L. invitatorius, invitory: see invitory.] Same as invitory, n.

invitory (in-vi'tâ-tô-ri), a. and n. [= F. invitatoire = Sp. Pg. It. invitatorio, < I.L. invitatorius, inviting, < L. invitator, one who invites, < invitare, invite: see invite.] 1. a. Using or containing invitation.—Invitory psalm, the Venite or 96th Psalm ("O come, let us sing unto the Lord"), said at matins or morning prayer before the psalms of the office: so called as inviting to praise. In the breviary ofices it is immediately followed by a hymn. Its antiphon is called the invitory.

II. n.; pl. invitatories (-riz). A form of invitation used in religious worship; something consisting of or containing invitation in church service.

The invitory, "Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church," was new. R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., xv.

Specifically—(a) A form of exhortation to praise; especially, in the daily office of the Western Church, the variable antiphon to the Venite at matins. In the Anglican matins or morning prayer the versicle "Praise ye the Lord" (founded on the former "Alleluia" or "Lauds tibi"), with its response, "The Lord's name be praised," serves as unvarying invitory. In the Greek Church the invaryable invitory is the triple "O come, let us worship . . ." (Δεῦτε, προσκυνήσωμεν . . .) before the psalms at each of the canonical hours.

Then was sung that quickening call of the royal prophet "Venite, exultemus Domino—Come, let us praise the Lord with joy, &c." known in those times as now by the name of the invitory.

Rock, Church of our Fathers, III. II. 4.

(b) An early name of the Roman introit. (c) Any text of Scripture chosen for the day, and used before the Venite or 96th Psalm.

invite (in-vit'), v.; pret. and pp. invited, ppr. inviting. [F. inviter (OF. envier, ult. E. vie, q. v.) = Pr. Sp. Pg. invitar = It. invitare, < L. invitare, ask, bid, invite, entertain; origin uncertain.] I. trans. 1. To solicit to come, attend, or do something; request the presence, company, or action of; summon because of desire, favor, or courtesy: as, to invite a friend to dinner; to invite one to dance.

Abraham had shepherders in Beth-hazor, . . . and Abraham invited all the king's sons. 2 Sam. xiii. 23.

No noontide bell invites the country round. Pope, Moral Essays, iii. 190.

Not to the dance that dreadful voice invites, It calls to death, and all the rage of fights. Pope, Iliad, xv. 600.

They . . . entered into an association, and the city of London was invited to accede. Goldsmith, Hist. England, xv.

2. To present allurements or incitement to; draw on or induce by temptation; solicit; incite.

Yet have they many baits and gulfed spells, To inveigle and invite the unwary sense Of them that pass unweaving by the way. Milton, Comus, l. 583.

I saw nothing in this country that could invite me to a longer continuance. Swift, Gulliver's Travels, iii. 6.

To resent his (Frederic's) affronts was perilous; yet not to resent them was to invite them. Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

The outside stations will be the first to invite the savages, and if too far away we shall not know of the attack nor be able to come to the rescue. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 423.

= Syn. 1. Convoke, Bid, etc. See call.

II. Intrans. To offer invitation or enticement; attract.

Come, Myrrha, let us on to the Euphrates; The hour invites, the galley is prepared. Byron, Sardanapalus, l. 2.

invite (in-vit'), n. [< invite, v.] An invitation. [Now only colloq.]

The Lamprey swims to his Lord's invite. Sandeys, Travaux, p. 305.

Adepts in every little meanness or contrivance likely to bring about an invitation (or, as they call it with equal good taste, an invite). T. Hook, Man of Many Friends.

Guest after guest arrived; the invites had been excellently arranged. Dickens, Sketches, Steam Excursion.

invitement (in-vit'ment), n. [< OF. invitemēt = It. invitamento, < L. invitamentum, invitation, < invitare, invite; see invite.] 1. The act of inviting; invitation.

Nor would I wish any invitement of states or friends. Chapman.

A fair invitement to a solemn feast. Massinger, Unnatural Combat, ii. 1.

2. Enticement; allurements; temptation. [Rare.]

The little creature . . . was unable to resist the delicious invitement to repose which he there saw exhibited. Lamb, Essays, p. 189.

inviter (in-vi'ter), n. One who invites.

Friend with friend, th' inviter and the guest. Harris, Supposed Epistle from Boëtius to his Wife.

invitiate (in-vish-i'at), a. [< in- + vitiate, a.] Not vitiated; uncontaminated; pure.

Here shall be The invitiate firstlings of experience. Lovell, The Cathedral.

inviting (in-vi'ting), n. [Verbal n. of invite, v.] 1. The act of giving an invitation.—2. An invitation. [Rare.]

He hath sent me an earnest inviting. Shak., T. of A., iii. 6, 11.

inviting (in-vi'ting), p. a. [Pr. of invite, v.] Alluring; tempting; attractive: as, an inviting prospect.

A cold bath, at such an hour and under such auspices, was anything but inviting. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, l. 144.

You cannot leave us now, We must not part at this inviting hour. Wordsworth, Excursion, v.

invitingly (in-vi'ting-ly), adv. In an inviting manner; so as to attract; attractively.

If he can but dress up a temptation to look invitingly, the business is done. Deacy of Christian Piety, p. 123.

invitingness (in-vi'ting-ness), n. The quality of being inviting; attractiveness.

Elegant flowers of speech, to which the nature and resemblances of things, as well as human fancies, have an aptitude and invitingness.

Jer. Taylor (?), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 165.

invitrifiable (in-vit'ri-fi-ə-bl), a. [< in- + vitri-fiable.] Incapable of being vitrified. See vitri-fiable, vitriification.

invocate (in-vō-kāt), v.; pret. and pp. invoked, ppr. invoking. [< L. invocatus, pp. of invocare, call upon; see invoke.] I. trans. To call on or for in supplication; invoke.

Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost To hear the lamentations of poor Anne. Shak., Bioh. III., l. 2, 8.

Look in mine eye, There you shall see dim grief swimming in tears Invoking succour. Lust's Dominion, ii. 3.

II. intrans. To call as in supplication.

Some call on heaven, some invoke on hell, And fates and furies with their woes acquaint. Dryden, Idea, No. 32.

invocation (in-vō-kā'shon), n. [= F. invocation = Pr. invocacio, invocacion = Sp. invocacion = Pg. invocação = It. invocazione, < L. invocatio (n-), < invocare, call upon; see invoke, invocate.] 1. The act of invoking or calling in prayer; the form or act of summoning or inviting presence or aid: as, invocation of the Muses.

'Tis a Greek invocation to call fools into a circle. Shak., As you Like it, ii. 5, 61.

There is in religion no acceptable duty which devout invocation of the name of God doth not either presuppose or infer. Hooker, Eccles. Polity.

Any fustian invocations, captain, will serve as well as the best, so you rant them out well. The Puritan, iii. 4.

2. In law, a judicial call, demand, or order: as, the invocation of papers or evidence into a court.

—3. Eccles.: (a) An invoking of the blessing of God upon any undertaking; especially, an opening prayer in a public service invoking divine blessing upon it; specifically, the words "In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen," "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen," used at the beginning of the Roman mass, before sermons in many Anglican churches, and on other occasions. (b) The third part of the prayer of consecration in the communion office of the American Book of Common Prayer, in the Scottish office of 1764 (from which that prayer is derived), and in the Nonjurors' office of 1718, on which, as well as on earlier Scottish and English offices and ancient Oriental liturgies, the Scottish office of 1764 is based. It follows the institution and the oblation, and invokes God the Father to send down the Holy Spirit on the eucharistic elements and on the communicants. A similar form of invocation (epiclesis), on which this is modeled, is found in the same sequence in almost all the more important primitive liturgies, and some authorities claim that it was originally universal. It is wanting, however, in the Roman Missal and in the present English Book of Common Prayer. In the first Prayer-book (1549) the invocation preceded the institution. (c) In the Roman Catholic and Anglican litanies, one of the petitions addressed to God in each person and in Trinity, and to the saints. The invocations are the first of the four main divisions of petitions in these litanies, the others being deprecations (with obsecrations), intercessions, and supplications. The response to the invocations addressed to God is "Misereere nobis." "Have mercy upon us," to which the Anglican Prayer-book adds "miserable sinners." The response to the invocations addressed to saints is "Ora (or Orate) pro nobis" ("Pray for us"). The invocations to saints are omitted in the Anglican litany.—Invocation of saints, in the Roman Catholic, the Greek, and other Christian churches, the act or practice of mentioning in prayer, asking the prayers of, or addressing prayers to angels or departed saints, in order to obtain their intercession with God.

invocatory (in-vō-kā-tō-ri), a. [= F. invocatoire = Sp. Pg. It. invocatorio; as invocate + -ory.] Making invocation; invoking.

invoice (in'vois), n. [Prob. < F. envois, pl. of envoi, OF. envoy, a sending, conveyance (lettre d'envoi, an invoice): see envoy.] In com., a written account of the particulars of merchandise shipped or sent to a purchaser, consignee, factor, etc., with the value or prices and charges annexed. The word does not carry a necessary implication of ownership. In United States revenue law, an invoice sent from abroad is required to be made in triplicate and signed and dated by the seller of the merchandise described therein, and subsequently verified by the American consul or commercial agent of the United States in the port or country of shipment. The three invoices are classified as the original, or importer's, the duplicate, which is retained by the consul who verified it, and the triplicate, which is forwarded to the collector of the port to which the merchandise is consigned.

What English Merchant soever should pass through the Sound, it should be sufficient for him to register an invoice of his Cargason in the Custom-house Book, and give his Bond to pay all duties at his return. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 5.

The clerk on the high stool at the long mahogany desk behind the railing, hardly lifting his eyes from a heap of invoices before him. W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 148.

Pro forma invoice. See pro forma.

invoice (in'vois), v. t.; pret. and pp. invoiced, ppr. invoicing. [< invoice, n.] To write or enter in an invoice; make an invoice of.

Goods, wares, and merchandise imported from Norway, and invoiced in the current dollar of Norway. Madison.

invoice-book (in'vois-būk), n. A book in which invoices are copied.

invoke (in-vōk'), v. t.; pret. and pp. invoked, ppr. invoking. [< F. invoquer = Sp. Pg. invocar = It. invocare, < L. invocare, call upon, < in, in, on, + vocare, call; see vocal. Cf. avoke, convoke, evoke, provoke, revoke.] 1. To address in supplication; call on for protection or aid: as, to invoke the Supreme Being; to invoke the Muses.

Whilst I invoke the Lord, whose power shall me defend. Surrey, Pa. lxxiii.

To this oath they did not invoke any celestial divinity, or divine attribute, but only called to witness the river Styx. Bacon, Political Fables, ii.

2. To call for with earnest desire; make supplication or prayer for: as, to invoke God's mercy.

No storm-tost sailor sighs for slumbering seas, He dreads the tempest, but invokes the breeze. Crabbe, The Library.

The King of the Netherlands invoked the mediation of the five powers. Woolsey, Introd. to Inter. Law, § 49.

3. In law, to call for judicially: as, to invoke depositions or evidence.—Syn. 1 and 2. To implore, supplicate, adjure, solicit, beseech.

invoker (in-vō'kēr), n. One who invokes.

All respectable names, but none of them will in the long run save its invoker.

M. Arnold, Schools and Universities, p. 273.

involatile (in-vōl'ū-til), a. [< in- + volatile.] Not volatile; incapable of being vaporized.

The ash or involatile constituents of wine. Enoys, Brit., I. 173.

involute (in-vōl'ū-bl), a. [< in- + voluble.] Not turning or changing; unchangeable; immutable.

Even Thee, the Cause of Causes, Source of all, Infallible, involute, inextinguishable.

Sylvester, Little Barts (trans.), l. 161.

involute (in-vōl'ū-sel), n. [= F. involute = Pg. involutello, < NL. involutellum, dim. of involverum, involucre; see involvere.] In bot., a secondary involucre in a compound cluster of flowers, as in many of the Umbelliferae. See cut under inflorescence (fig. 9).

involutella, n. Plural of involutellum.

involuteate (in-vōl'ū-sel'āt), a. [< involute (l) + -ate]. Having involutella.

involutellum (in-vōl'ū-sel'um), n.; pl. involutella (-ē). [NL.] Same as involute.

involutura, n. Plural of involutum.

involutural (in'vōl'ū-kral), a. [< involucre + -al.] Pertaining to an involucre or to an involucre, or having an involucre.

Involuturate (in-vōl'ū-kra'tē), n. pl. [NL. (Hooker and Baker, 1868), fem. pl. of involuturatus, involucrete; see involuturate.] A division of polypodiaceous ferns, containing those tribes which have the sori or fruit-dots furnished with an involucre or indusium.

involuturate (in-vōl'ū-kra'tē), a. [< NL. involuturatus, < involverum, involucre; see involvere.] Having an involucre.

involvere (in'vōl'ū-kēr), n. [= F. involvere = Sp. Pg. It. involvere, < NL. involverum, < L. involvere, roll up, wrap up; see involve.] 1. In bot., any collection of bracts round a cluster of flowers.

In umbelliferous plants it consists of separate narrow bracts placed in a single whorl; in many composite plants these organs are imbricated in several rows. In some species of Cornus, many Labiata, and other plants, the involucre is white or variously colored, constituting the showy part of the flower. (See cut.) The same name is given also to the superincumbent covering or indusium of the sori of ferns. (See indusium, 2.) In some species of Agrostium the involucre is the annular or annular gristle situated between the uppermost whorl of leaf-sheaths and the whorl of sporangiferous scales. (Bennett and Murray, Crypt. Bot., p. 110.) In the Hepaticas it is the sheath immediately surrounding the female sexual organs, originating as an outgrowth of the plant-body. In marine algae it consists of the ramuli subtending a conceptacle, forming a more or less perfect wheel around it. (Harvey, Brit. Marine Algae, Glossary.)

2. In anat., a membranous envelop, as the pericardium.—3. In zool., an involucre.

involved (in'vōl'ū-kōrd), a. In bot., having an involucre, as umbels, etc.

involutet (in-vōl'ū-kret), n. [< involucre + -et.] An involucre.

involuteriform (in-vōl'ū-kri-fōrm), a. [< NL. involutrum, involucre, + L. forma, shape.] Resembling an involucre. Thomas, Med. Dict.

involutum (in-vōl'ū-krum), n.; pl. involuta (-krē). [NL., < L. involvere, that in which something is wrapped, < involvere, wrap up; see Involucre subtending the cluster of flowers of Flowering Dogwood (Cornus florida).

involute. 1. In soil., a kind of sheath or involucre about the bases of the thread-cells of aculeoph. — 2. In bot.: (a) Same as involucre. (b) Same as calum. Persoon.

involutarily (in-vol'ut-ri-li), adv. In an involutory manner; not spontaneously; without one's will.

involutariness (in-vol'ut-ri-nes), n. The quality of being involutory.

involutary (in-vol'ut-ri), a. [= F. involutaire = Sp. Pg. involutario, < LL. involutarius, unwilling, < L. in-priv. + voluntarius, willing: see voluntary.] 1. Not voluntary or willing; contrary or opposed to will or desire; unwilling; unintentional: as, involutary submission; an involutary listener.

The gathering number, as it moves along,
Involves a vast involutary throng.

Pope, Dunciad, iv. 82.

2. Not voluntary or willed; independent of volition or consenting action of the mind; without the agency of the will: as, involutary muscular action; an involutary groan.

This at least I think evident, that we find in ourselves a power to begin or forbear, continue or end several actions of our minds, and motions of our bodies, barely by a thought or preference of the mind ordering, or, as it were, commanding the doing or not doing such or such a particular action. . . . The forbearance of that action, consequent to such order or command of the mind, is called voluntary; and whatsoever action is performed without such a thought of the mind is called involutary.

Locke.

Steals down my cheek the involutary tear.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, IV. 1. 38.

Involutary action. See action, 7 (b). — Involutary bankruptcy. See bankruptcy. — Involutary escape. See escape, 3.

involutomotory (in-vol'ut-mō'tō-ri), a. [< involunt(ary) + motory.] Having or pertaining to motor influence or effect which is not subject to the will, as the involutory muscular action of the heart, intestines, etc.: specifically applied by Remak to that one of the four germ-layers of the embryo which corresponds to the splanchnopleure of other writers. This is the inner division of the mesoblast, distinguished from the voluntomotory or somatopleural division.

The involutomotory, corresponding to the visceral wall or splanchnopleure.
Bryce, Biol., VIII. 167.

involutant (in-vō-lū'tant), n. [< involute + ant.] In math., the topical resultant of the powers and products of powers of two matrices of the same order.

involute (in-vō-lūt), a. and n. [= OF. involu = It. involuto, < L. involutus, pp. of involvere, roll up, wrap up; see involve.] 1. a. 1. Rolled up; wrapped up. Specifically—(a) In bot., rolled inward from the edge or edges: said of leaves in vernation, of the petals of flowers in estivation, and of the margin of the cup in the Discomyces, etc. Also involute. (b) In conch., having the whorls closely wound round the axis, and nearly or entirely concealing it, as the shells of Cypræda, Oliva, etc. Also involved. (c) In entom., curved spirally, as the antennæ of certain Hymenoptera.

1. Branch of Poplar, showing involute leaves; 2, outline of transverse section of an involute leaf.

2. Involved; confusedly mingled. [Rare.]

The style is so involute that one cannot help fancying it must be falsely constructed.
Pos, Marginalia, xviii.

II. n. 1. That which is involved. [Rare.]

Far more of our deepest thoughts and feelings pass to us through perplexed combinations of concrete objects, pass to us as involved (if I may coin that word) in compound experiences incapable of being disentangled, than ever reach us directly, and in their own abstract alphas.
De Quincey, Autobiog. Sketches, I.

2. In geom., the curve traced by any point of a flexible and inextensible string when the latter is unwrapped, under tension, from a given curve; or, in other words, the locus of a point in a right line which rolls, without sliding, over a given curve. The curve by unwrapping which a series of involutes is obtained is said to be their common evolute, and any two involutes of a curve constitute a pair of parallel curves, their corresponding tangents being parallel, and their corresponding points, situated on the same normal, being at a constant distance from one another.

Involute of a Circle.

involved (in-vō-lū-ted), a. Same as involute.
involution (in-vō-lū'shōn), n. [= F. involution = Pr. envolucio = It. involuzione, < LL. involutio (n-), a rolling up, < L. involvere, pp. involutus, roll up; see involve.] 1. The act of involving, infolding, or inwrapping; a rolling or folding in or round.

Gloom that sought to strengthen itself by tenfold involution in the night of solitary woods.
De Quincey, Secret Societies, I.

2. The state of being entangled or involved; complication.

The faculty to be trained is the judgment, the practical judgment at work among matters in which its possessor is deeply interested, not from the desire of truth only, but from his own involution in the matters of which he is to judge.
Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 17.

3. Something involved or entangled; a complication.

Such the elze
Of Cretan Ariadne ne'er explain'd!
Hooks! angles! crooks! and involutions wild!
Shenstone, Economy, III.

4. A membranous covering or envelop; an involution.

Great conceits are raised of the involution or membranous covering, commonly called the silly-how, that sometimes is found about the heads of children.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 28.

5. In gram., complicated construction; the lengthening out of a sentence by the insertion of member within member; the separation of the subject from its predicate by the interjection of matter that should follow the verb or be placed in another sentence.

The long *involution*s of Latin periods.
Lowell.

6. In math.: (a) The multiplication of a quantity into itself any number of times, so as to produce a positive integral power of that quantity. Thus, the operation by which the third power of 5 is found, namely, the multiplication of 5 by itself, making 25, and of the product by 5 again, making 125, is involution. In this sense involution is opposed to evolution, 3 (b). (b) The raising of a quantity to any power, positive, negative, fractional, or imaginary. In this sense involution includes evolution as a particular case. (c) A unidimensional continuous series of elements (such as the points of a line), considered as having a definite one-to-one correspondence with themselves, such that infinitely neighboring elements correspond to infinitely neighboring elements, and such that if A corresponds to B, then B corresponds to A: in other words, the elements are associated in conjugate pairs, so that any pair of conjugate elements may by a continuous motion come into coincidence with any other without ceasing, at any stage of the motion, to be conjugate. This is the usual meaning of involution in geometry; it dates from Desargues (1639). There are other two real self-conjugate or self-corresponding elements in an involution, when it is called a hyperbolic involution; or there are none, when it is called an elliptic involution. If $U = 0$, $V = 0$, $W = 0$ are three quadratic equations determining three pairs of points in an involution, then these three equations are in a syzygy $\lambda U + \mu V + \nu W = 0$; or if the three equations are $ax^2 + by^2 + cz^2 = 0$, $a'x^2 + b'yz + c'zy = 0$, then the syzygy may be thus written:

$$\begin{vmatrix} a & b & c \\ a' & b' & c' \end{vmatrix} = 0.$$

The six elements are said to be an involution of six, or, if one or two of them are self-conjugate, an involution of five or of four elements. If the points of a line in a plane are in involution, let any conic (or degenerate conic) be drawn through any pair of conjugate points, and another conic through any other pair; then any conic through the four intersections of these conics will cut the line in a pair of conjugate points. That point of an involution which corresponds to the point at infinity is termed the center of the involution. (d) Any series of pairs of loci represented by an equation $\lambda U + \mu V = 0$, where λ and μ are numerical constants for each locus, and $U = 0$ and $V = 0$ are equations to two loci of the same order. (e) Any unidimensional continuum of elements associated in sets of any constant number by a continuous law. According as there are two, three, four, etc., in each set, the involution is said to be quadratic, cubic, quartic (or biquadratic), etc. (f) The implication of a relation in a system of other relations. Cayley, On Abstract Geometry, § 29.—7. In physiol., the resorption which organs undergo after enlargement or distention: as, the involution of the uterus, which is thus restored to its normal size after pregnancy.—Center of an involution. See center. — Elliptic involution. See ellipse. — Involution of six screws, a system of six screws conferring only five degrees of freedom on a rigid body.—Mechanical involution, a relation between a series of pairs of lines such that, taking any three pairs, forces may be made to act along them whose statical sum is zero.—The involution of notions, in logic, the relation of a notion to another whose depth it includes.

involute (in-vō-lū-tiv), a. [< involute + -ive.] In bot., same as involute, 1 (a).

involutorial (in-vō-lū-tō-ri-āl), a. [< involute + -ory + -al.] Of the nature of geometrical involution; connecting a system of objects in pairs.—Involutorial homology, a homology whose parameter is -1.—Involutorial relation, a relation between two variables, x and y , such that $y = Fx$ and $x = Fy$: a term introduced by Stebbins.

involve (in-volv'), v. t.; pret. and pp. involved, ppr. involving. [< OF. involver = Sp. envolver = Pg. involver = It. involvere, < L. involvere, roll in, roll up, wrap up, < in, in, on, + volvare, roll: see evolve. Cf. convolve, devolve, evolve, revolve.] 1. To roll or fold in or wrap up so as to conceal; envelop on all sides; cover completely; infold; specifically, in soil., to encircle completely: as, a mark involving a joint; wings involving the body.

If [the sun] should, but one Day, cease to shine,
Th' unpurged Aire to Water would resolve,
And Water would the mountain tops involve.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 4.

A rolling cloud
Involved the mount; the thunder roared aloud.
Pope, Illiad, xvii. 671.

The further history of this neglected plantation is involved in gloomy uncertainty. Baneroff, Hist. U. S., I. 88.

2. To entwine; entangle; implicate; bring into entanglement or complication, literally or figuratively: as, an involved problem; to involve a nation in war; to be involved in debt.

Judgement rashly giv'n ofttimes involved the Judge himself.
Milton, Elkonostas, xii.

Some of serpent kind,
Wondrous in length and curling, involved
Their snaky folds.
Milton, P. L., vii. 438.

Fearing that our stay till the very excessive heats were past might involve us in another difficulty, that of missing the Etesian winds. Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 43.

We seem to have certain direct perceptions, and to attain to others by a more or less involved process of reasoning.
Mead, Nature and Thought, p. 12.

3. To bring into a common relation or connection; hence, to include as a necessary or logical consequence; imply; comprise.

The welfare of each is daily more involved in the welfare of all.
H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 483.

A knowledge of the entire history of a particle is shown to be involved in a complete knowledge of its state at any moment.
W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 3.

All kinds of mental work involve attention.
J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 18.

4. In arith. and alg., to raise to any assigned power; multiply, as a quantity, into itself a given number of times: as, a quantity involved to the third or fourth power. = Syn. 2. Entangle, etc. (see implicate); twine, intertwine, interweave, interlace.—3. Imply, involve (see imply); embrace, contain.

involved (in-volv'd), p. a. 1. In conch., same as involute, 1 (b). — 2. In her., same as enveloped.
involvedness (in-volv'd-nes), n. The state of being involved; involvement. [Rare.]

But how shall the mind of man . . . extricate itself out of this complicate and involvedness in the bodies, passions, and infinites?

W. Montague, Devoute Essays, II. x. § 1.

involvement (in-volv'ment), n. [< involve + -ment.] The act of involving, or the state of being involved or implicated; entanglement: as, involvement in debt, or in intrigues.

The spectators were shivering at the Athenian's mishap, and the Sidonian, Byzantine, and Corinthian were striving, with such skill as they possessed, to avoid involvement in the ruin.
L. Wallace, Ben-Hur, p. 363.

invulgar (in-vul'gar), v. t. [< in-2 + vulgar.] To cause to become vulgar or common.

It did so much invulgar the estimate
Of th' open'd and invulgar'd mysteries.
Daniel, Musophilus.

invulgar (in-vul'gar), a. [< in-3 + vulgar.] Not vulgar; refined.

Judg'd the mad parents this lost infant ow'd
Were as invulgar as their fruit was fair.
Dryden, Moses, I.

invulnerability (in-vul'ng-rā-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. invulnerabilité = Sp. invulnerabilidad = It. invulnerabilità; as invulnerable + -ity: see -bility.] The quality or state of being invulnerable.

invulnerable (in-vul'ng-rā-bl), a. [= F. invulnerable = Sp. invulnerable = Pg. invulneravel = It. invulnerabile, < L. invulnerabilis, invulnerable, < in-priv. + (LL.) vulnerabilis, vulnerable: see vulnerable.] 1. Not vulnerable; incapable of being wounded, hurt, or harmed.

Achilles is not quite invulnerable; the sacred waters did not wash the heel by which Thetis held him.
Emerson, Compensation.

Hence—2. Not to be damaged or injuriously affected by attack: as, invulnerable arguments or evidence.

He exhorted his hearers to lay aside their prejudices, and arm themselves against the shafts of malice or misfortune by invulnerable patience. Johnson, Rasselas, xviii.

invulnerableness (in-vul'ne-rə-bli-ness), n. Invulnerability.

invulnerably (in-vul'ne-rə-bli), adv. In an invulnerable manner; so as to be proof against wounds, injury, or assault; of an argument, irrefutably.

invulnerable (in-vul'ne-rə-ti), a. [= Pg. invulnerable, < L. invulneratus, unwounded, < in- priv. + vulneratus, pp. of vulnerare, wound: see vulnerate.] Without wound; unhurt.

Not at all on those [skulls]
That are invulnerable and free from blows.
S. Butler, Satire upon Marriage.

invultuation (in-vul'tū-ā'shən), n. [ML. invultuatio (n.), invultuacio (n.), < invultuare, invultare (< OF. envouter, F. envouter), stab or pierce the face or body of (a person), that is (to medieval superstition the same thing), of an image of him made of wax or clay (see def.), < L. in, in, into, + vultus, face.] The act of stabbing or piercing with a sharp instrument a wax or clay image of a person, under the belief that the person himself, though absent and unconscious of the act, will thereupon languish and die: a kind of spell or witchcraft believed in in ancient times and in the middle ages. The practice was so common, and belief in its fatal effects so general, that laws were enacted against it. It was called in Anglo-Saxon stancung, 'staking.'

invy, n. A Middle English form of envy.
inwall (in-wāl'), v. t. [Also enwall; < in-1 + wall; cf. immure.] To wall in; inclose or fortify with a wall. Dr. H. More, Psychozola, lii. 31.

A mountainous range . . . swept far to the north, and ultimately merged in those eternal hills that inwall every horizon. S. Judd, Margaret, i. 3.

inwall (in-wāl'), n. [in-1 + wall.] 1. An inner wall.

The hinges piecemeal flew, and through the fervent little rock Thunder'd a passage; with his weight th' inwall his rent did knock. Chapman, Iliad, xii. 448.

2. Specifically, the interior wall of a blast-furnace.

inwandering (in-won'dər-ing), n. [in-1 + wandering.] A wandering in. [Rare.]

This inwandering of differentiated cells. A. Hyatt.
inward, inwards (in-wārd, -wārdz), adv. [ME. inward, < AS. inweard, adv., < in, in, + weard, E. ward. The form inwards (= D. inwards = G. einwärts = Dan. indvortes = Sw. inverte) is later, with adv. gen. suffix -s.] 1. Toward the inside; toward the interior or center.

Sewed furs with bones and sinews for their clothing, which they wore inward in Winter, outward in Summer.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 481.

Primatively, however, in all animals, and permanently in some (e. g. Tortoises), both these joints (the elbow and the knee) are so conditioned as to open inwards.

Miscot, Encyc. Brit., XXII. 117.

2. Into the mind or soul.

Celestial Light,
Shine inward. Milton, P. L., iii. 52.
I would ask what else is reflecting besides turning the mental eye inwards? A. Truher, Light of Nature, i. 11.

[The forms inward and inwards are used either indifferently or with some reference to euphony.]
inward (in-wārd), a. and n. [ME. inward, inneward, < AS. inneweard (also innaweard) (= OHG. inwart, inwarti, inwerti, MHG. inwart, inwerte), inward, < inne, in (< in, in), + -weard: see in-1 and -ward.] 1. a. 1. Situated or being within; pertaining to the interior or internal parts: as, the inward parts of a person or of a country.

So, stubborn Flints their inward Heat conceal, Till Art and Force th' unwilling Sparks reveal.
Congress, To Dryden.
To gritty meal he grinds
The bones of fish, or inward bark of trees.
J. Dyer, Fleecce, i.

2. Pertaining to or connected with the intimate thoughts or feelings of the soul.

So, bursting frequent from Atrides' breast,
Sighs following sighs his inward fears confess.
Pope, Iliad, x. 12.

Behold! as day by day the spirit grows,
Thou see'st by inward light things hid before;
Till what God is, thyself, his image shows.
James Voss, Poems, p. 64.

3. Intimate; familiar; confidential; private.

Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend. For what is inward between us, let it pass.
Shak., L. L. v., i. 102.

Come, we must be inward, thou and I all one.
Marston and Webster, Malcontent.

[He was] so inward with my Lord O'Brien that, after a few months of that gentleman's death, he married his widow.
Swelyn, Diary, July 22, 1674.

4. Deep; low; muffled; half-audible: as, he spoke in an inward voice.

As the dog [in dreams]
With inward yelp and restless forefoot pines.
His function of the woodland. Tennyson, Lucretius.

inward euthanasia, light, etc. See the nouns.—Inward part (of a sacrament), that part of a sacrament which is not perceptible to the senses, as the body and blood of Christ in the Lord's Supper, or the gift of regeneration in baptism. Also called res sacramenti.—Inward place, in logic, a place which yields an argument pertaining to the nature and substance of the matter in question.—syn. 1 and 2. Internal, interior, etc. See inner.

II. n. 1. The inside; especially, in the plural, the inner parts of an animal; the bowels; the viscera.

The thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards.
Shak., Othello, ii. 1, 806.

The little book which in your language you have called Saggi Morali. But I give it a weightier name, entitling it Faithful Discourses, or the Inwards of Things.
Bacon, To Father Fulgentio, 1625.

2. pl. Mental endowments; intellectual parts.

To guide the Grecian darts,
Juno and Pallas, with the god that doth the earth embrace, And most for man's use, Mercurie (whom good wise in- wards grace),
Were partially, and all employ'd. Chapman, Iliad, xx.

3. An intimate.

Sir, I was an inward of his: A shy fellow was the duke.
Shak., M. for M., iii. 2, 138.

Salute him fairly; he's a kind gentleman, a very inward of mine.
Middleton, Michaelmas Term, ii. 3.

inwardly (in-wārd-li), adv. [ME. inwardsliche, inwardlike, inwardlike, inwardli, < AS. inweardlike (= OHG. inwerthlike), < inweard, inward: see inward.] 1. In an inward manner; internally; privately; secretly.

Let Benedick, like cover'd fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 1, 78.

Thou art inwardly desirous of vain glory in all that thou sayest or doest.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 127.

2. Toward the center: as, to curve inwardly.

—3. Intimately; thoroughly.

I shall desire to know him more inwardly.
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, ii. 1.

4. In a low tone; not aloud; to one's self.

He shrunk and muttered inwardly.
Wordsworth, White Doe of Rylstone, ii.

Half inwardly, half audibly she spoke.
Tennyson, Geraint.

inwardness (in-wārd-ness), n. [ME. inwardsness; < inward + -ness.] 1. The state of being inward or internal; inclosure within.

Such a name [antrum] could not have been given to any individual cave unless the idea of being within, or inwardness, had been present in the mind.

Max Müller, Sci. of Lang., p. 376.

2. Internal state; indwelling character or quality; the nature of a thing as it is in itself.

Sense cannot arrive to the inwardness
Of things, nor penetrate the crusty fence
Of constipated matter.

Dr. H. More, Psychozola, i. 28.

3. Inner meaning; real significance or drift; essential purpose.

I should without any difficulty pronounce that his [Homer's] fables had no such inwardness in his own meaning.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 146.

The true inwardness of the late Southern policy of the Republican party.

New York Tribune, April, 1877.

4. Intimacy; familiarity; attachment.

You know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio.
Shak., Much Ado, iv. 1, 247.

And [the Duke of York] did, with much inwardness, tell me what was doing.

5. The inwards; the heart; the soul.

ghe ben not angwischild in us, but ghe ben angwischild in ghoure inwardness.
Wyclif, 1 Cor. vi. 12.

inwards, adv. See inward.

inweave (in-wēv'), v. t.; pret. inwove, pp. inwoven (sometimes inwoove), ppr. inweaving. [in-1 + weave.] 1. To weave together; intermingle by or as if by weaving.

Down they cast
Their crowns inwoven with amaranth and gold.
Milton, P. L., iii. 652.

The dusky strand of Death inwoven here
With dear Love's tie. Tennyson, Maud, xviii. 7.

2. To weave in; introduce into a web in the process of manufacture, as a pattern, an inscription, or the like.

inwheel, enwheel (in-, en-hwēl'), v. t. [in-1 + wheel.] To encircle.

Heaven's grace inwheel ye!
And all good thoughts and prayers dwell about ye!
Fletcher, Pilgrim, i. 2.

inwheel (in'hwēl'), n. [in-1 + wheel.] The inner wheel of a mill. Hallwell.

inwick (in'wik'), n. [in-1 + wick.] In the game of curling, a stroke by which the stone comes very near the tee after passing through a wick.

The stone, in a graceful parabola, curls gently inwards, takes an inwick off the inner edge of another, and circles in to lie—a pot-lid in the very toe.

Montreal Daily Star, Carnival No., 1884.

inwit (in'wit'), n. [ME. inwit, inwyt, < AS. inwit, consciousness, conscience, < in, in, + wit, knowledge: see wit, n.] Inward knowledge; understanding; conscience. This word is best known in the title of a Middle English work in the Kentish dialect, "The Aynbite of inwit," that is, Remorse of Conscience, translated in the year 1340 by Dan Michel, a monk, from a French work entitled "Le sommaire des vies et des vertus."

Inwit in the head is and helpeth the soule,
For thorow his conynge he kepeth Caro et Anima
In rule and in reason bote recheles hit make.
Piers Plowman (A), x. 49.

inwith, prep. [ME. inwith, inewith, with; < in-1 + with. Cf. within.] Within; in.

His wyf and eek his doghter hath he left inwith his hous.
Chaucer, Tale of Melibee.

in-wonet, v. t. [ME. (= D. MLG. inwoonen = G. einwohnen), < in, in, + wonen, dwell: see won.] To dwell in; inhabit; hold.

[She] enfourmeth hym fully of the fre rewme,
That the worthy in-wonet, as a wale kyng.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 13894.

inwood (in-wūd'), v. t. [in-1 + wood.] To hide in woods.

He got out of the river, and . . . inwooded himself so as the ladies lost the farther marking his sportfulness.

Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, ii.

inwork (in-wērk'), v.; pret. and pp. inworked or inwrought, ppr. inworking. [in-1 + work.] 1. trans. To work in or into: as, to inwork gold or any color, as in embroidery: commonly used in the past participle.

His mantle hairy, and his bonnet sedge, Inwrought with figures dim.

Milton, Lycidas, l. 106.

And from these dangers you will never be wholly free till you have utterly extinguished your vicious inclinations, and inwrought all the virtues of religion into your nature.

J. Scott, Christian Life, i. iv. § 5.

II. intrans. To work or operate within. [Rare.]

inworking (in-wērk-ing), n. [Verbal n. of inwork, v.] Operation within; energy exerted inwardly, as in the mind or soul: as, the inworking of the Holy Spirit.

inworn (in-wōrn'), a. [in-1 + worn, pp. of wear.] Worn or worked into; inwrought.

I persuade me that whatever faintness was but superficial to Prelacy at the beginning, is now by the just judgment of God long since branded and inworn into the very essence thereof.

Milton, Church-Government, ii. 1.

inwrap¹, enwrap¹ (in-, en-rap'), v. t.; pret. and pp. inwrapped, enwrapped, ppr. inwrapping, enwrapping. [ME. inwrappen, enwrappen, also inwappen; < in-1, en-1, + wrap.] 1. To cover by or as if by wrapping; infold; hence, to include.

David might well look to be inwrapped in the common destruction.

Sp. Hall, Numbering of the People.

So when thick clouds enwrap the mountain's head,
O'er heav'n's expanse like one black ceiling spread.

Pope, Iliad, xvi. 354.

Here comes to me Roland, with a delicacy of sentiment leading and inwrapping him like a divine cloud or holy ghost.

Emerson, Behavior.

2. To involve in difficulty or perplexity; perplex.

The case is no sooner made than resolved, if it be made not inwrapped, but plainly and perspicuously.

Bacon.

And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Shak., T. N., iv. 3, 2.

inwrap², enwrap² (in-, en-rap'), v. t. [Prob. for inrap*, enrap*; < in-2, en-2, + rap. Cf. rap.] To transport; enrapture.

For, if such holy song
Inwrap our fancy long,
Time will run back, and fetch the age of gold.

Milton, Nativity, l. 124.

inwrapment, enwrapment (in-, en-rap'mənt), n. [inwrap¹, enwrap¹, + -ment.] 1. The act of inwrapping, or the state of being inwrapped.

—2. That which inwraps; a covering; a wrapper.

They wreathed together a foliage of the fig-tree, and made themselves enwrapments.

Shuckford, The Creation, p. 222.

inwrapped, enwrapped (in-, en-rapt'), p. a. Same as unadorned.

inwreath, enwreath (in-, en-rēw'), v. t.; pret. and pp. inwreathed, enwreathed, ppr. in- wreathing, enwreathing. [in-1, en-1, + wreath.] To surround with or as if with a wreath. Mal-let, Amyntor and Theodora.

inwrought (in-rát'), p. a. [Pp. of inwork.] Wrought or worked in or into; having something (specifically, figures or patterns) worked into it. io¹ (i'ô), interj. [L. ô, = Gr. ô, an exclamation of joy or pleased excitement: cf. O, oh, etc.] A Latin interjection, or exclamation of joy or triumph: sometimes used as a noun in English.

Hark! how around the hills rejoice,
And rocks reflected in the sky, Congrave, Ude on Namur, st. 10.

Io² (i'ô), n. [L. Jo, < Gr. 'Iô.] 1. In myth., a daughter of Inachus, metamorphosed into a heifer and caused to be tormented by a terrible gadfly by Hera, in jealous revenge for the favors of Zeus. See Argus, 1.—2. The innermost of the four satellites of Jupiter.—3. In entom.: (a) A genus of vaneoid butterflies. (b) [l. c.] The peacock butterfly, I. anaxio: used both as the technical specific name and as an English word. (c) [l. c.] A showy and beautiful moth of North America, Hyperchiria io, or Naturnia io, of yellow coloration, with prominent pink and bluish eyes on the hinder wings. The larva is covered with bunches of stinging spines, and feeds on many plants and trees, as Indian corn, cotton, hops, clover, elm, and cherry. The eggs are laid in clusters on the under side of the leaf.

Hyperchiria io, natural size.

iodal (i'ô-dal), n. [< iod(ine) + al(cohol).] An oleaginous liquid ($\text{C}_2\text{H}_5\text{CHO}$) obtained by the action of alcohol and nitric acid on iodine. Its effects are said to be similar to those of chloral.

iodargyrite (i-ô-dâr'ji-rít), n. Same as iodysilic.

iodate (i'ô-dât), n. [< iod(ine) + ate¹.] Any compound of iodic acid with a base. The iodates form deflagrating mixtures with combustibles, and when they are heated to low redness oxygen gas is disengaged, and a metallic iodide remains. They are all of very sparing solubility, excepting the iodates of the alkalis. See iodic.

iodate² (i'ô-dât), v. t.; pret. and pp. iodated, ppr. iodating. [< iod(ine) + ate².] To combine, impregnate, or treat with iodine.

One variety of iodated paper. Ure, Dict., III. 567.

iodic (i-od'ik), a. [< iod(ine) + ic.] Containing iodine: as, iodic silver. Iodic acid, HIO_3 , an acid formed by the action of oxidizing agents on iodine in presence of water or alkalis. Iodic acid is a white semi-transparent solid substance, which is isodorous, but has an astringent, sour taste. It is very soluble in water, and detonates when heated with charcoal, sugar, and sulphur. Deoxidizing agents reduce it partly to hydriodic acid, which then reacts upon the remaining iodic acid to form iodine and water. It combines with metallic oxides, forming salts, which are named iodates, and those, like the chlorates, yield oxygen when heated, and an iodide remains.

iodide (i'ô-did or -dîd), n. [< iod(ine) + ide¹.] A compound of iodine with an element more electropositive than itself: thus, sodium iodide, etc.—Iodide of ethyl, ethyl iodide ($\text{C}_2\text{H}_5\text{I}$), a colorless liquid insoluble in water, having a penetrating ethereal odor and taste, used in medicine, by inhalation, to introduce iodine rapidly into the system.

iodiferous (i-ô-dif'ê-rus), a. [< iod(ine) + L. ferre = E. bear¹.] Yielding iodine: as, iodiferous plants.

iodine (i'ô-din or -dîn), n. [= F. iodine, < Gr. iô-dys, like a violet (< lov, a violet, = L. viola, > ult. E. violet), + -ine².] Chemical symbol, I; atomic weight, 126.85. In chem., a peculiar non-metallic elementary solid substance, forming one of the group of halogens. It exists in the water of the ocean and mineral springs, in marine mollusks, in seaweeds, and in the nitrate deposits of western South America. At ordinary temperatures it is a solid crystalline body. Its color is bluish-black or grayish-black, with a metallic luster. It is often in scales, resembling those of mica, or iron ore; sometimes in brilliant rhomboidal plates or in elongated octahedrons. The specific gravity of solid iodine is 4.947. It fuses at 235° F., and boils at 347°. Its vapor, which is very dense, is of an exceedingly rich violet color, a character to which it owes the name of iodine. It is a non-conductor of electricity, and, like oxygen and chlorine, is electronegative. It is very sparingly soluble in water, but dissolves copiously in alcohol and in ether, forming dark-brown liquids. It possesses strong powers of combination, and forms with the pure metals and most of the simple non-metallic substances compounds which are named iodides. With hydrogen and oxygen it forms iodic acid; combined with hydrogen it forms hydriodic acid. Like chlorine, it destroys vegetable colors, but with less energy. Iodine has a very acrid taste, and its odor somewhat resembles that of chlorine. It is an irritant poison, and is of great service in medicine. It is used externally as a counter-irritant, the skin or mucous membrane being painted with the tincture; and also internally, both as iodine and in combination, especially as iodide of potash. Starch is a characteristic test of iodine, forming with it a deep-blue compound. This test is so delicate that a solution of starch dropped into water containing less than a millionth part of iodine is tinged blue.—Iodine green. See green.—Iodine scarlet. Same as pure scarlet (which see, under scarlet).

iodism (i'ô-dizm), n. [< iod(ine) + -ism.] In pathol., a peculiar derangement of the system produced by the excessive use of iodine or its salts.

iodize (i'ô-diz), v. t.; pret. and pp. iodized, ppr. iodizing. [< iod(ine) + -ize.] 1. In med., to treat with iodine; affect with iodine.—2. In photog., to impregnate, as collodion, with iodine; add iodine or an iodide to.

iodizer (i'ô-di-zér), n. [< iodize + -er¹.] One who or that which iodizes.

iodobromite (i'ô-dô-brô'mit), n. [< iod(ine) + brom(ide) + -ite².] A sulphur-yellow mineral, occurring in isometric crystals at Dernbach, Nassau, consisting of the iodide, bromide, and chlorid of lead.

iodoform (i'ô-dô-fôrm), n. [< iod(ine) + (chloro)form.] A solid compound (CHI_3) analogous to chloroform, produced by the action of iodine with alkalis or alkali carbonates on alcohol. It forms lemon-yellow crystals, with an odor like that of saffron, which are somewhat volatile at the ordinary temperature, insoluble in water, but readily soluble in alcohol and ether. It is an anesthetic and antiseptic, and is used in surgical dressings.

iodoform (i'ô-dô-fôrm), v. t. [< iodoform, n.] To apply iodoform to; impregnate with iodoform.

iodoformize (i'ô-dô-fôrm'iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. iodoformized, ppr. iodoformizing. [< iodoform + -ize.] To iodoform.

iodohydric (i'ô-dô-hî'drik), a. [< iod(ine) + hydr(ogen) + -ic.] Same as hydriodic.

iodol (i'ô-dol), n. [< iod(ine) + -ol.] A yellowish-brown substance ($\text{C}_4\text{H}_4\text{NI}$) composed of long prismatic crystals, used in medicine as an antiseptic.

iodometric (i'ô-dô-met'rik), a. [< iod(ine) + metric.] In chem., measured by iodine: used of analytical operations in which the quantity of a substance is determined by its reaction with a standard solution of iodine.

iodysilic (i-od'i-sit), n. [< iod(ine) + Gr. ârrhinos, silver, + -ite² (cf. argyrite).] Native silver iodide, a sectile mineral of a bright-yellow color and resinous or adamantine luster, occurring sparingly in Chili and elsewhere.

iolite (i'ô-lit), n. [< Gr. iov, a violet, + lithos, stone.] A silicate of magnesium, aluminium, and iron, a mineral of a violet-blue color with a shade of purple or black. It often occurs in six-sided rhombic prisms. The smoky-blue pectolite and tschermakite are varieties. Iolite is very subject to chemical alteration, and many names have been given to the more or less distinct compounds so formed, as pinite, yakinita, ginkinita, etc. Also called dichroite (because the tints along the two axes are unlike) and cordierite.

ion (i'ôn), n. [< Gr. iôn, neut. iôn, ppr. of lêvai, L. ire, go: see iter.] One of the elements of an electrolyte, or compound body undergoing electrolyzation. Those elements of an electrolyte which are evolved at the anode are termed anions, and those which are evolved at the cathode anions, and when these are spoken of together they are called ions. Thus, water when electrolyzed evolves two ions, oxygen and hydrogen, the former being an anion, the latter a cation.

-ion. [*ME. -ion, -ioun, -iun (-on, -un), < OF. -ion, -iun (-on, -un), F. -ion (-on) = Fr. -ion, -io = Sp. -ion = Pg. -ão = It. -ione, < L. iôn(-), a common suffix forming (a) abstract (sum.) nouns from verbs, either from the inf., as legiō(-n), a legion, < legere, collect, optiō(-n), a choice, < optare, choose, suspiō(-n), suspicion, < suspiciere, suspect, etc., or from adjectives, as communiō(-n), communion, < communis, common, uniō(-n), union, < unus, one, etc.; or (b) appellative (mass.) nouns, of various origin, as centuriō(-n), a centurion, histriō(-n), an actor, etc. See -ion, -ation, etc.] 1. A suffix in abstract nouns (many also used as concrete) of Latin origin, as in legion, option, option, region, religion, suspicion, communion, union, etc.—2. A similar suffix occurring in a few concrete nouns designating per-* sons or things, as in centurion, historion, union (a pearl), onion, partition, etc.

Ionian (i-ô'ni-an), a. and n. [< L. Ionius, < Gr. 'Iônios, < 'Iônia, Ionia, 'Iōnēs, the Ionians.] 1. a. Relating to Ionia or to the Ionians; Ionic. —Ionian dialect, mode, etc. See the nouns. —Ionian school. Same as ionic school (which see, under ionic). —Ionian sea, that part of the Mediterranean which lies between Greece and Sicily.

II. n. A member of one of the three or (as some count) four great divisions of the ancient Greek race, the others being the Dorians and Æolians, or the Dorians, Æolians, and Achæans. Originally they inhabited Attica, Eubœa, and the district in the Peloponnesus afterward known as Achæa. From Attica they spread over most of the islands (the Ionian Islands) of the Ægean sea, and settled in Ionia on the coast of Asia Minor. They founded various colonies on the shores of the Euxine, Propontis, and the Ægean, and in the west they planted Catana and other colonies in Sicily; Rhegium, Cumæ, etc., in Italy; and Marcellæ and others in Gaul. The Asiatic Ionians especially did much to introduce Asiatic civilization and luxury into Greece, and were often reproached by the other Greeks with effeminacy. Also (rarely) called Iætan, and in the plural Iones.

Ionic (i-on'ik), a. and n. [< L. Iōnicus, < Gr. 'Iōnikós, < 'Iônia, Ionia: see Ionian.] I. a. 1. Of, pertaining, or relating to the Iones or Ionians as a race, or to one of the regions named from them, Ionia or the Ionian Islands: as, the Ionic dialect or school; the Ionic order.—2. In anc. pros., constituting a foot of two long syllables followed by two shorts, or vice versa; pertaining to or consisting of such feet: as, an ionic foot, colon, verse, or system; ionic rhythm.—Axis of the ionic capital. See axis.—Ionic dialect, the most important of the three main branches of the ancient Greek language (the other two being the Doric and Æolic), including the Attic. Homer's Iliad was written in old Ionic, the works of Herodotus in New Ionic, and nearly all the great Greek works in its later form, the Attic.—Ionic foot, in pros., a foot consisting of four syllables, either two short and two long or two long and two short. —Ionic meter, a meter consisting of ionic feet. —Ionic mode. See mode.—Ionic order, in arch., one of the three Greek orders, so named from the Ions race, by whom it was held to have been developed and perfected. The distinguishing characteristic of this order is the volute of its capital. In the true Ionic the volutes have the same form on the front and rear, and are connected on the flanks by an ornamental roll or scroll, except in the case of the corner capitals, which have three volutes on their two outer faces, that on the external angle projecting diagonally. The debased Roman form of Ionic gave the capital four diagonal volutes, and curved the sides of the abacus. The spiral fillets of the Greek volute are continued along the face of the capital, beneath the abacus, whereas in the Roman Ionic Architecture.—Temple of Wingless Victory, on the Acropolis of Athens.

imitation the origin of the fillet is behind the echinus. The shaft, including the base and the capital to the bottom of the volute, is normally about 9 diameters high, and is generally fluted in 24 flutes, separated by fillets. The bases used with this order are various. The Attic base often occurs, and is the most beautiful and appropriate. The architrave is normally formed in three bands, each projecting slightly beyond that below it, the whole crowned by a rich molding. The frieze frequently bears figures in relief. The cornices fall under three classes: the simple but richly molded and strongly projecting Greek cornices, and the less refined dentil and modillion (Roman) cornices. The best examples of the Ionic order are the temple on the Ilissus, and the Erechtheum and the temple of Wingless Victory on the Acropolis of Athens. The details of the Erechtheum are notable for the delicate elaboration of their ornament: but the interior capitals of the Propylæa are, in their simple purity of line, perhaps the noblest remains of the Greek Ionic. The order was probably evolved by the Ionian Greeks from forms found in Assyrian architecture. See also cut under Erechtheum.—Ionic sect or school, the earliest series of Greek philosophers, Thales (who is said to have predicted an eclipse B.C. 600), Anaximander, Anaximenes (in the sixth century B.C.), all of Miletus, and their later adherents. They are called the early physiologists, because they mainly studied the material universe, and that in a rudely observational manner. The characteristic of the school is the prominence they gave to the question out of what the world is made (Thales said water, Anaximenes air), believing apparently that, this answered, the secret of the universe was solved. They made little of efficient causes, and, as distinct from living agents, probably had no conception of such.—Ionic school of painting, in the history of ancient Greek art, an important school of painters in the latter part of the fifth and the early part of the fourth century B. C.; so called as distinguished from the Attic and Sicyonian schools. Its greatest masters were Zeuxis and Parrhasius.

II. n. In pros.: (a) An Ionic foot. (b) An Ionic verse or meter.

Ionicize (i-on'ī-sīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. Ionized, ppr. Ionizing. [< Ionic + -ize.] To make Ionic; confer an Ionic form upon.

He essays to dissect out a primitive Aecle core, afterward Ionized, and enlarged by interpolations and accretions. New Princeton Rev., V. 412.

Ionidium (i-ō-nid'ī-um), n. [NL., irreg. < Gr. ion, a violet, + dim. suffix -idium.] A genus of plants of the natural order Violariaceae, tribe Violae, characterized by the sepals not being extended at the base, and by the five unequal petals, one of which is much larger than the rest. They are herbs, or rarely shrubs, with alternate or sometimes opposite leaves and generally solitary axillary or racemed flowers. About 50 species are known, of which 4 are found in tropical Asia and Africa, 6 in Australia, and the rest in America, chiefly tropical. The roots of several of the species contain an emetic, and have been used as a substitute for Ipecacuanha. I. parviflorum and I. Papaya are so used by the South Americans. The so-called white Ipecacuanha is I. Ipecacuanha. I. concolor (Solen concolor), the green violet, is a common plant of the eastern United States.

Ionism (i'ō-nizm), n. [< Gr. as if iōnismos, < iōnizein, speak in Ionic fashion: see Ionice.] An Ionic idiom; the use of Ionic idioms or dialect. Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 205.

Ionist (i'ō-nist), n. [< Ion(ice) + -ist.] One who uses Ionic idioms or dialect. Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 209.

ionite (i'ō-nīt), n. [< Ione (see def.) + -ite.] A mineral resin found in Lone valley, Amador county, California.

Ionize (i'ō-nīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. Ionized, ppr. Ionizing. [< Gr. iōnizein, speak in Ionic fashion, < iōnizō, Ionians: see Ionice.] To Ionicize. Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 234.

Ionornis (i-ō-nōr'nīs), n. [NL., irreg. < Gr. ion, violet (implying purple), + ornis, a bird.] A notable genus of ralliform birds, the American sultans, hyacinths, or porphyry gallinules, family Rallidae and subfamily Gallinulinae, containing such species as the purple gallinule of the United States and warmer parts of America, I. martinica. Reichenbach, 1853.

iopterous (i-op'tē-rus), a. [< Gr. ion, a violet, + pteron, a feather.] Having wings of a violet color, as an insect.

iota (i-ō'tā), n. [< L. iota, < Gr. iōta, < Phoenician (Heb.) yōdh. In earlier E. use with extended meaning as jot: see jot.] 1. The name of the Greek letter I, ι, corresponding to the Latin and English I, i. In the latter form i, and the Hebrew form י, the letter was the smallest of the alphabet. When following a long vowel (as part of a diphthong), in Greek as now written, it is placed under the vowel to which it is attached, being then called iota subscript, as in υι, ει. 2. A very small quantity; a tittle; a jot.

You will have the goodness then to put no stuffing of any description in my coat; you will not pinch me an iota tighter across the waist than is natural to that part of my body. Buhoer, Pelham, xlv.

iotacism (i-ō'tā-sizm), n. [< L. iotacismus, < Gr. iotacismus, too much use of iota, repetition of iota, < iōta, iota: see iota.] Conversion of other vowel sounds into that of iota (English i); specifically, in pronunciation of Greek, the practice of giving the sound of iota (i) also to the vowels η and υ, and to the diphthongs ει, υι, αι, and υι indiscriminately. This is the rule in modern Greek. Also called iotacism. Opposed to etacism. Compare lambdaism, rhoacism.

Unquestionably the most characteristic feature of the present pronunciation is its iotacism. J. Hadley, Essays, p. 139.

iotacist (i-ō'tā-sist), n. [< iotac(ism) + -ist.] One who advocates the system of Greek pronunciation called iotacism.

ioterium (i-ō-tē-ri-um), n.; pl. ioteria (-ī). [NL., < Gr. iōtē, poison, + reptō, pierce.] In entom., a poison-gland, as that at the base of the sting in a hymenopterous insect, or at the base of the chelicera in a spider. See cut under chelicera.

IOU (i'ō'ū), n. [So called from the letters I O U (standing for I owe you) used in the acknowledgment.] A memorandum or acknowledgment of debt less formal than a promissory note, and in England sometimes containing only these letters, with the sum owed and the signature of the debtor. It is not a promissory note, because no direct promise to pay is expressed.

Hee teacheth of fellows play tricks with their creditors, who instead of payments write I O U, and so scuffle many an honest man out of his goods.

Boston, Courtier and Countryman, p. 9.

Mr. Micawber placed his I. O. U. in the hands of Tradition. . . I am persuaded that this was quite the same to Mr. Micawber as paying the money.

Dickens, David Copperfield, xxxvi.

-ious, A termination consisting of the suffix -ous with a preceding original or euphonic vowel i. It formerly alternated with -eous. See -eous and -ous.

Iowan (i'ō-wan), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to Iowa, a State of the United States lying west of the Mississippi.

II. n. An inhabitant of Iowa.

Ipecac (ip'ē-kak), n. [An abbr. of ipecacuanha.] Same as ipecacuanha.—American ipecac, an herb of the genus Gillenia.—Indian ipecac, the root of a twining, shrubby, asclepiadaceous plant, Tylophora anthelmica, used in India as a substitute for ipecacuanha.

ipecacuanha (ip'ē-kak-ū-an''), n. [< Pg. ipecacuanha (= Sp. ipecacuana), < Braz. (as usually given) ipecaquén, the native name of the plant, said to mean 'smaller roadside sick-making plant.'] The dried root of Cephaelis Ipecacuanha, a small shrubby plant, a native of Brazil, the United States of Colombia, and other parts of South America. There are three varieties, the brown, red, and gray, all products of the same plant, and their differences are due to little more than age, place of growth, or mode of drying. The root is hard, and breaks short and granular (not fibrous), exhibiting a resinous, waxy, or farinaceous interior, white or grayish. It is emetic, purgative, and diaphoretic, and is much used in medicine. In large doses (1.5 grams) as an emetic, in smaller doses as a depressant and nauseant, in still smaller doses as a diaphoretic, and in the smallest as a stimulant to the stomach to check vomiting and produce appetite. Its physiological effects seem to depend on the presence of the alkaloid emetin. The root of Cephaelis Ipecacuanha is the only thing recognized as ipecac by the British or the United States Pharmacopoeia, but the name has been applied to various other plants with emetic properties, as to the root of Psychotria emetica, also called Peruvian, striated, or black ipecacuanha, said to contain emetin; also to the roots of various species of Rhazadenia, called white, amygdaceous, or undulated ipecacuanha. The name American ipecacuanha or ipecacuana is given to Euphorbia Ipecacuanha. Gillenia is also called American ipecac. See cut under Cephaelis.

Iphidea (i-fid'ē-ē), n. [NL., appar. as Iphis (Iphid-) + -ea.] 1. A genus of chrysomelid beetles. Baly, 1865.—2. A genus of brachiopods. Billings, 1874.

Iphigenia (if'ī-jē-nī-ē), n. [NL., < L. Iphigenia, < Gr. Iphigēnia, in legend, daughter of Agamemnon.] 1. A genus of bivalve mollusks of the family Donacidae, comprising Iphigenia brasilensis and related species. Schumacher, 1817.—2. A subgenus of Clausilia. Gray, 1821.

Iphiona (if-i-ō'nī-ē), n. [NL. (Cassini, 1817), perhaps irreg. < Gr. Iphion, a kind of herb.] A genus of composite plants, type of Schultze's division Iphionea of the Euconyzeae, now referred to the tribe Inuloidae, subtribe Eumuleae, and by some regarded as a section of the genus Inula, to which the elecampane belongs, but from which it differs by its somewhat double pappus, the outer consisting of short bristles. It embraces about 14 species, inhabiting the Levant, Arabia, central Asia, tropical and South Africa, and the Mascarene Islands.

Iphionea (if-i-ō'nī-ē), n. pl. [NL. (C. H. Schultz, 1843), < Iphiona + -ea.] A division of the Compositae, typified by the genus Iphiona, now embraced in the tribe Inuloidae (which see).

Iphis (i'fis), n. [NL., < L. Iphis, < Gr. Ἰφίς (Iphi, Iphi-), a masc. and fem. name.] 1. A genus of brachyurous crustaceans of the family Leucosiidae. W. E. Leach, 1817.—2. A genus of click-beetles or elaterids, having several large Madagascan species. Laporte, 1836.

Iphisa (if'ī-sā), n. [NL. (Gray, 1851); cf. Iphis.] A genus of lizards constituting the family Iphididae. I. elegans is a species inhabiting northern Brazil and Guiana, of an olive-brown color marbled with black, the under parts yellowish white. The feet are small, with the inner finger clawless; the eyes are large.

Iphisa elegans.

Iphididae (i-fis'id-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Iphis + -idae.] A family of South American lizards, based by J. E. Gray upon the genus Iphis. It is now merged in the family Teliidae.

Iphthimus (if'thi-mus), n. [NL., < Gr. ἰφθίμος, strong, < ἰφ, strongly, earlier fip*, perhaps dat. of ic, fic* = L. vis, strength, might: see inion, vim.] A genus of tenebrionid beetles, founded by Truqui in 1837. I. opacus is a species about three fourths of an inch long, with coarsely punctured thorax and elytra. It is found under bark.

Ipsa (i-pī'nē), n. pl. [NL. (Erichson, 1843), < Ips + -ina.] A subfamily of clavicorn beetles, of the family Nitidulidae, whose typical genus is Ips, mainly characterized by the protuberance of the epistoma.

ipocrast, n. An obsolete form of hippocras.

ipocrisiet, ipocrite, n. Obsolete (Middle English) forms of hypocrisis, hypocrite.

Ipomaea (ip-ō-mē-ē), n. [NL., improp. Ipomaea (Linnaeus), < Ips, a name given by Linnaeus to Convolvulus, bindweed (< Gr. ἵψ, a worm: see Ips), + Gr. μαία, like.] A genus of dicotyledonous gamopetalous plants, of the natural order Convolvulaceae, tribe Convolvuleae, characterized by having a 2- to 4-celled ovary, which is 4-ovuled, or rarely 3-celled and 6-ovuled. The capsule is 2- to 4-valved, rarely with an operculum, or rupturing irregularly. The stems are prostrate or erect, herbaceous or woody and climbing, and the leaves alternate, usually entire. The corolla is hypocrateriform or campanulate and 5-lobed. About 400 species have been described, but according to Benth and Hooker this number should be reduced to 300 good species. They occur in the warm parts of the world. The most important product of the genus is the sweet potato, furnished by the roots of I. Batatas, which is very extensively cultivated in all tropical countries. Jalap, a well-known medicine, is obtained from the roots of I. purga, a native of Mexico. The tie-jalap, male-jalap, or jalap-tops is I. Orizabensis, and I. Turpethum is the Indian jalap. The wild potato of the West Indies is I. fastigiata, and I. Pes-Caryae is the seaside potato of the East and West Indies. I. Quamoclit, the cypress-vine, Indian-pink, American red bell-flower, or sweet-william of the Barbados, was originally a native of tropical America, but is now widely naturalized. I. tuberosa of the East and West Indies is the Spanish arbor-vine, Spanish woodbine, or seven-year vine. I. purpurea, a native of tropical America, is the common morning-glory of cultivation. I. Nil is also cultivated for ornament. I. pandurata of the eastern United States is the wild potato-vine or man-of-the-earth, the mecha-mech of the North American Indians. I. Gerrardi is the wild cotton of Natal. Also written Ipomea.

Flowering Branch of Wild Potato-vine (Ipomoea pandurata). a, root; b, fruit; c, seed.

ipotamet, ipotaynet, n. Middle English forms of hippotame.

ipocrast, n. An obsolete form of hippocras.

Ips (ips), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1776), < Gr. ἵψ, a worm that eats horn and wood; also one that eats vine-buds.] A genus of clavicorn beetles, of the family Nitidulidae, having the antennal club three-jointed, labrum connate with epistoma, anterior coxae open, and thorax not margined at base. Ips fasciatus is a common United States species, shining-black with two pairs of yellow bands on the elytra. I. ferrugineus is a European species.

Ips fasciatus. (Line shows natural size.)

ipsa dixit (ip'sē dik'it). [< L. ipsa dixit, he himself has said (so): ipse (OL. also ipse), he himself (< is, he (see hel), + -pse for -pte, an emphasizing suffix, 'self,' 'same,' connected with potis, powerful: see potent); dixit, 3d pers. perf. ind. of dicere, say: see diction.] An assertion without proof; a dogmatic expression of opinion; a dictum.

It requires something more than Brougham's flippant ipse dixit to convince me that the office of chancellor is such a sinecure and bagatelle.

Grindle, Memoirs, March 15, 1831.

To acquiesce in an ipse dixit.

Whately.

That day of ipse dixit, I trust, is over.

J. H. Newman, Letters (1876), p. 146.

ipsedixitism (ip-sē-dik-'nit-izm), n. [ipse dixit + -ism.] The practice of dogmatic assertion. [Rare.]

It was also under Weigel's influence that he [Pufendorf] developed that independence of character which never bent before other writers, however high their position, and which showed itself in his profound disdain for ipse dixitism, to use the piquant phrase of Bentham.

Kneys, Brit., XX, 99.

ipsissima verba (ip-sis-'i-mā vēr-'bā), [ip-sissima, neut. pl. of ipsissimus, the very same, superl. of ipse, he himself, the same (see ipse dixit); verba, pl. of verbum, word: see verb.] The very same words; the self-same words; the precise language, word for word.

It is his [the medical man's] duty to make, on the spot, a note of the words actually used. There should be no paraphrase or translation of them, but they should be the ipsissima verba of the dying man.

A. S. Taylor, Med. Jurisprudence, p. 7.

ipso facto (ip-sō fak-'tō), [ipso, abl. neut. of ipse, he himself (see ipse dixit); facto, abl. of factum, fact: see fact.] By the fact itself; by that very fact.

The religion which is not the holiest conceivable by the man who holds it is condemned ipso facto.

F. P. Cobbe, Peak in Darien, p. 6.

i. q. An abbreviation of Latin idem quod, 'the same as.'

ir-1. Assimilated form (in Latin, etc.) of in-2 before r. In the following words, in the etymology, the prefix ir-1 is usually referred directly to the original in-2 or in-2.

ir-2. Assimilated form (in Latin, etc.) of in-3 before r. In the following words, in the etymology, the prefix ir-2 is usually referred directly to the original in-3.

Ir. 1. An abbreviation of Irish.—2. In chem., the symbol for iridium.

iracund (i-'rā-kund), a. [= OF. iracund = Sp. iracundo = It. iracundo, iracundo, < L. iracundus, angry, < ira, anger: see ire.] Angry; irritable; passionate. [Rare.]

A spiteful cross-grained, fantastic, iracund, incompatible. Carlyle, Misc., IV, 87.

iracundiously (i-'rā-kun-'di-us-ly), adv. [iracundious* (cf. OF. iracundieux), for iracundus* (cf. OF. iracundus) (< L. iracundus, angry: see iracund) + -ly.] Angriily; passionately.

Drawing out his knife most iracundiously.

Nashe, Lenten Stauffs (Harl. Misc., VI, 166).

irade (i-'rā-de), n. [Turk. irade, a decree, command, order, will, volition.] A written decree of the Sultan of Turkey.

For the ministers were already obliged to exercise many of the attributes of the Sovereign, and had constantly to act upon their own authority in cases where an imperial irade was strictly requisite.

Nineteenth Century, XXIII, 292.

I-rail (i-'rāl), n. An iron rail shaped in section like the letter I; a reversible rail.

irain, n. A Middle English form of arain.

Iranian (i-'rā-ni-an), a. and n. [< Iran (see def.), < Pers. Irān, Iran, Persia (see Aryan), + -ian.] 1. a. Relating or pertaining to Iran or the people of Iran, the ancient name of the region lying between Kurdistan and India, and the modern Persian name of Persia: specifically applied to a branch of Indo-European or Aryan tongues, including Persian, Zend, Pehlvi, Parsi or Pazend, and cognate tongues. The word is derived from the legendary history of the Persian race given in Firdausi's "Book of Kings," according to which Iran and Tur were two of three brothers, from whom the tribes Iran (Persians) and Turan (Turks and their cognate tribes) sprang. See Turanian.

The word Iranian, as yet unappropriated as an alphabetic designation, is perhaps less unsatisfactory than any other name that can be found, since it may fairly be applied to the oldest as well as to the more modern forms of the alphabet of the old Persian empire.

Isaac Taylor, The Alphabet, II, 220.

II. n. An inhabitant of Iran; a member of one of the races speaking Iranian languages.

For the ornamentation of their buildings, externally, and to some extent internally, the Iranians, imitating their Semitic predecessors, employed sculpture.

G. Rawlinson, Origin of Nations, p. 102.

Iranic (i-'ran-'ik), a. [< NL. Iranian, < Iran: see Iranian.] Of or pertaining to ancient Iran or to its inhabitants; Iranian in the widest sense: as, the Iranic family of languages.

irascibility (i-'ras-i-bil-'ti), n. [= F. irascibilité = Pr. iracibilitat = Sp. irascibilidad = Pg. irascibilidade = It. irascibilità; as irascible + -ity: see -ility.] The quality of being irascible; irritability of temper.

The irascibility of this class of tyrants is generally exerted upon potty provocations. Johnson, Rambler, No. 112.

irascible (i-'ras-'i-bl), a. [< F. irascible = Sp. irascible = Pg. irascível = It. irascibile, < LL. irascibilis, < L. irasci, to be angry, < ira, anger: see ire.] 1. Susceptible of anger; easily provoked or inflamed with resentment; choleric: as, an irascible man; an irascible temper.

Middleton when young was a Dilettante in music; and Dr. Bentley, in contempt, applied the epithet "fiddling Conyers." Had the irascible Middleton broken his violin about the head of the learned Grocius, and thus terminated the quarrel, the epithet had then cost Bentley's honour much less than it afterwards did.

D'Israeli, Quarrels of Authors, p. 395.

2. Excited by or arising from anger; manifesting a state of anger or resentment.

I know more than one instance of irascible passions subdued by a vegetable diet. Arbuthnot, Aliments.

I have given it as my opinion that the irascible emotion and the strong antipathies are to a certain extent outbursts of the sentiment of power, resorted to, like the tender outburst, as a soothing and consoling influence under painful irritation.

A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 467.

=Syn. 1. irascible, irritable, passionate, hasty, touchy, testy, splenetic, snappish, peppery, fiery, choleric. Irascible indicates quicker and more intense bursts of anger than irritable, and less powerful, lasting, or manifest bursts than passionate.

irascibleness (i-'ras-'i-bl-nes), n. Irascibility. irascibly (i-'ras-'i-bl), adv. In an irascible manner.

irate (i-'rāt'), a. [= Pg. irado = It. irato, < L. iratus, angered, angry, < irasci, be angry: see irascible.] Excited to anger; made angry; enraged; incensed.

Here his words filled him, and the irate colonel, with glaring eyes and purple face, . . . stood . . . speechless before his young enemy. Thackeray, Virginiana, x.

irchent, irchont, irchount. Obsolete forms of urechin.

ire (i-'re), n. [< ME. ire, yre, abbr. of iren, iron.] Iron. [Now only prov. Eng.]

The cruel ire, red as any glode.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1189.

He let nine platus of ire,

Sundel thilne and brode.

MS. Laud, 108, f. 92. (Hallivell.)

Euerych cart that bryngeth yre other steel, twey pans.

English Glos (E. E. T. S.), p. 53.

ire (i-'r), n. [< ME. ire, yre, < OF. ira = Pr. Sp. ig. it. ira, < L. ira, anger, wrath.] Anger; wrath; keen resentment.

When Antenor had tolde & his tale endit,

The kyng was caste into a clyene yre.

And wrothe at his wordes as a wode lion.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 1860.

My gode fader, tell me this.

What thing is ire? None, it is That in our english wrath is hote.

Gower, Conf. Amant., l. 280.

Language cannot express the awful ire of William the Testy on hearing of the catastrophe at Fort Good Hoop.

Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 222.

=Syn. Vezeation, Indignation, etc. See anger.

ire², v. t. [< ME. iren; < *ire*², n.] To anger; fret; irritate.

Eke to noo tree thaire dropping is delite,

Her breire thorne and her owne kynde it ireth.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 87.

ireful (i-'rūl), a. [< ME. ireful, irefull, iraful; < *ire*² + -ful.] Full of ire; angry; wroth.

An ireful body is neuer quyet, nor in rest where he doth dwell.

One anonce .x. is ix. to many, his malice is so cruell. Quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. cxxx.

The ireful bastard Orleans . . . I soon encountered.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 6, 16.

Many an ireful glance and frown, between,

The angry visage of the Phantom wore.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, l. 105.

irefully (i-'rūl-i), adv. In an ireful or angry manner; angrily; wrathfully.

The people . . . began . . . irefully to champ upon the bit they had taken into their mouths.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, Pref., II.

irefulness (i-'rūl-nes), n. [< ME. irefulness; < ireful + -ness.] The condition of being ireful; wrath; anger; fury.

Some through countenances, and some through irefulness and rashness, . . . rified y^e goods of the Romane citizens. Golding, tr. of Cæsar, fol. 204.

irent, n. and a. A Middle English form of iron. irena (i-'rē-nā), n. [NL. (Horsfield, 1820; later Irene—Boie, 1826), < Gr. Eirēnē, a personification of eirēnē, peace: see Irene.] In ornith., a remarkable genus of old-world passerine birds of uncertain position, type of the subfamily Ireniinae; the so-called fairy bluebirds. They are brilliantly blue and black in color, about as large as robins, with stout, somewhat shrike-like bill, whose nasal fossæ are densely feathered, with rictal and nuchal bristles, and even tail of 12 feathers. There are several species characteristic of the region from India to the Philippines, as I. puella, I. cyanea, and I. turcosa.

Fairy Bluebird (Irena puella).

irenarch (i-'rē-nārk), n. [Also eirenarch; < LL. irenarcha, irenarches, < Gr. eirēnārchēs, < eirēnē, peace (see Irene), + archē, government, rule, < archein, rule.] A justice or guardian of the peace in the eastern part of the Roman empire and under the Eastern and Byzantine empires.

Irene (i-'rē-nē), n. [< Gr. Eirēnē, a personification of eirēnē, peace, quiet.] 1. The fourteenth planetoid, discovered by Hind at London in 1851.—2. In zool.: (a) A genus of scalefishes. Also written Eirene. Eschscholtz, 1820. (b) Same as Irena.

irenic (i-'rē-nik), a. [< Gr. eirēnikós, of or for peace, peaceful, < eirēnē, peace: see Irene.] Promoting or fitted to promote peace; peaceful; pacific: chiefly used in theology. See irenicism and irenicism.

Mark has no distinct doctrinal type, but is catholic, irenic, unsectarian, and neutral as regards the party questions within the apostolic church.

Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, I, § 81.

irenica, n. Plural of irenicism.

irenical (i-'rē-ni-kal), a. [< irenic + -al.] Of the character of an irenicism; conciliatory; irenic: as, irenical theology.

The bishop of Carlisle, . . . whose thoughtful essays are essentially irenical, is an instructive companion.

Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, III, 181.

irenicism (i-'rē-ni-kon), n.; pl. irenica (-kā). [< Gr. eirēnikós, neut. of eirēnikós, of or for peace: see irenic.] 1. A proposition, scheme, or treatise designed to promote peace, especially in the church.

They must, in all likelihood (without any other irenicism), have restored peace to the church.

South.

No doubt it [the Gospel of St. John] is an irenicism of the church, in the highest and best sense of the term; . . . but it is not an irenicism at the expense of truth and facts.

Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, I, § 83.

2. pl. The deacon's litany (diaconica) or great synapte at the beginning of the liturgy of the Greek Church: named from the petitions "In peace let us pray of the Lord . . . For the peace from above . . . For the peace of the whole world . . . let us pray, etc." (response "Kyrie eleison"), with which it opens.

irenics (i-'rē-niks), n. [Pl. of irenic: see -ics.] Irenical theology: opposed to polemics. Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, VI, 650.

Ireniinae (i-'rē-ni-'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Irena + -ina.] A subfamily of birds, typified by the genus Irena, of uncertain systematic position. The Ireniinae have been considered as related to the drongos, shrikes, and placed under Derapidae, as by G. R. Gray (1869) and others, and to the bulbuls, Pycnonotidae, as by Jerdon and Blyth; and later they have been referred to Timeliidae.

Iresine (i-'rē-si-'nē), n. [NL. (Linnæus), so called in ref. to the woolly calyx, < Gr. eiprion, a branch of laurel or olive entwined with fillets of wool, borne in processions at festivals, irreg. < eipos, wool.] A genus of plants of the natural order Amarantaceae, tribe Gomphrenaceae. They are herbs, with opposite petioled leaves and minute scarious white flowers, crowded into clusters or spiked and branching panicles. About 18 species are known, all natives of tropical or subtropical America. I. scolymoides, the blood-leaf, Juba's bush, or Juba's brush, is native from Ohio to Buenos Ayres. Several of the species are cultivated for ornament.

irian (i'ri-ən), a. [< iris (i) + -an.] Same as iridian. [Rare.]

The iris receives the irian nerves.

Dungham.

Iriarte (ir-i-är-tä-ä), n. [NL. (Ruiz and Pavon, 1794), so called from Juan Iriarte, an amateur Spanish botanist.] A genus of tree-palms: same as Ceroxylon.

Iriartea (ir-i-är-tä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1853), < Iriarte + -ea.] A subtribe of palms, typified by the genus Iriartea. It embraces three other genera, which are little more than sections of that genus. They are all natives of tropical America, chiefly of Brazil and the United States of Colombia.

Iriartella (ir-i-är-tel-ä), n. [NL. (Wendland, 1862), < Iriartea + dim. -ella.] A monotypic genus of Amazonian palms, allied to the genus Iriartea, from which it differs in having a slender trunk scarcely an inch thick, and seldom more than 20 feet high. The flowers also differ. The only species, I. setigera, is called the blowing-canoe palm, and is employed by the natives of the Amazon and Rio Negro for making thin blow-pipes for the discharge of poisoned arrows.

Iridam (i'ri-sizm), n. [< Irish (Latinized Irtio) + -ism.] Same as Irishism.

A pretty strong circumstance of Iridam.

H. Walpole, To Mann, April 25, 1743.

Irid (i'rid), n. [< L. iris (i) + -id.] The iris of the eye. [Rare.]

Her friend had quicker vision than herself; and Caroline seemed to think that the secret of her eagle-southern might be read in her dark gray iris.

Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xvii.

2. A plant of the natural order Iridaceae.

Iridaceae (ir-i-dä'-ä-sä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1835), < Iris (i) + -aceae.] Same as Iridae.

Iridaceous (ir-i-dä'-shius), a. [< Iris (i) + -aceous.] Resembling or pertaining to plants of the genus Iris.

Iridaea (ir-i-dä-ä), n. [NL. (Bory de Saint-Vincent, 1829), < Gr. ipis (i) + -aea.] A genus of rose-spired algae growing on rocks in the sea, distinguished by its flat, simple, or loosely divided frond, bearing compound cyatocarps immersed in its substance. I. edulis is called dulse in the south of England. (See dulse.) It is of nutritious quality, and is eaten by fishermen, either raw or pinched between hot irons.

Iridal (i'ri-däl), a. [< iris (i) + -al.] Belonging to or resembling the rainbow.

Descartes came far nearer the true philosophy of the iridal colours. Huxwell.

Iridae (i-rid-ä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Robert Brown, 1810), < Iris (i) + -ae.] A natural order of monocotyledonous plants, which includes 3 tribes, 57 genera, and about 700 species, widely distributed throughout the temperate or warm regions of the world. The Iridae are most abundant in the Mediterranean region and South Africa, and are not rare in America; there are few in Australia and in Asia. They are perennial herbs, with equitant two-ranked leaves and regular or irregular perfect flowers, which are from a spathe of two or more leaves or bracts. The flowers are usually showy, and furnish some of the most highly prized of cultivated plants, among them Iris, Ixia, Oxalis, Gladiolus, etc. Also Iridaceae. See cuts under Oxalis and Iris.

Iridectomy (ir-i-dek'tō-mi), n. [< Gr. ipis (i) + -ektomē, a cutting out, < ek, out, + tēkōmē, taueiv, cut.] In surg., the operation of cutting out a part of the iris, as for the formation of an artificial pupil.

Iridemia (ir-i-de-rē-mi-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -emia, solitude, desolation, absence: see eremia, eremitis.] Absence, partial or complete, of the iris.

Irides, n. Latin plural of iris.

Iridescence (ir-i-des'-sē), v. t. pret. and pp. iridescent, ppr. iridescing. [< iris (i) + -escē.] To be iridescent; exhibit iridescence.

General plumage of metallic lustre, iridescing dark green on most parts. Coues, Key to N. A. Birds, p. 427.

Iridescence (ir-i-des'-sē), n. [< iridescent (i) + -sē.] The condition of being iridescent; exhibition of alternating or intermingling colors like those of the rainbow, as in mother-of-pearl, where it is an effect of interference (see interference, 5); any shimmer of glittering and changeable colors.

The St. Mark's porches are full of doves, that nestle among the marble foliage, and mingle the soft iridescence of their living plumes, changing at every motion, with the tints, hardly less lovely, that have stood unchanged for seven hundred years.

Ruskin, Stones of Venice, II. iv. § 14.

Iridescent (ir-i-des'-sē), a. [< iris (i) + -escent.] Exhibiting or giving out colors like those of the rainbow; gleaming or shimmering with rainbow colors; more generally, glittering with different colors which change according to the light in which they are viewed, without reference to what the colors are; lustrously variegated; of changeable metallic sheen, as certain birds, insects, minerals, glass, fabrics, etc.

The whole texture of . . . (Chaucer's) mind, though its substance seem plain and grave, shows itself at every turn iridescent with poetic feeling like shot silk.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 287.

Iridescent glass, glass having a finely laminated surface that reflects light in colors like mother-of-pearl. Ancient glass long buried exhibits this property as a result of partial decay. Modern glass is made iridescent in imitation of the ancient by treatment with metallic fumes while hot, or with acids under pressure; but such glass is uniformly translucent, and has not the laminated structure and more or less marked opacity of the old. Metals and fabrics also have been made iridescent by chemical treatment. Such metals are sometimes called iridescent metals, while the process is called iridization.

Iridesis (ir-id'-e-sis), n. [NL.] Same as iridodermis.

Iridian (ir-id'-i-ən), a. [< iris (i) + -ian.] In anat., of or pertaining to the iris of the eye: as, iridian colors; iridian muscle, nerve, artery. Also, rarely, irian.

Iridicolor, Iridicolour (ir-i-di-kul'-or), a. [< L. iris (i) + -color (see iris), + color, color: see color.] In zool., reflecting prismatic hues which change as the surface is seen from various directions; iridescent.

Iridine (ir-i-din), a. [< iris (i) + -ine.] Iridescent; rainbow-colored. [Rare.]

The horned-pout, with its pearly iridine breast and iron-brown back.

S. Judd, Margaret, I. 14.

Iriditis (ir-i-di'tis), n. [NL.] Same as iritis.
Iridium (ir-i-di-um), n. [NL., so called because of the varying tints of its salts when passing from one state of oxidation to the other; < Gr. ipis (i) + -ium, a rainbow: see iris.] Chemical symbol, Ir; atomic weight, 193. A metal of silver-white color, belonging to the platinum family, and, so far as known, always present in native platinum. Various analyses of Russian platinum give from a trace to 2½ per cent. of iridium; and analyses of Californian platinum give from 0.85 to 4.20 per cent. of the same. Iridium also occurs combined with osmium, forming what is known as iridosmium or iridosem, which also contains more or less ruthenium and rhodium. (See iridosmium.) Little is known of the qualities of the metal iridium, except as it has been artificially prepared; and even in this way it has never yet been obtained perfectly free from other metals. Iridium as manufactured by Matthiessen, to be used in the alloy of platinum and iridium, at the recommendation of the International Commission of Weights and Measures, for the standard kilogram and meter, had the purest obtained a specific gravity of 22.38. The alloy thus prepared, which contained about 10 per cent. of iridium, is believed to possess those qualities desirable in a standard weight or measure, which is intended to be preserved for all time, in a higher degree than any other known substance or combination of substances. For the geographical distribution of the various members of this group of metals, see platinum.

Iridization (ir-i-di-zä'-shon), n. [< iridize + -ation.] 1. The state of being, or the act or process of rendering, iridescent; exhibition of the colors of the rainbow.

This rainbow was wholly white, without even as much iridization as is noticeable in halos.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV. 288.

2. In pathol., the rainbow-like appearance about a light seen by persons suffering from glaucoma.

Iridize (ir-i-diz), v. t.; pret. and pp. iridized, ppr. iridizing. [< iris (i) + -ize.] To make iridescent, purposely or by the action of slow decay. See iridescent glass, under iridescent.

Iridochoroiditis (ir-i-dō-kō-roi-di'tis), n. [NL., < iris (i) + choroiditis, q. v.] Inflammation of the iris and the choroid coat of the eye.

Iridocyclitis (ir-i-dō-si-kl'i'tis), n. [NL., < iris (i) + cyclitis, q. v.] Inflammation of the iris and the ciliary body of the eye.

Iridodermis (ir-i-dō-dē-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -dermis, a binding together, < deiv, bind.] In surg., the operation of drawing a part of the iris into an incision in the sclerocorneal junction, and fastening it there, for the purpose of changing the position of the pupil. Also iridesis.

Iridodonsis (ir-i-dō-dō-nē-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -dōnē, a shaking (cf. dōnēs, shaken), < dōnē, shake.] Tremulousness of the iris, so that it wavers and trembles on the movement of the eye. It is produced by any cause which withdraws the support of the lens from the edge of the iris, as the removal or dislocation of the lens.

Iridoplegia (ir-i-dō-plē'-jā), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -plegia, a stroke.] Paralysis of the iris.

Iridoprocne (ir-i-dō-prok'nē), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -procne, a rainbow, + Iridoprocne, in legend daughter of Pandion, changed into a swallow.] A genus of Hirundinidae, the type of which is the common white-bellied swallow of the United States, I. bicolor; the iris-swallows: so called from the iridescent quality of the plumage. Coues, 1878.

Iridorhexis (ir-i-dō-rek'-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ipis (i) + -rhexis, a breaking, < rhyssai, break.] In surg., an operation for artificial pupil in cases of firm posterior synechia, in which the pupillary edge of the iris is left attached, while an outer portion is removed.

Iridosamine (ir-i-dō-sā-min), n. [< irid(ium) + oam(ium) + -ine.] Same as iridosmium.

Iridosmium (ir-i-dōs-mi-um), n. [NL., < irid(ium) + osmium.] A native alloy of the metals iridium and osmium, in different proportions, usually containing also some rhodium, ruthenium, platinum, etc. It crystallizes in the hexagonal system, has a tin-white to steel-gray color, and a specific gravity varying from 19.3 to 21, and is nearly as hard as quartz. It is found in minute flat scales with platinum in the Ural mountains, South America, and Australia, and also in northern California. Iridosmium is fusible with great difficulty, and resists all ordinary chemical reagents. It has a limited use for the pointing of gold pens. Also osmiodium.

Iridotomy (ir-i-dō-tō-mi), n. [< Gr. ipis (i) + -tōmē, a cutting.] Incision of the iris.

Iris (i'ris), n.; pl. irides, irides (i'ris-es, i'ri-dēs). [ME. iris, a precious stone; = F. iris = Sp. Pg. iris = It. iride, < L. iris, < Gr. ipis, a rainbow ('ipis, L. iris, the goddess of the rainbow), the iris of the eye, a kind of Ily.] 1. The rainbow.—2. [cap.] In classical myth., the goddess of the rainbow and messenger of the gods, attached especially to Hera. She was considered as a radiant maiden borne in swift flight on golden wings, and was often represented with the herald's attributes of Hermes—the talaria and caduceus. Hence sometimes used for any messenger.

Let me hear from thee;
For whoso'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., III. 2. 407.

3. [cap.] The seventh planetoid, discovered by Hind at London in 1847.—4. An appearance resembling a rainbow; an appearance of the hues of a rainbow, as seen in sunlight spray, the spectrum of sunlight, etc.; any iridescence.

In the Spring a livelier iris changes on the burnish'd dove.
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

5†. A precious stone.

It [a vyne made of fyne gold] hath many clustres of grapes, somme white, somme grene, . . . the white ben of cristalle and of berylle and of iris.

Manderly, Travels, p. 212.

6. In anat., a contractile colored curtain suspended vertically in the aqueous humor of the eye, between the cornea and the lens, separating the anterior and posterior chambers, which intercommunicate through the pupil. The iris gives the color to the eye, by the presence or absence of pigment, and regulates, by contraction and dilatation of its aperture, the amount of light admitted to the eye. The movements of the iris, and consequently the size and shape of the pupil, are effected by two sets of muscular fibers, circular and radiating. The circular fibers which contract the pupil are under the control of the third cranial nerve, while the innervation of the radiating fibers is through the cervical sympathetic. The pupil contracts when the retina is stimulated by light, and on convergence or on accommodation. The pupil dilates on stimulation of the skin. When its contraction is uniform, the pupil always remains circular, as in man; in other cases, as that of the cat, the pupil is a narrow slit when contracted, though circular when dilated; in others, again, the pupil has a more constant oval, elliptical, oblong, or other shape. Muscular action of the iris is usually automatic, depending upon the stimulus of light; but many animals, as birds, have striped and probably voluntary iridian muscles. Some drugs affect the iris powerfully and specifically: thus, opium contracts and belladonna dilates the pupil. Great as is the range of color in the human iris, from light bluish and grayish tints through all shades of brown to blackish, it is slight in comparison with that of birds, where not only the browns, but bright reds, greens, and blues are found, and sometimes pure white. The iris of albinos is generally pink, being devoid of pigment, and consequently displaying the color of the delicate blood-vessels. The pupil normally appears black, the dark coat of the back of the eyeball being seen through this aperture. See cuts under eye.

In these [dark-eyed hawks] the wings are pointed, the second feather in the wing is the longest, and the irides are dark-brown.

Buysse, Brt., II. 6.

7. In entom., the first or inner ring of an ocellated spot, adjoining the pupil, being a light-colored circle with a dark center and outer bor-dec.—8. [cop.] [NL. (Linnaeus).] A genus of monocotyledonous plants of the natural order Iridaceae, tribe Moeraceae, having the perianth 6-parted, the 3 outer divisions spreading or reflexed, and the 3 inner smaller and erect. The pod is 3- to 6-angled. They are perennial herbs with sword-shaped or grassy leaves and generally large and showy purple, yellow, or white flowers. About 100 species are known, natives of Europe, northern Africa, and temperate Asia and America. They are widely known in cultivation under the name of flower-de-luce (flower-de-luce). I. Germanica being the common cultivated form. The wild species are very generally known in America as blue flag, I. versicolor being the dwarf iris, and I. cristata of nearly the same range is the crested dwarf iris. I. pseudacorus of Europe and Russetia Aila is the yellow iris or yellow flag. The roots possess astrigent qualities, and the seeds when roasted are used in Great Britain as a substitute for coffee. I. fetidissima of western Europe is the fetid iris, gladden, or roast-beef plant. The iris-root of commerce is supplied by I. florentina. This root possesses cathartic and emetic properties, and from its agreeable odor is also used in making tooth- and hair-powders. Six extinct species of Iris have been described from the Tertiary deposits of Europe (one in Spitzbergen), and several allied forms from lower formations, under the names Iridium and Iridea.

Blue Flag (Iris versicolor). 1. Inflorescence; 2. pistil with leaves; 3. stamen; 4. stigma; 5. fruit.

Each beautiful flower, Iris all hues, roses, and jessamin, Bears high their flourish'd heads,
Milton, P. L., iv. 698.

We glided winding under ranks
Of Iris, and the golden reed.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, ciii.

Iris blue. Same as bice.—Iris diaphragm. See diaphragm.—Iris disease. In pathol., herpes iris.—Iris green. Same as sap-green.—Snake's-head iris, a plant, Hemodactylus (Iris) tuberosus.

Irisated (i'ri-sā-ted), a. [< iris + -ate¹ + -ed².] Rainbow-colored; iridescent.

A variety of hooks were used for different kinds of fish and according to the time of day, irisated shells being applied at noon and in a bright sun, while white ones served early in the morning and late in the evening.

irisation (i-ri-sā'shon), n. [< iris + -ation.] The process of rendering iridescent; also, iridescence. [Rare.]

iriscopes (i'ri-skop), n. [< Gr. iros, a rainbow, + skopeiv, view.] A philosophical toy for exhibiting prismatic colors. See the extract.

It [the iriscopes] consists of a plate of highly polished black glass, having its surface smeared with a solution of fine soap and subsequently dried by rubbing it clean with a piece of chamois-leather. If the breath is directed through a glass tube upon a glass surface thus prepared, the vapor is deposited in brilliant colored rings, the outermost of which is black, while the innermost has various colors, or no color at all, according to the quantity of vapor deposited. The colors in these rings, when seen by common light, correspond with Newton's reflected rings, or those which have black centers, the only difference being that in the plate of vapor, which is thickest in the middle, the rings in the iriscopes have black circumferences.

Sir David Brewster, Philosophical Transactions (1841), p. 43.

irised (i'rist), a. [< iris + -ed².] 1. Containing or exhibiting colors like those of the rainbow.

The gay can weep, the impenetrable adore,
From morn's first glimmerings on the chancel floor
Till dying sunset sheds his crimson stains
Through the faint halos of the irised panes.
O. W. Holmes, A Rhymed Lesson.

2. Having an iris: used in composition: un-, large-irised eyes.

Irish¹ (i'rish), a. and n. [< ME. Irish, Irish, Irishce, Irche, etc. (= D. Irish = G. Irish = Dan. Irsk = Sw. Irisk; cf. OF. Ireis, Irois, Irois), < AS. Irise, Irish, < Iras (> Ir, Irar), the Irish (Irland, Ireland, Ireland), < Ir. Eire, Erin, Erin, Ireland.] I. a. 1. Pertaining to Ireland, or to the people of Ireland, an island lying west of Great Britain and forming part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Horn ran to schupe drage,
With his irised eyelids.
King Horn (E. E. T. S.), l. 1290.

Clarendon owns that the Marquis of Montrose was indebted for much of his successful success to the small band of Irish heroes under Macdonnell.

Moore, Irish Melodies, Pref. to Third Number (note).

The early Irish handwriting is of two classes—the round and the pointed. Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 157.

2†. Pertaining to the Celtic inhabitants (the Gaels) of Scotland; Erse. [Still sometimes used of the Scotch Highlanders.]

Four thousand Irish archers brought by the Earl of Argyll.

Ye Irish lords, ye knights an' squire,
Wha represent our brighs and shires,
An' doucely manage our affairs
In parliament.

Burns, Prayer to the Scotch Representatives.

Irish bagpipe, a variety of bagpipe peculiar to Ireland, having an air-bellows, three drones, and a softer, sweeter tone than the Scotch bagpipe. See bagpipe.—Irish broom. See broom. 1.—Irish bull. See bull.—Irish Church Act, an act passed by Parliament for the disestablishment of the Church of Ireland (a branch of the Anglican Church). It received the royal assent July 30th, 1869, and took effect January 1st, 1871.

Irish dairy, the common dandelion, Taraxacum officinale.—Irish duck, a stout linen cloth made for laborers' frocks and overalls.

Irish elk. See elk.—Irish furze. See furze. 1.—Irish gawking. See gawking.—Irish harp, an early form of harp peculiar to Ireland.—Irish health.

Irish ivy, jaunting-car, see. See the noun.—Irish Land Act. Same as Landlord and Tenant Act (which see, under landlord).—Irish moss. See moss.—Irish point.

(c) Irish needle-point lace of any sort. (b) Irish embroidery of any sort.—Irish poplin, potato, stew, etc. See the noun.—Irish Sisters of Charity. See charity.—Irish stitch, a stitch used in work-work for grounding or filling in. It consists of long parallel stitches covering four or five threads of the canvas at once.—Irish work, a name given to embroidery in white on white, used especially for handkerchiefs, etc.

II. n. 1. pl. The inhabitants of Ireland. (a) The aboriginal Celtic race of Ireland. See Celti. (b) The present inhabitants of Ireland, especially the Celtic part, and their immediate descendants in other parts of the world.

So sure were the saws of both two sides,
Of Richard that regned so riche and so noble,
That whyle he werid he west on the wilde Yrishes, Houris was entrid on the east half.

Richard the Redeless, Prol., l. 10.

2. The language of the native Celtic race in Ireland. It is in age and philological value the most important language of the Celtic family, though its antiquity and importance have been much exaggerated by tradition and patriotism. The alphabet is an adaptation of the Latin. As heretofore printed, the letters, like the so-called Anglo-Saxon letters, are usually made to resemble a conventionalized form of the Latin alphabet in use in Britain in the early middle ages. Gaelic is a comparatively recent form of the Irish spoken by the Celts of Scotland. It differs but slightly from the Irish of the same age. Modern Irish is greatly corrupted in pronunciation, as compared with the Old Irish; but it retains in great part the old orthography. As a living speech it is fast going out of use.

3. English as spoken by natives of Ireland, with characteristic peculiarities (the "Irish brogue"). In an extreme form ("broad Irish") English Irish has some Celtic features; but some peculiarities, for example banks, spake, for bank, speak, etc., are merely former English uses retained in Ireland but changed in England.

4†. An old game similar to backgammon, but more complicated. Halliwel. Compare after-game at Irish, under after-game.

Keep a four-nobles nag and a Jack-merlin,
Learn to love ale, and play at two-hand Fortune.
Beau. and Fl., Honest Man's Fortune, v. 1.

Abbreviated Ir.

Irish², a. [< ire² + -ish¹.] Wrathful; choleric.

He was so full of cursed rage;
It soote (became) hym well of his lynage,
For him an Irish woman bare.

Hom. of the Rose, l. 3811.

Irish-American (i'rish-a-mer'i-kan), a. and n. I. a. Pertaining to persons of Irish birth or descent living in America.

II. n. A person of Irish birth settled in the United States, or a native American of Irish parentage.

Irishism (i'rish-izm), n. [< Irish¹ + -ism.] A mode of speaking peculiar to the Irish; any Irish peculiarity of speech or behavior; Hibernicism.

Master Willie had not quite got rid of all his Irishisms.
Black, Shandon Bells, iii.

Irishman (i'rish-man), n.; pl. Irishmen (-men). A man born in Ireland, or one belonging to the Irish race.

Truly, by this that ye said, it seems the Irishman is a very brave soul-dour.

Irishry (i'rish-ri), n. [< ME. Irishry, Irishery; < Irish¹ + -ry.] 1. The people of Ireland, or a company or body of Irish people.

The whole Irishry of rebels. Milton.
The Irishry by whom he [Spenser] was surrounded were to the full as savage, as hostile, and as tenacious of their ancestral habits as the Boythians.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 143.

2. Highlanders and Islesmen. Halliwel.

Irishwoman (i'rish-wim'an), n.; pl. Irishwomen (-wim'en). A woman of Ireland or of the Irish race.

Irishworts (i'rish-werts), n. pl. Same as Irish heath (which see, under heath, 2).

Irish-root (i'ris-rüt), n. Same as orris-root.

Irish-swallow (i'ris-swol'd), n. A swallow of the genus Iridoprocne.

irite (i'rit), n. [< iridium + -ite².] A mineral substance from the Ural, occurring in minute grains and crystals. It was described as a compound of iridium, osmium, iron, and chromium with oxygen, but was later shown to be a mechanical mixture of iridosmium and chromite.

iritic (i-rit'ik), a. [< iritis + -ic.] Pertaining to or affected with iritis.

iritis (i-rit'is), n. [NL. < iris, the iris, + -itis.] In pathol., inflammation of the iris of the eye. Also iritidis.

irk (erk), v. [< ME. irken, yrken, erken = MHG. erken, feel disgust, < Sw. yrka, urge, enforce, press, press upon; perhaps akin to L. urgere, urge; see urge.] I. trans. To weary; give pain to; annoy: now chiefly used with the impersonal it.

Thys discucion beewene hys frendes somewhat yrked hym.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 33.

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 2, a.

This ugly fault no tyrant lives but irkes.

Mir. for Magn., p. 456.

It irks him to be here, he could not rest!

M. Arnold, Thyrsal.

II.† intrans. To feel weary or annoyed.

Swilke tales full some will make vs irke,
And thei be talde. York Plays, p. 401.

If I should have said all that I knew, your ears would have irked to have heard it.

Latimer, 4th Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1549.

Who not like them frills pleasures do forbear,
But even Christ's easie yoke do irke to bear.

Stirling, Domes-day, Fifth House.

irk¹ (erk), a. [< ME. irk, yrk, irke, orke; < irk, v.] Weary; tired.

Yn Goddys servysse are swyche men yrk,
When they come unto the kyrke.
MS. Harl. 1701, f. 30. (Halliwel.)

Men therynne shulde ben delite,
And of that dede be not irke.

Hom. of the Rose, l. 4367.

irk² (erk), n. [< irk, v.] Weariness; irksomeness.

I'ressed close by irk and illa of earth,
Man looks above,
And steady tends to clearer light
And purer love.
J. Upham, The Forward, VII., No. 5.

irksome (erk'sum), a. [< ME. irksomme, irksom; < irk + -some.] 1. Wearisome; tedious; burdensome; vexatious; causing annoyance or discomfort, especially by long continuance or frequent repetition.

A sily [silly?] garment is irksome to neyghors.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 31.

Hee found . . . a solitarie darkness: which as naturally it breeds a kind of irksome fastfulness, so it was to him a most present terror.

Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, iv.

Old habits of work, old habits of hope, made my endless leisure irksome to me.

Honell, Venetian Life, ii.

2†. Weary; uneasy.

He could not rest, but did his stout heart eat,
And wast his inward gall with deepe desight,
Irksome of life, and too long lingring night.

Spenser, F. Q., i. ii. 6.

=Syn. 1. Wearisome, Tedious, etc. See wearisome.

irksomely (erk'sum-li), adv. In an irksome, vexatious, wearisome, or tedious manner.

irksomeness (erk'sum-ness), n. [< ME. irksomness; < irksome + -ness.] The quality or state of being irksome; vexatiousness; tediousness; wearisomeness.

Drunkards,
That buy the merry madness of one hour
With the long irksomeness of following time.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, i. 1.

Although divine inspiration must certainly have been sweet to those ancient prophets, yet the irksomeness of that truth which they brought was no unpleasant to them that everywhere they call it a burden.

Milton, Church-Government, Pref., ii.

irne¹, v. i. A Middle English form of earn² and run.

irne², n. A Middle English form of iron.

irnent, a. A Middle English form of iron.

iron (i'ern), n. and a. [I. n. Early mod. E. also yrón; < ME. iron, irón, yron, yron, irne, yrne, also, with loss of formative -n (regarded appar. as inflectional), ire, yre (see ire), < AS. iron, older isen (> early ME. isen) = M.L.G. isen = OHG. isen, isen, MHG. isen, G. eisen; later form

II. a. 1. Made of iron; consisting of iron: as, an iron gate; an iron bar.
Go, get thee gone, fetch me an iron crow.
Shak., C. of E., iii. 1, 64.
With high iron gates, as is reported.
Purshas, Pilgrimage, p. 58.

2. Resembling iron in some respect, either really or metaphorically.
Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 107.
The wood which grides and clangs
Its leafless ribs and iron horns.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, evil.
Hence—(a) Harsh; rude; severe.
Iron years of wars and dangers. Rome.
(b) Binding fast; not to be broken.
Him death's train sleep oppressed. Philippa.
(c) Capable of great endurance; firm; robust: as, an iron constitution.
'E'en hell's grim king Alcides' pow'r contest,
The shaft found entrance in his iron breast.
Pope, Iliad, v. 436.
(d) Not to be bent; inflexible.
Her iron will was broken in her mind.
Tennyson, Princess, vi.

Iron age, buff, cement, etc. See the nouns.—Iron cross. See Order of the Iron Cross, below.—Iron crown. The ancient crown of the kings of Lombardy, with which many of the emperors of Germany and some other rulers, including Napoleon I., were afterward crowned as successors of their power in Italy: now preserved in the cathedral of Monza, the old capital of Lombardy. It takes its name from a thin band of iron, fabled to have been forged from one of the nails of Christ's cross, inclosed by its hoop of gold.—Iron division. See division.—Iron hat. (M.E. iron hat = Joel iron-hat.) (a) Same as chapel-décor. (b) In mining, same as gömsen. (U. S.)—Iron horse. a locomotive.—Iron lacquer, mask, natronite, etc. See natronite.

the nouns.—Order of the Iron Cross. a Prussian order founded in 1813 for military services in the wars against Napoleon. In 1870 the order was reorganized. It consists of the great cross, conferred only on a few princes and generals, and two classes comprising several thousand Germans. The original badge was a cross patté of black iron with a silver rim, upon which were the initials F. W. (Frederick William) and the date 1813 or 1815. The modern badge is a modification of this. The ribbon is black with a white border.—Order of the Iron Crown. an order founded by Napoleon I. as king of Italy, and adopted by Francis I. of Austria after the fall of Napoleon. It consists of three classes. The badge is a double eagle of Austria resting upon a ring (which represents the iron crown of Monza), and surmounted by an imperial crown; this is attached to an orange ribbon edged with blue.

Iron (I'érn), v. t. [Not found in M.E.; cf. A.S. isernan, furnish or mount with iron (= isæl, jarna, put in iron, mount with iron, shoe (a horse)), < isæn, iron: see iron, n.] 1. To shackle with irons; fetter; handcuff.
Iron him then, let the rest go free.
Middleton, Spanish Gypsy, iv. 3.

2. To furnish, mount, or arm with iron: as, to iron a wagon.—3. To smooth with an instrument of iron, especially with a hot flat-iron, smoothing-iron, or box-iron.
An un man have come 'un to iron me out my seams and lock me out my bits. Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, l. 60.

Iron-alum (I'érn-al'um), n. 1. One of the double sulphates of ferric iron and potassium (ammonium, etc.), analogous to the true alums in composition, and like them crystallizing in octahedrons.—2. The mineral halotrichite.

Ironbark-tree (I'érn-bärk-tré), n. A tree of the genus Eucalyptus having solid bark, as E. cribra, but more particularly the species E. resinifera, a tree with ovate-lanceolate leaves which attains a height of from 150 to 200 feet. From this tree is obtained Botany Bay kino, used in medicine as a substitute for kino. When the bark of the tree is wounded a red juice flows very freely, and hardens in the air into masses of irregular form, inodorous and transparent. Sixty gallons of juice may sometimes be obtained from a single tree. The timber is also very valuable, and is extensively used in ship-building and engineering works. The white ironbark-tree is E. paniculata, a species which furnishes a hard, durable wood excellent for railroad-ties, etc. The red-flowered ironbark-tree is E. leucocarpa. It attains a height of 100 feet, and is highly prized by carpenters and ship-builders for its durability. The silver-leaved ironbark-tree is E. pruriens, a tree of moderate size.

Iron-black (I'érn-blak), n. See black.

8. Iron hat, 14th century (from Viollet-le-Duc's "Diet. du Mobilier français"). 9. Iron hat, time of Charles I. and Cromwell.

Branch of Ironbark-tree (Eucalyptus resinifera). a, flower iron-bound (i'érn-bound), a. 1. Bound with iron.

The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket, which hung in the well.
G. Woodworth, The Bucket.

2. Faced or surrounded with rocks; rock-bound; rugged: as, an iron-bound coast.—3. Hard and fast; rigorous; inflexible as iron.

The French, though beyond question the best actors in the world, judge from iron-bound standards.
The American, VII. 178.

iron-cased (i'érn-käst), a. Cased or clad with iron; iron-clad.

iron-chamber (i'érn-chäm'bér), n. The reverberatory or charge-chamber of a puddling-furnace where the metal is heated.

iron-clad (i'érn-klad), a. 1. Covered or cased with iron plates, as a vessel for naval warfare; armor-plated.—2. Figuratively, very rigid or strict; constructed, as a form of words, so as to allow no evasion or escape, or permit no flaw to be detected. [In this use often written ironclad.]—iron-clad oath. See oath.

ironclad (i'érn-klad), n. [iron-clad, a.] A naval vessel cased or covered wholly or partly with thick iron or steel plates, generally having a heavy backing of wood, so armored to resist projectiles or the attacks of rams or other armored vessels. The metal armor is often of great thickness; over parts of H. M. S. Indefatigable, for example, the metal is as much as 24 inches thick. Even the thickest armor used, however, is not sufficient to keep out the projectiles of the high-pressure guns of the present day; moreover, its great weight prevents the application of heavy armor except to the most vulnerable parts of the ship. The first armored vessels were built by the French for use during the Crimean war, and the success of the monitors during the civil war in the United States gave a strong impetus to the building of ironclads. Iron-clad ships are now made of very various designs. Many modern vessels have protective iron decks, but the term ironclad has been confined to vessels whose sides are protected. Iron-clad ships are generally armed with two or four heavy breech-loading rifled guns of from 10 to 16 inches caliber, in addition to a secondary battery of smaller breech-loading and rapid-firing guns. They are usually constructed as rams, and their hulls are divided into numerous water-tight compartments. See battle-ship.

No matter how strong an iron-clad may be made, or how difficult to penetrate with shot or shell, the bottom of the ship is always a point of weakness.
N. A. Rev., CXXVII. 222.

iron-clay (i'érn-klä), n. See clay ironstone, under clay.

iron-cloth (i'érn-klóth), n. 1. Chain-mail in general. Hewitt, I. 238.—2. Chain-mail of modern fabrication, made for cleansing greasy vessels.

ironer (i'ér-nér), n. One who or that which irons.

iron-fisted (i'érn-fis'ted), a. Close-fisted; covetous. Imp. Dict.

iron-flint (i'érn-flint), n. Ferruginous quartz; a subspecies of quartz, opaque or translucent at the edges, with a fracture more or less conchoidal, shining, and nearly vitreous.

iron-founder (i'érn-foun'dér), n. One who makes iron castings.

iron-foundry (i'érn-foun'dri), n. The place where iron castings are made.

iron-furnace (i'érn-fér'näs), n. A general term for any form of iron-working furnace, as a blast-furnace, puddling-furnace, etc. See furnace.

iron-glance (i'érn-glāns), n. Specular iron.

iron-grass (i'érn-grās), n. The knot-grass or doorweed, Polygonum ariculare.

iron-gray (i'érn-grā), a. and n. [ME. irengray, < AS. isengrāg (= Ice. járngrār = Dan. isengraa), < isen, iron, + grāg, gray: see iron and gray.] 1. a. Of a gray hue approaching the color of freshly fractured iron.

Neither was the stranger's dress at all martial. It consisted of a uniform suit of iron-gray clothes, cut in rather an old-fashioned form. Scott, Monastery, Int. Ep., p. 13.

II. a. A hue of gray approaching the color of freshly fractured iron.

iron-gumtree (i'érn-gum'trē), n. A very large tree, Eucalyptus Ravenhilliana, a native of Queensland, sometimes attaining a height of over 300 feet and a diameter of 10 feet. It furnishes a very hard dark-colored wood, used for piles, for railroad-ties, and for general building purposes.

iron-handed (i'érn-han'ded), a. Exceedingly strong in the hand; hence, rigorously determined or severe; unmerciful.

The iron-handed rule of this great commander at Yedo was felt all over the empire.
N. A. Rev., CXX. 228.

ironhard, n. [ME. irenhards, < AS. isenheards, ironhard, Centaurea nigra (cf. iron-hard, hard as iron, < iron, iron, + heard, hard).] 1. The knapweed, Centaurea nigra.—2. Vervain. iron-hat, n. See iron hat, under iron, a. ironhead (i'érn-hed), n. The American gold-eneye or whistling, a duck. G. Trumbull, 1888. [North Carolina.] ironheads (i'érn-hedz), n. The knapweed, Centaurea nigra: so called in reference to the knobbed involucre. iron-hearted (i'érn-här'ted), a. Hard-hearted; unfeeling; cruel.

These iron-hearted soldiers are so cold,
Till they be beaten to a woman's arms.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, iv. 1.

Think, ye masters iron-hearted,
Lolling at your jovial boards.
Copper, Negro's Complaint.

ironic (i-ron'ik), a. [F. ironique = Sp. irónico = Pg. It. ironico (cf. D. G. ironisch = Dan. Sw. ironisk), < Gr. eipwōkōs, dissembling, ironic, < eipwōia, dissimulation, irony: see irony.] Same as ironical.

I had better leisure to contemplate that ironic satire of Juvenal.
Sir T. Herbert, Travels in Africa, p. 11.

ironical (i-ron'i-kal), a. [< ironic + -al.] 1. Pretending ignorance; simulating lack of instruction or knowledge. See irony, 1. [Obsolete or archaic.]

The circle of this fallacy is very large; and herein may be comprised all ironical mistakes, for intended expressions receiving inverted significations.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., i. 4.

Hence—2. Conveying or consisting of covert sarcasm; sarcastic under a serious or friendly pretense: as, an ironical compliment.

She asked him, in an angry tone, what he did there; to which he only replied in an ironical way by drinking her health.
Goldsmith, Vicar, xxi.

3. Addicted to irony; using disguised sarcasm: as, an ironical speaker.

ironically (i-ron'i-kal-i), adv. In an ironical manner; by way of irony; by the use of irony.

ironicalness (i-ron'i-kal-nes), n. The quality of being ironical.

ironing (i'ér-ning), n. In laundry-work: (a) The act of smoothing with hot irons. (b) The clothes so smoothed. [Colloq.]

ironing-board (i'ér-ning-bórd), n. A smooth board covered with cloth, on which to iron clothing, etc.

ironing-box (i'ér-ning-boks), n. Same as box-iron.

ironing-cloth (i'ér-ning-klóth), n. A cloth used for ironing on. Mayhew.

ironing-machine (i'ér-ning-ma-shén'), n. A machine for hot-pressing fabrics, clothing, hats, etc. Such machines are made in many forms, and may be arranged in two classes: those using a tallers' goose heated by a gas-jet or by steam (the gas and steam being applied by a flexible pipe), and those employing a cylinder heated by steam or gas. Mechanism is supplied for supporting and guiding the goose over the table. A common form is a cylinder heated by steam, which is rolled by machinery over the fabric to be pressed; in one machine the cylinder is stationary, the table carrying the fabric to be pressed travelling under it. In the hot-ironing machines the goose is of various shapes, and the heated block either moves upon the hat or revolves in a fixed position while the table moves. Sometimes called ironing-lathe and block ironing-machine.

iron-iodide (i'érn-i'ô-did), n. A crystalline deliquescent salt formed by the union of iron and hydriodic acid, used in medicine as a tonic, diuretic, and emmenagogue.

ironish (i'ér-nish), a. [< iron + -ish.] Somewhat like iron; irony. [Rare.]

Some, who did thrust a probe or little stick into a chink of the coffin, . . . bringing out some moisture with it, found it of an ironish taste.
Wood, Athenae Oxon. (John Colet).

ironist (i'ér-nist), n. [< iron(ize) + -ist.] One who deals in irony. [Rare.]

A poet or orator . . . would have no more to do but to send . . . to the ironist for his sarcasms.
Martinius Scriverius, xiii.

ironizer (i'ér-niz), v. t. [< Gr. eipwōkōs, dissemble, < eipwōs, dissembler: see irony.] To render ironical; use ironically.

If hypocrites why puritanize
We term be ask'd, in briefest,
'Tis but an ironized term,
Good-fellow so spells thee.
Warner, Albion's England, x.

iron-line (i'érn-lin), n. A line in the spectrum, caused if bright by iron in the luminous vapor, or if dark by iron in vapor interposed between the luminous body and the eye, as in the atmosphere of the sun.

iron-liquor (i'érn-lik'ér), n. Iron acetate, used by dyers as a mordant.

Under the name of "black" and "iron liquor" two of those salts are largely manufactured, the acetate of the protoxide and the acetate of the sesquioxide or peroxide. Spons. Encyc. Manuf., I. 31.

iron-man (i'érn-man), n. 1. A dealer in or manufacturer of iron.—2. A coal-cutting machine. [Prov. Eng.]

iron-master (i'érn-más'tér), n. A manufacturer of iron.

My father apprenticed me to a Birmingham ironmaster.
Dickens, Mugby Junction (Tauschnitz ed.), p. 331.

iron-mold (i'érn-möld), n. Discoloration, in cloth or the like, caused by stains from rusted iron.

iron-mold (i'érn-möld), v. t. To stain or discolor, as cloth, by means of iron-rust.

ironmonger (i'érn-mung'gér), n. [< ME. irenmongere, iron-manger; < iron + monger.] A dealer in ironware or hardware.

Buying several things at the ironmongers; dogs, tongues, and shovells, for my wife's closet.
Pepys, Diary, Sept. 7, 1693.

ironmongery (i'érn-mung'gér-i), n. [< iron-monger + -y; see -ery.] The trade of an ironmonger; that which ironmongers deal in.

I might have been inclined, myself, to regard a coffin-nail as the dearest piece of ironmongery in the trade.
Dickens, Christmas Carol, I.

iron-oak (i'érn-ök), n. Same as post-oak.

iron-ocher (i'érn-ô'kér), n. See ocher.

iron-red (i'érn-red), n. A red of a somewhat orange tint, such as is produced by iron-rust, used especially in decorative art and in pottery.

iron-rust (i'érn-rust), n. See rust.

iron-sand (i'érn-sand), n. 1. In geol., sand made up in considerable part of particles of iron ore, usually magnetite, or titaniferous oxid of iron, or both intermixed. Such sands are not uncommon along the ocean-shores in regions of volcanic or metamorphic rocks.—2. The steel-filings used in fireworks.

iron-saw (i'érn-sä), n. A circular saw for cutting hot iron.

iron-scale (i'érn-skäl), n. Same as forge-scale.

iron-shrub (i'érn-shrub), n. Same as herb of St. Martin (which see, under herb).

iron-sick (i'érn-sik), a. Naut., having its iron bolts and spikes very much corroded: said of a wooden ship.

ironside (i'érn-sid), n. A person who or something which has great power of endurance or resistance: specifically used (generally in the plural) as a proper name: as, Edmund Ironside or Ironsides (an Anglo-Saxon king); Cromwell's Ironsides (his special corps of troopers); Old Ironsides (a designation of the old United States frigate Constitution).

iron-sided (i'érn-si'ded), a. [< iron + side + -ed.] Rough; unruly. Hallwell.

ironsmith (i'érn-smith), n. [< ME. irensmith, < AS. irensmiþ, isenmíth (= G. eisenschmied = Ice. járnsmitthir), < iron, isen, iron, + smith, smith.] 1. A worker in iron, as a blacksmith, locksmith, etc.—2. The barbet of Hainan, Megalania faber: so called from its cry, translating the native name.

From its loud, peculiar call, the Hainan species has earned among the natives of the island the appellation of "ironmouth," whence I have derived its specific name [faber]. R. Swinhoe, quoted in Stand. Nat. Hist., IV. 420.

iron-stain (i'érn-stān), n. 1. A stain made by iron-rust, or by the tincture of iron, as on cloth or clothing.—2. An appearance like the stain of iron produced on the coffee-plant in Venezuela, and apparently also in Jamaica, by the fungus Hepaea maculosa, in the form of circular or elliptical blotches. Spons. Encyc. Manuf., I. 700.

ironstone (i'érn-stōn), n. Any ore of iron which is impure through the admixture of silica or clay.—Carbonaceous or blackband ironstones. See blackband.—Clay ironstones. See clay.—Ironstone china, a hard white pottery made by mingling with the clay pulverized slag of ironstones. It was introduced in 1813 by Charles James Mason. The name was originally intended to refer only to hardness and durability.

iron-strap (i'érn-strap), n. In whaling, same as foreganger, 2.

iron-tree (i'érn-trē), n. See Ixora.

ironware (i'érn-wér), n. Hardware; especially, iron pots, kettles, etc.

ironweed (i'érn-wéd), n. Same as flattop.

iron-witted (i'érn-wit'ed), a. Dull or heavy-witted; stupid.

I will converse with iron-witted fools,
And unresponsive boys.
Shak., Rich. III., iv. 2, 22.

ironwood (i'érn-wúd), n. One of numerous species of peculiarly hard-wooded trees, belonging to many orders and widely distributed. In North America the name commonly denotes Ostrya virginica, the hop-hornbeam or leverwood; but also Bumelia lycioides (southern buckthorn), Clorophora caroliniana (blue beech), Corylus rostrata, Cliftonia ligustrina (liti, buckwheat-tree), Hypoxis paniculata (lukwood), and Onychia toosa. The black ironwood of the same territory is Condalia ferruginea; the red, Rhynchos latifolia; the white, Hypoxis trifoliata. Of the other ironwoods may be mentioned the various species of the tropical genus Sideroxylon, the Indian Xylocarpus formosus, the Erythroxylon areolatum of Jamaica, and the Tasmanian Nothofagus ligustrina. Several species of Diospyros (ebony) are called by the same name. Bastard ironwood is the West Indian Xanthoxylum fagara (X. Pterocarpus); also Trichilia hirta. The black ironwood of South Africa is Olea undulata, and the white is Toddalia lanceolata. Many of these woods are valuable in the arts for purposes requiring great firmness or high polish.

ironworded (i'ern-wér'ded), a. Worded so as to resist attack; of "iron-clad" character. [Poetical.]

Spurr'd at heart with fiercest energy
To embattle and to wall about thy cause
With iron-worded proof.

Temnyson, Sonnet to J. M. K.

ironwork (i'ern-wérk), n. Objects and parts of objects made of iron, as locks and keys, utensils, parts of a building, of a vessel, or the like; as, ornamental ironwork.

iron-worker (i'ern-wér'kér), n. A person employed in the manufacture of iron, or of articles of iron.

The colliers now on strike have forced idleness on the ironworkers. H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 248.

iron-works (i'ern-wérks), pl. An establishment, consisting usually of several connected shops, where iron is manufactured, or where it is wrought or cast into heavy work, as cannon, shafting, rails, merchant bars, etc. [The word is sometimes used as a singular.]

A recent strike in an iron works.

N. A. Rev., CXLIIL 167.

ironwort (i'ern-wért), n. 1. A plant of the labiate genus Sideritis.—2. A plant of the genus Galopopsis, G. tetralix.

irony¹ (i'ér-ni), a. [< ME. "irony, yrony, yruny; < iron + -y."] Consisting of or resembling iron; also, resembling any of the distinctive qualities of iron.

Be heuene that is aboue thee braamy and the lond that thou tredist yrony. Wyclif, Dent. xxviii. 23.

Some springs of Hungary, highly impregnated with vitriolick salts, dissolve the body of one metal, suppose iron, put into the spring; and deposit, in lieu of the iron particles carried off, cuppory particles. Woodward, Fossils.

irony² (i'ro-ni), n.; pl. ironies (-niz). [= D. G. ironie = Dan. Sw. ironi, < F. ironie = Sp. ironia = Pg. It. ironia, < L. ironia, < Gr. epwveia, dissimulation, irony, < epwv, a dissembler, lit. 'one who talks' (but says less or more than he thinks), ppr. of epwv, speak, tell, talk.] 1. Simulated ignorance in discussion: a method of exposing an antagonist's ignorance by pretending to desire information or instruction from him. This method of discussion, the Socratic irony, was characteristic of Socrates, with reference to whom the term was first used.

Socrates at Athens undertook with many sharp and cutting ironies to reprove the vices of his Age. Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. III.

The Athenian's [Socrates's] modest irony was of another taste, and better suited to the decorum of conversation, than the Syrian's [Lucan's] frontless buffoonry.

Sp. Hard, Manner of Writing Dialogues, Pref. Hence—2. Covert sarcasm; such a use of agreeable or commendatory forms of expression as to convey a meaning opposite to that literally expressed; sarcastic laudation, compliment, or the like.

And call her Ida, tho' I knew her not,
And call her sweet, as if in irony.

Temnyson, Princess, vii.

A drayman in a passion calls out "You are a pretty fellow," without suspecting that he is uttering irony. Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

Irony of fate, or of circumstances, an apparent mockery of destiny; an occurrence or result the opposite of what might naturally have been expected; a contradictory outcome: as, it was the irony of fate that made Joseph the ruler over the land of his captivity.—Syn. 2. Sarcasm, etc. See satire.

iron-yellow (i'ern-yel'ō), n. Same as Mars yellow (which see, under yellow).

Iroquoian (ir-ō-kwoi'ān), a. [< Iroquois + -an.] Same as Iroquois.

Iroquois (ir-ō-kwoi'), n. and a. [A F. form (with term. -ois, as in Illinois: see -ois) of the native Indian name.] 1. n. One of a former confederation of American Indians, situated in central New York, originally composed of five tribes—the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas, and Senecas—and hence known as the Five Nations. At a later time a sixth tribe, the Tuscaroras, who had migrated from North Carolina, was added. The name is also given to related Indian tribes occupying central and western New York and Upper Canada, and including, besides the Iroquois proper, the Hurons, the Eries, the Neutral Nation, the Andastes, etc. In this sense also known as Huron-Iroquois.

II. a. Belonging or relating to the Iroquois or their tribes, or to the Iroquois family of languages.

iroury, n. [ME. = OF. iror, irur = Pr. iror, anger, < L. ira, anger: see ira².] Ire; anger. Seven Sages, l. 954.

irous (ir'us), a. [ME. irous, irus, iras, < OF. irus, irous, ireus = Pr. irous = Pg. It. irous, < ML. "irous, angry, < L. ira, anger: see ira².] Apt to be angry; passionate; iriful.

With full yrony wroth Gaffrey mened hy.
He salute non, he spake to gret ne small.
Rom. of Partheyay (E. E. T. S.), l. 4880.

It is greet harme and oek greet pite
To sette an irous man in heigh degree.
Chaucer, Summoner's Tale, l. 308.

irously (ir'us-li), adv. [ME. irously; < irous + -ly.] Angriily.

And whan dorfles sangh with his lye that thei dide so grete damage that were soche myselyfynge peple, he rode vpon hem full irously. Morley (E. E. T. S.), li. 243.

irp (irp), n. and a. [Origin unknown; found only in one piece of Ben Jonson's, and perhaps one of his affected terms.] 1. n. A grimace or contortion of the body.

Spanish shrugs, French faces, amirks, irpes, and all affected humours. B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, Pallinode.

II. a. Grimacing.

If regardant, then maintain your station briak and irpe, shew the supple motion of your pliant body.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, III. 3.

irradiance (i-rā'di-āns), n. [< irradiant(t) + -ce.] 1. The act of irradiating; emission of rays of light.—2. An appearance of radiated light; luster; splendor.

Love not the heavenly spirits, and how their love Express they? by looks only? or do they mix Irradiances, virtual or immediate touch?

Milton, P. L., viii. 617.

irradiancy (i-rā'di-ān-si), n. Same as irradiance.

irradiant (i-rā'di-ānt), a. [< L. irradiant(t)-s, irradiant(t)-s, ppr. of irradiare, irradiare, irradiare: see irradiate.] Emitting rays of light.

So the bright lamp of night, the constant moon,
Unwearied, does her circling journey run;
Off thro' the fleecy clouds irradiant bends,
And to bountiful lands her influence lends.

Byss, To Marcella.

irradiate (i-rā'di-āt), v.; pret. and pp. irradiated, ppr. irradiating. [< L. irradiatus, irradiatus, pp. of irradiare, irradiare (> It. irradiare, irradiare = Sp. Pg. irradiar = F. irradiier), beam upon, illumine, < in, on, + radiare, beam: see radiate.] 1. trans. 1. To illuminate or shed light upon or into; make luminous or clear; light up; enlighten.

So much the rather thou, celestial Light, Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate. Milton, P. L., III. 68.

When the august functions of the Crown are irradiated by intelligence and virtue, they are transformed into a higher dignity than words can convey, or Acts of Parliament can confer. Gladstone, Might of Right, p. 108.

Those studies that kindle the imagination, and through it irradiate the reason. Lowell, Harvard Anniversary.

2. To make splendid or glorious; confer honor or dignity upon; exalt; adorn.

No weeping orphan saw his father's stores
Our shrines irradiate, or embellish the floors.
Pope, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 130.

3. To radiate into; penetrate by radiation.

Ethereal or solar heat must digest, influence, irradiate, and put those more simple parts of matter into motion.

St. M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind.

II. intrans. To emit rays; shine.

Day was the state of the hemisphere on which light irradiated. Sp. Horne, Letters on Infidelity, x.

irradiate (i-rā'di-āt), a. [< L. irradiatus, pp.: see the verb.] Illuminated; made brilliant or splendid. [Poetical.]

Your irradiate judgment will soon discover the secrets of this little crystal world.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 3.

Where irradiate dewy eyes
Had shone, gleam stony orbs. Shelley, Alastor.

irradiation (i-rā'di-ā-shon), n. [= F. irradiation = Sp. irradiacion = Pg. irradiacão = It. irradiazione, irradiazione, < L. as if "irradiatio (n), < irradiare, irradiare: see irradiate."] 1. The act of irradiating or emitting beams of light; illumination; brightness emitted; enlightenment.

Sooner may a dark room enlighten itself without the irradiation of a candle or the sun than a natural understanding work out its own ignorance in matters of faith. South, Works, VIII. xiii.

God does give signs, and when he does so, he gives also irradiations, illustrations of the understanding, that they may be discerned to be his signs. Donne, Sermons, II.

This is that irradiation that dispels the mists of hell.

St. T. Browne, Religio Medici, l. 32.

2. In physics, the phenomenon of the apparent enlargement of an object strongly illuminated, when seen against a dark ground. It was explained by Plateau as due to the extension of the impression upon the nerves of the retina beyond the outlines of the image; Helmholtz, however, has ascribed it to the want of perfect accommodation in the eye, leading to the formation of diffusion images about the proper image of a bright object, so that it encroaches upon the dark space about it, and hence appears larger than it really is. Irradiation increases with the brightness of the object, diminishes as the illumination of the object and that of the field of view approach equality, and vanishes when they become equal.

irradiative (i-rā'di-ā-tiv), n. Something which illuminates or emits light.

irradiate (i-rā'di-āt), v. t.; pret. and pp. irradiated, ppr. irradiating. [< L. in, in, + radiare, radiare, take root: see radiate. Cf. cradicate.] To fix by the root; fix firmly. Chaucer.

irrational (i-rash'on-āl), a. and n. [= F. irrational = Pr. irrational = Sp. Pg. irracional = It. irrazionale, irrazionale, < L. irrationalis, irrationalis, not rational, < in-priv. + rationalis, rational: see rational.] 1. a. 1. Not rational; without the faculty of reason; void of understanding; unreasoning.

He hath eaten and lives,
And knows, and speaks, and reasons, and discerns, Irrational till then. Milton, P. L., IX. 708.

Strong passion is brief madness, because the internal commotion of it, usurping consciousness, prevents full and free reflection and adaptation, and putting the individual out of just ratio with persons and things, makes him irrational. Mauley, Mind, XII. 510.

2. Without the quality of reason; contrary to reason; illogical; unreasonable: as, irrational motives; an irrational project.

It would be amusing to make a digest of the irrational laws which bad critics have made for the government of poets. Macaulay, Moore's Life of Byron.

There is . . . nothing more irrational than to criticize deeds as though the doers of them had the same desires, hopes, fears, and restraint with ourselves.

H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 252.

We are constantly the dupes of an irrational attempt to estimate the universe from a purely human point of view. Micrur, Nature and Thought, p. 248.

Conduct prompted by a series of such unconnected impulses we call irrational, as being absolutely unsystematized, and in that sense incoherent.

H. Sidgwick, Methods of Ethics, p. 26.

3. In math.: (a) In arith., not capable of being exactly expressed by a vulgar fraction, proper or improper; surd. In mathematics irrational is a translation of Greek ἀλογος, inexpressible (by a fraction), opposed to λόγος. (See surd.) Every irrational quantity can, however, be conceived as expressed by an infinite continued fraction or interminate decimal. (b) In translations of Euclid, and cognate writings, at once incommensurable with the assumed unit and not having its square commensurable with that of the unit. This is the peculiar meaning given by Euclid to ἀλογος, though Plato uses it in sense (a), above. (c) In alg., noting a quantity involving a variable raised to a fractional power; or, in a wider sense, noting a quantity not rational, not a sum of products of constants and of variables into one another or into themselves.—4. In Gr. pros., incapable of measurement in terms of the fundamental or primary time or metrical unit.

It was an irrational long; and the foot to which it belonged was irrational also, the whole length of the foot being expressed by a fractional designation, viz. 24 short times. J. Hadley, Essays, p. 107.

Geometrically irrational. See geometrically.—Irrational function. See function.—Syn. 1 and 2. Silly, Foolish, etc. (see absurd); witless, reasonless, thoughtless; brute, brutish; injudicious, illogical.

II. n. That which is devoid of reason, as one of the lower animals.

But for the poor shiftless irrational, it is a prodigious act of the great Creator's indulgence that they are all ready furnished with such clothing as is proper to their place and business. Derham, Physico-Theology, iv. 12.

irrationality (i-rash'on-āl'i-ti), n. [= Sp. irracionalidad = Pg. irracionalidade = It. irrazionalità; as irrational + -ity.] 1. The condition of being irrational; want of the faculty or the quality of reason; fatuity; as, the irrationality of brutes; the irrationality of a scheme.

Who is it here that appeals to the frivolousness and irrationality of our dreams? Boswell, On the Soul, li. 187.

The unflinching boyishness of hope and its vigorous irrationality are nowhere better displayed than in questions of conduct. R. L. Stevenson, Virginibus Puerisque, II.

2. Incapable of being brought into a different state, condition, or form.

The newly mentioned observations seem to argue the corporeity of air to be irreducible unto water.

Boyle, Works, I. 50.

Each specific sensation remains irreducible to another.

G. H. Lewes, Proba. of Life and Mind, II. 241.

3. Incapable of being reduced to a desired form or condition by manipulation: as, an irreducible horn or fracture.—Irreducible case, equation, function, integral, etc. See the nouns.—Irreducible circuit, in math. See irreducible circuit, under circuit.

Irreducibility (ir-ē-dū'bi-li-ti), n. The quality of being irreducible.

Irreducibly (ir-ē-dū'bi-li), adv. So as to be irreducible.

Irreducibility (ir-ē-dū'bi-li-ti), n. [= F. irréductibilité; as irreducibility + -ity: see -ility.] Absence of reductibility; irreducibility. [Rare.]

M. Comte's puerile predilection for prime numbers almost passes belief. His reason is that they are a type of irreducibility; each of them is a kind of ultimate arithmetical fact. J. S. Mill.

Irreducible (ir-ē-dū'bi-li), a. [= F. irréductible = It. irriducibile; as in-3 + reducible.] Not reducible; irreducible. [Rare.]

Irreduction (ir-ē-dū'k-shn), n. The state of being unreduced; failure to reduce: said of a hernia.

This increase in volume was the only cause of irreduction (of the hernia). Medical News, LII. 442.

Irreflexion (ir-ē-flek'shn), n. [= F. irréflexion = Sp. irreflexión; as in-3 + reflexion.] Want or absence of reflection; thoughtlessness.

It gave to the course pursued that character of violence, impatience, and irreflexion which too often belongs to the proceedings of the multitude. Brougham.

Abiding irreflexion is quite consistent with increase of general knowledge. F. Hall, Mod. Eng., p. 281.

Irreflexive (ir-ē-flek'tiv), a. [in-3 + reflexive.] Not reflective; wanting the quality or the habit of reflection; thoughtless.

From this day I was an altered creature, never again relapsing into the careless, irreflexive mind of childhood. De Quincey, Autobiog. Sketches, I. 362.

Irreflexive (ir-ē-flek'tiv), a. [in-3 + reflexive.] Not reflexive.

Irreformable (ir-ē-fōr'ma-bl), a. [= Sp. irreformable, < LL. irreformabilis, irreformabilis, unalterable, < in-priv. + reformabilis, that can be formed again: see reformable.] 1. Not reformable; not capable of being formed anew or again; not subject to revision.

Such definitions of the Roman Pontiff are irreformable in their own nature, and not because of the consent of the Church. Cath. Dict., p. 677.

2. Not capable of being reformed or corrected; not susceptible of amendment: as, an irreformable drunkard.

Irrefragability (ir-ē-fra-ga-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. irréfragabilité = It. irrefragabilità; as irrefragabile + -ity: see -ability.] The quality of being irrefragable or incapable of refutation.

A solemn, high-stalking man, with such a fund of indignation in him, or of latent indignation; of contumacity, irrefragability. Carlyle, Misc., IV. 80.

Irrefragable (ir-ē-fra-ga-bl), a. [= F. irréfragable = Sp. irrefragable = Pg. irrefragável = It. irrefragabile, irrefragabile, < LL. irrefragabilis, irrefragabilis, irrefragable: see refragable.] Not refutable; incapable of being broken down or refuted; incontrovertible; undeniable; not confutable: as, an irrefragable argument; irrefragable evidence; an irrefragable opponent.

What a noble and irrefragable testimony was this to the power, to the truth of the Messiah! Ep. Hall, The Ten Lepers.

Yet did not any of these conceive themselves infallible, or set down their dictates as verities irrefragable. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err.

He was an irrefragable disputant against the errors . . . which with trouble he saw rising in his colony. C. Mather, Mag. Chris., II. 1.

Against so obstinate and irrefragable an enemy, what could avail the unsupported allies of genius? Goldsmith, Polite Learning, II.

—Syn. Unanswerable, indisputable, unquestionable, indubitable, irrefutable.

Irrefragableness (ir-ē-fra-ga-bl-nes), n. The state or quality of being irrefragable; irrefragability.

Irrefragably (ir-ē-fra-ga-bli), adv. In an irrefragable manner; so as to be irrefragable; incontrovertibly.

Herein he was irrefragably true, that there cannot be anything more certain and evident to a man that thinks than that he doth think. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 24.

Irrefragible (ir-ē-fra'ji-bl), a. [= It. irrefragabile; as in-3 + refragabile.] Not refrangible; not to be broken or violated.

An irrefragible law of country etiquette.

Mrs. Crank, Agatha's Husband, xx.

Irrefragibly (ir-ē-fra'ji-bl), adv. So as to be irrefragable; fixedly; inviolably.

They knew . . . that the dragons were welded to their vases more irrefragably than Prometheus to his rock. Hugh Conway, A Family Affair, p. 16.

Irrefutability (ir-ē-fū'ta-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. irréfutabilité; as irrefutable + -ity: see -ability.] The quality of being irrefutable.

On the irrefutability of which he had privately prided himself. The Century, XXXI. 176.

Irrefutable (ir-ē-fū'ta-bl), a. [= F. irréfutable = Pg. irrefutable, < LL. irrefutabilis, irrefutabilis, < in-priv. + refutabilis, refutable: see refutable.] Not refutable; incapable of being refuted or disproved.

Yet lie not urge them as an irrefutable proof, being not willing to lay more stress upon any thing than will bear. Glanville, Pre-existence of Souls, xi.

That irrefutable discourse of Cardinal Caloton. Ep. Hall, Honour of Married Clergy, p. 12.

—Syn. See list under irrefragable.

Irrefutably (ir-ē-fū'ta-bli), adv. In an irrefutable manner; so as to be irrefutable.

Irreg. An abbreviation of irregular or irregularly.

Irregeneracy (ir-ē-jen'g-rā-si), n. [in-3 + regeneracy.] Unregeneracy. [Rare.]

Irregeneration (ir-ē-jen'g-rā-shn), n. [in-3 + regeneration.] Lack of regeneration; the state of being unregenerate. [Rare.]

Irregular (ir-ē-gū-lār), a. and n. [= ME. irregular, < OF. irregulier, F. irrégulier = Pr. irregular, irregular = Sp. Pg. irregular = It. irregolare, < ML. irregularis, not regular, < L. in-priv. + regularis, pertaining to rules (regular): see regular.] 1. a. 1. Not regular; lacking regularity or method in some respect; not conformable to rule, order, symmetry, uniformity, or a fixed principle; deviating from the normal or usual course or state; devious; unmethodical; uneven; as, an irregular figure, outline, or surface; irregular verbs; irregular troops.

They [the inhabitants of Barbary] are irregular in their life and actions, exceedingly subject to cholera, speak aloft and proudly, and are often at buffets in the streets. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 632.

The numbers of pindaries are wild and irregular, and sometimes seem harsh and uncouth. Cowley.

2. Not regular in action or method; not conformed or conforming to regular rules or principles; hence, disorderly; lawless; improper: as, he is given to irregular courses.

Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower. Shak., I Hen. IV., I. 1. 40.

Now that to steal by law is grown an art, Whom roques the alres, their milder sons call smart, And "alightly irregular" dilutes the shame Of what had once a somewhat blunter name. Lovell, Tempora Mutantur.

Specifically.—3. In human anat., being of no determinate shape, as a vertebra: said only of bones. Bones were formerly classed unnaturally in four categories, long, short, flat, and irregular. Most bones fall in the last-named category.

4. In zool.: (a) Not having a definite form; bilaterally or radially unsymmetrical; not having the form usual in a group; differing in an unusual manner from neighboring parts: as, an irregular third joint of an insect's antenna. (b) Not arranged in a definite manner, or varying in position or direction: as, irregular marks (that is, marks varying in size or distance from one another); irregular punctures or striae.

(c) In echinoderms, not exhibiting radial symmetry; exocyclic or petalostichous; spatangoid or clypeastroid: specifically said of the heart-urchins and other sea-urchins of the division Irregularia. See cut under petalostichous.—5. In bot., not having all the members of the same part alike: said of flowers. An irregular flower is one in which the members of some or all of its floral circles—for example, petals—differ from one another in size, shape, or extent of union, as in the bean, the violet, and the larkspur. The term is also used less specifically, and is often not discriminated from unsymmetrical.—Irregular antennis, in entom., those antennae in which one or more joints are very greatly developed beyond the others. But when this irregularity is confined to one sex the antennae are commonly said to be deformed.—Irregular body. See body.—Irregular cadence, an imperfect or deceptive cadence. See cadence.—Irregular determinant, in the theory of numbers, a determinant of a quadratic form where the forms of the principal genus are not all powers of some one.—Irregular indorsement, phrase, proof, relation, verb, etc. See the nouns.—Syn. 1 and 2. Unsettled, variable, changeable, mutable, unreliable; exceptional; fitful, capricious. In regard to conduct or ways of proceeding or managing, irregular generally expresses more blame than unmethodical or unsymmetrical, and less than anomalous or disorderly; it expresses less of foolishness than erratic, less of oddity than eccentric, less of carelessness than casual, and less of moral obliquity than devious or crooked. It expresses the fact of being out of conformity with rule, but implies nothing more with certainty. Yet the word is sometimes used in a sinister sense, as though it were a euphemism for something worse.

II. n. One who is not subject or does not conform to established regulations; especially, a soldier who is not in regular service, or a person practising medicine without belonging to the regular profession.

Some of those nations that in the last and present war are famous for furnishing (Austria's) armies with irregulars are known to have a great turn for trade. Goldsmith, Seven Years' War, iv.

Irregularist (ir-ē-gū-lār-ist), n. [irregular + -ist.] One who is irregular, or one who favors an irregular course or proceeding. Baxter.

Irregularity (ir-ē-gū-lār'i-ti), n.; pl. irregularities (-tiz). [= ME. irregularite, < OF. irregularite, F. irrégularité = Pr. irregularitat = Sp. irregularidad = Pg. irregularidade = It. irregolarità, < ML. irregularitas (-t-s), irregularity, < irregularis, irregular: see irregular.] 1. Lack of regularity; the state of being irregular; deviation from rule, method, order, course, uniformity, etc.; hence, impropriety; disorder; laxity; as, irregularity of proceedings; the irregularity of a curve; irregularity of life or conduct.

As these vast heaps of mountains are thrown together with so much irregularity and confusion, they form a great variety of hollow bottoms. Addison, Travels in Italy.

2. That which is irregular or out of due course; a part exhibiting divergence from the rest; hence, aberrant or immoral action or conduct: as, an irregularity on a surface; to be guilty of irregularities.

The ill methods of schools and colleges give the chief rise to the irregularities of the gentry. Ep. Burnet, Hist. Own Times, Conclusion.

Grandcourt had always allowed Lush to know his external affairs indiscriminately—irregularities, debts, want of ready money. George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xlviii.

3. In law, an act or proceeding not wholly beyond the power of the court or party, but done in a manner not warranted by the law or the state of the cause.—4. In bot., want of uniformity in size, shape, or measure of union among the members of the same floral circle.—5. Eccles., in the Rom. Cath. Ch., infraction of the rules governing admission to the clerical office and discharge of its functions; a canonical impediment to reception of orders, exercise of clerical functions, or advancement in the church. Irregularities are classed as (1) Ex defectu, from defects of mind, body, birth, age, liberty, the sacrament (that is, of marriage, including previous bigamy, etc.), lenity (involved in previous military service, homicide, etc.), and reputation (from notorious crime, judicial sentence, etc.); and (2) Ex delicto, from reception of heretical baptism or ordination, heresy, murder, etc. The term is used also in the Church of England, in which persons unable to pass their examinations, those with serious physical defects, under canonical age, notorious offenders, etc., are accounted irregular.

Irregularly (ir-ē-gū-lār-li), adv. In an irregular manner; without rule, method, or order.

Irregularly (ir-ē-gū-lār-li), adv. [in-3 + regularly.] To make irregular; to disorder.

Its fluctuations are but motions subservient; which winds, storms, shores, shelves, and every interagency irregularly. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii. 17.

Irregularous (ir-ē-gū-lār-us), a. [L. in-priv. + regular, rule: see regular.] Lawless; irregular; licentious.

Thou Conspir'd with that irregularous devil, Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord. Shak., Cymbeline, iv. 2, 214.

Irrejectable (ir-ē-jek'ta-bl), a. [in-3 + rejectable.] Incapable of being rejected.

The former [Calvinists] affirming grace to be irresistibly presented; the latter [Arminians] deny it to be irrejectable. Boyle, Works, I. 376.

Irrelapsable (ir-ē-lap'sa-bl), a. [in-3 + relapsable.] Not liable to lapse or relapse. Dr. H. More.

Irrelate (ir-ē-lāt'), a. [L. in-priv. + relatus, related: see relate.] Unrelated; irrelative. De Quincey.

Irrelated (ir-ē-lāt'ted), a. [in-3 + related.] Unrelated. [Rare.]

The only realm for him [Hume] were certain irrelated sensations, and out of these knowledge arises or becomes. Mind, XII. 2.

Irrelation (ir-ē-lā'shn), n. [in-3 + relation.] The state or quality of being irrelative; want of relation or connection.

The utter irrelation, in both cases, of the audience to the scene . . . threw upon each a ridicule not to be effaced. De Quincey, Autobiog. Sketches, I. 120.

Irrelative (ir-ē-lā'tiv), a. and n. [in-3 + relative.] 1. a. 1. Not relative; without mutual relations; unconnected. Boyle, Works, III. 23.

2. In music, not having tones in common; not connected or related: as, irrelative chords, keys, etc. (that is, chords, keys, etc., that have few or no tones in common).

II. a. That which is not relative or connected.

This same mental necessity is involved in the general inability we find of construing positively to thought any irrelative.
W. Hamilton.

irrelatively (i-rel'a-tiv-ly), adv. In an irrelative manner; without relation; unconnectedly.
Boyle, Works, II. 276.

irrelevancy (i-rel'ē-vāns), n. [irrelevant (t) + -cy.] Same as irrelevancy.

irrelevancy (i-rel'ē-vān-si), n. [irrelevant (t) + -cy.] The quality of being irrelevant or inapplicable; want of pertinence or connection.

I was unwilling to enlarge on the irrelevancy of his arguments.
T. Hook, Gilbert Gurney.

irrelevant (i-rel'ē-vānt), a. [= OF. irrelevant; as in-3 + relevant.] 1. Not relevant; not having relation; not applicable or pertinent.

Daily occurrences among ourselves prove that the desire to do something in presence of an emergency leads to the most irrelevant actions.

II. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., App. A.
 To concentrate the mind is to fix it persistently on an object or group of objects, resolutely excluding from the mental view all irrelevant objects.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 99.

2. In law, having no legitimate bearing on the real question. See immaterial, incompetent, relevant.—Fallacy of irrelevant conclusion. See fallacies in things (3), under fallacy.

irrelevantly (i-rel'ē-vānt-ly), adv. In an irrelevant manner.

irrelievable (ir-ē-lē'vā-bl), a. [in-3 + relievable.] Not relievable; not admitting relief.

irreligion (ir-ē-līj'ŋn), n. [= F. irréligion = Sp. irreligion = Pg. irreligido = It. irreligione, < LL. irreligio (n-), irreligio (n-), unconsciousness, irreligion, < L. in-priv. + religio (n-), religion: see religion.] Lack of religion; contempt of religion; impiety.

The two grand relations that concern society are government and subjection: irreligion doth indispense men for both these.
Sp. Wilkins, Natural Religion, II. 1.

irreligionist (ir-ē-līj'ŋn-ist), n. [irreligion + -ist.] One who condemns or opposes religion.

irreligiosity, n. [ME. irreligiosite, irreligiositee, < OF. irreligiosite, F. irreligiosité = It. irreligiosità; as irreligious + -ity.] Irreligiousness; irreligion.

The whole (the Lord) unto wrathe is stir'd upon his folk, for their irreligiositee.
Wyclif, 3 Ed. I. 52 (Oxf.).

irreligious (ir-ē-līj'us), a. [= F. irréligieux = Sp. Pg. It. irreligioso, < LL. irreligiosus, irreligiosus, irreligious, < L. in-priv. + religiosus, religious: see religious.] 1. Not religious; without religious principles; condemning religion; impious; ungodly.

It seldom or never chanceth that any man is so irreligious that he darest either hide any thing that is so taken, or piler any thing away that is so pyld.
Golding, tr. of Osmar, fol. 188.

Shame and reproach is generally the portion of the impious and irreligious.
South, Sermons.

2. Profane; wicked: as, irreligious conduct.

With our contentions their irreligious humour also is much strengthened.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 2.

Might not the queen's domesticks be obliged to avoid swearing, and irreligious profane discourse?
Swift.

—Syn. Irreligious, Godless, Ungodly, Unrighteous, Impious, Profane, Atheistic, are words expressing the position or conduct of those who deny the existence of a God or refuse to obey his commandments. Irreligious means destitute of religion as a principle, contemning religion and not checked by its restraints; godless, acknowledging no God, disregarding God and therefore his commandments, sinful, wicked; ungodly, essentially the same as godless, but stronger as to both feeling and action; unrighteous, disregarding right, contrary to right and by implication (right being with this word viewed chiefly as the personal will of God) not only wrong or unjust, but sinful; impious, irreverent or contemptuous toward God, defiant or wanton in irreligion; profane, impious by word or deed, irreverent or blasphemous; atheistic, holding the doctrine of the non-existence of a God (applied, on account of the natural tendency of men to deny the existence of a God where their spirit or manner of life is condemned by the teachings of the Christian religion, to whatever would be thus condemned or whoever thus denies). See Atheism.

irreligiously (ir-ē-līj'us-ly), adv. In an irreligious manner; with impiety; wickedly.

Perhaps no less dangerous to perform holy duties irreligiously than to receive holy signs or sacraments unworthily.
Milton, Civil Power.

irreligiousness (ir-ē-līj'us-ness), n. The state or quality of being irreligious; want of religious principles or practice; ungodliness.

If we consult the histories of former times, we shall find that saying of Solomon constantly verified, That righteousness doth exalt a nation, but sin doth prove a reproach to it. And more especially the sin of irreligiousness and profaneness.

Sp. Wilkins, Natural Religion, II. 6.

irremeable (i-rem'ē-a-bl), a. [= OF. irremeable = Pg. irremeavel = It. irremeabile, < L. irremeabilis, irremeabilis, from which one cannot come back, < in-priv. + remeabilis, that comes back, < remeare, come back, < re-, back, + meare, go, come: see meatus.] Not admitting of return; not retracable. [Rare.]

My three brave brothers in one mournful day All trod the dark, irremeable way.
Pope, Iliad, xix. 312.

irremediable (ir-ē-mē'di-a-bl), a. [= F. irré-médiable = Sp. irremediable = Pg. irremediavel = It. irremediabile, < L. irremediabilis, irremediabilis, incurable, < in-priv. + remediabilis, curable: see remediable.] Not remediable; beyond remedy; incapable of being cured, corrected, or redressed: as, an irremediable disease; irremediable evil.

They had also annexed unto them, perpetual transgression afore God, though not always afore men, they knottes beyng indyascable, & their snares irremediable.
Sp. Bale, Apology, fol. 152.

Now that it is over and irremediable, I am thinking with a sort of horror of a bad joke in the last number of Vanity Fair.
Thackeray, Letters, 1847-1855, p. 23.

—Syn. Incurable, remediless, irrefragable, irremovable. irremediableness (ir-ē-mē'di-a-bl-ness), n. The state or quality of being irremediable.

The first notice my soul hath of her sickness is irremediableness, irremediableness.
Donne, Devotions, p. 13.

irremediably (ir-ē-mē'di-a-bl-ly), adv. In an irremediable manner; in a manner or degree that precludes remedy or correction.

There is a worse mischief than this . . . which like the pestilence destroys in the dark, and grows into inconvenience more insensibly and more irremediably.
Jer. Taylor, Liberty of Prophesying, vill.

irremissible (ir-ē-mis'i-bl), a. [= F. irremissible = Sp. irremissible = Pg. irremissível = It. irremissibile, irremissibile, < LL. irremissibilis, irremissibilis, unpardonable, < in-priv. + remissibilis, pardonable: see remissible.] Not remissible; not capable of being remitted; unpardonable: as, an irremissible sin.

If some offenses be foul, others are horrible, and some others irremissible.
Sp. Hall, Satan's Fiery Darts, I.

irremissibleness (ir-ē-mis'i-bl-ness), n. The quality of being irremissible or unpardonable.
Hammond, Works, I. 487.

irremissibly (ir-ē-mis'i-bl-ly), adv. In an irremissible or unpardonable manner.

irremission (ir-ē-mis'ŋn), n. [= Sp. irremission; as in-3 + remission.] The act of refusing or delaying to remit or pardon; the act of withholding remission or pardon.

It is "It shall not be forgiven;" it is not "It cannot be forgiven." It is an irremission; it is not an irremissibleness.
Donne.

irremissive (ir-ē-mis'iv), a. [in-3 + remissive.] Not remissive or remitting.

irremittable (ir-ē-mit'a-bl), a. [in-3 + remittable.] Not remittable; irremissible; unpardonable.

He (Cookburne) writ also De vulgari sacre scripture phrasal, lib. ii. Whereof the first doth intreat of the sinne against the Holie Ghost, which they call irremittable or vnto death.
Zodneshead, Scotland, an. 1569.

irremovability (ir-ē-mō-vā-bl'it-i), n. [Also irremoveability: < irremovable: see -ility.] The quality or state of being irremovable.

irremovable (ir-ē-mō'vā-bl), a. [Formerly also irremoveable; < in-3 + removable. Cf. Sp. irremovible = Pg. irremovível = It. irremovibile.] 1. Not removable; not to be removed; not capable of or subject to removal; firmly fixed; stable.

Of constant devotion and irremoveable pletie to his Prince.
Holland, tr. of Kinetikus, p. 281.

The provision making the Supreme Commissioners . . . irremovable for four years was consistent with the general rule of Indian appointments.

Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., xv.

2. Inflexible; unyielding; immovable.

Resolved for flight. Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 518.

irremovableness (ir-ē-mō'vā-bl-ness), n. Irremovability.

irremovably (ir-ē-mō'vā-bl-ly), adv. In an irremovable manner; so as not to admit of removal; fixedly; inflexibly.

Firmly and irremovably fixed to the profession of the true Protestant religion.

Erasm. Misc., News from Brussels.

irremoval (ir-ē-mō'vā), n. [in-3 + removal.] Absence of removal; the state of being not removed. [Rare.]

irremunerable (ir-ē-mū'ng-rā-bl), a. [= OF. irremunerabile = Sp. irremunerable = It. irremunerabile, irremunerabile, < LL. irremunerabilis, irremunerabilis, < L. in-priv. + remunerabilis*, remunerable: see remunerable.] Not remunerable; incapable of being rewarded.
Cockeram.

irrenowned (ir-ē-nound'), a. [Formerly irrenowned; < in-3 + renowned.] Unrenowned; without renown; of no repute; obscure.

To slug in slouth and sensuall delights, And end their daies with irrenowned shame.
Spenser, F. Q., II. 1. 22.

irreparability (i-rep'a-rā-bl'it-i), n. [= F. irréparabilité = Sp. irrepairabilidad = Pg. irrepairabilidad; as irreparable + -ity: see -ility.] The quality or state of being irreparable, or beyond repair or recovery.

The poor fellow came back quite out of breath, with deeper marks of disappointment in his looks than could arise from the simple irreparability of the fragment.
Sterne, Sentimental Journey, The Fragment and the Bouquet.

irreparable (i-rep'a-rā-bl), a. [= F. irréparable = Fr. Sp. irrepairable = Pg. irrepairavel = It. irrepairabile, irreparable, < L. irrepairabilis, irreparabilis, not to be repaired or recovered, < in-priv. + reparabilis, that may be repaired: see reparable.] Not reparable; incapable of being repaired, rectified, or restored; that cannot be made right or good.

Then be ye sewer of a soden irreparable miserable destruction.
Joye, Expos. of Daniel, x.

The only loss irreparable is that of our probity.
Garth, Pref. to Trans. of Ovid.

irreparable injury, in law, an injury which, though not necessarily beyond repair or compensation, is so grave, or so outlasting in character, or productive of damage so difficult of estimation, as to constitute a grievance for which the right to recover damages does not afford reasonable redress.—Syn. See list under irremediable.

irreparableness (i-rep'a-rā-bl-ness), n. The state of being irreparable.

irreparably (i-rep'a-rā-bl-ly), adv. In an irreparable manner; irretrievably; irrecoverably: as, irreparably lost.

irrepassable (ir-ē-pās'a-bl), a. [OF. irrepasabile; as in-3 + repasable.] Not repassable; that cannot be recrossed or passed again.

He had past already (miserable) Of Styx so black the flood irrepasabile.
Hudson, tr. of Du Bartas's Judith, vi. 250.

irrepealability (ir-ē-pē-lā-bl'it-i), n. [irrepealable: see -ility.] The quality of being irrepealable.

irrepealable (ir-ē-pē-lā-bl), a. [in-3 + repealable.] Not repealable; incapable of being repealed or annulled.

'Tis such are the confidants that engage their irrepealable assents to every slight appearance.
Glenville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, xxiii.

irrepealableness (ir-ē-pē-lā-bl-ness), n. Irrepealability.

irrepealably (ir-ē-pē-lā-bl-ly), adv. In an irrepealable manner; so as to be beyond repeal.

Excommunications and censures are irrepealably transacted by them.
Sp. Gauden, Hieraspistia, p. 120.

irrepentance (ir-ē-pen'tāns), n. [in-3 + repentance.] Lack of repentance; impenitence.

There are some dispositions blameworthy in men, . . . as unchangeableness and irrepentance.
Sp. Hall, Select Thoughts, § 47.

irreplaceable (ir-ē-plā'a-bl), a. [in-3 + replaceable.] Not replaceable; that cannot be replaced; not admitting of replacement or substitution.

Once or twice in a century some author may appear so profoundly original that later times may cherish his works as inestimable and irreplaceable.
Contemporary Rev., LIV. 372.

irreplevable (ir-ē-plev'a-bl), a. [in-3 + replevable. Cf. ML. irreplegiabilis.] In law, incapable of being replevied.

irreplevisable (ir-ē-plev'i-zā-bl), a. [in-3 + replevisable.] Same as irreplevable.

irreprehensible (i-rep-rē-hen'si-bl), a. [= F. irrépréhensible = Sp. irreprensible = Pg. irreprensível = It. irreprensibile, irreprensibile, < LL. irreprensibilis, irreprensibilis, unblamable, < L. in-priv. + LL. reprehensibilis, blamable: see reprehensible.] Not reprehensible; not to be reprehended or censured; blameless.

Whose manners hath ben irreprehensible before the world.
Lyly, Euphuus, Anat. of Wit, p. 182.

They were sincerely good people, who were therefore blameless or irreprehensible.
Sp. Patrick, Ans. to the Touchstone, p. 122.

irreprehensibleness (i-rep-rē-hen'si-bl-ness), n. The quality of being irreprehensible.

irreprehensibility (i-rep-rē-hen'si-bli), adv. In an irreprehensible manner; so as to be irreprehensible; without blame.

irrepresentable (i-rep-rē-hen'ta-bli), a. [in-3 + representable.] Not representable; incapable of being represented; not admitting of representation.

God's irrepresentable nature doth hold against making images of God. Stillington.

irrepressible (ir-ē-pres'i-bl), a. [= F. irrépressible; as in-3 + repressible.] Not repressible; incapable of being repressed, restrained, or kept under control.

His irrepressible wrath at honour's wound!

Passion and maddest irrepressible!

Browning, Ring and Book, IV. 1129.

Irrepressible conflict. See conflict.

irrepressibly (ir-ē-pres'i-bli), adv. In an irrepressible manner or degree; so as to preclude repression.

irreproachable (ir-ē-prō'cha-bl), a. [= F. irréprochable = Sp. irrepachable; as in-3 + reproachable.] Not reproachable; not open to reproach or criticism; free from blame.

He was a serious, sincere Christian, of an innocent, irreproachable, nay, exemplary life. Bp. Atterbury.

He was irreproachable in his morals.

Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., II. 25.

-Syn. Unblamable, blameless, spotless, immaculate, faultless.

irreproachableness (ir-ē-prō'cha-bl-nes), n. The quality or state of being irreproachable.

irreproachably (ir-ē-prō'cha-bli), adv. In an irreproachable manner; blamelessly.

irreproducible (ir-ē-prō'dū'si-bl), a. [in-3 + reproducible.] Not reproducible; incapable of being reproduced.

Our science is by no means the only one concerned with phenomena which are at present to a large extent irreproducible. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, I. 149.

irreproductive (ir-ē-prō'duk'tiv), a. [= F. irréproductif; as in-3 + reproductif.] Not reproductive; incapable of reproducing. — Irreproductive function. See function.

irreprovable (ir-ē-prō'vā-bl), a. [= It. irreprouvabile; as in-3 + reprovable.] Not reprovable; not liable to reproof; blameless; unblamable.

These men he [our blessed saviour] chose to call from their irreprovable employment of fishing. J. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 48.

If among this crowd of virtues a falling crept in, we must remember that an apostle himself has not been irreprovable. Bp. Atterbury, Character of Luther.

irreprovableness (ir-ē-prō'vā-bl-nes), n. The character or state of being irreprovable.

irreprovably (ir-ē-prō'vā-bli), adv. So as not to be liable to reproof or blame.

irreption (i-rep'shən), n. [LL. irreptio(n), irreptio(n), a creeping in, LL. irreperere, irreperere, creep in, in, in, + repere, creep; see reptile.] A creeping in; stealthy entrance, as of a harmful influence.

By continual watchfulness . . . we shall lessen the inclination, and account fewer sudden irreptions.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 211.

irreptitious (ir-ep'tish'us), a. [LL. irreptus, pp. of irreperere, irreperere, creep in (see irreption), + -tious, as in arrepitious, surreptitious.] Creeping in; stealthily introduced; surreptitious. Castell.

irreputable (i-rep'ū-ta-bl), a. [in-3 + reputable.] Not reputable; disreputable.

Nor does he [Socrates] declare against their [the Athenians'] most predominant and not irreputable vices. Bp. Law, Life and Character of Christ.

irresilient (ir-ē-sil'i-gnt), a. [in-3 + resilient.] Not resilient.

irresistance (ir-ē-zis'tāns), n. [in-3 + resistance.] Non-resistance; passive submission.

Patience under affronts and injuries, humility, irresistance. Paley, Evidences, II. 2.

irresistibility (ir-ē-zis'ti-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. irrésistibilité = Sp. irresistibilidad = Pg. irresistibilidade; as irresistible + -ity; see ability.] The quality of being irresistible.

With what dreadful pomp is Opulence ushered in here! In what bold colours has the Poet drawn his impetuosity and irresistibility!

W. L. Lewis, tr. of Statius's Thebaid, x. 1059, note.

irresistible (ir-ē-zis'ti-bl), a. [= F. irrésistible = Sp. irresistible = Pg. irresistível = It. irresistibile; as in-3 + resistible.] Not resistible; incapable of being successfully resisted or opposed; superior to resistance or repulsion.

The Gospel means of grace, powerful as they are, yet are not, and ought not to be, irresistible.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. xiv.

That irresistible eloquence which at the distance of more than two thousand years stirs our blood, and brings tears into our eyes.

Macaulay, Milford's Hist. Greece.

Irresistible grace. See grace.

irresistibleness (ir-ē-zis'ti-bl-nes), n. The quality or state of being irresistible; irresistibility.

For the remoteness, violence, irresistibleness of the blow, are the enemies of the church described by the spears and dart. Bp. Hall, Defeat of Oruelty.

irresistibly (ir-ē-zis'ti-bli), adv. In an irresistible manner; so as to be irresistible.

If the doctrine of evolution had not existed, palaeontologists must have invented it, so irresistibly is it forced upon the mind by the study of the remains of the Tertiary mammalia which have been brought to light since 1859. Huxley, On "The Origin of Species."

irresistless (ir-ē-zist'les), a. [in-3 + resistless.] The negative is erroneously duplicated, namely, in-3 and -less.] Incapable of being resisted; irresistible. [A barbarous coinage.]

When beauty in distress appears,

An irresistless charm it bears.

Yalden, In Allusion to Horace, Odes, II. 4.

Rome, that shall stretch her irresistless reign

Wherever Ceres waves her golden grain.

Granger, tr. of Tibullus's Elegies, II. 5.

irresoluble (i-rez'ō-lū-bl), a. [= F. irresoluble = Sp. irresoluble = Pg. irresolúvel = It. irresolubile, LL. irresolubilis, irresolubilis, not to be dissolved; in-priv. + (LL.) resolubilis, that may be dissolved; see resoluble.] 1. Not resolvable; incapable of being resolved into elements or parts; indissoluble.

It may be here alleged that the productions of chemical analysis are simple bodies, and upon that account irresoluble. Boyle, Works, IV. 74.

2†. Incapable of being released or relieved.

The irresoluble condition of our souls after a known sin committed. Bp. Hall, Cases of Conscience, III. 9.

irresolubleness (i-rez'ō-lū-bl-nes), n. The quality of being irresoluble; incapability of or resistance to resolution or separation of parts.

Quercetanus himself, though the grand stickler for the tria prima, has this confession of the irresolubleness of diamonds. Boyle, Works, I. 514.

irresolute (i-rez'ō-lūt), a. [= F. irrésolu = Sp. Pg. irresoluto = It. irresoluto, irrisoluto, LL. irresolutus, irresolutus, not loosed, in-priv. + resolutus, loosed, resolved; see resolute.] Not resolute or firm in purpose; unable to form a resolution; wavering; given to doubt or hesitation.

A lukewarm, irresolute Man did never any thing well.

Lowell, Letters, II. 1.

The Scripture therefore alloweth not to the irresolute and the inconstant the name of men; they are said to be children, tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. xxiii.

-Syn. Vacillating, hesitating, undecided, unsettled, faltering.

irresolutely (i-rez'ō-lūt-li), adv. In an irresolute or wavering manner.

irresoluteness (i-rez'ō-lūt-nes), n. The state of being irresolute.

irresolution (i-rez'ō-lū'shən), n. [= F. irrésolution = Sp. irresolution = Pg. irresolução = It. irrisoluzione; as in-3 + resolution, after irresolute.] Lack of resolution; lack of decision or purpose; vacillation.

I was weary of continual irresolution, and a perpetual equipoise of the mind. Johnson, Rambler, No. 93.

-Syn. Indecision, hesitancy, wavering, faltering.

irresolvability (ir-ē-zol'vā-bil'i-ti), n. [in-3 + resolvable; see ability.] Absence of resolvability; the state or quality of being irresolvable.

irresolvable (ir-ē-zol'vā-bl), a. [in-3 + resolvable.] Not resolvable; incapable of being resolved.

The irresolvable nebulae which exhibit bright lines in all probability consist . . . of glowing gas without anything solid in them. J. Croft, Climate and Cosmology, p. 308.

irresolvableness (ir-ē-zol'vā-bl-nes), n. Irresolvability.

irresolved (ir-ē-zolv'd), a. [in-3 + resolved.] Not resolved; irresolute; not settled in opinion; undetermined.

Many ingenious men continue yet irresolved in this noble controversy. Boyle, Works, III. 198.

While a person is irresolved, he suffers all the force of temptation to call upon him. Stillington, Sermons, IV. xi.

irresolvedly (ir-ē-zol'ved-li), adv. Without settled opinion; inconclusively. [Rare.]

Divers of my friends have thought it strange to hear me speak so irresolvedly concerning those things which some take to be the elements, and others the principles, of all mixed bodies. Boyle, Works, III. 198.

irrespective (ir-ē-spek'tiv), a. [in-3 + repective.] 1†. Not regarding particular circumstances or conditions.

Thus did the Jew, by persuading himself of his particular irrespective election, think it safe to run into all sins. Hammond.

2. Regardless; not taking account; independent; followed by of before an object; also often used adverbially, there being no noun to which it can be directly attached: as, to do one's duty, irrespective of consequences.

No abstract intellectual plan of life

Quite irrespective of life's plainest laws.

Browning, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Irrespective of the form of government, frequent wars generate permanent military forces.

L. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 520.

3†. Not showing respect; disrespectful.

In irreverend and irrespective behaviour towards myself and some of mine.

Sir C. Cornwallis, Supp. to Cabala, p. 101.

irrespectively (ir-ē-spek'tiv-li), adv. Without regard to, or not taking into account, other matters or considerations: with of, formerly with to.

They advance to such a state of strength as to be able to feed on the solid meat of virtue, which is the discharge of our duty to God and man irrespectively to humane praise.

W. Montague, Devouta Emasy, L. x. § 4.

irrespirable (ir-ē-spir'a-bl), a. [LL. irrespirabilis, irrespirabilis, that cannot be breathed, LL. in-priv. + respirabilis*, that may be breathed; see respirable.] Not respirable; unfit for respiration: as, an irrespirable atmosphere.

irresponsibility (ir-ē-spon-si-bil'i-ti), n. [= F. irresponsabilité; as irresponsible + -ity; see ability.] The character or state of being irresponsible; lack of or freedom from responsibility.

The demands of society and the worry of servants so draw upon the nervous energy of women that they are glad to escape occasionally to the irresponsibility of hotel life. C. D. Warner, Their Pilgrimage, p. 7.

irresponsible (ir-ē-spon'si-bl), a. [= F. irresponsable; as in-3 + responsible.] 1. Not responsible; not subject to responsibility; not to be held accountable, or called into question: as, an irresponsible government; the irresponsible control of wealth.

That no unbridled potentate or tyrant, but to his sorrow for the future, may presume such high and irresponsible licence over mankind, to have and turn upside-down whole kingdoms of men, as though they were no more in respect of his puerile will than a nation of plimises.

Milton, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

They left the crown what, in the eye and estimation of law, it had ever been, perfectly irresponsible.

Burke, Rev. in France.

2. Not capable of or chargeable with responsibility; unable to respond to obligation, as an insolvent debtor; not subject to or incurring legal responsibility, as an infant or idiot for his acts; not of a responsible nature or character.

irresponsibly (ir-ē-spon'si-bli), adv. In an irresponsible manner; so as to be irresponsible.

irresponsive (ir-ē-spon'siv), a. [in-3 + responsive.] Not responsive; unanswering.

irresponsiveness (ir-ē-spon'siv-nes), n. The state of being irresponsible, or unable or unwilling to answer.

Insensibility to pain, though usual, is liable to still more frequent exceptions, as also is the irresponsiveness to the address of persons other than the operator.

E. Gurney, Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, II. 66.

irrestrainable (ir-ē-strā'nā-bl), a. [in-3 + restrainable.] Not restrainable; incapable of being restrained or held in check. Fryne, Treachery and Disloyalty, p. 81.

irresuscitable (ir-ē-sus'i-tā-bl), a. [in-3 + resuscitable.] Incapable of being resuscitated or revived.

irresuscitably (ir-ē-sus'i-tā-bli), adv. So as not to be resuscitated.

The inner man . . . sleeps now irresuscitably at the bottom of his stomach. Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, II. 2.

irretention (ir-ē-ten'shən), n. [in-3 + retention.] Absence of retention; the state or quality of being irretentive; want of power to retain.

From irretention of memory he [Kant] could not recollect the letters which composed his name.

De Quincey, Last Days of Kant.

irretentive (ir-ē-ten'tiv), a. [in-3 + retentive.] Not retentive or apt to retain.

His imagination irregular and wild, his memory weak and irretentive.

Shelton, Deism Revealed, IV.

irretraceable (ir-ē-trā'ea-bl), a. [in-3 + retraceable.] Not retraceable.

irretrievability (ir-ē-trē'vā-bil'i-ti), n. [in-3 + retrievable; see ability.] The state or condition of being irretrievable; incapability of recovery or reparation.

Pathetically shadowing out the fatal irretrievability of early errors in life. De Quincey, Secret Societies, II.

irretrievable (ir-ē-trē'vā-bl), a. [< in-3 + re-trievable.] Not retrievable; irrecoverable; irreparable: as, an irretrievable loss.

The condition of Gloriana, I am afraid, is irretrievable. Spectator, No. 423.

=Syn. See list under irremediable.

irretrievableness (ir-ē-trē'vā-bl-nes), n. The state of being irretrievable.

irretrievably (ir-ē-trē'vā-bli), adv. Irreparably; irrecoverably.

irreturnable (ir-ē-tēr'na-bl), a. [< in-3 + re-turnable.] Not returnable; incapable of returning or of being returned.

Forth irreturnable fleeth the spoken word. Mir. for Mays, p. 423.

irreveable (ir-ē-vē'la-bl), a. [< in-3 + re-veable.] Not revealable; incapable of being revealed.

irreveably (ir-ē-vē'la-bli), adv. So as not to be revealed.

irreverence (i-rēv'ē-rēns), n. [< ME. irreverence, < OF. irreverence, F. irrévérence = Pr. Sp. Pg. irreverencia = It. irreverenza, irrerverenza, inreverenza, < L. irreverentia, irreverentia, irreverence, < irreverens(-t-), irreverens(-t-), irreverent: see irreverent.] The quality of being irreverent; lack of reverence or veneration; lack of due regard to the authority and character of a superior or an elder; a manifestation of irreverent feeling.

Irreverence is when men do not honour ther as hem oughte to doon. Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

Others affirm (if it be not irreverence to record their opinion) that even in wit he [Virgil] seems deficient by many omissions.

Davenant, Gondibert, Pref., To Mr. Hobbes.

Not the slightest reverence was intended in these miracle-plays, which were only dramatic performances tolerated by the mediæval Church.

J. Wake, Idea of God, p. 115.

=Syn. Disrespect, incivility, discourtesy, rudeness (all toward elders or superiors).

irreverend (i-rēv'ē-rēnd), a. [< in-3 + reverend. Indef. 2 an erroneous form (simulating reverend) of irreverent.] 1. Not reverend; unworthy of reverence; devoid of dignity or respectability: as, the irreverend old age of a miser.—2. Irreverent.

If any man use immodest speech, or irreverend gesture or behaviour, or otherwise be suspected in life, he is like wise admonished, as before. Strype, Ann. Grindal, App. II.

irreverent (i-rēv'ē-rēnt), a. [< OF. irreverent, F. irrévérent = Sp. Pg. irreverente = It. irreverente, irrerverente, inreverente, < L. irreverens(-t-), irreverens(-t-), not reverent, < in-priv + reverens(-t-), reverent: see reverent.] Not reverent; manifesting or characterized by irreverence; deficient in veneration or respect: as, to be irreverent toward one's superiors or elders; an irreverent expression.

There are not so eloquent books in the world as the Scriptures; neither should a man come to any kind of handling of them with untruncised lips, as Moses speaks, or with an extemporal and irreverent, or over-humely and vulgar language. Dante, Hermans, v.

Sir Gawain—nay, Brother, I need not tell thee foolish words—A reckless and irreverent knight was he. Tennyson, Holy Grail.

I hope it will not be irreverent for me to say that if it is probable that God would reveal his will to others, on a point so connected with my duty, it might be supposed he would reveal it directly to me.

Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 212.

irreverential (i-rēv'ē-rēn'shal), a. [= ML. irreverentialis (rare); as in-3 + reverential.] Pertaining to or marked by irreverence. [Rare.]

Irreverential pleasure. George Eliot, Essays.

irreverently (i-rēv'ē-rēnt-li), adv. In an irreverent manner; without reverence.

Who can with patience hear this filthy, rascally fool speak so irreverently of persons eminent both in greatness and piety? Milton, Defence of the People of England.

irreversibility (ir-ē-vēr-si-blī'ti), n. [< irreversibile: see -bility.] The quality or condition of being irreversible; incapability of reversal or inversion.

irreversible (ir-ē-vēr-si-bl), a. [< in-3 + reversible.] 1. Not reversible; incapable of being reversed or inverted.—2. Not to be recalled or annulled.

An uncertain sentence, which must stand eternally irreversible, be it good or bad.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 333.

This rejection of the Jews, as it is not universal, so neither is it final and irreversible.

Jortin, Remarks on Eccles. Hist.

irreversibleness (ir-ē-vēr-si-bl-nes), n. The state or quality of being irreversible; irreversibility.

irreversibly (ir-ē-vēr-si-bli), adv. In an irreversible manner; so as not to be reversed or annulled.

irrevocability (i-rēv'ō-kā-blī'ti), n. [= F. irrevocabilité = Sp. irrevocabilidad = Pg. irrevocabildade = It. irrevocabilità; as irrevocabile + -ity: see -bility.] The state of being irrevocable.

irrevocable (i-rēv'ō-kā-bl), a. [= F. irrevocabile = Sp. irrevocable = Pg. irrevocavel = It. irrevocabile, irrevocabile, < L. irrevocabilis, irrevocabilis, that cannot be called back, < in-priv + revocabilis, that can be called back: see revocable.] Not revocable; not to be revoked or recalled; that cannot be repealed or annulled: as, an irrevocable decree.

Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.
Shak., As you like it, I. 3. 85.

irrevocableness (i-rēv'ō-kā-bl-nes), n. Irrevocability.

irrevocably (i-rēv'ō-kā-bli), adv. In an irrevocable manner; beyond recall; so as to preclude recall or repeal.

irrevoluble (i-rēv'ō-lū-bl), a. [< in-3 + revolvable.] Not revolvable; having no revolution.

Progressing the dateless and irrevolvable circle of eternity. Milton, Reformation in Eng., II.

irrheterical (ir-ē-tor'i-kəl), a. [< in-3 + rhetorical.] Not rhetorical; unpersuasive. [Rare.]

irrigable (ir'igā-bl), a. [*< L. as if irrigabilis, < irrigare, irrigate: see irrigate.] Capable of being irrigated; that may be made productive by irrigation.

The question of irrigating the arid but irrigable portion of our public domain is destined to become a leading one. Science, IV. 158.

irrigate (ir'i-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. irrigated, pp. irrigating. [< L. irrigatus, irrigatus, pp. of irrigare, irrigare (> It. irrigare = F. irriguer), bring water to or upon, wet, irrigate, < in, upon, + rigare, water, wet, moisten, akin to E. rain, q. v.] 1. To pass a liquid over or through; moisten by a flow of water or other liquid.

Lister for some years irrigated a wound with carbolic lotion during the operation, and at the dressing when it was exposed. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 679.

Specifically—2. To water, as land, by causing a stream or streams to be distributed over it. See irrigation.

irrigation (ir'i-gā'shon), n. [= F. irrigation = Pr. irrigação = Pg. irrigação = It. irrigazione, < L. irrigatio(n-), irrigatio(n-), a watering, < irrigare, irrigare, irrigate: see irrigate.] The act of watering or moistening; the covering of anything with water or other liquid for the purpose of making or keeping it moist, as in local medical treatment; especially, the distribution of water over the surface of land to promote the growth of plants. The irrigation of land is often artificially effected by elaborate and costly means, consisting of machinery for raising the water from streams or reservoirs, and ditches through which to distribute it; and many regions depend upon such artificial irrigation for their productiveness.

By irrigation is meant the application of the waters of a running stream by a riparian proprietor in the cultivation of his land by artificial means, and not the overflowing of its natural banks by periodical or extraordinary freshets or swellings of the stream beyond the customary quantity flowing therein. Washburn, Ess. and Serv. (3d ed.), p. 305.

Bedwork irrigation, a method of irrigation especially applicable to level ground, in which the earth is thrown into beds or ridges.—Upward irrigation, a method of irrigation in which the water rises upward through the soil, instead of being carried off through drains, as in the ordinary circumstances.

irrigator (ir'i-gā-tor), n. [< irrigate + -or.] One who or that which irrigates; specifically, an apparatus, such as a fountain-syringe, for washing a wound or a diseased surface, or a surface to be disinfected.

irriguous (ir'ig'ū-us), a. [= It. irriguo, < L. irriguus, irriguus, supplied with water, < in, in, upon, + riguus, watered, < rigare, water; cf. irrigate.] 1. Watered; watery; moist.

Like Gideon's fleece, irriguous with a dew from heaven, when much of the vicinag is dry.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 610.

With ale irriguous, undrunk I hear
The frequent dun ascend my lofty dome
Impertunate. Warton, Oxford Ale, p. 157.

2. Of such a nature as to irrigate; affording irrigation.

Rash Elpenor, who in evil hour
Dry'd an immeasurable bowl, and thought
To exhale his surfeit by irriguous sleep.
J. Phillips, Cider, II.

[Obsolete or archaic in both uses.]

irrisible (i-ris'i-bl), a. [< in-3 + risible.] Not risible; incapable of laughter. Campbell. [Rare.]

irrisation (i-rizh'on), n. [= F. irrisation = Sp. irrisión = Pg. irrisão = It. irrisione, irrisione, < L. irrisio(n-), irrisio(n-), a mocking, deriding, < irridere, irridere, laugh at, mock, deride, < in, in, on, to, + ridere, laugh; cf. derision.] The act of sneering or laughing derisively; mockery; derision. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Then he againe, by way of irrisation. Ye say very true indeed—That will ye, quoth hee, when a mule shall bring forth a foale. Holland, tr. of Suetonius, p. 212.

irrisor (i-rī'sor), n. [NL., < L. irrisor, irrisor, a derider, mocker, scoffer, < irridere, irridere, laugh at; see irrisation.] 1. The leading and name-giving genus of birds of the family Irri-sorida, founded by Lesson in 1831. I. erythrorhynchus, the best-known species, is glossy-blackish, with Wood-hoopoe (Irri-sor erythrorhynchus).

coralline bill and feet, and the lateral tail-feathers white-tipped. Irrisor (Scopelus) alerrinus and Irrisor (Rhinopannatus) cyanomelas are other examples.

2. [i. e.] Any bird of the genus Irrisor or family Irri-sorida: as, the black irrisor; the Namaqua irrisor.

Irri-sorida (ir-i-sor'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Irri-sor + -idae.] An African family of picarian birds, related to the Upupidae, having a long, slender, curved bill, as in that family, but the tail long and graduated, the head crestless, and the plumage glossy; the irrisors or wood-hoopoes. These birds are of arboreal and social habits, though not yoke-tied; they are restless and noisy, and emit an offensive odor. There are 6 or 8 well-determined species, of the genera Irri-sor, Scopelus, and Rhinopannatus. See cut under Irri-sor.

irrisory (ir'i-sō-ri), a. [= Sp. Pg. It. irrisorio, < LL. irrisorius, irrisorius, mocking, < irrisor, irrisor, a mocker: see Irri-sor.] Addicted to laughing derisively or sneering at others.

I wish that, even there, you had been less irrisory, less of a pleader. Landor.

irritability (ir'i-tā-blī'ti), n. [= F. irritabilité = Sp. irritabilidad = Pg. irritabilidade = It. irritabilità, < L. irritabilis(t-), irritabilis(t-), irritability, < irritabilis, irritabilis, irritable: see irritate.] 1. The quality of being irritable; an irritable state or condition of the mind; proneness to mental irritation; irascibility; petulance: as, irritability of temper.

Towards Phoebe, as we have said, she was affectionate, yet with a continually recurring pettishness and irritability. Hawthorne, Seven Gables, VII.

2. In physiol., the property of nerve, muscle, or other active tissue of reacting upon stimuli; in muscles, specifically, the property of contracting when stimulated.

The irritability of the nerves and muscles is permanently maintained only so long as both are acted upon in their natural positions by the circulating blood.

Loeb, Microcosmus (trans.), I. 100.

3. In bot., that endowment of a vegetable organism by virtue of which a motion takes place in it in response to an external stimulus. Such motion may be obvious in a special organ and sudden, as in the sensitive-plants and Venus's fly-trap, or slow, as in the coiling of a tendril; or it may be internal in the protoplasm, of which while living irritability is a fundamental property, and from which, indeed, the outward motion proceeds. "The external stimulus may be mechanical, simply the contact of a foreign body, or electrical, or chemical; a sudden change from light to darkness, or a variation in the intensity of the illumination. Sometimes acts as a stimulus." (Vines, Physiology of Plants, p. 301.) Irritability is nearly the same as sensitiveness. See sensitive-plant, protoplasm.

irritable (ir'i-tā-bl), a. [= F. irritable = Sp. irritable = Pg. irritavel = It. irritabile, < L. irritabilis, irritabilis, easily excited, < irritare, irritare, excite: see irritate.] 1. Susceptible to mental irritation; liable to the excitement of anger or passion; irascible; petulant.

Some minds corrode and grow inactive under the loss of personal liberty; others grow morbid and irritable.

Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 102.

2. Susceptible to physical irritation; capable of being stimulated to action by external agency; liable to contract, shrink, become inflamed, etc., when excited or stimulated: as, irritable nerves; an irritable wound.—3. Specifically, in physiol. and bot., possessing the property of irritability.

Strictly speaking, the glands ought to be called irritable, as the term sensitive generally implies consciousness; but no one supposes that the sensitive plant is conscious. Darwin, Insectiv. Plants, p. 19.

4. Responding quickly to a stimulus; sensitive; impressible.

One cannot help having an irritable brain, which rides an idea to the moon and home again, without stirrups, whilst some folks are getting the harness of words on to its back. J. H. Swings, Dandelion Clocks.

Our modern nerves, our irritable sympathies, our easy discomforts and fears, make one think (in some relations) less respectfully of human nature. H. James, Jr., Little Tour, p. 220.

—Syn. 1. Passionate, etc. (see irascible); fretful, peevish. irritableness (ir'i-tā-bl-nēs), n. The quality or state of being irritable; irritability.

irritably (ir'i-tā-blī), adv. In an irritable manner; so as to cause or manifest irritation.

irritament (ir'i-tā-mēt), n. [= OF. irritament = Sp. irritamento = Pg. iritamento = It. iritamento, irritamento, < L. iritamentum, iritamentum, an incitement, provocative, < irritare, irritare, incite: see irritate.] An irritating cause or irritant; a provocative; an incentive.

Irregular dispensations . . . are . . . the perilous irritaments of carnal and spiritual enmity. N. Ward, quoted in Tyler's Amer. Lit., I. 223.

*irritancy*¹ (ir'i-tān-sī), n. [< irritant (s) + -cy.] The state of being irritant or of exciting irritation; the quality of irritating.

*irritancy*² (ir'i-tān-sī), n. [< irritant (s) + -cy.] In Scots law, the state of being irritant or of no force, or of being null and void. Imp. Dict.

*irritant*¹ (ir'i-tānt), a. and n. [= F. irritant = Sp. Pg. It. irritante, < L. irritant (s), irritant (s), ppr. of irritare, irritare, excite: see irritate.] 1. a. Irritating; exasperating; specifically, producing pain, heat, or tension; causing inflammation: as, an irritant poison.

2. n. That which irritates or exasperates; specifically, a therapeutic agent that causes pain, heat, or tension, or a poison that produces inflammation.

Many of the Ranunculaceae are irritant poisons. . . . Clematis is one of the best known irritants of this class. Lindley, Vegetable Kingdom.

*irritant*² (ir'i-tānt), a. [< LL. irritant (s), irritant (s), ppr. of irritare, irritare, make void, invalidate: see irritate.] Rendering null and void. [Rare.]

The states elected Henry, duke of Anjou, for their king, with this clause irritant: that if he did violate any part of his oath, the people should owe him no allegiance. Sir J. Hayward, Ann. to Doleman, v.

Irritant clause, in Scots law, a clause in a deed declaring void specified acts if done by the party holding under the deed.

*irritate*¹ (ir'i-tāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. irritated, ppr. irritating. [< L. irritatus, irritatus, pp. of irritare, irritare (> It. irritare = Sp. Pg. irritar = F. irriter, > E. irritel), excite, irritate, incite, stimulate.] 1. To excite to resentment or anger; annoy; vex; exasperate: as, to be irritated by an officious or a tedious person.

Not to molest, or irritate, or raise
A laugh at his expense, is slender praise.

Copper, Retirement, I. 318.

2. To excite to automatic action by external agency, as organic tissue; produce motion, contraction, or inflammation in by stimulation: as, to irritate the skin by chafing or the nerves by teasing.

When a nerve is irritated not far from its termination in a muscle, the effect is but small. H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 19.

3. To give greater force or energy to; excite. Cold maketh the spirits vigorous, and irritates them. Bacon.

Music too,
By Spartans lov'd, is temper'd by the law;
Still to her plan subservient melts in notes,
Which cool and soothe, not irritate and warm.

—Syn. 1. Provokes, Incites, etc. (see exasperate); fret, chafe, nettle, sting, annoy, gall, inflame, excite, anger, enrage.

*irritate*² (ir'i-tāt), a. [< L. irritatus, pp.: see the verb.] Excited; exasperated; intensified.

The heat becomes more violent and irritate, and thereby expelleth sweat. Bacon.

*irritate*³ (ir'i-tāt), v. t. [< LL. irritatus, irritatus, pp. of irritare, irritare, make void, invalidate.

idate, < L. irritus, irritus, void, invalid: see irritus.] To render null and void. Bromhall.

irritating (ir'i-tā-ting), p. a. Causing irritation; vexing; provoking; exasperating.

Poor relations are undeniably irritating. George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, I. 2.

The peasantry of France, though freed from the most oppressive, were still subject to some of the most irritating of feudal burdens. Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., III.

irritatingly (ir'i-tā-ting-lī), adv. In an irritating manner or degree; so as to irritate.

Her story, it is right to add, is not only fearfully crude, but irritatingly well-intentioned also. Athenaeum, No. 3194, p. 49.

irritation (ir'i-tā-shn), n. [= F. irritation = Sp. irritación = Pg. irritação = It. iritazione, irritazione, < L. irritatio (n), irritatio (n), < irritare, irritare, excite: see irritate.] 1. The act of irritating, or the state of being irritated; impatient or angry excitement; provocation; exasperation.

It may appear strange that Marlborough should have continued in command in spite of so many causes of irritation, but he was implored by his Whig friends to do so. Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., I.

2. Stimulation; incitement; a stirring up to activity. [Rare.]

Therefore was nothing committed to historie but matters of great and excellent persons & things, that the same by irritation of good courages (such as emulation causeth) might worke more effectually. Puttenham, Arto of Eng. Poets, p. 32.

The whole body of the arts and sciences composes one vast machinery for the irritation and development of the human intellect. De Quincey.

3. In physiol., the act of evoking some action, or change of state, in a muscle, nerve, or other living tissue, by some chemical, physical, or pathological agent; the state or action thus evoked.

irritative (ir'i-tā-tiv), a. [= F. irritatif = Sp. Pg. It. irritativo; as irritate + -ive.] 1. Serving to excite or irritate.

Every irritation produces in the cellular elements some mechanical or chemical change, which change is a "counter-working against the irritative cause." Copland, Dict. Pract. Med.

2. Accompanied with or produced by irritation. —Irritative fever. See fever.

irritatory (ir'i-tā-tō-ri), a. [< irritate + -ory.] Exciting; stimulating; irritating. [Rare.]

The other peradventure is sufficiently grounded for principles of faith, yet is weak by reason either of some passion, or of some irritatory and troublesome humour in his behaviour. Hales, Golden Remains, p. 45.

*irritate*¹, v. t. [< F. irriter, < L. irritare, incite, irritate: see irritate.] To irritate; exasperate; influence; provoke.

Irriting and provoking men unto anger. Grafton, Edw. V., an. 1.

*irrite*² (i-rit'), a. [< ME. irrite, < OF. irrite = Sp. irrito = Pg. It. irritō, < L. irritus, irritus, undecided, unfixed, invalid, void, < in- priv. + ratus, decided, fixed: see rate.] Invalid; of no force; vain; ineffectual; useless.

Those irrite, forceless, bugbear excommunications, the ridiculous affirmations of a mercenary power, are not unlike those old night-spells which blind people had from mongrel witches. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 180.

irrorate (ir'ō-rāt), v. t. [< L. irroratus, irroratus, pp. of irrorare, irrorare, wet with dew (> It. irrorare, irrorare = Pg. irrorar), < in, upon, + rorare, distil dew, < ros (ror-), dew.] To moisten with dew.

irrorate (ir'ō-rāt), a. [< L. irroratus, pp.: see the verb.] In soil, dotted with white or light color, as if with dewdrops; in entom., marked with minute dots of color: said especially of the wings of lepidoptera when numerous single scales differ from the ground color.

irrorated (ir'ō-rāt-ed), a. [< irrorate + -ed.] Same as irrorate.

irrotation (ir'ō-rā-shn), n. [= F. irrotation; as irrotate + -ion.] 1. The act of bedewing, or the state of being moistened with dew.

If during the discharge the irrotation should be interrupted, the portion of eggs then excluded will be barren, while the rest will be found to have been fecundated. Trans. of Spallanzani's Dissections. (Latham).

2. In entom., an ill-defined color-mark formed by scattered dots or scales, as on a butterfly's wing.

irrotational (ir'ō-tā-shn-gl), a. [< in- + rotational.] Not rotational; devoid of rotation.

The equations which form the foundations of the mathematical theory of fluid motions were fully laid down by Lagrange and the great mathematicians of the end of the last century, but the number of solutions of cases of fluid motion which had been actually worked out remained very small, and almost all of these belonged to a particular type of fluid motion, which has been since named the irrotational type. Encyc. Brit., III. 42.

Irrotational motion in hydrodynamics, of a fluid, a motion in which the infinitesimal parts have no angular velocity of rotation about their own axes—that is to say, if any infinitesimal spherical particle of the fluid were suddenly to become solidified, it would move without turning, although its path would not generally be rectilinear. Though all the particles of a fluid were moving in parallel straight lines, its motion would not necessarily be irrotational; for if parts moving side by side had different velocities, a solidified particle would rotate.

irrubrical (ir'ō-brī-kāl), a. [< in- + rubrical.] Not rubrical; contrary to the rubric.

irrugate (ir'ō-gāt), v. t. [< L. irrugatus, irrugatus, pp. of irrugare, irrugare, wrinkle, < in, in, upon, + rugare, wrinkle: see rugate.] To lay in folds; wrinkle.

That the swelling of their body might not irrugate and wrinkle their faces. Palace of Pleasure, I. F. 4. (Nares).

irrupted (i-rup'ted), a. [< L. irruptus, irruptus, pp. of irrumper, irrumper, break or burst in, rush in, < in, in, + rumper, break, burst: see rupture.] Broken violently; disrupted. [Rare.]

irruption (i-rup'shn), n. [= F. irruption = Sp. irrupción = Pg. irrupção = It. irruzione, < L. irruptio (n), irruptio (n), a breaking or bursting in, < irrumper, irrumper, pp. of irruptus, irruptus, break in: see irrupted.] A bursting in; a breaking or rushing into a place; a sudden invasion or incursion.

Least evil tidings, with too rude irruption
Hitting thy aged ear, should pierce too deep.
Milton, S. A., I. 1567.

In 1593 the Austrians made an irruption into the territory of Glarus with an army of fifteen thousand men. J. Adams, Works, IV. 318.

A grand irruption of angels follows, filling the sky with song and holy gratulation.

Bushnell, Sermons on Living Subjects, p. 12.

—Syn. Foray, raid. irruptive (i-rup'tiv), a. [< irrupt (ed) + -ive.] Bursting in; rushing in or upon anything.

Storms of wrath and indignation dread Seem ready to displode irruptive on his head.
Whitman, Ode to Justice.

Irvingia (er-vin'ji-ē), n. [NL. (Hooker, 1860), named after Dr. Irving, R. N.] A small genus of dicotyledonous plants, of the natural order Simarubaceae. It is characterized by having the calyx 4- or 5-parted, the petals 4 or 5 in number, the stamens 10, and the ovary 2-celled. They are trees with curious annulated branches, alternate simple and entire leaves, and axillary or terminal panicles of small, yellow, odorous flowers. Three species, natives of tropical western Africa, are known. 1. Barteri, a tree 40 feet high, is the wild mango, dika-bread, or bread-tree of western Africa. The seeds are the part eaten, and also contain an oil or fat similar to cocoa-butter, which is used by the natives in cooking.

Irvingism (er'ving-izm), n. [< Irving (see def.) + -ism.] The system of religious doctrine and practice peculiar to Edward Irving or the Irvingites, or adherence to that system. See Irvingite.

Great writers, of world-wide fame, have devoted themselves to studying Gnosticism and Montanism, but scorn to bestow a thought on Quakerism, Irvingism, and above all on Methodism. Contemporary Rev., LIV. 112.

Irvingite (er'ving-it), n. [< Irving (see def.) + -ite.] A member of a religious denomination called after Edward Irving (1792-1834), a minister of the Church of Scotland, who was settled in London in 1822, promulgated mystical doctrines, and was excommunicated in 1833. Irving was not the founder of the sect popularly called after him, but accepted and promoted the spread of the principles upon which, after his death, the sect was formed. Its proper name is the Catholic Apostolic Church, and it has an elaborate organization derived from its twelve "apostles," the first body of whom was completed in 1835. It recognizes the orders of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors or "angels," elders, deacons, etc. It lays especial stress on the early creeds, the eucharist, prophecies, and gift of tongues. It has an extremely ritualistic service and an elaborate liturgy. The adherents are not numerous, and are found chiefly in Great Britain. There are some on the continent of Europe and in the United States.

Ir'y (ir'i), a. [< ire + -y.] Angry.

We flame with that which doth our souls refine;
For in our Soules the ir'y pow'r it is That makes vs at vnhalloved thoughts repine.
Davies, Microcosmos, p. 74.

is (iz). The third person singular present indicative of the verb be. See be. The form is was formerly, and is still dialectally, used for all persons of the singular, and in negro speech also for all persons of the plural. Such use in Chaucer, as in modern authors, is in imitation of dialect speech.

I is as file a millers as are ye.
Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, I. 126.

It hall, by God, Aleyn, thou & a fenne.
Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, I. 129.

-is¹. An obsolete form of -es¹.

-is². An obsolete form of -es².

isaac (i'sak), n. [A corrupted form of kaysuck, q. v.] The hedge-sparrow. Halliwel.

isabel, isabelle (iz-a-bel), n. [F. Isabelle = It. isabella = Pg. isabel (Sp. isabellina, adj.), a color so called; Isabelle, a woman's name. Color terms are often taken from personal or local names without any particular reason; and there is no need to put faith in the stories which connect the name with that of various Isabelles of history.] A yellowish-gray or grayish-buff color; a kind of drab. A mixture by rotating disks of 1 black, 1 bright chrome-yellow, and 1 white gives an isabel-yellow. Also isabella, isabel-yellow.

Isabella, daughter of Philip II. and wife of the Archduke Albert, vowed not to change her linen till Ostend was taken; this siege, unluckily for her comfort, lasted three years; and the supposed colour of the archduchess's linen gave rise to a fashionable colour, hence called l'Isabeau, or the Isabella; a kind of whitish-yellow-dingy.

J. D'Israeli, Curios. of Lit., I. 238.

The colour of the Fennec is a very pale fawn, or isabel colour, sometimes being almost of a creamy whiteness.

J. G. Wood, Pop. Nat. Hist., p. 73.

isabelite (iz-a-bel'it), n. [Isabel, a woman's name, + -ite.] A West Indian name of the angel-fish, Pomacanthus ciliaris.

isabella (iz-a-bel'it), n. [See isabel.] Same as isabel.

Similarly white, but with the ornamental feathers of the head, breast, and back of a rusty isabella color, is the buff-backed cattle egret.

Stand. Nat. Hist., IV. 178.

If, on being removed therefrom and rinsed in cold water, the swatch assumes, when immersed in a solution of acetate of alumina, a deep yellowish tinge (isabella colour), the oiling is quite what it should be.

W. Crookes, Dyeing and Calico-printing, p. 324.

isabella-wood (iz-a-bel'it-wud), n. The red bay, Persea carolinensis.

isabelle, n. See isabel.

isabelline (iz-a-bel'in), a. [= Sp. isabellina, < NL. isabellinus; as isabel + -ine.] Resembling isabel; of the hue called isabel.

The upper plumage of every bird . . . is of one uniform isabelline or sand color.

Canon Tristram, Ornith., of N. Africa (in the Ibis).

isabellina bear, the Ursus isabellinus, a pale variety of the Syrian bear (Ursus syriacus), found in the Himalayas.

isabel-yellow (iz-a-bel-yel'od), n. Same as isabel.

isabnormal (i-sab-nor'mal), a. Same as isobnormal.

isadelphous (i-sa-del'fus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + adelphos, brother.] In bot., having the stamens in the phalanges or bundles equal in number, as some diadelphous flowers.

isagogic (i-sa-goj'ik), n. [Also isagogue; < L. isagogus, isagoga, < Gr. isagōgē, an introduction, < isagō, lead in, introduce, < eis, into, + agō, lead, see act.] An introduction. — The Isagoge of Porphyry, an introduction to the book of Categories of Aristotle, written by the Neoplatonist Porphyry in the third century A. D. It treats mainly of the five predicables.

isagogical (i-sa-goj'ik), a. [L. isagogicus, < Gr. isagōgikos, introductory, < isagōgē, introduction; especially, introductory to the interpretation of the Bible.

The formal, introductory or isagogic studies have a wide range, requiring, perhaps more than any other, educated faculty and the scientific mind.

Contemporary Rev., LI. 208.

isagogical (i-sa-goj'ik), a. [L. isagogic + -al.] Same as isagogic.

isagogics (i-sa-goj'iks), n. [Pl. of isagogic; see -ics.] That department of the theological study which treats of the books forming the canon of Scripture, individually and collectively, their authorship, the date and place of their composition, their contents, style, inspiration, and any particular questions connected with them. Also called Biblical introduction.

isagogist, n. Same as isagogic.

isalaic (i-sa-lan'ik), a. [Isaiah + -an + -ic.] Pertaining to Isaiah, a Hebrew prophet and the traditional author of the book of Isaiah.

The question of the Isalaic or non-Isalaic origin of the disputed prophecies (especially xl. — lvi.) must be decided on grounds of exegesis alone.

Encyc. Brit., XIII. 378.

isandrons (i-san'drus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + andros (androp), a male (in mod. bot. a stamen).] In bot., having the stamens similar and equal in number to the divisions of the corolla.

isantherous (i-san'ther-us), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + anthos, flowery; see anther.] In bot., having the anthers equal. Thomas, Med. Diet. [Rare.]

isanthus (i-san'thus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + anthos, a flower.] In bot., having regular flowers.

isanthus (i-san'thus), n. [NL. (F. A. Michaux, 1808), so called in allusion to the nearly regular corolla; < Gr. isos, equal, + anthos, flower.] A monotypic genus of North American plants, of the natural order Labiata, having a 5-lobed regular bell-shaped calyx, and a corolla with a bell-shaped border and 5 nearly equal spreading lobes. The single species, I. canadensis, the false pennyroyal, is a low, much-branched annual plant, with nearly entire lanceolate leaves and small pale-blue flowers on axillary peduncles. It occurs from Maine to Illinois and southward.

isapostolic (i-sap-os-tol'ik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + apostolikos, apostolic; see apostolic.] Equal to the apostles: an epithet specifically given in the calendar of the Greek Church to bishops of apostolic consecration (for instance, St. Abercius of Hieropolis), holy and eminent women of the apostolic company (as St. Mary Magdalene and St. Thecla), the first preachers of the Christian faith in a country (as St. Nina in Georgia), and persons of royal or princely rank who have promoted the success of Christianity (as St. Constantine and St. Helena).

Isaria (i-sa'ri-a), n. [NL. (Elias Fries, 1829), so called in allusion to likeness of organs; < Gr. isos, equal.] The typical genus of fungi of the natural order Isariaceae. They are focussed in appearance, with an elongated receptacle. They are found on a great variety of substances: some species, as I. pulveracea and I. Spinkiana, attack and destroy various insects. (K. L. Trouessart, Microbes (trans.), pp. 48, 49.) From observations of Tulane, it is now believed that some reputed species of Isaria, including I. Spinkiana, I. farinosa, and I. arachnophila, are really only conditions in species of other genera.

Isariaceae (i-sa-ri-a'se-ae), n. pl. [NL. < Isaria + -aceae.] A natural order of hyphomycetous fungi, or filamentous molds, containing those genera in which the fertile threads are compacted and have deciduous pulverulent spores at their free apices. The spellings Isariaceae, Isariaceae, Isariaceae, and Isariaceae have been used by different authors, and the group has been called a family, tribe, division, etc., with some variation in its scope.

isarioid (i-sa'ri-oid), a. [Isaria + -oid.] In bot., belonging to or resembling the genus Isaria.

isathyd (i-sa-thid), n. [Isat (in) + hyd (rogen).] A substance formed from isatin by its uniting with one equivalent of hydrogen.

isatic (i-sat'ik), a. [Isat + -ic.] Of or pertaining to isatin; derived from isatin: as, isatic acid (C₈H₇NO₃), an acid formed by the action of caustic alkalis upon isatin.

Isatidæ (i-sa-tid'e-æ), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1821), < Isat + -idæ + -æ.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Crucifera, typified by the genus Isatis, characterized by having the silique short, indehiscent, inarticulate, often crustaceous, winged, and 1-celled and 1-seeded or rarely 2-seeded. Also written Isatidæ.

isatin (i-sa-tin), n. [Isat + -in.] A compound (C₈H₅NO₃) obtained by oxidizing indigo. It forms hyacinth-red or reddish-orange crystals of a brilliant luster. Its solutions stain the skin, and give it a disagreeable odor.

Isatis (i-sa-tis), n. [NL., < L. isatis, < Gr. isatis, an herb with a milky juice used in healing wounds, a coloring plant, wood.] A genus of plants of the natural order Crucifera, the type of the tribe Isatidæ, having the pod large, orbicular, oblong or linear, corneous, and with the margin coriaceous or foliaceous. They are annual or perennial erect herbs, with entire leaves, and the cauline sagittate in outline. About 80 (or, according to some authors, 60) species are known. They are natives of Europe, northern Africa, and northern and middle Asia. One species, I. tinctoria, called wood or ape-of-Jerusalem, was cultivated by the ancient Britons to stain the skin blue, but it is now cultivated in few localities. I. indigotica is still cultivated as a dye-plant in the north of China.

isatis (i-sa-tis), n. [NL. isatis, a specific name, Canto isatis, bestowed by J. G. Gmelin (1760): said to be from a vernacular name.] The white or arctic fox, Vulpes lagopus.

The isatis, or Arctic fox.

J. D. Godman, Amer. Nat. Hist. (2d ed.), I. 308.

Isariotical (is-kar-i-ot'ik-al), a. [Isariot (see def.) + -al.] Of or pertaining to Judas Isariot, and to one of Christ's twelve apostles who betrayed him; Judas-like; treacherous.

In the Evangelical and reformed use of this sacred name, no such prostitution, no such Isariotical drifts are to be doubted, as that spiritual doom and sentence should invade worldly possession.

Milton, Reformation in Eng., II.

ischt, ischet, v. t. See ish.

ischemia, ischæmic. See ischemia, ischæmic.

ischæmia, ischæmic (is-k'e-mi-æ), n. [NL., < Gr. ischēmos, stanching blood, styptic, < ischē, hold, + aima, blood.] In pathol., local anemia produced by vasoconstriction or by other local obstacles to the arterial flow.

Bothmund mentions two . . . cases of ischæmia of the retina.

J. & Wells, Dis. of Eye, p. 308.

ischemic, ischæmic (is-k'e-mik), a. [ischemia + -ic.] Pertaining to or affected with ischemia.

ischæsis (is-k'e-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ischēsis, hold, restrain, a form of ischē, hold, have; see ischē.] Suppression or retention of a discharge or secretion. Dunglison.

ischia, n. Plural of ischium.

ischiatric (is-ki-atic), a. [= Pg. ischiadico, < L. ischiatricus, < Gr. ischiatikos, of or relating to the hips, having gout in the hips, < ischia (ischia), gout in the hips, sciatica, prop. adj. (sc. vōros, disease), < ischion, the hip-joint, the hips; see ischium.] Same as ischiatric.

ischialgia (is-ki-ag'ia), n. [Gr. ischion, the hip-joint, + algos, a taking; see podagra, chiroagra, etc.] In pathol., gout in the hip; ischialgia.

ischial (is-ki-al), a. [ischium + -al.] Same as ischiatric. — Ischial callosity. See callosity.

ischialgia (is-ki-al'ji-æ), n. [Gr. ischion, hip-joint, + algos, pain.] In pathol., pain in the region of the ischium; sciatica.

ischiatric (is-ki-at'ik), a. [= Pg. ischiadico; var. of ischiatric, taken as < Gr. ischion, hip, + -atic. Cf. sciatic, sciatica.] Of or pertaining to the ischium; sciatic. Also ischiatric, ischial.

Ischiatic symphysis, a remarkable union of right and left ischia which occurs in some birds, as the American ostrich.

ischiatocoele (is-ki-at'ō-sēl), n. An improper form of ischiotocoele.

ischiocapsular (is'ki-ō-kap'sū-lār), a. [NL. ischium + L. capsula, capsule; see capsule.] Ischiatic and capsular: applied to that part of the capsular ligament of the hip-joint which is connected with the ischium.

ischiocaudal (is'ki-ō-kā-dal), a. and n. [NL. ischium, hip-joint, + L. cauda, tail; see caudal.] I. a, Of or pertaining to the ischium and the tail: applied to a muscle connecting these parts.

II. n. A muscle which in some animals passes from the ischium to the tail.

ischioavernosus (is'ki-ō-kav'er-nō'sus), n.; pl. ischioavernosi (-si). [NL.; see ischioavernosus.] A muscle of the penis, arising chiefly from the ischium, and inserted into the crus penis. Also called erector penis and erector clitoridis.

ischioavernous (is'ki-ō-kav'er-nus), a. [NL. ischioavernosus, < ischium + L. avernosus (corpus).] Pertaining to the ischium and to the corpus cavernosum of the penis. Huxley, Anat. Vert., p. 346.

ischiocele (is'ki-ō-sēl), n. [Gr. ischion, hip, + khēlō, tumor.] In pathol., a hernia through the sciatic notch. Also improperly ischiotocoele.

ischioerite (is-ki-ō's-rit), n. [Gr. ischion, hip-joint, + eris, horn, + -ite.] One of the joints of the developed antenna of a crustacean, borne with the scaphocerite upon the basiscerite, and bearing the merocerite. See antenna, I.

A basiscerite, to the outer portion of which a flattened plate, here called the scaphocerite, is articulated; while to its inner portion an ischioerite is connected, bearing a merocerite and carapocerite, while the last segment, or procerite, consists of a long multi-articulate filament.

Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 378.

ischioococcygeal (is'ki-ō-kok-sij'ē-al), a. [ischioococcygeus + -al.] Pertaining both to the ischium and to the coccyx; ischiocaudal: as, an ischioococcygeal muscle.

ischioococcygeus (is'ki-ō-kok-sij'ē-us), n.; pl. ischioococcygei (-i). [NL., < ischium + coccygeus.] A muscle which in some animals connects the ischium and the coccyx.

ischiofibular (is'ki-ō-fib'ū-lār), a. [ischium + fibula + -ar.] Of or pertaining to the ischium and the fibula, or connecting these bones, as the long head of the human bicipitosis or biceps femoris muscle.

ischio-iliac (is'ki-ō-il'i-ak), a. [ischium + ilium + -ac.] Pertaining both to the ischium and to the ilium.

ischion (is'ki-on), n. [NL.] Same as ischium.

ischiodipode (is-ki-op'ō-dit), n. [Gr. ischion, hip-joint, + podē (podē), = E. foot, + -ite.] The third joint of a developed endopodite, between the basipodite and the meropodite. Milne-Edwards; Huxley. See out under endopodite.

ischioptic (is'ki-ō-pt'ik), a. [ischium + pubis + -ic.] I. Of or pertaining both to the ischium and to the pubis.

When the two ventral pieces are united at the ischio-pubic symphysis, as they are in the Marsupialia, many Rodents, Artiodactyla, and Perissodactyla, the pelvis is elongated in form.

Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 498.

< M.D. Aulsebrook, Aulsebrook = M.L.G. Aulsebrook = G. Aulsebrook etc., sturgeon (see huuo), + M.L.G. blas = (cf. blasen, etc., bladder: see blasen.) 1. The purest commercial form of gelatin, a substance of firm texture and whitish color, prepared from the sounds or air-bladders of certain fresh-water fishes. Isinglass is manufactured especially from the sounds of some species of Russian sturgeon, and in the United States from the sounds of cod, hake, aqueduct sea-trout, sturgeon, and other fishes, and from the skins of some of them. An inferior quality is made from clams scraped of hides, etc., or from the purified jelly obtained from skins, hoofs, horns, etc. In the preparation of creams and jellies isinglass is in great request. It is also used in the manufacture of the fermented kind, in perfuming in making mock pearls, and in stiffening linens, silks, gauzes, etc. With brandy it forms a cement for mending broken porcelain and glass. It is likewise used as an agglutinant to glue together the parts of musical instruments, and for binding many other delicate fabrics. It is used in the manufacture of fine gins and sizes, adhesive plasters, court-plasters, diamond cement, and imitation glass, in refining wines and liquors, in adulterating milk, and in lustering silk ribbons. Grades are known as lyre, leaf, and book isinglass. In the East Indies, China, and Japan, isinglass, or its equivalent, is prepared from various algae or seaweeds—the same in part which furnish the material of the bird's-nests prized as a delicacy by the Chinese. Such is the origin of the important Bengal isinglass or agar-agar. Japanese isinglass is afforded by species of Gelidium, and is said to produce a firmer jelly than any other gelatin. These various products are used not only for food, but in the arts for stiffening, varnishing, and gluing.

M. Mica: so called from its resemblance to some forms of the gelatin.—Book isinglass, the commercial name for the packages into which isinglass is folded.—Leaf isinglass, a variety of isinglass made by cleansing, drying, and scraping the tissues of the sturgeon.—Long and staple isinglass, the same material as leaf isinglass, but twisted into different forms.—Ribbon isinglass, an inferior variety of isinglass.

Isinglass-stone (i'zing-glas-stōn), n. See mica.

Ising-star (i'zing-stār), n. [Irreg. < ising(lase) + star.] A bit of shining mica. [Poetical.]

Some had lain in the scoop of the rock,
With glittering ising-stars in-laid. Drake, Culprits Ray.

Isis (i'sis), n. [L., < Gr. Isis, < Egypt. Hes, a deity, the female counterpart of Osiris (Hesiri).] In Egypt, myth., the chief female deity; the sister, wife, and counterpart or female form of Osiris, and the mother of Horus. She is distinguished by the solar disk and cow's horns on her head, often surmounted by a diminutive throne, and bears the lotus scepter. By the Greeks she was identified with Io. Her worship in a modified form, as a nature-goddess, was introduced subsequently to the Alexandrine epoch into Greece, and was very popular at Rome from the end of the republic. The Greek and Roman priests and priestesses of Isis wore a special costume, and had as an attribute a peculiar metallic rattle, the sis-trum.

Isis.
Egyptian Cavo-rilievo.

In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appeared. Shak., A. and C., III. 6, 16.

Islam (is'lām or -lam), n. [= F. Sp. Islam = Turk. islām. < Ar. islām, obedience to God, submission, the orthodox faith, < salama, be free, be safe, be devoted to God. Cf. Monism, Musulman, and salaam, from the same source.] 1. The religious system of Mohammed.

They [Ali and Hussein] filled a void in the severe religion of Mahomet, . . . supplied a tender and pathetic side in Islam.

M. Arnold, Essays in Criticism, A Persian Passion-Play.
2. The whole Mohammedan world.

All was hardly dead before he became enshrined in legend and in myth. . . . Hence the great schism which from the first divided the camp of Islam.

J. Darmesteter, The Mahdi (trans.), p. 23.

Islamic (is-lam'ik), a. [Islam + -ic.] Belonging or relating to Islam.

Persians were the leaders and shapers of Islamic culture. Contemporary Rev., LIII. 641.

Islamism (is'lām-izm), n. [= F. Islamisme = Sp. Pg. It. Islamismo; as Islam + -ism.] The faith of Islam; the true faith, according to the Mohammedans; Mohammedanism.

In these reaches I found Islamism of a purer form, and the people more learned in civilized ways. H. O. Forbes, Eastern Archipelago, p. 190.

Islamite (is-lam'it), n. [Islam + -ite.] A Mohammedan.

Thronging all one porch of Paradise,
A group of Hours how'd to see The dying Islamite. Tennyson, Palace of Art.

Islamitic (is-lam'it'ik), a. [Islamite + -ic.] Pertaining to Islam or the Islamites; Mohammedan.

Islamize (is'lām-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. Islamized, ppr. Islamizing. [Islam + -ize.] To conform to Islam; Mohammedanize.

We find most distinctly-marked African ideas of a Supreme Deity in the West, where intercourse with Moslems has actually Islamized or semi-Islamized whole negro nations, and the name of Allah is in all men's mouths.

E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 302. island (i'land), n. [Prop. iland, the s having been ignorantly inserted in the 16th century, in conformity with islet (which is, however, wholly unrelated, and in which the s is also a late insertion: see islet); early mod. E. iland, yland (also occasionally yelond, etc.), < ME. iland, yland, yland, < AS. igland, igland, iland, egland, egland, egland, egland (also edland: see below) (= OFries. ilond, eland, East Fries. eiland = MD. eyland, eyland, eiland = MLG. eilant, elant, elant, eilant, eilant, LG. eiland = MHG. eilant, eilant, G. eiland: the MHG. G. being prob. < LG.) = Icel. eyland = Norw. öland = Dan. öland (= Sw. öland, öland), an island, < ig, ey, ig, ig, an island (OLG. ey = Fries. oog, an island, = OHG. awa, auwa, ouwa, owa, MHG. ouwe, owe, G. awe, a meadow near water, = Icel. ey = Dan. Sw. ö, an island), a word existing unrecognized in mod. E. as an element in local names, as in Anglen-oe, Angles-ey, Aldern-ey, Battern-oe, Chels-oe, Cherts-ey, Orkney, Thorn-ey, Whit-ey, etc. (and in Scand. names, Faroe (Furi), öland, Thursö, etc.), as well as in the derived eyot, ait, an island (see ait); prob. orig. an adj., 'belonging to water,' 'in water,' < ed ('oahr') = OHG. aha = Goth. ahwa = L. aqua, water (see aqua and eve), + land, land: see land. The superfluous second element land was appar. added when the word ig was passing out of use; the var. edland (as if < ed, water, + land, land) was an explanatory sophistication of the proper compound igland. Other sophistications of the word appear in the confusion with islet (early mod. E. yelond, as if < ile (islet) + land), and in the MLG. MHG. form eilant, as if the 'land alone' (< ein, = E. one, + lant = E. land).] 1. A tract of land surrounded by water, whether of the sea, a river, or a lake: in contradistinction to mainland or continent.

And than we say'd by Alango, Nio, with many mo yelandes that belonge unto the Roodes.

Sir R. Gwyfard, Pylgrymage, p. 63.

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,
Like to his island girl in with the ocean, . . .
Shall rest in London. Shak., 8 Hen. VI., iv. 8, 20.

2. Something resembling an island: as, an island of floating ice.

The shapely knoll,
That softly swell'd and gaily green'd appears
A flowery island, from the dark green lawn Emerging. Conquer, Task, III. 630.

3. A hill rising out of low ground or swampy land, a small clump of woodland in a prairie, or the like. [Southern and southwestern U. S.]

At the summit of the hill is a beautiful grove, or island of timber, where the heroes that fell at the battle of San Jacinto sleep their last sleep.

A Stray Yankee in Texas, p. 252.

Coral island. See coral.—Floating island. (a) An island formed in a lake or other inland water, when of natural origin, by the aggregation of a mass of earth held together by driftwood and interlacing roots. Sometimes such islands are large enough to serve for gardens or pasture-grounds. Artificial floating islands have been formed by depositing lake- or river-mud on rafts of wickerwork covered with reeds. Both natural and artificial floating islands were used for market-gardens by the ancient Mexicans; and artificial ones, secured to the banks of rivers and lakes, abound in southern China, where they are most commonly used for raising rice. (b) A moringue of white of egg and sugar floating in divisions upon soft custard.—Island of Bell, in anal., a triangular cluster of cerebral convolutions (the gyri operi, or hidden gyri) situated in the Sylvian fissure, immediately out from the lenticular nucleus. See insula, and out under gyrus.—Islands of the Blessed, or the Happy Islands, in Gr. myth., imaginary islands said to lie in the remote western part of the ocean, whither after death the souls of the virtuous were supposed to be transported.

island (i'land), v. t. [island, n.] 1. To cause to become or appear like an island; insulate. [Chiefly used in the past participle.]

She distinguished . . . a belt of trees, such as we see in the lovely parks of England, but islanded by a screen . . . of a thick bushy undergrowth. De Quincy, Spanish Nun.

On a winter morning, when the mists are lying white and low and thin upon the plain, when distant hills rise islanded into the air, and the outlines of lakes are just discernible through fleecy haze.

J. A. Symonds, Italy and Greece, p. 112, note.

2. To dot as with islands. [Rare.]

A fair expanse
Of level pasture, islanded with groves,
And banked with wond'ry risings.
Wordsworth, Prelude, VIII.

Not a cloud by day

With purple islanded the dark-blue deep. Smalley.
Island², island dog. See Iceland, Iceland dog.

islander (i'lan-dēr), n. [= D. eiland = G. eiländer; as island + -er.] An inhabitant of an island.

That pale, that white-faced shore,
Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides
And coops from other lands her islanders.
Shak., K. John, II. 1, 23.

Islander², n. An obsolete form of Isclander.

Islandic², a. and n. An obsolete form of Icelandic.

islandish (i'lan-dish), a. [island + -ish.] Insular. Davies.

Our Islandish Monarchy.

Dr. Dee (Arber's Eng. Garner, II. 65).

islandy (i'lan-di), a. [island + -y.] Pertaining to islands; full of islands. Cotgrave.

islay (is'lā), n. A small evergreen tree, Prunus ilicifolia, a native of the California coast-ranges from San Francisco bay south.

isle (il), n. [Early mod. E. also ile, yile; < ME. reg. ile, yile, also ille, yile, ilde, yile, rarely isle, < OF. reg. ile (later isle, the silent s being inserted, as also in later ME., in imitation of the Latin insula), or of the earliest form ile (the s being at the earliest OF. period actually pronounced), F. île = Pr. isla, illa, ilha = Sp. isla = Pg. ilha = It. isola. < L. insula, an island; supposed to be < in, in, + sulum, the main sea, = Gr. oálac, surge, swell of the sea. The word has no connection with island, with which it has been confused.] 1. An island. [Now chiefly poetical.]

After hym com Calchaut, the sone of the feire Geant that was lord of the fer oute yiles, and brought in his company xii men. Martin (E. T. S.), II. 577.

Summer isles of Eden lying in dark-purple spheres of sea.
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

2. In entom., same as islet, 2.—Emerald Isle. See emerald.

isle (il), v.; pret. and pp. isled, ppr. isling. [islet, n.] 1. trans. To cause to become or appear like an isle; insulate; island. [Poetical.]

Isled in sudden seas of light,
My heart, pierced thro' with fierce delight,
Burns into blossom in his sight. Tennyson, Fatima.

II. intrans. To dwell on an isle. Davies.

Lion and stoat have isled together, knave,
In time of flood. Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

isle², n. An old spelling of islet.

isle³, n. [Also (Sc.) acle; < ME. isyl, < AS. ysla, ysola, coals, ashes.] A hot coal; an ember; usually in the plural. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Isyl of fyre, tavilla. Prompt. Parv., p. 266.

Ioh have syngeed and gabbe me sulcon theroffe and pine me sulcon on ashen and on iselen.

Old Eng. Homilies (ed. Morris), II. 65.

islesman (iz'man), n.; pl. islesmen (-men). An islander; specifically [cap.], an inhabitant of the Hebrides or Western Islands of Scotland.

The isles-men carried at their backs
The ancient Danish battle-axe.

Scott, Marmion, v. 6.

Isles of Shoals duck. See duck².

islet (i'let), n. [OF. islet, illet, m., islette, islette, f., = Sp. isleta = It. isolella, f., < ML. insulectum, n., dim. of L. insula, an island: see islet and -et.] 1. A little isle or island.

Where islets have been formed on the reef, that part which I have called the "flat," and which is partly dry at low water, appears similar in every detail.

Darwin, Coral Reefs, p. 33.

The cressy islets white in flower. Tennyson, Geraldine.

2. Any small spot or space surrounded by something of different character or color: as, an islet of verdure in a desert; the islets on an insect's wing.

A but less vivid hue
Than of that islet in the chestnut-bloom Flamed in his cheek. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

ism (izm), n. [-ism, this suffix being commonly used in words expressing doctrine, theory, or practice.] A doctrine, theory, system, or practice having a distinctive character or relation: chiefly used in disparagement: as, this is the age of isms; to set up an ism.

It has nothing to do with Calvinism nor Arminianism nor any of the other isms. Southey, Letters (1803), II. 192.

This is Abbot Samson's Catholicism of the twelfth century—something like the ism of all true men in all true centuries, I fancy. Alas, compared with any of the isms current in these poor days, what a thing!

Carlyle, Past and Present, II. 16.

That land [New England] in which every ism of social or religious life has had its origin—that land whose hills and valleys are one blaze and buzz of material and manufacturing production. H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 452.

-ism. [= F. -isme = Sp. Pg. It. -ismo = D. G. -ismus = Dan. -isme = Sw. -ism, < L. -ismus, < Gr. -ismus, term. of nouns signifying the practice or teaching of a thing, from verbs in -izein, being < -is- + -mos, a common noun-formative: see -ize.] A suffix implying the practice, system, doctrine, theory, principle, or abstract idea of that which is signified or implied by the word to which it is subjoined: as, dogmatism, spiritualism, socialism, aticism, Americanism, Galloism, terrorism, vandalism, republicanism, Mormonism, being especially common in nouns so formed from names of persons and designating theories, as Benthianism, Comtianism, Darwinism, etc., or theories associated with practice, especially in words of temporary use, as Casarianism, Jacksonism, Grantism, etc., such temporary words being formed as occasion requires, in unlimited numbers. Such words are usually accompanied by a noun of the agent in -ist, and an adj. in -istic, and often by a verb in -ise. See these suffixes.

Ismailian, Ismaelian (is-mā'il-l'ān, -el-l'ān), n. [Ismail, Ismael (see def.), + -ian.] A member of a sect of Shiite Mohammedans who maintained that Ismael was the seventh and last of the true imams, and that their chief was his vicegerent on earth. Their doctrines, like those of their existing representatives, the Druses and Ansars of Syria, departed widely from orthodox Mohammedanism, and were made known in detail only to the initiated. The Ismailians founded the Fatimite dynasty of Egypt and Syria (see Fatimite), and the sect of Assassins was an offshoot from them.

Ismailism, Ismaelism (is-mā'il-izm, -el-izm), n. [Ismail, Ismael, + -ism.] The doctrinal system of the Ismailians.

Under the Fatimite Caliph Hākim, a new religion sprang out of Ismailism, that of the Druses, so called from its inventor, a certain Darazi or Dora. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 564.

Ismalite, Ismaelite (is-mā'il-it, -el-it), n. [Ismail, Ismael, + -ite.] Same as Ismailian.

Ismalitic, Ismaelitic (is-mā'il-it'ik, -el-it'ik), a. [Ismalite, Ismaelite, + -ic.] Pertaining to Ismailism.

The eminent men who revealed to the poet in Cairo the secrets of the Ismaelite faith. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 538.

ismatic (iz-mat'ik), a. [ism + -atic.] Pertaining to isms or an ism; addicted to isms or theories. [Rare.]

ismatical (iz-mat'ik-al), a. [ismatic + -al.] Same as ismatic. [Rare.]

ismaticalness (iz-mat'ik-al-nes), n. The quality of being addicted to isms or theories. [Rare.]

The ism is the difficulty. This governs their action; this they would thrust upon us. Their ismaticalness conceals and extrudes the Christian. S. Judd, Margaret, III.

iso- [L., etc., iso-, < Gr. iso-, combining form of isos, isotē, Epis also isos, equal, the same (in number, size, appearance, etc.), like.] An element in some words of Greek origin, meaning 'equal.'

isobnormal (i-sō-ab-nōr'māl), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + E. abnormal.] A line, either imaginary or drawn on a map of any part of the earth's surface, connecting places which have the same thermic anomaly, or deviation of the observed mean temperature of a certain period (month, season, or year) from the normal temperature, or that which is due to a locality in respect of its latitude alone. Also isabnormal.

Dore has published an elaborate set of maps constructed on this principle, in which he shows by a system of Thermic isabnormals the deviations from the mean of each month, and of the year, on the different parts of the globe. Buchan, Handy-book of Meteorology, p. 126.

isobar (i-sō-bār), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + βάρος, weight: see barometer.] In phys. geog., a line connecting places on the surface of the globe at which the barometric pressure is the same. For places not situated at the sea-level, a correction must be applied to each barometric observation corresponding to the elevations of the stations, before the isobar connecting such stations can be drawn. Isobars may be purely imaginary lines; but generally, that the distribution of the pressure may be seen at a glance, they are drawn upon some kind of map or chart of the regions covered by the observations. Isobars may be such as indicate the distribution of barometric pressure at a certain specified day and hour, or they may give the mean pressure for any period of time, as for the entire year or for the summer or winter months. Also called isobarometric line.

Isobars.

isobaric (i-sō-bār'ik), a. [isobar + -ic.] Indicating equal weight or pressure, especially the pressure of the atmosphere: in the latter use equivalent to isobarometric.—Isobaric surface, a surface in the air all points of which have the same barometric pressure. The line of intersection of an isobaric surface and a plane not parallel to it is an isobaric line.

isobarism (i-sō-bār-izm), n. [isobar + -ism.] Equality or similarity of weight.

isobarometric (i-sō-bār-ō-met'rik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + E. barometric.] In phys. geog., indicating equal barometric pressure. Also isobaric.—Isobarometric line. Same as isobar.

isobathotherm (i-sō-bath-i-thēr'm), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + βαθύς, deep, + θερμῆς, heat.] A line connecting points in a vertical section of any part of the ocean which have the same temperature. Sir C. W. Thomson, 1876.

isobathothermal (i-sō-bath-i-thēr'māl), a. [isobathotherm + -al.] Of or pertaining to an isobathotherm; isobathothermic.

isobathothermic (i-sō-bath-i-thēr'mik), a. [isobathotherm + -ic.] Relating to an isobathotherm; having the same degree of temperature at the same depth of the sea.

isobilateral (i-sō-bi-lat'e-rāl), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + E. bilateral.] In bot., having the flanks of the organ flattened surfaces: applied to a particular kind of bilaterally symmetrical organs, as the leaves of some species of Iris, in contradistinction from bisfacial or dorsiventral organs, or those with an evident upper and under surface, as in most leaves.

isobrious (i-sōb'r'i-us), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + βριός, be strong, make strong.] In bot., growing or seeming to grow with equal vigor in both lobes: applied to a dicotyledonous embryo. Also isodynamous.

isobront (i-sō-brōnt), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + βροντή, thunder.] A line on a map or chart connecting those places at which a given peal of thunder is heard simultaneously.

The isobronts, or the lines uniting the places where the first peal of thunder was simultaneously heard. Sci. Amer. Supp., p. 6154.

isocardia (i-sō-kār'di-ā), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + καρδία = E. heart.] A genus of heart-cockles, of the family Isocardidae. They have a cordate ventricose shell, with separated involute divergent beaks, the cardinal teeth 2 and the laterals 1 or 2 in each valve. The extinct species are numerous, and there are five living species. I. cor is an example. Glossus is a synonym.

Isocardidae (i-sō-kār'di-ā-dē), n. pl. [N.L., < Isocardia + -idae.] A family of siphonate bivalve mollusks, named from the genus Isocardia; the heart-cockles. They have the shell cordiform and ventricose, and the beaks sometimes subspiral, 2 cardinal and 1 or 2 lateral teeth in each valve, the muscular impressions narrow, and the pallial line simple. Isocardia cor, the heart-shell or ox-horn cockle, occurs in the European seas. Glossus is a synonym. Also Isocardidae.

Isocarpae (i-sō-kār'pē), n. pl. [N.L., < Gr. isos, equal, + καρπός, fruit.] A division sometimes made of dicotyledonous gamopetalous plants, consisting of those in which the carpels are of the same number as the divisions of the calyx and corolla, as in the Eriogonae, Primulaceae, etc.

Isocarpeae (i-sō-kār'pē-ē), n. pl. [N.L. (Kützinger, 1843), < Gr. isos, equal, + καρπός, fruit, + -ae.] The first of the two classes into which Kützinger divided all algae. It included the tribes Gymnospermeae and Angiospermeae.

isocellular (i-sō-sel'ū-lār), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + N.L. cellula, cell.] Consisting of equal or similar cells: as, an isocellular protozoan: opposed to heterocellular.

isocephal (i-sō-sel'ā-lī), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + κεφαλή, the head.] A rule or principle illustrated in ancient Greek art, in accordance with which, for the sake of symmetry, natural proportions were somewhat sacrificed in certain reliefs, etc., notably in frizes, and the heads of all the figures, whether mounted or on foot, standing or seated, were carved upon nearly the same level. Also isocephal.

Isocephal.—Example from the frieze of the Parthenon.

isocercal (i-sō-sēr'kal), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + κύρκος, tail.] Having the end of the vertebral column straight, and not bent up, as a fish.

The isocercal tail without a caudal fin. Stand. Nat. Hist., III. 121.

isocercy (i-sō-sēr-sī), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + κύρκος, tail.] In ichth., the condition of having an isocercal tail.

isochasm (i-sō-kasm), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + χάσμα, a gap, chasm.] An isochasmic line.

isochasmic (i-sō-kas'mik), a. [Gr. isochasm + -ic.] Indicating equality as regards frequency of auroral displays.—Isochasmic curves, imaginary lines on the earth's surface passing through points having the same annual number of aurora.

It will be noticed that, eastward from England, the isochasmic curves tend rapidly northward, Archangel being only on the same auroral parallel as Newcastle. Encyc. Brit., III. 97.

isochela (i-sō-kē'lā), n.; pl. isochelae (-lā). [Gr. isos, equal, + χηλή, claw.] In sponges, an anchorate or anchor-shaped flesh-spicule; a curved spicule with equal ends extended on the surface of a rotation ellipsoid, and having both these ends flat and expanded. See cut under ancoral.

isochimal (i-sō-kī-māl), a. [Gr. isochime + -al.] Of the same mean winter temperature. Also spelled isochimnal.—Isochimal line. Same as isochime.

isochime (i-sō-kī-m), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + χειμα, winter: see hiemal.] In phys. geog., a line drawn on the map through places on the surface of the globe which have the same mean winter temperature. Also spelled isochim.

isochimenal (i-sō-kī-mē-nāl), a. Same as isochimal.

isochimonal, isochemimal (i-sō-kī-mō-nāl), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + χειμων, winter, + -al.] Same as isochimal.

isochor (i-sō-kōr), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + χώρα, space, room.] A curve of equal volume upon a diagram in which the rectangular coordinates represent pressure and temperature.

isochoric (i-sō-kōr'ik), a. [Gr. isochor + -ic.] Pertaining to equal volume or density: as, an isochoric curve.

isochromatic (i-sō-krō-mat'ik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + χρῶμα (-r), color: see chromatic.] 1. Having the same color: said of the two series of oval curves of the interference figures of biaxial crystals. Each curve in the one series has one corresponding to it both in form and color in the other. The two curves or lines that have the same tint are called isochromatic lines. See interference figures, under interference, II.

Beside these [dark bands], there are also variable bands, which correspond to the brushes which cross the isochromatic curves. Spectroscopic, Polarization, p. 78.

2. In photog., same as orthochromatic.

isochronal (i-sōk'rō-nāl), a. [As isochronous + -al.] Uniform in time; of equal time; performed in equal times. Two pendulums which vibrate in the same time are isochronal; also, the vibrations of a pendulum in the curve of a cycloid have the same property, being all performed in the same time, whether the arcs be large or small. Also isochronous.—Isochronal line, a line in which a heavy body descends without acceleration or retardation.

isochronally (i-sōk'rō-nāl-ī), adv. So as to be isochronal; with uniformity or equality of time. Also isochronously.

isochronic (i-sō-kron'ik), a. [As isochronous + -ic.] Occurring at regular intervals of time.

isochronism (i-sōk'rō-nizm), n. [As isochronous + -ism.] The character of being isochronous; the property of a pendulum by which it performs its vibrations in equal times.

isochronon (i-sōk'rō-nōn), n. [Gr. isochronon, neut. of isochronos, equal in time: see isochronous.] An equal time-keeper; a clock designed to keep perfectly accurate time.

isochronous (i-sōk'rō-nūs), a. [Gr. isochronos, equal in age or time, < isos, equal, + χρόνος, time: see chronic.] Same as isochronal.

isochronously (i-sōk'rō-nūs-ī), adv. Same as isochronally.

isochroous (i-sōk'rō-nūs), a. [Gr. isochroous, like-colored, < isos, equal, + χρῶμα, color.] Being of the same color throughout; whole-colored.

isoclinal (i-sō-kli'nāl), a. and n. [As isocline + -al.] 1. a. Of equal inclination: applied in geology to strata which incline or dip in the same direction. See monoclinical.

The flexures are often so rapid that after denudation of the tops of the arches the strata are isoclinal, or appear to be dipping all in the same direction. A. Geikie, Text Book of Geology, p. 580.

Isoclinal Lines for 1890.

Isoclinal lines, in magnetism, lines drawn upon a map through points at all of which the dip of the needle is the same.

II. n. Same as isocline.

The directions of the isogonals, isoclinals, and lines of equal horizontal force have been found.

Nature, XXXIX, 565.

Also isoclinic.

isocline (i-sō-klin), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + klivē, incline; see cline.] In geol., a fold in which the strata are so appressed that the limbs or flanks (the parts on each side of the axis of the fold) are isoclinal, or dip in the same direction. See monocline. Also called overturn, or overturned anticline.

isoclinic (i-sō-klin'ik), a. and n. [isocline + -ic.] Same as isoclinal.

The isoclinic lines of the globe run round the earth like the parallels of latitude, but are irregular in form.

S. P. Thompson, Elect. and Mag., p. 117.

The whole region . . . would have to be surveyed in order to permit the tracing out of isoclinics.

Science, IX, 217.

isoclinostat (i-sō-kli'nō-stat), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + klivē, incline, + statēs, verbal adj. of stasis, stand; see static.] A link-work for dividing any angle into equal parts. Also isoclinostat.

isocolic (i-sō-kō'lik), a. [isocolon + -ic.] 1. In rhet., containing successive clauses of equal length: as, an isocolic period.—2. In anc. pros., consisting of series or members all of the same magnitude: as, an isocolic system. See isocolon.

isocolon (i-sō-kō'lon), n.; pl. isocola (-lā). [Gr. isokolōn, neut. of isokolōs, of equal members or clauses, isos, equal, + kolōn, a member, limb, clause; see colon.] 1. In rhet., (a) A figure which consists in the use of two or more clauses (cola) in immediate succession having the same length or number of syllables. If the equality is only approximate, the figure is properly called parison or parisosis. (b) A period containing successive clauses of equal length.—2. In anc. pros., a period or system consisting of cola or series of the same length throughout.

isocrymal (i-sō-kri-mal), n. [isocryme + -al.] A line, imaginary or drawn upon a map or chart of any region, connecting points at which the temperature is the same during some specified coldest portion of the year. The word was introduced by J. D. Dana, and used by him with reference to the mean temperature of the ocean surface "for the coldest thirty consecutive days of the year."

It is unnecessary to remark particularly upon the fitness of the other isocrymals for the purpose of illustrating the geographical distribution of marine species.

Dana, Amer. Jour. Sci. (2), xvi, 167.

isocryme (i-sō-krim), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + krūmos, cold, chill (cf. krīos, cold, frost); see crystal.] Same as isocrymal.

The isocryme of 68° is the boundary line of the coral-reef seas.

Dana, Amer. Jour. Sci. (2), xvi, 166.

isocyclic (i-sō-sī'klus), a. [NL. isocyclus, Gr. isos, equal, + kuklos, circle; see cycle.] Composed of successive equal or similar rings.

isocylus (i-sō-sī'klus), n. [NL. Gr. isos, equal, + kuklos, circle.] An animal the body of which consists of a series of equal or similar rings. Sir R. Owen.

isodactylous (i-sō-dak'ti-lus), a. [NL. isodactylus, Gr. isos, equal, + daktulos, digit.] In zool., having the toes or digits of equal length or otherwise alike: its opposite is anisodactylous.

Isodia (i-sō-di-ā), n. pl. [MGr. Isodia, neut. pl. of Isiodios, pertaining to entrance, Isiodos, entrance, in MGr. the feast of the entrance of the Virgin Mary into the temple, Isiodos, Isiodos, way.] In the Gr. Ch., the feast of the Presentation of the Theotocos or Blessed Virgin Mary in the temple, observed November 21st. See presentation. Also written Isodia.

isodiametric (i-sō-di-ā-met'rik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + diametros, able to pass through, diametros, verbal adj. of diametivē, pass through; see diabatical.] Pertaining to the transmission to or from a body of equal quantities of heat. Thus, isodiametric parts of isothermal curves are parts which represent changes of pressure and density of the same body during the transmission of equal quantities of heat, the temperature remaining constant.

isodiametric (i-sō-di-ā-met'rik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + diametros, diameter; see diameter.] Having equal diameters, or being of equal diameter. Specifically—(a) In crystal, pertaining to crystals having equal lateral axes, as crystals of the tetragonal or hexagonal systems, which are optically uniaxial. (b) In bot., having the diameter similar throughout, as organs or cells.

isodiametrical (i-sō-di-ā-met'ri-kal), a. [isodiametric + -al.] Same as isodiametric.

There are cells which are especially concerned in assimilation, and which may be either isodiametrical or elongated in a direction either parallel to or at right angles with the axis. Jour. Roy. Microsc. Soc., 2d ser., VI, 1, 108.

isodicon (i-sō-di-kōn), n.; pl. isodica (-kā). [MGr. isiodikon, neut. of isiodikos, pertaining to the entrance, Isiodos, entrance; see Isodia.] In the Gr. Ch., a troparion or brief anthem succeeding the third antiphon and accompanying the Little Entrance. See entrance. Also written isodicon.

isodimorphism (i-sō-di-mōr'fiz-m), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + E. dimorphism.] In crystal, isomorphism between the members of two dimorphic groups.

isodimorphous (i-sō-di-mōr'fus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + E. dimorphous.] In crystal, having the quality of isodimorphism.

isodomon, isodomum (i-sō-dō-mon, -mum), n. [Gr. isodomon, neut. of isodomos, built alike, isos, equal, + dōmos, build, > dōmos, house, a building; see domic.] One of the varieties of masonry used in the best period of Greek architecture, in which the blocks forming the courses were of equal thickness and equal length, and so disposed that the vertical joints of an upper course came over the middle of the blocks in the course below it. See pseudisodomon.

Isodomus, with blocks secured by dowels.

isodomous (i-sō-dō-mus), a. [isodomon + -ous.] Of the nature of isodomon.

A great part of the city-wall, built in fine Hellenic isodomus masonry, and a large square central fortress with a circular projecting tower, are the only remains now traceable. Enya. Brk., XVIII, 735.

isodont (i-sō-dont), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + odontos (odont-) = E. tooth.] Having the teeth all alike, as a cetacean; having the characters of the Isodontia.

Isodontia (i-sō-don'shi-ā), n. pl. [NL. Gr. isos, equal, + odontos (odont-) = E. tooth.] In Blyth's edition of Cuvier, an order of placental mammals, consisting of the Cetacea of Cuvier minus the herbivorous cetaceans (sireniacans) of that author; one of two orders constituting Blyth's zoöphagous type of mammals. [Not in use.]

isodynamic (i-sō-di-nam'ik), a. and n. [Gr. isodunamos, having equal power or force; see isodynamic.] 1. a. Having equal power or force; relating to equality of force.—Isodynamic lines, in magnetism, (a) Lines connecting those places where the intensity of the force of terrestrial magnetism is equal. They have a certain general resemblance in form and position to the isoclinal lines. (b) Lines drawn to indicate regions having winds of a specified force or strength as indicated by the wind-pressure.

Isodynamic Lines for 1890.

II. n. An isodynamic line.

isodynamous (i-sō-di-nā-mus), a. [Gr. isodunamos, having equal power or force, isos, equal, + dunamos, power, force; see dynam, dynamic.] Having equal force; of equal size; in bot., same as isobrioum.

Isotetes (i-sō-et'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. Gr. Isotetes + -es.] An order of vascular cryptogamous plants, related to the Selaginellaceae, containing the single genus Isotetes.

Isotetes (i-sō'ē-tēz), n. [NL. Gr. Isotetes, small houseleek or aye-green, Gr. isotetes, equal in years (neut. isotetes, an annual plant), isos, equal, + etēs, a year.] A genus of vascular cryptogamous plants, belonging to the natural order Isotetes. They are small grass-like or rush-like aquatic or semi-aquatic plants, in which the plant-body consists of an exceedingly restricted stem, which gives off a dense mass of roots from below and sends up a compact tuft of leaves above. The sporangia are sessile in the axils of the leaves, and some contain macrospores (megaspores) and some microspores. The genus comprises about 60 species, and has a very wide geographical distribution, occurring in Europe, Asia, Australasia, Africa, and North and South America. The species, which are generally known as quillworts, are of no especial value. I. lacustris is known in England as Mer. Kn's-grass. Some half-dozen species have been found in a fossil state, chiefly in the Tertiary of Europe, but one occurs in the Eocene of Colorado, one in the Upper Jurassic of Bavaria, and another in the Oolite of Yorkshire, England. These lower forms are usually distinguished by the name Isotetes.

Quillwort (Isotetes lacustris).

a. sporangium cut longitudinally, showing the macrospores or megaspores; b. sporangium cut longitudinally, showing the microspores.

isogamous (i-sō-gā-mus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + gamos, marriage.] Characterized by isogamy. The isogamous algae are the Zygnemata, Desmidiaceae, etc.

isogamy (i-sō-gā-mi), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + gamos, marriage.] In bot., the conjugation of two gametes of similar form, as in certain algae. Compare oögamny.

isogenous (i-sō-jē-nus), a. [Gr. isogēns, equal in kind, isos, equal, + gēns, kind; see genous.] Of the same or a similar origin; homologous, in a broad sense, as formed from the same or corresponding tissues of the embryo. Thus, parts of the nervous system of worms, mollusks, and vertebrates are isogenous, being derived from the epiblast.

isogeny (i-sō-jē-ni), n. [As isogen-ous + -y.] In biol., similarity or identity of origin; origination in or derivation from the same or corresponding tissues; evolutionary homology, in a broad sense.

It is well to use words which will express our meaning exactly, and hence a general homology may be indicated by the word isogeny, indicating a general similarity of origin.

Stand. Nat. Hist., I, Int., p. xvii.

isogeotherm (i-sō-jē-ō-thēr-m), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + gē, the earth, + therm, heat.] In phys. geog., an imaginary line or surface under the earth's surface passing through points having the same temperature.

isogeothermal (i-sō-jē-ō-thēr-mal), a. [isogeotherm + -al.] In phys. geog., pertaining to or having the nature of an isogeotherm.

isogeothermic (i-sō-jē-ō-thēr-mik), a. [isogeotherm + -ic.] Same as isogeothermal.

isognathous (i-sō-gnā-thus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + gnathos, jaw.] In odontog., having the molar teeth alike in both jaws: opposed to anisognathous.

isogon (i-sō-gon), n. [= Sp. It. isogono; Gr. isogōnos, having equal angles, isos, equal, + gonia, angle.] In math., a figure whose angles are equal.

isogonal (i-sō-gō-nal), a. and n. [isogon + -al.] 1. a. Having equal angles.

II. n. An isogonic line.

isogonic (i-sō-gon'ik), a. [isogon + -ic.] Having equal angles.—Isogonic lines, in magnetism, lines on the earth's surface at every point of which the deviation of the magnetic needle from the true north is the same for a given period. See cut on following page.

On the globe the isogonic lines run for the most part from the north magnetic pole to the south magnetic polar region.

S. P. Thompson, Elect. and Mag., p. 117.

isogonic (i-sō-gon'ik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + gonos, offspring.] In biol., exhibiting isogonism; producing identical generative individuals from different stocks, as hydroids of different families may do.

Magnetic Isogonic Lines for 1900.

isogonistat (i-sō-gō-ni-ō-stat), n. [Gr. isogon, equiangular (see isogon), + statos, verbal adj. of istatō, stand: see static.] A link-work for regulating the motion of a train of prisms.

isogonism (i-sō-gō-nizm), n. [Gr. isogon, equal + -ism.] In biol., production of similar or identical sexual organisms or reproductive parts from diverse stocks.

Medusa of identical structure, which one would place in the same genus, may form the sexual generations of hydroid stocks belonging to different families (isogonism). Claus, Zoology (trans.), I. 244.

isogram (i-sō-gram), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + gramma, that which is drawn or written: see gram, and cf. diagram, etc.] A diagram exhibiting a family of curves for the purpose of showing a relation between three variables.

isographic (i-sō-graf'ik), a. [Gr. isographia + -ic.] Of or pertaining to isography.

isographically (i-sō-graf'ik-al-i), adv. In an isographic manner; as regards, or by means of, isography.

The laborious process of isographically charting the whole of Argelander's 324,000 stars.

A. M. Clerke, Astron. in 19th Cent., p. 487.

isography (i-sō-grā-fī), n. [Gr. isographos, writing like, isos, equal, + graphein, write.] The imitation of handwriting.

isogyne (i-sō-jī-nē), n. pl. [Gr. isos, equal, + gynē, female (in mod. bot. a pistil).] A division of dicotyledonous plants, including the Primulaceae, Ericaceae, etc., in which the carpels equal the sepals and petals in number. They are coextensive with the Isocarpeae.

isogynous (i-sō-jī-nūs), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + gynē, female (in mod. bot. pistil).] In bot., having the pistils, or the carpels of which the single pistil is composed, equal in number to the sepals.

isogyrous (i-sō-jī-rūs), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + gyros, round: see gyre.] In bot., forming a complete spiro. [Rare.]

isohaline (i-sō-hal'in), n. [Irreg. < Gr. isos, equal, + halos, salt, + -ia.] A line connecting points of equal salinity in the waters of the ocean. Such lines may be drawn to indicate either the distribution of the saline matter (about three fourths of which in the main ocean consists of common salt) at and near the surface, or its variations in depth. In the latter case, the isohalines are plotted upon a plane surface representing a vertical section of the ocean between the desired points.

isohyetal (i-sō-hi'e-tal), a. and n. [Gr. isos, equal, + hyetōs, rain: see hyetal.] I. a. Marking equality of rainfall: as, an isohyetal curve. Isohyetal lines may be drawn to connect places having the same amount of annual or of seasonal rainfall. An isohyetal map or chart is more generally called a rainfall chart.

II. n. An isohyetal line or curve.

isokephaly (i-sō-kef'a-li), n. See isoccephaly.

isoklinostat, n. See isoclinostat.

isolable (is'ō- or i'sō-lā-bl), a. [Gr. isolatō + -able.] That can be isolated; specifically, in chem., capable of being obtained pure, or uncombined with any other substance.

It [identity] is quite accurately distinguishable from difference in known matter, but it is not isolable from difference. B. Boasquet, Mind, XIII. 350.

isolate (is'ō- or i'sō-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. isolated, ppr. isolating. [With suffix -ate, < F. isolat = Pg. isolat, < It. isolare, < ML. insulare, pp. insulatus, detach, separate: see insulate.] 1. To set or place apart; detach or separate so as to be alone: often used reflexively: as, he isolated himself from all society.

It is . . . possible to dissect out a nerve with a muscle attached, to keep it alive for a time, and thus to inquire what an isolated nerve will do.

G. T. Ladd, Physiol. Psychology, p. 55.

2. In elect., same as insulate, 3.—3. In chem., to obtain (a substance) free from all its combinations.

isolated (is'ō- or i'sō-lāt), a. [Gr. isolatō, v.] Isolated; detached.

The New Moon swam divinely isolated

In maiden silence. Lowell, Endymion, I.

isolated (is'ō- or i'sō-lā-ted), p. a. 1. Standing detached from others of a like kind; placed by itself or alone.

I am not teaching man's isolated energy.

Channing, Perfect Life, p. 17.

2. In chem., pure; freed from combination.—Isolated nitrogen. See nitrogen.

isolating (is'ō- or i'sō-lā-ting), p. a. Employing the principle or producing the effect of isolation: specifically applied in philology to monosyllabic languages in which each word is a simple, uninflected root.

Such languages [agglutinative], constituting the small minority of human tongues, are wont to be called isolating, i. e. using each element by itself, in its integral form. Whitney, Enycy. Brit., XVIII. 774.

isolation (is'ō- or i'sō-lā'shon), n. [= F. isolation; as isolate + -ion.] The state of being isolated or alone.

Isolation from the rest of mankind.

Milman, Latin Christianity, viii. 5.

O God-like isolation which art mine,

I can but count thee perfect gain.

Tennyson, Palace of Art.

isolator (is'ō- or i'sō-lā-tqr), n. [Gr. isolatō + -or.] An insulator.

isologous (i-sō-lō-gūs), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + logos, ratio, proportion: see logos.] Having similar proportions or relations: specifically applied in chemistry to a series of hydrocarbons each member of which differs in composition from the next above it in the same series by having two less hydrogen atoms. Thus, ethane (C₂H₆), ethylene (C₂H₄), and acetylene (C₂H₂) form an isologous series.

The number of isologous groups actually known and studied is comparatively small.

W. A. Miller, Elem. of Chem., § 1122.

isologue (i'sō-lōg), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + logos, ratio, proportion.] A member of an isologous series of hydrocarbons.

isomatigale (i-sō-mas'ti-gāl), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + matigale (ματιγ-), a whip.] Having the flagella alike or similar, as an infusorian, in which there may be two or more such flagella: distinguished from heteromatigale.

isomer (i'sō-mēr), n. [Gr. isomeria, having equal parts: see isomerism.] In chem., a compound that exhibits the properties of isomerism with reference to some other compound. Also isomeride.

isomera (i-sōm'g-rā), n. pl. [NL.: see isomerism.] A primary division of coleopterous insects, characterized by having (with a very few exceptions) the same number of tarsal joints on the posterior legs as on the others. The Isomera include the five series Adephaga, Clavicornia, Serricornia, Lamellicornia, and Phytophaga.

isomere (i'sō-mēr), n. [Gr. isomeria, having equal parts: see isomerism. Cf. isomer.] In zool., a part or segment of the limb of one animal which is homologous with or corresponds to a part in another animal. Thus, the distal end of a bird's tibia is an isomere of proximal tarsal bones of a mammal. See isotome, and membral segment (under membral).

The lines . . . are isotomes, cutting the limbs into morphologically equal parts, or isomeres.

Coues, Key to N. A. Birds, p. 229.

isomeria (i-sō-mē-rī-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. isomeria, having equal parts: see isomerism.] A distribution into equal parts. Kersey, 1708.

isomeric (i-sō-mēr'ik), a. [Gr. isomeria + -ic.] 1. In chem., pertaining to or characterized by isomerism.

As I learn from one of our first chemists, Prof. Frankland, protein is capable of existing under probably at least a thousand isomeric forms.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., App. p. 483.

2. In zool., of, pertaining to, or forming an isomere: as, isomeric segments of the limbs.

isomerical (i-sō-mēr'ik-al), a. [Gr. isomeria + -al.] Same as isomeric.

isomerically (i-sō-mēr'ik-al-i), adv. In an isomeric manner; as regards isomerism.

isomeride (i-sōm'g-rīd or -rīl), n. [Gr. isomeria + -ide.] Same as isomer.

isomerism (i-sōm'g-rizm), n. [Gr. isomeria + -ism.] In chem., identity or close similarity of composition and molecular weight, with difference of physical or of both chemical and physical properties. There are three different cases of isomerism: first, where compound bodies have the same ultimate composition and the same molecular weight, but differ in physical properties and in their behavior toward the same reagents, being essentially distinct substances: second, where compounds have the same composition, the same molecular weight, and the same general reactions, but differ in certain physical or chemical properties; third, where compounds differ solely in certain physical properties. The facts of isomerism are generally explained by assuming a difference in the arrangement of the atoms which form the isomeric molecules.

Allotropy stands in the same relation to elements that isomerism does to compounds.

Frankland and Japp, Inorganic Chemistry, p. 111.

isomeromorphism (i-sō-mēr'ō-mōr'fizm), n. [Gr. isomeria, having equal parts (see isomerism), + morphē, form, + -ism.] In crystal., isomerism between substances having the same atomic proportions.

isomerous (i-sōm'g-rūs), a. [Gr. isomeria, having equal parts or shares, isos, equal, + meros, part, share.] 1. In bot., composed each of an equal number of parts, as the members of the several circles of a flower.—2. In chem., having the property of chemical isomerism.—3. In entom., having the same number of tarsal joints of all the legs. When the number is not stated, isomerous tarsi are understood to be five-jointed or pentamerous. See Isomera.—4. In odontol., having the same number of ridges: specifically applied to molar teeth whose transverse ridges do not increase in number on successive teeth, as in the living elephants: opposed to anisomerous and hypisomerous. Gill.

isomery (i-sō-mēr-i), n. [NL. isomeria, q. v.] Isomerism.

isometric (i-s area varying from 105° to 107°. Between the members of an isomorphic group intermediate compounds may occur, regarded as isomorphic mixtures of the two unlike molecules. Thus, dolomite, the carbonate of calcium and magnesium, may be considered as formed by the union of the calcium carbonate molecules with those of magnesium carbonate. (b) pl. In math. See group.

Isomya (i-sō-mī'g), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. isos, equal, + mys, a mouse, a muscle, = E. mouse. Cf. Dimyaria.] Isomyarian mollusks; Dimyaria proper, one of three orders into which lamellibranchs have been divided: distinguished from Heteromya and Monomya. They are divided into Integropallia and Sinupallia.

Isomyarian (i-sō-mī-ā'ri-an), a. [Isomya + -arian.] Having two adductor muscles of the same size or nearly so, as most bivalve mollusks; perfectly dimyarian; of or pertaining to the Isomya.

Isom (i'son), n. [Gr. isov, neut. of isos, equal: see iso.] In the music of the Greek Church, the sign for the key-note.

Isomandra (i-sō-nūn'drā), n. [NL., irreg. < Gr. isos, equal, + andros (ἀνδρ-), male (mod. bot. stamen).] A small genus of gamopetalous plants, of the natural order Scrophularaceae. The flowers are tetramerous, the corolla-tube is elongated, the stamens are 8 in number and nearly equal, and the seeds are albuminous. They are evergreen trees with entire leaves, natives of southern India, Ceylon, and the adjacent islands. The species of this genus, particularly I. polyantha and I. ovata, yield a good quality of gutta-percha. I. Gutta, the true gutta-percha, is now referred to the genus Falcatum. Wight, 1844.

Isomandros (i-sō-nān'drō-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Radikofor, 1887), < Isomandra + -os.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Scrophulariaceae, containing the genera Isomandra and Paysona.

Isonephelic (i'sō-ne-fel'ik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + nebel, cloud: see nebul.] Indicating equality as regards the prevalence of clouds.—Isonephelic line, in meteor., an imaginary line over the earth's surface passing through points which have the same degree of cloudiness of the sky for a given period (month or year).

A chart of the world showing lines of equal annual cloudiness (isonephelic) is given by Reman. Astronomical Report, 1881, p. 280.

Isonomia (i-sō-nō-mī-ā), n. [Gr. isonomia, equality of rights: see isonomy.] Equality before the law; uniformity of rights.

There is no part of our constitution so admirable as this equality of civil rights, this isonomia which the philosophers of ancient Greece only hoped to find in democratical government. Str. H. Oropus, Eng. Const., p. 200.

Isonomic (i-sō-nō-mī'k), a. [Gr. isonomikos, < isonomia, equality of laws: see isonomy.] 1. Of or pertaining to isonomy; the same or equal in law or right.—2. One in kind or origin: specifically applied in chemistry to isomorphism subsisting between two compounds of like composition: opposed to heteronomic.

Isonomy (i-sō-nō-mī), n. [Gr. isonomia, equal distribution, equality of rights or laws, < isov, equal, + nomos, distribution, custom, law: see nome.] Equality as regards rights and privileges; isonomia.

Philolaus . . . introduced an isonomy into the oligarchy, and so enabled it to hold its ground. Von Harke, Univ. Hist. (trans.), p. 185.

Isonym (i'sō-nim), n. [Gr. isonymos, having the same name, < isos, equal, + onyma, onyma, name.] In philol., a paronym.

Isonymic (i'sō-nim'ik), a. [Isonym + -ic.] In philol., paronymic.

Isonymy (i-sō-nī-mī), n. [Gr. isonymia, sameness of name, < isonymos, having the same name: see isonym.] Same as paronymy.

Isopathy (i-sop'ā-thī), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + patos, suffering, disease.] The theory that disease may be cured by the product of the disease, as smallpox by minute doses of variolous matter; also, the theory that a diseased organ may be cured by eating the same organ of a healthy animal.

Isoperimetrical (i-sō-per-i-met'ri-kal), a. [Isoperimetry + -ical.] 1. Of or pertaining to isoperimetry.—2. Having equal boundaries: as, isoperimetrical figures or bodies.

Isoperimetry (i'sō-per-i-met'ri), n. [Gr. isos, equal, + perimetros, circumference: see perimeter.] In geom., the science of figures having equal perimeters or boundaries. The problem to determine among all curves having their extremities at two given points and a given length that one which incloses the maximum area is the problem of isoperimetry; and the name is extended to every problem involving the calculus of variations in the same way.

Isopetalous (i-sō-pet'ā-lus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + petalon, a leaf (petal): see petal.] Having equal petals. Thomas, Med. Diet.

Isophorous (i-sōf'ō-rus), a. [Gr. isophoros, bearing or drawing equal weights, equal in strength, < isos, equal, + phero = E. bear.] In bot., an epithet used by Lindley to express the relation to a species of its abnormal forms when they are sufficiently habitual to have been taken for distinct plants. Thus, the assumed genus of orchids Actinia is now regarded as an isophorous form of Dendrobium.

Isoplastic (i'sō-plāst'ik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + plastos, verbal adj. of plassein, press, squeeze.] Isobaric; denoting equal pressure.

Isopleura (i-sō-plū'rā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of isopleurus: see isopleurous.] A prime division of gastropods containing those which are equal-sided or bilaterally symmetrical: contrasted with Antisopleura. The isopleural gastropods are chiefly represented by the chitons, but also include such worm-like forms as Chetodermis and Neomenia. Ranked as a superorder, the Isopleura have been divided into three orders, Polyplacophora, Chetodermis, and Neomeniodes.

Isopleural (i-sō-plū'rāl), a. [As isopleur-ous + -al.] Having the right and left sides equal; bilaterally symmetrical, as most animals; of or pertaining to the Isopleura.

Isopleurous (i-sō-plū'rūs), a. [NL. isopleurus, < isos, equal, + pleuros, side.] Same as isopleural.

Isoplexis (i-sō-plek'sis), n. [NL. (Lindley, 1821), < Gr. isos, equal, + plēxis, a stroke, < plēssan, strike, cut.] A genus of Scrophulariaceae, closely allied to Digitalis, but distinguished by a shrubby habit and by the fact that the upper lip of the corolla equals the lower. The two species, I. spectans from Madeira and I. Canariensis from the Canaries, cultivated in green-houses, bear terminal racemes of showy yellow or orange-colored flowers.

Isopod (i'sō-pod), a. and n. [NL. isopodus (isopod-), < Gr. isos, equal, + podis (pod-) = E. foot.] 1. a. Having the feet all alike, or similar in character; specifically, pertaining to the Isopoda or having their characters. Also isopodous.

Blind Isopod (Cecidocera stygia), Mammoth Cave, Kentucky.

II. n. An isopod crustacean; any one of the Isopoda.

Also isopodan, isopode.

Isopoda (i-sop'ō-dā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of isopodus (isopod-), equal-footed: see isopod.] An order of arthropods or edriophtalmous (sessile-eyed) crustaceans, with 7 free thoracic somites bearing as many pairs of legs, which are alike in size and direction, whence the name; the Polygnatha of Fabricius. The body is usually broad and depressed, and more or less arched; the head is almost always distinct from the thorax, except from the first thoracic ring, with which it is united; and the abdomen is short-ringed and often reduced. There are no branchial thoracic vessels, the respiratory function being carried on by the peculiarly modified laminar legs of the abdomen. The thoracic legs of the females may be modified to form brood-pouches for the eggs by means of delicate membranous plates called ovigeræ. The sexes are distinct, except in Cymothoidæ. Isopods are found in both salt and fresh water, and also on land. The terrestrial isopoda, family Oniscidae, are known as wood-bugs, wood-lice, and slaters. The gribble, Limnoria terebrans, is a marine form. Many Isopoda are ectoparasitic, as the Cymothoidæ on the gills and in the mouth of fishes, and the Bopyridæ in the gills of prawns. The order was divided by Milne-Edwards into three sections, Sedentaria, Natatoria, and Cursoria, according to the habits of the animals. By Claus the Isopoda are made a sub-order of Arthropoda, and divided into two tribes, Antisopoda (which resemble amphipods) and Eusopoda, or genuine isopoda. Others reckon about ten families, not separated into suborders. Leading types are Tanaidæ and Anceidæ on the one hand, and on the other Cymothoidæ, Sphaeromidæ, Idolæidæ, Asellidæ, Bopyridæ, and Oniscidæ.

Three Types of Isopods. 1, sedentary, Bopyrus squillorum, a. natatorial, Cymodora lanceolata, b. cursorial, Oniscus asellus, c. a common wood-bug or wood-lice; a, head; b, thorax; c, abdomen.

Isopodan (i-sop'ō-dan), a. and n. [Isopod + -an.] Same as isopod.

The size of the body far transcends the ordinary Isopoda limit. Encyc. Brit., VI. 659.

Isopode (i'sō-pōd), a. and n. Same as isopod.

Isopodiform (i-sō-pōd'i-fōrm), a. [NL. isopodus (isopod-), isopod, + L. forma, form.] Formed like an isopod; resembling an isopod in form: specifically applied to six-footed, oblong, flattened larvae with a distinct thoracic shield, long antennae, and caudal bristles or plates, as those of the roaches.

Isopodimorphous (i-sō-pōd-i-mōr'fus), a. [NL. isopodus (isopod-), isopod, + Gr. morphē, form.] Same as isopodiform.

Isopodous (i-sop'ō-dus), a. [As isopod + -ous.] Same as isopod.

Isopogonous (i-sō-pog'ō-nus), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + pogon, beard, barb.] Equally webbed: said of feathers whose inner and outer webs are alike in size and shape: opposed to antisopogonous.

Isopolity (i-sō-pol'i-ti), n. [Gr. isopoliteia, equality of civic rights, < isopolites, a citizen with equal rights, < isos, equal, + polites, a citizen: see polity.] Equal rights of citizenship in different communities; mutual political rights.

Niebuhr . . . establishes the principle that the census comprehended all the confederate cities which had the right of isopolity. Müller.

Between America and England . . . one would be glad if there could exist some isopolity. Crough, To C. S. Norton, Sept. 21, 1853.

Isoptera (i-sop'tē-rā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of isopteris: see isopterous.] The termites or white ants regarded as a suborder of Neuroptera. They have large, equal, and naked wings not folded in repose, well-developed manducatory jaws, and short many-jointed antennae. The larvae and pupae resemble the netters; the latter are wingless. This suborder is represented by the family Termitidae alone.

Isopterous (i-sop'tē-rus), a. [NL. isopteris (cf. Gr. isopteros, poet., swift as flight), < Gr. isos, equal, + pteron, wing.] Having the wings equal; specifically, pertaining to the Isoptera or white ants, or having their characters.

Isopurpuric (i'sō-pēr-pū'rik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + L. purpurus, purple: see purple.] Same as purpuric.—Isopurpuric acid, $C_{12}H_8N_2O_6$, an acid not known in the free state, but forming a potassium salt when strong solutions of picric acid and potassium cyanide are mixed. It was formerly used as a dye, under the name of granat soluble.

Isopurpurin (i-sō-pēr-pū-rin), n. [Isopurpuric + -in.] A coal-tar color ($C_{14}H_8O_3(OH)_3$) used in dyeing, closely allied to alizarin, formed by heating beta-anthraquinone disulphonic acid with caustic soda and potassium chlorate. It is sold in commerce under the name of alizerin, and produces the yellow shade of red, while true alizarin gives bluish shades of red. Also called anthrapurpurin.

Isopyrum (i-sō-pī'rū-m), n. [NL. (Heichenbach, 1837), Isopyrum + -ea.] A former tribe of plants of the natural order Ranunculaceae, typified by the genus Isopyrum: now merged in the tribe Helleboraceae.

Isopyrum (i-sō-pī'rū-m), n. [NL. (Linnæus), < L. isopyrum, < Gr. isopyron, a plant not identified (Kumaria scopulata?), < isos, equal, + pyron, wheat (or rip = E. fire).] A small genus of plants of the order Ranunculaceae, the type of the old tribe Isopyrea. They are slender smooth herbs with perennial root, bi- to triterately compound leaves, and solitary or loosely panicle white flowers. Seventy-five species are known in the north temperate portions of both hemispheres.

Isorhythmic (i-sō-rith'mik), a. [Gr. isos, equal, + rhymos, rhythm: see rhythm.] In anc. pros., having the same number of moræ or units of time in thesis and arsis: as, an isorhythmic measure or foot; characterized by such proportion (1:1) of thesis and arsis: as, the isorhythmic class of feet; isorhythmic movement. The isorhythmic class (of feet) consists of the tetraæmic feet, namely: the dactyl (—|—), the anapest (—|—), and the spondee (—|—).

Isosceles (i-sos'e-lēs), a. [L. isosceles, < Gr. isoskeles, with equal legs (isoskeles τρίγωνον, a triangle with two sides equal), < isos, equal, + skelos, leg.] Having two legs or sides equal: as, an isosceles triangle.

Isosceles (i-sos'e-lēs), n. [NL.: see isosceles, a.] A genus of cerambycid longicorn beetles. Newman, 1842.

Isosismal (i-sō-sis'mal), n. and a. [Gr. isos, equal, + sismos, a shaking, an earthquake: see seismic.] 1. n. A curve or line connecting points at which an earthquake-shock is felt with equal intensity, or at which there is an "equal overthrow" (Mallet). See homoseismal.

II. a. Belonging or related to an isoseismal; having the character of an isoseismal: as, an isoseismal curve.

Isosismic (i-sō-sis'mik), a. Same as isoseismal.

Isosceles Triangle.

Isosoma (i-sō-sō'mā), n. [NL., < Gr. isosōma, of a like body, < isos, equal, + sōma, body.] 1. A genus of hymenopterous insects of the family Chalcididae and subfamily Eurytominae, containing plant-feeding forms furnishing an exception to the rule in this parasitic family. I. hordei is known as the joint-worm fly. Walker, 1832.—2. A genus of Elateridae or click-beetles, containing one species, I. elateroides, from the Caucasus. Ménetries, 1832.

Isospondyli (i-sō-spon'di-lī), n. pl. [NL., pl. of isospindylus: see isospindylous.] An order of physostomous fishes with no preopercoid arch, the scapular arch suspended to the cranium, a symplectic bone, the pterotic and anterior vertebrae simple, and the parietals separated by the supraoccipital. The order includes most malacopterygian fishes. E. D. Cope, 1870.

Isospondylous (i-sō-spon'di-lus), a. [isospindylus, < Gr. isos, equal, + σπινδύλος, vertebra.] Having the characters of the isospindyl; pertaining to the isospindyl.

Isospore (i-sō-spōr), n. [isos, equal, + σπώρα, a seed: see spore.] 1. An isosporous plant.—2. As employed by Bostafinski, the same as zygospore.

Isosporia (i-sō-spōr'i-ā), n. pl. [NL. (Baker), < Gr. isos, equal, + σπώρα, a seed.] A series of vascular cryptogamous plants, including the Filices, Equisetaceae, and Lyopodiaceae, in which the spores are said to be all of one kind. Later investigation has shown that this classification is incorrect, since there are both isosporous (homosporous) and heterosporous Filices, Equisetaceae, and Lyopodiaceae. See homosporous.

Isosporous (i-sō-spō-rus), a. [isos, equal, + σπώρα, a seed: see spore.] Same as homosporous.

Isostatic (i-sō-stat'ik), a. [isos, equal, + στατικός, stable.] In hydrostatic equilibrium from equality of pressure. Thus, the earth's crust is conceived to be formed of elementary conical prisms of equal weight, and hence the crust is isostatic, or in an isostatic condition.

Isostemonous (i-sō-stem'ō-nus), a. [isos, equal, + στέμον, a stamen.] In bot., having the stamens equal in number to the sepals or petals, or to the ground-plan of the flower.

Isostemony (i-sō-stem'ō-nī), n. [As isostemonous + y.] The state or condition of being isostemonous.

Isotely (i-sō-tel-i), n. [isos, equality, + τέλος, tax, tribute.] In ancient Athens, equality before the law with citizens, granted to an alien; immunity from the disadvantages of alienage.

The two brothers returned to Athens. . . . Though not possessing the right of citizenship, they possessed the isotely. Whitton, Notes on Lyrias, p. 52.

Isothermal (i-sō-thēr'al), a. [isothermo + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of an isotherm; indicating the distribution of summer temperature by means of isotherms: as, an isothermal chart; isothermal lines.

Isothere (i-sō-thēr), n. [isos, equal, + θερος, summer.] An imaginary line over the earth's surface passing through points which have the same mean summer temperature.

Isotherm (i-sō-thēr-in), n. [isos, equal, + θερμ, heat.] A line connecting points on the earth's surface having the same mean temperature. Such a line may be either an imaginary one or one actually drawn on a map or chart of the region embraced by the observations. When the term isotherm is used without qualification, or when it is not otherwise necessarily understood from the context, the mean of the year, or more properly, of a long series of years, is intended. The isotherm of the winter months is sometimes designated as the isochimical or isochimical; that of the summer months as the isotherm.

Isothermal (i-sō-thēr-mal), a. and n. [isos, equal, + θερμ, heat (see isotherm), + -al.] 1. A. Of the same degree of heat; of the same temperature; in phys. geog., pertaining to or marking equality of temperature; exhibiting the geographical distribution of temperature: as, an isothermal line; the isothermal relations of different continents; an isothermal chart. Also isothermous.—Isothermal coordinates. See coordinates.—Isothermal line, an isotherm.—Isothermal surface, a surface every point of which has the same temperature. The line of intersection of an isothermal surface and any plane not parallel to it is an isothermal line.—Isothermal zones, spaces on opposite sides of the equator having the same mean temperature, and bounded by corresponding isothermal lines.

IL n. An isothermal line; an isotherm.
Isothermobath (i-sō-thēr'mō-bath), n. [isos, equal, + θερμ, heat, + βάθος, depth.] A line drawn through points of equal temperature in a vertical section of the ocean. Sir C. Wyville Thomson, 1876.

Isothermous (i-sō-thēr'mus), a. Same as isothermal.

Isotherombrose (i-sō-thēr-rom'brōs), a. [isos, equal, + θερος, summer, + βροσ, rain: see imbricate.] In phys. geog., characterized by an equal amount of rainfall in summer; noting lines connecting places on the surface of the globe where this condition exists.

Isotoma (i-sōt'ō-mā), n. [NL., < Gr. isos, equal, + τομή, a cutting, < τέμνω, ταμίνω, cut.] 1. In entom.: (a) A genus of beetles of the family La-grididae, containing a few South American species. Blanchard, 1845. (b) A genus of thysanurous insects, of which I. arborea is the typical form. There are a number of other species. Bourlet, 1839.—2. In bot., a genus of herbaceous plants of the natural order Lobeliaceae. The flowers are axillary, with a nearly regular salver-shaped corolla; the tube is very long and slender, and only slightly split or not at all; and the stamens are inserted toward the top. About 10 species are known, of which the most noteworthy is I. longiflora, called by the Spanish-Americans reventa-camellón, because fatal to horses. It acts upon the human system as a violent cathartic, with fatal results.

Isotome (i-sōt'ō-mē), n. [isos, equal, + τομή, a cutting, < τέμνω, ταμίνω, cut.] In zool., an imaginary line drawn through the same joint, or between the same segments, of the same limb in different animals, to indicate those segments which are homologous. Thus, the tibiotarsal isotome passes through the ankle-joint of man, the hock of a horse, and the lower end of the tibia of a bird. Coues, 1884. See isomers.

Isotomous (i-sōt'ō-mus), a. [isotome + -ous.] Of or pertaining to an isotome: as, isotomous segments of a man, horse, and bird. Coues.

Isotonic (i-sōt'ō-nīk), a. [isos, having equal accent (or tone), < isos, equal, + τόνος, tone, accent: see tone.] Having or indicating equal tones.—Isotonic system or temperament, in music, the system of equal temperament. See temperament.

Isotrope (i-sō-trōp), a. [isos, equal, + τροπή, a turning, < τρέπω, turn.] Same as isotropic.

Isotropic (i-sō-trōp'ik), a. [As isotrope + -ic. Cf. tropic.] 1. Having the same properties in all directions: said of a medium with respect to elasticity, conduction of heat or electricity, or radiation of heat and light. Thus, all crystallized substances belonging to the isometric system are isotropic with respect to heat and light.

The substance of a homogeneous solid is called isotropic when a spherical portion of it, tested by any physical agency, exhibits no difference in quality however it is turned. W. Thomson, Encyc. Brit., VII. 804.

2. Having equal, common, or non-specific developmental capacity.

The conclusion [is] that the nervous system, and correspondingly other organs, may develop from any portion of the egg-substance—in short, that the egg is isotropic. Encyc. Brit., XX. 416.

Isotropous (i-sōt'ō-rō-pus), a. [As isotrope + -ous.] Same as isotropic.

In a previous note . . . the author studied the problem connected with the cooling of a homogeneous and isotropous solid body. Nature, XXXIX. 220.

Isotropy (i-sōt'ō-rō-pī), n. [As isotrope + -y.] The state or property of being isotropic.

There is involved no assumption as to the homogeneity or isotropy of the dielectric medium. Philosophical Mag., XXVI. 243.

Metastatic isotropy, the isotropy of a solid for which any three orthogonal axes are metastatic.

Isotype (i-sōt'ip), n. [isos, having the same type, < isos, equal (parallel), + τύπος, type, form.] In soögeog., a form common to two or more countries: applied to representatives of the same genus or family occurring in different countries. T. Gill, Smithsonian Report, 1881, p. 460.

Isotypic (i-sōt'ip'ik), a. [isotype + -ic.] Having the character of an isotype.

Isosoid (i-sō-sō'id), n. [isos, equal, + σώδις.] In soöl., the opposite of allosoid.

Isaghol-seed (is'pa-gul-sēd), n. [E. Ind.] The seed of Plantago isaghol, a native of northwestern India. These seeds are grayish-pink in color, and are used to prepare a highly esteemed medicinal drink. Also called isaghol-seed.

Isipida (is'pi-dā), n. [NL. (Gesner, 1555), appar. impropr. for Isipida, < L. isipidus, rough, shaggy: see isipid.] 1. One of sundry slender-billed birds, especially the kingfisher or halcyon and the bee-eater or apiaster.—2. The technical specific name of the small kingfisher of Europe, Alcedo isipida.—3. [cap.] A genus of kingfishers, equivalent to the modern family Alcedinidae, variously restricted by subsequent authors, and now disused. Brisson, 1760.

Ispravnik (is-prav'nik), n. [Russ. ispravnik (see def.), < ispravnik, exact, correct; cf. ispravnik, correct, repair, exercise (a function).] The chief police officer of a Russian uyezd or rural district, and the presiding judge of the district police court. His duties are partly judicial and partly executive, and in some parts of the empire, particularly in the remotest parts, his powers are virtually those of a local governor.

I-spy (i'spi'), n. [So called from the exclamation of the seeker ("it"), "I spy" (So-and-so), when he discovers a hidden player.] A children's game, the same as hide-and-seek. Also, with unoriginal aspiration, hi-spy, hy-spy.

O, the curiously varied! I must come to play at Blind Harry and I-spy with them.

Scott, Guy Mannering, Ivill.

Israelite (iz'rā-el-it), n. [Israel, usually in pl. Israelites, < Gr. Ἰσραηλῆς; a descendant of Israel, < Ἰσραήλ, < Heb. Isra'el, Israel, orig. another name of Jacob, then a collective name for the Jews.] A descendant of Israel or Jacob; one of "the children of Israel"; a Hebrew; a Jew. Israelite was the name of the whole people of Israel down to the death of Saul, when it came to be restricted to those northern tribes who rebelled against David, and more definitely applied to the ten tribes that set up a separate monarchy on the death of Solomon. After the captivity the name again came to be the appellation of the reunited branches of the nation, but was gradually supplanted by the term Jew, especially among foreigners.

The Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time, . . . even they also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan. 1 Sam. xiv. 21.

I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. Rom. xi. 1.

New Israelite, a member of a certain English sect: name as Southampton.

Israelitic (iz'rā-el-it'ik), a. [Israelite, < Gr. Ἰσραηλίτης, Israelite: see Israelite.] Pertaining to the Israelites; Jewish; Hebrew.

These books give us a fairly trustworthy account of Israelitic life and thought in the times which they cover. Huxley, Nineteenth Century, XIX. 247.

Israelitish (iz'rā-el-it'ish), a. [Israelite + -ish.] Belonging to the Israelites; of the Jewish race.

And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel. Lev. xxiv. 10.

isset, v. i. [See ish.] To go out; issue.

issueth, n. A Middle English form of issue.

Issida (is'i-dā), n. pl. [NL., < Issus + -ida.]

The Issida rated as a subfamily of Eulagidae.

Issidae (is'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Issus + -idae.]

A family of homopterous insects, typified by the genus Issus. It contains thickest robust bugs, many of which are rough, resembling bits of bark, and thus exhibit protective mimicry. They are widely distributed in temperate and tropical countries, and are classified under about 50 genera and more than 200 species.

Isidioromys (is'i-dī-or'ō-mīs), n. [NL., supposed to be an error for Isidoromys, < L. Isidorus, a man's name (referring to Isidore Geoffroy St. Hilaire), + Gr. μῦς = E. mouse.] A notable genus of fossil myomorph rodents from the European Tertiary, referred to the family Theridomysidae, having rootless molars whose crowns are divided into cordate lobes by reentering enamel-folds. Cretset, 1840.

Issuable (ish'ō-ā-bl), a. [issue + -able.] 1. Capable of issuing, or liable to be issued.—2. In law, pertaining to an issue or issues; that admits of issue being taken upon it; in which issues are made up: as, an issuable plea; an issuable term.

For now the course is, to make the sheriff's venire returnable on the last return of the same term wherein issue is joined, viz. Hilary or Trinity terms: which, from the making up of the issues therein, are usually called issuable terms. Blackstone, Com., III. xxviii.

Issuable plea, a plea upon which a plaintiff may take issue and go to trial upon the merits.

Issuably (ish'ō-ā-blī), adv. In an issuable manner; so as to raise an issue on the merits: as, "pleading issuably," Burrill.

Isothermal Lines for May.

insurance (ish'û-ans), n. [< insuran(s) + -ce.] The act of insuring or giving out: as, the insurance of nations.

insuant (ish'û-ant), a. [< issue + -ant.] Emerging: in her., said of a beast of which only the upper half is seen. Especially Lion insuant.

(a) When emerging from the lower edge or bottom of a chief, and therefore borne upon the chief: as, a chief gules, a demi-lion insuant argent. In this sense contrasted with ascendant, which means rising from the bottom of a shield or from the outer edge of a fesse, etc., and with esquant and naissant, which mean rising from the middle of an ordinary, as a fesse, and usually borne partly on the ordinary and partly on the field above it. (b) Rising out of any other bearing, or from the bottom of the escutcheon. (Rare in this sense.)—Insuant and revertant, in her., coming into sight and disappearing: said of two beasts of which the upper part of one and the lower part of the other are visible, as when one of them rises from the base of the shield and the other disappears at the top.

issue (ish'û), n. [< ME. issue, isen, isehue, isch-ewc, yesswe, < OF. issue, eisnu, essuc, F. issue, a going out, egress, outlet, final event, < issu, pp. of issir, eissir, < L. eisir, go out: see exit. Cf. ish. The noun is in later senses partly from the verb.] 1. A going, passing, or flowing out; passage from within outward; an outgoing, outflow, or flux.

With my mouthe if I laugh moche or lite,
Myn yon sholde make a contynuaunce vi-trewe,
Myn hert also wolde haue ther-of despitte,
The wepyng teares haue so large yssue.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 53.

A woman which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years came behind him. Mat. ix. 20.

2. Means of egress; an opening or outlet; a passage leading outward; a vent.

Than thei gan to reperi a softe pass till thei come to the lawe of the foreste, and than gan it to shewe day. Martin (E. E. T. S.), II. 257.

The foliage closed so thickly in front that there seemed to be no issue. R. L. Stevenson, Inland Voyage, p. 120.

3. Specifically, in med., a vent for the passage of blood or morbid matter; a running sore, accidental or made as a counter-irritant.

When any man hath a running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean. Lev. xv. 2.

Issues over the spine have been found useful in chronic spinal disease. Quain, Med. Dict., p. 314.

4. An outcome; a result; the product of any process or action; that which occurs as a consequence; ultimate event or result: as, a happy issue of one's labors; the issues of our actions are hidden from us.

A blissful begynnynge may holdy be said,
That folow to the fer end and hath a faire yssue.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 1227.

Learning and philosophy . . . had . . . the power to lay the mind under some restraint, and make it consider the issue of things. Bacon, Moral Fabul, vi. Expl.

Spirits are not finely touch'd
But to fine issues.

Shak., M. for M., I. 1, 87.

A Fact is the end or last issue of spirit. Emerson, Nature.

5. Offspring; progeny; a child or children; descendant or descendants: as, he had issue a son; issue of the whole or of the half blood.

There as none issue of us on this erthe spronges. Morte Arthurs (E. E. T. S.), I. 1943.

Was Milan thrust from Milan that his issue Should become kings of Naples?

Shak., Tempest, v. 1, 206.

Might I dread that you,
With only Fame for spouse and your great deeds
For issue, yet may live in vain?

Tennyson, Princess, III.

6. Produce or proceeds; yield, as of land or other possessions: as, the issues, rents, and profits of an estate.

He was first of Ingland that gaf God his tithes,
Of tithes of beates, of landes, or of tithes.

Rob. of Brunne, p. 19.

7. The act of sending or giving out; a putting or giving forth; promulgation; delivery; emission: as, the issue of commands by an officer, or of rations to troops; the issue of a book, or of bank-notes.

The booking-office is not opened for the issue of tickets until perhaps a quarter of an hour before the time fixed for the departure of the train. Saturday Rev., Jan., 1874, p. 14.

Issue is also applied to the mere attempt to dispose of old stock at a reduced price, where no reprint takes place. N. and Q., 7th ser., II. 479.

The codification of Bavarian law and the issue of the Golden Bull were . . . attempts in the direction of civilization in accordance with the highest existing ideal. Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 211.

8. That which is sent out, promulgated, or delivered; the quantity sent forth at one time, or within a certain period: as, a large issue of bank-notes; the daily issues of a newspaper.

No undeserving favourite doth boast
His issues from our treasury.

Ford, Perkin Warbeck, iv. 4.

To restrict issues, or forbid notes below a certain denomination, is no less injurious than inequitable. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 434.

The vast development of stereotyping has made the word issue a partial substitute for the word "edition." N. and Q., 7th ser., II. 478.

9. A matter of which the result is to be decided; that which is to be determined by trial or contention; a conclusion held in abeyance for consideration or debate; a choice between alternatives: as, the issues of the day; a dead issue.

Thus was raised a simple issue of law to be decided by the court. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

In this act . . . they have forced upon the country the distinct issue, "immediate dissolution or blood." Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 141.

The years have never dropped their sand
On mortal issue vast and grand
As ours to-day. Whittier, Anniversary Poem.

10. In law: (a) The close or result of pleadings in a suit, by the presentation of a controverted point to be determined by trial. It is either an issue of law, to be determined by the court, or of fact, to be determined by a jury or by the court. (b) The controversy on any material fact, affirmed on one side and denied on the other, in a trial. (c) The sending out or authoritative delivery of a document: as, the issue of execution.—At issue. (a) In controversy; opposing or contesting; hence, at variance; disagreeing; inconsistent; inharmonious.

Face, voice
As much at issue with the summer day
As if you brought a candle out of doors.
Mrs. Browning, Aurora Leigh, II.

(b) In dispute; under discussion.

A third point at issue between Carlyle and many is what he has baptised Anti-rose-waterism in Cromwell. Coburn's New Map, N. E., VIII. 206.

(c) Specifically, in law, the condition of a cause when the point in controversy has been arrived at by pleading.—Bank of issue. See bank.—Collateral issue. See collateral.—Distributive finding of the issue. See distributive.—Feigned issue. See feign.—General issue, in law, a simple denial of the whole charge or complaint, or of the main substance of it, in the form of a denial, as "not guilty" or "not indebted," as distinguished from a special denial (see special issue, below), and from allegations conflicting with particular averments, and from special pleas of other facts in avoidance.—Immaterial issue, an issue which cannot be decisive of any part of the litigation, as distinguished from a material issue, or one taken upon a fact which cannot be admitted without determining at least some part of the rights in controversy. Thus, if in an action for the price of goods sold defendant without denying the purchase should merely deny that it was on the day alleged by plaintiff, the issue would be immaterial; but if he should set up that the sale was on a credit still unexpired, issue joined upon this allegation would be material.—Issue roll, in old English legal practice, the roll of parchment on which the pleadings were entered, in anticipation of trial; hence, in somewhat later times, the pleadings in a cause, collected and fastened or folded together for the same purpose.—Joinder of issue, joinder in issue, the act of joining issue in pleading; the document by which one party signifies to the adversary that he rests the cause for trial on the point at issue on the pleadings.—Note of issue, in law, a memorandum showing issue joined in a cause, which informs the clerk that it is ready for trial.—Special issue, an issue taken by denying a particular part of the adversary's allegations, as distinguished from the issue presented by a general denial.—To join issue, to take issue, said of two parties who take up an affirmative and a negative position respectively on a point in debate.

Were our author's arguments enforced against deists or atheists only, we should hardly join issue. Goldsmith, Criticisms.

To pool issues, to unite for the promotion of individual interests or objects by joint action; combine for mutual advantage. [U. R. L. Syn. 4. Consequence, result, upshot, conclusion, termination.—S. Progeny, etc. See offspring. issue (ish'û), v.; pret. and pp. issued, yp. issuing. [< ME. issum, yssuen; < issue, n.] I. intrans. 1. To pass from within outward; go or pass out; go forth.

Fele fighting folke of the fuisse comyns . . .
At Ector that asket issue, & yssyd furth amyn [together].
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 6222.

For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 2, 20.

2. To proceed as progeny; be derived or descended; spring.

Of thy sons that shall issue from thee. 2 Ki. xx. 18.

Thy father
Was Duke of Milan; and his only heir
And princess—no worse issued.

Shak., Tempest, I. 2, 50.

3. To be produced as an effect or result; grow or accrue; arise; proceed: as, rents and profits issuing from land.

This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain.

Shak., Rich. II., I. 1, 148.

4. To come to a result or conclusion; reach an end; close; terminate: with in before an object: as, we know not how the cause will issue; the negotiations issued in a firm peace.

Her effort to bring tears into her eyes issued in an odd contraction of her face.

George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, I. 2.

The child issues to the man as his successor, and the child and the man issue to the old man.

J. H. Newman, Gram. of Assent, p. 181.

5. In law: (a) To come to a question in fact or law on which the parties join in resting the decision of the cause. (b) To go forth as authoritative or binding: said of an official instrument, as a mandamus, proclamation, or license. [In this sense often used in the future, implying that the court has the right to issue the writ, and will do so upon application: as, a writ of prohibition will issue to forbid an inferior court from entertaining a suit of which it has no jurisdiction.]

II. trans. 1. To send out; deliver for use; deliver authoritatively; emit; put into circulation: as, to issue provisions; to issue a writ or precept; to issue bank-notes or a book.

After much dispute and even persecution there was issued in 1555 a decree establishing toleration to all.

Brougham.

Arand found time to issue a series of constitutions against them [Lollards] in 1409. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 404.

24. To bring to an issue; terminate; settle.

It is our humble request that in case any difference grow in the general court, between magistrates and deputies, . . . which cannot be presently issued with mutual peace, that both parties will be pleased to defer the same to further deliberation.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 255.

Endeavour to issue those things, in the wisdom and power of God, which will be a glorious crown upon your ministry. Penn. Rise and Progress of Quakers, vi.

issueless (ish'û-len), a. [< issue, n., + -less.] Having no issue or progeny; lacking children.

Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wall thee, like a makeless wite.

Shak., Sonnets, ix.

issue-pea (ish'û-pé), n. A pea or similar round body employed for the purpose of maintaining irritation in a wound of the skin called an issue. See issue, n., 3.

issuer (ish'û-er), n. One who issues or emits: as, the issuer of a proclamation, a promissory note, etc.

Issus (is'us), n. [NL. (Fabricius, 1803), < L. Issus, Gr. Issós, a city of Cilicia, on the Mediterranean.] The typical genus of insects of the family Issidae. The fore wings are rather flat, broadest near the base, convex on the fore border, smaller and rounded at the tip. Upward of 60 species are found, in all parts of the world. Those of North America are small and inconspicuous. A leading one is I. coleoptratus, widely distributed in Europe.

-ist. [F. -iste = Sp. Pg. It. -ista, < L. -ista, -istes, < Gr. -istis, a termination of nouns of agent from verbs in -izein, < -id- + -ize, common formative of nouns of agent. See -acc, -ism.] A termination of Greek origin, existing in many English words derived from the Greek or formed on Greek analogy, denoting an agent (one who does or has to do with a thing), and corresponding usually to nouns in -er, with which in some cases they interchange. Such nouns are either (a) of pure Greek formation, as Atticism, Bagpits, evangelist, acrostic, etc., or formed of Greek elements, as etymologist, philologist, physicist, dramatist, economist, etc. (with equivalent etymologer, philologer, etc.), or (b) formed from a Latin or Romance base, as annalist, artist, jurist, legist, moralist, pietist, quietist, realist, specialist, etc., especially with reference to political or social theories or practices, as abolitionist, federalist, unionist, protectionist, socialist, utilist, corruptionist, funstonist, etc., or (c) formed from an English word (whether native or naturalized), as harpist, druggist, violinist, etc.; so also alchemist, etc. Words of the first two classes are very numerous, new formations being made with great freedom. In the last use the suffix is but sparingly used, the formative -er or some other being preferred. In vulgar use words in -ist are often employed, humorously or for the nonce, where properly only -er is permissible, as in shootist, singist, walkist, etc., for shooter, singer, walker, etc. In some instances, as scientist, for example, the formation is irregular, and the words are condemned by purists.

isthmian, isthmist, n. [< OF. isthmus: see isthmus.] An Isthmian. Davies.

Lough Ness, . . . from which, by a verie small Isthm or partition of hills, the Lough Lanes or Louthas . . . is divided. Holland, tr. of Camden, II. 50.

Isthmian (ist'- or is'mi-an), a. [F. Isthmion, < L. Isthmius, < Gr. Istmos, pertaining to the Isthmus of Corinth, < Istmos, the Isthmus of Corinth: see isthmus.] 1. Of or pertaining to an isthmus.—2. [cap.] Specifically, of or pertaining to the Isthmus of Corinth, between the Peloponnesus and the mainland of Greece.—

Isthmian games, games in honor of Poseidon anciently celebrated in the Isthmian sanctuary, on the Isthmus of Corinth, constituting the second in importance of the four great national festivals of Greece. They took place in April and May in the first and third years of each Olympiad, and included the same contests as the Olympic games, athletic, poetic, and musical. The victors were crowned with wreaths of pine-leaves, which were the only prizes. — Isthmian sanctuary, a small precinct on the northeast shore of the Isthmus of Corinth, inclosed by walls and containing rich temples, altars, a theater, a stadium, and many other public and private monuments, within which the Isthmian games were celebrated from time immemorial until the prevalence of the Christian religion.

isthmiate (ist' - or is-mi-ät), a. [< isthmus + -ate.] In zool., having a narrow part connecting two broader portions. — Isthmiate thorax, in Coleoptera, a thorax having a narrowed space between the prothorax and the elytra, either in consequence of the former being constricted behind, or because the anterior part of the mesothorax is not covered by the prothorax.

isthmitis (ist- or is-mi'tis), n. [N.L., < isthmus, 3, + -itis.] Inflammation of the throat.

isthmoid (ist' - or is-moid), a. [< Gr. isthmoidēs, like an isthmus, < isthmus, an isthmus, + -oid, form.] Resembling an isthmus; specifically, resembling the isthmus faucium.

isthmus (ist' - or is-mus), n. [Formerly also isthmus (and isthm, q. v.); = F. isthme = Pg. isthmo = Sp. It. istmo, < L. isthmus, < Gr. isthmós, a narrow passage, a narrow strip of land between two seas (esp. the Isthmus of Corinth); akin to istha, a step, < istai (= L. ire), go: see go.] 1. A narrow strip of land bordered by water and connecting two larger bodies of land, as two continents, a continent and a peninsula, or two parts of an island. The two isthmuses of most importance are that of Suez, connecting Asia and Africa, and that of Panama or Darien, connecting North and South America. The isthmus most famous in ancient times is that of Corinth, called distinctively the Isthmus, separating the Peloponnesian peninsula from the mainland of Greece. A small isthmus is often called a neck.

There want not good Geographers who hold that this Island was tied to France at first . . . by an Isthmus or neck of land 'twixt Dover and Bullen.

Huvel, Pref. to Cotgrave's French Dict. (ed. 1673).

2. In bot. and zool., some connecting part or organ, especially when narrow or joining parts larger than itself. — 3. The contracted passage from the cavity of the mouth into that of the pharynx. It is bounded above by the pendulous veil of the palate and uvula, at the sides by the pillars of the fauces, and below by the base of the tongue. More fully called isthmus faucium, isthmus of the fauces. — Isthmus cerebri, the isthmus of the brain; the narrow part intervening between the cerebrum and the cerebellum. — Isthmus of the thyroid gland, a contracted part of this gland, lying across the middle line of the windpipe, and connecting the two lateral lobes which chiefly compose the thyroid body.

-istic. [< -ist + -ic.] A termination of adjectives (and in the plural of nouns from adjectives) formed from nouns in -ist, and having reference to such nouns, or to associated nouns in -ism, as in deistic, theistic, euphuistic, euphuistic, puristic, linguistic, subjectivistic, objectivistic, etc. In nouns it has usually a plural form, as in linguistics.

-istical. [< -istic + -al.] Same as -istic.

Istiophorus (is-ti-ö' -rus), n. See Histiophorus, 1 and 2.

Istius (is-ti-ö' -rus), n. See Histiurus, 1.

istle, yistle (is'til), n. [Mex.; also istle.] An exceedingly valuable fiber produced principally from Bromelia sylvestris, a kind of wild pineapple. It is called petate in Central America, and silk-grass in British Honduras. These names, with the exception of the last, are also applied to the fiber obtained from various species of Agave, particularly A. rigida, A. lili, etc., but the species are much confused. Bromelia sylvestris, which is extensively cultivated in Mexico, produces leaves 1 to 3 inches wide and 5 to 8 feet long, which yield a very strong fiber extensively used in the manufacture of bagging, carpets, hammocks, cordage, nets, belts, etc. See henequen.

istle-grass (is'til-gras), n. The plant, Bromelia sylvestris, which yields the fiber istle.

Istrian (is'tri-an), a. and n. [< Istria (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Istria, a crownland belonging to the Cisleithan division of Austria-Hungary, situated near the head of the Adriatic sea.

The Istrian shore has lost its beauty, though the Istrian hills, now and then capped by a hill-side town, and the higher mountains beyond them, tell us something of the character of the inland scenery.

H. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 88.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Istria. The Istrians are Slavs and Italians, the former being much the more numerous.

it (it), pron. [< ME. it, yt, hit, hyt, < A.S. hit (gen. his, dat. him), neut. of he, he: see he.] 1. A personal pronoun, of the third person and neuter gender, corresponding to the masculine he and the feminine she, and having the same plural forms, they, their, them. (a) A substitute for the name of an object (previously mentioned, or understood from the context or circumstances) not regarded as possessing sex, or without regard to the sex, or for an abstract noun, a phrase, or a clause: as, it (a stone) is very heavy; feed it (an infant) with a spoon; the moon was red when it rose; the horse stumbles when it (or he) is driven fast; how did it (an event) happen? It is often used vaguely for a thing, notion, or circumstance not definitely conceived, or left to the imagination; as, how far do you call it? plague take it! you'll catch it!

How is it with our general?

Shak., Cor., v. 5.

(b) As the nominative of an impersonal verb or verb used impersonally, when the thing for which it stands is expressed or implied by the verb itself: as, it rains (the rain rains or is falling); it is blowing (the wind is blowing). (c) As the grammatical subject of a clause of which the logical subject is a phrase or clause, generally following, and regarded as in apposition with it: as, it is said that he has won the prize; he is poor, it is true, but he is honest; it behooves you to bestir yourself; it is they that have done this mischief.

'Tis these that gave the great Apollo spoils.

Pope.

(d) After an intransitive verb, used transitively for the kind of action denoted or suggested by the verb: as, to foot it all the way to town.

Come, and trip it as you go,

On the light fantastic toe.

Milton, L'Allegro, l. 88.

Whether the charmer sinner it or saint it,

If folly grow romantic I must paint it.

Pope, Moral Essays, ll. 15.

(e) The possessive case, originally his (see he), now its; the form it without the possessive suffix having been used for a time in works written during the period of transition from the use of his to that of its.

That which growth of it [now its] own accord.

Lev. xxv. 5 (ed. 1611).

It knighthood shall do worse. It shall fright all it friends with borrowing letters.

B. Jonson.

2. In children's games, that player who is called upon to perform some particular task, as in I-spy or tag the one who must catch or touch the other players: as, he's it; who's it?

(In old usage the substantive verb after it often agrees with the succeeding nominative in the first or second person: as, "I am I, later" in Chaucer.)

It. A common abbreviation of Italian.

-it', -it². A dialectal (Scotch) form of -ed¹, -ed².

'Twas then we luv'd lik it her weel.

Motherwell, Jeanie Morrison.

itabirite (i-tab'i-rit), n. [< Itabira, a place in Minas Geraes, Brazil, + -ite.] A quartzose iron-slate or iron-mica slate; a rock made up chiefly of alternating layers of quartz and specular iron ore. The term is used by writers on the geology of Brazil.

itacism (i-ta-sizm), n. [= F. itacisme; < Gr. itra, as pron. it's (that is, as if spelled ira*), + -o-ism. Cf. otacism, totacism.] Same as totacism.

itacist (i-ta-sist), n. [= F. itaciste; as itac-ism + -ist.] One who practises or upholds itacism.

itacistic (i-ta-sis'tik), a. [As itac-ism + -istic.] Pertaining to or consisting in itacism; Reuchlinian: as, the itacistic pronunciation of o.

The Gothic diphthong represents the itacistic pronunciation current in Greece at the time of Ullian.

Amer. Jour. Philol., VI. 420.

itacolomite (it-a-kol'i-mit), n. [< Itacolmi, a mountain in Minas Geraes, Brazil, + -ite.] A fine-grained, quartzose, talcoseaceous slate, an important member of the gold-bearing formation of Brazil. In thin slabs it is sometimes more or less flexible.

itaka-wood (it'a-ku-wud), n. [< itaka, a Guiana name, + E. wood.] A beautiful cabinet-wood of British Guiana, furnished by a leguminous tree, Macharium Schomburgkii. It is richly streaked with black and brown, and is called tiger-wood on this account.

Ital. An abbreviation of Italian.

ital. An abbreviation of italico or italica.

Italian (i-tal'yan), a. and n. [= F. Italien = Sp. Pg. It. Italiano (cf. D. Italianisch = G. Italianisch = Dan. Sw. Italiensk), *< ML. Italiannus, < L. Italia, Italy, < Italus, an Italian, also a legendary eponymous king. The supposed deriv. < Gr. italos, a bull ("on account of the abundance and excellence of its [Italy's] horned cattle"), is mere conjecture.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Italy, a country and kingdom of Europe, which comprises the central one of the three southern European peninsulas, together with the adjoining region northward to the Alps, and the islands of Sicily, Sardinia, etc.; pertaining to the inhabitants of Italy. The kingdom of Italy has developed from the former kingdom of Sardinia, which, through the events of 1859-60, annexed Lombardy, Tuscany, Modena, Parma, the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, and part of the Papal States, acquired Venetia in 1866, and finally Rome in 1870. The title of King of Italy was assumed by Victor Emmanuel II. of Sardinia in 1861.

Mine Italian brain

'Gan in your duller Britain operate.

Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5, 190.

Tiber, now no longer Roman, rolls

Vain of Italian hearts, Italian souls.

Pope, Dunciad, iv. 300.

Italian architecture, the architectural styles developed in and characteristic of Italy; specifically, the architecture of the Italian Renaissance, which was developed through study of ancient Roman models by Brunelleschi and a few great contemporaries in the fifteenth century, and quickly disseminated its influence throughout Europe.

Italian Architecture.—Church of Sta. Maria della Salute, Venice; constructed 1562.

Among the rare merits of this architecture are its liberal application of the hemispherical dome, and the impressive proportions of many of its palace façades, which show a great projecting cornice crowning an imposing arrangement of architectural masses. Much of the carved ornament of the first decades of the style is delicate and refined; but it soon degenerated to the most offensive and pretentious vulgarity and coarseness. See Lombard architecture (under Lombard) and Italian Gothic (below). — Italian cloth, a kind of linen jean with satin face, employed chiefly for linings. — Italian ferret, a kind of silk braid or binding. — Italian Gothic, the pointed architecture (see Gothic, a. 3) of Italy during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The style is based upon the Romanesque as developed in Italy, which does not differ essentially from the Romanesque of France and other countries, though it made more liberal use of ranges of somewhat small columns (see col under colony), and tended to the elaboration of surface-effects of color, owing to the abundant presence of beautifully tinted building-marbles. The Italian Pointed forms were influenced by those of northern Europe, but these were profoundly modified by the Italian architects. The exteriors of their buildings, particularly the façades, are hardly more than beautiful screens, having little or no connection with the systems of construction employed in the buildings themselves. There are no flying buttresses, for the carefully studied northern system of vaulting was never adopted in Italy; the walls are in general comparatively flat, with few projections, the rich and delicate sculpture being placed generally immediately about the windows and doors, and the large wall-spaces being treated in colored marbles, incrustation, mosaic, or painting in fresco; tracery seldom occurs in the windows, except as plate-tracery, often pierced with subtle study of effect. Every district in Italy produced its own school of Pointed architecture, each admirable in its own way. (See Venetian architecture, under Venetian.) The Pointed architecture of Sicily is not properly Italian; it approaches more closely the northern style of the Norman French conquerors, but is affected by the Saracenic traditions which abounded on the island, and influenced by Byzantine models, particularly in its carvings and in its wealth of mosaics. — Italian iron, millet, etc. See the nouns. — Italian painting, the art of painting as developed and practiced in Italy; specifically, the group of schools which had their origin in ancient Roman tradition and in the imitation of Byzantine models in the early middle ages, received their first vital impulse from Giotto in the beginning of the fourteenth century, and culminated in the great masters of the Renaissance—Tintoret, Titian, Paul Veronese, and Raphael. Until the close of the fourteenth century the consistent object of this painting was to manifest to the unlettered the miraculous things chronicled in the Holy Writ and accomplished by the sanctification of religious faith. With the fifteenth century the modern spirit of naturalism appeared in art, and made its way until by the last half of that century the religious and didactic spirit had vanished, and pictures had come to be painted in the mere cult of outward beauty, and for the personal glory and profit of the painter. For some of the chief schools of Italian painting, see Bolognese, Roman, Sienese, Umbrian, Venetian. See also Florentine painting, under Renaissance. — Italian sixth, in music, a chord of the extreme sixth, containing the major third of the bass. See figure. — Italian string, a superior kind of catgut violin-string, made in Italy. — Italian warehouse, a shop where Italian groceries and fruits are sold. — Italian-warehouseman, a dealer in fine groceries, including macaroni, vermicelli, dried fruits, olive-oil, etc.

II. n. 1. A native of Italy, or one of the Italian race.—2. The language spoken by the inhabitants of Italy, whether the literary speech or one of the popular dialects.

His name's Gonnago; the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian. Shak., Hamlet, III. 2, 271.

Abbreviated It., Ital.

Italianate (i-tal'yan-ät), v. t. [Italian + -ate]. To render Italian or conformable to Italian principles or manners; Italianize.

If some yet do not well understand what is an English man Italianated, I will plainly tell him.

Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 78.

If any Englishman be infected with any misdemeanour, they say with one mouth he is Italianated.

Lyly, Euphues.

Italianate (i-tal'yan-ät), a. [Italian + -ate]. Italianized; having become like an Italian: applied especially to fantastic affectation of fashions borrowed from Italy. [Rare.]

All his words,

His looks, his oaths, are all ridiculous,

All apish, childish, and Italianate.

Dekker, Old Fortunatus.

An Englishman Italianate

Is a devil incarnate.

Quoted in S. Clark's Examples (1870).

With this French page and Italianate serving-man was our young landlord only waited on.

Middleton, Father Hubbard's Tales.

He found the old minister from Haddam East Village Italianate outwardly in almost ludicrous degree.

Hovells, Indian Summer, p. 178.

Italianisation, Italianise, etc. See Italianization, etc.

Italianism (i-tal'yan-izm), n. [Italian + -ism]. A word, phrase, idiom, or manner peculiar to the Italians; Italian spirit, principles, or taste.

It was, perhaps, an ungracious thing to be critical, among all the appealing old Italianisms round me.

H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 178.

Italianity (i-tal'yan-i-ti), n. [Italian + -ity]. Italianism. [Rare.]

The "Venetian," in spite of its peculiar Italianity, has naturally special points of contact with the other dialects of Upper Italy.

Encyc. Brit., XIII. 494.

Italianization (i-tal'yan-i-zä'shon), n. [Italianize + -ation]. The act or process of rendering or of being rendered Italian. Also spelled Italianisation.

The border dialects, being numerous and very diverse in character, present a very strong concentrated drift towards Italianization.

Amer. Jour. Philol., IV. 488.

Italianize (i-tal'yan-iz), v. i.; prot. and pp. Italianized, pp. Italianizing. [Italian + -ize]. I. intrans. To play the Italian; speak Italian.

II. trans. To render Italian; impart an Italian quality or character to.

Also spelled Italianise.

Italianizer (i-tal'yan-i-zér), n. One who promotes the influence of Italian principles, tastes, manners, etc. Also spelled Italianiser.

Italic (i-tal'ik), a. and n. [Formerly also Italtick; = F. Italtique = Sp. Itálico = Fg. It. Italicco, < L. Italicus, Italian, < Italia, Italy, Italus, an Italian: see Italian.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to ancient Italy or the tribes, including the Romans, which inhabited it, or to their languages.

The Latin was the only Italic dialect known to the Middle Ages which possessed an alphabetic system.

G. P. Marsh, Hist. Eng. Lang., p. 15.

2. Of or pertaining to modern Italy. [Rare.]

All things of this world are . . . as unpleasant as the loss of vinegar to a tongue filled with the spirit of high Italic wines.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1888), I. 65.

Specifically—(a) In arch., same as Compensite, s. (b) [i. e. or cap.] Of Italian origin: designating a style of printing, types the lines of which slope toward the right (thus, italic), used for emphasis and other distinctive purposes. The italic character was first made and shown in type by Aldus Manutius, a notable printer of Venice, in an edition of Virgil, 1501, and by him dedicated to Italy. The first italic had upright capitals, but later French type-founders inclined them to the same angle as the small letters. In manuscript italic is indicated by underscoring the words with a single line.—Italic school of philosophy. Same as Pythagorean school of philosophy (which see, under Pythagoreans).—Italic version of the Bible, or Itala, a translation of the Bible into Latin, based upon a still older version, called the Old Latin, and made probably in the time of Augustine (A. D. 354–430). The corruption of the text of this and the other Latin versions led to the revision called the Vulgate, the work of Jerome. See Vulgate.

II. n. [i. e.] In printing, an italic letter or type: usually in the plural: as, this is to be printed in italics. Abbreviated ital.

The Italics are yours, but I adopt them with concurrent emphasis.

N. A. Rev., CXLIII. 22.

Italian (i-tal'ik-an), a. [Italic + -an]. Of or pertaining to ancient Italy. [Rare.]

It [the Etruscan language] has even quite recently been pronounced Aryan or Indo-European, of the Italic branch, by scholars of high rank.

Whitney, Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 780.

italicisation, italicise. See italicization, italicize.

Italicism (i-tal'ik-i-zizm), n. [Italic + -ism]. An Italianism.

italicization (i-tal'ik-i-zä'shon), n. [italicize + -ation]. The act of underscoring words in writing, or of printing words underscored in italic type; italicizing. Also spelled italicisation.

The italicisation is mine.

The Academy, March 17, 1888, p. 184.

italicize (i-tal'ik-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. italicized, pp. italicizing. [Italic + -ize]. To print in italic type, or underscore with a single line in writing: as, to italicize emphatic words or sentences; in old books all names were commonly italicized. Also spelled italicise.

italicizing (i-tal'ik-i-zing), n. [Verbal n. of italicize, v.] Same as italicization, and more common.

Italiote, Italiote (i-tal'ik-i-ot, -öt), n. and a. [Gr. Ἰταλιώτης, < Italia, Italy: see Italian.] I. n. In anc. hist., an Italian Greek; a person of Greek birth or descent living in Italy; an inhabitant of Magna Græcia.

II. a. In anc. hist., of or belonging to the Greek settlements in southern Italy.

He sought to reconcile Ionian monism with Italiote dualism.

Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 315.

Our author evidently feels that this parallel progress of the Italiote Greeks tells against his argument.

J. Hadley, Essays, p. 18.

Italiote, n. [Italiote + -ite. Cf. Italic.] Italian; in the Italian manner.

All this is true, though the feat handling thereof be altogether Italiote.

Sp. Bale, Select Works, p. 9.

Italo-Byzantine (it'ä-lö-biz'än-tin), a. In art., noting the Byzantine styles as developed and practised in Italy; combining Byzantine and Italian characteristics.

Numerous fragments of ornaments and animals in the same Italo-Byzantine style are set into the wall of the atrium of the church of Santa Maria della Valle.

C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, Int., p. xii.

its-palm (it's-päm), n. [ita, a S. Amer. name, + E. palm]. A tall palm, Mauritia flexuosa, common along the Amazon, Rio Negro, and Orinoco rivers, where it sometimes presents the appearance of forests rising out of the water. The outer part of the leaves is made into a stout cord; the fermented sap yields a palm-wine; and the inner part of the stem furnishes a starchy substance similar to sago.

itch (ich), v. i. [MF. itchen, iken, ykyn, earlier giken, giken (cf. E. dial. yuck, yuk), < AS. giccan = D. jouken = MLG. joken, jucken, LG. jocken = OHG. juochen, juochen, juchen, jucken, MHG. G. jucken, itch.] 1. To feel a peculiar irritation or tingling of the skin, producing an inclination to scratch the part so affected.

Oure body wole teche, oure bonds wole ake,

Oure owne fleisch wole hen cure fo.

Hymns to Virgins, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 80.

Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping? Shak., Othello, IV. 3, 58.

Hence—2. To experience a provoking, teasing, or tingling desire to do or to get something.

Princes commend a private life; private men itch after honour.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., To the Reader, p. 25.

Plain truths enough for needful use they found: But men would still be itching to expound.

Dryden, Religio Laici, l. 410.

An itching palm, a grasping disposition; a longing for acquisition; greed of gain.

Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself

Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm,

To sell and mart your offices for gold.

Shak., J. C., IV. 3, 10.

itch (ich), n. [itch, v.] 1. A tingling sensation of irritation in the skin, produced by disease (see def. 2) or in any other way.—2. An inflammation of the human skin, caused by the presence of a minute mite, Sarcoptes scabiei (see itch-mite), presenting papules, vesicles, and pustules, and accompanied with great itching; scabies.

The itch, the Murrein, and Alcides-grief,

In Ver's hot-mourature doe molest vs chief.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Furies.

Itches, blains,

Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop

Be general leprosy! Shak., T., of A., IV. 1, 28.

Hence—3. An uneasy longing or propensity; a teasing or tingling desire: as, an itch for praise; an itch for scribbling.

This itch of book-making . . . seems no less the prevailing disorder of England than of France.

Goldsmith, Criticisms.

There is a spice of the scoundrel in most of our literary men; an itch to slich and detract in the midst of fair speaking and festivity.

Landor.

Bakers', bricklayers', grocers', etc., itch. See the qualifying words.—Dobie's or washerman's itch. See Itches.

itchful (ich'fūl), a. [itch + -ful]. Itchy. Palgrave.

itchiness (ich'i-nes), n. The quality or state of being itchy; sensation of itching; tendency to itch.

This itchiness is especially marked if the lid and cheeks become excoriated and inflamed.

J. S. Wells, Dis. of Eye, p. 678.

itching (ich'ing), n. [Verbal n. of itch, v.] 1. The sensation caused by a peculiar irritation with pricking, tingling, or tickling in the skin.

It [eczema] is chiefly obnoxious through its itching, which is sometimes so great as to produce violent excitement of the nervous system.

Quain, Med. Diet.

Hence—2. A morbid, irritating, or tantalizing desire to have or to do something.

The itching of Scribblers was the scab of the Time.

Howell, Letters, II. 48.

All fools have still an itching to deride, And fain would be upon the laughing side.

Pope, Essay on Criticism, l. 82.

itching-berry (ich'ing-ber'i), n. The fruit of the dogrose, Rosa canina: so called because the hairy seeds produce irritation of the skin.

itch-insect (ich'in'sekt), n. An itch-mite.

itchless (ich'les), a. [itch + -less]. Free from itch; not itching.

One rubs his itchless elbow, shrugs and laughs.

Quarles, Emblems, I. 2.

itch-mite (ich'mit), n. A mite which burrows in the skin, and causes the disease called the itch or scabies. There are several species, having similar traits, and all belonging to the order Acarida, or Acarina, of the class Arachnida. The genuine itch-mite is Sarcoptes scabiei. The female is about 1/4 of an inch long, the male much smaller; the body is oval or rounded, without eyes, and with 4 pairs of short 2-jointed legs, the anterior 2 pairs ending in a sucking disk, the posterior 2 pairs ending in 2 pairs ending in a long filament. Its favorite haunts are between the fingers, the flexor side of the wrists and elbows, and the region of the groin. It can be transferred from person to person.

Under Side of Itch-mite (Sarcoptes scabiei), highly magnified.

itchweed (ich'wēd), n. The American false hellebore, Veratrum viride.

itchy (ich'i), a. [itch + -y]. 1. Characterized by or having an itching sensation.

Taken the coming gold

Of innocent and base ambition

That hourly rubs his dry and itchy palms.

J. Johnson, Cynthia's Revels, III. 2.

Excess, the scrofulous and itchy plague,

That seizes first the opulent.

Cooper, Tank, IV. 582.

2. Having the itch: as, an itchy beggar.

-ite¹. [= F. -it, m., -ite, f., = Sp. Pg. It. -ito, m., -ita, f., < L. -itus, -itis, m., -ita, -ita, f., -itum, -itum, n., term. of the pp. of verbs in -ere, -ere, or -ire, being the pp. suffix -tus (= E. -t, -ed), with a preceding original or supplied vowel: see -ate, -ed.] A termination of some English adjectives and nouns from adjectives, and of some verbs, derived from the Latin, as in apposite, composite, opposite, exquisite, requisite, crudite, recondite, etc. Its use in verbs, as in expedite, extradite, impute, unite, and in nouns not directly from adjectives, as in granite, is less common. When the vowel is short, the termination is often merely -it, as in deposit, reposit, posit, merit, inhabit, prohibit, etc. It is not used or felt as an English formative. In a few words, as appetite, audit, from Latin nouns of the fourth declension, no adjective form intervenes.

-ite². [F. -ite = Sp. Pg. It. -ita, < L. -ita, -ites, < Gr. -ίτης, fem. -ίτις, an adj. suffix, 'of the nature of,' 'like,' used esp. in patril and mineral names.] A suffix of Greek origin, indicating origin or derivation from, or immediate relation with, the person or thing signified by the noun to which it is attached. Specifically—(a) Noting a native or resident of a place: as, Sagittaria, a native of Stagnum; Spharica, a native of Sybaris, etc. (6) Noting a descendant of a person or member of a family or tribe, as Camille, Jeanette, Martha, Elizabeth, etc. (7) Noting a disciple, adherent, or follower of a person, a doctrine, a class, an order, etc., as Reverend, Communist, Compassionate, Alcoholic, etc., or (with -s) Jesus. (8) In mineral, noting rocks, minerals, or any natural chemical compound or mechanical aggregation of substances, as anemone, calcite, delonite, guarante, etc. It has no connection with item (which see). (9) In chem., denoting a salt of an acid the name of which ends in the suffix -ous, and which contains a relatively smaller proportion of oxygen, as distinguished from -ic, denoting a salt of an acid the name of which ends in the suffix -ic, and which contains a relatively larger proportion of oxygen: thus, a sulphite is a salt of sulphurous acid, and a sulphate one formed from sulphuric acid. (10) In anat. and med., noting that which is part and parcel or a necessary component of any part or organ: as, sternite, a piece or segment of the sternum; pleurite, terpene, podite, a part of the side, back, leg. (11) In paleont. and paleobot., noting fossilization or petrification: as, ichnite, trilobite. Compare def. (4).

Ites (it'e-s), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < Ita, a willow, = AS. withig, a willow, E. withc, withy, a twig: see withc, withy.] A small genus of plants of the natural order Saxifragaceae, tribe Escaloniaceae. The petals are linear, the ovary is half-superior and 2-celled, the styles are 2-parted, and the capsule is Ites virginica.

1, branch with flowers; 2, branch with fruit. a, flower; b, fruit; c, flower with petals removed, showing stamens and pistil.

2-boaked. They are trees or shrubs, with alternate oblong or lanceolate leaves, and usually simple terminal or axillary racemes of small but rather handsome white flowers. Five species are known, of which one, I. virginica, called the Virginia willow, is common in the eastern United States from New Jersey southward. The others are natives of Japan, China, Java, and the Himalayas.

item (i'tem), adv. [ME. item (= F. Sp. It. item), used as L., < L. item, just so, likewise, also, < is, he, that, + -tem, a demonstrative suffix.] Also: a word used in introducing the separate articles of an enumeration, as the separate clauses or details of a will or the particular parts of an account or list of things. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Item, between the Mount Syon and the Temple of Solomon is the place where our Lord reposed the Maiden in hire Fadres Howa. Mandeville, Travels, p. 92.

Speed [reads]. Imprimis, "She can milk." . . .
Item, "she brows good ale." . . .
Item, "she can sew."

Shak., T. G. of V., III. 1, 304.

Item, from Mr. Acres, for carrying divers letters—which I never delivered—two guineas, and a pair of buckles.—Item, from Sir Lucius O'Trigger, three crowns, two gold pocket-pieces, and a silver snuff-box.

Sheridan, The Rivals, I. 2.

item (i'tem), n. [= F. pg. item, n., < L. item, also, as used before the separate articles of an enumeration: see item, adv.] 1. An article; a separate particular; a single detail of any kind: as, the account consists of many items.

I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tailed by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Shak., Cymbeline, I. 5, 7.

All these items added together form a vast sum of discontent.

Maryat, Smaragdyow, I. xviii.

2. An intimation; a reminder; a hint. [Obsolete or local.]

How comes he then like a thief in the night, when he gives an item of his coming?

Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, I. 46.

My uncle took notice that Sir Charles had said he guessed at the writer of the note. He wished he would give him an item, as he called it, whom he thought of.

Richardson, Sir Charles Grandison, VI. 292.

This word is used among Southern gamblers to imply information of what cards may be in a partner's or an opponent's hands; this is called "giving item."

Derivats, Americanisms.

3. A trick; fancy; caprice. [Prov. Eng.]—
4. A paragraph in a newspaper; a scrap of news. [Colloq.]

On is them man and reporter for the "Clarion."
Kimball, Was He Successful? p. 120.

City item. See city, a.
item (i'tem), v. t. [< item, n.] To make a note or memorandum of.

You see I can item it. Steele, Tender Husband, v. 1.

I have item'd it in my memory.

Addison, The Drummer, III. 1.

itemize (i'tem-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. itemized, ppr. itemizing. [< item + -ize.] To state by items; give the items or particulars of: as, to itemize an account.

Eschylus paints these conclusions with a big brush.
... Shelley itemizes them.

S. Lander, The English Novel, p. 68.

The excellent character of these bonds will appear from an inspection of the itemized schedule.

Amer. Hebrew, XXXVIII. 52.

itemizer (i'tem-iz-er), n. One who collects and furnishes items for a newspaper. [U. S.]

An itemizer of the "Adams Transcript."
Congregationalist, Sept. 21, 1860.

iter (i'ter), n. [< L. iter (itiner, rarely iter), OL. itiner, a going, a journey, a way, road, passage, < ire (supine itum) = Gr. itai = Skt. √ i, go: see go. Hence ult. eyre, q. v., and itinerant, etc.] 1. An appointed journey or route; circuit; specifically, in old Eng. law, the judge's circuit. More commonly in the Old French form eyre.

The Lord Chamberlain, by his iter, or circuit of visitation, maintained a common standard of right and duties in all burghs. Encyc. Brit., IV. 64.

Upon the occasion of an iter, or eyre, in Kent, . . . fifty marks were granted to the king by assent of the whole county.

L. C. Pils, Pref. to reprint of Year-Books 11 and 12, [Edward III.]

2. [NL.] In anat., a passageway in the body; specifically, without qualifying terms, the aqueduct of Sylvius, or iter a tertio ad quartum ventriculum.—Iter ad infundibulum, the passage from the third ventricle of the brain downward into the infundibulum.—Iter chordee anterior, the aperture of exit of the chordea tympanal nerve from the cavity of the tympanum into the canal of Huguer.—Iter chordee posterior, the aperture of entrance of the chordea tympanal nerve into the cavity of the tympanum.

iter, v. t. [< OF. iterer, < L. iterare, repeat: see iterate.] To renew. Hallivell.

iterable (i'ter-a-bl), a. [< L. iterabilis, that may be repeated, < L. iterare, repeat: see iterate.] Capable of being iterated or repeated. Sir T. Browne, Miscellanies, p. 178.

iteral (i'ter-al), a. [< iter + -al.] Pertaining to the iter of the brain.

iterance (i'ter-ans), n. [< iteran (t) + -ce.] Iteration. [Rare.]

What needs this iterance, woman?
Shak., (thello, v. 2, 150.

Say thou dost love me, love me, love me; toll
The silver iterance.

Mrs. Browning, Sonnets from the Portuguese, xxi.

iterancy (i'ter-an-si), n. Same as iterance.

iterant (i'ter-ant), a. [< L. iterant (t)-e, ppr. of iterare, repeat: see iterate.] Repeating.

Waters, being near, make a current echo; but, being farther off, they make an iterant echo. Bacon, Nat. Hist.

iterate (i'ter-at), v. t.; pret. and pp. iterated, ppr. iterating. [< L. iteratus, pp. of iterare (> it. iterare = Sp. Pg. Fr. iterar = F. itérer, OF. iterer, > E. iter, q. v.), do a second time, repeat, < itorum, again, a neut. compar. form, < is, he, that: see he.] To utter or do again; repeat: as, to iterate an advice or a demand.

This full song, iterated in the closes by two Echoes.

B. Jonson, Masque of Beauty.

Having wiped and cleansed away the soot, I iterated the experiment.

Boyle, Works, IV. 652.

iterate (i'ter-at), a. [< L. iteratus, pp. of iterare, repeat.] Repeated.

Wherefore we proclaim the said Frederick count Palatine, &c., guilty of high treason and iterate prescription, and of all the penalties which by law and custom are depending thereon.

Wilson, James I.

iterately (i'ter-at-li), adv. By repetition or iteration; repeatedly.

The cometary cells of ancient Christians and martyrs were filled with draughts of Scripture stories; . . . iterately affecting the portraits of Enoch, Lazarus, Jonas, and the vision of Ezekiel, as hopeful draughts, and hinting imagery of the resurrection. Sir T. Browne, Urn-burial, III.

iteration (i'ter-a'shon), n. [= F. itération = Fr. itératio = Sp. iteración = It. iterazione, < L. iteratio (n-), a repetition, < iterare, repeat: see iterate.] 1. A saying or doing again, or over and over again; repetition; repeated utterance or occurrence.

Your figure that worketh by iteration or repetition of one word or clause doth much alter and affect the ears and also the minds of the hearer.

Patterson, Art of Eng. Poets, p. 155.

O, thou hast damnable iteration; and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint.

Shak., I Hen. IV., I. 2, 101.

Like echoes from beyond a hollow, came Her skilful iteration. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

The pestilent iteration of crackers and pistols at one's elbow is maddening.

D. G. Mitchell, Round Together (Old Fourth).

2. In math., the repetition of an operation upon the product of that operation.—Analytical iteration, the iteration of the operation which produces an analytical function.

iterative (i'ter-a-tiv), a. [= F. itératif = Sp. Pg. It. iterativo, < L. iterativus, serving to repeat (said of iterative verbs), < L. iterare, pp. iteratus, repeat: see iterate.] 1. Repeating; repetitious.

Spenser . . . found the ottava rima too monotonously iterative.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 178.

2. In gram., frequentative, as some verbs.—Iterative function, in math., a function which is the result of successive operations with the same operator.

Ithacan (ith'a-kan), a. and n. [< L. Ithacus, Ithacan, < Ithaca, < Gr. Itakē, Ithaca.] 1. a. Of or belonging to Ithaca, one of the Ionian Islands, noted in Greek mythology as the home of Odysseus or Ulysses.

II. n. An inhabitant of Ithaca.

Ithacensian (ith-a-sen'si-an), a. [< L. Ithacensis, Ithacan, < Ithaca, Ithaca: see Ithacan.] Ithacan.

All the ladies, each at each,

Like the Ithacensian sultors in old time,

Stared with great eyes. Tennyson, Princess, iv.

Ithaginis (i-thaj'i-nis), n. [NL. (Wagler, 1832; also written Ithaginis, Reichenbach, 1849; and correctly Ithagene, Agassiz), < Gr. Itayene, Epic Itayene, of legitimate birth, genuine, < itis, straight, true, + yene, birth, race.] A notable genus of alpine Asiatic gallinaceous birds, the blood-pheasants, placed with the francolins in the family Tetraonidae, and also in the Phasianidae with the true pheasants. The tarsus of the male has several spurs, sometimes as many as five. The best-known species, I. cruentus or cruentus, or cruentus, inhabits the Himalayas at an altitude of from 10,000 to 14,000 feet, and goes in flocks. It keeps near forests and in winter burrows in the snow. Other species are I. goudouli and I. sinensis. The genus was established by Wagler in 1832.

Blood-pheasant (Ithaginis cruentus).

ithand (i'thand), a. [Also ythand, ythen, eydent, < Icel. ithinn, assiduous, steady, diligent, < idh, t., a doing, idh, n., a restless motion: see eddy.] Busy; diligent; plodding; constant; continual. [Scotch.]

ithet, n. [ME., also ythe, uthe; < AS. yth, a wave, pl. itha, the waves, the sea, = OS. itha, itha = OHG. undea, unda, MHG. unde, unde, wave, water, = Icel. unnr, udhr, a wave, pl. unnir, the waves, the sea, = L. unda, a wave (> ult. E. undulate, unda, abundant, redound, surround, abundant, inundate, etc.), ult. akin to Gr. idop, water, and to E. water: see water.] A wave; in the plural, the waves; the sea.

On dayes and darke nightes dryuyn on the ythas,
At Salame full sound that set into haryn.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 1287.

ither (i'ther), a. and pron. A dialectal (Scotch) form of other.

Nae ither care in life ha'e I,

But live, an' love my Nannie, O.

Burns, Behind yon Hills.

Farewell, "my rhyme composing brother!"

We've been owre lang unken'd to ither.

Burns, To William Simpson.

Ithuriel's-spear (i-thū'ri-el-spear), n. [So called in allusion to the spear of Ithuriel (Milton, P. L., iv. 810), which caused everything it touched to assume its true form.] The Calformian filaceous plant Brodiaea (Tristeletia) laea.

ithyphallus, n. Plural of ithyphallus, 1. ithyphallus (ith-i-fal'ik), n. [L. ithyphallus, < Gr. ἰσφαλλός, < ἰσφαλλός, a phallus, < ἰσφα, straight, erect, + φαλλός, phallus; see phallus.] 1. Pertaining to or characterized by an ithyphallus, or the ceremonies associated with its use as a religious symbol, etc.

It is probable that the ithyphallic ceremonies, which the gross flattery of the degenerate Greeks sometimes employed to honor the Macedonian princes, had the same meaning. Knight, Anc. Arts and Myths, (1876), p. 94.

Hence—2. Grossly indecent; obscene.

An ithyphallic audacity that insults what is most sacred and decent among men. Christian Examiner.

3. In anc. pros., sung in phallic processions; specifically, noting a group of three trochees or a period containing such a group.

ithyphallus (ith-i-fal'us), n. [L. < Gr. ἰσφαλλός, < ἰσφα, straight, erect, + φαλλός, phallus.] 1. Pl. ithyphalli (-i). In archeol., etc., an erect phallus.—2. [cap.] [N.L.] In entom., a genus of weevils or curculionids: same as Stenotarsus of Schönherr, which name is preoccupied in the same order. Harold, 1875.

ithal. [L. ithus, -ialis, + -al.] A compound adjective termination occurring in a few words, as cardinalialis.

Itieria (it-i-er'i-a), n. [N.L. (Baporta, 1873), so called after the original collector, M. Itier.] A genus of fossil algae, of the family Laminariaceae, having cartilaginous, compressed, many times dichotomously branching fronds, provided with turbinate, subglobose, probably bladder-like, terminal or axillary expansions, which appear to have served as air-bladders, as in the bladder-wrack. Two species are known from the Upper Jurassic of Oragnoux (Ain) and Saint Michel (Meuse) in France.

itinerary (i-tin'g-rā-si), n. [Itinera (to) + -cy. Cf. itinerancy.] The practice or habit of traveling from place to place; the state of being itinerant.

The cumulative values of long residence are the restraints on the itinerary of the present day. Itinerary, History.

itinerary (i-tin'g-rā-si), n. [Itinera (to) + -cy.] 1. The act of traveling from place to place; especially, a going about from place to place in the discharge of duty or the prosecution of business: as, the itinerary of circuit judges or of commercial travelers.—2. Especially, in the Meth. Ch., the system of rotation governing the ministry of that church. In parts of the western United States and in England several communities are grouped into "circuits," and each "circuit" is ministered to by itinerant preachers or "circuit-riders."

Methodism, with its "lay ministry" and its itinerancy, could alone afford the ministrations of religion to this ever flowing population. Stevens, Hist. Methodism.

itinerant (i-tin'g-rānt), a. and n. [L.L. itinerans (-is), pp. of itinerari, travel, journey; see itinerate.] 1. a. Traveling from place to place; wandering; not settled; strolling; specifically, going from place to place, especially on a circuit, in the discharge of duty: as, an itinerant preacher; an itinerant judge.

In the Winter and Spring time he usually rode the Circuit as a Judge itinerant through all his Provinces, to see justice well administered. Milton, Hist. Eng., v.

I believe upon a good deal of evidence that these ancient kings were itinerant, travelling or ambulatory personages. Maine, Early Law and Custom, p. 179.

Itinerant bishop. See bishop.

II. n. One who travels from place to place; a traveler; a wanderer; specifically, one who travels from place to place, especially on a circuit, in the discharge of duty or the pursuit of business, as an itinerant judge or preacher, or a strolling actor.

Glad to turn itinerant, To stroll and teach from town to town. S. Butler, Hudibras, III. II. 92.

Vast sums of money were lavishly bestowed upon these secular itinerants, which induced the monks and other ecclesiastics to turn actors themselves.

Strut, Sports and Pastimes, p. 233.

Inns for the refreshment and security of the itinerants were scattered along the whole line of the route from France. Prescott, Ford and Isa., I. 6.

itinerantly (i-tin'g-rānt-li), adv. In an itinerant, unsettled, or wandering manner.

itinerarium (i-tin'g-rā-ri-um), n.; pl. itineraria (-a). [L.L. (in def. 2, M.L.); see itinerary.] 1. Same as itinerary, 2.—2. A portable altar.

itinerary (i-tin'g-rā-ri), a. and n. [= F. itinéraire = Sp. Pg. It. itinerario, < L.L. itinerarius, pertaining to a journey, neut. itinerarium, an account of a journey, a road-book, < iter (itiner), a way, journey; see itinerate.] I. a. 1. Traveling; passing from place to place, especially on a circuit: as, an itinerary judge.

He did make a progress from Lincoln to the northern parts, though it was rather an itinerary circuit of justice than a progress. Becon, Hist. Hen. VII.

The law of England, by its circuit or itinerary courts, contains a provision for the distribution of private justice, in a great measure relieved from both these objections. Paley, Moral Philos., IV. 3.

2. Of or pertaining to a journey; specifically, pertaining to an official journey or circuit, as of a judge or preacher: as, itinerary observations.—3. Pertaining to descriptions of roads, or to a road-book: as, an itinerary unit.—Itinerary column. See column, 1.

II. n.; pl. itineraria (-ria). 1. A plan of travel; a list of places to be included in a journey, with means of transit and any other desired details: as, to make out an itinerary of a proposed tour.—2. An account of a line of travel, or of the routes of a country or region, of the places and points of interest, etc.; a work containing a description of routes and places, in successive order: as, an itinerary from Paris to Rome, or of France or Italy; Antonine's "Itinerary of the Roman Empire." Also itinerarium.

Now Habasala, according to the Itineraries of the observing Travelers in those Parts, is thought to be, in respective Magnitude, as big as Germany, Spain, France, and Italy conjointly. Howell, Letters, II. 9.

The Rudge Cup, found in Wiltshire and preserved at Alnwick Castle . . . contains, engraved in bronze, an itinerary along some Roman stations in the north of England. Encyc. Brit., XIII. 130.

3. An itinerant journey; a regular course of travel; a tour of observation or exploration.

It [Mr. Poncet's journey] was the first intelligible itinerary made through these deserts. Bruce, Source of the Nile, II. 474.

4. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., a form of prayer for the use of the clergy when setting out on a journey: generally placed at the end of the breviary. It consists of the canticle Benedictus, with an antiphon, preces, and two collects.—5. One who journeys from place to place. [Rare.]

A few months later Bradford was appointed one of the six chaplains of Edward VI., chosen "to be itineraries, to preach sound doctrine in all the remotest parts of the kingdom." Biog. Notice in Bradford's Works (Parker [1800, 1855]), II. xxv.

itinerate (i-tin'g-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. itinerated, pp. itinerating. [L.L. itineratus, pp. of itinerari, go on a journey, travel, journey, < L. iter, rarely itiner (stem itiner-, rarely itier-), a going away, journey, march, road; see iter.] To travel from place to place, as in the prosecution of business, or for the purpose of holding court or of preaching; journey in a regular course.

The Bedford meeting had at this time its regular minister, whose name was John Burton; so that what Bunyan received was a roving commission to itinerate in the villages round about. Snoddy, Bunyan, p. 28.

There is reason to believe that the English Kings itinerated in the same way and mainly for the same purpose. Maine, Early Law and Custom, p. 181.

itineration (i-tin'g-rā-shon), n. [ML. itineratio (-n), < itinerari, journey; see itinerate.] A journey from place to place; a tour of action or observation. [Rare.]

A great change has come over this part since last year, owing, I suspect, to the itinerations which Dr. Caldwell has undertaken. S. Huntington, Madras (1876).

-ition. [L. -itio (-n), in nouns from a pp. in -itus: see -itio and -ion, and -ion.] A compound noun termination, as in expedition, extradition, etc., being -ion with a preceding original or formative vowel, or in other words, -itio + -ion. See -itio, -ion, -tion.

-itious. [-itio (-on) + -ous, equiv. to -itio + -ous; see words with this termination.] A compound adjective termination occurring in adjectives associated with nouns in -ition, as expeditious, etc. See -ition, -ious.

-itis. [N.L., etc., -itis, < L. -itis, < Gr. -ίτις, fem., associated with -ίτις, masc., term. of adjectives (which are often used as nouns), 'of the nature of,' 'like,' etc.; see -itis.] A termination used in modern pathological nomenclature to signify 'inflammation' of the part indicated, as in bronchitis, otitis, conjunctivitis, stomatitis, enteritis, etc.

-itive. [L. -ivus, in adjectives from a pp. in -itus: see -itio and -ive.] A compound adjective termination of Latin origin, as in definitive, infective, fugitive. See -itio and -ive.

its (its). The possessive case of the neuter pronoun it. See it, 1 (s), and he, 1, C (b).

itself (it-self'), pron. [Early mod. E. also itselfe; < ME. it self, it selve, being it with the agreeing adj. self: see it and self, and himself.] The neuter pronoun corresponding to himself, herself. (See himself.) Its emphatic and reflexive uses are like those of himself.

The course of heaven, and fate itself, in this, Will Caesar cross. B. Jonson, Foetaster, v. 1.

You are gentle; he is gentleness itself. Becon and Pl., Knight of Malta, II. 5.

Here doth the river divide itself into 3 or 4 convenient branches. Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 118.

Mahometism hath dispersed itself over almost one half of the huge Continent of Asia. Howell, Letters, II. 10.

By itself, alone; apart; separately from anything else.

Landes argillous, and not clay by itself, Ye commodious. Palladius, Husbondrie (R. E. T. S.), p. 42.

This letter being too long for the present paper, I intend to print it by itself very suddenly. Steele, Tatler, No. 164.

In and by itself, in or of itself, separately considered; in its own nature; independently of other things.

Our Mother tongue, which truelle of itself is both full enough for prose, and stately enough for verse, hath long time been counted most bare and barren of both. Spenser, To Mayster Gabriel Harvey.

To be on land after three months at sea is of itself a great change. Macaulay, Life and Letters, I. 322.

A false theory . . . that what a thing is, it is in itself, apart from all relation to other things or the mind. H. Coud, Hegel, p. 10.

In and for itself. See in.

ittria, n. See yttria.

itrium, n. See yttrium.

iturite-fiber (it'ū-rit-fī'ber), n. [itur, native name, + -ite + -fiber.] The tough bark of the Maranta obliqua, a plant of British Guiana. It is used by the Indians for making baskets.

-ity. [F. -ité, OF. -ete, -etiv, etc., = Sp. -idad = Pg. -idade = It. -ità, also -itate, -itade, < L. -ita (-is), acc. -itatem, being the common abstract formative -ita (-is) (> E. -ity) with a preceding orig. or supplied vowel: see -ity.] A common termination of nouns of Latin origin or formed after Latin analogy, from adjectives, properly from adjectives of Latin origin or type, as in activity, civility, suavity, etc., but also in some words from adjectives not of Latin origin or type, as in jollity. The suffix is properly -ity, the preceding vowel belonging originally to the adjective. See -ity.

itazboot, itazbut, itazbut, n. See bu.

itulan (it'ū-lan), a. [L. itulus, down, a catkin (< Gr. ἰούλος, down, the down on plants, also, like obolus, a corn-sheaf; cf. obolus, woolly), + -an.] Downy; soft like down.

We two were in acquaintance long ago, Before our chins were worth itulan down. Middleton, Changeling, I. 1.

Iva (i'vā), n. [N.L.: see ivy.] 1. A specific name of the ground-pine Ajuga Iva or A. Chamaphys.—2. [So named by Linnaeus as resembling the ground-pine Ajuga Iva in smell.] A small genus of composite plants, of the tribe Heliophylloideae, type of the old tribe Iveae. They are herbs or shrubs with entire dentate or dissected leaves, at least the lower ones opposite, and small spicately, racemously, or paniculately disposed or scattered and commonly nodding heads, which incline to be polygamo-dioecious through abortion of the ovaries. Seven or eight species are known, from North and South America and the West Indies. The maritime species, particularly I. frutescens, are called marsh-elder or high-water shrub.

ivaarite (iv-ā-ā-rit), n. [Ivaara (see def.) + -ite.] A mineral from Ivaara in Finland, resembling and perhaps identical with schorlomite.

ive¹, n. An obsolete form of ivy.

ive², n. See ivy.

-ive. [ME. -ive, -if = OF. -if, m., -ive, f. = Sp. Pg. It. -ivo, m., -iva, f., < L. -ivus, m., -iva, f., -ivum, neut., a common term. of adjectives formed from verbs, either from the inf. stem, as in gradivus, or from the perfect-participle stem, as in activus, active, passivus, passive, relativus, relative, etc., the sense being nearly equiv. to that of a present participle, as in the examples cited, or instrumental, 'serving to do' so and so, as in nominalivus, serving to name, etc.] A termination of Latin origin, forming adjectives from verbs, meaning 'doing' so and so, or 'serving to do' so and so, or otherwise noting an adjective status, as in active, acting, passive, suffering, demonstrative, serving to show, formative, serving to form, purgative, serving to purge, adoptive, collective, festive, furtive, native, infinite, relative, etc. Many such adjectives are also used as nouns, as in some of the examples cited. The termination is commonly attached in Latin to the past-participle stem in -it, -et, -e, and hence appears in English most frequently in such connections, -ives, -ives (these being also usable as English derivatives), -ives, rarely -ives. The associated noun is in -iveness (adverbness, etc.) or -ively (adverbially, etc.).

Ivies (i'vê-s), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1836), < Iva + -es.] A former tribe of composite plants, typified by the genus Iva, which is now referred to the tribe Helianthoidae. Also Ivaceae.

Ivelt, a. and n. A Middle English form of evil.
Ivant, n. [Also ivén; < ME. iven, yven, < AS. ifegn (= MD. even, even), a var. of ifig, ivy: see ivy. Cf. hollen and holly.] Ivy.

Ivert, n. A Middle English form of ivory.
Ivied (i'vid), a. [Also ivied; < ivy + -ed.] Covered with ivy; overgrown with ivy.

Upon an ivied stone
Reclined his languid head. Shelley, Alastor.

Ivint, n. See ivén.
Ivioried (i'vô-ri-d), a. [ivory + -ed.] 1. Colored and finished to resemble ivory: said of cardboard, wood, and other materials.—2. Furnished with teeth. [Rare.]

My teeth demand a constant dentist,
While he is ivioried like an elephant. Lowell.

Ivorist (i'vô-ris-t), n. [ivory + -ist.] A worker in ivory.

The names of famous Japanese ivorists of the eighteenth and the early part of the nineteenth century are household words among native connoisseurs and collectors. Harper's Mag., LXXVI, 710.

Ivorous. See vorous.

Ivory (i'vô-ri), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also ivorie; < ME. ivory, ivorie, ivory, ivorie, ivorie, also ivore, ivore, ivore, ivore, ivore, ivore, ivore, < OF. ivorie, ivorie, later ivorie, F. ivoire = Pr. ivori, ivori, ivori = It. avorin, avoro, < ML. eboreum, ivory, prop. neut. of L. eboreus, of ivory, < ebur, ivory: see eburnine.] I. n.; pl. ivories (-riz). 1. The hard substance, not unlike bone, of which the teeth of most mammals chiefly consist; specifically, a kind of dentine valuable for industrial purposes, as that derived from the tusks of the elephant, hippopotamus, walrus, narwhal, and some other animals. Ivory is simply dentine or tooth-substance of exceptional hardness, toughness, and elasticity, due to the fineness and regularity of the dentinal tubules which radiate from the axial pulp-cavity to the periphery of the tooth. The most valuable ivory is that obtained from elephants' tusks, in which the tubules make many strong bands at regular intervals, resulting in a pattern peculiar to the proboscidean mammals. In its natural state the ivory of a tusk is coated with cement; and besides the fine angular radiating lines, it shows on cross-section a series of contour-lines concentric with the axis of the tooth, arranged about a central grayish spot which represents the calcified pulp. The appearance of these contour-lines is due to the regular arrangement of minute spaces called interlobular. Ivory in comparison with ordinary dentine is especially rich in organic matter, containing 40 per cent. or more. Tusks of extinct mammoths, furnishing fossil ivory, have been found 12 feet long and of 200 pounds weight. Those of the African elephant, furnishing the best ivory, as well as by far the greater portion of the ivory used in the arts, sometimes reach a length of 9 feet and a weight of 100 pounds. Those of the Indian elephant are never so large as this; and in either case tusks average much smaller, probably under 50 pounds. Elephants' tusks are incisors, but the large teeth of the hippopotamus and walrus which furnish ivory are canines. A substance which sometimes passes for ivory, but is really bone, is derived from the very hard or petrosal parts of the ear-bones of whales.

Vpon a branche of this pyne was hanged by a cheyne
Of silver as borne of yorie as white as snowe. Meritt (E. E. T. S.), III, 605.

With golde and ivories that so brighte schone,
That alle aboute the bewte men may se. Lydgate, Rawlinson MS., I, 34. (Halliwell.)

There is more difference between thy flesh and hers than between jet and ivory. Shak., M. of V., III, 1, 42.

2. An object made of ivory.

Saints represented in Byzantine mosaics and ivories.
C. C. Perkins, Italian Sculpture, Int., p. xiii.

3. pl. Teeth. [Humorous.]

The close-cropped bullet skull, the swarthy tint, the grinning ivories, the pensive ears, and twinkling little eyes of the immortal governor of Barataria.
G. A. Sala, Dutch Pictures, Shadow of a young Dutch Painter.

Artificial ivory, a compound of caoutchouc, sulphur, and some white material, such as gypsum, pipe-clay, or oxid. of zinc.—Brain ivory, the substance of the otoliths or ear-stones of fishes. See otolith.—Fossil ivory. See fosil.—Green ivory. See the extract.

When first cut it (African ivory) is semi-transparent and of a warm colour; in this state it is called green ivory, and as it dries it becomes much lighter in color and more opaque. Enyc. Bril., XIII, 522.

Vegetable ivory. See ivory-nut.

II. a. Consisting of or made of ivory; resembling ivory in color or texture: as, the gown was made of ivory satin.

Then down she layd her ivory combe,
And braided her hair in twain. Fair Margaret and Sweet William (Child's Ballads, II, 141).

One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand waits to har. Shak., T. of A., I, 1, 70.

Ivory harnacle, Balenus eburneus.—Ivory gale. See gale.—Ivory lines or spaces, in cuticle, polished yellowish-white spaces resembling ivory found on rough punctured surfaces, as the elytra of many beetles.

Ivory² (i'vô-ri), n. A dialectal form of ivy, simulating ivory.

Ivory³ (i'vô-ri), n. [Named for James Ivory (1765-1842), who published a celebrated memoir on the attractions of homogeneous ellipsoids in 1809.] In math., one of two points on each of two confocal ellipsoids, such that, if the two ellipsoids be referred to their principal axes, the coordinates are in the same proportions as each pair to the axes of the two ellipsoids having the same direction.

Ivorybill (i'vô-ri-bil), n. The ivory-billed woodpecker, Campophtilus principalis: so called from the ivory-like hardness and whiteness of the bill. See cut under Campophtilus. Cones.

Ivory-billed (i'vô-ri-bild), a. Having the beak hard and white as ivory: as, the ivory-billed woodpeckers of the genus Campophtilus.—Ivory-billed coot, the common American coot or whitebill, Fulica americana. Marsh. [Jamaica.]

Ivory-black (i'vô-ri-blak'), n. A fine soft black pigment, prepared from ivory-dust by calcination in closed vessels, in the same way as bone-black.

There were different coloured hair powders. The black was made with starch, Japan ink, and ivory black. J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I, 148.

Ivory-brown (i'vô-ri-broun'), n. See brown.

Ivory-gull (i'vô-ri-gul), n. A small arctic gull, pure white all over when adult, with rough Ivory-gull (Larus eburneus).

black feet, technically called Larus eburneus, Pagophila eburnea, or Gavia alba.

Ivory-gum (i'vô-ri-gum), n. Same as ivy-gum (which see, under gum).

Ivory-nut (i'vô-ri-nut), n. The seed of Phytolophus macrocarpa, a low-growing palm, native of South America. The seeds are produced, 4 to 9 together, in hard clustered capsules, each seed weighing about 25 lbs. when ripe. Each seed is about as large as a hen's egg; the albumen is close-grained and very hard, resembling the finest ivory in texture and color; it is hence called vegetable ivory, and is often wrought into ornamental work. It is also known as corozo.

Ivory-palm (i'vô-ri-pâm), n. The tree which bears the ivory-nut.

Ivory-paper (i'vô-ri-pâ-pér), n. A fine quality of hand-made pasteboard, used for printing.

Ivory-paste (i'vô-ri-pâst), n. The material used in making ivory-porcelain, having a peculiar dull luster, due to the depolishing of the vitreous glaze.

Ivory-porcelain (i'vô-ri-pôrs-lân), n. In ceram., a fine ware with an ivory-white glaze, manufactured at the Royal Worcester factory, and first shown at the London exhibition of 1862. It is a modification of Parian ware, and is used for similar purposes, but is more decorative because of the glaze.

Ivory-shell (i'vô-ri-shel), n. The shell of the gastropods of the genus Eburna (which see).

Ivory-tree (i'vô-ri-trê), n. A moderately large tree, Wrightia tinctoria, a native of Burma: so called from the wood, which is beautifully white, hard, and close-grained, resembling ivory and used for turning. The name is also applied to other species of the genus used for the same purpose.

Ivorytype (i'vô-ri-tîp), n. [ivory + type.] In photog., same as heliotype.

Ivory-white (i'vô-ri-hwî'), n. Ancient creamy-white Chinese porcelain, imitated in Japan and by the modern Chinese.

Ivory-yellow (i'vô-ri-yel'ô), n. A very pale and rather cool yellow, almost white, resembling the color of ivory. A rotating color-disk composed of 1 white, 1 bright chrome-yellow, and 1 emerald-green will give what is called ivory-yellow. The mixture of chrome-yellow and green in these proportions without the white would appear as a lemon-yellow cooler than gamboge; but the handsomest ivory-yellow is a little whiter.

Ivour, ivouret, n. Middle English forms of ivory.

Ivray, n. [F. ivraie (= Fr. abriaga, drunkenness) (in allusion to the supposed intoxicating quality of the seeds), < L. ebriacus, drunken, < ebrius, drunken: see ebrius.] The darnel, Lolium temulentum.

Ivry (i'vi), n.; pl. ivries (i'vis). [Early mod. E. also ivie, ivie; < ME. ivy, < AS. ifig, ivy; early mod. E. also iven, etc. (see iven), < AS. ifegn, ivy; = OHG. ebah, MHG. ebich, ivy; also in a deriv. form, OHG. ebawi, ebahowi, MHG. ebahû, ephû, ephû, G. ephew, ivy. The G. forms appear to simulate G. new, hay, and are also confused with the forms of epiphic (OHG. ephi, etc.), paraley, in mod. G. also ivy, < L. apium, paraley.] An epiphytic climbing plant of the genus Hedera

Ivy (Hedera Helix).
a, flower; b, fruit; c, leaf and aerial roots of young plant.

(H. Helix), natural order Araliaceae, and the type of the series Hederaceae. The leaves are smooth and shining, varying much in form, from oval entire to 5- and 7-lobed; and their perpetual verdure gives the plant a beautiful appearance. The flowers are greenish and inconspicuous, disposed in globose umbels, and are succeeded by deep-green or almost black berries. H. Helix (the common ivy) is found throughout almost the whole of Europe, and in many parts of Asia and Africa. It is plentiful in great Britain, growing in hedges and woods, and on old buildings, rocks, and trunks of trees. A variety called the Irish ivy is much cultivated on account of the large size of its foliage and its very rapid growth. The ivy attains a great age, the stem ultimately becoming several inches thick and capable of supporting the weight of the plant. The wood is soft and porous, and when cut into very thin plates is used for filtering liquids. In Switzerland and the south of Europe it is employed for making various useful articles. The ivy has been celebrated from remote antiquity, and was held sacred in some countries, as Greece and Egypt.—American ivy, Ampelopsis quinquefolia.—Barren ivy, a creeping and flowerless variety of ivy.—Black ivy, the common ivy, Hedera Helix, also named H. nigra: so called in allusion to its sometimes nearly black berries.—German ivy, a species of groundsel, Senecio jacobinoides.—Indian ivy, a plant of the genus Schodopsea, natural order Araaceae. It is an East Indian herb, with perforated or pinnately divided leaves and a climbing stem.—Irish ivy. See above.—Japanese ivy, Ampelopsis tripartita.—Kentish ivy, or Colosseum ivy, a handsome scrophulariaceous vine, Lonicera xylosteum, much used in hanging-baskets, etc. Also called ivy-leaved toad-flax and ivywort.—Pisseny ivy, the poison-oak, Rhus toxicodendron. (See also ground ivy.)

Ivry² (i'vi), n. [Formerly also ivie, and prop. ivie (chiefly in herb-ivy, herb-ivie); < OF. ivie (also called ivie arthetique or ivie muscate or musquee) = Sp. Pg. It. iva (NL. iva: see iva), ground-pine, herb-ivy, a fem. form, corresponding to F. if (ML. ivus), m., yew, < OHG. iva, MHG. the, G. eibe = AS. iw, E. yew: see if and yew. The NL. form is sometimes spelled iba, a form suggesting or suggested by a confusion with the diff. name, L. abiga (sometimes miswritten ibiga), also ajuga, ground-pine (Ajuga Chamaepitys): see abigeat.] Ground-pine: chiefly in the compound herb-ivy.

Ivy-hindweed (i'vi-hînd-wêd), n. A climbing European herb, Polygonum Convulvulus, now naturalized in America.

Ivy-bush (i'vi-bûsh), n. A plant of ivy: formerly hung over tavern-doors in England to advertise good wine. The ivy was sacred to Bacchus.

Where the wine is neat, there needeth no Ivy-bush.
Livy, Euphues, Anat. of Wit, p. 204.

This good wine I present needs no ivy-bush.
Notes on Du Barres (1631), To the Reader.

Ivy-gum (i'vi-gum), n. See gum.

ivy-leaf ('vi-láf), n. [ME. ivy leafe; < ivy + leaf.] The leaf of the ivy.—To pipe in an ivy-leaf, to console one's self the best way one can; whistle.

But Trolius, thou mayest now eat or waste, Pipe in an ivy leaf, if that the lute.

Chaucer, Trolius, v. 1343.

ivy-mantled ('vi-man'tid), a. Covered with a mantle of ivy.

From yonder ivy-mantled tower
The mooping Owl doth to the Moon complain.
Gray, Elegy.

ivy-owl ('vi-oul), n. The European brown or tawny owl, Syrnium aluco.

ivy-tod ('vi-tod), n. An ivy-bush.

I will carry ye to a mair convenient place, where I has as munny a time to hear the howlitt crying out of the ivy tod.
Scott, Antiquary, xli.

ivy-tree ('vi-tré), n. A hardy evergreen, Panax Colensoi, of New Zealand.

ivywort ('vi-wört), n. 1. Same as Kentibworth (which see, under ivy).—2. A plant of the ivy family.

ivy, n. A Middle English form of yew.

ivari, a. A Middle English form of aware.

iwist, ywist ('i-wis'), adv. [ME. (a) iwis, ywis, iwise, ywise (= MHG. gewis = Sw. väst = Dan. vist), certainly, prop. neut. of the adj. (see below), which is not used as an adj. in ME.; (b) iwise, ywise, iwise (= D. gewis = OHG. gewisso, gewiso, MHG. gewins, G. gewiss), adv., certainly (cf. also ME. iwisliche, < AS. gewisslice = D. gewisselike = OHG. gewisselicho, gewisselicho, MHG. gewisseliche, G. gewisselich, certainly), < AS. gewis, gewin (= D. gewis, win = OHG. gewis, MHG. gewis, G. gewiss = Isel. viss = Sw. viss = Dan. vis), certain, < go-, a generalizing suffix (see +), + wis* = Goth. wisa (for wisa*) in neg. unwise, uncertain, orig. pp. of the pret. pres. verb represented by AS. witan, know; see wit, v. The word, being commonly written in ME. with the prefix separated, i wis, came to be understood as the pronoun I with a verb, wis*, explained in dictionaries, with reference to wit, as 'know,' appar. taken to mean 'think' or 'guess,' but there is no such verb.] (Certainly; surely; truly; to wit. This word, very common in Middle English, lost somewhat of its literal force, and became in later use a term of slight emphasis, often meaningless. In the later ballads, and hence archaically in modern use, it is thrown in parenthetically, often as a metrical expletive, and is commonly printed as two words, I wis, taken to mean 'I think' or 'I guess.' See the etymology.)

Ful sorful was his hert iwis. Met. Homilies, p. 88.

And soe fast he smote at John Steward,
Iwis he never rest.

Childs Maurics (Child's Ballads, II. 317).

I wis, in all the sonete

There was no heart so hold.

Macaulay, Horatius.

iwist, ywist, n. [ME. (= MHG. gewis), certainty; < gewis, adv. (orig. adj.): see wis, adv.] Certainty: used in the adverbial phrases mid iwise, or to iwise, for certain, certainly.

Thou art suete mid ywis.

Spec. of Lyric Poems (ed. Wright), p. 57.

He gan hire for to kenne

Wel ofte mid ywis.

King Horn (E. E. T. S.), I. 432.

iwistliche, adv. See wis.

iwit, v. See wit.

iwitnesse, n. See witnes.

Ixia (ik-si-á), n. [NL., so called with ref. to the clammy juice, < Gr. ixós = L. viscus, birdlime, mistletoe; see viscus, viscous.] An extensive genus of Cape plants, of the natural order Iridaceae, type of the tribe Ixiæ. They have narrow sword-shaped leaves, and slender simple or branched stems, bearing spikes of large, showy, variously colored flowers. The beauty and elegance of the flowers give them a high place among ornamental plants. The plant formerly called Ixia (Pardanthus) Chinensis is now referred to a genus Balanandra.

Ixia-lily (ik-si-á-lil'i), n. A plant of the genus Ixiolirion.

Ixiolirion (ik-si-á-lir'i-on), n. [NL., < Ixia + -lirion.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Iridaceae, typified by the genus Ixia, and characterized by their coated bulbs and numerous sessile 1-flowered spathes, the flower being 2-bracted and sessile within the spathe. The tribe embraces about 20 genera, chiefly South African. Also called Ixiaceae.

Ixiolirion (ik-si-á-lir'i-on), n. [NL., < Ixia, q. v., + Gr. leirion, a lily; see lily.] A small genus of monocotyledonous plants of the order Amaryllidaceae, tribe Astrantieae, having tunicate bulbs, simple erect stems, and irregular umbels of pretty blue or violet flowers with a 6-parted funnel-shaped perianth. Only two species are admitted by Bentham and Hooker, natives of central and western Asia. The plants are called ixiolirion.

Ixiolite (ik-si-á-lit), n. [Gr. Ixiôn, Ixion, a mythical king of Thessaly, bound, for his crimes, to an ever-revolving wheel in Tartarus (where also Tantalus was tortured: see tantalite), + lithos, a stone.] In Mineral, a kind of tantalite from Kimito in Finland.

Ixodes (ik-só-déz), n. [Gr. Ixódēs, like birdlime, sticky, < ixós, birdlime (see Ixia), + eidōr, form.] The typical and largest genus of Ixodidae, founded by Latreille in 1796, embracing eyeless species best known as ticks. They are fast in the normal state, but swell up when distended with blood, becoming more or less globular. They adhere very firmly to the skin of man and beast, requiring some force to pull them away, but if undisturbed drop off upon repulsion. I. ricinus, the dog-tick of Europe, is a characteristic example. One of the best-known in the United States is I. albipictus, the white-spotted tick. See out under Acarida.

Ixodidae (ik-sod'i-dé), n. pl. [Ixodes + -idae.] A family of tracheate Acarida, typified by the genus Ixodes, and comprising all those mites which are properly called ticks. The skin is tough and leathery, and in the female capable of great distension. The rostrum and mandibles are fitted for sucking, and the tarsi have two claws and a sucking-disk. In their early stages the Ixodidae are herbivorous and not parasitic; but the adults fasten themselves to various animals and suck blood. There are about 13 genera, and the species are numerous.

Ixolite (ik-só-lit), n. [Gr. Ixós, birdlime (see Ixia), + lithos, a stone.] A mineral resin of a greasy luster found in bituminous coal, which becomes soft and tenacious when heated. Also, erroneously, ixolyte.

Ixonanthus (ik-só-nan'thē-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, 1836-40), < Ixonanthos + -ae.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Linaceae, typified by the genus Ixonanthus, having the petals contorted and persistent, and the capsules septicidally dehiscent.

Ixonanthus (ik-só-nan'thē-ō), n. [NL. (Jack, 1820), irreg. < Gr. ixós, birdlime, mistletoe (see Ixia), + anthos, flower.] A small genus of smooth trees, of the natural order Linaceae, type of the tribe Ixonanthæ, having the petals 10 to 20 in number and perigynous, and the fruit often with false partitions. They have alternate, coriaceous, entire or remotely crenate or serrate leaves, and small flowers in usually axillary dichotomous cymes. The three or four species known are natives of tropical eastern Asia.

Ixora (ik-só-rā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < Ixonara (< Skt. Iṣāra, master, lord, prince, < √ ṣ, own, be master; cf. AS. āgan, E. own), given as the name of a Malabar deity to whom the flowers are offered.] 1. A genus of plants of the natural order Rubiaceae, type of the tribe Ixoreæ. It consists of tropical shrubs or small trees, chiefly of the old world, numbering about 100 species. The flowers have the corolla salver-shaped, contorted, the stamens exserted; and they are disposed in trichotomously branching corymbs. The leaves are coriaceous and evergreen. Many species are cultivated, for the elegance, and in some cases fragrance, of their flowers. Several species have medicinal uses. Certain species, very hard-wooded, are called iron-trees. I. ferrea of the West Indies is called hardwood-tree or (with other species) well-jamaine. I. triflorum, a native of Guiana, is called Nackia. Two extinct species have been discovered in the Tertiary deposits of Europe, and three other closely allied forms from a bed of the same age on the island of Labuan, off the coast of Borneo, have been described under the name Ixonophyllum.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

Ixoreæ (ik-só-rē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1873), < Ixora + -æ.] A tribe of plants of the natural order Rubiaceae, of which the genus Ixora is the type, and to which the coffee-plant belongs. It includes 11 genera, natives of the tropics of both hemispheres. The plants of this tribe are trees or shrubs with entire stipules, and are chiefly distinguished from those of other tribes by having the lobes of the corolla twisted instead of imbricated or valvate in the bud.

Ixtle (iks'tl), n. Same as ixtle.

Iyar (i'á-r), n. [Heb.] The second month of the sacred year among the Jews, and the eighth of the civil year, beginning with the new moon of April. Also called Zif.

Iyent, n. A Middle English plural of eye.

Iyngidae (i-in-'ji-dé), n. pl. [NL., < Iynx (Iyng-) + -idae.] The wrynecks as a family of birds distinct from Picidae. Also written Iungidae, Jyngidae, Jungidae, Yungidae.

Iyngine (i-in-'jī-né), n. pl. [NL., < Iynx (Iyng-) + -inae.] A subfamily of Picidae, represented by the genus Iynx, related to the woodpeckers, but having the tail of 12 soft rounded rectrices (the outer pair of which are extremely short and entirely concealed), the first primary spurious, the bill acute, the tongue extensible, and the pattern of coloration intricately blended; the wrynecks. There are about four species, inhabiting Europe, Asia, and especially Africa. Also written Iunginae, Jynginae, Junginae, Yunginae.

Iynx (i'íngks), n. [NL., < L. iynx, < Gr. lyxé, the wryneck, so called from its cry, < lyxéw, cry out, about, yell, < ly, an exclamation of surprise; cf. lot, lo!, a cry of distress, lo!, a cry of delight; see io.] A genus of Picidae, the wrynecks. See out under wryneck. Also written Ynxs.

izar (iz'ár), n. [Also issar, isor; < Ar. isár.]

1. A garment worn by Moslems. (a) An outer garment worn by Moslem women. It is of cotton, and is long enough to reach the ground when drawn over the head; it then covers the whole person, except in front, where the veil hangs down; and it can be drawn together in front, covering the veil itself except at the loas. (See burka.) In Syria it is the common outdoor garment. (b) One of the two cloths forming the thrum or pilgrim's dress. It is tied around the loins, and hangs down over the thighs as far as the knees or beyond them. Compare rida. 2. [cap.] A very yellow star, of magnitude 2.6, on the right thigh of Boötis in the waist-cloth, called by the astronomers: Boötis. See out under Boötis.

isard, issard (iz'árd), n. [F. isard, an isard.] The wild goat of the Pyrenees; an ibex.

He [the isard-hunter] told them of all the curious habits of the isard; and among others that of its using its hooked horns to let itself down from the cliffs—a fancy which is equally in vogue among the chamois hunters of the Alps.
Mayne Reid, Brain, xziii.

-ise. [Also -ise; = F. -iser = Sp. Pg. -isar, -isar = It. -isare, < LL. ML. -isare, < Gr. -izein, a common formative of verbs denoting the doing of a particular thing expressed by the noun or adjective to which it is attached, as in Attulizein, speak or act like the Athenians, Atticize, Atticizein, speak or act like the Spartans, Iaconize, Philippizein, speak or act for Philip, philippize, etc., Elphizein, have hope, < Elphé, hope. Some verbs with this suffix, as Barthizein, baptize, are practically mere extensions of a simpler form (as Barthrew). To this suffix are ult. due the E. suffixes -ism and -ist; from the parallel form -izein come -ism and -ist.] A suffix of Greek origin, forming, from nouns or adjectives, verbs meaning to be or do the thing denoted by the noun or adjective. It occurs in verbs taken from the Greek, as in Atticize, to be, act, or speak like an Athenian, Iaconize, to be, act, or speak like a Spartan, philippize, to act on Philip's side, etc. (also in a few whose radical element is not recognized in English, as baptize), and in similar verbs of modern formation, mostly intransitive, but also used transitively, as in criticize, to be a critic, philosophize, to be a philosopher, etc., botanize, etymologize, geologize, etc., to study or apply botany, etymology, geology, etc. It is also used causally, as in civilize, make civil. It is very common in verbs denoting to do or affect in a particular way something indicated by the noun to which it is attached, this being often a person's name, referring to some method or invention, as boudierize, to expurgate in Boudier's fashion, grangerize, to treat (books) after the example set by Granger, macadamize, to make a road after MacAdam's method, burnettize, to impregnate with Burnett's liquid, etc. In this use it is applicable to any process associated with the name of a particular person or thing, being often used for the nonce for humorous effect, or confined to special trade use. It is sometimes attached without addition of force to verbs already transitive, as in jeopardize, for jeopard, or where the noun may properly be used as a verb, as in alphabetize, for alphabet (verb). In spelling, usage in Great Britain favors -ise in some verbs, as civilize, but usage there makes most new formations in -ize, which is the regular American spelling in nearly all cases. Verbs in -ise are or may be accompanied by nouns of action in -isation, as civilization, distillation. Such verbs, especially those taken from the Greek, as Atticize, Iaconize, may have a noun of action or state in -ism, as Atticism and Iacicism, and a noun of agent in -ist, as Atticist (see -ism and -ist). The termination -ize as a variant of -ise in nouns, as in merchandize, is obsolete; as a variant of -ise equivalent to -ize, as in advertize, distillize, it is obsolete or treated as -ise above.

istill (iz'til), n. [Said to be Aztec.] In Mexico and former Mexican territory, a knife or cutting-implement of any sort made of a flake of obsidian.

issar (iz'ár), n. See izar.

issard (iz'árd), n. [Also dial. issart: said to stand for s hard, so called because it is like s, but pronounced with voice; cf. "hard c," "hard g"; but evidence of s hard as a current name for s is lacking. The old name is sed, still used in Great Britain; the name now current in the United States is sc.] A former name of the letter Z.

As crooked as an issart, deformed in person, perverse in disposition; an oddity.

Whitty, Glossary (ed. Robinson). (E. D. S.) From A to issard, from one end of the alphabet, and hence of assorted or series of any kind, to the other; all through.

He has spent his lifetime in the service, and knows from A to issard every detail of a soldier's needs.

Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 783.

issard, n. See isard.

1. The tenth letter in the English alphabet. The character is only another form of i, the two forms having been formerly used indifferently, or j preferred when final or affixing a terminal flourish (as in writing the numerals, ijij, etc.; see 2). The differentiation in use was established about the year 1680. In Latin, for example, i was written where we write j both i and j—e. g., teris instead of juris—and had now the vowel-value of i (see 1), and now the consonant-value of y (see 2), being pronounced as y where we now write and pronounce j. The only quasi-English word in which we now give it such a value is halloo-jak (better written halloojak); elsewhere, j is written only where the original y-sound has been thickened into the compound dy, the sonant counterpart of the eh-sound, and identical with what we call the soft sound of g (see 2); and, with a consistency very rare in English orthography, it has always (with the exception mentioned above) this value and this only. It occurs chiefly in words of Latin descent, being found only exceptionally, as a late variant of eh (Anglo-Saxon eh), in words of Anglo-Saxon descent (see jeri, jeri, jeri). Owing to the equivalence in Latin of i and j, words beginning with these letters (as those beginning with u and v) respectively have, notwithstanding their great difference in pronunciation, only within a short time been separated in dictionaries. They are not separated in Bailey (1721–1750 and later), nor in Johnson (1755), nor in Todd's revision of Johnson (1818), nor in Nares's Glossary (1822; ed. Halliwell and Wright, 1850).

2. (a) As a numeral, a variant form of i: used chiefly at the end of a series of numerals, and now only in medical prescriptions: as, vj (six); viii (eight).

Also there was a grett Vesell of Rylyer, And it had at every ende rounde rymys gylte and it was viij cornarde.

Torkington, Diario of Eng. Travell, p. 13.

(b) In math., j stands for the second unit vector or other unit of a multiple algebra. J usually denotes the Jacobian. (c) In thermodynamics, J is the mechanical equivalent of heat (being the initial of Joule).—J function. See function.

jaal-goat (jā'al-gōt), n. [Also jael-goat; < jaal, an African name, + goat.] The Abyssinian ibex, Capra jaala or jaala, a wild goat found in the mountains of Abyssinia, Upper Egypt, and elsewhere.

jab (jab), v. t.; pret. and pp. jabbed, ppr. jabbing. [A dial. orig. Sc., form of job, in same sense; see job.] 1. To strike with the end or point of something; thrust the end of something against or into; poke.

The Missouri stoker pulls and jabs his plutonic monster as an irate driver would regulate his mule.

Putnam's Mag., Sept., 1882.

2. To strike with the end or point of; thrust: as, to jab a stick against a person; to jab a cane into or through a picture. [Scotch, and colloq. U. S.]

jab (jab), n. [= job, n.; from the verb.] A stroke with the point or end of something; a thrust. [Scotch, and colloq. U. S.]

"O yes, I have," I cried, starting up and giving the fire a jab with the poker. C. D. Warner, Backlog Studies, p. 270.

jabber (jab'er), v. [Early mod. E. jaber, also jabble, jabil, assimilated form of gabber and gabble, freq. of gab: see gab, gabber, gabble, gibber.] 1. trans. To talk rapidly, indistinctly, imperfectly, or nonsensically; utter gibberish; chatter; prate.

We dined like emperors, and jabbered in several languages.

Macaulay, in Trevelyan, I. 212.

II. trans. To utter rapidly or indistinctly. He told me, he did not know what travelling was good for but to teach a man to ride the great horse, to jabber French, and to talk against passive obedience.

Addison, Tory Foxhunter.

jabber (jab'er), n. [jabber, v.] Rapid talk with indistinct utterance of words; chattering. There are so many thousands, even in this country, who only differ from their brother brutes in Houghmound because they use a sort of jabber, and do not go naked.

Swift, Gulliver's Travels, Gulliver to his Cousin Sympson. jabberer (jab'er-er), n. One who jabbars.

Both parties join'd to do their best . . .
T'out-out the Babylonian labourers
At all their dialects of jabber.

R. Butler, Hudibras, III. II. 152.

jabbering-crow (jab'er-ing-kro), n. The common crow of Jamaica, Corvus jamaicensis. It is a small species, closely related to the fish-crow (C. omifragus) of the United States.

jabberingly (jab'er-ing-li), adv. In a jabbering manner.

jabberment (jab'er-ment), n. [jabber + -ment.] The act of jabbering; idle or nonsensical talk. [Rare.]

We are come to his farewell, which is to be a concluding taste of his jabberment in the law. Milton, Colasterton.

jabbernowlt, n. Same as jobbernowlt.

jabble (jab'l), v. t. [Early mod. E. jabil (for jabel); an assimilated form of gabble, as jabber is of gabber.] To jabber; gabble.

To jabil, multum loqui.

Levinus, Manip. Vocah. (E. E. T. S.), p. 126.

jabble (jab'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. jabbled, ppr. jabbling. [Also jabil; prob. freq. of a form represented by jaup: see jaup, v., 2.] To splash, as water; cause to splash, as a liquid. [Scotuh.] jabble (jab'l), n. [jabble, v.] A slight agitation on the surface of a liquid; small irregular waves running in all directions. [Scotuh.]

The steamer jumped, and the black huoya were dancing in the jabble. H. L. Stevenson, Silverado Squatters, p. 12.

jabelt, n. A variant of javel. [Prov. Eng.]

What, thu jabelt, canst not have do?
Thu and thi company shall not depart
Tyll of our distavys ye have take part.
Candlemas Day, 1512 (Hawkins, Eng. Drama, I. 18).

jabiru (jab'i-rū), n. [Braz. name.] A large stork-like bird, Mycteria americana. The jabiru and the maguari are the only American representatives of the subfamily Oreoscoptes. The jabiru inhabits tropical and subtropical America, occasionally north to Texas. The plumage is entirely white; the bill, legs, and bare skin of the neck are black, with a red collar around the lower part of American Jabiru (Mycteria americana).

the neck. The wing is 2 feet long; the bill is a foot long, extremely thick at the base, and somewhat recurved at the tip. See Mycteria.

Jablochhoff candle. See electric candle, under candle.

laborandi (jab-ō-ran'di), n. [Braz. (Guarani).] A Brazilian plant, Pilocarpus pennatifolius; also, the drug obtained from it. The leaves and bark of the plant furnish an agreeable, prompt, and powerful sudorific and diuretic, with some diuretic effect, and it has become the leading drug of its class. The name is also locally applied to several other plants and drugs having similar properties—for example, some species of Hyper and Hyperanth, and several other Rutaceae, the order to which Pilocarpus belongs. Also laborandi.

laborine (jab-ō-rin), n. [labor (and) + -ine.] An alkaloid extracted from the leaves of laborandi, and also derivable from pilocarpine. Its physiological effects are said to resemble those of atropin.

Jaborosa (jab-ō-rō'sā), n. [NL. (Jussieu), said to be < Ar. jaborose, a name of allied plants.] A South American genus of the natural order Solanaceae, containing 6 or 7 species of small herbs, having flowers with long funnelform, acutely lobed corolla, and leaves toothed, or variously pinnately dissected. J. ruscifolia is employed by South American natives to excite amorous passion.

jabet (zha-bō'), n. [F.] A frilling or ruffle worn by men at the bosom of the shirt in the eighteenth century; also, a frill of lace, or some soft material, arranged down the front of a woman's bodice.

They wore men's shirts, with ruffles and jabets; their hair was clubbed, and their whips were long and formidable. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLII. 280.

She is debited with une paire de mari. Fortunately, however, for the Comtesse's good repute, the "pair of husbands" turn out to be a double jabet, or projecting bosom frill of lace. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLII. 287.

jacamar (jak'a-mär), n. [S. Amer. name.] Any South American bird of the family Galbulidae. In general aspect the jacamars resemble the bee-eaters of the old world, and have to a considerable extent the habits of the arboreal and insectivorous kingfishers.

Jacamar (Galbula viridis).

They nest in holes, and lay white eggs. The plumage in most cases is brilliant, and as a rule the bill is long, slender, and sharp; the feet are very weak, with the toes in pairs (in one genus there are but three toes).

Jacamaralcyon (jak'a-mä-räi'si-on), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831), < jacamar + alcyon.] A genus of jacamars with three toes; the only three-toed genus of Galbulidae. There is but one species, J. tridactyla of Brazil, 7½ inches long, slaty-black with a bronze tint, with white belly, black bill, and brown-streaked head.

Jacamarops (ja-kam'a-rops), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831), but used as a F. vernacular name by Cuvier, 1829], < jacamar + Gr. ōps, eye.] A genus of Galbulidae, consisting of the great jacamars. They are of large size, with a long curved bill dilated at the base and with ridged culmen, a graduated tail of 13 rectrices, and very short feathered tarsus. There is but one species, J. grandis, a native of tropical America, 11 inches long, golden-green in color, with rufous under parts and a white throat.

jacana (ja-kä'nä), n. [Braz. jagand.] 1. A bird of the genus Parra or Jacana, as P. jacana or J. spinosa; the book-name of any bird of the family Parridae or Jacaniidae. There are several quers and species of both the old and the new world. These remarkable birds resemble plovers and rails, but are most nearly related to the former. In the typical American forms the tail is short, and the legs and toes are long, with enormous straight claws which enable the birds to run easily over the floating leaves of aquatic plants. There is a horny spur on the bend of the wing, and a naked frontal leaf and wattles at the base of the bill. Porra gymnotoma is the Mexican jacana, which is also found in the United States. The pheasant-tailed jacana of India, Hydrophasianus chirurgus, has no frontal or ritual lobes, and has a very long tail like a pheasant. The Indo-African jacanas belong to the genus Metopodius; that of the East Indies is Hydrolector cristatus.

Mexican Jacana (Parra gymnotus).

9. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of jacanas, the same as Porra, lately made the name-giving genus of Jacacidae. Brisson, 1780. Also written Jacana. Jacacidae (ja-kan'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Jacana + -idae.] A family of gallatorial aquatic birds of the order Limicola, named from the genus Jacana; the jacanas. They are birds of the warmer parts of both hemispheres, represented by the genera Jacana (or Porra), Metopodius, Hydrolector, and Hydrophasianus. In technical characters they are charadriiform, though they are ralliform in external aspect. The skull is schizognathous and schizorhinal, with basipterygoid processes and emarginate vomer, with no supra-orbital impressions. A metacarpal spur is present in all these birds, and in some of them the radius is peculiarly expanded. The family is more frequently called Parridae.

Jacaranda (jak-a-ran'dā), n. [NL. (A. L. Jussieu, 1789); a Brazilian name.] A genus of the natural order Bignoniaceae, type of the tribe Jacarandaceae. It contains about 80 species of tall trees of elegant habit, native in tropical America. It is separated from kindred genera by its panicled flowers with short campanulate calyx, its short pod with flat, transparently winged seeds, and its twice, or sometimes once, pinnate leaves. The Brazilian J. mimosifolia, J. Brazilian, and J. obtusifolia furnish a beautiful and fragrant palisander wood, bluish-red with blackish veins, sometimes, in common with numerous other timbers, called rosewood. (See rosewood.) As a popular name Jacaranda is not confined strictly to this genus, but applies to various trees having similar wood. Three fossil species are described, from the Lower Tertiary of Italy and Tyrol.

Jacarandaceae (jak-a-ran'dē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham and Hooker, 1876), < Jacaranda + -aceae.] A tribe of Bignoniaceae, embracing the genus Jacaranda and four others. The ovary is 1-celled or becomes so, with parietal placentae and a 2-valved pod. They are mostly trees or shrubs, all native of tropical America except the genus Coles, which belongs to Madagascar.

Jacare (jak'a-re), n. [Pg. jacaré, jacareu; of Braz. origin.] 1. A South American alligator; a cayman. Several species or varieties are described, such as the Orinoco or black jacare, Jacare nigra. Also written jacare, jacaras.

2. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of South American alligators. J. E. Gray, 1862.

Jacatoo, n. [Appar. an error for "cacatoo": see cockatoo.] A cockatoo.

A rarely colour'd Jacatoo, or prodigious huge parrot. Boslyn, Diary, July 11, 1654.

Jaca-tree (jak'a-trē), n. [Also jak, jak-tree, Jak-tree; < Jaca, the native name, + E. tree.] Same as Jack-tree.

Jacchus (jak'us), n. [NL.] 1. A small squirrel-like monkey of South America, a kind of marmoset, Hapale jacchus.—2. [cap.] A genus of marmosets: same as Hapale. Also Jacchus. See Middle.

Jacconet, n. See Jaconet.

Jacout (jā'sent), a. [= Sp. jacento = Pg. jacento, < L. jacen (t), n. pp. of jacere, lie, be prostrate, < jacere, throw, cast: see jet, jaotation, jaowate, etc. Cf. adjacent, circumjaacent, etc.] Lying at length; prostrate. [Rare.]

Because so laid, they [brick or squared stones] are more apt in swagging down, to pierce with their points than in the jaout posture, and so to crumble the wall. Str II. Waton, Reliquia, p. 20.

Jacinth (jā'sinth), n. [Accommodated in term. to orig. hyacinth; formerly jaoint, jaoint; < ME. jaoint, jaointe, jaoint; < OF. jaointe = Pr. jaoint = Sp. jaointo = Pg. jaointo = It. jaointo, giacinto, < L. hyacinthus, < Gr. ἵακινθος, hyacinth: see hyacinth.] Same as hyacinth.

Jactara-palm (jā-i-tar'ā-pām), n. [S. Amer. jactara + E. palm.] The plant Demoniacus macrocaranthus. See Demoniac.

Jack (jak), n. [ME. Jacke, Jake, Jak, as a personal name, and familiarly, like mod. Jack, dial. Jack, as a general appellation; < OF. Jaque, Jagues (AF. also Jake, Jakes), later Jaouen, mod. F. Jaoues, a very common personal name, James, Jacob, = Sp. Jago (formerly written Iago), also Diego = Pg. Diego, these being reduced forms of the name, which appears also, in semblance nearer the LL., as E. Jacob = F. Jacobe = Sp. Jacobo = It. Giacobo, Giacobbe, Jacopo, and, with altered term. (b to m), It. Giacomo, Jachimo = Sp. contr. Jaimo = Pg. Jayme = OF. Jakemes, contr. Jaimo, Jame, James, > rare ME. James, Jamys, early mod. E. James (> dim. Jem, Jim), now James; AS. Jacob = D. G. Dan. leel, etc., Jakob; < LL. Jacobus, < Gr. Ἰάκωβος, < Heb. Ya'aqob, Jacob, lit. 'one who takes by the heel', a supplanter, < aqab, take by the heel, supplant (see Gen. xxv. 26, xxvii. 36). The name Jack is thus a doublet of Jake (still used as a conscious abbr. of Jacob, and occasionally in the same general sense as Jack, as in country jake, applied in the U. S. to a rustic, as well as of James, all being reduced forms of Jacob; but on passing into E. Jack came to be regarded as a familiar synonym or dim. of John (ME. Jan, Jon, etc., dim. Jankin, Jonkin, etc.), and is now so accepted. The F. name Jacques, being extremely common, came to be used as a general term for a man, particularly a young man, of common or menial condition; so E. Jack, and its synonym John, which is similarly used, in its various forms, in other languages. From this use of Jack, as equiv. to 'lad, boy, servant' (cf. jock, jockey), has arisen its mod. E. use as a purely common noun, alone or in comp., applied to various contrivances which do the work of a common servant or are subjected to rough usage. Cf. billy, jenny, jimmy, botty, etc., likewise from familiar personal names, jenny or jimmy being ult. identical with jack.] 1. [cap.] An abbreviation or diminutive of the name Jacob, now regarded as a nickname or diminutive of the name John.

For sweet Jack Falstaff, . . . banish not him thy Harry's company. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., II. 4, 532.

2. A young man; a fellow: used with jill, a young woman, both being commonly treated as proper names.

And aryo up soft & stilly.
And langyle nether with Jack ne Iylla.
Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 22.

That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown:
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall avail Jill.
Shak., M. N. D., III. 2, 461.

3. [cap. or l. c.] A saucy or impertinent fellow; an upstart; a coxcomb; a jackanapes; a sham gentleman: as, jack lord, jack gentleman, jack meddler, and similar combinations.

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.
Shak., Rich. III., I. 8, 72.

4. [cap.] A familiar term of address used among sailors, soldiers, laborers, etc.; hence, in popular use (commonly Jack Tar), a sailor.

For says he, do you mind me, let storms e'er so oft Take the top-sails of sailors' backs.
There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.
C. Ibbotson, Poor Jack.

5. Same as jack in the water (which see, below).—6. [l. c. or cap.] A figure which strikes the bell in clocks: also called jack of the clock or clock-house: as, the two jacks of St. Dunstan's.

I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.
Shak., Rich. III., v. 5, 60.

This is the night, nine the hour, and I the Jack that gives warning.
Middleton, Burt, Master-Constable, II. 2.
The Jack of the clock-house, often mentioned by the writers of the sixteenth century, was . . . an automaton, that either struck the hours upon the bell in their proper rotation, or signified by its gestures that the clock was about to strike.
Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 244.

7. Any one of the knaves in a pack of playing-cards.

"He calls the knaves Jacks, this boy," said Estella with disdain, before our first game was out.
Dickens, Great Expectations, viii.

8. The male of certain animals; specifically, a male ass; especially, an ass kept for getting mules from mares; a jackass. [In this sense it is much used attributively or in composition, signifying 'male': as, jackass, jack-ass.]

9. A name of several different fishes. (a) A pike, as Jackfish or related species; especially, a small pike, or pickeral. Also jack-fish.

I desire you to accept of a Jack, which is the best I have caught this season. Addison, Sir Roger and Will Wimble.
A Jack or pickeral becomes a pike at 2 feet (Walton) and 2 lb. or 2 lb. weight. Some see no distinction, calling all pike; others fix the limit in different ways.
Day, Brit. Fishes, II. 140.

(b) A percid fish, Stenostedion vittatum, the pike-perch. (c) A scorpionfish, Scorpaenidae or Scorpaenidae penicillatus, better known as buccocephalus. (d) One of several garraoid fishes, especially Garra pinnifrons, also called buffalo-jack, hokory-jack, and jack-jack; also, Seriola carolinensis. (e) The pampano, Trachinotus carolinus.

10. (a) The jackdaw, Corvus monedula. (b) The jack-curler, Numenius audouinii. (c) A kind of pigeon; a jacobin.—11. One of various convenient implements or mechanical contrivances obviating the need of an assistant: used alone or compounded with some other word designating the special purpose of the implement or some other distinguishing circumstance: as, a pegging-jack; a shackle-jack, or thill-jack. Specifically—(a) A bootjack. (b) A contrivance for raising great weights by force exerted from below. A section of the usual form of this machine is given in the annexed figure. By turning the handle a, the screw b, the upper end of which is brought into contact with the mass to be raised, is made to ascend. This is effected by means of an endless screw working into the worm-wheel c, which forms the nut of the screw. On the lower end of the screw is fixed the claw d, passing through a groove in the stock; this claw serves at once to prevent the screw b from turning and to raise bodies which lie near the ground. The axis of the endless screw is supported by two malleable iron plates e, bolted to the upper side of the wooden stock or framework in which the whole is inclosed. Also called jack-screw, and specifically lifting-jack. (c) In cookery, a roasting-jack; a smoke-jack.

Lifting-jack.

We looked at his wooden jack in his chimney that goes with the smoke, which is indeed very pretty.

Pepys, Diary, I. 116.

(d) A rock-lever or oscillating lever. Such levers are used in stoking-furnaces, in knitting-machines, and in other machinery. Their function is the actuation of other moving parts to produce specific results at proper periods. (e) In spinning, a bobbin and frame operating on the silver from the carding-machine and passing the product to the reeling-machine. (f) In weaving, same as jack-box. (g) In the harpsichord, clavicord, pianoforte, and similar instruments, an upright piece of wood at the inner or rear end of each key or digital, designed to bring the motion of the latter to bear upon the string. In the harpsichord and spinet the jack carries a quill or spine by which the string is twanged; in the clavicord it terminates in a metal tangent by which the string is pressed; and in the pianoforte it merely transmits the motion of the key to the hammer.

How oft when thou, my music, music play'st,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand!

Shak., Sonnets, cxxviii.

(A) A wooden frame on which wood is sawed: a sawbuck or sawhorse. (B) In mining: (1) A wooden wedge used to split rocks after blasting; a gad. (2) A kind of water-engine, turned by hand, for use in mines. Hall's. (C) A portable crescent or fire-pot for hunting or fishing at night. Also called jack-lamp, jack-lantern, jack-light. (D) A tin case in which the safety-lamp is carried by coal-miners in places where the current of air is very strong. [North. Eng.] (E) In telegraph, a terminal consisting of a spring-clip, by means of which instruments can be expeditiously introduced into the circuit. In telephones such terminals are sometimes used at exchanges for allowing the lines of different subscribers to be quickly connected. The connection is made by means of a wire cord on the ends of which are metallic wedges covered on one side with insulating material. These wedges, called jack-knives or simply jacks, are inserted into the terminals of the lines to be connected. Also called spring-jack.

12. A pitcher, formerly of waxed leather, afterward of tin or other metal; a black-jack.

Small jacks we have in many ale houses tipped with silver, besides the great jacks and bombard of the court.
J. Heywood, Philothonista (1685).

Body of me, I'm dry still; give me the jack, boy;
This wooden skit holds nothing.

Fletcher (and others), Bloody Brother, II. 2.

13. A half-pint; also, a quarter of a pint. [Prov. Eng.]—14. In the game of bowls, an odd bowl thrown out for a mark to the players.

Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed [that is, when my bowl touched] the jack, upon an upcast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't.

Shak., Cymbeline, II. 1, 2.

15. A flag showing the union only: used by those nations whose national standard contains a union, as Great Britain and the United States. The British jack is a combination in red, white, and blue of the crosses of St. George, St. Andrew, and St. Patrick, and dates from 1801. In the United States naval service the jack is a blue flag with a white five-pointed star for each State in the Union. It is hoisted on a jack-staff at the bowsprit-cap when in port, and is also used as a signal for a pilot when shown at the fore. See union jack, under union.

In a paper dated Friday, Jan. 14, 1652, "By the commissioners for ordering and managing ye affairs of the Admiralty and Navy," ordering what flag shall be worn by flag-officers, it is ordered, "All the ships to wear jacks as formerly."

Proble, Hist. of the Flag, p. 181.

16. A horizontal bar or crosspiece of iron at the topgallantmast-head, to spread the royal-shrouds. Also called jack-crosspiece.

Though I could handle the brig's fore royal easily, I found my hands full with this, especially as there were no jacks to the ship, everything being for neatness, and nothing left for Jack to hold on by but his "eyecids."

R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 210.

17. A kind of schooner-rigged vessel of from 10 to 25 tons, used in the Newfoundland fisheries. A jack is generally full and clumsy, with no overhang to the counter, and carries a mainmast, foremast, and jib, sometimes also a small mainstaymast.

18. [cap.] A Jacobite. [Cant.] In the quotation it is used with a punning reference to the flag. See def. 15.

With every wind he sail'd, and well could tack,
Had many pendants, but abhor'd a Jack.
Swif, Elegy on Judge Boat.

19. A farthing. [Eng. slang.]—20. A card-counter. [Eng. slang.]

The "card-counters," or, as I have heard them sometimes called by street-sellers, the "small coins," are now of a very limited sale. The slang name for these articles is Jack and "Half-Jack."

Magazine, London Labour and London Poor, I. 339.

21. A seal. Also jack. [Old slang.] [The words in several of the phrases below are very commonly joined by hyphens, as in the quotations.]—Buffalo-jack, the carangoid fish Caranx pagrus.—Builder's jack, a temporary staging put in a window; a bracket or seat used in cleaning, painting, or repairing a window. Also called window-jack.—California jack, a game of cards resembling all-four. After six cards have been dealt to each player, and the trump determined, the undealt cards are placed in a pack on the table face up, so that one card is exposed. Then the winner of each trick takes the top card into his hand, and the other players in order each one of the following cards. Every player thus continues to hold six cards until the deck is exhausted. Jack and low count each for the player who takes it. The game is esteemed one of the best for two players. Chasap Jack. See cheap.—Cornish jack, the chough or Cornish crow, Pyrrhonorhynchus graeculus.—Every man jack, every one without exception. [Slang.]

Sir Pitt had numbered every man Jack of them.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, viii.

Send them (the children) all to bed; every man Jack of them!
C. Reade, Fog Womington, viii.

Five-fingered jack. See five-fingered.—Goggle-eyed jack. See goggle-eyed.—Great jack, a large bottle for liquor: same as bombard.—Hickory-jack. (a) Same as jack, § (d). (b) The hickory-shed, Pomolobus medicaria.—Hydraulic jack. See hydraulic.—Jack at a pinch. (a) A person who is employed or selected for some purpose as a necessity, or for want of a better; one who serves merely as a stopgap: sometimes used as an adverbial compound. Hence—(b) A poor itinerant clergyman who has no cure, but officiates for a fee in any church when required. [Prov. Eng.]—Jack in office, an upstart official; a public officer who gives himself airs.—Jack in the green, a boy dressed with green garlands, or inclosed in a framework of leaves, for the May-day sports and dances. Also Jack-a-green. [Eng.]—Jack in the water, a man who makes himself useful about wharves and docks, in landing passengers, etc., and in doing odd jobs. Also called jack. [Eng. slang.]—Jack o' Bedlam. See Bedlam.—Jack of all trades, a person who can turn his hand to any kind of work or business: often implying that he is not thoroughly expert in any one thing, as expressed in the proverb, "Jack of all trades, master of none."—Jack of Dover, a dish of some kind.

Many a jacke of Dovere hastow sold,
That hath been twice hot and twice cold.
Chaucer, Prologue to Cook's Tale, l. 23.

[It is sometimes explained as the fish called sole, and sometimes as a dish warmed up a second time.]—Jack of straw. Same as jackstraw, l.

I hate him,
And would be married sooner to a monkey,
Or to a Jack of Straw, than such a juggler.
Plancher, Wildgoose Chase, iii. 1.

Jack of the clock. See def. c.—Jack of the dust, a man on board a United States man-of-war appointed to assist the paymaster's yeoman in serving out provisions and other stores.—Jack on both sides, a man who sides first with one party and then with another.

Header, John Newler, who erst plaid
The Jack on both sides, here is laid.
Witt's Recreations (1654).

Jack out of doors, a homeless person; a vagrant.

Neque pessimus neque primus: not altogether Jack out of doors, and yet no gentleman.
Wittale, Dict. (ed. 1634), p. 569.

Jack out of office, a discharged official.

For liberalitie, who was wont to be a principall officer, is touned Jacke out of office, and others appointed to have the custodie.
Ricche his Farewell to Militarie Profession, 1581. (Nares.)

Jack's land, in old English manors and village communities, odds and ends of land in open fields, lying between the allotments to tenants.—Jack Tar. See def. 4.—Round jack, in hat-making, a stand for holding a hat while the brim is trimmed to shape.—To draw the jacks in sweating. See draw.—Union jack. See union.—Yellow jack, yellow fever. [Slang.]

jack¹ (jak), v. [jack¹, n., 11.] I. trans. 1. To operate on with a jack; lift with a jack.

As soon as it [the bridge] reaches its position, it is jaeked up.
Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 31.

2. To hunt with a jack. See jack¹, n., 11 (j). II. trans. To use a jack in hunting or fishing; seek or find game by means of a jack.

The streams are not suited to the floating or jaeking with a lantern in the bow of the canoe.
T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 168.

jack² (jak), n. [ME. jake, jakke, jak, a jack, = OD. jakke, D. jak = Sw. jakka = Dan. jakke

= G. jake, a jacket, jerkin, < OF. jaque, jacque, jaog, jakue, jake, dial. (Norm.) jake = Sp. jaco

= It. giacco, formerly giacco, a jack or coat of mail. Origin obscure; perhaps, like jack¹ in other material senses, ult. < OF. Jaque, Jacques, a personal name: see jack¹. Dim. jacket, q. v.] A coat of fence of cheap make worn by foot-soldiers, yeomen, and the like. The word is used indiscriminately for the brigandine, gambeson, and scale-coat, and is, in short, applied to any defensive garment made of two folds of leather or linen with something between them. (Buryse and de Comm.) Also, a leather garment upon which rings, etc., were sewed to form a coat of fence. Compare lorica, 2.

Jack. (From Viollet-le-Duc's "Dict. du Mobilier français.")

But with the trusty bow,
And jacks well quilted with soft wool, they came to Troy.
Chapman, Iliad, iii.

The Bill-men come to blows, that, with the cruel thwacks
The ground lay strew'd with mail and shreds of tattered jacks.
Drayton, Polyolbion, xlii. 166.

To be upon one's jacks¹, to attack one violently.

• To uloclar, I will be revenged on thee: I will sit on thy skirts; I will be upon your jacks for it.
Terence in English (1614).

My lord lay in Morton College; and, as he was going to parliament one morning on foot, a man in a fair and civil outward habit met him, and jessed him. And, though I was at that time behind his lordship, I saw it not; for, if I had, I should have been upon his jack.
A. Wilson, Autobiography.

jack³ (jak), n. [Englished from jak, jaca: see jaca-tree.] 1. Same as jack-tree.—2. The fruit of the jack-tree: same as jackfruit. See jack-tree.

The monstrous jack that in its eccentric bulk contains a whole magazine of tastes and smells.
P. Robinson, In my Indian Garden, p. 49.

Jack⁴ (jak), n. [Abbr. of Jacqueminot, a florist's name for a favorite crimson variety of tea-rose.] A Jacqueminot rose. Also Jacque.

"The roses that —" "What roses?" said Mrs. Van Corlear. "Why, I ordered some Jacks this morning. Didn't they come?"
Scribner's Mag., IV. 787.

Jack-adams (jak'ad'amz), n. [Jack Adams, a proper name.] A fool. Brown, Works, II. 220. [Prov. Eng.]

jackadandy (jak'a-dan'di), n.; pl. jackadandies (-dis). [jack¹ + -a- (a meaningless syllable) + dandy¹.] A little foppish fellow; a dandiprat. Vandrungh, Confederacy.

Jack-a-green (jak'a-grën'), n. Same as Jack in the green (which see, under jack¹).

jackal (jak'al), n. [Formerly jackall, sometimes accom. jack-oall; < OF. jakal, jakal, F. chacal (> It. sciacal = G. Dan. Sw. schukal = D. jakhals) = Sp. chacal = Pg. chacal, jacaal = Turk. çakâl, < Ar. jaqâl (usually waqî or ibn awî), < Pers. shaghal, a jackal; cf. Skt. grigala, a jackal, a fox.] 1. A kind of wild dog somewhat resembling a fox, which inhabits Asia and Africa; one of several species of old-world fox-like Canids, of the genus Canis, as C. aureus of Asia, or C. anthus of Africa. The jackals are of gregarious habits, hunting in packs, rarely attacking the larger quadrupeds, lurking during the day, and coming out at night with dismal cries. They feed on the remnants of the lion's prey, dead carcases, and the smaller animals and poultry. The jackal interbreeds with the common dog, and may be domesticated. The wild jackal emits a highly offensive odor. From the popular but erroneous notion that the jackal hunts up the prey for the king of beasts, he has been called the "lion's provider."

Black-jacked jackal (Canis mesomelas).

The inhabitants do nightly house their goats and sheep for fear of the jaccais.
Sandys, Traveller, p. 160.

(Curral) is one of the few spots in Europe where the jackal still lingers.
E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 304.

Hence—2. Any one who does dirty work for another; one who meanly serves the purpose of another.

He's the man who has all your bills; Levy is only his jackal.
Bulwer, My Novel, ix. 12.

jackal-buzzard (jak'al-bus'ård), n. A book-name of Buteo jackal, an African buzzard.

jackalegs, jack-o'-legs (jak'a-legz), n. [Of. jack-tag-knife, under jack-knife, and jackteleg.] 1. A large clasp-knife.—2. A tall, long-legged man.

Jack-a-Lent (jak'a-lent), n. See Jack-o'-Lent.

jackals-kost (jak'al-köst), n. [Jackal + G. Kost, food (f).] A plant, Hydnora africana, of the natural order Cytinaceae. It bears, half-buried in the earth, a single large flower, sessile upon the rootstock and having a thick fungus-like perianth. It is parasitic upon the roots of succulent euphorbias and similar plants. It occurs, with other species, in South Africa, where it is said to be roasted and eaten by the natives.

jackanape (jak'a-näp), n. See jackanapes.

jackanapes (jak'a-näps), n. [For orig. Jack o' apes, Jack of apes, i. e. orig., it is supposed, a man who exhibited performing apes; hence a vague term of contempt, the stress of thought being laid on apes, whence the occasionally assumed singular jackanape, and the use of the word in the simple meaning ape. Cf. the later imitated forms, johannapes and jane-of-apes.] 1. A monkey; an ape.

With signs and profers, with nodding, boozing, and mowing, as it were Jack-an-apes.
Tyndale, Works, p. 123.

If I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and slit a jack-an-apes, never off.
Shak., Hen. V., v. 2, 148.

Hence—2. A coxcomb; a ridiculous, impertinent fellow.

I have myself caught a young jackanapes with a pair of silver fringed gloves, in the very fact.
Spectator, No. 311.

None of your sneering, pappy! no grinning, jackanapes! Sheridan, The Rivals, l. 1.

3. In mining, the small guide-pulleys of a whim.

jack-ape (jak'äp), n. A male ape.

A great jack-ape of the forest.
The Spectator.

jack-arch (jak'ärch), n. An arch whose thickness is of only one brick.

jackare, n. See jacare, l.

jackaroo (jak'a-rö'), n. [Australian.] A new chum; a new arrival from England in the bush. [Slang, Australia.]

The young Jackaroo woke early next morning and went to look around him.
A. C. Grant, Bush Life in Queensland, I. 53.

jackash (jak'ash), n. [Appar. Amer. Ind.] The mink or vison of North America, Mustelus vison.

jackass (jak'äs), n. [jack¹ + ass¹.] 1. A male ass; a jack.

A jackass heehaws from the rack,
The passive oxen gazing.
Timonyon, Amphion.

Hence—2. A very stupid or ignorant person: used in contempt.—3. Naut., same as hawse-bag.—Jackass copal, chacass copal. See copal.—Laughing jackass, the giant kingfisher, Dacelo gigas: so called from its discordant outcry. See out under Dacelo. Also called willers' clock. [Australia.]

jackass-brig (jak'äs-brig), n. A brig with square topsail and topgallantsail instead of a gaff-top-sail.

jackass-deer (jak'äs-dër), n. An African antelope, the singing, Kobus singens.

jackass-fish (jak'äs-fish), n. A fish of the family Cirrhitidae, Chilodactylus macropterus, inhabiting the Australian seas, attaining a length of nearly 2 feet, and esteemed as one of the best food-fishes of the country.

jackassism (jak'äs-izm), n. [jackass + -ism.] Stupidity. [Rare.]

Calling names, whether done to attack or to back a schism, is, Miss, believe me, a great piece of jack-ass-ism.
Berham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 222.

jackass-penguin (jak'äs-pen'gwin), n. A sailors' name of the common penguin, Spheniscus demersus. See penguin.

jackass-rabbit (jak'äs-rab'it), n. Same as jack-rabbit.

Our conversation was cut short by a jackass-rabbit bounding from under our horses' feet.
Audubon, Quadrupeds of N. A., II. 93.

jack-at-the-hedge (jak'at-thë-hej'), n. The plant Galium aparine, commonly called cleos- ers, which grows in copses and hedges. [Prov. Eng.]

jack-back (jak'bak), n. 1. In browning, same as hop-back.—2. A tank for the cooled wort used in the manufacture of vinegar.

jack-baker (jak'bä'ker), n. The red-backed shrike, Lanius collurio. [Prov. Eng.]

jack-bird (jak'bärd), n. [So called in imitation of its cry: cf. chack-bird.] The fieldfare, Turdus pilaris. C. Swainson.

jack-block (jak'blok), n. Naut., a block used in sending topgallant-yards up and down, placed at the mast-head for the yard-rope to reeve through.

jack-boot (jak'böt), n. [jack + boot.] A kind of large boot reaching up over the knee, and serving as defensive armor for the leg, introduced in the seventeenth century; now, a similar boot reaching above the knee, worn by fishermen and others. The jack-boots of postillions, and those worn by mounted soldiers and even officers of rank, were of exaggerated weight and solidity throughout the seventeenth century and until late in the eighteenth. It was difficult to walk in them.

Then I cast loose my buff-coat, each holster let fall,
Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all.

Browning, How they Brought the Good News from Ghent to Aix.

About this time [1690] . . . jack-boots resembling those that had formed a part of the military appointments of the troopers in the civil war came into fashion.

Jack-boot, time of James II.

Encyc. Brit., VI. 474.

jack-by-the-hedge (jak'bi-thē-hej'), n. One of several plants. (a) Stemmbrium Allaria, a plant of the mustard family growing under hedges. (b) Lychnis diurna. (c) Tragopogon pratensis. (d) Linaria minor. [Prov. Eng.]

jack-cap (jak'kap), n. A leather helmet.

The several Insurance Offices . . . have each of them a certain set of men whom they keep in constant pay, and furnish with tools proper for their work, and to whom they give Jack Caps of leather, able to keep them from hurt, if brick or timber, or anything not of too great a bulk, should fall upon them.

Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, II. 148.

jack-chain (jak'chän), n. A kind of small chain each link of which is formed of a single piece of wire bent into two loops resembling the figure of eight. The loops are in planes at right angles with each other, so that if one loop is viewed in full outline, the other will be seen edgewise. The links are not welded. The chain takes its name from being used on the wheels of kitchen-jacks.

jack-cross-tree (jak'krös'trü), n. Same as jack, 16. Dana.

jack-curlew (jak'ker'lü), n. 1. The European whimbrel, Numenius phaeopus. Montagu.—2. The Hudsonian or lesser American curlew, Numenius hudsonicus. Coues.

jackdaw (jak'dä), n. 1. The common daw of Europe, Corvus monedula, an oscine passerine bird of the family Corvidæ. It is one of the smallest of crows, being but 13 inches long. It is of a black color, with a blue or metallic reflection. Jackdaws in flocks frequent church steeples, deserted chimneys, old towers and ruins, where they build their nests. They may readily be tamed and taught to imitate the sounds of words. They are common throughout Europe.

Jackdaw (Corvus monedula).

When nobody's dreaming of any such thing,
That little Jackdaw hops off with the ring!
Burham, Ingoldby Legends, I. 211.

2. The boat-tailed grackle, Quiscalus major, a large long-tailed blackbird of the family Agelaiidae. Coues. [Southern U. S.]

jackdog, n. A dog: used in contempt.

Scurry jack-dog print! Shak, M. W. of W., II. 2, 65.

jack (jak), a. [jack (V) + -ed.] Spavined. Halliw. [Prov. Eng.]

jackeen (ja-kén'), n. [jack + appar. dim. -een.] A drunken, dissolute fellow. S. C. Hall. [Ireland.]

jack-engine (jak'en'jin), n. In coal-mining, a donkey-engine; a small engine employed in sinking a shallow shaft. [Eng.]

jack (jak'er), n. [jack + -er.] One who hunts game with a jack.

jacket (jak'et), n. [OF. jaquette, f., jaquet, jaquet, m. (= Sp. jaqueta = It. giacchetta), a jacket, dim. of jaque, > E. jak, q. v.] 1. A light jacket: a garment having but slight value as a defense against weapons.—2. A short coat or body-garment; any garment for the body coming not lower than the hips. Jackets for boys throughout the first half of the nineteenth century came only to the waist, whether buttoned up or left open in front, and a similar garment is still worn by men in certain trades or occupations. Short outer garments designed for protection from the weather and worn by men of rough occupations are called by this name: as, a monkey-jacket. Compare zouave-jacket, smoking-jacket.

All in a woodman's jacket he was clad,
Of Lincoln green, belayed with silver lace.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. II. 5.

Their [sheriffs'] officers were clothed in jackets of worsted, or say partly-coloured, but differing from those belonging to the mayor, and from each other.

Stow, quoted in Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 465.

3. A waistcoat or vest. [Local, U. S.]—4. Something designed to be fastened about or over the body for some other purpose than that of clothing: as, a strait-jacket, or a swimming-jacket.—5. Clothing or covering placed around a cylindrical or other vessel of any kind, as a pipe, a cannon, a steam-boiler, a smoke-stack where it passes through the deck, etc., to give greater power of resistance, to prevent escape of heat by radiation, etc. Felt, wool, mineral-wool, paper, wood lagging, asbestos, and many other materials are in common use for jacketing steam-cylinders and pipes, and pipes, tanks, etc., in which it is desirable to prevent freezing. Air-compressor cylinders are usually supplied with water-jackets for cooling the cylinders, which would otherwise become very hot from heat absorbed from the air, the work of compression being converted into heat in the compressed air, which thus acquires a high temperature. These cylinders are enclosed in metal shells which leave an annular space between them and the cylinder, and through this space cool water is kept constantly flowing by the aid of a pump or other device. When a steam-cylinder is thus inclosed, and the annular space is supplied with live steam, the arrangement is called a steam-jacket. The condensation which would otherwise occur in the cylinder during the periods of induction and expansion is thus prevented, and a considerable economy is effected. See cut under air-engine.

As regards construction and contour, they [Krupp guns] are built upon the model adopted in 1873; the tube, without reinforcement, is encircled by a single band or jacket (Mantel, in German), shrunk on, and carrying trunnions and furniture.

Michalis, tr. of Monthaye's Krupp and De Bange, p. 24.

6. A folded paper or open envelop containing an official document, on which is indorsed an order or other direction respecting the disposition to be made of the document, memoranda respecting its contents, dates of reception and transmission, etc. [U. S.]—7. A young seal: so called from the rough fur. [Newfoundland.]—Cardigan jacket. See cardigan.—Cork jacket. See cork.—Plaster jacket. See plaster.—To dust one's jacket. See dust.—To line one's jacket, to fill one's stomach with food or drink. Nares.

Il s'accroûte bien. He stuffs himself soundly, hee knes his jacket thoroughly with liquor. Cotgrave.

jacket (jak'et), v. t. [jacket, n.] 1. To cover with or inclose in a jacket: as, to jacket a steam-cylinder, etc.; to jacket a document. See jacket, n., 5 and 6.

The cylinders are steam-jacketed, and also clothed in felt and wood. Hankins, Steam Engine, § 582.

Another record was made in the book of the office of letters received and jacketed. The American, May 16, 1888.

2. To beat; thrash. [Colloq.]

jacketing (jak'et-ing), n. [jacket + -ing.] 1. The material, as cloth, felt, etc., from which a jacket is made.—2. A jacket; a cover or protection to an inanimate object, as the felt covering of a steam-pipe.—3. A thrashing. [Colloq.]

jackey, n. See jacky.

jack-fish (jak'fish), n. Same as jack, 9 (a) and (d). [Virginia.]

jack-fishing (jak'fish'ing), n. 1. Fishing for the pike or jack. [Virginia.]—2. Fishing by means of a jack; jacking.

jack-flag (jak'flag), n. A flag hoisted at the jack-staff.

jack-fool, n. [ME. jakke foole.] A fool.

"Go fro the wyndow, Jakke fool," she sayde.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 522.

jack-frame (jak'främ), n. In cotton-manuf., a device which imparts a twist to the roving as delivered from the rollers of the drawing-frame. It consists of a revolving frame carrying a bobbin, the axis of which is at right angles with the axis of rotation of the frame, and upon which the roving is wound, the revolution of the frame twisting the roving, and the bobbin winding on simultaneously. This device was once highly esteemed, but is now nearly or quite out of use. Also called jack-in-a-box.

jack-friar, n. A friar: in contempt.

I liked to have Sampson near me, for a more amusing
Jack-friar never walked in caseock.
Thackeray, Virginians, IV. 91.

jackfruit (jak'fröt), n. [jack + frutt.] The fruit of the jack-tree.

The jack fruit is at this day in Travancore one of the staples of life.
Pyle and Burnell.

jack-hare (jak'här'), n. A male hare.

Old Tiney, surliest of his kind,
Who, nursed with tender care,
And to domestic bounds confined,
Was still a wild Jack-hare.
Cotgrave, Epitaph on a Hare.

jack-horn (jak'hörn), n. The European heron, Ardea cinerea. [Prov. Eng.]

jack-hole (jak'höl), n. In coal-mining, a bolt-hole. [Eng.]

jack-hunting (jak'hun'ting), n. The use of the jack in hunting for game by night; hunting by means of a jack. See jack, n., 11 (j).

jack-in-a-bottle (jak'in-a-böt'l), n. The bottle-tit or long-tailed titmouse: in allusion to its pendulous nest.

jack-in-a-box, jack-in-the-box (jak'in-a-boks', -thē-boks'), n. 1. A kind of toy, consisting of a box out of which, when the lid is unfasted, a figure springs.

A collection of bell-knobs which will bring up any particular clerk when wanted with the suddenness of a Jack-in-the-box. Orenville Murray, Round about France, p. 265.

2. A street peddler who sells his wares from a temporary stall or box.

Here and there a Jack in a Box, like a Parson in a Pulpit, selling Cures for your Corns, Glass Eyes for the Blind, Ivory teeth for Broken Mouths, and Spectacles for the weak-sighted.
Ward, The London Spy.

3. A gambling sport in which some article placed on a stick set upright in a hole is pitched at with sticks. If the article when struck falls clear of the hole, the thrower wins.—4. Same as jack-frame.—5. A screw-jack used to raise and stow cargo.—6. A large wooden male screw turning in a female screw, which forms the upper part of a strong wooden box. It is used, by means of levers passing through it, as a press in packing, and for other purposes.—7. A plant of the genus Nerandia (H. Sonora), which bears a large nut that rattles in its pericarp when shaken.—8. A hermit-crab, as Eupagurus pollicaris: so called by fishermen.—Jack-in-the-box gear, a system of toothed-wheel mechanism analogous to or identical with the mechanism by which the motions of the jack-frame are obtained—namely, the rotation of a wheel on an axis which simultaneously moves radially around a fixed center.

jacking (jak'ing), n. [Verbal n. of jack, v.] The act or method of using the jack; use of the jack in hunting or fishing: as, jacking for eels. See jack, n., 11 (j).

jacking-machine (jak'ing-mä-shēn'), n. A machine designed to give to leather the appearance termed "pebbled."

jack-in-the-box, n. See jack-in-a-box.

jack-in-the-bush (jak'in-thē-bush'), n. 1. A plant, Stemmbrium Allaria. [Prov. Eng.]—2. A plant, Cotyledon Umbellata, of the order Crasulaceæ, abounding on rocks and walls in England.

jack-in-the-pulpit (jak'in-thē-pül'pit), n. The Indian turnip, Arisæma triphyllum, of the natural order Araceæ: so called from its upright spadix surrounded and overshadowed by the spathe. See Araceæ.

jack-jump-about (jak'jump-a-bout'), n. One of several plants. (a) Angelica nigra. (b) Egopodium Podagraria. (c) Lotus corniculatus. [Prov. Eng.]

Jack Ketch (jak kech), n. [Said to be from an executioner of this name (Jack or John Ketch) in the time of James II. (See quot. from Macaulay.) The derivation given in the first quot. is less prob.] A public executioner or hangman.

The manor of Tyburn was formerly held by Richard Jaquette, where felons for a long time were executed; from whence we have Jack Ketch. Lloyd's MS., British Museum.

He [Monmouth] then accosted John Ketch, the executioner, a wretch who had butchered many brave and noble victims, and whose name has, during a century and a half, been vulgarly given to all who have succeeded him in his odious office.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., v., note.

its nest. See strawmoss. [Local, Eng.]—6. The blackcap, Sylvia atricapilla.—7. The narrow-leaved plantain, Plantago lanceolata. Also called rib-grass and English plantain.

jacktan (jak'tan), n. [African.] A cloth-measure of the Guinea coast, equal to twelve English feet.

jack-timber (jak'tim'ber), n. In arch., a timber in a bay which, being intercepted by some other piece, is shorter than the rest.

jack-towel (jak'tou'el), n. A coarse towel for general use, hanging from a roller.

Mr. George . . . comes back shining with yellow soap. As he rubs himself upon a large jack-towel, Phil . . . looks round. Dickens, Black House, xvi.

jack-tree (jak'trē), n. [Jaca, the native name, Englished jack, + E. tree.] The Artocarpus integrifolia, a native of the Indian archipelago. See Artocarpus and breadfruit. The fruit, called jackfruit, is two to three times as large as the true breadfruit, weighing thirty or forty pounds, and is of much coarser quality. The wood, called jack-wood, is yellow or brown, compact, and moderately hard. It takes a good polish, is largely used for general carpentry in India, and is sent to Europe for use by cabinet-makers. Also jack, jak, jaca, and jak-tree, jaca-tree.

jackweight (jak'wät), n. A fat man. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]

jack-wood (jak'wud), n. [Also jak-wood; < jack + wood.] The wood of the jack-tree. See jack-tree.

jacky (jak'i), n. [Also written jackey; appar. dim. of jack.] English gin. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]

Well, you parish bull prig, are you for lashing jackey or patting in the hum-box? Bulwer, Pelham, lxxx.

jaco, n. See jacko.

Jacob (jā'kəb), n. [A particular use of the personal name Jacob, < LL. Jacobus, < Gr. Ἰακώβος, Jacob; see jack.] The starling, Sturnus vulgaris. [Local, Eng.]

Jacobae (jak-ō-bē'), n. [NL, < LL. Jacobus, Jacob, James, with ref. to St. James, either because the plant was used for the diseases of horses, of which the saint was the patron, or because it blossoms near his day.] A common name of Senecio Jacobaea, or ragwort.—Purple Jacobaea, the Senecio elegans, or purple ragwort, from the Cape of Good Hope.

Jacobaea-lily (jak-ō-bē'-lil'i), n. A plant of the order Amarylloideae (Sprekelia formosissima).

The leaves are from the bulbous, which sends up a scape bearing a single large blossom, whose deep-red perianth is somewhat 2-lipped, its three upper divisions being curved upward, while the three lower are twisted about the stem and style. It is native in Mexico, and cultivated elsewhere.

Jacobean, Jacobman (ja-kō-bē-an, jak-ō-bē-an), a. [JL. Jacobus, < Jacobus, Jacob, James; see Jacobus, jack.] Pertaining or relating to a person named Jacobus, Jacob, or James, specifically to James I., King of England, 1603–25 (who was also James VI. of Scotland from 1567), or to his times; also, in occasional use, to James II., King of England (1685–88, died 1701); as (with reference to the former), Jacobean architecture or literature. Jacobean architecture differed from the Elizabethan chiefly in having a greater admixture of debased Italian forms.

The Jacobean and Civil War poetry is prolific in love ditties, war songs, pastorals, allegories, religious poetry. Edinburgh Rev., CLXIII. 473.

Their [Wykeham's and Waynflete's] successors have the sense to turn away from Buckingham and Jacobean vagaries, and to build in plain English still. Contemporary Rev., LI. 610.

Jacobian (ja-kō-bi-an), a. [JL. Jacobus, Jacob, James, + -an.] Same as Jacobean.

Jacobian (ja-kō-bi-an), a. and n. [Jacobus (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Pertaining to or named after K. G. J. Jacob (1804–51), professor of mathematics at Königsberg in Prussia.—Jacobian ellipsoid of equilibrium, a heavy rotating fluid ellipsoid in equilibrium although having three unequal axes.—Jacobian function. See function.—Jacobian system of differential equations, a complete system of the form

$$\frac{\partial \phi}{\partial x_k} + \sum_{i=1}^n x_i \frac{\partial \phi}{\partial x_{k+i}} = 0$$

($k = 1, 2, \dots, m; i = m+1, \dots, m+n$).

II. n. A functional determinant whose several constituents in any one line are first differential coefficients of one function, while its several constituents in any one column are first differential coefficients relatively to one variable. The vanishing of the Jacobian signifies that the functions are not independent. It is indicated by the letter J.

Such [functional] determinants are now more usually known as Jacobians, a designation introduced by Professor Sylvester, who largely developed their properties, and gave numerous applications of them in higher algebra, as also in curves and surfaces. Encey. Brit., XIII. 81.

Jacobin (jak-ō-bin), n. and a. [In first sense ME. Jacobin, < OF. Jacobin; in later senses < F. Jacobin = Sp. Pg. Jacobino, < ML. Jacobinus, < LL. Jacobus, Jacob, James; see jack.] I. n. 1. In France, a black or Dominican friar: so called from the church of St. Jacques (Jacobus), in which they were first established in Paris. See Dominican.

Now frere menour, now Jacobyn. Rom. of the Rose, l. 6332.

2. A member of a club or society of French revolutionists organized in 1789 under the name of Society of Friends of the Constitution, and called Jacobins from the Jacobin convent in Paris in which they met. The club originally included many of the moderate leaders of the revolution, but the more violent members speedily gained the control. It had branches in all parts of France, and was all-powerful in determining the course of government, especially after Robespierre became its leader, supporting him in the measures which led to the reign of terror. Many of its members were executed with Robespierre in July, 1794, and the club was suppressed in November.

Itinerant revolutionary tribunals, composed of trusty Jacobins, were to move from department to department; and the guillotine was to travel in their train. Macaulay, Barbère.

Hence—3. A violently radical politician; one who favors extreme measures in behalf of popular government; a radical democrat: formerly much used, often inappropriately, as a term of reproach in English and American politics.

There are two varieties of Jacobin, the hysterical Jacobin and the pedantic Jacobin; we possess both, and both are dangerous. M. Arnold, Nineteenth Century, XIX. 664.

4. [J. o.] An artificial variety of the domestic pigeon, whose neck-feathers form a hood.

The Jacobin is of continental origin, and has its name from the fancied resemblance in the hooded round white head to the owl and shaven head of the friar. The Century, XXXII. 102.

5. [J. o.] In ornith., a humming-bird of the genus Heliothrix, as H. auritus.

II. a. Same as Jacobitic.

They must know that France is formidable, not only as she is France, but as she is Jacobin France. Burke, A Regicide Peace.

Giles in return derided Harper as a turn-coat, who, though now so ready to fight France, was once a member of a Jacobin society, and in 1791 and 1792 a declaimer for the rights of man. Schouler, Hist. U. S., I. 385.

Jacobinia (jak-ō-bin'i-y), n. [NL. (Stefano Moricand, about 1846), < Jacobin.] A genus containing about 30 species of shrubs and herbs of the natural order Acanthaceae, native in tropical and subtropical America, frequently cultivated for ornament. The corolla has an elongated tube, with the lips long and narrow, the lower 2-lobed. The flowers are large, variously colored, yellow, red, or orange, or rose-purple, and usually disposed in dense ter-minial clusters or in axillary fascicles. The leaves are opposite and entire.

Jacobinic (jak-ō-bin'ik), a. [= Sp. Jacobinico; < Jacobin + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or resembling the Jacobins of France; turbulent; discontented with government; radically democratic; revolutionary. Also Jacobin, Jacobinical.

Jacobinical (jak-ō-bin'i-kal), a. [Jacobinico + -al.] Same as Jacobinic.

They arose from her [Austria's] own ill policy, which dismantled all her towns, and discontented all her subjects by Jacobinical innovations. Burke, Policy of the Allies.

The triumph of Jacobinical principles was now complete. Scott, Napoleon.

Jacobinically (jak-ō-bin'i-kal-i), adv. As a Jacobin, or as the Jacobins.

Jacobinism (jak-ō-bin-izm), n. [F. Jacobinisme = Sp. Jacobinismo; as Jacobin + -ism.] The principles of the Jacobins; unreasonable or violent opposition to orderly government.

For my part, without doubt or hesitation, I look upon Jacobinism as the most dreadful and most shameful evil which ever afflicted mankind. Burke, Conduct of the Minority.

But it is precisely this idea of divinely-appointed, all-pervading obligation, as the paramount law of life, that contemporary Jacobinism holds in the greatest abhorrence, and burns to destroy. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 47.

Jacobinize (jak-ō-bin-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. Jacobinized, pp. Jacobinizing. [Jacobin + -ize.] To taint with Jacobinism.

I think no country can be aggrandized whilst France is Jacobinized. Burke, Policy of the Allies.

Jacobinly (jak-ō-bin-li), adv. In the manner of Jacobins. Imp. Dict.

Jacobi's equation, unit, etc. See equation, etc.

Jacobite (jak-ō-bit'), n. and a. [= F. Jacobite = Sp. Pg. Jacobita, < ML. Jacobita, < LL. Jacobus, < Gr. Ἰακώβος, Jacob, James; see jack.] I. n. 1. In Eng. hist., a partizan or adherent of James II. after he abdicated the throne, or of his descendants. The Jacobites engaged in fruitless rebellions in 1715 and 1745, in behalf of James Francis Edward and of Charles Edward, son and grandson of James II., called the Old and the Young Pretender respectively.

"An old Forty-five man, of course!" said Fairford. "Ye may swear that," replied the Provost "as black a Jacobite as the auld leaven can make him." Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. III.

2. Eccles., one of a sect of Christians in Syria, Mesopotamia, etc., originally an offshoot of the Monophysites. The sect has its name from Jacobus Baradmaus, a Syrian, consecrated bishop of Edessa about 541. The head of the church is called the patriarch of Antioch.

Their taken here Confession right as the Jacobites don. Mandeville, Travels, p. 121.

II. a. 1. Of or pertaining to the partisans of James II. or his descendants; holding the principles of a Jacobite.

The Jacobite enthusiasm of the eighteenth century, particularly during the rebellion of 1745, afforded a theme, perhaps the finest that could be selected, for fictitious composition, founded upon real or probable incident. Scott, Redgauntlet, Int.

2. Of or pertaining to the sect of Jacobites.

In Abyssinia, Jacobite Christianity is still the prevailing religion. E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, II. 812.

In the 6th century the Jacobite revival of the Euthyrian heresy divided the Western Syrian alphabet into two branches, a northern and a southern. Isaac Taylor, The Alphabet, l. 294.

Jacobitic (jak-ō-bit'ik), a. [Jacobite + -ic.] Relating to the British Jacobites.

Jacobitical (jak-ō-bit'i-kal), a. [Jacobitic + -al.] Same as Jacobitic.

Jacobitically (jak-ō-bit'i-kal-i), adv. In a manner or spirit resembling that of the Jacobites of Great Britain.

Jacobitism (jak-ō-bit-izm), n. [Jacobite + -ism.] The principles of the British Jacobites, or of the sect of Jacobites.

The spirit of Jacobitism is not only gone, but it will appear to be gone in such a manner as to leave no room to apprehend its return. Bolingbroke, Remarks on Hist. Eng.

All fear of the Stuarts having vanished from men's minds, the Whigs no longer found it answer to accuse their opponents of Jacobitism. Quarterly Rev., CLXIII. 284.

Jacob's-chariot (jā'kəbz-char'i-qt), n. The common monk's-hood, Aconitum Napellus. [Prov. Eng.]

Jacobsite (jā'kəb-zit), n. [Jakobs (berg) (see def.) + -ite.] An oxid of manganese and iron related to magnetite and belonging to the spinel group, found at Jakobsberg in Sweden.

Jacob's-ladder (jā'kəbz-lad'er), n. [In allusion to the ladder seen by the patriarch Jacob in a dream (Gen. xxviii. 12).] 1. Naut., a rope lad-

Jacobean Architecture.
Branchill House, Hants, England.

Jacobin Pigeon.

der with wooden steps or spokes by which to go aloft. Also called jack-ladder.—2. A common garden-plant of the genus Polemonium, the P. carolinum, belonging to the natural order Polemoniaceae: so called from the ladder-like arrangement of its leaves and leaflets. It is a favorite cottage-garden plant, and is found in temperate and northern latitudes in most parts of the world. It grows tall and erect, about 1½ feet high, with alternate pinnate, smooth, bright-green leaves, and terminal corymbs of handsome blue (sometimes white) flowers. The name is sometimes locally applied to several other plants.

3. A toy in which pieces of cardboard, wood, glass, or other material are so connected, one above another, with strings or tapes, that when the highest one is inverted those below it invert themselves in succession.

Jacobson's nerve. See nerve.

Jacob's-rod (jā'kəbz-rod'), n. A name of the plant Asphodelus luteus. [Prov. Eng.]

Jacob's-staff (jā'kəbz-stāf'), n. [So called in allusion to the staff of the patriarch Jacob (Gen. xxxii. 10).] 1. A pilgrim's staff.

As he had travelled many a summers day
Through hilly lands of Arabia and Ynde,
And in his hand a Jacob's staff, to stay
His weary limbs upon. Spenser, F. Q., I. vi. 33.

2. A staff concealing a dagger.—3. A support for a surveyor's compass, consisting of a single leg, instead of the tripod ordinarily used. This leg is made of suitable wood, shod at one end with a stool point to be stuck in the ground, and having at the other end a brass head with a ball-and-socket joint and axis above. The advantages of the Jacob's-staff are superior lightness and portability; the disadvantages, that it cannot be used on rocks or frozen ground or on pavements.

4. A cross-staff. The cross-staff was for a long time a most important instrument for navigators, by whom, however, it does not appear ever to have been called a "Jacob's staff"; but it was so designated by the Germans (Jacob's Staff), and also in English by some landmen and poets, as shown by the annexed quotations. See quadrant.

Who, having known both of the land and sky
More than fam'd Arhimide, or Ptolomy,
Would further press, and like a palmist went,
With Jacob's staff, beyond the firmament.
Wals' Recreations, 1654. (Nares.)

Why on a sign no painter draws
The full-moon ever, but the half?
Resolve that with your Jacob's staff.
S. Butler, Hudibras, II. iii. 780.

5. The group of three stars in a straight line in the belt of Orion, also called the oil-and-yard, our Lady's wand, etc. The leader of the three is δ Orionis, a very white variable star.—6. Verbascum Thapsus, the common mullein. [Prov. Eng.]

Jacob's stone. See stone.

Jacob's-sword (jā'kəbz-sōrd'), n. Iris Pseudacorus, the yellow iris. [Prov. Eng.]

Jacobus (ja-kō'bus), n. [L.L. (NL.) Jacobus, < Gr. Ἰάκωβος, Jacob, James: see jack, Jacobin.] A gold coin of James I. of England: same as broad, 3. See cut under broad.

You have quickly learnt to count your hundred Jacobuses in English. Milton, Def. of the People of Eng., vii.

Jacoby (jak'ō-bi), n. The purple Jacobaea.

Jacoblatti, n. Chocolate.

At the entertainment of the Morocco Ambassador at the Dutchess of Portsmouth, . . . (the Moores) drank a little milk and water, but not a drop of wine; they also drank of a sorbet and Jacoblatti.
Boslyn, Diary, Jan. 24, 1682.

Jaconet (jak'ō-net), n. [Also written jaconette, jaconet, with accom. term., < F. jaconas, jaconet; origin unknown.] 1. A thin, soft variety of muslin used for making dresses, neckcloths, etc., but heavier than linen cambric, originally made in India.—2. A cotton cloth having a glazed surface on one side, usually dyed.

Jacouneet, Jagouneet, n. [OF. jaconce, jaconce, jagonce, < L. hyacinthus, hyacinth, ja-cinthe: see jaacinth.] Jaacinth, a precious stone; according to others, garnet.

Rubies there were, sapphires, Jagounees [var. ragounees].
Rom. of the Rose, l. 1117.

Maters more precious than the rhyne Jacounees, Diamonds, or rubys, or balas of the best.
Skelton, Speke, Parrot, l. 255.

Jacquard loom. See loom.
Jacque (jak), n. [Abbr. of Jacqueminot.] Same as Jack.

Jacquemontia (jak-wē-mon'ti-ā), n. [NL. (J. D. Choisy, 1834), named after Victor Jacquemont, who traveled in the West Indies early in the 19th century as a naturalist.] A genus of plants of the order Convolvulaceae, containing about 36 species, one African, the rest natives of tropical America. They are herbaceous or slightly shrubby plants, of a twining or sometimes prostrate habit. Their flowers have a bell-shaped corolla, a 2-celled and 4-ovuled ovary, and an undivided style with 2 oblong or ovate, flattened stigmas. Various species are known in cultivation.

Jacquerie (zhak-ē-rē'), n. [F., < OF. jaquerie, < Jaque, Jacques, or with addition Jacques Bonhomme, 'Goodman Jack,' a nickname for a peasant: see jack.] In French hist., a revolt of the peasants against the nobles in northern France in 1358, attended by great devastation and slaughter; hence, any insurrection of peasants.

A revolution the effects of which were to be felt at every acre in France, . . . a new Jacquerie, in which the victory was to remain with Jacques Bonhomme.
Macaulay, Mirabeau.

The emissaries of the National League similarly carry out a sort of Jacquerie, in midnight murders, in attacks on women and children, in houghing of cattle, in cropping of horses, and in brutalities which would disgrace the worst brigands.
Edinburgh Rev., CLXIII. 461.

Jacquinia (ja-kwin'-i-ā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), named after N. von Jacquin, a botanist of Vienna.] A genus of the natural order Myrsinaceae, containing 5 or 6 species of trees or shrubs, native in tropical America, and cultivated as hothouse plants. The corolla of the flowers is short-salver-shaped or bell-shaped and deeply 5-lobed. It has 5 fertile stamens inserted low down in its tube, and a sterile appendage at each of its sinuses. The thick coriaceous leaves are entire and alternate; the handsome white, yellow, or purplish flowers are disposed in terminal or axillary clusters. J. armillaris bears the names of Jo-wood and current-tree.

Jactancy (jak'tan-si), n. [= F. jactance = Pr. jactancia, jactansa = Sp. Pg. jactancia = It. giattancia, < L. jactantia, a boasting, < jactan (-t-ā), pp. of jactare, throw, refl. boast: see jactation.] A boasting. Cookerum.

Jactation (jak-tā'shon), n. [= F. jactation = Pr. jactacio, < L. jactatio (-n-), a throwing, agitation, a boasting, < jactare, throw, shake, agitate, discuss, utter, refl. boast, brag, freq. of jacere, throw, cast: see jolt. Cf. jettison, jolt-sam, ult. a doublet of jactation.] 1. The act or practice of throwing, as missile weapons.

We find weapons employed in jactation which seem unfit for such a purpose. J. Hewitt.

2. Agitation of the body from restlessness or for exercise; the exercise of riding in some kind of vehicle.

Among the Romans there were four things much in use; . . . bathing, fumigation, friction, and jactation.
Sir W. Temple, Health and Long Life.

Jactations were used . . . to relieve that intranquillity which attends most diseases, and makes men often impatient of lying still in their beds.
Sir W. Temple, Health and Long Life.

3. Boasting; bragging.
Jactatory (jak-tā'tor), n. [L. jactator, a boaster, < jactare, boast: see jactation.] A boaster or bragger. Bailey, 1731.

Jactitation (jak-ti-tā'shon), n. [= F. jactitation, < ML. jactitatio (-n-), < L. jactitare, bring forward in public, utter (not found in lit. sense), freq. of jactare, throw, shake, agitate, discuss, utter, refl. boast, brag: see jactation.] 1. A frequent tossing to and fro, especially of the body, as in great pain or high fever; restlessness.—2. Agitation.

After much dispassionate inquiry and jactitation of the argument on both sides—it had been adjudged for the negative.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv. 29.

3. Vain boasting; bragging; in common law, false boasting; insistence on a wrongful claim, to the annoyance and injury of another.—4. In Louisiana, an action to recover damages for slander of title to land, or to obtain confirmation of title by a public recognition of it.—Jactitation of marriage, in common law, a boasting or giving out by a party that he or she is married to another, whereby a common reputation of their marriage may follow.

Jaculable (jak'ū-lā-bl), a. [L. jaculabilis, that may be thrown, < jaculari, throw: see jaculate.] Capable of being or fit to be thrown or darted. Blount.

Jaculate (jak'ū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. jaculated, ppr. jaculating. [L. jaculatus, pp. of jaculari (> Pg. jaculari), throw (a javelin), hit with a javelin, < jaculum, a javelin, dart, neut. of jaculus, that is thrown, < jacere, throw: see jactation and jelt. Cf. ejaculate.] To dart; throw; hurl; launch. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Jaculation (jak'ū-lā'shon), n. [= F. jaculation = Pg. jaculatio, < L. jaculatio (-n-), < jaculari, throw: see jaculate.] The action of throwing, darting, hurling, or launching, as weapons. [Obsolete or archaic.]

So hills amid the air encounter'd hills,
Hurl'd to and fro with jaculation dire.
Milton, P. L., vi. 605.

It was well and strongly strung with thirty-six barrels of gunpowder, great and small, for the more violent jaculation, vibration, and speed of the arrows.
Sp. King, Sermon, Nov. 5, 1683, p. 20.

Jaculator (jak'ū-lā-tor), n. [= F. jaculateur, < L. jaculator, one who throws (a javelin), < jaculari, throw: see jaculate.] 1. One who jaculates or darts.—2. In schol., the darter or archer-fish.

Jaculatores (jak'ū-lā-tō-rēs), n. pl. [NL., pl. of L. jaculator: see jaculator.] In Macgillivray's system of ornithology, the darters. See darter, 3 (b).

Jaculatory (jak'ū-lā-tō-ri), a. [= F. jaculatoire = Sp. Pg. It. jaculatorio, < L. jaculatorius, of or for throwing, < jaculator, one who throws: see jaculator.] 1. Darting or throwing out suddenly; cast, shot out, or launched suddenly.—2. Uttered brokenly or in short sentences; ejaculatory.

Jaculatory prayers are the nearest dispositions to contemplation.
Spiritual Conflict (1661), p. 81.

Jad (jad), n. [E. dial., also jed, jud, judd; origin obscure.] 1. In coal-mining, a long gash cut under a mass of coal in "holing," "kiving," "benching," or "undercutting" it, so that it may afterward fall, or be wedged or blasted down.—2. In quarrying, a long deep hole made in quarrying soft rock for building purposes, whether the gash is horizontal or vertical.

The jadding pick . . . serves for cutting in long and deep hollows, jads, or jads, for the purpose of detaching large blocks of stone from their natural beds.
Morgans, Mining Tools, p. 148.

Jad (jad), v. t.; pret. and pp. jadded, ppr. jadding. [Jad, n.] In coal-mining and quarrying, to undercut; form a jad in.

When the face of any heading from which the stone is to be worked away has been properly jadded under the roof, the side saw-cuts are proceeded with.
Morgans, Mining Tools, p. 158.

Jadder (jad'er), n. [Jad + -er.] A stone-cutter. [Prov. Eng.]

Jadding-pick (jad'ing-pik), n. [Cf. jedding-ar.] In coal-mining and quarrying, a form of pick with which a jad is cut. The helves range from four to six feet in length, the tools being made in sets, to be used one after another as the depth of the jad increases. The same tool is used, and with the same name, in quarrying the soft freestones of England, as for instance the Bath stone.

Jaddis (jad'is), n. [E. Ind.] In Ceylon, a priest of the evil geni or devils, officiating in a kind of chapel, called jacco, or devils' house.

Jade (jād), n. [The initial consonant is prop. Teut. j = y, conformed to F. j; = E. dial. (North.) *yau*d, Sc. yade, *yau*d, yad, a mare, an old mare; < ME. jade (MS. Iade), a jade, < Icel. jald = Sw. dial. jālda, a mare.] 1. A mare, especially an old mare; any old or worn-out horse; a mean or sorry nag.

Be blithe, although thou ryde vpon a Jade.
What though thin horse be bothe foul and lene?
If he will serve thee, rek not a bene.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, Prolog., l. 46.

There is one sect of religious men in Cairo, called Chenias, which live vpon horse-flesh; therefore are lame Jades bought and set vp a fattening.
Peregrin, Pilgrimage, p. 500.

He was as lean, and as lank, and as sorry a Jade as Humility herself could have bewitred.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, i. 10.

This same philosophy is a good horse in the stable, but an arrant Jade on a journey.
Goldsmith, Good-natured Man, l. 1.

Hence—2. A mean or worthless person, originally applied to either sex, but now only to a woman; a wench; a hussy; a quean: used opprobriously.

And thus the villaine would the world perwade
To provide attempts that may presume too high,
But earthly jotes will make him prove a Jade,
When vertue speaks of Ioue's divinity.
Brown, Pilgrimage to Paradise, p. 10.

She shines the first of battered Jades. Swift.

There are perverse Jades that fall to men's lots, with whom it requires more than common proficiency in philosophy to be able to live.
Scott, Spectator, No. 478.

2. A young woman: used in irony or playfully.

You now and then see some handsome young jades. Addison.

Fie! Nathan! fie! to let an artful jade
The close recesses of thine heart invade.

Crabbe, Pariah Register.

jade¹ (jād), v.: pret. and pp. jaded, ppr. jading. [jade², n. The like-seeming Sp. jadeador, jadeador, pant, palpitate, is quite different, being connected ult. with jade³.] I. trans. 1. To treat as a jade; kick or spurn.

The honourable blood of Lancaster Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 1, 52.

I can but faintly endure the savour of his breath, at my table, that shall thus jade me for my courtesies.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iv. 4.

2. To reduce to the condition of a jade; tire out; ride or drive without sparing; overdrive: as, to jade a horse.

It is a dull thing to tire, and, as we say now, to jade anything too far.
Bacon, Discourse.

Mark but the King, how pale he looks with fear.
Oh! this same whomson conscience, how it jades us!
Beau. and Fl., Philastor, i. 1.

3. To weary or fatigue, in general.

The mind once jaded by an attempt above its power is very hardly brought to exert its force again.
Locke.

Jaded horsemen from the west
At evening to the castle pressed.
Scott, L. of the L., v. 33.

II. intrans. To become weary; fall; give out.

They are promising in the beginning, but they fall and jade and tire in the prosecution.
Smith, Sermons.

jade² (jād), n. [E. jade, < Sp. jade, jade, orig. "piedra de yada, pierre bonne contre le colique" (Sobrino, Diccionario, ed. 1754), a name given (like the later equiv. nephrite, q. v.) because the stone was supposed to cure pain in the side: Sp. pieira, < L. petra, stone; do, of; yada, now spelled yada, the side, flank, pain in the side, colic; < L. as if iliata, < ilium, ileum, usually in pl. ilia, the flank, the groin: see iliac.] A tough compact stone, varying from nearly white to pale or dark green in color, much used in prehistoric times for weapons and utensils, and highly prized, especially in the East, for ornamental carvings. Two distinct minerals are included under the name. One of these is nephrite, a closely compact variety of hornblende (amphibole), classed with tremolite when nearly white and with actinolite when of a distinct green color; it is fusible with some difficulty, and has a specific gravity of from 2.9 to 3. The other is jadeite, which is a silicate of aluminium and sodium, analogous in formula to spodumene; a variety of a dark-green color and containing iron has been called chloromelanite. It is more fusible than nephrite, and has a higher specific gravity, viz. 3.3. This is the kind of jade most highly valued. Its translucency and color, varying from a creamy white through different shades of delicate green, give great beauty to the vases and other objects carved from it. The Chinese, who have long made use of jade for rings, bracelets, vases, etc., call it yü or yü-shih (jade-stone). A variety of jadeite having a pale-green color is called by them fei tsui, or kingfisher-plumage. The best-known locality from which jade has been obtained is the Kara-Kash valley in eastern Turkestan. Jade implements have been found in considerable numbers among the relics of the Swiss lake-dwellers, but it is generally believed that the material was brought from the East; they are also found in New Zealand, in the islands of the Pacific, in Central America, Alaska, and elsewhere, and the facts of their distribution are of great interest in ethnography. (See under az.) The word jade is sometimes extended to embrace other minerals of similar characters and hence admitting of like use, as soapstone (saponite), the jade of De Saussure and jade tenax of Hally, fibrolite, a kind of serpentine, and others. Also called az-stone, and by the Maoris of New Zealand pounamu.—Oceanic jade, a name given by Damour to a fibrous variety of jade found in New Caledonia and in the Marquesas Islands, having a specific gravity of 3.18, and differing from ordinary nephrite in the proportion of lime and magnesia which it contains. Shen. Brit., XIII. 540.

jadedly (jā'ded-lī), adv. In a jaded manner; wearily.

Kilgore came and dropped jadedly into a chair.
The Money-Makers, p. 282.

jade-green (jād'grēn), n. In decorative art, especially in ceramics, a grayish-green color thought to resemble that of the superior kinds of jade.

jadeite (jā'dit), n. [jade² + -ite².] See jade².
jadery (jā'der-ī), n. [jade² + -ery.] The tricks of a jade or a vicious horse.

Pig-like he whines
At the sharp ravel, which he frets at rather Than any jot obeys: seeks all foul means Of boisterous and rough jadery, to dis-seat
His lord, that kept it bravely.
Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, v. 4.

jadiah (jā'dish), a. [jade² + -iah¹.] 1. Skittish; vicious: said of a horse.

So, in this mongrel state of ours,
The rabble are the supreme powers,
That horsed us on their backs, to show us
A jadiah trick at last, and throw us.
S. Butler, Hudibras, III. II. 1614.

2. Ill-conditioned; unchaste: said of a woman.

This jadiah witch Mother Sawyer
Ford (and Dekker), Witch of Edmonton, iv. 1.

'Tis no to look to be jealous of a woman; for if the humour takes her to be jadiah, not all the looks and spies in nature can keep her honest.
Sir R. L'Estrange.

jaeger, n. See jäger.

jael-goat (jäl'gōt), n. See jaal-goat.

jaflna moss. See moan.

jag¹ (jag), v. t.; pret. and pp. jagged, ppr. jagging. [E. jaggen, jaggan, cut, slash, jab; prob. of Celtic origin: < Ir. Gael. gag, notch, split, gag, n., a cleft, chink, = W. gag, an aperture, cleft, gugen, a cleft, chink.] 1. To notch; cut or slash in notches, teeth, or ragged points.

I jagge or cuttle a garment. . . . I jagge not my hose for thrift but for a bragg. . . . if I jagge my cappe thou hast naught to do.
Palsgrave.

2. To prick, jab, or lacerate, as with a knife or dirk. [Now prov. Eng., Scotch, and southern U. S.]

(He) enjoynede with a geaunt, and jaggede hym thorowe!
Jolyly this gentille for justede another.
Morris Arthur (E. E. T. S.), I. 1087.

She sat him in a golden chair,
And *jagge*d him with a pin.
Sir Hugh (Child's Ballads, III. 335).

3. Naut., to lay or fold in long bights, as a rope or tackle, and tie up with stops.

jag¹ (jag), n. [E. jagge, a projecting point or dag (of a garment or slashed garment); from the verb. Cf. dag².] 1. A sharp notch or tooth, as of a saw; a ragged or tattered point; a zig-zag.

Like waters shot from some high crag
The lightning fell with never a jag.
Coleridge, Ancient Mariner, v.

The sailors rowed
In awe through many a now and fearful jag
Of overhanging rock.
Shelley, Revolt of Islam, vii. 12.

You take two pieces of paper, and tear off a corner of both together, so that the jags of both are the same.
A. P. Sinnett, Occult World, p. 63.

2. One of a series of points or dags cut in the edge of a garment for ornament: a style much in favor in France and England in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. See dag³.

I saw some there [in purgatory] with collars of gold about their necks, . . . some with more jagges on their clothes than whole cloth.
W. Staunton, Vision of Patrick's Purgatory (1409), Boyal MS. 17 B 43.

Jagge or dagge of a garment, tractellus.
Pierpont, Parv., p. 255.

Thy bodies holstered out, with bluntness and with jagges.
Thy rowles, thy rufes, thy canles, thy colles, thy jorkins, and thy jagges.
Gauoigne, Challenge to Beauty.

3. A stab or jab, as with a sharp instrument. [Scotch.]

Affliction may gie him a jag, and let the wind out o' him, as out o' a cow that's eaten wet clover.
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, ix.

4. In bot., a cleft or division.—5. A barbed joining or dovetail; a jag-bolt.

jag² (jag), v. t.; pret. and pp. jagged, ppr. jagging. [Origin obscure.] To carry, as a load: as, to jag hay. [Prov. Eng.]

jag² (jag), n. [See the verb.] 1. A one-horse load; a wagon-load. [Prov. Eng. and U. S.]

The wagon stood in the road, with the last jag of rails still on it.
Trowbridge, Coupon Bonds, p. 303.

The flint is sold by the one-horse load, called a jag [in Suffolk, England], and carted to the knappers' shops.
Ure, Dict., IV. 376.

2. A saddle-bag; a wallet. [Scotch.]

"I am thinking ye will be mista'en," said Meg; "there's nae room for bags or jagges here."
Scott, St. Ronan's Well, II.

3. As much liquor as one can carry: as, to have a jag on; hence, a drunken condition. [Slang, U. S.]—4. A fare or catch of fish. [Local, U. S.]

—5. A lot, parcel, load, or quantity: as, a jag of oysters. [Local, U. S.]

As there was very little money in the country, the bank bought a good jag on 't in Europe.
C. A. Davis, Major Downing's Letters, p. 168.

One broker buying on a heavy order . . . occasionally caught a jag of 2,000 or 3,000 shares.
Missouri Republican, 1888.

Jagannatha (jag-a-nā'thā), n. [In E. usually in accom. spelling Jaggernaut (sometimes Jaggernaut), repr. Hind. Jagannāth, Skt. Jagannātha, lit. lord of the world, < Skt. jagat, all that moves, men and beasts (< √ jag, go, move, as E. come, q. v.), + nātha, protector, lord, < √ nāth, seek aid of, turn with supplication to.] 1. In Hindu myth., a name given to Krishna, the eighth incarnation of Vishnu.—2. A celebrated idol of this deity at Puri in Orissa. It is a rudely carved wooden image, of which the body is red, the face black, and the arms gilt; the mouth is open and red, as if with blood; and the eyes are formed of precious stones. It is covered with rich vestments, and is seated on a throne between two others, representing Bala-Rama, the brother, and Subhadra, the sister of Krishna. The temple at Puri stands in an area containing many other temples, and enclosed by a high stone wall about 600 feet square. The temple is built chiefly of coarse granite resembling sandstone, and appears as a vast mass of masonry surmounted by several towers, the great tower rising to a height of 192 feet. Under the main tower are placed the three idols. Great multitudes of pilgrims come from all quarters of India to pay their devotions at his shrine. On these occasions the idol is mounted on an enormous car—the car of Juggernaut—resting on massive wooden wheels, and drawn by the pilgrims. Formerly many of the people threw themselves under the wheels to be crushed to death, the victims believing that by this fate they would secure immediate conveyance to heaven. The practice is now of very rare occurrence. [In this sense usually Juggernaut.]

Jagatalic (jag-a-tā'ik), a. [Jagatāli, one of the native name of Turkestan (< Jagatai, one of the sons of Jenghis Khan, to whom he left this portion of his empire), + -ic.] Pertaining to Turkestan: a term applied to the easternmost dialects of the Turkish group of tongues, spoken by the people of Turkestan.

jag-bolt (jag'bōlt), n. A bolt having a barbed shank.

jäger, jaeger (yā'gēr), n. [G., a hunter.] Any bird of the family Laridae, and subfamily Stercorariinae or Leptodinae, as a skua-gull, arctic-bird, dirty-alien, or dung-hunter.

jagerant, n. See jessurant.

jagg, n. See jag¹, 3.

jagged (jag'ed or jagd), p. a. [jag¹ + -ed².] 1. Having notches or teeth, or ragged edges; cleft; divided; laciniate: as, jagged leaves.

The crags closed round with black and jagged arms.
Shelley, Alastor.

Scattered all about there lay
Great jagged pieces of black stone.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 358.

2. Cut into jags, as sleeves and other parts of a garment; cut at the edge with leaf-like serrations: a fashion of garments common in the early part of the fifteenth century. See dag³.

If the schisme would pardon ye that, she might go jagge'd in as many cuts and slashes as she pleas'd for you.
Milton, Church-Government, I. 6.

3. In her., shown with broken and irregular outlines, as if torn from something else: said of any bearing.—Jagged chickweed, a name of Holotum umbellatum.

jaggedness (jag'ed-nes), n. The state of being jagged or denticulated; unevenness.

First draw rudely your leaves, making them plain, before you give them their veins or jaggedness.
Peacham, Drawing.

jagger¹ (jag'ēr), n. [jag¹ + -er¹.] 1. One who or that which jags. Specifically.—2. A little wheel with a jagged or notched edge, set in a handle, and used in ornamenting pastry, etc. Also called jagging-iron.—3. A toothed chisel.

jagger² (jag'ēr), n. [jag² + -er¹.] 1. One who works draft-horses for hire. [Prov. Eng.]—2. One who carries a jag or wallet; a peddler. [Scotch.]

I would take the lad for a jagger, but he has rather over good havings, and he has no pack.
Scott, Pirate, v.

jaggery (jag'ēr-ī), n. [Anglo-Ind., also written jaggery, jaggory, jagory, jaggree, jagra, etc., repr. Canarese shakkare, Hind. shakkar, < Skt. śarkara, Prakrit śakkara, sugar, > Gr. śakkarā, L. saccharon, sugar, and (through Ar.) ult. E. sugar: see sugar and saccharine.] A coarse brown sugar obtained in India by evaporation of the fresh juice of various kinds of palm, as the jaggery-palm, the wild date-tree, the palmyra, and the cocoa. It is usually made in the form of small round cakes. Also called goor.

The East Indians extract a sort of sugar they call jagras from the juice or potable liquor that flows from the coco trees.
Beverley, Virginia, II. § 16.

If you tap the flower-stalk (of the cocconut) you get a sweet juice, which can be boiled down into the peculiar sugar called (in the charming dialect of commerce) jaggery.
G. Allen, Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV. 50.

It is common in this country [India] to mix a small quantity of the coarsest sugar—"goor," or jaggery, as it is termed in India—with the water used for working up mortar.
Sci. Amer. Supp., p. 516.

jaggery-palm (jag'ēr-ī-pām), n. A name of Caryota urens, the bastard sago.

jagging-iron (jag'ing-ī'ern), n. Same as jagger¹, 2.

jaggy (jag'g), a. [< jag + -y]. Set with jag or teeth; denticulated; notched; jagged.

Her jaws grin dreadful with three rows of teeth;
Jaggy they stand, the gaping den of death.

Pope, Odysey, xii.

The jaggy beard or awn of the barley head.

J. Thomson, Hats and Felting, p. 16.

jagheerdar, n. See jaghirdar.

jaghir, jaghire (ja-g'ër), n. [Also jagghir, jagheer, jagheer, jagir, jagir. Hind. jāgīr, jāgīr, < Pers. jāgīr, jāgīr, a tenure under assignment (see def.), a grant, lit. taking or occupying a place or position, < Pers. jā, jāy, place, + gīr, seizing, taking.] In the East Indies, an assignment of the government share of the produce of a section of land to an individual, either for his personal behoof or for the support of a public establishment, particularly a military establishment.

I say, madam, I know nothing of books; and yet, I believe, upon a land carriage fishery, a stamp act, or a jagheer, I can talk my two hours without feeling the want of them.

Goldsmith, Good-natured Man, II.

Thomas. Sir Matthew will settle upon Sir John and his lady, for their joint lives, a jagheer.

Sir J. A. Jagheer!

Thomas. The term is Indian, and means an annual income.

Foots, The Nabob, I.

The distinction between khāls land, or the Imperial demesne, and jagir lands, granted revenue free or at quit rent in reward for services, also dates from the time of Akbar.

Encyc. Brit., XII. 705.

jaghirdar (ja-g'ër'dār), n. [Hind. and Pers. jāgīrdār, < jāgīr, a tenure, a grant (see jaghir), + -dār, holding, a holder.] In the East Indies, a person holding a jaghir. Also spelled jagheerdar.

The Sikhs administered the country by means of jagheerdars, and paid them by their jagheers.

R. B. Smith, Lord Lawrence, I. 372.

Jago's goldfinny. See goldfinny, 2.

jagoumpet, n. See jagoumpe.

jagra (jag'rā), n. Same as jaggery.

jaguar (jag-wār' or jag'ū-ār), n. [Also written jaguar, yaguar; Pg. jaguar, < Braz. jaguara, a jaguar. "Jagua in the Guarani language is the common name for tigers and dogs. The generic name for tigers in the Guarani language is Jagwarete." (Clavigero, Hist. of Mexico, tr. Cullen (1787), ii. 318.)] A carnivorous mammal, Felis onca, the largest and most formidable feline quadruped of America. It belongs to the family Felidae, and most resembles the leopard or panther of the old world, being spotted like a pard; but it is larger, and the spots, instead of being simply black, are ocellated—that is, they have an eye of tawny color in the black, or are broken up into rosettes of black on the tawny ground. It does not stand quite so high on its legs as the cougar, but it has a heavier body, and is altogether a more powerful beast. The length is about 4 feet to the root of the tail, which is 3 feet long; the girth of the chest is about 8 feet. The jaguar inhabits wooded parts of America from Texas to Paraguay.

Jaguar (Felis onca).

jaguarundi (jag-wā-ron'di), n. [< jaguar]. A wild cat, Felis jaguarundi of Desmarest, inhabiting America from Texas to Paraguay, somewhat larger than a large domestic cat, of slender elongated form, with very long tail and very short limbs, and of a nearly uniform brownish color.

Jah (jā, properly yā), n. See Jehovah.

Jahveh (properly yā-vā'), n. See Jehovah.

Jahvist (jā'vist, properly yā'vist), n. [< Jahveh (see Jehovah) + -ist]. Same as Jehovist, 1.

The Hexateuch primarily resolves itself into four great constituents, respectively known as the works of the Jahvist, the Elohist, the Deuteronomist, and the Priestly Legislator.

The Academy, No. 873, p. 60.

Jahvistic (jā-, properly yā-vī'tik), a. [< Jahvist + -ic]. Same as Jehovistic.

"Then they began to invoke the name of Jahveh." The importance of this Jahvistic text comes especially from its contradiction with the Elohist text Exodus vi. 3-5.

Nineteenth Century, XIX. 172.

jail (jāl), n. [Two series of forms are to be distinguished: (1) E. jail, < ME. jayle, jalle, jayil, jaiole, < OF. jaiole, jale, jolle, geole, geolle, F. geole; assimilated form of (2) E. gail, repr. by the artificial form gaol, formerly also spelled goal, used in old law-books and preserved archaically in print, though obsolete in pronunciation (gaol, prop. pron. gāl, being always pron. jāl, which pronunciation belongs only to the spelling jail), < ME. gail, gayl, gayhol, < OF. gaiole, gayolle, gaole, gaolle (whence the form gaol above), a cage, a prison, = Sp. gayola = Pg. gaiola, jaula = It. gabbiuola, yabbiola (also in simple form gabbiola), a cage, ML. relix gabiola (also in simple form gabia), a cage, the prop. L. type being caracola, dim. of cavea, a hollow, a cavity, a cage, coop: see cave, cage, and gabion.] A prison; a building or place for the confinement of persons arrested for crime or for debt; usually, in the United States, a place of confinement for minor offenses in a county.

And for to determytte this mater,

Generydes was brought out of the yalle.

Generydes (R. E. T. S.), I. 100.

Yet, ere his hapless soule to heaven went Out of this fleabish gaole, he did devise Unto his heavenly maker to present
His bodie as a spotles sacrifice.

Spenser, Ruines of Time, l. 329.

Deep in the City's bottom sunk there was A Goal, where Darkness dwelt and Desolation.

J. Beaumont, Psycho, III. 164.

Frighted, I quit the room; but leave it so

As men from jails to execution go.

Pope, Satires of Donne, IV. 372.

She threatens me every Day to arrest me; and proceeds so far as to tell me, that if I do not do her Justice I shall die in a Jail.

Spectator, No. 236.

Jail liberties, jail limits, bounds prescribed by law encompassing a prison, or the area within such bounds (as, for instance, the city in which the jail is situated), the freedom of which is allowed to certain prisoners for debt, etc., usually on giving bond for the liberties, the bounds being considered, as to such prisoners, merely an extension of the prison-walls.—To break jail. See break.

jail (jāl), v. t. [Formerly also gaol and goal; < jail, n.] To confine in or as if in a jail; imprison.

There likewise was a long statute against vagabonds, wherein two things may be noted: the one, the dislike the Parliament had of gawking of them, as that which was chargeable, pestiferous, and of no open example.

Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII., p. 215.

And with our Bodies doe but Jails our Minds,

While we have Bodies, we can ne'er be free.

Davies, Muse's Sacrifice (1612), p. 81.

Trounce him, goal him, and bring him upon his knees, and declare him a rupoach and scandal to his profession.

South, Sermons, VI. 52.

jailbird (jāl'bērd), n. [< jail + bird]; a humorous term, orig. perhaps with allusion to the F. senso 'cage' (see jail). Cf. gallowen-bird.] One who has been or is confined in jail; a malefactor.

jail-delivery (jāl-dē-liv'ēr-i), n. 1. The act of disposing judicially of the cases of all accused persons detained in a prison and awaiting trial.—2. In Eng. law, the short name of the commission issued to judges of assize, directing them to clear a jail by thus trying, and acquitting or condemning, the inmates. Hence—3. In England, and also in Delaware (U. S.), the court charged with the trial of ordinary criminal cases. See assize, 3.—4. The act of setting prisoners loose from a jail; a freeing of imprisoned persons, as by breaking into or out of a jail.

The most daring and successful jail-delivery ever perpetrated on the Sound [Puget] occurred last night.

Evening Post (New York), Dec., 1888.

General jail-delivery, a term sometimes used of acquittals in numbers at a time by reason of defects in the law, or lax or reckless administration of it.

The operation of the old law is so savage, and so inconvenient to society, that for a long time past, once in every parliament, and lately twice, the legislature has been obliged to make a general arbitrary jail-delivery, and at once to set open, by its sovereign authority, all the prisoners in England.

Burke, Speech at Bristol.

jailer (jā'ler), n. [Two series of forms, as with jail: (1) E. jailer (sometimes spelled jailor), < ME. jayler, jaylier, < OF. jaiolcar, geolcar, jaulier, F. geolier, < geole, etc., a jail; (2) E. gaster, repr. by the artificial form gaoler (see jail), < ME. gaster, gayler, gaylere, < OF. gaiolcar, guolier (ML. relix gaolarius), a jailer, < gaiolcar, etc., jail: see jail, n.] 1. The keeper of a jail or prison.

The scheref fond the jayler ded.

Robin Hood and the Monk (Child's Ballads, V. 13).

Life is the jailor, Death the angel sent

To draw the unwilling bolts and set us free.

Lewis, Death of a Friend's Child.

2. In coal-mining, a small tub or box in which water is carried in a mine. [Somersetshire, Eng.]

jaileress (jā'ler-ess), n. [Formerly also gaoler-ess; < jailer + -ess.] A female jailer.

My saucy gaoleress assured me that all my oppositions would not signify that pinch of snuff.

Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, II. 72.

jail-fever (jāl'fē'vēr), n. Typhus fever: so called because common in jails.

jail-house (jāl'hous), n. A jail.

jail-keeper (jāl'kē'pēr), n. One who keeps a jail; a jailer.

Jain (jān), n. and a. [Also as Hind. Jaina, < jina, 'victorious' (< Skt. jh, 'conquer'), an epithet of the teachers of Jainism.] 1. n. A member of a non-Brahminical sect in India, the doctrinal system of which corresponds in many essential points with Buddhism. The sect seems, according to their own scriptures, to have originated with one Pārswanātha about 700 B. C., but became fully established about 200 years later under Vardhamāna (or Jīnāpātra, in Pāli Nātipātra), one of six noted false teachers (according to Buddhist writings) contemporary with Gautama, the Buddha. The Jains are divided into two classes or parties, the Svetambaras, or 'white-robed ones', and the Digambaras, or 'sky-clad (or naked) ones'. The Jains deny the divine origin and infallible authority of the Vedas. They believe in the eternity of the universe both of matter and of mind, and hold that time proceeds in two eternally recurring cycles of immense duration, defying all human calculation—the "ascending" cycle, in which the age and stature of men increase, and the "descending" cycle, in which they decrease. Their moral code agrees with that of the Buddhists, and consists of five prohibitions against killing, lying, stealing, adultery, and worldly-mindedness, and of five duties, viz.: mercy to animated beings, almsgiving, veneration for the sages while living and the worship of their images when deceased, confession of faults, and religious fasting. The Jains are found in various parts of India, but especially on the west coast, and are remarkable for their wealth and influence.

II. a. Of or pertaining to the Jains or to their creed.—Jain architecture, a chief style of Indian architecture, closely akin to Buddhist architecture, and developed contemporaneously with it after about A. D. 450, when the Jain sect acquired prominence. The most notable characteristics of the Jain style are the pseudo-arch and -dome, built in horizontal courses and of pointed section. The domes rest commonly upon eight pillars arranged octagonally, with four more pillars at the corners, completing a square in plan; and both arches and domes are usually supported by a system of brackets or corbels carried out from the piers or pillars at about two thirds of their height, and often richly carved. The central feature in a Jain temple is a cell lighted from the door, and containing a cross-legged figure of one of the deified saints of the sect. The cell is terminated above by a dome or a pyramidal spire-like roof, and there are often connected with the temples extensive inclosed courtyards, with porticos and ranges of cells around the inclosure, each cell serving as a chapel. The tower is also characteristic of Jain architecture, being noteworthy especially in the towers commemorative of victory, which consist usually of a number of superimposed stories rising almost perpendicularly, and with the top corbeled out so as to overhang the sides. These towers are usually elaborately carved upon their entire surface. Jain architecture was at its best about the eleventh century, and is still practised, not without dignity and beauty, as at Ahmedabad.

Jain Architecture.—Temple at Kail Katreha, India.

Jaina (jā'nā), n. and a. Same as Jain.

Jainism (jā'nizm), n. [< Jain + -ism]. The religious system of the Jains.

jak (jak), n. Same as jack, jack-tree.

jakes (jāks), n. [The occurrence of dial. johnny, a jakes—"also called Mrs. Jones by country people" (Halliwell), with dial. tom, a close-stool, suggests that jakes was orig. Jake's or Jack's, a humorous euphemism: see jack.] A privy.

Christ himself, speaking of unseemly traditions, scruples not to name the Dunhill and the Jakes.

Milton, Apology for Smectymnua.

jakes-farmer (jaks'fär'mér), n. [< jakes + farmer.] One who contracted to clean out privies; a scavenger.

Nay, I will embrace a Jakes-farmer.

Marton, The Fawne, II. 1.

Nay, we are all signors here in Spain, from the jakes-farmer to the grandee or adelantado.

Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, II. 1.

jakis (jâ'ki), n. [S. Amer.] A South American frog, Pseudis paradoxa, of a greenish color marked with brown, belonging to the family Cynophrynidae. See Pseudis.

jako (jak'ô), n. See jacks, 2.

jak-tree, n. See jack-tree.

jak-wood, n. See jack-wood.

jalap (jal'ap), n. [Formerly also jalap; = F. jalap = Pg. jalapa = It. jalappa, < Sp. jalapa, jalap, so called from Jalapa, or Xalapa, a city of Mexico, whence it is imported.] A drug consisting of the tuberous roots of several plants of the natural order Convolvulaceae, that of Ipomoea purga being the most important. This is a twining herbaceous plant, with cordate-acuminate, sharply serrated leaves, and elegant salver-shaped deep-pink flowers, growing naturally on the eastern declivities of the Mexican Andes, at an elevation of from 5,000 to 8,000 feet. The jalap of commerce consists of irregular ovoid dark-brown roots, varying from the size of an egg to that of a hazelnut, but occasionally as large as a man's fist. Jalap is one of the most common purgatives, but is apt to gripe and nauseate. Male jalap, or orizaba-root, is from Ipomoea orizabensis, and Tampico jalap from I. simulana.—Indian jalap, the product of Ipomoea Turpethum, a native of India and the Pacific Islands. It is inferior to the true jalap, but is free from the nauseous taste and smell of that drug. See Ipomoea.

Jalapa (jal'ä-pä), n. [NL. (Moench, 1794), < Sp. jalapa, jalap; see jalap.] A genus of plants, a species of which was supposed to be the source of jalap. Now referred to Mirabilis.

jalapic (ja-lap'ik), a. [< jalap + -ic.] Pertaining to or consisting of jalap or jalapin.—Jalapic acid, $C_{12}H_{18}O_{14}$, an acid produced, with assimilation of water, by dissolving jalapin in aqueous solutions of the alkalis or alkaline earths.

jalapin (jal'ä-pin), n. [< jalap + -in.] A glucoside resin which is one of the purgative principles of jalap and of various plants of the convolvulaceous order. See jalap.

jalap-plant (jal'ap-plant), n. The plant that produces jalap.

jalee, jali (jäl'ä), n. [< Ind. jali, a network, lattice, grating, < Skt. jala, net.] Pierced screen-work, especially in marble or stone, characteristic of Indian house-decoration under Moslem influence.

jaleo (Sp. pron. hä-lä'ô), n. [Sp. prop. gentleness, jauntiness.] A lively Spanish dance.

jalel (F. pron. zha-lä'), n. [F. jalel; perhaps the same as galel, q. v.] A stone selected or shaped for use with the stone-bow. See stone-bow.

jali, n. See jalee.

jalop (jal'op), n. An obsolete form of jalap.

jalous, a. An obsolete or dialectal form of jealous.

jalousie (ja-löz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. jalousied, ppr. jalousing. A dialectal (Scotch) form of jealous.

They jalousied the opening of our letters at Fairport.

Scott, Antiquary, xlv.

jalousiet, n. An obsolete form of jealousy.

jalousie (zha-lö-sé'), n. [F. jalousie, jealousy, a lattice window or shutter: see jealousy.] 1. A blind or shutter made with slats, which are usually set at an angle so as to exclude the sun and rain while allowing the air to enter.—2. pl. The whole surface or inclosure of a gallery, veranda, or the like, formed of a series of slatted frames (see def. 1), of which some may be fixed and some may open on hinges.

jam (jam), v.; pret. and pp. jammed, ppr. jamming. [Formerly jamb; of dial. origin; prob. another form (sonant j from surd ch; cf. jaw, jowl) of cham, chew or champ, being the same as champ, chew or bite, also tread heavily: see champ.] 1. trans. 1. To press; squeeze; thrust or press down or in with force or violence; thrust or squeeze in so as to stick fast; press or crowd in such a manner as to prevent motion or hinder extrication.

The ship, which by its building was Spanish, stuck fast, jammed in between two rocks; all the stern and quarters of her were beaten to pieces with the sea.

Dryden, Robinson Crusoe.

3. To fill full; block up; prevent the movement of by pressure, crowding, etc.

Crowds that in an hour
Of civic tumult jostle the doors, and bear
The keepers down.

Tennyson, Lucretius.

3. To tread hard or make firm by treading, as land is trodden hard by cattle. [Prov. Eng. and U. S.].—Jamming friction, in mech., friction produced by the jamming or pinching action of cams, eccentric-rollers, knots in ropes, loops of ropes about muzzling parts, belaying-pins, etc.—To jam out, in coal-mining, to cut or knock away the spurs in holing. [South Staffordshire, Eng.]

II. intrans. To become wedged together or in place, as by violent impact; stick fast: as, the door jams.

jam (jam), n. [< jam, v.] 1. A crush; a squeeze; pressure by thrusting or crowding.

Yet onward still the gathering numbers cram,
Contenting crowds about the frequent damp,
And all is bustle, squeeze, row, jabbering, and jam.

J. and H. Smith, Rejected Addresses.

2. A crowd of objects irregularly and tightly pressed together by arrest of their movement; a block, as of people, vehicles, or floating logs.

The surest eye for a road or for the weak point of a jam,
The steadiest foot upon a squirming log.

Lowell, Fire-side Travels, p. 111.

jam (jam), n. [Origin uncertain; there is not sufficient evidence to connect it with jam, press, squeeze (cf. dial. jammock, a soft pulpy substance, also beat, squeeze), or with Ar. jâmid, congealed, concrete, motionless, jamid (Pers.), congealation, concretion, < jamada, thicken, freeze, congeal (cf. jelly). Cf. rob, a conserve of fruit, also of Ar. origin.] A conserve of fruits prepared by boiling them to a pulp in water with sugar.

"We should like some cakes after dinner," answered Master Harry, . . . "and two apples—and jam."

Dickens, Boots at the Holly Tree Inn.

jam (jam), n. Another spelling of jamb, 4.

jamada, n. See jambid.

Jamaica bark, bilberry, birch, buckthorn, cherry, coconut, fan-palm, etc. See bark, etc. Jamaican (jâ-mä'kan), a. and n. [< Jamaica (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Of, pertaining to, or obtained from the island of Jamaica in the West Indies, south of Cuba, now belonging to Great Britain, but formerly (1609–1655) to Spain.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Jamaica, the population of which is chiefly black or colored.

jamb (jam), n. [Formerly also jamb, jumbo, jau; < ME. jambe, jumbo, jamie, < OF. jambe, leg, shank, ham, corbel, pier, side post of a door (in the last sense also, in mod. F. exclusively, jambageSp. gamba, OSp. gamba = Pg. gambra = It. gamba, the leg, < LL. gamba, a hoof (ML. in deriv. the leg, camba, leg-armor, jambe, orig. camba*, perhaps of Celtic origin (cf. W. cam, crooked, > E. cam, q. v.), but in any case connected with L. camur, crooked, camera, camara, Gr. kámara, a vault, chamber (> E. camera, camber, chamber, etc., q. v.), and ult. with E. ham, q. v. From LL. gamba are also ult. gamb, gamba, gambade, gambit, gambol, gammon, etc., and words following.] 1. A leg.—2. The side or cheek of a helmet or shield.

Vnicynis the Jannys that luste were to godur.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. A.), l. 332.

3. In arch., a side or vertical piece of any opening or aperture in a wall, such as a door,

Church of St. Genes, Nava, France; 12th century. J. J. Jamb.
(From Viollet-le-Duc's "Dictionnaire de l'Architecture.") window, or chimney, which helps to bear the lintel or other member overhead serving to sustain or discharge the superincumbent weight of the wall.

On the other side stood the stately palace of Dultible, . . . in which were dories and jaumes of Ivory.

Sandys, Travels, p. 23.

The jamb or flanking stones (of stairs) are also adorned by either figures of animals or bas-reliefs.

J. Forsyue, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 103.

4. In mining, a mass of mineral or stone in a quarry or pit standing upright, and more or less distinct from neighboring or adjoining parts. Also spelled jam.

jamb, v. An obsolete spelling of jam.

jamb (jamb), n. 1. An obsolete form of jamb.—2. [OF.: see jamb. Cf. jambieres.] Armor for the leg, sometimes made of cuir-bouilli, but most frequently of metal, much used during the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth centuries. See solleret, and second cut under armor.—3. In her., same as gamb.

jamb, a. [ME., < OF. jambe (F. jambe), legged, i. e. well-legged, able to run fast, < jumbo, leg: see jamb.] Swift.

One a jamb stede this jurnee he makes.

Morte Arthure (E. E. T. A.), l. 2235.

jamboust, jamboux, n. pl. [ME. (used archaically in Spenser, spelled giambeaux, giambeux); < OF. as if jambel*, *pl. jamboux (not found), < jambe, leg: see jamb, jambel.] Leggings; leg-armor.

His jamboux were of curyholly.

Chaucer, Sir Thopas, l. 104.

The mortal Steele despitously entayld
Deepe in their flesh, quite through the yron wallies,
That a large purple streame adorne their giambeux fallies.

Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 23.

jambet (jam-bé'), n. [Origin obscure.] A light cane carried by men of fashion in England in the eighteenth century.

"Sir Timothy," says Charles, "I am concerned that you, whom I took to understand came better than any baronet in town, should be so overseen! . . . Why, sir Timothy, your's is a true Jambes, and acquire Empty's only a plain dragon."

Steele, Tatler, No. 142.

A Jambes . . . is a knotty bamboo of a pale brown hue.

Dobson, Selections from Steele, note, p. 479.

jambet (jam'bér), n. pl. [Cf. jambiere, jamboux.] Armor for the legs. Compare greaves, jambaux.

jamboux, n. pl. See jamboux. jambieres (F. pron. zhôn-bé-ër'), n. [OF. (F. jambieres), armor for a leg, also leg, earlier gambiere = It. gambiera = ML. reflex gambria (also simply camba), < OF. jambe, etc., the leg: see jamb.] Leg-pieces or leggings of leather, strong plaited cordage, or other resistant material, used by hunters and varlets of the chase in the middle ages as a defense against brambles and underbrush.

jambolana, jambolan (jam-bô-lä'nä, jam'bô-lan), n. [E. Ind.] An East Indian tree, Eugenia Jambolana, with hard and durable wood and edible fruit.

jambone (jam'bôn), n. [Cf. jamboree, 2.] In the game of euchre, a lone hand in which the player exposes his cards and must lead one selected by an opponent, scoring 8 points if he takes all the tricks, otherwise only as for an ordinary hand. Such hands are played by agreement, not as a regular feature of the game.

The American Hoyle.

jamborandi (jam-bô-ran'di), n. Same as jaborandi.

jamboree (jam-bô-ré'), n. [A slang word, prob. arbitrary.] 1. A carousal; a noisy drinking-bout; a spree; hence, any noisy merrymaking. [Slang.]

There have not been so many dollars spent on any jamboree.

Scribner's Mag., IV. 303.

2. In the game of euchre, a lone hand containing the five highest cards and counting the holder 16 points, played by agreement. The American Hoyle.

jamb-post (jam'pôst), n. In carp.,

Jamb-shaft—Galileo Forch of Durham Cathedral, England.

an upright timber at the side of an aperture, as of a doorway, window, fireplace, etc.

jamb-shaft (jam'shaft), n. In arch., a small shaft having a capital and a base, placed against or forming part of the jamb of a door or window. Such shafts occur most frequently in medieval architecture. See cut on preceding page.

jambu (jam'bū), n. [E. Ind. jambu (Hind. jāman, jāman).] The rose-apple tree, Eugenia Jambos.

jambul (jam'būl), n. [E. Ind.] A small evergreen tree of India. The bark and seeds are said to be serviceable in diabetes.

jamdani (jam-dā'ni), n. [Hind. jām-dāni, a kind of cloth with flowers interwoven, < jāma (< Pers. jāma), a garment, robe, vest (cloth), + dāni, bountiful, liberal (rich?).] A variety of Dacca muslin woven in designs of flowers.

jamesonite (jam'son-ī), n. [Named after Prof. Jameson of Edinburgh (died 1854). The surname Jameson stands for James's son; for James, see Jack.] A native sulphid of antimony and lead, commonly occurring in fibrous masses, sometimes in capillary forms (feather-ore). It has a lead-gray color and metallic luster.

Jamestown weed. Same as jimson-weed.

jamesweed (jāms'wēd), n. Same as jacobaea. [Prov. Eng.] jameswort (jāms'wērt), n. Same as jacobaea. [Prov. Eng.] jamewar (jam'e-wār), n. [E. Ind.] A goat's-hair cloth made in Cashmere and the neighboring countries. The name is especially given to the striped Cashmere shawls, of which the stripes are filled with minute patterns in vivid color.

jamidar. n. See jemidar.

jam-nut (jam'nūt), n. [< jam + nut.] In mach., a nut fitted to a bolt and screwed down hard (jammed) against a principal or holding nut, to keep the latter from working loose through vibrations, jars, or shocks. Also called nut-lock.

jampan (jam'pan), n. [E. Ind.] In the East Indies, a solid sedan-chair supported between two thick bamboo poles set crosswise and borne by four men.

jampane (jam-pa-nē'), n. [Hind. jampāni, < jampan.] A bearer of a jampan.

jamrach (jam'rak), n. [From Jamrach, the name of the proprietor of the largest and best-known of these in Ratcliff Highway (†), London.] A place for the keeping and sale of wild animals, such as are wanted for menageries and circuses.

jamrosade (jam'rō-zād), n. [Appar., accom. to E. rose, for jambosade*, from the native name jambos or its NL. form jambosa.] The fruit of the East Indian tree Eugenia Jambos; the rose-apple.

jam-weld (jam'wēld), n. A weld in which the heated ends or edges of the parts are square-butted against each other and welded. E. H. Knight.

Jan. An abbreviation of January.

janapum (jan'pūm), n. [E. Ind.] The Bengal hemp, or sunn-hemp. See hemp.

janca-tree (jang'kă-trē), n. [< W. Ind. janco + E. tree.] A West Indian tree, Myrsine balsamifera, of the natural order Rutaceae. Also called white candlewood.

jane (jān), n. [Also written jean; < ME. jane (cf. ML. januinus), a coin, < Jean, OF. Genes, Jannes, etc., mod. F. Genes, It. Genova, Genoa, E. now Genoa, < L. Genua, ML. also Janua, a city in Italy. Cf. florin, florence, desant, and other names of coins, of local origin.] 1. A small silver coin of Genoa imported into England by foreign merchants, especially in the fifteenth century. Compare galley-halfpenny.

His robe was of ciciolaton,
That costs many a jane.

The first which then refused me (said hee)
Certes was but a common Courtesane;
Yet she refused to have adoe with mee,
Because I could not give her many a Jane.

Spenser, F. Q., III. vii. 52.

2. Same as jean, 2.

jane-of-apes (jān'ōv-āps), n. [Formed from Jane, a fem. name (also Joan, < ME. Jana, Jean, < OF. Jeanne, < ML. Joanna, fem. of Joannes, John; see John, and of joan), in imitation of jackanapes for jack-of-apes*: see jackanapes, and of Joannapes.] A pert girl; the female counterpart of jackanapes. [Rare.]

Polph. But we shall want a woman.
Grae. No, here's Jane-of-apes shall serve.

Maulsinger, Bondman, III. 2.

jangada (jan-gā'dā), n. [Sp. Pg., a raft, a float.] A raft-boat or catamaran used in Peru and the northern parts of Brazil.

Jangada.

jangle (jang'gl), v.; pret. and pp. jangled, ppr. jangling. [< ME. janglen, jangelen (also, rarely, with initial guttural or palatal, ganglen, yangelen, after the D.), chatter, jabber, talk loudly, < OF. jangler, gangler, jangle, prattle, tattle, wrangle, = Pr. janglar, < OD. jangelen*, found only in mod. D. jangelen, importune, freq. of OD. janoken, mod. D. jancken = LG. jancken, yelp, howl, as a dog; prob., like equiv. L. gannire, of imitative origin.] 1. Intrans. 1. To talk much or loudly; chatter; babble; jabber.

These false lovers, in this time now present,
That serve to boots, to jangle as a lay.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnival), p. 77.

Jangling is when man speaketh to moche before folk, and clappeth as a mille, and taketh no kepe what he saith.

Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

2. To quarrel; altercation; bicker; wrangle; grumble.

And two-so jangle in time of drynk.

English Gude (E. E. T. S.), p. 79.

Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree:
This civil war of wits were much better us'd
On Navarre and his book-men.

Shak., L. L. L., II. 1, 227.

3. To sound discordant or harsh; make harsh discord.

It is the bane and torment of our ears

To hear the discords of those jangling rhymers.

B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

And in derision sets
Upon their tongues a various spirit, to raise Quite out their native language; and, instead,
To show a jangling noise of words unknown.

Milton, P. L., xii. 55.

II. trans. 1. To gossip; contend; tell.

Yet that there should be such a jail as they jangle and such fashions as they feign is plainly impossible.

Tyndale, Ana. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 231.

2. To cause to sound harsh or inharmonious; cause to emit discordant sounds.

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,

That suck'd the honey of his music vows,

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

Shak., Hamlet, III. 1.

3. To utter in a discordant or inharmonious manner.

Erre Monkish Rhimes

Had jangled their fantastic Chimes.

Prior, Prologues and Apelles.

jangle (jang'gl), n. [< ME. jangle; < janglo, v.]

1. Idle talk; chatter; babble.

This somonour that was as full of jangles,

As ful of veynyn been this wayragles,

And ever enquiring upon everythynge.

Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 108.

2. Altercation; wrangle; quarrel.

But, now, Sir Peter, if we have finished our daily jangle,
I presume I may go to my engagement at Lady Snorwell's.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, II. 1.

But nothing has clouded

This friendship of ours,

Save one little jangle.

Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 570.

3. Discordant sound.

The mad jangle of Matilda's lyre.

Gifford, Maviad.

4. A seaweed, Laminaria digitata.

janglery (jang'glēr), n. [< ME. jangler, janglere, < OF. jangleor, gangleor, janglerres (= Pr. janglador, janglairo), a chatterer, talkative person; < jangler, jangle, chatter: see jangle.] An idle talker; a story-teller; a gossip.

A jangler is to God abhominable.

Chaucer, Manciple's Tale, l. 229.

Thair ma na janglow us espy,

That is to lufe contrair.

Roberts and Mayne (Child's Ballads, IV. 249).

jangleress (jang'glēr-es), n. [ME. jangleresse; < jangler + -ess.] A female gossip; a talkative woman.

Stbourne I was as is a leoness,

And of my tonge a veray jangleress.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 688.

janglery (jang'glēr-ī), n. [ME. janglerie, < OF. janglerie (= Pr. janglaria), < jangler, jangle: see jangle.] Babbling; gossip; idle talk; chatter.

The janglerie of women can hide thyngs that they wol nought.

Chaucer, Tale of Melibee.

jangloury, n. A variant of jangler.

jangly (jang'glī), a. [< jangle + -y.] Jangling or jangled; harsh-sounding.

Answering back with jangly scream,

Sit thy brothers by the score.

Joel Benton, April Blackbird.

janisariant, janisary. See janiscarian, janisary.

janissary, janiseri, n. Obsolete forms of janisary.

janitor (jan'i-tōr), n. [< L. janitor, a door-keeper, < janua, a door.] 1. A doorkeeper; a porter.

Th' Hesperian dragon not more fierce and fell;

Nor the gaunt, growling janitor of hell.

Smollett, Advice, A Satire.

2. A man employed to take charge of rooms or buildings, to see that they are kept clean and in order, to lock and unlock them, and generally to care for them.

janitress (jan'i-tres), n. [< janitor + -ess. Cf. janitrix.] A female janitor.

janitrix (jan'i-triks), n. [L., fem. of janitor, q. v.] 1. A female janitor; a janitress.—2. The portal vein, or vena porta, of the liver.

Janiverer, n. [< ME. Janiverer, Janyverer, Janyver, Janver, Janitor, < OF. Janvier, F. Janvier, January: see January.] January.

Time sure hath wheel'd about his years,

December meeting Janiverer.

Cleveland, Char. of London Diurnal (1647).

janizar (jan'i-zār), n. See janisary.

janiscarian (jan-i-zā'ri-an), a. [Formerly also janiscarian; < janisary + -an.] Pertaining to the janisaries or their government.

I never shall so far injure the janiscarian republic of Algiers as to put it in comparison, for every sort of crime, turpitude, and oppression, with the jacobin republic of Paris.

Burke, A Regicide Peace, l.

janisary (jan'i-zā-ri), n.; pl. janisaries (-ris).

[Formerly also janitary, janisary, sometimes janisar, janiser, janiscer; < OF. janissaire, F. janissaire = Sp. Pg. geniscaro, Pg. also janiscaro = It. giannizzero = D. janisaar = G. janitschar (ML. janizari, pl.), < Turk. yekichari (in part conformed to the It.), lit. 'new troops,' < yekli, new, + 'asker, army, soldier, pl. askir, soldiers, < Ar. 'askar, army, troop, 'askariy, Pers. 'askari, a soldier.] One of a former body of Turkish infantry, constituting the Sultan's guard and the main standing army, first organized in the fourteenth century, and until the latter part of the seventeenth century largely recruited from compulsory conscripts and converts taken from the Rayas or Christian subjects.

In later times Turks and other Mohammedans joined the corps on account of the various privileges attached to it. The body became large, and very powerful and turbulent, often controlling the destiny of the government; and after a revolt purposely provoked by the Sultan Mahmoud II. in 1826, many thousand janisaries were massacred, and the organization was abolished.

Immediately came officers & appointed Janissars to bear fro vs our presents.

Mackay's Voyages, II. 170.

But Selymus subduing Aegypt, the tombs was defaced, and ransacked by his Janissaries.

Sandys, Travels, p. 104.

Janisary music, music performed by a band largely composed of percussion instruments, such as drums, cymbals, triangles, etc., with some shrill oboes and flutes: so called because arranged in imitation of the bands and music of the janisaries. Also called Turkish music.

janke (jang'kēr), n. [Origin obscure; cf. yanke, v.] A long pole on two wheels, used in Scotland for transporting logs of wood, etc. [Scotch.] jann (jan), n. [Pers. jān, soul, life, spirit.] In Mohammedan myth., an inferior kind of demon; a jinn; one of the least powerful, according to a tradition from the Prophet, of the five orders of Mohammedan genii. The jann are said to have been created by God 2,000 years before Adam. Al-jann is sometimes used as a name for Iblis, the father of the jinn.

janner (jan'ēr), v. t. Same as januer, jaunder. [Scotch.] jannia, n. An obsolete or dialectal form of jaundice.

jannock (jan'ōk), n. A cake or bannock. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Mattie gas us baith a drap skimmed milk, and aae o' her thick ait jannocks, that was as wat an' raw as a dree.

Scott, Rob Roy, etc.

Jansenism (jan'sen-izm), n. [Jansen (see def.) + -ism.] The Flemish surname Jansen = E. Johnson.] A system of evangelical doctrine deduced from the writings of Augustine by Cornelius Jansen, Roman Catholic bishop of Ypres (1585-1638), and maintained by his followers. It is described by Catholic authorities as "a heresy which consisted in denying the freedom of the will and the possibility of resisting Divine grace," under "a professed attempt to restore the ancient doctrine and discipline of the Church." (Cath. Dict.) It is regarded by Protestant authorities as "a reaction within the Catholic Church against the theological casuistry and general spirit of the Jesuit order," and "a revival of the Augustinian tenets upon the inability of the fallen will and upon efficacious grace." (G. F. Fisher, Hist. Reformation, p. 461.)

Jansenist (jan'sen-ist), n. [Jansen (see def.) + -ist.] 1. One of a body or school in the Roman Catholic Church, prominent in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, holding the doctrines of Cornelius Jansen. See also Old Catholics (a), under catholic.—2. In the eighteenth century, a garment, part of a garment, or a fashion, supposed to be expressive of severity of manners: in allusion to the Jansenists of Port Royal. Thus, a sleeve covering the whole arm was called a Jansenist.—Jansenist crucifix. See crucifix.

Jant (jant), a. [A dial. var. of gentl. Cf. janty, jaunty.] Cheerful; merry. [Prov. Eng.]

Where were dainty ducks and want onus,
Wench that could play the wanton.
Barnaby's Journal. (Hallivell.)

Janty, v. and n. See jaunt.

Jantly, adv. See jauntily.

Jantiness, n. See jauntiness.

Janty, a. See jaunty.

Janty-car, n. Name of a jaunty-car.

January (jan'yū-ā-ri), n. [ME. January (also Janiero, Janyere, etc., after OF.: see Janiero) = OF. and F. Janvier = Pr. Januer, Janvier, (Genoyer, Genoyer = Sp. Enero = It. Janeiro = It. Genajo, Gennaro = D. Januarij = G. Dan. Januar = Sw. Januari, L. Januarius (so. mensis), the month of Janus, Janua, Janus: see Janus.] The first month of the year, according to present and the later Roman reckoning, consisting of thirty-one days. Abbreviated Jan.

Januayst, a. and n. An obsolete form of Genoese.

Januform (jā'nū-fōrm), a. [L. Janus, Janus, + forma, form.] Having the form of Janus—that is, two-faced. [Rare.]

The supposition was that the statue was to be Januform, with Playfair's face on one side and Stewart's on the other; and it certainly would effect a reduction in price, though it would be somewhat singular.

Sydney Smith, To Francis Jeffrey.

Janus (jā'nus), n. [L., prob. orig. Dianus*, like fem. Jana for Diana, being thus etymologically = Gr. Iōv, a form of Zeus, L. Jovis, Jupiter (cf. L.L. Januapator): see doity, Diana, Jove, Jupiter.] The assumed connection with Janua, a door, is prob. due to popular etymology.] 1. A primitive Italic solar divinity regarded among the Romans as the doorkeeper of heaven and the especial patron of the beginning and ending of all undertakings. As the protector of doors and gateways, he was represented as holding a staff or scepter in the right hand and a key in the left; and, as the god of the sun's rising and setting, he had two faces, one looking to the east, the other to the west. His temple at Rome was kept open in time of war, and was closed only in the rare event of universal peace.

Your faction then belike is a subtle Janus, and has two faces.
Milum, On Dut. of Hum. Tempest.

Hence—2. A doorkeeper. [Rare.]

They differ herein from the Turkish Religion, that they have certain idoll puppets made of silke or like stuffe, of the fashion of a man, which they fasten to the doore of their walking houses, to be as Januaries or keepers of their house.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 421.

3. [N.L.] A genus of hymenopterous insects of the family Uroceridae, resembling Cephus, but distinguished from it by the filiform antennae. There is one European species, J. constrictus, and one North American, J. flaviventris.

Janus-cloth (jā'nus-kloth), n. A textile fabric, the color of one face of which is different from that of the other: used for reversible garments.

Janus-cord (jā'nus-kōrd), n. A kind of rope made of woolen and cotton, the cord or rib showing on both sides alike.

Janus-faced (jā'nus-fāst), a. Having two faces; two-faced; hence, double-dealing; deceitful.

Janus-headed (jā'nus-hed'ed), a. Double-headed.

Janvert, n. See Janivert.

Jap (jap), n. [Short for Japanese.] A Japanese. [Colloq., U. S.]

Jap. A common abbreviation of Japanese.

Japalura (jap-a-lū-rā), n. [N.L.] A genus of lizards of the family Agamidae. There are several species, found in Sikkim, Formosa, and the Loochoo islands.

Japalure (jap'a-lūr), n. An agamoid lizard of the genus Japalura: as, the variegated Japalure, J. variegata.

Japan (ja-pan'), a. and n. [Prop., as an adj., attrib. use (Japan varnish, work, etc.) of the name of the country called Japan (D. Dan. Sw. J. Japan = F. Sp. Japon = Pg. Japão = It. Giappone = Russ. Yaponiya), Chin. Jih-pūn (Jap. Nihon or Nippon), lit. 'sunrise' (that is, the East, the Japanese archipelago lying to the east of China), Ch. Jih (Jap. nō), the sun, + pūn (Jap. pan or hon), root, foundation, origin. The name was introduced into Europe by the Dutch or Portuguese.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Japan: as, Japan varnish (now written "japan varnish," without reference to the country); Japan work, etc.—Japan alspice, anemone, camphor, etc. See the noun Japan clover, the leguminous plant Lespedeza bicolor, a native of China and Japan, introduced, perhaps with tea-boxes, into the southern part of the United States about the year 1840, since which time it has spread throughout the Southern States. Its purple flowers are minute and axillary, the pod one-seeded. The leaves are trifoliate, very small, but numerous. The root is perennial, strikes deep, and resists drought. It thrives in good soil or poor, in the former growing erect and bushy, sometimes two feet high. It is highly valued for pasture and for hay.—Japan colors. See color.—Japan earth. Name as terra japonica (which see, under terra).—Japan globe-flower. See Lewia.—Japan wax. See wax.

II. [c.] 1. Work varnished and figured in the manner practised by the natives of Japan.

On shining altars of Japan they raise
The silver lamp; the fiery spirits blaze.
Pope, Ec. of the L., III. 107.

2. A liquid having somewhat the nature of a varnish, made by cooking gum shellac with linseed-oil in a varnish-kettle. Litharge or some similar material is also usually added to quicken the drying of the resulting Japan. When it has been cooked down to a very thick mass termed a "pill," it is allowed to cool, and is then thinned down with turpentine. Japan is a light-colored brownish-yellow liquid, of about the consistency of varnish. A thin surface of it dries in from fifteen to thirty minutes. It is used principally as a medium in grinding Japan colors. A small portion added to ordinary house-paints makes them dry more rapidly, hence it is sometimes called Japan drier.

They were stained . . . in imitation of maple, but far less skillfully. Sometimes they were a black Japan.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 330.

3. An asphaltum varnish.—4. A black cane. Davies.

Like Mercury, you must always carry a caduceus or con-juring Japan in your hand, capped with a civet-box.
The Quack's Academy, 1678 (Harl. Misc., II. 83).

Black Japan, or japan lacquer, a varnish of a jet-black color; a hard black varnish used for producing a glossy-black and enamel-like surface on iron, tin, and other materials. It is made by cooking asphaltum with linseed-oil, and thinning the resulting thick mass with turpentine. Also called Japan black, black asphaltum, Brunswick black.—Old Japan, Japanese porcelain which has a white ground decorated with dark blue under the glaze, and with red, green, and occasionally other enamels, with some gold. This porcelain, which is the best-known of all the Japanese decorative porcelain, is now known as Hizen or Imari.

Japan (ja-pan'), v. t.; pret. and pp. japanned, ppr. japanning. [Japan, n.] To varnish with Japan; cover with any material which gives a hard black gloss.

Two huge, black, japanned cabinets . . . reflecting from their polished surfaces the effulgence of the flame.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 185.

Japanese (jap-a-nū's or -nēz'), a. and n. [F. Japonais = It. Giapponese, etc.; as Japan + -ese.] 1. a. Pertaining to Japan or its inhabitants.—Japanese art, the art of Japan, an original, consistent, and strictly national development, noteworthy chiefly in the departments of industrial and of decorative art. The productions of this art are characterized by fitness for their purpose and constructive soundness, and exhibit at once delicacy of touch and freedom of hand. In architecture the groundwork is plain and simple, the models not differing greatly from those of neighboring Asiatic countries. But the decoration shows the true artistic spirit; there is richness of carving, inlaying of bronze, gold, and precious woods, and brilliant color, but no excess or heaviness, and no masking of structural elements. In painting and the kindred arts the highest study, that of the human figure, has not been mastered; but the refined and true drawing of animals and plants, with accurate representation of swift motion, and the harmonious use of color, are alike remarkable. In sculpture, especially in bronze and wood, the same subjects are treated with the same qualities and the same success. The technique of the Japanese bronzes especially has never been attained by other peoples. Lacquered ware, embossed in gold and colors, represents another industry in which the Japanese are unrivaled. Their pottery and porcelain, though of great beauty, is perhaps excelled by that of the Chinese. In textile fabrics, embroidery, wall-papers, etc., the exactness of observation and mastery of technical rendering alike of Japanese artist and workman produce admirable results.—Japanese banian, a quaint ornamental variety of banyan with short yellow legs, and plumage white with the exception of the tail, which is black. The tail is very large, and is carried so upright that in the cock it almost touches the head; and the wings droop so as nearly to reach the ground.—Japanese box. Same as Chinese box. See Buxomus.—Japanese cypress, one of various species of Chamaecyparis.—Japanese deer, Cervus sika.—Japanese elm. Same as hack.—Japanese ivy. See ivy.—Japanese long-tailed fowls, a breed of the domestic hen developed in Japan, similar in form to a game or small Malay, but characterized by the remarkable length of the trailing sickle-feathers of the cock, which frequently attain six or seven feet, and sometimes much more. Also known as Phœnix, Shinotauraro, or Yokohama fowls.—Japanese pasque-flower, perimmon, quince, silk, yam, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. sing. and pl. A native or natives of Japan, an island empire in the Pacific ocean, lying to the east of Corea, consisting of four large islands and from three to four thousand smaller ones. The Japanese style their own country Nihon (or Nippon) (see Japan, etymology), or Das Nihon (or Nippon), 'Great Nihon,' and sometimes Yamato, from the name of the region in which the old capital was situated.

2. The language of the inhabitants of Japan. It is an agglutinative language, and often claimed, on doubtful grounds, to belong to the Ural-Altaic family, as related especially with Mongol and Manchu.

Japanesque (jap-a-nēsk'), a. [Japan + -esque.] Resembling the Japanese, or what is Japanese; akin to Japanese; imitating the Japanese art.

Japanism (ja-pan'izm), n. [= F. Japonisme; as Japan + -ism.] Japanese art, customs, etc.; also, the study of things peculiar to Japan.

Japanism—a new word coined to designate a new field of study, artistic, historic, and ethnographic.
Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 334.

Japanisation (ja-pan-i-zā'shon), n. The act or process of conforming, or the state of being conformed, to Japanese ideas, as of art or civilization.

Japanned (ja-pan'd'), p. a. 1. Covered with Japan, or with something resembling it in effect.—2. Appearing as if varnished with Japan: as, the japanned peacock, Pavo nigripennis.

There is one strange fact with respect to the peacock, namely the occasional appearance in England of the japanned or "black-shouldered" kind.

Darwin, Var. of Animals and Plants, p. 305.

Japanned leather. Same as patent leather (which see, under leather).

japanner (ja-pan'er), n. 1. One who applies Japan varnish, or produces Japan gloss.—2. A shoe-black.

Well, but the poor—the poor have the same itch;
They change their weekly barber, weekly news,
Prefer a new japanner to their shoes.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, I. l. 155.

Japanners' gliding. See gliding.

japanning (ja-pan'ing), n. [Verbal n. of Japan, v.] The art of coating surfaces of metal, wood, etc., with Japan or varnish, which is dried and hardened by means of a high temperature in stoves or hot chambers.

Japannish (ja-pan'ish), a. [Japan + -ish.] Of or pertaining to Japan or the Japanese; of Japanese character. [Rare.]

In some of the Greek delineations (the Lycian painter, for example) we have already noticed a strange opulence of splendour, characterisable as half-legitimate, half-mercenary, a splendour hovering between the Hættlesque and the Japannish.
Carrile, Sterling, vi.

jape (jāp), v. [ME. jape, < OF. japer, japper, F. japper = Fr. japer, trifle, jest, play a trick, tr. trick, impose upon; origin uncertain.] 1. intrans. To jest; joke. [Obsolete or archaic.]

In his play Terquynus the yonge
Gan for to jape, for he was lyght of tonge.
Chaucer, Good Women, I. 1690.

My boon companion, tavern-fellow—him
Who gibed and japed—in many a merry tale
That shook our sides—at Pardoners, Summoners, Friars, abolition-sellers, monkeries,
And nunneries.
Tennyson, Sir John Oldcastle, Lord Cobham.

II. trans. To deride; gibe; mock; bes fool.

Japanese Art.—Example from a native Japanese book.

Thus hath he japed the ful many a year.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 871.

jape (jāp), n. [ME. jape, < OF. japo, jappe, F. jappe = Pr. jap, jaup; from the verb.] 1. A joke; jest; gibe.

He . . . gap his beste japes forth to carle,
And made hire so to laugh at his folye,
That she for laughter wende for to dye.

Chaucer, Troilus, ll. 1167.

The roar of merriment around bespoke the by-standers well pleased with the jape put upon him.

Barnum, Ingoldsby Legends, l. 126.

2†. A trick; wile; cheat.

It is no jape, it is truth to see.

Rom. of Parthenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5896.

Nere myn extordoun I myghte nat liven,
Nor of swich japes wol I not be shriven.

Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 142.

To make one a jape, to deceive one; play a trick upon one.

She made hym fro the dethe escape,
And he made hir a ful false jape.

Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 414.

japer (jā'pēr), n. [ME. japer, < OF. japeur, F. jappeur, a jester, < japer, jest: see jape, v.] A jester; a buffoon.

After this comth the synne of japeres, that ben the deviles apes, for they maken folk to laughen at hire japerie, as folkes doon at the gawdes of an ape.

Chaucer, Parson's Tale.

The japers, I apprehend, were the same as the boursours, or rybauders, an inferior class of minstrels.

Straut, Sports and Pastimes, p. 292.

japery (jā'pēr-i), n. [ME. japerie, < OF. japerie, japperie, jesting, < japer, jest: see jape, v.] Jest; joking; raillery; mockery; buffoonery.

Justinus, which that hated his folye,
Answerde anon right in his japerie.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 412.

Japetides (jā-pot'i-dē), n. pl. [NL, < Japetus, Japhetus, a Latinized form of Heb. Japheth, one of the three sons of Noah, + -ides.] The Indo-European or Aryan family of peoples. [Rare.] Japhethian (jā-fet'i-an), a. and n. [< Japheth (see def.) + -ian.] 1. a. Pertaining to Japheth; Japhetic.

The pre-scientific Japhethian theory and the Caucasian theory of Blumebach have long been abandoned.

Abstract from J. Taylor, Nature, XXXVI, 507.

II. n. A descendant of Japheth; specifically, one of the Milesian colonists of Ireland. Japhetic (jā-fet'ik), a. [= Sp. Jafético, < NL. Japheticus, < Japhetus, Japheth.] Pertaining to Japheth, one of the sons of Noah; descended, or supposed to be descended, from Japheth; Indo-European or Aryan: as, the Japhetic nations. Compare Semitic and Hamitic.

japingly, adv. [ME. japyngely.] In a japing manner; in joke.

Demosthenes his hondis onis putte
In a wommanis bosum japyngely.

Cocker, (Halliwell).

japonica (ja-pōn'i-kā), n. [< NL. Japonica, the specific name, fem. of Japonicus, of Japan, < Japon for Japan: see Japan.] 1. Camellia Japonica.—2. Pyrus (Cydonia) Japonica. Japonit, n. [< Japon for Japan (see Japan) + -it.] A Japanese.

Some mention (Beloeus it that list) neere to Japan certain Islands of Amazonas, with which the Japonites yearly have both worldly and fleshly traffike.

Peregrine, Pilgrimage, p. 516.

jaquima (hā'ki-mā), n. [Sp. jaquima; of Ar. origin.] A horse's head-stall. [Western U.S.] jar (jār), v. [pret. and pp. jarred, pp. jarring.] [*Early mod. E. jar, jarre (besides jar, jurro); prob. a later form with sonant j for surd ch: cf. jawl and E. dial. jarre for charm = charm, charm of *char, *charre, *cherre, now spelled chirr and churr (cf. night-jar = night-churr, also churn-owl, the goatsucker, in reference to its cry), < ME. *cherren, cherren (not found), < AS. ceorrian, ceorran, murmur, complain, = MD. karren, also koeren, koerren, D. korren, coo, = OHG. korren, MHG. korren, kirren, G. kirren, coo, creek, crunch, = Dan. kurre, coo, = Sw. kurra, rumble, croak. Cf. MHG. gerren, garren, gurren, coo (also used of other sounds), G. girren, coo; prob. = L. garrere, chatter, prattle, talk, also croak (as a frog), sing (as a nightingale); and Skt. √ gar, sound, akin to E. call: see call and garrulous.] Words denoting sounds, even if not orig. imitative, are subject to imitative variation. Cf. jargle and jargon.] I. intrans. 1. To produce a brief rattling or tremulous sound; be discordant in sound.

Sweeter soundes, of concordes, peace, and loue,
Are out of tune, and jarre in every stoppe.

Gossoligne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 56.

2. To grate on the ear or the feelings; have a jangling or discordant quality; clash.

On easy numbers fix your happy choice;
Of jarring sounds avoid the odious noise.
Dryden and Somers, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry, l. 108.
A string may jar in the best master's hand.

Reveries.

Start at his awful name, or deem his praise
A jarring note.

Cowper, Task, iv. 181.

3. To receive a short, rattling, tremulous motion, as from an impulse; shake joltingly.

The gallery jarred with a quick and heavy tramp.
R. L. Stevenson, Prince Otto, ll. 14.

4†. To sound or tick in vibrating, as a pendulum; hence, to be marked off by regular vibrations or ticks.

The bells tolling, the owls shrieking, the toads croaking, the minutes jarring, and the clock striking twelve.
Kyd, Spanish Tragedy, iv.

5. To speak or talk clatteringly or discordantly; haggle; dispute; quarrel.

Ye muse somewhat to far,
All out of joynt ye jar.
Stanton, Duke of Albany and the Scotches.

We will not jar about the price.

And then they sit in council what to do,
And then they jar again what shall be done.

Pletcher (and another), Elder Brother, iv. 2.

II. trans. 1. To make discordant.

When once they [bells] jar and check each other, either jangling together or striking preposterously, how harsh and unpleasant is that noise!

Sp. Hall, Occasional Meditations, § 80.

I alone the beauty mar,
I alone the music jar.

Whittier, Andrew Rykman's Prayer.

2. To impart a short tremulous motion to; cause to shake or tremble; disturb.

When no mortal motion jars
The blackness round the tombing sod.

Tennyson, On a Mourner.

3. To make rough; roughen.

The face of the polishing-lap is hacked or jarred.
O. Byrne, Artisan's Handbook, p. 282.

jarl (jār), n. [Early mod. E. jar, jarre (besides jar, jurro) (cf. chirr, churr, n.); from the verb.]

1. A rattling sound; a harsh sound; a discord. The clash of arguments and jar of words.

Cowper, Conversation, l. 85.

2. A clashing of interest or opinions; collision; discord; debate; conflict: as, family jars.

Although there be in their words a manifest shew of jar, yet none if we look upon the difference of matter.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 19.

Yet him whose heart is ill at ease
Such peaceful solitudes displease;
He loves to drown his bosom's jar
Amid the elemental war.

Scott, Marmion, ll. Int.

3. A short tremulous motion or vibration, as from an impulse; a sudden shaking or quiver: as, to feel the jar of an earthquake, or from blasting.

In r. the tongue is held stiffly at its whole length, by the force of the muscles; so as when the impulse of breath strikes upon the end of the tongue, where it finds passage, it shakes and agitates the whole tongue, whereby the sound is affected with a trembling jar.

Hulder, Elem. of Speech.

4†. A clicking or ticking vibration, as of a pendulum; a tick.

I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind

What lady, she her lord. Shak., W. T., l. 2, 48.

5. pl. A sliding joint in the boring-rods used in rope-drilling. The jars are like two large flat chain-links, and their object is to give the bit a decided jar on the up-stroke, so as to loosen it in case it has become wedged in the hole. They also form a very important member of the drilling-tools, as being the connecting-link between the drill and the means of operating it.

jar² (jār), n. [< ME. char, a turn: see ajar².] A turn: used separately only in the occasional colloquial phrases on a jar, on the jar, usually ajar, on the turn; turned a little way, as a door or gate.

She never absolutely shuts her mouth, but leaves it always on a jar, as it were.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, ll. 2.

"I was there," resumed Mrs. Cluppina, "unknown to Mrs. Bardell: . . . when I see Mrs. Bardell's street-door on the jar." "On the what?" exclaimed the little Judge. "Partly open, my Lord," said Serjeant Snubbin.

Dickens, Pickwick, xxxiv.

jar³ (jār), n. [< OF. jare, F. jarre = Pr. jarra, quarra = It. giara, giarra, formerly also zara, z., giarro, m., < Sp. Pg. jarra, f., jarro, m., a jar, pitcher, < Ar. jarra, a ewer, a jug with pointed bottom, < Pers. jarrah, a jar, earthen water-vessel. Cf. Pers. jarrah, a little cruse or jar.] 1. An earthen or glass vessel of simple form, without handle or spout. In ancient times large earthenware jars served the purpose of can and barrels. See amphora, dolium, and pithos.

A great jarre to be shap'd
Was meant at first; why, furling still about Thy labouring wheels, scarce scarce a pitcher out?

E. Jonson, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry.

Or some frail China jar receive a flaw.

Pope, E. of the L., ll. 102.

2. The quantity contained in a jar; the contents of a jar.

Str. Spain has sent a thousand jars of oil.

Pope, Moral Essays, iii. 56.

Deflagrating jar, a glass-stopped jar used in the lecture-room to exhibit the combustion of certain bodies in gases, as, for instance, phosphorus or sulphur in oxygen. See deflagration.—Leyden jar. (After the town where it was invented.) In elect., a condenser (which see) consisting, in its common form, of a glass jar lined inside and out with tin-foil for about two thirds of its height. A brass rod terminating in a knob connects below with the inner coating, usually by means of a loose chain. The glass surface above the coatings is usually varnished, for better insulation. For illustration, see battery.—Unit jar, a small Leyden jar furnished with two knobs (one connected to each coating), the distance between which can be varied. By connecting one knob to the prime conductor of an electrical machine, and the other to one plate of a condenser (the other plate of which is to earth), the relative value of different charges can be measured, by counting the number of sparks which pass between the knobs during the operation of charging. The unit is entirely arbitrary.

jarble, jarvel (jār'bl, -vel), v. t.; pret. and pp. jarbled, jarveled or jarvelled, pp. jarbling, jarveling or jarveling. [See jarvel².] To wet; bedew, as by walking in long grass after dew or rain. Brockett. (Prov. Eng.)

jards (jārd), n. [F.] In farriery, a callous tumor on the leg of a horse, below the bend of the harn on the outside. Also jardon.

jardinière (zhār-dē-nyār'), n. [F., a flower-stand, also a female gardener, a gardener's wife, fem. of jardinier, a gardener: see garden, gardener.] 1. A piece of furniture or a vessel for the display of flowers, whether growing or out. (a) A stand upon which flower-pots can be arranged. (b) A cache-pot. (c) A vessel, often of fine enameled pottery or of porcelain, and richly decorated, in which flowers are arranged for the decoration of the table. 2. A kind of lapet, forming part of the head-dress of women at the beginning of the eighteenth century.

jardon (F. pron. zhār-dōn'), n. [F., < jarde, q. v.] Same as jarde.

jar-fly (jār'fl), n. A homopterous insect of the family Cicadidae; any harvest-fly or lyerman, as Cicada tibicen: so called from the jarring sound of their stridulation.

jarglet (jār'gl), v. t. [< OF. jargouiller, warble, chirp, chatter, connected with jargonner, chatter, jangle: see jargon¹. Cf. E. gargle¹, < OF. gargouiller.] To emit or make a harsh or shrill sound.

Jargles now in yonder bush.
England's Helicon, p. 46. (Halliwell.)

Her husband's rusty iron corselet

Whose jargling sound might rock her babe to rest.

Sp. Hall, Satires, iv. 4.

jargogle (jār'gog-l), v. t. [Appar. a confused extension of jargon¹.] To jumble; confuse.

To jargogle your thoughts. Locke.

jargon (jār'gon), n. [< ME. jargoun, gargon, jargon, jergon, chattering, < OF. jargon, gergon, F. jargon, gibberish, peddlers' French, orig. 'chattering,' = It. gergo, gergone, jargon (cf. Sp. gergonza = Pg. gergonza, jargon), < OF. (also F.) jargonner, chatter as birds, later speak gibberish, jangle, chatter, babble confusedly (cf. Sp. gergonza, speak a jargon); perhaps a reduced reduplication of the root appearing in L. garrere, chatter, prattle, talk, croak (as a frog), sing (as a nightingale), etc.: see jar¹ and garrulous.] 1. Confused, unintelligible talk; irregular, formless speech or language; gabble; gibberish; babble.

He was all coltish, full of ragerye,
And full of jargon as a fleeked pye.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 604.

What more exquisite jargon could the wit of man invent than this definition?—"The act of a being in power, as far forth as in power."

Locke, Human Understanding, III. iv. 8.

Specifically.—2. A barbarous mixed speech, without literary monuments; a rude language resulting from the mixture of two or more discordant languages, especially of a cultivated language with a barbarous one: as, the Chinook jargon; the jargon called Pidgin-English.

For my own part, besides the jargon and patois of several provinces, I understand no less than six languages.

St. T. Brown, Religio Medici, ll. 2.

3. Any phraseology peculiar to a sect, profession, trade, art, or science; professional slang or cant.

This society has a peculiar cant and jargon of their own.
Swift, Gulliver's Travels, iv. 3.

The conventional jargon of diplomacy, misleading everywhere, becomes tenfold more misleading in those parts of the world [southeastern Europe].

E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 408.

-Syn. 1. Chatter, Babble, etc. See prattle, n.
jargon¹ (jâr'gon), v. t. [ME. jargonnen, jargou- nen, < OF. jargonner, jargon; from the noun.]
To utter unintelligible sounds.

Full faire service, and eke ful swete
These briddis maden as they sete.
Layes of love, ful wel sownyng,
They songen in her jargonnyng.

Rom. of the Rose, l. 716.

The noisy jay,
Jargonnyng like a foreigner at his food.

Longfellow, Birds of Killingworth.

jargon² (jâr'gon), n. [Also jargoon; < F. jargon, < It. giargone, a sort of yellow diamond, perhaps < Pers. caryūn, gold-colored, < car, gold, + gūn, quality, color. Cf. zircon.] A colorful, yellowish, or smoky variety of the mineral zircon from Ceylon. The gray varieties are sold in Ceylon as inferior diamonds, and called Natura diamonds, because most abundant in the district of Natura.

jargonelle (jâr-gō-nel'), n. [Fr. jargonelle, a very stony variety of pear, dim. of jargon, the mineral so called: see *jargon*².] 1. A variety of early pear.—2. An essence obtained from fusel-oil.

jargonie (jâr-gōn'ik), a. [*Fr. jargon*² + -ie.] Pertaining to the mineral jargon.

jargonist (jâr-gōn'ist), n. [*Fr. jargon*¹ + -ist.] One who uses a particular jargon or phraseology; one who repeats by rote popular phrases, professional slang, or the like.

"And pray of what sort," said Camilla, "is this gentleman?" "Of the sort of jargonists," answered Mr. Gosport; "he has not an ambition beyond paying a yeasting compliment, nor a word to make use of that he has not picked up at public places." Miss Thorne, Cecilia, iv. 2.

jargonize (jâr-gōn'iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. jargonized, ppr. jargonizing. [OF. jargouner, speak jargon; as *jargon*¹ + -ize.] To speak a jargon; utter uncouth and unintelligible sounds.

jargon (jâr-gōn'), n. Same as *jargon*².

jark, n. [Appar. a perversion of *jack*¹, in same sense: see *jack*¹, n., 21.] A seal (see extract under jackman). Fraternité of Vocabondes, 1575. (Hallivell.)

jarkman, n. [Appar. a perversion of jackman, in same sense. Cf. jark.] 1. A particular kind of swindling beggar. See the quotation.

There [are] some in this School of Beggars that practise writing and reading, and those are called Jarkmen [old ed., Jackmen]: yea, the Jarkmen is so cunning sometimes that he can speak Latine: which learning of his lifts him vp to advancement, for by that means he becomes Clarke of their Hall, and his office is to make counterfeit licones, which are called Gybes, to which hee puts scales, and those are termed Jarkes.

Dekker, Belman of London, sig. C 3 (ed. 1608).

2. A begging-letter writer. [Slang.]

jarl (jârl, properly jâr'l), n. [Icel. = Dan. Sw. jarl = AS. eorl, E. earl: see earl.] In Scand. Hist.: (a) A man of noble birth; a nobleman. (b) A chief; as a title, an earl; a count. The name was used both as a family title and as an official designation. In Iceland, practically a republican commonwealth, it never took root.

Our metheling, earl, and slavo are found in the oldest tradition of the north as jarl, earl, and thrall; in later times earl begat the bondar and jarl the king.

J. R. Green, Conq. of Eng., p. 55.

Two ghastly heads on the gibbet are swinging;

One is Jarl Hakon's and one is his thrall's!

Longfellow, Saga of King Olaf, iii.

jarlet, v. t. [A freq. of jarl, or contr. of jargle.] To quarrel; be at odds.

The odd £50 shall come with the £100, or else my father and I will jarle.

Sir P. Sidney (Arber's Eng. Garner, l. 308).

jarlut (jâr'lut), n. [E. dial., due to Dan. jordnød or D. aardnoot = E. earthenut. Cf. jarworm, a dial. form of earthworm.] The earthenut or pignut. See Bunium.

jarool (ja-röl'), n. [E. Ind.] A timber-tree of India, Lagerstrœmia Flou-Rogina.

jarosite (ja-rô'sit), n. [Named from a locality, Barranco Jaroso, in Spain.] A native hydrous sulphate of iron and potassium, occurring in ochre-yellow rhombohedral crystals, and also in granular masses.

jar-owl (jâr'oul), n. The churn-owl, night-jar, or night-churr, Caprimulgus europæus.

jarrah (jâr'â), n. [Australian.] The Eucalyptus marginata, or mahogany gum-tree, abounding in southwestern Australia. It is famous for its indestructible wood, which is not attacked by the chelura, teredo, or termite, and does not easily decay. It is, therefore, highly valued for marine and underground uses, as for jetties, railroad-ties, and telegraph-poles. Australian ship-builders prefer it to any other timber, unless it be English or live oak. It has been somewhat criticised, however, for deficient tenacity and a tendency to warp and shrink. Jarrah-wood is reddish, heavy, and close-grained, works easily and takes a fine polish, and is valuable for building purposes and for furniture. See Eucalyptus.

jarry (jâr'i), a. [< jarl + -y.] Jarring; reverberating.

These flaves theyre cabbans wyth star snar jarry doe ransack. Shakespeare, As You Like It, l. 63.

jarvey (jâr'zi), n. An obsolete form of jersey.
jarvel, v. t. See jarble.

jarvey, jarvy (jâr'vi), n.; pl. jarveys, jarvies (-vîz). [Also jarvie; prob., like some other vehicle-names, of personal origin, from the surname Jarvie or Jarvis, which is another form of Jervis, Gervase.] 1. The driver of a hackney-coach. [Eng. slang.]

The Glass-coachman waits, and in what mood! A brother jarveys drives up, enters into conversation: is answered cheerfully in jarvis dialect. Carlyle, French Rev., II. iv. 3.

To the "Phœnix" Park a jarvey will be the best choice.
The Century, XXX. 177a.

2. A hackney-coach.

I stepped into the litter—I mean the litter at the bottom of the Jarvy. T. Hook, Gilbert Gurney, III. 1.

jarziet (jâr'zi), n. An obsolete form of jersey.

jaserant, n. See jaserant.

jasey (jâ'zi), n. [Also jasey and jasy; a corruption of jersey.] A kind of wig, originally one made of worsted; a jersey.

He looked disdainfully at the wig; it had once been a comely jasey enough, of the colour of over-baked gingerbread. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 358.

Jasione (jas-i-ō'nē), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < Gr. iasōnē (Theophrastus), a plant of the convolvulus kind, bindweed, or, according to others, columbine, appar. connected with iasis, healing, 'Iasô, a goddess of healing, < iaōthi, heal.] A genus of plants of the natural order Campulacaceae, containing about a dozen species of herbs belonging to temperate Europe. The corolla is narrowly five-parted; the anthers are somewhat connate at their base. The flowers are borne at the ends of the branches in hemispherical heads with leafy involucre. J. montana, with bright-blue flowers, is the common sheep-bit of Great Britain, and extends throughout Europe, the extreme northern part excepted.

jasmine, jasmin (jas'min or jaz'min), n. [In two forms: (1) jasmine, also spelled jasmin (= D. jasmin = G. Dan. Sw. jasmin), < OF. jasmin, joemin, F. jasmin = Sp. jazmin = Pg. jasmin; NL. jasminum; (2) jessamin, also spelled jessamine, and formerly johannin, < OF. johannin, jehomme = It. jessmino, also jessomino (cf. Gelsomino and gelsomino, q. v.) and gelsimo, jasmine; < Ar. yâsmîn, yessmîn, Turk. yâsmîn, < Pers. yâsmîn, also yâsmîn, jasmine. Cf. Gr. iâsmîn, also iâsmîn (êlasmîn, oil) and iâsmîn (êlasmîn, juice), a Persian perfume, perhaps oil of jasmine.] A plant of the genus Jasminum.—Bastard jasmine, species of the genus Cestrum.—Cape jasmine, Gardenia florida.—Carolina or yellow jasmine, Gelsomium sempervirens.—Chilli jasmine, Mandevilla suaveolens.—French jasmine, Calotropis procera.—Jasmine box, species of the genus Phillyrea.—Night jasmine, Nyctanthes Arbor-trita.—Red jasmine, Plumeria rubra. See frangipani.—Wild jasmine, the wind-flower, Anemone nemorosa.

Jasmines (jas-min'-s), n. pl. [NL. (Jussieu, 1789), < Jasminum + -es.] A plant-tribe of the natural order Oleaceae, typified by the genus Jasminum. It is distinguished by the fruit being twin, or septoidally divisible into two, by the lobes of the corolla being strongly imbricated and twisted in the bud, and by the seeds being erect and having little or no albumen.

jasmine-tree (jas'min-trē), n. The red jasmine, Plumeria rubra, of the West Indies. See Plumeria.

Flowering Branch of Jasmine (Jasminum officinale). a, flower entire; b, flower opened to show the stamens; c, pistil.

Jasminum (jas'mi-num), n. [NL. (Linnaeus): see jasmine.] A genus of the natural order Oleaceae, containing some 90 species of shrubby, often climbing, plants, indigenous in the warmer parts of the old world, especially in Asia, many of them cultivated. The corolla of the flowers has a cylindrical tube (which includes the two stamens), and a spreading limb, with usually four or five divisions. The leaves are pinnately compound, or reduced to a single leaflet. The white or yellow flowers are axillary or terminal. Well-known species are J. officinale, the common white jasmine, thoroughly naturalized in southern Europe; J. grandiflorum, from India, variously called Malabar or Catalonian or Spanish jasmine; and J. Sambac, the Arabian jasmine. The ordinary jasmine-oil is furnished mainly by the first two, which are extensively cultivated for the purpose in southern Europe; but the last yields a similar perfume. Many other species are prized for their elegance and fragrance.

jasp (jasp), n. [ME. jasppe, < OF. jasppe, < L. iaspis, jasper: see jasper.] Jasper.

The floor of Jasp and Emeralds was dight.

Spenser, Visions of Belley, l. 35.

jaspachate (jas'pa-kât), n. [< F. jaspagate, < L. iaspachates, < Gr. iaspacharês, < iaspis, jasper, + êcharês, agate.] Agate jasper.

jasppe (jasp), n. [F., lit. jasper: see jasper.] A dark-gray substance produced by deoxidizing crystallized glass: used in ornamental art. D. M. Wallace, Art Jour., N. S., IX. 222.

jaspé (jas'pâ), a. [F., pp. of jasper (= Sp. Pg. jasper), make like jasper, < jaspe, jasper: see jasper.] In decorative art, especially in ceramics, having a surface ornamented with veins, spots, cloudings, etc., as if in imitation of jasper; jasperated; jaspidean.

jasper (jas'pér), n. [< ME. jasper, jaspre, also jaspe (and as L. iaspis), < OF. jasppe, an occasional form (with excrecent r) of jaspe, F. jaspe = Fr. jaspé = Sp. Pg. jaspe = It. jaspide (also diaspro, ML. diaspros, > ult. E. diaper, and obs. diaspre, q. v.) = D. G. jaspis, < L. iaspis (iaspid-), < Gr. iaspis, < Ar. yâsh, yâsh, yâsh (> Pers. yashh) = Heb. yashpheh, jasper.] 1. Among the ancients, a bright-colored chalcedony (not, however, including carnelian), translucent and varying in color, green being apparently most common. It was highly esteemed as a precious stone.

Her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone. Rev. xxi. 11.

2. In modern usage, a closely compact cryptocrystalline variety of quartz, opaque or nearly so, and colored red, yellow, or brown, or less often green. The color is usually due to oxid of iron, the anhydrous oxid being present in the red, and the hydrated oxid in the yellow and brown varieties. Some kinds contain clay as an impurity, and a red jasper rock (sometimes called jasperite) occurs on a large scale with the iron ores of the Lake Superior region. The finer varieties of jasper admit of a good polish, and are used for vases, snuff-boxes, seals, etc. Banded or striped jasper (also called ribbon-jasper) is a kind having the color in broad stripes, as of red and green. Agate jasper has layers of chalcedony. Egyptian jasper, much used in ancient art, was found near the Nile, in nodules having zones of red, yellow, or brown colors. Porcelain jasper is merely a baked indurated clay, often of a bright-red color.

3. An earthenware made of pounded spar.—4. Same as jasper-ware.

jasperated (jas'pér-â-ted), a. [< jasper + *-ate*² + -ed.] Mixed with jasper; containing particles of jasper: as, jasperated agate.

jasper-dip (jas'pér-dip), n. Same as jasper-wash.

jasperite (jas'pér-it), n. [< jasper + *-ite*².] See jasper, 2.

jasperize (jas'pér-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. jasperized, ppr. jasperizing. [< jasper + -ize.] To convert into a form of silica like jasper. The "petrified forest" near Corima in Apache county, Arizona, contains large quantities of jasperized wood, much of it true agate and jasper, and of great beauty when polished. It is extensively used for ornamental objects; single sections of the tree-trunks form table-tops, etc.

The Arizona agatized or jasperized wood shows the most beautiful variety of colours of any petrified wood in the world. Nature, XXXVII. 68.

jasper-opal (jas'pér-ô'pal), n. An impure variety of the common opal, containing some yellow iron oxid and having the color of yellow jasper. Also called jasp-opal and opal-jasper.

jasper-ware (jas'pér-wâr), n. A kind of pottery invented by Josiah Wedgwood, and described by him as "a white terra-cotta" and as "a white porcelain bisque (biscuit)." This paste was used by Wedgwood for his most delicate work, especially for the small reliefs called "cameos" with which he ornamented his finest vases, etc., and which were also made for setting in jewelry. Also called cameo-ware.

jasper-wash (jas'pér-wash), n. A kind of ceramic decoration introduced by Wedgwood in 1777. In this the more expensive jasper-ware is used only for the surface, the body being of coarser material. Also called jasper-dip.

aspery (jas'pér-d), a. [Jasper + -y.] Resembling jasper; mixed with jasper: as, jaspery quartz.

aspidean (jas-pid'-é-an), a. [L. aspidéus, < aspis, jasper: see jasper.] Like jasper; consisting of jasper, or containing jasper.

aspideous (jas-pid'-é-us), a. [= Pg. aspidéus, < L. aspidéus, < aspis, jasper: see jasper.] Like jasper.

aspoid (jas'poid), a. [Jasper + -oid.] Resembling jasper.

asponyx (jas'pō-niks), n. [L. asponyx, < Gr. asponyx, < aspon, jasper, + onyx.] A jasper with the structure of an onyx.

aspopal (jasp'ō'pal), n. Same as jasperopal.

aspure (jas'pūr), n. [F. aspure (= Pg. aspidura), marbling, < jasper, make like jasper, marble: see jaspe.] Decoration with veins of color like those of jasper or agate.

Jassus (jas'i-dé), n. pl. [NL., < Jassus + -idae.] An extensive family of homopterous insects, named from the genus Jassus, of wide geographical distribution, and containing many bugs ordinarily called leaf-hoppers. They are mostly of small size, slender and often spindle-shaped, with very long hind legs, and curved tibiae armed with a double row of spines. They occur in nearly all parts of the world, and many of them are notably noxious to agriculture and horticulture. Also Jassidae.

Jassus (jas'us), n. [Prop. Jassus, < L. Jassus or Jassus, < Gr. Jassos, < Jassos, a town on the coast of Caria, now Askem.] The name-giving genus of Jassidae, at present restricted to a few species not characteristic of the family.

Jataka (jā'ta-kā), n. [Skt. jātika, < jāta, born, pp. of √ jā or jan, be born.] A nativity; birth-story; specifically, an account of the life of Buddha in one of his successive human existences.

Jatamansi (jat-a-man'si), n. [E. Ind.] The supposed spikenard of the ancients, Nardostachys Jatamansi.

Jathura (jat'-ō-ri-zh), n. [NL. (Miers, 1851), irreg. < Gr. iathra or iathra, a physician (< iathra, cure), + rhiza, a root.] A genus of Menispermaceae, containing, with one or two other species, the J. Calumba, whose root is the columbo of commerce. They belong to the forests of Mozambique, and are woody climbers with large, deeply cleft leaves on long petioles, and the flowers in axillary racemes. The flower has 6 sepals in two sets, 6 petals shorter than the sepals, and in the male plant 6 stamens whose anthers open by a transverse slit near the extrorse tip. In the female flower there are 6 sterile stamens, and 6 ovaries which become ovoid drupes. See out under columbo.

Jatropha (jat'rō-fā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), irreg. < Gr. iathra, a physician, + trophē, sustenance, food, < trēphō, nourish, sustain.] A genus of plants of the natural order Euphorbiaceae, and tribe Crotonom, embracing some 68 species belonging to the warmer parts of both hemispheres, but chiefly American.

They are monocious herbs or shrubs with alternate petioled and stipulate leaves, which are entire or palmately lobed. The small flowers are in dichotomous cymes, the fertile toward the center. The male flowers, and sometimes the female, have a corolla with five petals or lobes. The numerous stamens are in two or more series, with their filaments more or less united in a column. The ovary is two- or three-lobed, with one seed in a cell. J. Curat furnishes the seeds known as Burbaes nuts, also, on account of their properties, called philo or psycho-nuts. These, with the seeds of J. multifida (called corn-plants), yield the jatropha-oil. J. gossypifolia of the East Indies yields a stimulating oil, used externally. J. urens, var. stimulans, called stinging-nettle and bread-softy, is a stinging weed of the southern United States. J. gossypifolia is a curious species sometimes cultivated in conservatories.

Jaud (jād), n. A Scotch form of jaded.

I heard one o' his gibbles bid that auld rudas fand of a gudewife gie ye that.

jauk (jāk), v. t. [Origin obscure.] To trifle; spend one's time idly. [Scotch.]

The youngsters a' are warned to obey.
An' mind their labours w' an' ayent hand,
An' ne'er, though out o' sight, to jaup or play.

jauk (jāk), n. [Jasper + -y.] A trifle; trifling; dallying.—Sc. An idler; trifier. Jamieson.

jaul, v. t. A former spelling of jowl.

jaulingite (you'ling-it), n. [Jasper (see def.) + -ite.] A mineral resin obtained from the lignite of Jauling in Lower Austria.

jaum, jaumb, n. Obsolete or dialectal forms of jamb.

jaunt, n. [Cf. ML. (AL.) jaunnum, jampnum; < Bret. jaon, jan (Du Congo), furze.] Furze; gorse.

jauncet (jāns or jāns), v. [The verb jaunce, q. v., is older, being found in ME.; the later jaunce may be a different word, being appar. < OF. janceur, jaunce, jounce (a horse): see jaunt and jaunce.] I. trans. To jolt or shake, as a horse by rough riding; ride hard. Also jaunt.

II. intrans. 1. To ride hard.

Spur-gall'd, and tir'd by jauncing Bellingbrooke.

Shak., Rich. II., v. 5, 24.

2. To be jolted or shaken up, as by much walking; walk about till much fatigued. See quotation under jaunt, v. t., 1.

jauncet (jāns or jāns), n. [Also jounce, q. v.; from the verb.] A jolting; a shaking up, as by much walking. See quotation under jaunt, v. t., 1.

jaunder (jān'- or jān'dér), v. t. [Also jauner, jauner, janner (cf. also channer); appar. a freq. of jaunt; perhaps influenced by the partlyequiv. daunder, q. v.] To talk idly or in a jocular way.

They war only jokin'; . . . they war just jaunderin' wi' the bridegroom for fun.

Edinburgh Monthly Mag., June, 1817, p. 248.

To jaunder about, to go about idly from place to place.

jaunder (jān'- or jān'dér), n. [Also jauner, jauner; from the verb.] 1. Idle talk; gossip; chatter.

Oh hand your tongue now, Luckie Laid,
Oh hand your tongue an' jauner.

Burns, Cat ye Me.

2. Rambling or desultory conversation. [Scotch in both senses.] jaunders (jān'- or jān'dérz), n. A dialectal form of jaundice.

jaundice (jān'- or jān'dis), n. [Early mod. F. also jaundice, jaundice; E. dial. jaunders, jaunders; < ME. jaundys, jandis, jandis, also jaundres (with excrement d and r), earlier jaunes, jaunes, jaunys, < OF. jaunice, later jaunisse, F. jaunisse, jaundice, yellow, lit. 'yellowness,' < OF. jauno, yellow: see jaune.] 1. In pathol., a morbid state characterized by the presence of bile-pigments in the blood, which gives rise to a yellow staining of the skin and the whites of the eyes and to a dark coloring of the urine. The stools are usually light in color, and there is more or less lassitude and loss of appetite. Xanthopy, or yellow vision, occurs in some very rare instances. Also called icterus.

Then on the liver doth the Jaundice fall,
Stopping the passage of the choleric Gall;
Which then, for good blood, scatters all about Her fiery poison, yellowing all without.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Furies.

Hence—2. A state of feeling or emotion that colors the view or disorders the judgment, as jealousy, envy, and the like.

Jealousy, the jaundice of the soul.

Dryden, Hind and Panther, III. 73.

jaundice (jān'- or jān'dis), v. t.; pret. and pp. jaundiced, ppr. jaundicing. [Jasper + -y.] 1. To affect with jaundice.

All looks yellow to the jaundiced eye.

Pope, Essay on Criticism, I. 550.

Hence—2. To affect with prejudice or envy.

He beheld the evidence of wealth, and the envy of wealth jaundiced his soul.

Bulwer, My Novel, II. 10.

jaundice-berry, jaundice-tree (jān'dis-ber'i, -trē), n. [So called with ref. to the yellow under-bark.] The barberry, Berberis vulgaris.

jaunet, a. [ME., < OF. jaune, jaine, jaunne, F. jaune = Pg. jaine, yellow, < L. galbinus, also galbanus, yellowish-green, < L. galbus, yellow; prob. of Teut. origin; cf. OHG. gelo (gelu-), G. gelb = E. yellow, of which the proper L. form is helvus: see yellow, helvin, and chlorin.] Yellow.

Wine of Tourain, and of Bewme also,
Which tawne colour applied night unto.

Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), I. 970.

I won't be known by my colors, like a bird. I have made up my mind to wear the jaune.

C. Roade, Love me Little, I.

jauner (jā'- or jā'nér), v. and n. See jaunder.

jaunest, jaunyst, n. Obsolete forms of jaundice.

jaunt (jānt or jānt), v. [Sometimes spelled jaunt; history defective, the word being confused with other words of similar or related meanings; cf. jaunce, jounce, also jaunder, jauder, jaunt, jump, etc., all prob. of Scand. origin. The relations of these forms are undetermined.] I. trans. Same as jaunce.

He was set upon an unbroken coult, . . . and counted till he were breathless.

Sp. Bale, Pageant of Popes, fol. 127.

II. intrans. 1. Same as jaunce, 2.

O, my back, my back!
Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jaunting (var. jaunting) up and down!

Shak., R. and J., II. 5, 122.

2. To wander here and there; ramble; make an excursion, especially for pleasure.

Yes, I'm weary with the walk!
My jaunting days are done.

Beau. and Fl., Wit at Several Weapons, v. 2.

jaunt (jānt or jānt), n. [Jasper + -y.] 1. A jolting; a shaking up, as by much walking.

I am awary, give me leave a while:—
Flo, how my bones ache! what a jaunt (var. jaunce) have I had!

Shak., R. and J., II. 5, 22.

2. A ramble; an excursion; a short journey, especially one made for pleasure.

His first jaunt is to court.

Sh. R. L'Ettrange.

I designed a jaunt into the city to-day to be merry, but was disappointed.

Swet, Journal to Stella, xxiv.

Spring, which is now in full vigour, and every hedge and bush covered with flowers, rendered our jaunt delightful.

H. Schinburne, Travels through Spain, xxx.

—Syn. 2. Trip, tour, stroll.

jaunt (jānt), n. [Prob. of Scand. origin, namely < Sw. ganta, play the buffoon, romp, sport, jest (refl. gantas, Dan. gantes, jest), < Sw. dial. gant, a fool, buffoon (cf. gan, droll, Icel. gan, frenzy, frantic gestures). Cf. jaunt.] A sneer; gibe; taunt. [Scotch.] jaunt (jānt), n. [< OF. jante, also spelled gento, in pl. jantes, the folles of a wheel; origin obscure.] A felly of a wheel.

jauntily (jān'- or jān'ti-li), adv. Briskly; airily; gaily. Also spelled jauntily.

jauntiness (jān'- or jān'ti-ness), n. The quality of being jaunty; airiness; sprightliness. Also spelled jauntiness.

A certain stiffness in my limbs entirely destroyed that jauntiness of air I was once master of.

Addison, Spectator, No. 530.

jaunting-car (jān'ting-kār), n. [Appar. < jaunting, verbal n. of jaunt, v. t., 2, + car; but the var. janty-car, if not a corruption, makes this doubtful.] A light two-wheeled vehicle, very popular in Ireland, having two seats extended back to back over the low wheels for the accommodation of passengers, a compartment between the seats, called the well, for the receipt of luggage, and a perch in front for the driver.

jaunty (jān'ti or jān'ti), a. [First in the latter part of the 17th century, with various spellings janty, jantoe, jauntee, etc., also accented as if F. jantie, jantie, being an imperfect imitation, in E. spelling, of the contemporary F. pronunciation of F. gentil, otherwise Englished as genteel and in older form gentile; the form genty, with E. vowel sound, also occurs, and, in ME., gent, < OF. gent, an abbr. of gentil: see gentile, genteel, genty.] 1. Genteel.

I desire my Reformation may be a Secret, because, as you know, for a Man of my Address, and the rest—'tis not altogether so Jantoe.

Mrs. Behn, Sir Timothy Tawdry, I. 1.

2. Gay and sprightly in manner, appearance, or action; airy; also, affectedly elegant or showy.

Not every one that brings from beyond seas a new gin or janty device, is therefore a philosopher.

Hobbes Considered (1666). (Todd.)

Turn your head about with a janty air.

Farruker, The Inconstant, I.

No wind blows rude enough to jostle the jauntyest hat that ever sat upon a human head.

H. James, Suba, and Shad., p. 222.

The jaunty self-satisfaction caused by the bias of patriotism when excessive.

H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 217.

jaup (jāp), v. [Also written jaup, jalp; cf. jaup; origin obscure.] I. trans. 1. To strike; chip or break by a sudden blow.—2. To spatter, as water or mud.

Boomer sprang i' the salt sea out,
And jaup'd it up i' the sky.

Romney Hayman (Child's Ballads, I. 287).

II. intrans. To dash and rebound as water; make a noise like water agitated in a close vessel. [Scotch in all uses.]

And Scotland wants no skinking ware (watery stuff)
That Jaaps in luggins. Burns, To a Haggis.

Jaap (jâp), n. [Jaup, v.] Water, mud, etc., dashed or splashed up. [Scotch.]

And dash the gumlie [muddy] Jaups up to the pouring skies. Burns, Brigs of Ayr.

Java (jâ'vâ), n. [So called from the island of Java.] A breed of the domestic hen, originated in the United States. The Javans are of good size and broad deep shape, and rank well for utility.
There are two varieties, the blacks, which have dark legs, and the mottled, the latter being evenly marked black and white, with legs also mottled. Both varieties have upright combs.

Java almonds. See almond.

Javan (jâ'vân), a. [Java (see def.) + -an.]
Of or belonging to Java, a large island of the East Indies belonging to the Dutch, southeast of Sumatra; Javanese.

The Javan flora on the pure volcanic clay differs from that where the soil is more overlaid with forest humus.
H. O. Forbes, Eastern Archipelago, p. 78.

Javan opossum, rhinoceros, etc. See the nouns.

Javanese (jav-â-nê'sôiz), n. pl. Same as ajowan.

Javanese (jav-â-nêh' or -nêz'), a. and n. [Java
+ -n + -ese.] The name Java in the native speech is Jâwâ, in early forms Jawa, Jaba, etc.]
I. a. Of or pertaining to the island of Java.

The house of a Javanese chief has eight roofs, while the mans of the people are restricted to four.

Amer. Naturalist, XXIII. 32.

II. n. 1. sing. or pl. A native or natives of Java.—2. The language of Java, of the Malay-an family.

Java sparrow. See sparrow.

Javel (jav'el), n. [Early mod. E. javel, jewel (dial. jabel); < ME. javel; origin unknown.] A low, worthless fellow.

He [the friar] called the fellow ribhald, villain, javel, backbiter, slanderer, and the child of perdition.
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), I.

Expired had the terms that these two Javels
Should render up a reckoning of their travels Unto their master.

Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, l. 309.

Javel (jav'el), n. [Also javil; < OF. javelle, javelo (F. javelle), i. javel, m., assimilated form of javelle, > E. javel, a bundle, sheaf: see gavel.] A sheaf: same as gavel.

Then must the forsoad Javels or stalks bee hung out a second time to be dried in the sun.

Holland, tr. of Pliny, xix. 1.

Javel (jav'el), v. t. [Also written javel, jar-ble; cf. So. javel, jovel, joggle, spill a small quantity of liquid, distinguished from jarble, jarble, spill a large quantity of liquid, jarble, a slight motion of water; origin obscure. Cf.
jav.] To bumire.

Javel (jâ'vel), n. [Javelle, a later variant of javel, etc., jail: see jail.] A jail. Cath.
Ang., p. 194. (Halliwell.)

Javelin (jav'lin), n. [Formerly also javeling; < OF. javelin, m., javeline, f., i. javeline = Sp.
jabalina = It. giavelina, a javelin (cf. also javellot); of Celtic origin: cf. Bret. gavlin and gar-lod (prob. accom. to the F.), a javelin, garl, the fork of a tree: see further under javelot, gavel, gable, and gaff.] 1. A spear intended to be thrown by the hand, with or without the aid of a thong or a throwing-stick. The word is the general term for all such weapons. The javelin was in use in Europe in the middle ages, and in antiquity. Among Oriental nations and among modern savage tribes it is a common weapon of offence. See pilum, amentum, and jorced.

O, be advised; thou know'st not what it is
With Javelin's point a churlish swine to gore.
Shaks., Venus and Adonis, l. 614.

His figur'd shield, a shining orb, he takes,
And in his hand a pointed Javelin shakes.
Pope, Iliad, iii. 420.

2. In her., a bearing representing a short-handled weapon with a barbed head, and so distinguished from a half-spear, which has a lance-head without barbs.

Javelin (jav'lin), v. t. [Javelin, n.] To strike or wound with or as with a javelin. [Rare.]

A bolt
(For now the storm was close about them) struck, Furrowing a giant oak, and Javelining
With darted spikes and splinters of the wood
The dark earth round. Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

Javelin-bat (jav'lin-bat), n. A South American vampire, Phyllostoma hastatum.

Javelinier, n. [Javelinier, < javeline, a javelin: see javelin.] A soldier armed with a javelin. Also javelotier.

The Javeliniers foremost of all began the fight.
Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 296.

javelin-man (jav'lin-man), n. A yeoman retained by the sheriff to escort the judge of assize. Wharton.

If necessary the sheriff must attend [at the assizes] with javelin men to keep order. J. Stephen, Com., II. 631, n.

javelin-snake (jav'lin-snâk), n. A snake-liard of the family Acontidae.

Javelle water (zha-vel' wâ'ter). Same as eau de Javelle (which see, under eau).

javelot, n. [OF. (= It. giavelotto): see javelin.]
A javelin.

javelotier, n. [Javelotier, < javelot, a small javelin: see javelot.] Same as javelinier.

The spearmen or javelotiers of the vaward . . . made head and received them with fight.

Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 294.

jaw (jâ), n. [Jaw, also jowe, geowe, an alteration (with sonant j for orig. ch, as also in jowl, jar, jar, jar, jar, and perhaps jaml) of ME. chawe, choue*, found only in early mod.
E. chawe, chaw, jaw (= OD. kauwe, the jaw of a fish (Hexam), kouwe, the cavity of the mouth, = Dan. kjave, the jaw); appar. < ME. cheowen, cheowon, mod. E. chew, chaw = OD. kouwen, etc., chew. The form may have been affected by association with jowl, ME. jolle, chaul, etc., and perhaps with F. joue, cheek.] 1. One of the bones which form the skeleton or framework of the mouth; a maxilla or mandible; these bones collectively. The jaws in nearly all vertebrates are two in number, the upper and the lower. The upper jaw on each side consists chiefly of the superior maxillary or supramaxilla, and of an intermaxillary bone or premax-illa, both of which commonly bear teeth in mammals, reptilia, batrachians, and some fossil birds. The lower jaw in mammals is a single bone, the inframaxillary, inframax-illa, or mandible, or one pair of bones united at the middle line by a symphysis. In vertebrates below mammals this bone is represented by several pieces, its bony elements becoming quite complex in birds and most reptiles and many fishes. The mandible, and especially its terminal element when there are several, commonly bears teeth like the upper jaw. As a rule, it is movably articulated with the rest of the skull. In mammals this articulation is direct, and is known as the temporomaxillary. In birds it is indirect, by intervention of a quadrate bone; and in the lower vertebrates various other modifications occur. See cuts under Cyclopterus, Gallinæ, Fetidae, and stril.

These Serpentes alien men, and thel eten hem wepyng;
and whan thel eten, thel meven the over Joue, and noughte the nether Joue; and thel have no Tongue.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 288.

2. The bones and associated structures of the mouth, as the teeth and soft parts, taken together as instruments of prehension and mastication; mouth-parts in general: commonly in the plural. In most invertebrates, as insects and crustaceans, the jaws are much complicated, and consist essentially of modified limbs, maxillipedes, gnathopods, or jaw-feet; and the opposite parts work upon each other sidewise, not up and down. Often used figuratively. See cut under mouth-part.

My tongue cleaveth to my Jaws. Ps. xxii. 15.
Now, when we were in the very Jaws of the gulf, I felt more composed than when we were only approaching it.

Poe, Tales, I. 172.

To drop head-foremost in the Jaws
Of vacant darkness.

Tennyson, In Memoriam, xxxiv.

3. Something resembling in position or use, in grasping or biting, the jaw or jaws of an animal. (a) Naut., the hollowed or semicircular inner end of a boom or gaff. See gaff, 2. (b) In mach.: (1) One of two opposing members which can be moved toward or from one another: as, the Jaws of a vise or wrench; the Jaws of a stone-crusher. (2) Same as housing, 9 (a).

4. [Jaw, v.] Rude loquacity; coarse railing; abusive clamor; wrangling. [Vulgar.]—Angle of the Jaw. See angle.—Articular process of the lower Jaw. See articular.—Jaws of death. See death's door, under death.—To hold one's Jaw, to cease or refrain from talking. [Vulgar.]—To wag one's Jaw, or the Jaws.
Same as to wag one's chin (which see, under chin).

jaw (jâ), v. [Jaw, n.] I. Intrans. To talk or gossip; also, to scold; clamor. [Vulgar.]

But, neighbor, if they prove their claim at law,
The best way is to settle, an' not Jaw.

Lowell, Biglow Papers, 2d ser., II.

There they was [the child and the jaw-bird], a Jawin' at each other.

Bret Harte, Luck of Boaring Camp.

II. trans. 1. To seize with the jaws; bite; devour.

In me hath greese alaine feare. . . .
I reek not if the wolves would Jaw me.

Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, iii. 2.

2. To abuse by scolding; use impertinent or impudent language toward. [Vulgar.]

jaw (jâ), v. [Appar. connected with Jaw and Jawp.] I. trans. To pour out; throw or dash out rapidly, and in considerable quantity, as a liquid; splash; dash. [Scotch.]

Tempests may cease to Jaw the rowan flood.
Ramsay, Gentle Shepherd, l. 1.

II. Intrans. To splash; dash, as a wave.

For now the water Jaws ower my head,
And it gurgles in my mouth.
Sir Roland (Child's Ballads, I. 227).

[Scotch in all uses.]

jaw (jâ), n. [Jaw, v.] A considerable quantity of any liquid; a wave. [Scotch.]

She's ta'en her by the lily hand, . . .
And led her down to the river strand; . . .
She took her by the middle arm, . . .
And dash'd her bonny back to the Jew.
The Cruel Sister (Child's Ballads, II. 229).

jawbation (jâ-bâ'shon), n. [A var. of jobation, simulating jaw, n., 4, jaw, v.] A scolding.
N. and Q., 7th ser., VIII. 35. [Colloq.]

jaw-bit (jâ'bit), n. A short bar placed beneath a journal-box to unite the two pedestals in a car-truck.

jaw-bolt (jâ'bôlt), n. A bolt with a U-shaped split head, perforated to carry a pin. Car-Builder's Dict.

jaw-bone (jâ'bôn), n. Any bone of the jaws, as a maxillary or mandibular bone; especially,
a bone of the lower jaw.

And he found a new Jawbone of an am. . . . and took it, and slew a thousand men therewith. Judges xv. 15.

jaw-box (jâ'boks), n. [Jaw + box.] Same as jaw-hole. [Scotch.] jaw-breaker (jâ'brâ'kër), n. A word hard to pronounce. [Slang.]

jaw-chuck (jâ'chuk), n. A chuck which has movable studs on a face-plate, to approach and grasp an object.

Jawed (jâd), a. [Jaw + -ed.] Having jaws; having jaws of a specified kind: as, heavy-Jawed.

For they [her eyes] are blered
And graye beared Jawed lyke a Jetty.

Shelton, Elynour Rummyng.

The metamorphosis of the Jawed Neuroptera is little more marked. E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 315.

jawfall (jâ'fâl), n. Depression of the jaw; hence, depression of spirits, as indicated by depression of the jaw. [Rare.]

jawfallen (jâ'fâ'ln), a. Depressed in spirits; dejected; chafffallen. [Obsolete or rare.]

Nay, be not Jaw-falne. Marston, Dutch Courtesan, l. 1.

He may be compared to one so Jaw-fallen with over-long fasting that he cannot eat meat when brought unto him.
Fuller, Worthies, Essex.

jaw-foot (jâ'fût), n. 1. Same as jaw-hole.—2.
In zool., same as foot-jaw.

jaw-footed (jâ'fût'ed), a. Gnathopod.

jaw-hole (jâ'hôl), n. [Also corruptly Jawhole, Jarhole; < Jaw + hole.] A place into which dirty water, etc., is thrown; a sink. Also Jaw-box, Jaw-foot. [Scotch.]

Before the door of Saunders Joup . . . yawned that odoriferous gulf yelped, in Scottish phrase, the Jaw-hole: in other words, an uncovered common sewer.

Scott, St. Ronan's Well, xxviii.

Jawing-tackle (jâ'ing-tak'1), n. Same as Jaw-tackle. [Slang.]

Ah! Eve, my girl, your Jawing-tackle is too well hung.
O. Reade, Love me Little, xxii.

jaw-jerk (jâ'jerk), n. In pathol., same as chin-jerk.

Jawless (jâ'les), a. [Jaw + -less.] Having no jaws; agnathous; specifically, having no lower jaw, as a lamprey or hag.

jaw-lever (jâ'lev'ër), n. An instrument for opening the mouth of a horse or a cow in order to administer medicine to it.

jaw-mouthed (jâ'mouth'), a. Having a mouth with a lower jaw: a translation of the epithet gnathostomous applied to the cranial vertebrates except the round-mouthed or single-nostriled lampreys and hags.

Jawnt, v. i. An obsolete form of yawn. Compare chaw.

Stop his Jawning chaps.

Marston, Scourge of Villanie, l. 2.

jaw-rope (jâ'rôp), n. Naut., a rope attached to the jaw of a gaff to prevent it from coming off the mast.

Jawsmith (jâ'smith), n. [Jaw, n. (def. 1, with allusion also to def. 4), + smith.] One who works with his jaw; especially, a loud-mouthed demagogue: originally applied to an official "orator" or "instructor" of the Knights of Labor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat, 1886. [Slang, U. S.]

jaw-spring (jâ'spring), n. A journal-spring.

jaw-tackle (jâ'tak'1), n. The mouth. Also Jawing-tackle. [Slang.]—To cast off one's Jaw-tackle, to talk too much. [Fishermen's slang.]

aw-tooth (jā'tōth), n. A tooth in the back part of the jaw; a molar; a grinder.
aw-wedge (jā'wēj), n. A wedge used to tighten an axle-box in an axle-guard.
awyī (jā'ī), a. [< jawī + -yī] Relating or pertaining to the jaws.

The dew-laps and the jawy part of the face.

Gayton, Notes on Don Quixote, p. 42.

ay¹ (jā), n. [< j + -ay, as in kay, the name of k.] The name of the letter j. It is rarely written out, the symbol j being used instead.

ay² (jā), n. [< ME. jay, < OF. jay, mod. F. jai, assimilation of earlier OF. gay, gai = Pr. jai, gai = Sp. gajo, a jay, gaja, a magpie; so called from its gay plumage, < OF. gai, etc., jay: see gay¹.] 1. Any bird of the subfamily Farrulinae; specifically, Garrulus glandarius, a common European bird, about 13 inches long, of a gray color tinged with reddish, varied with black, white, and blue, and having the head crested. The jays are birds usually of bright and varied colors, among which blue is the most conspicuous, thus contrasting with the somber crows, their nearest allies. The tail is comparatively long, sometimes extremely so, jay-pie (jā'pi), n. 1. The common jay, Garrulus glandarius [Prov. Eng.]—2. The miscel-thrush. [Prov. Eng.] jay-piet (jā'pi'et), n. Same as jay-pie.

jay-teal (jā'tē), n. The common teal or teal-duck, Querquedula crecca.

jay-thrush (jā'thrush), n. Any bird of the genus Garrulus, or of some related genus, as Leucodactylus or Grammatoptila. P. L. Solater.
jayweed (jā'wēd), n. The plant mayweed, Anthemis Cotula. [Prov. Eng.]

jazel (jā'zel), n. [< Sp. azul = E. azure.] A gem of an azure-blue color.

jaserant, jaserant (jas'g-rant, -rgnt), n. See jaserant.

jazy, n. See jaszy.

jealous (jel'us), a. [Early mod. F. also jelous; < ME. jelous, gelous, gelus, also jelous, < OF. jalous, F. jalous = Pr. gelos = Sp. zeloso = It. geloso, zeloso, < ML. zelosus, full of zeal, < L. zelus, < Gr. ζῆλος, zeal: see zeal.] 1. Full of zeal; zealous in the service of a person or cause; solicitous for the honor or interests of one's self or of another, or of some institution, cause, etc.: followed by for.
I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts. 1 Ki. xix. 10.

Then will the Lord be jealous for his land. Joel ii. 18.
2. Anxiously watchful; suspiciously vigilant; much concerned; suspicious.
I am jealous over you with godly jealousy. 2 Cor. xii. 2.

Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel. Shak., As you Like It, II. 7, 151.

The court was not jealous of any evil intention in Mr. Saltonstall. Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 78.
During the service a man came into near the middle of the church with his sword drawn. . . . In this jealous time it put the congregation into great confusion. Evelyn, Diary, March 20, 1687.

Specifically—3. Troubled by the suspicion or the knowledge that the love, good will, or success one desires to retain or secure has been diverted from one's self to another or others; suspicious or bitterly resentful of successful rivalry: absolute or followed by of with an object: as, a jealous husband or lover; to be jealous of a competitor in love or in business, of one's mistress, or of the attentions of others toward her.
The Courtships of an Italian, if you make him jealous of you, are dangerous, and so are his compliments. Lincoln, Letters, II. 12.

The lady never made unwilling war. With those fine eyes; she had her pleasure in it, And made her good man jealous with good cause. Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

4. Fearful; afraid.
My master is very jealous of the pestilence. Middleton, Your Five Gallants, I. 1.

By the treachery of one Poule, in a manner turned host, we were very jealous the Saluages would surprise us. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 82.

5. Doubtful.
That you do love me, I am nothing jealous. Shak., J. C., I. 2, 162.

jealous (jel'us), v. t. [< ME. jealous, jalous, jalouse, jalouse; < jealous, a.] To suspect; distrust.
The brethren and ministers . . . did very much fear and jealous Mr. James Sharp. Wodroe, I. 7. (Jamtom.)

Will you be good neighbours or bad? I cannot say, Mrs. Carlyle; but I jealous you, I jealous you. However, we are to try. Carlyle, in Froude, I. 1. 22.

jealoushood (jel'us-hūd), n. [< jealous + -hood.] A jealous woman; jealousy personified.
La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time; But I will watch you from such watching now. Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood! Shak., B. and J., IV. 4, 11.

jealously (jel'us-lī), adv. With jealousy or suspicion; with suspicious fear, vigilance, or caution.
The strong door sheathed with iron—the rugged stone stairs . . . jealously barred. Bulwer, My Novel, xii. 5.

jealousness (jel'us-nes), n. [< ME. jealousnesse, gelousnes; < jealous + -ness.] The state or character of being jealous; suspicion; suspicious vigilance. Bailey, 1727.

jealousy (jel'us-i), n.; pl. jealousies (-iz). [Early mod. E. also jealousy, jelousie; < ME. jelousie, jelosie, jelousie, gelousie, gelusie, also jalousie, < OF. gelosie, jalousie, F. jalousie (= Pr. gelosia, gelosia = Pg. It. gelosia), jealousy, < jalous, jealous: see jealous.] 1. The state or character of being jealous; zealous watchfulness; earnest solicitude for that which concerns one's self or others; suspicious care; suspicion.

I am still upon my jealousy, that the king brought thither some disaffection towards me, grounded upon some other demerit of mine, and took it not from the sermon. Deane, Letters, lxxv.

Infante jealousie, infinite regards, Do watch about the true virginity. E. Jones, Cynthia's Revels, v. 2.

Specifically—2. Distress or resentment caused by suspected or actual loss, through the rivalry of another, of the love, good will, or success one desires to retain or secure; fear or suspicion of successful rivalry, especially in love.
O, beware, my lord, of jealousy; It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves! Shak., Othello, III. 2, 165.

And Jealousie that never sleeps for fear (Suspicious Fiea still nibbling in her ear) That leaves repast and rest, near plin'd and blinde With seeking what she would be loth to finde. Sylvester, G. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Furies.

3. The plant Sedum rupestre. [Prov. Eng.] = lyn. See enoy.
Jeames (jēms), n. [A colloquial form (in England) of James, formerly in good use: see jack.] A flunky or footman; a lackey. [Colloq., Eng.]

That noble old race of footmen is well nigh gone. . . . and Uncaas with his tomahawk and eagle's plume, and Jeames with his cocked hat and long cane, are passing out of the world where they once walked in glory. Thackeray, Virginians, xxxvii.

jean (jān), n. [See jane.] 1. Same as jane, 1.—2. A twilled cotton cloth, used both for underwear and for outer clothing; commonly, of garments, in the plural. Also written jane.
You must coarse frieze capacities, ye jeans judgments. Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, III. 2. Clean was his linen, and his jacket blue: Of finest jean his trousers, tight and trim. Crabbe, The Parish Register.

He was a tall, lank countryman, clad in a suit of country jeans. Tourgee, A Fool's Errand, p. 25.

jean, a thick cotton cloth, a variety of jean, with a glossy surface: used for shoes and for similar purposes.
jean-cherry (jēn'cheri'), n. Same as jean. [Prov. Eng.]

jeanette (jē-net'), n. [< jean + -ette.] A coarse kind of jean, employed chiefly for linings.
Jeapaulia (jēn-pāl'i-ā), n. [NL. (Unger, 1845), appar. so called after some one named Jean Paul, perhaps Jean Paul Friedrich Richter.] A genus of fossil plants with flabellate, deeply dichotomously pinnatifid leaves (the linear divisions strongly nerved with parallel veins which branch dichotomously from below), amentaceous male flowers, and ovate drupaceous fruit. Before the flowers and fruit were known, these leaf-impressions were regarded as the fronds of cryptogamic plants, either as Lycopodiaceae or as ferns. They are now recognized as coniferous and as related to the living genus Ginkgo, of which Jeapaulia is probably the ancestral form. It occurs chiefly in the Mesozoic, ranging from the Rhotio to the Cretaceous. Modern writers are disposed to refer it to Baiera, with which it is probably identical, and which has priority.

jeant, n. A Middle English form of jeant.
jeant¹, v. and n. An obsolete form of jeer¹.
jeant², n. See jeer².

jeat, n. An obsolete form of jeet.
jeant³, n. A Middle English form of jeant.
Jebusite (jēb'ū-zīt), n. One of a Canaanitish nation which long withstood the Israelites. The stronghold of the Jebusites was Jebus on Mount Zion, a part of the site of Jerusalem, of which they were dispossessed by David.

Jebusitic (jēb'ū-zīt'ik), a. [< Jebusite + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the Jebusites.
And suited to the temper of the times, Then groaning under Jebusitic crimes. Dryden, Miscellanies (ed. 1602), I. 55.

jectour, n. A Middle English form of jetter.
jeur (jē'ker), n. [L., liver: see hepar.] In anat., the liver.

jed (jed), n. and v. Same as jad.
Jeddart justice. See justice.
Jeddart staff. See staff.

Jedding-ax (jed'ing-aks), n. [< jadding-pick.] A stone-masons' tool; a cavel.

Jedge¹ (jēj), n. [A dial. assimilated form of gag, after OF. jauge: see gag².] A gage or standard.—Jedge and warrant, in Scots law, the authority given by the dean of gild to rebuild or repair a ruinous tenement agreeably to a plan.

Jedge² (jēj), n. and v. A dialectal form of judge.
Jedwood ax. Same as Jeddart staff (which see, under staff).
Jedwood justice. See justice.

jee¹, v. t. See gee¹.
jee², a., v., and n. See gee².

European Jay (Garrulus glandarius).

in the magpie. They are noisy, restless birds, of arid habit, found in most parts of the world, reaching their highest development in the warmer parts of America, where some large and magnificent species are found. With the exception of the boreal genus Perisoreus, the jays of the old and the new world belong to entirely different genera. The commonest and best-known jay of the United States is the blue jay, Cyanurus cristatus or Cyanocitta cristata, a bird about 12 inches long, with a fine crest, purplish-blue color on the back and upright-gray below, a black collar, and wings and tail all blue varied with black and white. (See out under yanocitta.) Another crested species of the United States is Steller's jay, C. stelleri, resembling the last, but much darker in color, and confined to the west. The Canada jay or whistling jay, Perisoreus canadensis, is a plain grayish bird. The Florida jay, Aphelocoma floridana, is mostly gray and blue. The Rio Grande jay, Xanthura huebneri, is all yellow, green, blue, and black. Some birds not properly belonging to the Garrulinae are also called jays, and some members of this subfamily have other common names, as the magpies.

And startle from his ashen spray, Across the glen, the screaming jay. Warton, The Hamlet, Odes, II. t. A loud, flashy woman.

Some jay of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him. Shak., Cymbeline, III. 4, 51.

(a) In actors' slang, an amateur or a poor actor. (b) A general term of contempt applied to a stupid person; as, an audience of jays.—blue-headed jay, pinon jay. See Cyanoccephalus and yanocitta.—gray jay, any species of the genus Perisoreus.

j-bird (jā'bērd), n. A jay; especially, the common blue jay of the United States.
j-cuckoo (jā'kūk'ū), n. A cuckoo of the genus Coccyzus, as the European C. glandarius.
rett, n. An obsolete form of jet.
jawk (jā'hāk), v. t. [< jayhawk-er, n.] To arry as a jayhawker. [Slang, U. S.]

"Say something, Brennet," he cried angrily. "There's a use in jay-hawking me."

M. N. Murefree, Where the Battle was Fought, p. 48.
jawker (jā'hāk'ēr), n. [Said to be so called from a bird of this name; but evidence is lacking.] 1. In U. S. Hist., in the early part of the civil war and previously, a member of one of the bands which carried on an irregular warfare in and around eastern Kansas.
He and his father are catching the horses of the dead and dying jayhawkers.

G. W. Cable, The Century, XXXIII. 300.
A large spider or tarantula, as species of ygale. [Western U. S.]

Click! the string the meek did draw:
And, Jee! the door gaped tae the wa'.

Burns, The Vision, l.

jeal n. See jeal.

jealico (jē'li-kō), n. [A corruption of angelica.] Same as jellico, 1. [Prov. Eng.]

jeer (jēr), v. [Early mod. E. also jeare, geare; prob. < MD. scheeren, scheren, jeat, jeer, trifle, a use of the verb due to phrases like den sot scheeren or scheeren den sot, play the fool, den gheek scheeren, also den gheek spelen, play the fool (cf. gheckscherer, a fool); ghekschoeren, now spelled ghekscheren, LG. gokkucheren (with equiv. D. and LG. scheren, jeer, banter, plague, tease), lit. 'shear the fool' (cf. G. den geck stoehen, banter, tease, lit. 'pierce the fool.' i. e. his skull): D. geek, MD. gheek = G. geek, > E. geek, a fool (see geek); MD. sot = E. sot, orig. a fool (see sot); D. scheren, MD. scheeren, scheren = G. scheren = E. shear. For shearing as a mark of contempt or disgrace, cf. shaveling, and AS. homa-la, a shaveling (under hambic, q. v.). For the change of sh to j, cf. jelliron for sheltron; it may be due in part, perhaps, to association with jeat, jibe, joke, etc.] I. intrans. To make a mock of some person or thing; scoff: as, to jeer at one in sport.

He saw her toy and gibe and geare.

Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 21.

Yes, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?
Shak., C. of E., II. 2, 22.

And by and by the people, when they met, . . .

Began to scoff and jeer and babble of him,

As of a prince whose manhood was all gone.

Tennyson, Geraint.

—II. Gibe, Song, etc. See meer.

jeer tr. To treat with scoffs or derision; make a mock of; deride; flout.

jeer (jēr), n. [From jeer, v.] 1. A scoff; a taunt; a flout; a gibe; a mock.

But the dean, if this secret should come to his ears,
Will never have done with his gibes and his jeers.

Swift, The Grand Question Debated.

24. A huff; a pet.

For he, being tribute, left in a jeer the exercise of his office, and went into Syria to Pompey upon no occasion; and as fondly again he returned thence upon an adden.

North, tr. of Flutarch, p. 721.

jeer (jēr), n. [Also jeer; origin obscure.] Naut., tackle for hoisting or lowering the lower yards of a man-of-war: usually in the plural.

jeerer (jēr'ēr), n. One who jeers; a scoffer; a railor; a scooner; a mocker.

Th. He is a jeerer too.

P. Jun. What's that?

Fash. A wit.

B. Jenson, Staple of News, l. 1.

jeff (jef), v. [Origin obscure.] Among printers, to play a game of chance by throwing quadrants from the hand in the manner of dice, count being kept by the number of nicked sides turned up.

jeff (jef), n. In circus slang, a rope: usually with a qualifying word: as, tight jeff; slack jeff. [Dickens, Hard Times, vi.]

jefferite (jef'ēr-is-it), n. [After W. W. Jeffers, of West Chester, Penn.] A kind of vermiculite from West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Jeffersonia (jef-ēr-sō'ni-ā), n. [NL. (Bartling, 1821), named in honor of Thomas Jefferson.] A genus of Berberidaceae, containing two species of herbaceous plants, one American and one Chinese. These plants have a perennial rhizome, bearing leaves with long stalks and singular, two-divided blades, the solitary flowers borne upon naked scapes. The flower has 4 petal-like sepals, which fall as the bud opens, 8 petals, and 8 stamens. The one-celled and many-seeded capsule opens near the top as if by a lid. J. diphylla, called twineaf, is an interesting plant, wild in the eastern interior of the United States, its white blossoms, an inch wide, appearing in April or May. From reputed stimulating properties, the plant is sometimes named rheumatism-root. It is also thought to possess tonic and emetic properties.

Jeffersonian (jef-ēr-sō'ni-an), a. and n. [From Jefferson (see def.) + -ian.] The surname Jefferson occurs also as Jefferson, Jefferson, Jefferson, early mod. E. Jeffreyson, Geoffreyson, etc., i. e. Jeffrey's son, Jeffrey, also Geoffrey, Geoffroy, being orig. the same as Godfrey, G. Gotfrid, MHG. Gotfrīt, Gotevrit, lit. 'God-peace': see God and frith.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Thomas Jefferson, third President of the United States (1801-9), and the first great leader of the Democratic (first called Anti-Federal and later Democratic-Republican) party; also, adopting the political theories held by or attributed to Jefferson.

II. n. In U. S. politics, a supporter or an admirer of Thomas Jefferson; one who professes to accept his political doctrines; a Democrat.

Jeffersonianism (jef-ēr-sō'ni-an-izm), n. [From Jeffersonian + -ism.] The political doctrines advocated by Thomas Jefferson, based upon the greatest possible individual and local freedom, and corresponding restriction of the powers of national government.

Ultimately, Jeffersonianism must have prevailed, but at the time of its actual triumph it came too soon.

N. A. Rev., CXIII. 187.

Jeffersonite (jef'ēr-sōn-it), n. [After Thomas Jefferson, the third President of the United States.] A variety of pyroxene occurring in large crystals, often with uneven faces and rounded edges, and having a dark olive-green color passing into brown. It is peculiar in containing some zinc and manganese. It occurs, with franklinite, sinclite, etc., at Franklin Furnace, Sussex county, New Jersey.

jeg (jeg), n. [Origin obscure.] One of the templates or gages used for verifying shapes of parts in gun- and gunstock-making. E. H. Knight.

jegetti (jeg'et), n. [Appar. a var. of jigot, gigot.] A kind of sausage. Ash.

Jehoiada-box (jē-hoi'ā-dī-boks), n. [So called in allusion to the box or "chest" within which Jehoiada, at the command of Josiah, King of Judah, made collections for the repair of the temple at Jerusalem (2 Chron. xxiv. 6-11).] A box, usually of iron, entirely closed with the exception of a slit in the top, intended to be used as a savings-bank.

Now all the Jehoiada-boxes in town were forced to give up their rattling deposits of specie, if not through the legitimate office, then to the brute force of the hammer. Lovell, Cambridge Thirty Years Ago.

Jehovah (jē-hō'vā), n. [The common European spelling (with j = y and v = w) of Yehowāh or Yahowāh, the Massoretic form of the Hebrew name previously written without vowels JHWH (YHWH), the vowels of Adonai (which see) being substituted by the later Jews for those of the original name, which came to be regarded as too sacred for utterance. The original name, according to the view now generally accepted, was Yahweh, or rather Yahwe, the name appearing also contracted Yāh, separately (see halleluiah), or, as Yāh (Jāh: see Jah), Yē, Yehō, Yāhu, in compound proper names (as, in E. forms, Isaiah, Jeremiah, etc., Jonahua, Joshua, Jesus, Johannua: see Jesus), transliterated in late Greek variously Ἰαβέ, Ἰαυέ, Ἰαωέ. The origin and meaning of the name are unknown. It was formerly referred to the Hebrew root hāwāh, be, exist, and was taken to imply self-existence, 'he that is' ('I am that I am,' Ex. iii. 14; more correctly 'I shall be what I shall be'), or else eternity. Some modern scholars would translate the name as 'he who causes to be,' i. e. the Creator, while others connect it with an Aramaic sense 'fall,' as if 'he who causes (rain or lightning) to fall,' this explanation being paralleled by similar terms associated with the Greek Zeus. Others, in view of the fact that a metaphysical notion like 'self-existence' does not elsewhere appear in the names of the deities of primitive peoples, regard the Hebrew derivation as a piece of popular etymology (some-what like that which in English associates the name God with good), and seek to identify Yahwe with some Assyrian or other foreign deity.] 1. In the Old Testament, one of the names of God as the deity of the Hebrews: in the English version usually translated, or rather represented, by "the LORD." See etymology. The Jews, since an early date, have avoided the pronunciation of this name of God, and wherever it occurs in the sacred books have substituted the word Adonai, or, where it comes in conjunction with Adonai, have substituted Elohim.

And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

Ex. vi. 3.

Father of all! in every age,

In every clime adored,

By saint, by savage, or by sage,

Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!

Pope, Universal Prayer.

2. In modern Christian use, God.

Jehovist (jē-hō'vist), n. [From Jehovah + -ist.] 1. The supposed author of certain passages of the Pentateuch in which God is always spoken of as Jehovah. Also Jahvist. See Elohist.—2. One who maintains that the vowel-points annexed to the word Jehovah in Hebrew are the proper vowels of the word, and express the true pronunciation. The Jehovists are opposed to the Adonists, who hold that the points annexed to the word Jehovah are the vowels of Adonai or of Elohim. See Adonist, Jehovist.

Jehovistic (jē-hō-vis'tik), a. [From Jehovist + -ic.] Characterized by the exclusive use of the name Jehovah for God: applied to certain passages of the Pentateuch, or to the writer or writers of these passages. Also Jahvistic. See Elohist.

Jehu (jē'hū), n. [In allusion to 2 Ki. ix. 20: "The driving is like the driving of Jehu, the son of Nimahi; for he driveth furiously." 1. A fast driver; a person fond of driving. [Colloq.]

A plous man . . . may call a keen foxhunter a Nimrod, . . . and Cowper's friend, Newton, would speak of a neighbor who was given to driving as Jehu.

Macaulay, Comic Dramatists of the Reformation.

2. A driver; a coachman. [Colloq.]

At first it was not without fear that she intrusted herself to so inexperienced a coachman; "but she soon . . . raised my wages, and considered me an excellent Jehu."

Lady Holland, Sydney Smith, vi.

jehup (jē'up), v. 1. A variant form of gee up. See gee 2.

May I lose my Otho, or be tumbled from my phaeton the first time I jehup my surreys, if I have not made more haste than a young surgeon in his first labour.

Foots, Taste, II.

jeistiecor (jēs'ti-kōr), n. A corruption of justice or justice. Compare justion. [Scotch and North. Eng.]

It's a sight for sair een, to see a gold-laced jeistiecor in the Ha' garden aye late at e'en. . . . Ou, a jeistiecor—that's a jacket like your ain.

Scott, Rob Roy, vi.

jejunal (jē-jō'nal), a. [From jejunum + -al.] Of or pertaining to the jejunum: as, a jejunal intussusception.

jeune (jē-jūn'), a. [From jejunus, fasting, hungry, barren, empty, dry, feeble, poor: see dino.] 1. Scarcely supplied or furnished; attenuated; poor.

In gross and turbid streams there might be contained nutriment, and not in jeune or limpid water.

Sir T. Browne.

2. Barren; unfurnished; wanting pith or interest, as a literary production; devoid of sense or knowledge, as a person; dry; uninteresting; shallow.

I now and then get a bait at philosophy, but it is so little and jeune as I despair of satisfaction 'till I am againe restor'd to the Society.

Boslyn, To the Dean of Hippon.

Facee itself, most mournfully jeune,

Calls for the kind assistance of a tune.

Comper, Retirement, l. 711.

jejunely (jē-jūn'li), adv. In a jeune, empty, dry, or barren manner.

jejuneness (jē-jūn'nes), n. 1. Attenuation; fineness; thinness.

There are three causes of fixation: the even spreading both of the spirals and tangible parts; the closeness of the tangible parts; and the jejuneness or extreme comminution of spirals.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 790.

2. Barrenness; emptiness; deficiency of interest, importance, or knowledge; want of substantial or attractive qualities: as, jejuneness of style in a book.

jejunity (jē-jū'nī-ti), n. [From jejunus (tense), jejunus: see jeune.] Jejuneness; meagerness; brevity. [Rare.]

Pray extend your Spartan jejunity to the length of a competent letter.

Bentley, Letters, p. 261.

jejunum (jē-jū-num), n.; pl. jejuna (-nā). [NL., neut. of jejunus, dry: see jeune.] In anat., the second division of the small intestine, of uncertain extent, intervening between the duodenum and the ileum; more fully, the intestinum jejunum: so named because it was supposed to be empty after death. See intestine.

Jekyll's Act. Same as Gin Act (which see, under gin).

jelerang (jel'ē-rang), n. [Native name.] A species of squirrel, Sciurus javanensis, found in Java, India, and Cochinchina. It is variable in color, but commonly is dark-brown above and golden-yellow below.

jell (jel), v. 1. [From jelly.] To assume the consistence of jelly. [Colloq.]

The jelly won't jell—and I don't know what to do!

L. M. Alcott, Little Women, II. 5.

jelletite (jel'e-tit), n. [After M. Jellet, who described it.] A variety of lime-iron garnet, of a green color, found near Zermatt, Switzerland.

jellico (jel'i-kō), n. [A corruption of angelica.] 1. The plant Angelica sylvestris. Also jellio.

—2. A plant of St. Helena, Stem Elenium, whose stems are used uncooked for food.

jellied (jel'id), a. [From jelly + -ed.] 1. Brought to the consistence of jelly.—2. Having the sweetness of jelly.

The jellied philtre of her lips.

Cleveland.

jellify (jel'i-fi), v.; pret. and pp. jellified, ppr. jellifying. [From jelly + -fy.] 1. trans. To make into a jelly; reduce to a gelatinous state.

he jeweller nearly faints with alarm, and poor But-fingers was completely jellified with fear.

J. T. Fields, Underbrush, p. 230.

development had occurred in the various fluid media upon the jellified blood-serum. Medical News, L. 287.

I. intrans. To become gelatinous; turn into ly.

alifying is a term applied to soap which, after being mixed in a certain quantity of water, sets into a jelly in cold. Watt, Soap-making, p. 235.

op (jel'gp), n. See jewlap.

oped (jel'gpt), a. In her., same as wattled.

pl (jel'i), n.; pl. jollies (-iz). [Formerly jolly; IE. joly, gele, < OF. gelee, a front, also jelly, p. fem. of gele (< L. gelatus), frozen, pp. of g, < L. gelare, freeze, congeal: see congeal, id. gelatin.] 1. A viscous or glutinous substance obtained by solution of gelatinous mat-, animal or vegetable; hence, any substance semisolid consistence.

(out, vile jelly [an eye])!

Where is thy lustre now? Shak., Lea, III. 7, 83.

Were I not in court,
I would beat that fat of thine, rain'd by the food
Natch'd from poor clients' mouths, into a jelly.

Pletcher, Spanish Curate, III. 3.
[dingtonite] affords a jelly with muriatic acid.

Dana, Mineralogy (1892), p. 417.

The thickened juice of fruit, or any gelatinous substance, prepared for food: as, currant quava jelly; calf's-foot jelly; meat jelly.

Jellies softer than the creamy curd,
And lucid syrups tinted with cinnamon.

Kaate, Eve of St. Agnes.

A mixture of gelatin and glycerin, used as medium for mounting microscopic objects. — y of hartshorn. See hartshorn. — Wharton's jelly, is as gelatin of Wharton (which see, under gelatin).

jet (jel'i), a. [Prob. a var. of jolly.] Excellent of its kind; worthy. [Scotch.]

He's done him to a jelly hunt's ha';
Was far frae any town.

King Henry (Child's Ballads, I. 147).

The Provost o' the town,
A jelly man, well worthy of a crown.

Shirreffs, Poems, p. 33.

7-bag (jel'i-bag), n. A bag through which y is distilled.

fish (jel'i-fish), n. A popular name of many dis of aclephas, medusas, sea-blubbers, or -netties: so called from the soft, gelatinous texture. As commonly used, the name applies especially to those discophorous hydrous which have an irella-like disk, by the pulsation of which, or its alternation and contraction, they are propelled through water, trailing long appendages, which have the prop of netting or stinging when they are touched. Jelly- are often found swimming in shoals in summer, to great annoyance of bathers. The different genera and ies are very numerous. Some of the stenophorans or e-jellies are also called by this name. See Aculephus, ophora, Hydrosca.

r-lichen (jel'i-l'ken), n. One of a class of iens which dissolve, when wet, into a gelatinous pulp. See Collembi.

r-plant (jel'i-plant), n. An Australian sea-d, Eucheuma speciosum, which affords an excellent jelly.

blet (jel'bl), n. An obsolete form of gim- x a pair of Jemles for the stools dore rd.

Leveon Chuardens Acta, 1588 (Arch., XII. 300).

dar, jamadar (jem'i-, jam'a-där), n. [Also idar, jemudar, jommidar, jematkar, jemaust, < Hind. Pers. jamädär, the chief or leader any number of persons, an officer of police, toms, or excise, a native subaltern officer, < Hind. jamä, jame, amount, aggregate, lied esp. to the debit or receipt side of account, to rent, revenue, etc. (< Ar. jamä, jimä, union, < jama'a, gather, assemble), + , holding, a holder.] In the army of India, ative officer next in rank to a subadar, or tain of a company of Sepoys; a lieutenant: name is also applied, in the civil service, to ain officers of police, of the customs, etc., , in large domestic establishments, to an reaser or head servant having general con- of the others.

ie Bishop took him into his service as a jemaustdar or i officer of the peons.

Heber, Journey through Upper India (ed. 1844), I. 65, [note.]

diland had commenced an intrigue with some of the idars, or captains of the enemy's troops.

James Mill, Hist. Brit. India, III. 175.

miness (jem'i-neas), n. The state of being any or spruce; spruceness; neatness. [Col-.]

a fort shall be either convenience or jenniness.

Greville.

jenny¹ (jem'i), n.; pl. jennies (-iz). [Appar. a particular use of Jenny, Jimmy, dim. of Jem, Jim, colloq. abbreviations of James, James. See *jack*¹, and cf. in first sense billy and betty. Less prob. due to jimmal, jimmer, forms of gim-mel, gimmel, gimbal, a double ring, in the obs. occasional sense of a mechanical device.] 1. A short crowbar, especially as used by burglars: often made in sections, so as to be carried without discovery. Also jimmy.

They call for crow-bars—Jennies is the modern name they bear.

They burst through lock, and bolt, and bar.
Berkham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 117.

2. A sheep's head baked. [Eng.]

She . . . returned with a . . . dish of sheep's heads, which gave occasion to several pleasant witticisms. . . . founded upon the singular coincidence of Jennies being a cant name common to them and . . . an ingenious instrument much used in his profession.

Dickens, Oliver Twist, xx.

3. A great-coat. [Prov. Eng.]—4. pl. A kind of woolen cloth. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

jenny² (jem'i), a. and n. [Same as *jimmy*², q. v.] 1. a. Spruce; neat; smart; handy; dextrous. Also spelled jenny. [Colloq.]

A cute man is an abbreviation of acute, . . . and signifies a person that is sharp, clever, neat, or, to use a more modern term, Jenny.

Gentleman's Mag., Sept., 1707.

II. n. A sort of boot of fine make.

Buck, Harkee, Mr. Subtle, I'll out of my tramels when I hunt with the king.

Subtle, Well, well.
Buck, I'll on with my Jennies: none of your black bags and jack-boots for me.

Poets, Englishman in Paris, I.

jeneperet, n. An obsolete form of juniper.

jenequen (jen'e-ken), n. Same as henoquen.

jenite (yen'it), n. A different orthography of jenite: a synonym of ilvaile.

jennet¹ (jen'et), n. [Also written jennat, genet, early mod. E. ginet, genette, < OF. gennette, < Sp. gine, a nag, also, as orig., a horseman, a horse-soldier; of Moorish origin, traced by Dozy to Ar. Zenäta, a tribe of Barbary celebrated for its cavalry.] A small Spanish horse.

The government is held of the Pope by an annual tribute of 40,000 ducats and a white genet.

Koaly, Diary, Feb. 8, 1648.
They were mounted a la gine that is, on the light jennet of Andalusia—a cross of the Arabian. Prescott.

jennet², n. See *genet*².

jenneting (jen'et-ing), n. [Formerly also jennit-ing, jennitting, genetizing, genitizing, ginnitizing, also jennetin, genetin, the term, being conformed to that of hawking (see quotation from Holland), sweeting, and other apple-names, and the first syllable conformed to that of E. Jenkin, Jenny, Junny, etc., from the same ult. source: < OF. Janot, earlier Johannot, Jehennot, and Janot, Jannot, earlier Joannot, Joannot, Johannot (with corresponding fem. Johannette, Jeannette, Jennette, E. Janot, etc.), dim. of OF. Jan, Jeann, Jehan, etc., ME. Jan, Jon, etc., E. John, a personal name; in reference to St. John's apple, OF. pomme de St. Jean; so called, it seems, because, like a certain pear similarly named Amirs Joannet, or Joannet, or Jeannette, or Petit St. Jean, it is ripe in some places as early as St. John's day (June 24th). Cf. ME. pere-jannet, Jeannot pears (Piers Plowman (C), xiii. 221). The apple called John-apple or apple-John, which does not ripen till late in the season, being considered in perfection when withered (see apple-John), may owe its name to another cause. See John. The explanation attempted in the perverted form June-eating (through junetin, in Bailey) is absurd.] A kind of early apple.

Apple trees live a very short time: and of these the hasty kind, or jennings, continue nothing so long as those that bear and ripen later. Holland, tr. of Pliny, xvi. 44.

In July come . . . plums in fruit, jennings, quodluna.

Bacon, Gardens (ed. 1887).

Thy sole delight is, sitting still,
With that gold dagger of thy bill
To fret the summer jenneting.

Tennyson, The Blackbird.

Jennie harp. See harp-seal.

jenny (jen'i), n.; pl. jennies (-iz). [A familiar use in various senses of the common fem. name Jenny, vulgarly Jinny, Jen, Jin, early mod. E. Jany, another form of Janie, Janey, dim. of Jane, < F. Jeanne (< ML. Joanna), fem. of Joun, < LL. Joannes, John: see John. Cf. jenneting. The spinning-jenny (called in F., after E., jeunette) (def. 4) is said to have been so named by Arkwright after his wife, Jenny; but according to a grandson of Jacob Hargreaves, the inventor, it is a corruption of gin, a contraction of engine (Webster's Dict., ed. 1864). Gin would easily suggest Jin, Jinny, Jenny, familiar personal names being often attached to mechanical contrivances (cf. *Jack*¹, *jummy*¹, betty, etc.); but in the present case there is prob. an allusion to E. dial. jenny-spinner, finny-spinner, the crane-fly, also called in Sc. spinning-Muggie and Jenny Nettles.] 1. A female bird: used especially as a prefix, as in jenny-heron, jenny-howl, jenny-jay, jenny-wren, etc. [Prov. Eng.] Specifically — 2. A wren: usually called jenny-wren. — 3. A female ass: also called jenny-ass.

Down trots a donkey to the wicket-gate,
With Mister Simon Gubbins on his back; . . .
"Jenny be dead, Miss . . . but I've brought ye Jack;
He doesn't give no milk — but he can brag."

Hood, Ode to Kae Wilson.

4. A spinning-jenny (which see).

jenny-ass (jen'i'-as), n. A female ass; a jenny.

jenny-crudle (jen'i'-krud'l), n. Same as jenny-wren, 1.

jenny-spinner (jen'i'-spin'er), n. [Also jinny-spinner; < Jenny, fem. name (see jenny), + spin-, spin.] The crane-fly. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

jenny-wren (jen'i'-ron'), n. 1. A wren. Also jenny-crudle. — 2. Herb-robert, Geranium Robertianum.

jentry, n. An obsolete form of gentry.

jentlet, jentilt, a. Obsolete forms of gentle.

jentman, n. A gentleman. Durins.

Hawwa what ye say (ko I) of such a Jentman.
Nay, I fere him not (ko she), doe the best he can.

Udall, Boister Doister, III. 3.

jeofail (jel'äl), n. [In old law-books jeofaille, repr. (OF. je (jeo) faillir, I fail, I am mistaken, or fai failli, I have failed: je, < L. ego = E. I; ai, 1st pers. pres. ind. of aver, aroir, < L. habere = F. have; faillir, pres. ind., failli, pp., of faillir (see faill).] In law, an error in pleading or other proceeding, or the acknowledgment of a mistake or an oversight. — Statutes of Jeofail, the statutes of amendment, particularly an English statute of 1340, whereby irregularities and mistakes in legal proceedings are allowed to be corrected or to be disregarded.

jeopard (jep'ärd), v. t. [Formerly also jeopard; < ME. jeopardien, juparten, hazard, < jeopardie, jeopardy: see jeopardy.] To put in jeopardy; expose to loss or injury; hazard; imperil; endanger.

Er that ye juparten so youre name,
Beth nocht to haust in this hote fare.

Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 1566.

Zebulun and Naphtali were a people that jeoparded their lives unto the death in the high places of the field.

Judges v. 18.

Obviously too well guarded to jeopard the interests of the Spanish sovereigns.

Prescott, Ferd. and Is., II. 1.

— Syn. To peril, imperil, risk.

jeoparder (jep'ärd-er), n. One who jeopardis or puts to hazard.

jeopardise (jep'ärd-iz), n. [ME.; as jeopardy + -ise.] Jeopardy.

jeopardize (jep'ärd-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. jeopardized, jeopardizing. [< jeopard + -ize; perhaps suggested by jeopardise, n.] To jeopard. Also spelled jeopardise.

That he should jeopardize his wilful head
Only for spite at me! — 'Tis wonderful!

Sir L. Taylor, F. van Artevelde, II. 11.

Yes, I have lost my honor and my wife,
And, being moreover an ignoble bound,
I dare not jeopardize my life for them.

Browning, Ring and Hook, I. 188.

jeopardless (jep'ärd-less), a. [< jeopard (y) + -less.] Without jeopardy, or hazard or danger.

Better is it therefore to embrace thyself libertie, yf it be eyther in thy power, or jeopardless. J. Udall, On I Cor. vii.

jeopardous (jep'ärd-us), a. [< jeopard + -ous.] Exposed to jeopardy or danger; perilous; hazardous.

The fore-fronts or frontiers of the two corners [of Utopia], what with boards and shelves, and what with rocks, be jeopardous and dangerous.

Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), II. 1.

If a man lead me through a jeopardous place by day, he cannot hurt me so greatly as by night.

Tyndale, Ana. to Sir T. More.

jeopardously (jep'ärd-us-li), adv. In a jeopardous manner; with risk or danger; hazardously.

jeopardy (jep'ärd-i), n. [Early mod. E. also jeopardie, jeopardie; < ME. jepardie, jeopardie, jopardie, jeperdie, jeopardye (appar. simulating OF. jeu perdu, a lost game), more correctly jupartie, jupertie, < OF. jeu parti, lit. a divided game, i. e. an even game, an even chance, < ML. jocus partitus, an even chance, an alternative: L. jocus (> OF. jeu), jest, play, game; partitus (> OF. parti), pp. of partire, divide: see joke and party.] 1†. An even chance; a game evenly balanced.

But God wolds, I had cones or twyes Yoonde and knowe the jeopardies
That cowde the Greke Pictagoras,
I shulde have playde the bet at chee.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 693.

2. Exposure to death, loss, or injury; hazard; danger; peril. A person is in jeopardy, within the constitutional protection against being put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, when he is put upon trial, before a court of competent jurisdiction, upon indictment or information which is sufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction, and a jury has been sworn, unless such jury, without having rendered a verdict, were discharged for good cause (or, according to some authorities, by absolute necessity), or by the consent of the accused.

Myu estat now lyth in jeopardy.

Chaucer, Troilus, ll. 465.

Happy is he that can beware by another man's jeopardy.

Lutimer, 2d Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1549.

Is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives?

2 Sam. xxiii. 17.

jeopardy. Obsolete forms of jeopardy, jeopardy.

jeopardy beans. See Abrus.

jerboa (jér'bō-ā or jér'bō-ū), n. [Sometimes written gerbo, gerboa, gerbuu (see also gerbil); < Ar. yarbū, the flesh of the back and loins, an oblique descending muscle, and hence the jerboa, in reference to the strong muscles of its hind legs.] A rodent quadruped of the family Dipodidae, subfamily Dipodinae, and especially of the genus Dipus; a gerbil, or jumping-mouse of the old world. There are several species, of three genera, Dipus, Alactaga, and Platygeromys. The best-known, and the one to which the native name has special reference, is Dipus aegyptius, a curious and interesting animal of the deserts of Africa, living in communities in extensive and intricate underground galleries. The hind legs of the animal are extremely long, and so great is its power of jumping that it seems hardly to touch the ground as it bounds along. Its saltatorial power is proportionally greater than that of the kangaroo, since the latter animal is aided by its stout tail. The tail of the jerboa is longer than the body, very slender, and tufted at the end, and may serve as a balance during the flying leaps. The fore feet are very short; the ears are large and rounded. The size of the animal is 6 or 8 inches without the tail, and the general aspect is that of the rat or mouse, the jerboas belonging to the myomorph group of rodents.

Jerboa (Dipus aegyptius).

jerboa-mouse (jér'bō-ū-mous), n. An animal of the genus Dipodomys, of North America; one of the pouched mice, pocket-mice, or kangaroo-rats. See Dipodomys.

Jerboide (jér'bō-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Jerboa + -idae.] The jerboas: same as Dipodidae.

jerred, jerid (jér-réd'), n. [Also written jerred, jerred, jerred, jerred; < Turk. jerid, Pers. jarid, < Ar. jerid, jarid, a rod, shaft, esp. the javelin of a horseman.] 1. A wooden javelin about five feet long, used by horsemen in Persia and Turkey in certain games, especially in mock fights.

In tourney light the Moor his jerid flings.

Scott, Vision of Don Roderick, st. 25.

Right through ring and ring runs the jerred.

Browning, Ring and Book, l. 467.

2. A game in which this javelin is used.

jeremeffite (properly yer-o-me'yef-it), n. [After a Russian mineralogist, Jeremeff.] A rare borate of aluminium found near Adun-Tschilon in Siberia. It occurs in colorless hexagonal crystals resembling beryl.

jeremiad, jeremiade (jér-ē-mi'ad), n. [< F. jérémíade; as Jeremiah + -ade, as in llad, etc.; so called in reference to the "Lamentations of Jeremiah," one of the books of the Old Testament.] Lamentation; an utterance of grief or sorrow; a complaining tirade: used with a spice of ridicule or mockery, implying either that the grief itself is unnecessarily great, or that the utterance of it is tediously drawn out and attended with a certain satisfaction to the utterer.

He has prolonged his complaint into an endless jeremiad.

Lamb, To Southey.

It is impossible to describe the mournful grandeur with which he used to open his snuff-box, take a preliminary pinch, fold and unfold the sombre bandanna, and launch into a jeremiad as to the prospects of Protestantism, more dismal than any ever uttered by the rivers of Babylon.

Quarterly Rev., CXLVI. 304.

Jeremianic (jér-ē-mi-an'ik), a. [< Jeremiah (see def.) + -an + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the prophet Jeremiah.

There are some portions of the book the Jeremianic authorship of which has been entirely or in part denied.

Encyc. Brit., XIII. 628.

jerfalcon (jér'fál-kn), n. The etymologically correct spelling of gerfalcon.

jergue, v. t. See jerke.

jerguer, n. See jerker.

Jericho (jér'í-kō), n. [With ref. to Jericho in Palestine, esp., in def. 1 and the second phrase, in allusion to 2 Sam. x. 4, 5: "Wherefore Hianun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards, . . . and sent them away. . . . And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return."] 1. A place of tarrying—that is, a prison.—2. A place very distant; a remote place: as, to wish one to Jericho.—From Jericho to June, a great distance.

His kick was tremendous, and when he had his boots on would—to use an expression of his own, which he had picked up in the holy wars—would send a man from Jericho to June.

Barkham, Ingoldsby Legends (Grey Dolphin).

To stay or tarry in Jericho (until one's beard is grown), to wait in retirement or obscurity (until one grows wiser).

Who would, to curb such insolence, I know,
Bid such young boys to stay in Jericho

Until their beards were grown, their wits more staid.

Haywood, Hierarchie, iv. 308.

[Humorous in all senses and applications.]

jerid, n. See jerred.

jerke (jérk), v. [Recorded (first in latter part of the 16th century) in 3 forms: (1) jerke (Jerke, n., Levins, 1570), jerke; (2) gerke (Minsheu, 1627), cf. "girk, a rod, also to chastise or beat" (Halliwell); (3) yerke, E. dial. and Se. yerke, yerke: orig. strike or beat, esp. with a whip or rod. The typical form is yerke, the initial f and g being palatal, and not sibilant. Origin uncertain; an equiv. term jerit (Cotgrave) suggests that all these forms are dial. variations of the older gird, which has the same sense. See yerke.] I. trans. 1. To strike or beat, as with a whip or rod; strike smartly. [Now only Scotch.]

With that which jerks the hams of every jade.

By. Hall, Satires, III. v. 26.

Poussier [F.], to scourge, lash, yerke or jerke. Cotgrave.

Now I am fitted!

I have made twigs to jerke myself.

Shirley, Hyde Park, III. 2.

2. To pull or thrust with sudden energy; act upon with a twitching or snatching motion; move with quick, sharp force: often with a word or words of direction: as, to jerke open a door; the horse jerked out his heels.

I snatched at the lappeys of his coat, and jerked him into Mrs. Wellmore's parlor.

F. W. Robinson, Lazarus in London, iv. 10.

In attempting to dash through a thicket, his hat has been jerked from his head, his powder-horn and shot-pouch torn from around his neck.

W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 202.

We poor puppets, jerked by unseen wires.

Lowell, Commemoration Ode.

3. To throw with a quick, sharp motion; specifically, to throw with the hand lower than the elbow, with an impulse given by sudden collision of the forearm with the hip; as, to jerke a stone.

II. intrans. 1. To make a sudden spasmodic motion; give a start; move twitchingly.

Nor blush, should he some grave acquaintance meet,
But, proud of being known, will jerke and greet.

Dryden.

He was seized with that curious nervous affection which originates in these religious excitements, and disappears with them. He jerked violently—his jerking only adding to his excitement, which in turn increased the severity of his contortions.

E. Eggleston, Circuit Rider, xiv.

2. To sneer; carp; speak sarcastically.

By the way he jerkes at some men reforming to models of Religion.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, viii.

jerke (jérk), n. [< jerke, v.] 1. A short, sharp pull, thrust, or twitch; a sudden throw or toss; a jolt; a twitching or spasmodic motion.

His jade gave him a jerke.

B. Jonson, Underwoods.

The ship tossed like an egg-shell, so that I never felt such uncertain Jerks in a ship.

Dampier, Voyages, l. 82.

2. A sudden spring or bound; a start; a leap; a sally.

Ovidius Naso was the man; and why, indeed, Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention?

Shak., L. L. L., iv. 2. 129.

3. An involuntary spasmodic contraction of a muscle, due to reflex action resulting from a blow or other external stimulus. Thus, a blow upon the ligament of the patella, below the knee-cap, produces spasmodic contraction of the extensor muscles of the leg, which is straightened with a jerke. This is technically called knee-jerk, and the same action in other parts receives qualifying terms, as chin-jerk, etc.

4. pl. The paroxysms or violent spasmodic movements sometimes resulting from excitement in connection with religious services. Specifically called the jerks. [Western and southern U. S.]

These Methodist sets people crazy with the jerks, I've heard tell.

E. Eggleston, Circuit Rider, xii.

5. t. A sneer; sarcasm.

The question ere while mov'd who he is . . . may return with a more just demand, who he is not of place and knowledge never so mean, under whose contempt and jerke these men are not deservedly false?

Milton, Apology for Smectymnua.

jerke, jerque (jérk), v. t. [Sometimes spelled jerque (cf. deriv. jerker, less commonly jerquer, jerquer); prob. an accom. form, < It. cercare (pron. cher-ká're), search (cf. cercatore, cercante, a searcher): see search.] In the English custom-house, to search, as a vessel, for unentered goods.

jerke, jerky (jérk, jér'ki), n. [< Chilian charcut, dried beef.] Meat cut into strips and cured by drying it in the open air.

As soon as daylight appears, the captain started to where they left some jerke hanging on the evening before.

W. De Ham, Hist. Early Settlements, p. 389.

jerke (jérk), v. t. [Chiefly as pp. adj., in the phrase jerked beef; < jerke, n.] To cure, as meat, especially beef, by cutting into long thin pieces and drying in the sun.

When he [the Rocky Mountain hunter] can get no fresh meat, he falls back on his stock of jerked venison, dried in long strips over the fire or in the sun.

The Century, XXXVI. 532.

jerker (jér'kór), n. [< jerke + -er.] 1. One who jerks; one who moves something in a quick, spasmodic way; in the quotation, one who whips or lashes.

Let 'em alone, Frank; I'll make 'em their own justice, and a jerker.

Pletcher, Wit without Money, iv. 3.

2. One who makes quick, spasmodic motions; especially, one who suffers from involuntary spasmodic movements of the limbs or features.

In Roman Catholic countries these manifestations, as we have seen, have generally appeared in convents. . . . In Protestant countries they appear in times of great religious excitement, and especially when large bodies of young women are submitted to the influence of noisy and frothy preachers. Well-known examples of this in America are seen in the "Jumpers," Jerkers, and various revival extravaganzas.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXXV. 148.

3. A cyprinoid fish, Hybopsis kontoukiensis: same as hornyhead.

jerker, jerquer (jér'kór), n. [Also written jerquer: see jerke.] In the English custom-house, an officer who searches vessels for unentered goods. [Colloq.]

I have heard tell that she's three parts slayer and one part pirate; and I wonder the custom-house jerkers don't seize her.

Salis.

jerkin (jér'kin), n. [Also (Sc.) jerkin; prob. of D. origin (see 1st quot.), < OD. jurkion or jurken, < jurk, a frock, + dim. -ken, -kin.] A short close-fitting coat or jacket, worn in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The term is used loosely to include on the one hand the doublet, and on the other the buff-coat, at least in some of its forms; it was often used for a surcoat, or coat worn over armor.

With dutchkin dublets, and with Jerkins lagged.

Gaucoligne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 83.

And all kinds of leather ware, as gloves, poyntes, gyrdles, skins for Jerkins.

Stafford, A Briefe Conceit (1581), ed. Furnivall, p. 88.

Is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Shak., 1 Hen. IV., l. 2. 49.

His attiro was a riding-cloak, which, when open, displayed a handsome jerkin, overlaid with lace.

Scott, Kenilworth, l.

jerkin (jér'kin), n. A young salmon: same as ginkin.

jerkin (jér'kin), n. [Contr. of jerfalcon.] The male of the jerfalcon.

jerkinness (jér'ki-ness), n. The state or quality of being jerky or spasmodic.

In our common conversation we can give pleasure and escape sharp tones by avoiding jerkinness in speech.

J. P. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 122.

jerkinet (jér'ki-net), n. [Sc. jerkinet, also written, improp., girkionet; < jerkin + -et. Cf. jer-net.] An outer jacket worn by women; a sort of bodice without whalebone.

My lady's gown, there's gairs upon 't; . . .

But Jenny's jumps an jerkinet.

My lord thinks meikle naip upon 't.

Burns, My Lady's Gown.

jerkingly (jér'king-li), adv. In a jerking manner; with or by jerks.

n-head (jér'kin-hed), n. [Appar. with allusion to jerkin.] In arch., the end of when it is formed a shape intermediate between a gable and p, the gable rising half-way to the e, so that it is left a truncated shape, the roof being hip- or inclined back- from this level. called thread-head.

Jerkin-head Roof.

Jerkin-head (jér'ki), a. and n. Jerkin-head (jér'ki) a. and n. Of king character; act- by jerks; spasmodic; tions; impatient.

wiped her eyes in the jerky way of poor people, to n tears are a hindrance.

J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 265. e best teaching is not feverish or jerky, but deliber- ously, harmonious.

New Eng. Jour. of Education, XIX. 41. n.; pl. jerkins (-kiz). See the extract.

e liveliest travelling was by jerky, the ordinary Amer- farm-wagon without springs. You sat on a board across the wagon-box; that is, you tried to sit, for half the time you spent in the air, stiffening your to temper the bump bound to meet your return to eat. W. Shepherd, Prairie Experience, p. 108.

Jer (jér'ki), n. See jerks. Jeram (jér-ó-b'ám), n. [So called in allu- to Jeroboam, "a mighty man of valour" i. xi. 28), who became king of Israel.] A o bowl or goblet, generally of metal. [Prov. .] e corporation of Ludlow formerly possessed a jer- which was used as a grace-cup or loving-cup at the e feast. H. S. Cummings.

Jeret, n. An obsolete dialectal (Scotch) i of gillyflower.

Jerig, n. A variant of geropigia. Jerin, n. [ME., spelled irreg. Jeryne; appar. F. jeron, geron, giron, gieron, a back of her, a robe, tunic, lap, bod, tile, etc., orig. thing circular, a gyron: see gyron.] A piece rnor, apparently of leather.

Armed hym in a actone with ortraes fülle ryche, Abovev one that a jermye of Acres owte wore, Abovev that a jeasseraunt of jentylye mayles, A jupone of Jerodyne jaggede in schrede. Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 903.

Jer, v. t. See jerks. Jer, n. See jerks. Jer, n. See jerks.

Jer (jér'i), n.; pl. jerries (-iz). [Origin ob- e; prob. ult. from the name Jerry, a fami- libbr. of Jeremiah.] A man who erects flimsy dings; a speculator who constructs houses ily and unsubstantially.

-builder (jér'i-bil'dér), n. Same as jerry. w many householders have suffered from the scamped of jerry-builders. Quarterly Rev., XLV. 67.

-building (jér'i-bil'ding), n. Cheap and less construction of houses. premium is required to encourage the development ry-building. Nature, XXX. 31.

-built (jér'i-bilt), a. Constructed hastily with flimsy materials. e first thought naturally was that these jerry-built s would be shaken down like a pack of cards. Nature, XXX. 31.

-shop (jér'i-shop), n. A low dram-shop. worse than jerry-shop over the way ragged like Bedlam ubus. Carlisle, in Froude.

Jer (jér'zi), n. and a. [Formerly also Jerye, y, jerzie; so called from Jersey, formerly Jersey (< F. Jersey), one of the Channel Is- ls, < L. Casarea, a name of various places, ied in later times to the island, < Cæsar, ar: see Cæsar. The province, now the e, of New Jersey (NL. Nova Casarea) was amed in 1664, in the grant to the proprie- , Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret, r the island of Jersey, which Sir George aret had defended against the Long Par- ent.] I. n. 1. Fine woolen yarn; fine or of wool, separated from the inferior quality umbing.

r (the Queen of Scots) hose were worsted, watched- red, wrought with silver about the cloaks, and whit e vander them.

Quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., IV. 281. o means therefore is the present practice to be e, which daily cartheth away of the finest sorts of e ready combed into jerries for works, which they up as bales of cloth. Golden Pheas (1857).

2. A close-fitting upper garment, extending to the hips, made of elastic woolen or silk mate- rial, and worn with some variation of form by both men and women.

Now each house has its own uniform of cap and jersey, of some lively colour.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, l. 5. His dress was well adapted for displaying his deep square chest and sinewy arms—a close fitting jersey, and white trousers girt by a broad black belt.

Lawrence, Guy Livingston, l. II. a. Made of fine woolen yarn or pure wool.

If I be not found in carnation Jersey-stockings, blue devils' breeches, with three gards down, and my pocket i' the sleeves, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again.

Beau. and Fl., Scourful Lady, l. 1. Jersey cloth, woolen stockinet.—Jersey-cumb, in her, a bearing representing a comb with long curved teeth, such as is used by wool-combers.—Jersey flannel, a fab- ric resembling stockinet, but with a long and soft pile on one side.

Jersey lightning, livelong. See lightning, live- long.

Jersey mates, Jersey team. See *mate*l.

Jersey pine, tea, thistle, etc. See pine, etc.

Jer (jér't), v. t. [See jerks.] To throw; jer. Colgrave.

Jerupigia, n. See geropigia.

Jerusalem artichoke, cherry, cowslip, had- dock, oak, pony, etc. See artichoke, etc.

Jervine (jér'vin), n. [< Sp. jerva, the poison of the Veratrum album, + -ine.] A crystalline alkaloid obtained from the root of Veratrum album, along with veratrine.

Jeshamy (jes'h-a-mi), n. A corruption of jas- mine. [Collog., Eng.]

Jess (jes), n. [Usually in pl. jessen; < ME. ges, < OF. ges, gic, gic, gic, or without nom. -s, got, gic, later as pl. gects, F. jet = Pr. get = It. (obs.) geto, < ML. jactus, a jess: so called from their use in letting the hawk fly, being the same as OF. get, gic, later geet, jeet, F. jet, < L. jactus, a throw, cust: see jet.] 1. A short strap, usually of leather, sometimes of silk or other mate- rial, fastened about the leg of a hawk used in falconry, and continually worn. The leath, when used, is secured to this. But the term jess must be taken to include a short thong with a ring at the end, which is rather the leath and varvel of actual falconry than the jess proper. This is the heraldic use of the term. See cut under de-la-cuisse.

If I do prove her haggard, Though that her jessen were my dear heart-strings, I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind, To prey at fortune. Shak., Othello, ill. 3, 261.

Soar ye ne'er so high, I have the jesses that will pull you down. Mariwae, Edward II., ll. 2.

2. A ribbon that hangs down from a garland or crown in falconry.

Jess (jes), v. t. [< Jess, n.] To secure with jesses; place the jesses on.

Both hawks are hooded and jessed exactly as in the old knightly days. Harper's Mag., LXXVII. 62.

Jessed and belled, in her. See falcon, l. Jessamine, Jessamin (jes'a-min), n. [See jas- mine.] 1. Same as jasmine.

The tufted crow-toe, and pale Jessamine. Milton, Lycidas, l. 142. All night has the casement Jessamine stirr'd To the dancers dancing in tune. Tennyson, Maud, xril.

2. In her, the tincture white or argent in bla- zoning by the system of flowers.

Jessamy (jes'a-mi), n. and a. [A corruption of Jessamine.] I. n. 1. The Jessamine.—2. A dandy: so called, it is said, because it was a habit of fops to wear a sprig of Jessamine in their buttonhole.

My labour, however, was not without its reward; it recommended me to the notice of the ladies, and pro- cured me the gentle appellation of Jessamy. Hawkenorth, Adventurer, No. 100.

II. a. Like Jessamine in color or perfume.

Towards evening, I took them out to the New Exchange, and there my wife bought things, and I did give each of them a pair of Jessamy plain gloves, and another of white. Pepys, Diary, II. 422.

Jessant (jes'ant), a. [Appar. intended for OF. jettant, jactant, pushing forth, throwing out (ppr. of jetter: see jet), but prob. orig. Jessant for Jessant, < OF. Jessant, ppr. of Jesser, Jesser, Jesser, issue: see Jess, and cf. Jessant. The form is like OF. Jessant, Jessant (F. Jessant), ppr. of Jesser, < L. Jacere, lie.] In her: (a) Shooting up as a plant. (b) Emerging: nearly the same as Jessant, but applied especially to an animal which appears to emerge from the middle of an ordinary or the like, instead of its upper edge.—Jessant-de-lis, in her, having a flour-de-lis passing through it and showing below as well as above: used com- monly of the head of a creature, as a leopard, through which the flour-de-lis seems to have been drawn.

Jessant-de-lis

Jesse (jes'è), n. The name of the father of David and ancestor of Jesus, used in several phrases with reference to Isa. xi. 1: "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots."—Jesse can- dlestick. (a) A branched candlestick in which the branches are made to serve the purpose of the genealogi- cal tree of Christ's descent from Jesse. See tree of Jesse, below. (b) By extension and erroneously, any large and showy branched candlestick or chandelier intended for ecclesiastical use.—Jesse window, a painted window containing a tree of Jesse.—Tree of Jesse, a decorative genealogical tree representing the genealogy of Christ, the figure of Jesse being the root, and the branches bear- ing the names and often representations of his descend- ants. This was a design frequently carried out in the middle ages in stained glass or wall decoration, in sculp- ture, in the form of a branched candlestick, etc.

Jesse (jes'è), n. [Also written Jessie, Jessy; appar. of local origin, with some orig. ref. to some one named Jesse or Jessie.] A term oc- curring only in the following phrase:—To give one Jesse (sometimes, to give one particular Jesse), to give one a good scolding or dressing; punish one se- verely. [Blang., U. S.]

Jesserant, Jesserant (jes'a-rant), n. [Also Jagerant, Jagerant, Jagerent, Jagerant, Jagerine, Jagerant; ME. Jasserant, Jasserant, Jasserant, Jasserant, < OF. Jasseron, Jaceran, Jaceran (also Jesseran), a chain-mail shirt, bracelet, or necklace, F. ja- seron, bruid, = Pr. Jaceran = Pg. Jacerdo; cf. Sp. Jacerina = Pg. Jacerina = It. ghiazzellino, a coat of mail, cuirass; said to be of Ar. (Algerian) origin.] Splint armor, whether the splints were fastened together with links of steel wire, as in Moslem armor, or by silk twist, as in Japanese armor, or as in European lobster-tail or crevisse armor.

A Jaserent of double mail he wore. Southey, Joan of Arc, vii.

Jest (jest), n. [In the older sense still writ- ten, archaically, gent; < ME. geste, rarely jest, a story, a tale, prop. a tale of adventure or ex- ploits, afterward extended to mean any enter- taining tale or anecdote, orig. a deed or ex- ploit, < OF. geste, an exploit, a tale of exploits: see gest, gesture.] 1. An act; deed; achieve- ment; exploit; gest. See gent, n., 1.

There [in Homer] may the jestes of many a knight be read, Patroclus, Pyrrhus, Ajax, Diomed.

Jasper Heywood, in Cent. Lit., ix. 398. (Nares.)

2. A tale of achievement or adventure; a story; romance. See gest, n., 2.—3. A mask; masquerade; pageant.

He promised us, in honour of our guest, To grace our banquet with some pompous jest. Kyd, Spanish Tragedy, l.

4. A spoken pleasantry; a laughable or inten- tionally ludicrous saying; a witticism; a joke; a sally.

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear Of him that hears it, never in the tongue Of him that makes it. Shak., L. L. L. v. 2, 271.

The jest that flash'd about the pleader's room, Lightning of the hour, the pun, the scurrilous tale. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

5. An acted pleasantry; a jocular or playful action; something done to make sport or cause laughter.

The image of the jest [the plot against Falstaff] I'll show you here at large. Shak., M. W. of W., iv. 6, 17.

To cogen their consciences, they hired certain Jani- aries to force them aboard: who took their money, and made a jest of beating them in earnest.

Sandys, Traveller, p. 106.

6. The object of laughter, sport, or mockery; a laughing-stock.

And where there is no difference in men's worths, Titles are jest. Beau. and Fl., King and No King, l. 1.

Rhe is such a desperate scholar that no country gentle- man can approach her without being a jest. Steele, Spectator, No. 112.

Be this a woman's fame; with this unbless'd, Toasts live a scorn, and queens may die a jest. Pope, Moral Essays, ii. 222.

In jest, in sport; for mere diversion; not in earnest; play- fully.

He spak a word in jest; Her answer wasna good. The Laird of Warblington (Child's Ballads, III. 106).

Tell him that he loves in jest, But I in earnest. Quarles, Emblems, v. 1.

To break a jest. See break.—Syn. 4. Jest, Joke; quip, quirk, witticism, sally. A joke is often rougher or less delicate than a jest, as a practical joke, but jest often sug- gests more of lightness or scoffing than joke, as to turn everything into jest. Joke is the word to be used where action is implied; jest is generally applied to something said.

Of all the griefs that harass the distressed, Sure the most bitter is a scornful jest. Johnson, London, l. 145.

Link towns to towns with avenues of oak,
Enclose whole downs in walls—'tis all a joke!
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ll. 361.

jest (jest), v. [ME. geyten, tell romantic tales, < goste, a tale, etc.: see gest, v.] I. intrans.
1†. To tell stories or romances. See *gest*², v.

I can not geste, rum, raf, ruf, by letter (i. e. in alliterative verse).
No, God wot, rym hold I but litel better.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Parson's Tale, l. 43.
2. To trifle (with); amuse or entertain by words or actions; treat as trifling.

By my life, captain,
These hurts are not to be jested with.
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, II. 1.

3. To say or do something intended to amuse or cause laughter.

Earl Limours
Drank till he jested with all ease, and told Free tales, and took the word and play'd upon it.
Tennyson, Guinevere.

4†. To take part in a mask or sport; engage in mock combat; just.

As gentle and as jocund, as to jest,
On I to fight. Shak., Rich. II., I. 3, 96.

II. trans. 1. To utter in jest or sport. [Rare.]
If jest is in you, let the jest be jested. Ruskin.

2. To apply a jest to; joke with; banter; rally.
No jested his companion upon his gravity.
G. P. R. James.

jest² (jest), adv. A common dialectal form of *just*¹.

jest-book (jest'buk), n. A book containing a collection of jests, jokes, or funny stories or sayings.

jestee (jes'tē), n. [*< jest*¹ + *-ee*¹.] The person on whom a jest is passed. [Rare.]

The Mortgagor and Mortgagee differ, the one from the other, not more in length of purse than the Jester and Jestee do in that of memory.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, I. 12.

jester (jes'tēr), n. [ME. gestour, gestunur, < genton, tell jests: see *jest*¹, v.] 1†. A story-teller; a reciter of tales, adventures, and romances.

Gestunur, that tellen tales
Bothe of wepinge and of game.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1198.

The contours and the jestunur . . . were literally, in English, tale-tellers, who recited either their own compositions or those of others, consisting of popular tales and romances.
Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 261.

2. One who is addicted to jesting; one who is given to witticisms, jokes, and pranks.

When he [Rothey] writes nonsense was generally read it with pleasure, except indeed when he tries to be dull. A more insufferable jester never existed.
Macaulay, Mouthy's Colloquies.

3. A court-fool or professed sayer of witty things and maker of amusement, maintained by a prince or noble in the middle ages and later. The dress of the jester was usually showy, or even gaudy, and toward the end of the time when jesters were employed it was always typically party-colored or motley; but, as the jesters in some early courts were men of considerable intellectual ability, and in some cases of good family, their dress was not always conspicuously distinguished from that of those with whom they mingled. The bauble, sometimes very small and of rich materials, was the only certain badge of the jester's employment. The fools of Shakespeare's plays indicate a certain lowering of the rank of the jester in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. So far as is known, the last one employed in England was Archibald Armstrong (died 1672), in the court of James I., and afterward of Charles I. See cockscold, bauble, motley.

Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in. Shak., T. N., II. 4, 11.

Jesters' helmet, a kind of helmet bearing unusual ornaments, such as horns, or having the visor shaped in rude imitation of a face.

jesting (jes'ting), p. a. [*Ppr. of jest*¹, v.] 1. Given to jesting; playful; as, a jesting humor.
— 2. Fit for joking; proper to be joked about.
He will find that these are no jesting matters.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xv.

jesting-beam (jes'ting-bēm), n. In building, a beam introduced for appearance, and not for use.

jestingly (jes'ting-li), adv. In a jesting or playful manner; not in earnest.

jesting-stock (jes'ting-stok), n. A laughing-stock; a butt for ridicule. [Rare.]

I love thee not so ill to keep thee here,
A jesting-stock.
Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, v. 2.

jest-monger (jest'mung'gēr), n. A retailer of jests; a joker.

Some wittings and jest-mongers still remain For fools to laugh at. J. Baillie.

jestword (jest'wērd), n. An object of jests or ridicule; a laughing-stock; a byword; a butt. The jestword of a mocking band. Whittier.

Jesuate (jes'ū-āt), n. [Also Jesuat, < It. Gesuato, < Gesū, Jesus: see Jesuit. Cf. Jesuit.] A member of a monastic order founded by the Italian Colombini, and confirmed by Urban V. about 1367. Until 1606 it was composed entirely of laymen, who cared for the poor and sick. From the fact that they distilled alcoholic liquors at some of their houses, they were called Aqua-vitæ fathers. The order was suppressed in 1606.

Jesuit (jes'ū-it), n. [< F. Jesuite, now Jésuite = Sp. Jesuita = Pg. Jesuita = It. Gesuita = D. Jesuit, Jesuit = G. Dan. Sv. Jesuit, < NL. Jesuita, no called (first, it is said, by Calvin, about 1550) from the name given to the order by its founder (NL. Societas Jesu, 'the Company (or Society) of Jesus'), < L. Jesus + -ita, E. usually -ite.] 1. A member of the "Society of Jesus" (or "Company of Jesus"), founded by Ignatius Loyola in 1534 and confirmed by the Pope in 1540. Its membership includes two general classes, laymen, or temporal coadjutors, and priests; and six grades, namely, novices, formed temporal coadjutors, approved scholars, formed spiritual coadjutors, the professed of three vows, and the professed of four vows. The applicant for admission to this order must be at least fourteen years old, and the three vows cannot be taken before the age of thirty-three. After a two years' novitiate the lay brothers become temporal coadjutors, and the candidates for the priesthood are advanced to the grade of scholars. A rigorous course of study follows for fourteen or fifteen years, divided into three nearly equal periods of academic or collegiate study, teaching and study combined, and a course in theology. At the end of this time the scholar enters on another short novitiate, after which he may become either a spiritual coadjutor or one of the professed. The three vows are voluntary poverty, perfect chastity, and perfect obedience; and the fourth vow is absolute submission to the Pope. The professed of the four vows are the most influential class; they form the general congregation, and fill the highest offices and the leading missions. The general is elected for life by the general congregation. He has great power, limited only by the constitutions, and is aided by a council of assistants. He must reside at Rome, and is subject only to the Pope. There is an elaborate organization, with a division into five "assistances," subdivided into provinces, each of which is administered by a provincial, and each provincial has "superior," rectors, etc., as subordinates. Two features characterize the system thus organized—absolute obedience and a perfect system of scrutiny. It is the combination of these two principles which has made the order of Jesuits such a power in the church. So formidable has their political influence been supposed to be that they have often been expelled even from Roman Catholic communities. They were expelled from France in 1594, restored in 1603, again expelled in 1764, and for the last time in 1880. They were expelled from Spain in 1767, and at different times from various other countries. In 1773 the order was suppressed by Pope Clement XIV., but it was revived in 1814. It is believed now to number about ten thousand members.

One whom the mob, when next we find or make A popish plot, shall for a Jesuit take.
Pope, Batres of Donne, iv. 85.

2. A crafty or insidious person; an intriguer; so called in allusion to the crafty and intriguing methods commonly ascribed to the Jesuits.
3. [I. c.] A dress worn by women in the latter part of the eighteenth century; a kind of indoor morning-gown. Fairholt.—Jesuit lace. See lace.—Jesuit bark, Peruvian bark; the bark of certain species of Cinchona. It is so called because it was first introduced into Europe by the Jesuits.—Jesuit's bark. Act. See bark.—Jesuit's drops, a balsamic preparation formerly in repute as a pectoral and vulnerary; name as Jesuit's balsam (which see, under Jesuit).—Jesuit's nut, a name sometimes given to the fruit of Trapa natans, the water-chestnut.—Jesuit's powder, powdered cinchona bark.—Jesuit's tea, the Herb Paraguayanus, or its leaves. See mate.—Paraguay tea, under tea.—Jesuit style, in arch. See baroque, 2.

Jesuit (jes'ū-it), v. t. [< Jesuit, n.] To cause to conform to the principles of the Jesuits; make a Jesuit of.

But to return to the Roman Catholics, how can we be secure from the practice of Jesuit Papists in that Religion?
Dryden, Religio Laici, Pref.

Jesuitess (jes'ū-it-ēs), n. [< NL. Jesuitessa; as Jesuit + -ess.] One of an order of nuns established on the principles of the Jesuits. It was suppressed by Pope Urban VIII. about 1633.

Jesuitic (jes'ū-it'ik), a. [= F. jésuitique = Sp. jesuitico = Pg. jesuitico = It. gesuitico; < Jesuit, q. v.] 1. Of or pertaining to the Jesuits or their principles.

The Jesuitic maxim, that "he who has the schools has the future," the German Catholics have adopted as their own.
Middotheca Sacra, XLV. 194.

2. [I. c.] Same as jesuitical.

Jesuitical (jes'ū-it'ik-əl), a. [< Jesuitic + -al.] Designing; crafty; politic; insinuating; an opprobrious term.

Though for fashion's sake called a parliament, yet by a jesuitical sleight not acknowledged, though called so.
Milton, Elkonoklastes, l. 13.

He has been accused of a jesuitical tendency, of a disposition to find arguments in favor of acts after the acts have been performed.
N. A. Rev., CXIII. 598.

Jesuitically (jes'ū-it'ik-əl-i), adv. In a jesuitical, insinuating, or politic manner; craftily.

Jesuitish (jes'ū-it-ish), a. [< Jesuit + -ish.] Jesuitical.

As our English papists are commonly most Jesuitical, so our English Jesuits are more furious than their fellows.
Sp. Hall, Quo Vadis, § 12.

Jesuitism (jes'ū-it-izm), n. [= F. jésuitisme = Sp. Pg. jesuitismo = It. gesuitismo; as Jesuit + -ism.] 1. The system, principles, and practices of the Jesuits.—2. Craft; subtlety; politic duplicity; an opprobrious use.

The word Jesuitism now in all countries expresses an idea for which there was in Nature no prototype before. Not till these late centuries had the human soul generated that abomination or needed to name it.
Carlyle, Letter Day Pamphlets, viii.

Jesuitocracy (jes'ū-it-ōk'r-ā-si), n. [< Jesuit + -ocracy, government, as in aristocracy, q. v., etc.] Government by Jesuits; also, the whole body of Jesuits in a country.

The charming results of a century of Jesuitocracy, as they were represented on the French stage in the year 1793.
Kingley, Yeast, v.

Jesuitry (jes'ū-it-ri), n. [< Jesuit + -ry.] Jesuitism, in either of its senses.

The poor Girondins, many of them, under such fierce bellowing of Patriotism, say Death; justifying, motivant, that most miserable word of theirs by some brief casuistry and Jesuitry. Vergnaud himself says Death; justifying by Jesuitry.
Carlyle, French Rev., III. II. 7.

Jesus (jē'sus), n. [< ME. Jesu, Jesu, Jesu (in A.S. usually translated, Hæland, lit. 'healer', i. e. Saviour); < F. Jésus = Sp. Pg. Jesus = It. Gesù = D. Jesus = G. Dan. Sv. Jesus, < L. (Lat.) Jesus, prop. in 3 syllables, Jesuu (gen., dat., abl., and voc. Jesu, < voc. Jesu in modern tongues), < Gr. Ἰησοῦς, < Heb. Yēshū'a, also Yēshū'a, contr. of Yēshū'a (forms transliterated, in the L.L. and E. versions of the Old Testament, as Jehshua, Joshua, and Jehoshua respectively), a name meaning 'Jehovah is salvation' or 'help of Jehovah'; see Jehovah. The name was a very common one among the Jews, esp. during the Hellenizing period, when it assumed the Gr. form Ἰησοῦς, being sometimes assimilated to the purely Gr. Ἰάσων, Jason (cf. laos, healing, < ἰάσων, heal). A special significance was impressed upon the name when it was given to the child proclaimed to be the Saviour of mankind (Mat. i. 21; Luke i. 31).] 1. The Greek form of Joshua, used in the authorized version of the Bible twice to designate the Jewish leader so named (Acts vii. 45, Heb. iv. 8), once to designate a man called Justus (Col. iv. 11), and elsewhere as the personal name of the Saviour, frequently conjoined with Christ, the Anointed, the official title.

She [Mary] shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins.
Mat. i. 21.

2†. With the article, a representation of the crucifixion or of the ecce homo, or even of the mere emblem of Christ, such as the I. H. S. or X: used in old inventories, etc.—Company of Jesus, the order of Jesuits.—Order of Jesus, of Jesus Christ, etc., the name of several orders of more or less religious character, in Spain, Sweden, etc.

Jet (jet), v.; pret. and pp. jetted, ppr. jetting. [< ME. jetten, getten, < (OF. jetter, jeter, getter, geter, jeter, F. jeter, cast, hurl, throw, fling, dart, put or push forth, = Pr. getar, gitar, getar = Sp. gitar = It. gettare, gettare, throw, etc., < L. jacitare, throw, hurl, cast, toss, shake, agitate, etc., freq. of jacere, throw (< jacere, lie), akin to Gr. ἵκτεω, throw: see tambic. From the same L. source are abject, project, reject, subject, tract, ject, etc., with many derivatives, abjection, adjection, etc., adjective, objective, etc., ajacent, adajacent, circumajacent, ajactation, jettison, jetsam, jactitation, jaculate, ajaculate, etc., also amiceol, gist, gist, jotist, and, connected directly with jet, its doublet jut, and jetty, jutty, etc.] I. trans. To throw out; shoot out; spurt forth, especially from a small orifice; spout; spurt.

But that, instead of this form, so incommodious for the conveyance of waters, it should be jetted out every where into hills and dales so necessary for that purpose, is a manifest sign of an especial providence of the wise Creator.
Derham, Physico-Theology, III. 4.

A dozen angry models jetted steam.
Tennyson, Princess, Prolog.

II. intrans. 1†. To shoot forward; shoot out; project; jut.

His eyebrows jetted out like the round casement of an alderman's dining-room.
Middleton, Black Book.

2†. To strut; stalk; assume a haughty or pompous carriage; be proud.

I see Parmeno come jetting like a lord, but see how he idle he is, as one out of all care and thought.
J. Udall, Flowers, fol. 97.

The orders I did set,
They were obey'd with joy, which made me jet.
Mist. for Mage, p. 202.

3†. To encroach offensively. Nares.

is hard when Englishmen's patience must be thus on by strangers, and they not dare to revenge own wrongs.

Insulting tyranny begins to jet Upon the innocent and awless throne.

Shak., Rich. III., II. 4, 51.

To jerk; jolt. Wiseman.—5. To turn round bout. [Prov. Eng.]

(jet), n. [Early mod. E. also jette, get; < ME. get, jette, gette, a device, mode, manner, don, < OF. get, giel, later geet, jeet, a throw, etc., a jess (q. v.), F. jet, a throw, cast, ke, a gush, spurt, or jet (of water), a shoot plant, a jess, etc., = lt. getto, a throw, cast, erapout, etc., < L. factus, a throw, cast, < ja,
pp. factus, throw: see jet, v. Cf. jess, n.] sudden shooting forth; a spouting or spurtas of water or flame from a small orifice.

is natural jets and elations of a mind energized by the ity of its own emotions.

Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 243.

That which so issues or spurts: as, a jet of er; a jet of blood; a jet of gas.

Thus the small jet, which hasty hands unlock,
Sprits in the gardener's eyes who turns the cock.

Pope, Dunciad, II. 177.

A spout, or the end of a spout or nozzle, for emission of a liquid or gas: as, a rose-jet; se-jet.—4. In metal-casting: (a) A channel tube for introducing melted metal into a
d. (b) A small projecting piece of the metal, sisting of what remained in the hole through ch the liquid metal was run into the mold:
has to be filed off before the casting can finished. Compare runner.—5. In pyrotechy, a rocket-case filled with a burning composition, and attached to the circumference of heel or the end of a movable arm to give it tion.—6. A large water-ladle. Halliwel.
ov. Eng.]—7. A descent; a declivity. Hal- ll. [Prov. Eng.]—8. Fashion; manner; tom; style.

Also ther is another newe Jet,
A fowle wast of cloth, and excessy.
Books of Precedence (Ed. E. T. S., extra ser.), I. 106.
A kirtol of a fyn wachet,
Schapen with goores in the newe get.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, I. 136.
Artifice; contrivance.

Also ther is another newe Jet,
A fowle wast of cloth, and excessy.
Books of Precedence (Ed. E. T. S., extra ser.), I. 106.

A kirtol of a fyn wachet,
Schapen with goores in the newe get.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, I. 136.
Artifice; contrivance.

That was ordeyned with that false get.
Chaucer, Canon's Yeoman's Tale, I. 303.

[A form of or substitute for giel, of the ult. origin.] Point; drift; scope.

ow is this, master Rowley? I don't see the jet of your
me. Sheridan, School for Scandal, III. 1. often happens that the jet or principal point in the ste is lost in these personal contests.

Moritz, Travels in England in 1782 (trans.).

jetan jet, an annular steam-jet used to induce a flow liquid by an opening through which the jet issues.
principle is the same as that of the Giffard injector.—
Active jet, a jet of air, smoke, water or other liquid, burning gas, which is sensitive to sound-waves. The and dimensions of the jet are modified by the im-of the sound-waves.

(jet), n. and a. [Formerly also jeat, geat, geet, jayet; < ME. jet, jete, geete, < OF. jet so jette, l., jaet, jayet, F. jayet, jaet, earlier gayet, and restored gayete (cf. also ME. and as L., gagates, G. gayat, etc.), < L. gagates,
r. gayayr, jet, so called from gayar or gayayr, own and river of Lycia in Asia Minor.] I.
1. A solid, dry, black, inflammable fossil stance, harder than asphalt, susceptible of h polish, and glossy in its fracture, which is schoidal or undulating. It is found in beds of lite or brown coal, and chiefly in rocks of Tertiary and ondary age. The most important jet-veins are in Yorke, England, near Whitby. It is wrought into toys, but-s, and personal ornaments of various kinds.

A thousand favours from a mannd she drew,
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet.

Shak., Lover's Complaint, I. 37.

square peeces of white stone inserted into a piece of Coryat, Crudities, I. 103.

The color of jet; a deep, rich, glossy black.

The white pink, and the pansy freak'd with jet.

Milton, Lycidas, I. 144.

rock series, a portion of the Upper Lias, near Whit-Yorkshire, England: so called because it contains the "rock," a hard, bituminous shale, containing jet in the spaces between the layers in thin lenticular masses.
II. a. Made of the mineral jet: as, jet beads;
ornaments.

ant (jet'ant), n. A kind of ant, Formica lignosa.

black (jet'blak'), a. [jet + black.] Of e deepest black; black as jet.

Year after year unto her feet . . .

The maiden's jet-black hair has grown.

Tennyson, The Day-Dream, The Sleeping Beauty.

jet-break (jet'brak), n. In printing, the mark left on the bottom of a type by the breaking off of the jet projecting from the top of the mold.
jet d'eau (shé dō), [Formerly partly Englished, jetd'eau, jetd'eau, jetto; now as mere F., jet d'eau (= lt. getto d'acqua), a jet of water: jet, jet; de, of; eau, water: see jet, de, eau, eue.] A fine stream of water spouting from a fountain or pipe, especially an upward jet from an ornamental fountain.

There is nothing that more enlivens a prospect than rivers, jetd'eaus, or falls of water, where the scene is perpetually shifting.

Addison, Spectator, No. 412.

jetee (je-té'), n. [E. Ind.] The plant Marsdenia tenacissima, or bowstring-creeper of Rajmahal, found wild in certain hilly parts of India. Its fiber is beautiful in appearance, tough and elastic, and endures exposure to water. It is made into such articles as bowstrings, twine, and rope. The milky juice when dried serves as a caustic.

jet-glass (jet'glas), n. Crystal-glass of pure black: used for cheap jewelry, in imitation of jet.

jeton, n. See jettion.

jet-pump (jet pump), n. A pump in which the fluid is impelled by the action of a jet of the same or another fluid.

jetsam (jet'sam), n. [Also jetwom, jetsoma; a corruption of the earlier jettion, jettison, as jet- sam is of the earlier flotsam, flottison*: see jettis- son.] In law and com.: (a) Same as jettison.

Jetsam is where goods are cast into the sea, and there sink and remain under water; flotsam is where they continue swimming; ligan is where they are sunk in the sea, but tied to a cork or buoy in order to be found again.

Blackstone, Com., I. viii.

(b) The goods thrown out by jettison.

These are forgiven—matters of the past—
And range with jetsam and with offal thrown Into the blind sea of forgetfulness.

Tennyson, Queen Mary, III. 2.

jetsent, jetsomt, jetsomet, jetsont, n. See jet- sum, jettison. Cules; Minahou.

jetstone (jet'stōn), n. Same as jet. Jet was formerly supposed to have the property of attracting certain objects, like a magnet.

It gives Wits edge, and draws them too like jetstone.

Darwin, Commemorative Poems, p. 13.

jettage (jet'aj), n. [OF. jetter, throw, cast:
see jet.] Certain charges levied upon incoming vessels; specifically, dues payable to the corporation of Hull, England, on vessels entering.

Freemen [of Hull] are exempt from anchorage, but freemen as well as non-freemen pay jettage.

McCulloch, Dict. Commerce, p. 643.

jette (jet), n. The stalling, or inclosure of piles, of a bridge.

jetteaut (je-tō'), n. A former spelling of jet d'eau.

jetteet, n. An obsolete spelling of jetty.

jettier (jet'er), n. [ME. jettur, jettour, < OF.
jettour, jettour, jetour, etc., < L. jactator, a boaster: see jactator and jet.] One who jets or struts; a spruce fellow.

So were ye better,
What shulde a begger be a jettier?
J. Heywood, Four Ps.

jettiness (jet'i-ness), n. The quality of being jetty; blackness.

jettings (jet'ing), p. a. Same as jutting. See jut.

The vast jetting coat and small bonnet, which was the habit in Henry the Seventh's time, is kept on in the yeomen of the guard; not without a good and politic view, because they look a foot taller, and a foot and a half broader.

Steele, Spectator, No. 109.

jettison (jet'i-sqn), n. [*OF. AF. jettison, gettaiison, gettaiison, a throwing, jettison, < L. jactatio(n), a throwing, < jactare, throw: see jet, v., and cf. jactation, a doublet of jettison.
The word in E. use became corrupted, through jetsom, jetson, to jetsom, jetkome, jetsam: see jet- sam, and cf. flotsam, similarly corrupted.] In law, the throwing overboard of goods or merchandise, especially for the purpose of easing a ship in time of danger or distress. Stephen.

If, instead of being thrown overboard, the goods are put into boats or lighters, and lost or damaged before reaching the shore, such loss is regarded as a virtual jettison, and gives a claim to average contribution.

Encyc. Brit., III. 146.

The bottle was eventually picked up on the shore of Galveston Island in the Gulf of Mexico, having traversed (through the aid of the equatorial current) the Atlantic from the point of jettison to Trinidad or Tobago.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LIX. 153.

jettison (jet'i-sqn), v. t. [cf. jettison, n.] To throw overboard, especially for the purpose of easing and saving a ship in time of danger.

When a part of a cargo is thrown overboard (or jettisoned, as it is termed) to save the ship from foundering in a storm, or to float her when stranded, or to facilitate her escape from an enemy, the loss of the goods and of the freight attached to them must be made good by average contribution.

Shays, Brit., III. 146.

jettot (je-tō'), n. An obsolete spelling of jet
d'eau.

The garden has every variety, hills, dales, rocks, groves, aviaries, vivaries, fountains, especially one of five jets.
Boslyn, Diary, Oct. 23, 1644.

jettion (jet'on), n. [Also jettion; < F. jeton, a counter, OF. jettion, jetion, a shoot, sprout, etc., < jeter, throw, cast: see jet.] A piece of metal, generally silver, copper, or brass, bearing various devices and inscriptions, formerly used as Obverse.

Reverse.

Bronze Jetton of Louis XIV., British Museum. (Size of the original.)

a counter in card-playing, or in casting up accounts; also, an abbeys-counter. Jettions came into use in the fourteenth century, and were extensively used, especially in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, in the Netherlands, France, Germany, and other countries.

They used to compute with Jettions and counters; . . .
it is done by laying them on lines increasing in their value from the bottom, which is a line of Units; the second, or next above it, is a line of Tens; the third a line of Hundreds; the fourth of Thousands; and so on.

2. Snelling, View of the Origin of Jettions, p. 12.

Almost every abbey struck its own jettions or counters, which were thin pieces of copper, commonly impressed with a pious legend, and used in casting up accounts.

Chaston, Wood Engraving, p. 12.

jetty¹ (jet'i), n.; pl. jetties (-iz). [Also jutty,
q. v.; < OF. jeter, jetice, jetice, jetice, a cast, a jetty or jutty, etc.; F. jetée, a pier, breakwater, jetty; prop. fem. pp. of OF. jeter, jeter, F. jeter, throw, cast: see jet.] 1. A projecting part of a building, especially a part that projects so as to overhang the wall below, as the upper story of a timber house, a bay-window, etc. See extract under jetty, v. t.—2. A projection of stone, brick, wood, or other material (but generally formed of piles), affording a convenient place for landing from and discharging vessels or boats, or serving as a protection against the encroachment or assault of the waves; also, a pier of stone or other material projecting from the bank of a stream obliquely to its course, for the purpose of directing the current upon an obstruction to be removed, as a bed of sand or gravel, or to deflect it from a bank which it tends to undermine. Important jetties are those at the mouth of the Mississippi river, constructed of willow mattresses sunk by weighting with stone, and laid along both banks of the river to contract the current and cause it to scour out the channel. See mattress.

Let us out all the cables and snap all the chains which tie us to an unfaithful shore, and enter the friendly harbour, that shoots far out into the main its moles and jet- ties to receive us.

Hurke, Economical Reform.

She was walking much too near the brink of a sort of old jetty or wooden causeway we had strolled upon, and I was afraid of her falling over.

Dickens, David Copperfield, III.

The country on both sides of the Mississippi from New Orleans up to the mouth of the Red River is known as the Upper Coast; that below the city down to the Jetties, as the Lower Coast.

The Century, XXXV. 103.

jetty¹ (jet'i), v.; prot. and pp. jettied, ppr. jet- tying. [Also jutty, q. v.; an extension of jet, jut, after jetty, jutty, n.] I. intrans. To jut; project.

An out-butting or jettie of a house that jetties out farther than any other part of the house.

Florio.

II. trans. To make a jetty.

Jettying with brush and pile, and finally strengthening with stone.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LX. 103.

jetty¹ (jet'i), a. [cf. jet + -y.] Jetting, or jutting out; swelling.

Twine twentie jettie sails with him

The swelling streams did take.

Chapman, Iliad, II.

jetty² (jet'i), a. [cf. jet + -y.] 1. Made of jet.
—2. Black as jet.

His spear, his shield, his horse, his armour, plumes,
And jetty feathers, menace death and hell.

Mariouss, Tamburlaine, I. iv. 1.

All the Soods

In which the full-formed moids of Africa love
Their jetty limbs.

Thompson, Summer, I. 384.

jettthead (jet'ti-hed), n. A projecting part at the outer end of a wharf; the front of a wharf of which the side forms one of the cheeks of a dock.

jeu d'esprit (zhè des-prè'). [F.: jeu, a play; de, of; esprit, spirit; see esprit.] A witticism; a play of wit.

We had no idea that the task before us was to examine and report upon a somewhat mild jeu d'esprit.

Nature, XXXVIII, 28.

jeune premier (jèn pre-mià'). [F.: jeune, young; premier, first.] In the theater, an actor who personates young men in leading parts; a first juvenile.

Mr. —, as Adrien, is a jeune premier who promises a good deal.

The Academy, April 6, 1889, p. 245.

jeunesse dorée (jè-nus' do-rà'). [F.: jeunesse, youth; dorée, fem. of doré, gilded.] Literally, the gilded youth of a community; rich and fashionable young men, especially those who are luxurious and prodigal in their way of living; specifically, in French hist., a group of fashionable members of the reactionary party, in the period after the 9th Thermidor, 1794.

Jeunesse dorée answers, perhaps, rather to Marcell's expression of "curled darlings" than to "dandy."

N. and Q., 7th ser., V. 190.

Jew (jè), n. [< ME. Jow, Jew, Gic, Gyo, Jwe, usually in pl. Jewes, Jowes, Jues, Gows, Giwes, Gywes, etc.; < OF. Jow, Jew, Jue, Juén, later and mod. F. Juif = Pr. Juzien = Lat. Juu = Sp. Judío = Pg. Judco, Judeu = It. Giudeo = AS. Iudæu, Iudæus, pl. Iudoi or Iudæas = OS. Iudæo, Iudheo = OFries. Jotha = MD. Jode, D. Jood = MLG. Jode, Jodde = OHG. Judo, Judo, MHG. Jude, Jüde, G. Jude = Dan. Jøde = Sw. Jude = Goth. Iudains, < L. Iudæus, < Gr. Ioudaios, a Jew, an inhabitant of Judea, < Ioudaia, L. Iudaea, Judea, < Heb. Yehūdāh, Judah, so called from the tribe of that name, descendants of Yehūdāh, Judah, son of Jacob (> Ar. Turk. Hind. Yehūdā, a Jew).] 1. A Hebrew; an Israelite.

Thowe this for no leasyng,
And namely leve her of no Jew.

For al thus and thil with Jhesu.

Ourser Mundé, M. Coll. Trin. Cantab., f. 113. (Halliwel.)

Glory, honour, and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile. Rom. ii. 10.

2. A person who seeks gain by sordid or crafty means; a hard-fisted money-lender, or tricky dealer; an opprobrious use: as, he is a regular Jew.—Exchequer of the Jews. See exchequer.—Jew mill. See mill.—Jew's eye. [An allusion to the custom of torturing Jews with the view of extorting money.] Something very precious or highly prized.

There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jew's eye.

Shak., M. of V., II. 5, 43.

[In the original editions the word in this passage is Jewes, the old dissyllable possessive for either sex. The phrase "worth a Jew's eye" is the old proverb here used punningly.]—Jews' frankincense, the balsam known as benzoin or gum storax, often used as an incense.—Jews' houses, in Cornwall, England, remains of ancient dwellings and furnaces which, together with the tools of ancient smelters and blocks of tin in the rude molds of earth in which the metal was cast, have been found in various parts of that county. These remains date back to a period many centuries before Christ, at a time when trade had been established between Britain and the eastern Mediterranean region.—Jews' money, a name given to old Roman coins found in some parts of England. Halliwel.—Jews' tin, tin smelted in rude blast-furnaces and cast into irregular slabs of various kinds, found in connection with the so-called Jews' houses in Cornwall, and believed to be the work of ancient smelters.

jew (jè), v. [< Jew, n., in allusion to the sharpness in bargaining popularly ascribed to the Jews.] 1. trans. To overreach; cheat; beat unfairly at a bargain: as, to jew one out of a dollar. [Colloq.]

We know there is a mawkish sentiment existing that Jews should not be countenanced; that they will cheat at every opportunity; and it has become a saying that a person swindled in any manner was simply Jewed. Yet we have never been in possession of evidence that satisfied us that Jews were more amenable to these alleged weaknesses than other classes. Quoted in Amer. Hebrew, XXXIX, 46.

II. intrans. To practise arts of overreaching or cheating in trade. [Colloq.]

They smuggles you quietly into some room by yourselves, and then sets to work Jewing away as hard as they can, pricing up their own things, and downpricing yours. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 408.

To jew down, to beat down the price of; persuade the seller to take a lower price for. [Colloq.] [This verb, in these uses, is well established in colloquial speech. Though now commonly employed without direct reference to the Jews as a race, it is regarded by them as offensive and opprobrious.]

Jew-baiter (jè'bā'tér), n. A person given to harrying or persecuting Jews. [Recent.]

Jew-baiting (jè'bā'ting), n. The act of harrying or persecuting Jews. [Recent.]

Alas! how much has taken place during these six years that makes a recurrence to this particular festival (that of the Passover) specially painful and interesting. The Jew-baiting in Germany; the bloody persecutions in Russia. Evening Post, April 21, 1888.

jew-bush (jè'būsh), n. A popular name of one or more species of the plant-genus Pedilanthus.
Jew-crow (jè'krō), n. The chough; also, the hooded crow: each more fully called market-Jew crow.

Jewdom (jè'dum), n. [= D. Judentum = G. Judentum = Dan. Jødedom; as Jew + -dom.] Jews collectively. Spectator (London).

jewel (jè'el), n. [< ME. jewel, juwel, juel, jewel, jouelle = D. Juwel = G. Juwel = Dan. Sw. Juvel, < OF. Jowel, joel, jitel, later and mod. F. joyau = Pr. joyel, joell = Sp. joyel = It. gioiello, a jewel; dim. of OF. jote, goie, joy, pleasure (not found in the deflected sense 'jewel'), = Sp. joya = Pg. joia, a jewel (not found in the lit. sense 'joy'), = It. gioja, joy, also a jewel, < L. gaudium, joy, ML. a bead on a rosary, pl. gaudia, beads: see joy, gaud, and gandy. The ML. form would be reg. gaudiale*, or gaudillum*; but, through a misunderstanding of the Rom. forms (which were taken to represent L. jocus, a jest, > OF. jcu, ju, etc.), the ML. appears as jocale.] 1. A precious stone or gem; especially, a gem cut and shaped for ornament or use: as, the jewels of a crown.
And jewels: two stones, two rich and precious stones!
Shak., M. of V., II. 8, 20.

A splendid silk of foreign loom, . . .

And thicker down the front

With jewels than the award with drops of dew.

Tennyson, Geraint.

2. An article of personal adornment, consisting of a gem or gems in a setting of precious metal; also, formerly, any piece of jewel-work, or a trinket or ornament worn on the person, as a ring, a bracelet, or a brooch.

We have riches full ripe, red gold tyn;
Clothes full comely, and other clone Jewellie;
Armour and all thing shill thour.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 1743.

A collar, or jewell, that women used about their neckes.
Darrel (1880), I. 38. (Halliwel.)

He's given to her a jewel fine,

Was set with pearl and precious stone.

John Thomson and the Turk (Child's Ballads, III. 353).

A watch is neither a jewel nor an ornament, as these words are used and understood, either in common parlance or by lexicographers. It is not used or carried as a jewel or ornament, but as an article of ordinary wear by most travellers, and of daily and hourly use by all.

Kennedy v. Leland, 43 N. Y., 539.

3. An ornament of precious stones, or metal, enamel, etc., worn as a decoration, or as the badge of an honorary order: as, the jewel of the Garter.

The jewel of the order [Teutonic Order] consists of a black and white cross, surmounted by a helmet with three feathers.

Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 201.

4. A precious stone used in watchmaking, on account of its hardness and resistance to wear, as where a pivot turns in a socket.—5. An imitation, in glass or enamel, of a real jewel. See jeweled, 3.—6. In colored-glass windows, etc., a projecting boss of glass, sometimes cut with facets, introduced in the design to give variety and richness of effect.

Mosaic glass has rapidly improved in the past century. . . . The jewels cut from pieces of a rich colored glass add effectively to the brilliancy of recent designs.
Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 255.

7. Anything of great value or rare excellence; anything especially fine or dear: sometimes applied to persons as a term of high commendation or tender endearment.

Value desert and virtue: they are jewels

Fit for your worth and wearing.

Fletcher, Mad Lover, v. 4.

My bishop is a jewel tried and perfect;

A jewel, lords. Ford, Perkin Warbeck, iv. 4.

She is an inestimable jewel. Steele, Tatler, No. 95.

If solid happiness we prize,

Within our breasts this jewel lies,

And they are fools who roam.

N. Cotton, The Fire-side, st. 3.

Jewel kaleidoscope. See kaleidoscope.

jewel-block (jè'el-blok), n. A block which is suspended from the extremity of a yard-arm, and through which studdingsail-halyards are led.

jewel-case (jè'el-kās), n. A case for holding jewels and other personal ornaments. Especially—(a) An ornamental or artistic casket or box, often lined with velvet, plush, satin, or the like, made to set off a jewel or set of jewels, as a necklace, ear-rings, bracelet, etc. (b) A box made for holding jewels, and allowing of easy transportation and safe handling.

jewel-drawer (jè'el-drā'er), n. A small drawer in the upper part of a dressing-table, for holding jewels.

jeweled, jewelled (jè'eld), a. [< jewel + -ed.] 1. Fitted or provided with jewels; having pivot-holes of garnet, chrysolite, ruby, or other jewel: as, a watch jeweled in nine holes; a watch jeweled in fifteen holes is said to be full-jeweled.

A gold hunting watch, engine-turned, capped and jewelled in four holes. Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xiii.

2. Decked or adorned with or as with jewels.

On these pines . . . the long grey tufts

. . . are jewell'd thick with dew.

M. Arnold, Empedocles on Etna.

3. Decorated with small drops or bosses of colored glass or enamel in imitation of jewels: said of glassware or porcelain: as, jeweled Sévres.

jeweler, jeweller (jè'el-er), n. [Early mod. E. also jueller; < ME. jueler (= D. G. Juweller = Dan. Jeweler; cf. Sw. juvelerare); < AF. jouellour, OF. joielcor, joyallier, joyauhier, F. joaillier (= It. gioielliere, a jeweler), < joel, etc., a jewel: see jewel.] One who makes or deals in jewels and ornaments of precious metal.

A Jewellers

Which brought from thence gold ore to vs here,

Whereof was lyned metal good and clene.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 199.

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,

And he shall surty me.

Shak., All's Well, v. 3, 297.

Jewelers' bow, an instrument used by jewelers in sawing and drilling.—Jeweler's red, jeweler's rouge, ferric oxide, prepared by roasting green vitriol (ferrous sulphate) in crucibles. It has a scarlet color and is used as a polishing-powder.

jewel-house (jè'el-hous), n. The rooms in the Tower of London where the British regalia and crown jewels are deposited. Also called jewel-office.

The king

Has made him master o' the jewel house,

And one, already, of the privy counsell.

Shak., Ham. VIII., iv. 1, 111.

jewelling, jewelling (jè'el-ing), n. [< jewel + -ing.] 1. The art of decorating with jewels.

He taught to make womens ornaments, and how to look faire, and jewelling. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 37.

2. In ceram.: (a) Decoration by means of small drops or bosses of translucent glaze applied to the surface, as frequently in Sévres porcelain.

(b) Decoration by means of rounded projections of the substance of the body, these projections being covered with a glaze or enamel different from the rest of the piece, as in Doulton ware and some old grès de Flandres.

jewelled, jeweller, etc. See jeweled, etc.

jewellery, n. See jewelry.

jewel-like (jè'el-lik), a. Bright or sparkling as a jewel.

My queen's square brows:

Her stature to an inch: as waide-like straight;

As silver-violet: her eyes as jewel-like.

And cas'd as richly. Shak., Pericles, v. 1, 111.

jewelly, n. See jewelry.

jewel-office (jè'el-of'is), n. Same as jewel-house.

jewelry, jewellery (jè'el-ri), n. [After F. joaillerie; < jewel + -ry, -cry.] 1. Jewelers' work; ornaments made by jewelers.

This great officer (the Jewish high priest) wore upon his breast a splendid piece of jewellery.

De Quincey, Essays, I.

2. The workmanship of a jeweler. [Rare.]

All the haft twinkled with diamond sparks,

Myriads of topaz-lights, and jacinth-work

Of subtlest jewellery. Tennyson, Passing of Arthur.

Berlin jewelry, delicate trinkets of cast-iron introduced in Prussia during the domination of Napoleon. The manufacture of such jewels has continued to the present time, and its products have been fashionable. Compare Berlin iron-castings, under iron.—Bird jewelry, ornaments for the person made of the feathers and other parts of birds; especially, brooches, pendants, etc., made from the breasts, heads, etc., of humming-birds, the iridescent color giving the effect of precious stones. Art Jour., N. S., XI. 272.—Claw jewelry, jewels and decorative objects for personal wear consisting of tigers' or leopards' claws, etc., mounted in gold. Art Jour., N. S., XI. 272.—Scotch jewelry, jewelry made in Scotland, especially that in which the native colored crystals (see cat's-paw) are used, and fretwork in silver, either alone or combined with gold. This jewelry is usually inexpensive. Similar work is applied in the mounting of weapons, etc.—Temple jewelry, jewelry of inexpensive material, made at the Temple in Paris.

jewel-setter (jè'el-set'er), n. A steel cutter for pressing a watch-jewel into place and forming a flange in the metal to hold it.

jewel-stand (jè'el-stand), n. A small decorative utensil for the toilet-table, meant to receive jewelry which is in daily use: either a tazza or flat cup, or a stand with small hooks, upon which articles of jewelry can be hung.

jewel-wood (jō'el-wōd), n. [So called from the earring-like shape of the flowers, and the silver sheen of the under surface of the leaf in water.] The American Impatiens, the balsam or touch-me-not, I. fulva (see cut under balsam) or I. pallida. See balsam and Impatiens.

jewelry, jewelly (jō'el-i), a. [< jewel + -y.] Like a jewel; brilliant.

The jewelry star of life had descended too far down the arch towards setting for any chance of reascending by spontaneous effort.

De Quincey, Spanish Nun.

Unlike a great deal of modern work of this kind [stained glass], the light does not strike through his panels and dazzle the eye with patches of crudely-coloured light, but is held, as it were, in rich and jewelily suspension.

The Academy, June 1, 1889, p. 284.

Jewerist, n. A Middle English form of Jewry. Chaucer.

Jewess (jō'es), n. [< Jew + -ess.] A Hebrew woman; an Israelitess.

Her knowledge of medicine . . . had been acquired under an aged Jewess, the daughter of one of their most celebrated doctors, who loved Rebecca as her own child.

Scott, Ivanhoe, xxviii.

jewfish (jō'fish), n. One of several different fishes, chiefly of the family Serranidae. (a) Along the southern and eastern coasts of the United States, Jewfish (Promicropus guaza).

Promicropus guaza, which sometimes reaches a weight of 700 pounds. (b) Along the Californian coast, Sternolepis gigan, the black sea-bass, which nearly equals the former in size. (c) Along the southern coast of the United States, Epinephelus nigratus, the black grouper, which has a blue-black color above, without red or tracings on the body or fins. (d) Along the Florida coast, Megalops atlanticus, the tarpon or tarpon, an eel-like. (e) In Madeira, Polyprion americanus or P. couchi, the stone-bass. (f) A flat-fish, Paralichthys dentatus, the wide-mouthed flounder. (Connecticut.) (g) In New South Wales, a scionoid fish, Solomon neglecta, closely related to the European malgre.

jewing (jō'ing), n. [< Jew + -ing.] In allusion to the curvation recognized as characteristic of the Jewish nose. The carunculation of the base of the beak of some varieties of the domestic pigeon; the lobes or wattles of the lower mandible, often in the form of three small fleshy processes, one at each side and a third beneath and before the others.

The jewing [in the barb pigeon] is three small knobs of core in the middle of the lower mandible, and each side of the gape of the mouth.

The Century, XXXII, 104.

jewiset, n. See juice.

Jewish (jō'ish), a. [< AS. Iādēsc = D. foodsch = OHG. judēisk, judīsk, julink, MHG. jūdīsch, jūdōsch, G. jüdisch = Dan. jüdisk = Sw. jüdisk = Goth. judaivisks; as Jew + -ish.] Relating or belonging to or characteristic of the Jews or Hebrews; Hebrew; Israelitish.

Then haue you Brokers yat haue poore men by most Jewish interest.

Dekker, Seuen Deadly Sinns, p. 40.

Let Egypt's plagues and Canaan's woes proclaim The favours pour'd upon the Jewish name.

Cowper, Expostulation, l. 170.

Jewish Christian. Same as Judas, 2.—Jewish era. See era.

Jewishly (jō'ish-li), adv. In the manner of the Jews.

Jewishness (jō'ish-nos), n. The condition or appearance of being Jewish; Jewish character or quality.

Jewism (jō'izm), n. [< Jew + -ism.] The religious system of the Jews; Judaism.

These superstitious feth'd from Paganism or Jewism.

Milton.

jewlap (jō'lap), n. [Also jellop, jowlop; appar. corrupt forms of dewlap.] In her., a wattle or dewlap. G. T. Clark.

jewlaped, jewlapped (jō'lapt), a. In her., same as wattled.

Jewling, n. [< Jew + -ling.] A young or little Jew.

Many Jewes are called together into a great chamber, where enerie of the youthes buldeth a pot in his hand, . . . and the Jewlings presently breake their earthen pots, whereby they signifie to the parties prosperitie and abundance.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 218.

Jewry (jō'ri), n. [< ME. Jewery, Jewerie, Jewerie, Jurrie, Jurio, Gwerie, the Jewish people, Jewish quarter, Jewism, < OF. juerie, jewerie, etc., < Jew, etc., Jew: see Jew and -ry.] 1. The land of the Jews; Judaea.

After these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

John vi. 1.

Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry, On affairs of Antony. Shak., A. and C., iv. 6, 12.

24. A part of a city inhabited by Jews (whence the name of a street in London).

There was in Asie, in a great citie, Amonges Cristen folk a Jewerie.

Chaucer, Priores's Tale, l. 87.

The London Jewerie was established in a place of which no vestige of its establishment now remains beyond the name—the Old Jewery.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II, 122.

3. The Jewish people.

The Ebrayk Josephus the olde, That of Jewes gastes tolde; And he bar on hys shuldres hys The fame up of the Jewerie.

Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1430.

Statute of Jewry, an English statute (of about 1276) forbidding Hebrews to practice usury, restricting their right of distress, etc., requiring them to wear badges, and subjecting them to other restraints and disabilities.

Jews'-apple (jōz'ap'l), n. Same as egg-plant, Jew's-ear (jōz'ēr), n. [Formerly Judas's ear, NL. auricula Judae. It grows most often upon the elder, the tree, according to one tradition, upon which Judas hanged himself.] 1. A fungus, Hirneola auricula-Judae, bearing some resemblance to the human ear. It formerly had some medicinal repute in England, which has now passed away; but it is exported in large quantities to China, where it is prized as a medicine and an article of diet.

The mushrooms or toadstools which grow upon the trunks or bodies of old trees varie much resembling Auricula Jude, that is Jewes ears, do in continuance of time growe vnto the substance of wood, which the fowlers do call touchwood.

Gerard, Herbal, p. 1285.

2. Any one of several fungi of the genus Pecizia.—3. The tomato. [Prov. Eng.]

Jews'-harp (jōz'hārp), n. [The name alludes vaguely to the use of the harp among the Jews ("David's harp," etc.). The Sw. giga or mung-giga, jew's-harp (mun = K. mouth), was originally applied (as in Isel, etc.) to the fiddle (see gig and fig), and has nothing to do etymologically with the E. Jew's-harp. Another proposed derivation, "a corruption of jaw's harp," is absurd.] 1. A musical instrument consisting of a flexible metal tongue set in a small stiff iron frame of peculiar shape, which is held to the player's mouth and pressed against his teeth, the metal tongue of the instrument being bent outward at a right angle so as to be struck with the hand. Tones of different pitch are produced by altering the shape and size of the mouth-cavity, so as to reinforce the various harmonics of the natural tone of the tongue, which is low in pitch. The Jew's-harp is capable of surprisingly sweet and elaborate effects. Formerly sometimes called Jew's-trump, and also trump or trump.

Yet if they would bring him hatchets, knives, and Jewes-harps, he bid them assure me, he had a mine of gold, and could refine it, & would trade with me.

Zakus's Voyages, III, 576.

2. Naut., the shackle by which a cable is secured to the anchor-ring.

1. Jew's-harp; 2. club-link; 3. anchor.

Jews'-mallow (jōz'mal'ō), n. A plant of the genus Corchorus (C. olivarius or C. capsularis), belonging to the natural order Tiliaceae. The leaves are used in Egypt and Syria as a pot-herb. See fulu.

Jews'-manna (jōz'man'g), n. See Jew's manna, under manna.

Jews'-myrtle (jōz'mēr'tl), n. 1. The prickly-leaved plant Ruscus aculeatus.—2. A three-leaved variety of Myrtus communis.

Jews'-stone, Jew-stone (jōz'stōn, jō'stōn), n. 1. The clavated fossil spine of a very large egg-shaped echinus. It is a regular figure, oblong and rounded, about three fourths of an inch long and half an inch in diameter. Its color is a pale dusky gray, with a tinge of red.

2. The basalt capping the coal-measures on the Titterstone and Brown Clee hills in Shropshire, England; also, the local name of a limestone-belt belonging to the White Lias (Rhaetic) in Somersetshire. [Local, Eng.]

Jews'-thorn (jōz'thōrn), n. Same as Christ's-thorn.

Jews'-trump (jōz'trump), n. Same as Jew's-harp, 1.

Ant. Can he make rhymes too? See Genl. H's made a thousand, sir, And plays the burden to 'em on a Jew's-trump.

Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, v. 2.

Jezabel (jōz'e-bel), n. [So called in allusion to Jezabel, the infamous wife of Ahab, king of Israel (1 Ki. xvi. 81).] An impudent, violent, unscrupulous, vicious woman.

But when she knew my pain, Saw my first wish her favour to obtain, And ask her hand—no sooner was it ask'd, Than she, the lovely Jezabel, unmasked.

Orville.

Jezid (jēz'id), n. One of a religious sect in Asiatic Turkey: same as Jacid.

Jhil, Jheel (jēl), n. [Also written jeel; repr. Hind. jhil, a lake, pool, mere.] In India, a large pool, mere, or lagoon of standing water remaining after inundation, and more or less filled with rank vegetation.

Numerous shallow ponds or jhils mark the former beds of the shifting rivers. These jhils have great value, not only as preservatives against inundation, but also as reservoirs for irrigation.

Encyc. Brit., XVIII, 71.

Jhoom, Jhum (jōm), n. [E. Ind. jhum.] A system of cultivation used in India, especially on the eastern frontier of Bengal, in which a tract of forest or jungle is cleared by fire, cultivated for a year or two, and then abandoned for a new tract. In southwestern India this system is called burning, and in Ceylon it is known as chena.

Yule and Burnell.

jib (jib), v.; pret. and pp. jibbed, ppr. jibbing. [Also written jibe, gybe (with long i, prob. after the D. form), < Dan. gibbe, naut. jib, jibe, = Sw. gippa, naut. jib, jibe, dial. jerk, cause to jump, = D. gippen (of sails), turn suddenly (Halma, cited by Wedgwood). The word appears nasalized in the MHG. freq. gompeln, spring, and with reg. alteration of vowel in Sw. dial. guppa, move up and down, nasalized gumpu, spring, jump, etc.: see jump and jumble.] Same as jibe.

I think these vessels are navigated either end foremost, and that, in changing tasks, they have only occasion to shift or jib round the sail.

Cook, Third Voyage, l. 2.

jib (jib), n. [So called because readily shifted or jibbed; < jib, v. t.] Naut., a large triangular sail set on a stay forward of the foremast. In large vessels it extends from the end of the jib-boom toward the foremast-head; in schooners and sloops from the bowsprit-end toward the foremast-head. The fly-jib is set outside of the jib, and the stow-jib outside of the flying jib. When two smaller jibs are carried on one boom, instead of one larger one, they are distinguished as the inner and outer jibs. See balloon-jib, and cut under cut.—The cut of one's jib. See cut.—To house up the jib. See house.

jib (jib), v. t.; pret. and pp. jibbed, ppr. jibbing. [Also jibb, improp. jibe; < ME. gibben, only in comp. regibben, Ekke back, < OF. regiber, later and mod. F. regimber, wince, Ekke, in simple form OF. gibber, gibber, struggle with the hands and feet; perhaps of Scand. origin: < Sw. dial. gippa, jerk, = Dan. gibbe, naut. jib, jibe; that is, jib is ult. identical with jib, q. v.] To pull against the bit, as a horse; move restively sideways or backward.

jib (jib), n. [< jib, v.] Same as jibber.

Frequently young horses that will not work in case—such as jib—are sold to the horse-laughters as useless.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I, 180.

jib (jib), n. [Also jib: see jib.] In def. 3, cf. OF. gibbe, a bunch or swelling; a particular sense of jibbe, a sort of arm, etc.: see jib.] 1. The projecting arm of a crane: same as jib, 5.—2. A stand for beer-barrels. Halliwel.—3. The under lip.—To hang the jib, to look cross. [Prov. Eng.]

jibb, v. t. See jib.

jibber (jib'ēr), n. [< jib + -er.] One who jibs; a horse that jibs. 'Also jib.

jibbings (jib'ingz), n. pl. The last milk drawn from a cow; strippings; the richest part of the milk. [Scotch.]

Jane the lesser (Jean) . . . furnishes butter and after-ings (jibbings) for tea.

Orville, in Frodoe.

jib-boom (jib'bōm), n. [Also jib-boom; < jib + boom.] Naut., a spar run out from the extremity of the bowsprit and serving as a continuation of it. Beyond this is sometimes extended the flying-jib boom.

jib-door (jib'dōr), n. [< jib (1) + door.] In arch., a door with its surface in the same plane as the wall in which it occurs. Jib-doors are intended to be concealed, and therefore have no architectural or moldings round them; and their surface is painted, painted, or papered so as to be indistinguishable from the rest of the wall.

jibe (jib), v.; pret. and pp. jibed, ppr. jibbing. [Also written jibe, and formerly gybe; also jib: See jib.] 1. trans. Naut., to cause (a fore-andaft sail) to swing over to the other side when the wind is aft or on the quarter.

II. intrans. 1. Naut., to change from one tack to the other without going about; shift a fore-and-aft sail from one side to the other when the wind is aft or on the quarter.

Augustus . . . stood up on the centre-board, to the imminent danger of his little shins' more intimate acquaintance with a jibing boom.

Pica-Hugh Ludlow, Little Brother, III.

2. To agree; be in harmony or accord; work together: as, the two plans did not seem to jibe. [Colloq., U. S.]

*jibe*², v. and n. See gibel.

*jibe*³ (jib), v. t. A less common form of *jib*².

jiber, n. See giber.

jib-frame (jib'fram), n. In a marine engine, the upright frame at the sides by which the cylinder, condenser, and framing are connected.

jib-hank (jib'hank), n. One of a number of pieces of wood or iron, shaped nearly like a ring, which slide on the jib-stay and serve to attach the head of the jib to the stay.

jib-head (jib'head), n. Naut., an iron fastened to the head of a jib. It is used when, the jib having been stretched too much by use, it is necessary to shorten it by cutting off the point.

jibingly, adv. See gibingly.

jiblet, n. An obsolete form of giblet. Bruckett.

Oh that's well: come, I'll help you:

Have you no jiblets now?

Fletcher (and another), Love's Pilgrimage, I. 1.

jiblet-check, jiblet-check, n. See giblet-check.

jib-plot (jib'lot), n. A triangular lot or plot of ground, likened in shape to a vessel's jib. [New Eng.]

jib-netting (jib'net'ing), n. Naut., a triangular-shaped netting rigged under the jib-boom to prevent men from falling overboard while loosing or furling the jib.

jib-o'-jib (jib'o'-jib), n. A small three-cornered sail sometimes set outside of and above the other head-sails.

jib-sheet (jib'sheet), n. One of the ropes attached at one end to the clew of the jib and at the other to the bows of the vessel, to trim the sail.—To flow a jib-sheet. See flow.

jib-stay (jib'stay), n. 1. The stay on which the jib is set.—2. In a marine steam-engine, a part of the stay-frame.

jib-top-sail (jib'top'sail or -sl), n. A light three-cornered sail set in yachts on the foretopmast-stay.

jickajog (jik'a-jog), n. Same as jiggog.

Id. See *gig*².

jidda gum. See *gum*².

jiffy (jif), v. t. [Origin obscure.] To make a jest or laughing-stock of one. Bailey.

jiffy (jif'i), n.; pl. jiffies (-iz). [Also giffy, giffin; of dial. origin.] A moment; an instant: as, I shall be with you in a jiffy. [Colloq.]

"And oh!" he exclaimed, "let them go catch my skiff, I'll be home in a twinkling and back in a jiffy."

Barham, Ingulday Legends, II. 40.

"Guess you better wait half a jiffy," cried Cyrus.

J. T. Frothingham, Coupon Bonds, p. 191.

jig (jig), n. [An assimilated form of the older gig (with hard initial g), < M.E. gigge (see *gig*¹); < O.F. gigue, gige, a fiddle, also a kind of dance, mod. F. gigue, a lively tune or dance, = I'r. gigua, guiga, a fiddle, = O.Sp. giga, a fiddle, Sp. giga, a lively tune or dance, = Oit. giga, a fiddle, = It. giga, a lively tune or dance, < O.D. gige*, MD. ghighe = MLG. gige*, gigel = MHG. gige, G. goige = Icel. giga = Sw. giga, a fiddle (obs.), also a Jews'-harp, = Dan. gige, a fiddle, also (after E. or F.) a lively dance. The earliest sense, 'a fiddle,' is involved in jig, v., play the fiddle: see jig, v., and *gig*¹, n. As with other familiar words of homely aspect, the senses are more or less involved and inconstant. In part prob. due to jig, v., as a var. of jog: see jig, v. 1. A rapid, irregular dance for one or more persons, performed in different ways in different countries; a modification of the country-dance.

George, I will have him dance fading; fading is a fine jig, I'll assure you.

Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, iv. 1.

All the swains that there abide

With jigs and rural dance resort.

Milton, Comus, l. 62.

2. Music for such a dance or in its rhythm, which is usually triple and rapid: often used in the eighteenth century as a component of a suite.

They heard the signs of an Irish orgy—a rattling jig, played and danced with the inspiring interjections of that rollicksome nation. C. Roade, Peg Woffington, vii.

3. A lively song; a catch.

If neere vn to the Eleusinian Spring,
Hom sport-fall jig som wanton Shepheard sing,
The Kaviast Fontaine falls to dance and bound.
Sylvester, tr. of De Bartsas Weeks, l. 2.

It would have made your ladyship have sung nothing but merry jigs for a twelvemonth after.

Middleton, Father Hubbard's Tales.

4. A kind of entertainment in rime, partly sung and partly recited.

Farce (F.), a (fond and dissolute) play, comedy, or enterlude; also the jig (jyp, ed. 1811) at the end of the enterlude, wherein some pretty knavery is acted. Ootgrave.

A jig shall be clapped at, and every rhyme

Praised and applauded.

Fletcher (and another), Fair Maid of the Inn, Prol.

A jig was a ludicrous metrical composition, often in rhyme, which was sung by the clown, who occasionally danced, and was always accompanied by a labor and pipe. Halliwel.

5. A piece of sport; a prank; a trick.

What dost think of This innovation? Is 't not a fine jig?
A precious cunning in the late Protector,
To shuffe a new prince into the state.
Shirley (and Fletcher?), Coronation, v. 1.

They will play ye another jig,

For they will out at the big jig.

Pray of Support (Child's Ballads, VI. 119).

6. A small, light mechanical contrivance: same as *jigger*¹, 2: used especially in composition: as, a drilling-jig, shaving-jig, etc. Specifically—(a) A jigging-machine. (b) In coal-mining, a self-acting incline worked by a drum, or by wheels, with hemp or wire ropes. Also called kinny. [Eng.] (c) A fish-hook or gang of hooks of which the shank is loaded with lead, platinum, or other bright metal, used in jigging for cod, mackerel, etc.

A jig is a bit of lead armed with hooks radially arranged, which is let down from the boat and kept constantly moving up and down. This in some way exerts a fatal fascinating power upon the squid, which seizes it.

Stand. Nat. Hist., I. 876.

Rabbitting jig. See rabbitting.—Haymaker's jig, a kind of country dance.—The jig is up, the game is up; it is all over (with any one). [U. S.]

jig (jig), v.; pret. and pp. jiggered, ppr. jigging. [< O.F. giquer = Pr. gigar, play the fiddle (cf. MLG. gippen = MHG. gipen, G. geipen = Icel. gipa, play the fiddle); from the noun. No orig. verb has been established. The E. use of jig in the second sense, though easily explained by reference to the quick motion implied in the other senses, may be due in part to association with jog. Cf. jigjog, jickajog.] I. intrans. 1. To play or dance a jig.

I did not hear of any amusements popular among . . . the Irishmen except dancing parties at one another's houses, where they jig and reel furiously.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 115.

I found myself at times following the dance of the Merry Men as it were a tune upon a jigging instrument.

R. L. Stevenson, Merry Men.

2. To move skipingly or friskily; hop about; act or vibrate in a lively manner. Compare jigget.

You jig, you amble, and you flap.

Shak., Hamlet, III. 1, 140.

The trembling fowl that hear the jigging hawk-bells ring,
And find it is too late to trust them to their wing,
Lie flat upon the flood. Drayton, Polyolbion, xx. 219.

3. To use a jig in fishing; fish with a jig: as, to jig for bluefish.

II. trans. 1. To sing in jig time; sing as a jig.

Jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids.

Shak., L. L. L., III. 1, 11.

2. To jerk, jolt, or shake; cause to move by jogs or jolts.

When the carriage (of a sawmill) is to be jiggered back, the lever manipulating the rock shaft is moved from the saw.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LXX. 403.

3. To produce an up-and-down motion in.—4. In metal., to separate the heavier metalliferous portion of (the mingled ore and rock or vein-stone obtained in mining) from the lighter or earthy portions, by means of a jig or jigging-machine. The jig was originally a box with a metallic bottom perforated with holes. In this the ore was placed, and the whole was moved rapidly up and down by hand in water, thus causing the material in the box to arrange itself in layers according to its specific gravity. Jigging is now usually done by more complicated machinery, acting continuously; but the principle remains the same. The essential feature of a jigging-machine is the admission of the water from below; in the bubble the water comes in contact with the ore from above.

5. To catch (a fish) by jerking a hook into its body.

Keep the line constantly in motion, and half the time you will jig them in the belly, tail, or side, as the finny mass moves over the hook. Sportsman's Gazetteer, p. 243.

6. In feltting, to harden and condense by repeated blows from rods.—7. In well-boring, to drill with a spring-pole.—8. To trick; cheat; impose upon; bamboozle.

Do not think the gloss
Of smooth evasion, by your cunning jests
And coinage of your politician's brain, Shall jig me off. Forst., Love's Sacrifice, III. 2.

jigajog (jig'a-jog), n. [Also jickajog; a var. of jigjog, q. v.] Same as jigjog.

An some writer (that I know) had had but the pennings o' this matter, he would ha' made you such a jig-jogger!
the boother, you should ha' thought an earthquake had benee i' the fayre. B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, Ind.

jigamaree (jig'a-ma-ré), n. [< jig, with an arbitrary addition.] Something new, strange, or unknown; a jiggumbob or thingumbob. [Prov. and slang.]

jig-clog (jig'klog), n. A clog made for jig-dancing.

jigger¹ (jig'er), n. [< jig, v., + -er.] 1. One who or that which jigs.—2. A small, light, or light-running mechanical contrivance or utensil, causing or having when in use a rapid jerky motion; also, by extension, any subordinate mechanical contrivance or convenience to which no more definite name is attached. Specifically—(a) A jig or jigging-machine. See extract, and jig, n., l. 4.

The machines best adapted for this purpose (concentration) are the jiggers or jigs. These are sieves supporting the ore, which is raised and allowed to fall at rapid intervals by a current of water from below, and in this manner one can realize the theoretical conditions of the fall in more or less deep water. The jig is par excellence the machine for dressing, universally employed from the most ancient times because it was the simplest and most convenient, and its use has continued to our day, with the help of successive modifications, which have converted it into a machine of remarkable precision.

Callon, Lectures on Mining (tr. by Le Neve Foster [and Galloway]), III. 76.

(b) A machine for hardening and condensing felt by repeated quick blows with rods, by the action of vibrating platens, or by intermittent rolling action on the material while warm and wet. (c) A small roller used in graining leather.

A grain or polish is given to the leather, either by boarding or working under small pendulum rollers, called jiggers, which are engraved with grooves or with an imitation of grain. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 874.

(d) A templet or profile for giving the form to a pottery vessel as it revolves upon the wheel. (e) A potters' wheel when used for simple and rapidly made objects, as plain cylindrical vessels and the like. (f) A cooper's draw-knife. (g) A warehouse-crane. (h) In coal-mining, a coupling-hook for connecting the cars or trams on an incline. (i) In billiards, a rest for the cue in making a difficult or awkward shot; a bridge. (j) A sort of small spunkier-sail, set on a jigger-mast in the stern of a canoe or other small craft, especially in Chesapeake Bay. (k) A door. (Slang.) (l) A small tackle composed of a double and single block and a fall, used about the decks of a ship for various purposes.

3. A sloop-rigged boat at one time used very extensively by the fishermen about Cape Cod, but superseded about 1820 by the dory. A jigger usually carried four persons. The name belongs to the Bay of Fundy and vicinity, and is sometimes used on the coast of New England.

4. A small street-railway car, drawn by one horse, and usually without a conductor, the driver giving change and the fare being deposited in a box. [U. S.]—5. A machine now generally used in the produce exchanges of American cities, which exhibits on a conspicuous dial the prices at which sales are made as the transactions occur. The hand or pointer is controlled by electric mechanism connected with a keyboard.—6. A drink of whiskey. [Slang.]—In-and-out jigger (naut.), same as boom-jigger.

jigger² (jig'er), v. t. [*< jigger*¹, n.] To jerk; shake. [Colloq.]

Few anglers have failed to experience the anxiety which ensues when a fish remains on the top of the water, shaking his head, and many is the fish who has jiggered himself free by this method. Quarterly Rev., CXXVI. 260.

jigger³ (jig'er), n. [An E. accum. of chigoe, the native name: see chigoe.] 1. The penetrating flea of the West Indies: same as chigoe.

Numbers are crippled by the jiggers, which scarcely ever in our colonies affect any but the negroes.

Southey, Letters (1810), II. 201.

2. In the United States, a name of sundry harvest-mites or harvest-ticks which, though normally plant-feeders, fasten to the skin of human beings and cause great irritation. These acarids belong to an entirely different class from the chigoe, or jigger properly so called, and lay no eggs in the wounds they make. The so-called Leptus americanus and L. irritans are two species to which the name is given. See under harvest-tick.

jiggered¹ (jig'erd), a. [*< jigger*² + -ed.] Affected or infested with the jigger or chigoe.

jiggered² (jig'erd), a. [A meaningless random substitute for a profane oath. Such random substitutes are very common in colloq. use, any vague form of English semblance being liable to be chosen, without reference to etymology or meaning.] See the etymology.

"Well, then," said he, "I'm Jiggered if I don't see you home." This penalty of being Jiggered was a favourite supposititious case of his.

Diablos, Great Expectations, xvii.

jigger-mast (jig'er-mást), n. A small mast stepped on the extreme aft of small craft for setting a jigger.

jigger-pump (jig'er-pump), n. 1. A hand-lever force-pump mounted on a portable stand and usually provided with an attachment for a suction-hose or -pipe, an air-chamber, and a nozzle with which a hose may be connected. It is in common use for watering lawns and flower-beds in rural districts. — 2. A pump used in breweries to force beer into vats. Halliwel.

jigget (jig'et), v. i. [Freq. of jig, v.] 1. To shake up and down; jolt; jig; be in quick light motion.

She's a little blackish woman, has a languishing eye, a delicious soft hand, and two pretty jiggeting feet. Female Tailor, No. 18.

2. To act pertly or affectedly; go about idly; flaunt. [Prov. Eng.]

Here you stand jiggeting, and sniggling, and looking cunning, as if there were some mighty matter of intrigue and common understanding betwixt you and me. Scott, Abbot, xix.

jigginess (jig'i-ness), n. [< jig + -ness.] A light jerky movement. [Rare.]

Moreover, a too frequent repetition of rhyme at short intervals gives a jigginess to the verse. T. Hood, Jr., Rhymester (ed. Penn.), p. 62.

jigging-machine (jig'ing-má-shén'), n. 1. A power-machine for jiggering or dressing ores. See jig, v. i., 4. — 2. A machine-tool which has a vertically adjustable table that can also be moved laterally in two directions in a horizontal plane, and also a frame fitted with a vertical spindle adapted to carry either a drill or a cutting-tool, which latter can cut the edges of the work to a given outline or profile.

jiggle (jig'el), v. i. [< jig + -el.] 1. Of or pertaining to, resembling, or suitable to a jig. This man makes on the violin a certain jiggle noise to which I dance. Spektor, No. 276.

2. Given to movements like those of a jig; frisky.

She is never sad, and yet not jiggle; her conscience is clear from guilt, and that secures her from sorrow. Habington, Castara, 1.

jig-given't (jig'giv'n), a. Addicted or inclined to farces and dramatic trifles generally.

You dare in these jig-given times to countenance a legitimate Poem. B. Jonson, Catiline, Ded.

jiggle (jig'l), v. i.; pret. and pp. jiggled, ppr. jiggling. [Freq. of jig, perhaps suggested by wiggle.] To practise affected or awkward motions; wriggle.

jigrobob (jig'g-bob), n. An obsolete form of jiggumbob.

Shall we have More jigrobobs yet?

Maulinger, Picture, v. 2.

jiggumbob (jig'um-bob), n. [Formerly also jig-gumbob, jiggambob, jiggobob; < jig, with an arbitrary addition, as also in thingumbob.] Something strange, peculiar, or unknown; a knick-knack; a thingumbob. [Slang.]

On with her chain of pearls, her ruby bracelets,
Lay ready all her tricks and jiggumbobs.
Middleton, Women Beware Women, II. 2.

Kills Monster after Monster, takes the Puppets Prisoners, knocks down the Cyclops, tumbles all
Our jiggumbobs and trinkets to the wall.
Brome, Antipodes, III. 5.

He rifled all his pokes and fobs
Of gimcracks, whilms, and jiggumbobs.
S. Butler, Hudibras, III. 1. 108.

jig-jog (jig'jog), n. [A varied redupl. of jog. Cf. jag-jag.] A jolting motion; a jog; a push.

jig-jog (jig'jog), adv. With a jolting motion.

jig-maker (jig'má'ker), n. One who makes or plays jigs.

Oph. You are merry, my lord. . .
Ham. O God, your only jig-maker.
Shak., Hamlet, III. 2. 182.

Petrarch was a dunce, Dante a jig-maker.
Ford, Love's Sacrifice, II. 1.

jig-mold (jig'möld), n. A stone mold, or a wooden block with several molds, into which melted lead is poured to form the heavy shank of a jig. See jig, 6 (c).

jigot (jig'ot), n. Another spelling of gigot.

I has been at the oost and outlay o' a jigot o' mutton and a doerantine pye. Gals., The Entail, III. 65.

Add an onion, and it would be a good sauce for a jigot of mutton. R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., VI.

jig-pin (jig'pin), n. A pin used by miners to prevent the turn-beams from turning.

jig-saw (jig'sá), n. A reciprocating saw caused to operate in proper relation with a table upon which the piece to be sawn is held, the motion of the saw being derived from a crank and pitman. These saws are mounted in a great variety of ways, as in saw-gates stretched between powerful bow-springs, etc. They have, however, been largely displaced by the more recent band-saws. A jig-saw for light work is commonly called a scroll-saw: see scroll-saw and band-saw.

jihad (ji-hád'), n. [Ar. Pers. jihād.] A general religious war of Mussulmans against Christians or other unbelievers in Islam, inculcated in the Koran and Traditions as a duty.

jill, n. See gill.

jill (jil), n. [Also written gill (see gill); < ME. Jille, Jylle, Gille, Gylle, abbr. of *Jillian, Jyllian, Jilian, Jelyan, Gillian, Gyllan, other forms of Julian, Julian, i. e. Juliana, a common fem. name, which came to be used generically for a young woman, a girl, as Jack for a young man, a boy. The two names Jack and Jill were often associated as correlatives. The L. name Juliana is fem. of Julianus, prop. adj., < Julius, a proper name: see Julian, July.] 1. A young woman (commonly as a proper name): same as gill, 1.

Sir, for Jak nor for Gille
Will I turn my face,
Till I have upon this hill
Spun a space upon my rok.

Towneley Mysteries.

Our wooling doth not end like an old play;
Jack hath not Jill. Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 885.

The proverb is, each Jack shall have his Gill.
Satyrical Epigrams (1619).

2. [Cf. *jack*¹, *jug*¹, and F. dial. sucan, as names of vessels.] A kind of cup. [In the quotation with pun on sense 1.]

Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid, and everything in order?
Shak., T. of the 8., IV. 1. 112.

3. Same as *gill*², 2. [Prov. Eng.]
jillet (jil'et), n. [A var. of gillet, < ME. Gillot, Gilot, dim. of Gille, Jille, etc., a fem. personal name: see *jill*². Hence contr. jilt, q. v.] See gillot. [Scotch.]

A jillet brak' his heart at last.

Burns, On a Scotch Bard.

Were it not well to receive that cry jillet with something of a mumbling? Scott, Fair Maid of Perth, xxxi.

jill-firt, n. See gill-firt.

What you would have her as impudent as yourself, as errant a Jillfirt, a Gadder, a Magpye?
Wycherley, Country Wife, II. 1.

jilliant, n. [Also spelled gillian; the fuller form of *jill*², *gill*²: see *jill*².] Same as *jill*², 1.

jilliver, n. An obsolete or dialectal form of gillyflower.

jillofery, n. An obsolete form of gillyflower.

jilt (jilt), n. [Contr. of jillet, q. v.] One who discards another, after holding the relation of a lover.

Jills ruled the state, and statesmen farces writ.
Pope, Essay on Criticism, I. 538.

But who could expect a jilt and trifler to counsel her husband on any kind of prudence?
The Century, XXXVII. 81.

jilt (jilt), v. [< jilt, n.] I. trans. To discard after treating or encouraging as a lover; trick in love.

Our fortunes indeed, weighed in the nice scale of interest, are not exactly equal: which by the way was the true cause of my jilting him. Spektor, No. 301.

II. intrans. To play the jilt; practise deception in love.

jimt (jim), a. Same as gim.

jinber-jaw (jim'bér-já), n. [For gimbal-jaw*: see jinber-jawed.] A projecting lower jaw.

jinber-jawed (jim'bér-jád), a. Same as gimbal-jawed. [Colloq.]

Ab Cayce, the eldest, [was] a lank, lantern-jawed man. Solomon was like him, except that the long chin, of the style familiarly denominated jinber-jawed, was still smooth and boyish.
M. N. Murphy, Prophet of Great Smoky Mountains, III.

jin-crack, jin-crackery. See gim-crack, gim-crackery.

jin-crow (jim'krō), n. [*< jim, equiv. to *jimmy*¹, + *crow*², a bar.] A tool for bending or straightening iron rails or bars. It consists of a strong iron frame, with two supports for the rail or bar, and mechanism, as a screw, for applying pressure to the rail or bar at a point midway between the two supports.

Jim Crow (jim krō), n. A name used as the title of one of the earliest negro-minstrel songs, and taken as typical of the negro race in certain applications. — Jim Crow car, a railroad-car set apart for the use of negroes: said to have been so called originally in Massachusetts about 1841. — Jim Crow planing-machine, a planing-machine with a reversing tool, capable of cutting in opposite directions: so called from part of the refrain in the above-mentioned song, "wheel about and turn about."

Jim-crow's-nose (jim'krō's-nōs'), n. A West Indian plant, Soybaltum Jamicense, of the natural order Balanophoraceæ. [Local.]

jiminy, interj. See Gemini, 2.

jinjam (jim'jam), n. [A varied redupl. of jin, as in jin-crack. Cf. jingle-jangle.] 1. A gim-crack; a knick-knack.

These be as knapplishe knacks
As ever man made,
For javalls and for lackes,
A jimjams for a lade.

Skelton (?), Ymage of Ypoecry.

A thousand jimjams and toys have they in their chambers, which they heape up together with infinite expense. Nashe, Pierce Pennilesse (1592).

2. pl. Delirium tremens. [Slang, U. S.]

jimmal, n. An obsolete form of gimbal.

jimmel-ring, jimmel-ring (jim'al-, jim'el-ring), n. Same as gemel-ring.

A ring called a jimmel-ring was broken between the contracting parties.

C. Croker, in Jour. Brit. Archæol. Ass., IV. 260.

jimmer (jim'er), n. [Same as *gimmer*², var. of gimbal, gimbal.] A gimbal.

jimmy¹ (jim'i), n.; pl. jimmies (-iz). A short crowbar: same as *jenny*¹, 1. [U. S.]

jimmy² (jim'i), a. [F. dial.; also written jenny, jummy; an extension of dial. jin, q. v.] Same as *jenny*².

jimmy³ (jim'i), n.; pl. jimmies (-iz). [Cf. Jim Crow car.] A freight-car used for carrying coal; a coal-car. [U. S.]

The express train . . . ran into a freight. . . The engines met squarely. . . The second car on the freight (train) was lifted from the rails and carried on top of two jimmies loaded with coal.

N. Y. Semi-weekly Tribune, March 12, 1887.

jimmy⁴ (jim'i), n.; pl. jimmies (-iz). A free emigrant. [Australian convict's slang.]

"Why, one," said he, "is a young jimmy (I beg your pardon, sir — an emigrant); the others are old prisoners."

H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn, p. 268.

jimp¹ (jimp), a. [Also written, improp., jimp; a weakened form of *jumpy*¹, q. v.] 1. Neat; elegant; slender. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

She's as jimp in the middle

As any willow-wand.

The Laird of Warlock (Child's Ballads, III. 107).

Thy waist as jimp, thy limbs as clean.

Burns, Oh, wure I on Parnassus' Hill!

2. Short; scanty. [Scotch.]

jimp² (jimp), adv. [A weakened form of *jumpy*¹, q. v.] Barely; scarcely. [Scotch.]

She had been married to Sir Richard jimp four months.

Scott, Antiquary, xiv.

jimp³ (jimp), v. i. [Origin obscure.] To jag; indent; denticulate.

jimpy (jim'pi), adv. 1. In a jimp or neat manner; neatly. — 2. Barely; scarcely; hardly. [Scotch.]

jimps (jimps), n. pl. [A weakened form of jumps.] Same as jumps. See *jump*².

jimson, jimson-weed (jim'son-, -wéd), n. See jimson, jimson-weed.

jimpy (jim'pi), a. [An extension of *jimp*¹. Cf. *jimmy*⁴.] Neat; jimp. [Scotch.]

jimpy (jim'pi), adv. Tightly; neatly. [Scotch.]

jimson (jim'son), n. [Also jimpon; abbr. of jimson-weed.] Same as jimson-weed.

jimson-weed (jim'son-wéd), n. [Also jimpon-weed; a corruption of Jamestown-weed; named from Jamestown (in Virginia), where it is said to have sprung up on heaps of ballast and other rubbish discharged from vessels. The plant is of Asiatic origin. See *jack*¹, etym.] A plant, Datura Stramonium.

She went to the open door and stood in it and looked out among the tomato vines and jimpon weeds that constituted the garden. S. L. Clemens, Tom Sawyer, p. 12.

jingal (jing'gál), n. [Also written jingall, and improp. gingal, gingal, gingaul; < Hind. jangál, Marathi jangál, Canarese jangál, jangál, a swivel, a large musket.] A large swivel-musket or wall-piece used in the East by the natives. It is fired from a rest and is sometimes mounted on a carriage. The Chinese use jingals extensively.

Collecting a number of jingals from his associates, the Chinaman arranges them on a small flat-bottomed scow, so that some sweep a few inches above the surface of the water, and others at an elevation, to get the birds on the wing. W. W. Greener, The Gun, p. 272.

jingko (jing'kō), n. Same as gingko.

jingle (jing'el), v.; pret. and pp. jingled, ppr. jingling. [Formerly also gingle; < ME. gingelen, ginglen, freq. of *jink*², q. v., equiv. to *chink*², q. v.

Jingle

Cl. tink, tinkle, ring, G. klingeln, jingle, etc.; imitative words. I. intrans. 1. To emit tinkling metallic sounds; tinkle or clink, as bells, coins, chains, spurs, keys, or other metallic objects.

And when he rood, men myghte his byrdel heere
Jinglen in a whistling wynd as cleere,
And eek as lowde as doth the chapel belle.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 170.

With strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And wide diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awaked. Shak., Tempest, v. 1, 283.

2. To have a musical sound, or a light pleasing effect upon the ear, independently of sense, as verse or rimes.

In sounds and jingling syllables grown old.
Pope, Essay on Criticism, l. 606.
Nurses sing children to sleep with a jingling ballad.
Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

To jingle off, to come off; fall down with a jingling noise.
Macadam's stable-slates jingling off from time to time.
Carlyle, in Froude.

II. trans. To cause to give a tinkling metallic sound, as a little bell or as pieces of metal.

Their musick-lease instruments are fans of brass, hung about with rings, which they jingle in stops according to their marchings. Sandys, Travels, p. 124.

The bells she jingled, and the whistle blow.
Pope, R. of the L., v. 94.

Jingle (jing'gl), n. [Formerly also gingle; < jingle, v.] 1. A tinkling or clinking sound, as of little bells or pieces of metal.

We . . . seem still to catch the jingle of the golden spurs of the bishops in the streets of Cologne.
Sumner, Orations, l. 83.

2. Something that jingles; a little bell or rattle; specifically, one of the little metallic disks set in the frame of a tambourine.

If you plant where savages are, do not only entertain them with trifles and jingles, but use them justly.
Bacon, Plantations (ed. 1887).

3. Musical or sprightly sound in verse or rimes; poetry or a poem having a musical or sprightly sound, with little sense; a catching array of words, whether verse or prose.

This remark may serve, at least, to show how apt even the best writers are to amuse themselves and to impose on others by a mere jingle of words.
Bolingbroke, Fragments of Essays, No. 58.

Dear Mat Prior's easy jingle.
Cowper, Epistle to Robert Lloyd.

4. A covered two-wheeled car used in the south of Ireland.

An elderly man was driven up to the door of the hotel on a one-horse car—a jingle, as such conveniences were then called in the South of Ireland.
Trollope, Castle Richmond, vi.

5. A mollusk of the genus Anomia. [Long Island Sound.]

A more fragile shell, such as a scallop, mussel, or jingle (Anomia), is certainly better, because the growth of the attached oysters wrenches the shell to pieces, breaking up the cluster and permitting the singleness and full development to each oyster that is so desirable.
Fisheries of U. S., v. II, 543.

Jingle-box (jing'gl-boks), n. A black-jack mounted with silver or other metal, with small bells or grelots attached to the rim. It was a test of sobriety to drink from the vessel without sounding the bells.

Jingle-boy (jing'gl-boi), n. A coin.

Ang. You are hid in gold o'er head and ears.
Her. We thank our fate, the sign of the jingle-boy hangs at the door of our pockets.
Masinger, Virgin Martyr, II, 3.

Jingle-jangle (jing'gl-jang'gl), n. [A varied redupl. of jingle; cf. jingam.] 1. A trinket; anything that jingles.

For I was told ere I came from home
You're the goodliest man I use saw betwene;
With so many jingle-jangles about one's necke
As is about yours, I never saw none.
The King and a Poore Northerne Man. (Halliwell.)

2. A jingling sound.

The jingle-jangle of . . . dissonant bells.
Hawthorne, Seven Gables, p. 50.

Jingler (jing'glér), n. 1. One who or that which jingles; in the quotation, a kind of spur.

I had spurs of mine own before, but they were not jinglers. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, II, 2.

2. The whistling or golden-eyed duck. G. Trumbull, 1888. [New Jersey.]

Jinglet, n. A corruption of shingles (St. Anthony's fire). See shingles.

Jingle-shell (jing'gl-shel), n. Same as gold-shell, 2.

Jinglet (jing'glet), n. [< jingle + -et.] A loose metal ball serving for the clapper of a sleigh-bell; also, the bell itself.

The making of sleigh-bells is quite an art. . . . The little iron ball is called "the jingle."

The American, IX, 350.
Jingo (jing'gō), n. and a. [A name used in the oath "by jingo," where jingo is prob. a form, introduced perhaps by gipsies or soldiers, of the Basque Jinkoa, Jinkoa, Jinkoa, contracted forms of Jaukoicoa, Jangoicoa, God, lit. 'the lord of the high.'] I. n. 1. A name used in the oath "by jingo," sometimes extended to "by the living jingo": as, I won't do it, by jingo. [Colloq.]

By jingo, there's not a pond or a slough within five miles of the place but they can tell the taste of.

Goldsmith, She Stoops to Conquer, v.
Jumping up in his boat
And discarding his coat,
"Here goes," cried Sir Rupert, "by jingo I'll follow her!"
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II, 36.

2. [cap.] A member of a section of the Conservative or Tory party in Great Britain which advocated a spirited foreign policy. Especially used during the Beaconsfield (Disraeli) administration of 1874-80, in reference to the Russo-Turkish war, etc. The name alludes to a song at that time popular, expressing the Jingo spirit:

"We don't want to fight, but, by jingo, if we do, We've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money, too."

When Lord Beaconsfield courted the cheers of the City by threatening the Emperor of Russia with three campaigns, he was acting the part of a genuine Jingo.
The Spectator, No. 2521, July 22, 1882.

[In this sense it takes the plural Jingoes.]

II. a. [cap.] Belonging or relating to the Jinguos: as, the Jingo policy; Jingo bluster. See I., 2.

Such a state of mind is neither wonderful nor unreasonable; it is unintelligible only to those who are themselves so possessed with the Jingo swagger that they cannot understand that other people may be without it.
K. A. Freeman, Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XL, 328.

Jingoism (jing'gō-izm), n. [< Jingo + -ism.] The spirit, policy, or political views of the Jinguos.

He [Beaconsfield] always ridiculed the predominance on the Conservative side of the doctrine of the integrity and independence of the Turkish Empire; and, in short, he thought that in the days of Jingoism the English Conservative party had gone mad.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XL, 340.

Jink¹ (jink), v. [Also jenk; origin obscure. Hardly a unsullied form of jig, though some senses suggest such a connection.] I. intrans. 1. To move nimbly. [Scotch.]

Hale be your heart, hale be your fiddle;
Lang may your elbow jink an' diddle.
Burns, Second Ep. to Davie.

2. To make a quick turn; dodge; elude a person by dodging; escape. [Scotch.]

The more o' that poison o' yours I take—your iodides and salicins and stuff—the worse it gets; and then yo jink round the corner and call it by another name.
W. Black, Harper's Mag., LXXVI, 381.

3. In the card-games of spoil-five and forty-five, to win the game by winning all the tricks in one hand.—To jink in, to enter a place suddenly, unexpectedly, and clandestinely. [Scotch.]

Could not ye have let us ken an ye had wansed till hae been present at the ceremony? My lord couldna tak' it weel your coming and jinking in, in that fashion.
Scott, Antiquary, xxv.

II. trans. 1. To elude; dodge. [Scotch.]

There the hords can jink the show'r's
'Mang thriving vines an' myrtle bow'r's.
Ferguson, Hume Content.

2. To cheat; trick. [Scotch.]

For Jove did jink Aresalus;
The gentles a' ken roun' about
He was my lucky-doddy.
Poems in Buchan Dialect, speech of Ulysses.

Jink¹ (jink), n. [< *jink*¹, v.] 1. A quick illusory turn; the act of eluding another. [Scotch.]—

2. In the card-games of spoil-five and forty-five, the winning of all the tricks in a hand by one side.—High jinks. See High.

Jink² (jink), v. i. [A var. of chink.] To jingle; chink: as, the money jinked. [Prov. Eng.]

Jinker (jing'kér), n. One who moves about or dodges quickly; one who is nimble and sportive. [Scotch.]

That day ye was a jinker noble,
For heels an' win!
Burns, Auld Farmer's Salutation to his Auld Mare.

Jink-game (jing'gām), n. A game of spoil-five or forty-five in which a side taking all the tricks in one hand wins the game. Jinking in either game is permissible only if agreed on at the outset of the play. In spoil-five the player must announce that he plays for a jink; in forty-five no announcement is necessary.

Jinn (jin), n. pl.; king, jinnee (jin'ē). [Also jinn, ginn; = Pers. jinn, Hind. jinn, sing., < Ar. jinn, pl., jinnī, sing., a kind of demon: see def. The sing. jinnī occurs in E. spelling jinnee, and is also frequently represented by the accidentally similar genie (F. génie; or genius, < L. genius, a different word: see genius.) In Mohammedan myth., a class of spirits lower than the angels, made of fire, capable of appearing in both human and animal forms, and exercising supernatural influence over mankind, for both good and evil. In the current translation of the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments" they are called genie. The word in this form is often treated as a singular, with a plural jinn.

The Jinn are said to appear to mankind most commonly in the shapes of serpents, dogs, cats, or human beings. In the last case, they are sometimes of the stature of men, and sometimes of a also enormously gigantic. If good, they are generally resplendently handsome; if evil, horribly hideous. Arabian Nights (ed. Lane), Int., note 21.

Moslem divines, be it observed, ascribe to Mohammed miraculous authority over animals, vegetables, and minerals, as well as over men, angels, and jinn.

L. F. Burton, El-Medineh, p. 262.

—Syn. My, Gnome, etc. See satyr.

Jinnee, n. See jinn. Also spelled djinnee.

Jinny (jin'i), n.; pl. jinnies (-iz). [A var. of jenny.] 1. A bird, the turnstone, Streptopelia interpres. G. Trumbull. [Long Island.]—2. In coal-mining, same as jig, 6 (b). [Local, Eng.]

Jirikisha (jin-rik'i-shā), n. [Jap.; < jin, a man, + rikī, strength, power, + shā, carriage.] A small two-wheeled, hooded conveyance provided with springs and drawn by one or more men. It is used extensively in Japan, and is said to have been invented by an American missionary. Also spelled jirikisha and jirikisha.

Jirikisha.

Directly we landed at the jetty, we were rushed at by a crowd of Jirikisha men, each drawing a little vehicle not unlike a Hansom cab, without the seat for the driver—there being no horse to drive.

Lady Brassey, Voyages of Sunbeam, II, xviii.

Jinshang (jin'shang), n. A corruption of gin-seng. [U. S.]

Jippot, n. Same as jippo-coat.

Plush Jippots and Hose behang'd before.
Quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., IV, 29.

Jippo-coat (jip'ō-kōt), n. An outer garment for a man, mentioned in 1660.

Jirkin, n. See jerkini.

Jirkinet, n. See jerkinet.

Jist. See Gis.

Jitty (jit'i), n.; pl. jitties (-iz). [Prob. a var. of jelly.] In coal-mining, a short slit or heading along which the empties, horses, or men travel. [Leicestershire, Eng.]

Jivesit, n. pl. An obsolete spelling of gyves.

So now my jives are off.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, IV, 3.

Jo¹ n. See joos.

Jo², n. In conch. See Jo², 3.

Joachimite (jō'a-kim-it), n. [< Joachim (see def.) + -ite.] A follower or believer in the doctrines of an Italian mystic, Joachim (died about 1200), abbot of Floris. The most important feature of his doctrines was the belief that the history of man will be covered by three reigns: the first, that of the Father, from the creation till the birth of Christ; the second, that of the Son, from the birth of Christ till 1200; and the third, that of the Holy Spirit, from 1200 onward. This last view was developed by his adherents into the belief that a new gospel would supersede the revelation of the Old and New Testaments. These views had many supporters in the thirteenth century.

Joan (jōn), n. [< Joan, < ME. Joan, Jone, a woman's name, another form of Jean, Jane, < ML. Joanna, fem. of LL. Joannes, John: see John.] A woman's close cap, worn in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Joannes, n. See Johannes.

Joannesia (jō-a-nō'si-ā), n. [NL. (Velloso, 1798), irreg. < Johannes, John: see John.] A genus of plants of the natural order Euphorbiaceae, containing a single species, J. princeps, a handsome Brazilian tree. It is closely allied to Jatropha, but the leaves have 5 leaflets. The calyx is nearly valvate, and the fruit is a drupe, containing a 3-celled and 3-seeded nut. The bark affords a milky juice reputed to be poisonous and said to be used for stupefying fish. The seeds are actively purgative, and furnish the oil of sand.

Joannite (jō-an'it), n. [< Gr. Ιωάννης, John (see John), + -ite.] One of the adherents of John Chrysostom who supported him after his deposition from the patriarchate of Constantinople in 404.

job (jɒb), v. [Also in var. form jab, q. v.; *< ME. jobben, job or peek with the bill, as a bird; prob. assimilated from Ir. and Gael. gob, the beak or bill of a bird: see gob¹ and job².] I. trans. 1. To strike, stab, or punch, as with something pointed.*

As an ass with a galled back was feeding in a meadow, a raven pitched upon him, and sat jobbing of the sore.
Sir R. L. Estrange.

2. To drive; force.

The work would, where a small irregularity of stuff should happen, draw or job the edge into the stuff.
J. Mason, Mechanical Exercises.

II. intrans. To aim a blow; strike at something.

Upon that palm-tree mate certain crows many dales together, and never left pecking and jobbing at the fruit of it.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 467.

job¹ (jɒb), n. [< job¹, v.] 1. A sudden stab, prick, or thrust, as with anything pointed; a jab.—2. A small piece of wood. [Prov. Eng.] job² (jɒb), n. and a. [Formerly also jobb; < ME. jobbe; assimilated form of dial. gob², a portion, a lump; see gob² and gobbet, and cf. job¹.] I. n. 1. A lump.

Rabbet there Riches, rett horn horn lynes, Gemmes, & Jewels, Jobbes of gold, Pesis, & platia, polahit vessel, Many staron stone, stithest of vertue.

Destruction of Troy (R. E. T. S.), l. 11841.

2. A particular piece of work; something to be done; any undertaking of a defined or restricted character; also, an engagement for the performance of some specified work; something to do.

A small job, that would not require above 5 or 6 hours to perform, they will be twice as many days about.
Dampier, Voyages, II. l. 96.

His comrades had plotted an orchard to rob, And ask'd him to go and assist in the job.
Cowper, Pity for Poor Africans.

The children of the very poor, those who lived from hand to mouth by day jobs, by chance and luck, were not taught anything.
W. Howitt, Fifty Years Ago, p. 78.

3. In printing, specifically, a piece of work of the miscellaneous class, including posters, handbills, bill-heads, cards, circulars, small pamphlets, etc.—4. An imposition; a trick.

The quack, thro' dread of death, confess'd That he was of no skill profess'd; But all this great and glorious jobb Was made of nonsense and the mob.

C. Smart, tr. of Phœdrus (1765), p. 27.

5. An undertaking so managed as to secure unearned profit or undue advantage; especially, a public duty or trust performed or conducted with a view to improper private gain; a perversion of trust for personal benefit in doing any work.

As usual, however, in Irish matters, the measure was connected with a job, and was executed with a supreme indifference to Irish opinion. Lecky, Ring, in 18th Cent., vii.

Nearly all the very large corporate undertakings in the United States during the past twenty years have had in them more or less of the corrupt political and financial elements which the public have come to sum up in the word job.
N. A. Rev., CXIII. 87.

Odd jobs, disconnected, irregular, or trivial pieces of work.

The actors . . . were very fond of watching the movements of an old and decrepit slave who was employed by the proprietor to do all sorts of odd jobs.
Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 137.

II. a. Of or for a particular job or transaction. Specifically—(a) Assigned to a special use, as a horse let out or hired by the week or month.

He made nothing by letting him have job horses for £150 a year.
Mrs Edgeworth, The Lottery, l.

The night of Dr. Sloocum's large carriage, with the gaunt job-horses, crushed Flora; none but hack cabs had driven up to her door on that day. Thackeray, Pendennis, xxiv.

(b) Bought or sold together; lumped together: used chiefly in the phrase job lot, a quantity of goods, either of a miscellaneous character, or of the same kind but of different qualities, conditions, sizes, etc., disposed of or bought as a single lot for a lump sum and at a comparatively low price.

Some few of them [pocket-books] may, however, have been damaged, and these are bought by the street-people as a job lot, and at a lower price than that paid in the regular way.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, l. 294.

job² (jɒb), v. pret. and pp. jobbed, ppr. jobbing. [< job², n.] I. trans. 1. To let out in separate portions, as work among different contractors or workmen: often with out: as, to job out the building of a house.—2. To let out or to hire by the week or month, as horses or carriages. [Eng.]

Whitbread, d'ye keep a coach, or job one, pray?
Job, job, that's cheapest; yes, that's best, that's best.
Wolcott, Progress of Curiosity, Birth-day Ode.

Then she went to the livrman from whom she jobbed her carriages.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xlviii.

3. To buy in large quantities, and sell to dealers in smaller lots: as, to job cotton; to job cigars. See jobber², 3.

II. intrans. 1. To deal in the public stocks on one's own account. See jobber², 4.—2. To work at jobs or at chance work.

Our early dramatists not only jobbed in this chance-work, but established a copartnership for the quicker manufacture; and we find sometimes three or four poets working on one play. I. D. Israel, Amen, of Lit., II. 180.

3. (a) To let or (b) to hire horses, carriages, etc., for occasional use. [Eng.]

Very few noblemen at present bring their carriage horses to town: . . . they nearly all job, as it is invariably called.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 308.

4. To execute a trust in such a manner as to make it subserve unjustly one's private ends; especially, to pervert public service to private advantage.

Judges job, and bishops bite the town,
And mighty dukes pack cards for half-a-crown.
Pope, Moral Essays, III. 141.

job³ (jɒb), v. t. [Also written jobe; < Job the patriarch, in allusion to the rebukes he received from his "comforters."] To chide; reprimand. Bailey, 1781. [Rare.]

jobard¹, jobbard¹, n. [ME., < OF. jobard, jou-bard, < F. jobard, a stupid fellow, a simpleton, booby; < jobe, stupid, foolish.] A stupid fellow. Halliwel.

The seyde the emperour Rodenmagard,
Then was the erle a nyse jobard.
M. Cantab., II. l. 38, l. 140. [Halliwel.]

Looks of disreclousness sette jobbardis upon stools, Whiche haths destroyed many a comynalte.

Lydgate, Minor Poems, p. 119.

jobation (jɒ-bā'shon), n. [An affected L. form, < job³ + -ation.] A scolding; a long tedious reproof. [Colloq.]

I determined to give my worthy hostess a good jobation for her want of faith.
Barham, in Memoir prefixed to Ingoldsby Legends, l. 67.

jobber¹ (jɒb'ər), n. [< job¹ + -er.] One who or that which jobs, pecks, or stabs: used in composition: as, tree-jobber or wood-jobber (a wood-pecker); nut-jobber (a nutthatch).

jobber² (jɒb'ər), n. [< job², v., + -er.] 1. One who does anything by the job; one who does small jobs or chance work.

But those are not a thousandth part
Of jobbers in the poet's art.
Swift, Poetry.

2. One who lets out or furnishes horses or carriages by the week or month; a job-master. [Eng.]

Nobody in fact was paid. Not the blacksmith who opened the lock, . . . nor the jobber who let the carriage.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxvii.

3. One who purchases goods in bulk and resells them to smaller dealers; a middleman.—4. On the London stock-exchange, a dealer in stocks and bonds on his own account; a stock-exchange operator to whom brokers sell, and from whom they buy, it being contrary to stock-exchange etiquette for brokers to negotiate with each other; a middleman or intermediary acting between brokers.

A wishes to buy and B wishes to sell £1000 of Caledonian Railway stock, but, brokers being forbidden to deal with brokers, recourse is had to the jobber C, who makes a price to the brokers of say 98 to 98½, that is to say, he offers to buy at 98 or to sell at 98½; the buyer A accordingly pays 98½ plus his broker's commission, and the seller B receives 98 minus his broker's commission, the jobber C pocketing the difference or "turn" of ½ per cent.
Encyc. Brit., XXII. 557.

5. One who renders the discharge of a trust subservient to private ends; especially, an intriguer who turns public work to his own or his friends' advantage; hence, one who performs low or dirty work in office, politics, or intrigue.—Baseball jobber. See base², n., 5.

jobbermoll¹ (jɒb'ər-nɔl), n. [Also jobbernoll, jobbernoul, jabbernoul, jobbinol; prob. < jobard, jobbard, + noll, head or top; cf. gruonoll.] 1. The head; the pate.

And powder'd th' inside of his skull,
Instead of th' outward jobbernoll.
S. Butler, Hudibras, III. ll. 1007.

2. A stupid fellow; a loggerhead; a blockhead.
Dull-pated jobbernoulas.

Marston, Scourge of Villanie, vii.
[Vulgar in both senses.]

jobbery (jɒb'ər-i), n. [< job³ + -ery.] The act or practice of jobbing; unfair and underhand means used to procure some private end; specifically, the act of perverting public service to private gain.

jobbet (jɒb'ət), n. [A var. of gobbet.] A small quantity, commonly of hay or straw. [Prov. Eng.] jobbing-man (jɒb'ing-man), n. A man who does odd jobs. [Eng.]

There is an Irish labourer and his family in the back kitchen, and a jobbing-man with his family in the front one.
Dickens, Sketches, p. 70.

jobbinoll¹, n. Same as jobbernoll.

job-master (jɒb'mas'tər), n. [< job² + master.] A keeper of a livery-stable who lets out horses and carriages by the week or month. [Eng.]

"Why, sir," said a job-master to me, "everybody jobs now. . . . It's a cheaper and better plan for those that must have good horses and handsome carriages."
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 308.

job-office (jɒb'of'is), n. A printing-office in which only job-work is done.

job-printer (jɒb'prin'tər), n. A printer who does miscellaneous work, such as the printing of bills, programs, circulars, cards, etc.

Job's comforter (jɒbz kum'fər-tər), n. [So called in allusion to the friends who visited Job "to mourn with him and to comfort him" (Job ii. 11), but really aggravated his distress.] 1. One who depresses and discourages under the appearance or with the purpose of consoling.

Lady Sm. Indeed, Lady Answerall, pray forgive me, I think your ladyship looks a little thinner than when I saw you last.

Mrs. Indeed, Madam, I think not; but your ladyship is one of Job's comforters.
Swift, Polite Conversation, III. 2.

2. A boil (in allusion to Job ii. 7). [Colloq.]

Job's news (jɒbz nɪz), n. [So called in allusion to the evil tidings which Job's servants brought him (Job i. 14-19).] Evil tidings; bad news.

Poverty escorts him; from home there can nothing come except Job's news.
Carlyle, French Rev., III. III. 4.

Job's post (jɒbz pɒst), n. [So called in allusion to the messengers who brought evil tidings to Job. See Job's news.] A bearer of ill news; a messenger carrying evil tidings.

This Job's post from Dumouriez, thickly preceded and escorted by so many other Job's posts, reached the National Convention.
Carlyle, French Rev., III. III. 4.

Job's-tears (jɒbz'tɛəz), n. A species of grass, Cox Lacryma, or the heads made of its fruit.

job-type (jɒb'tɪp), n. Type specially adapted, from its size, ornamental or exceptional form, etc., for the execution of miscellaneous jobs.

job-watch (jɒb'wɒtʃ), n. Naut., same as hack-watch.

job-work (jɒb'wɜrk), n. 1. Work done by the job instead of by the day; work done to order, or to fulfil an engagement.

The fact that a great deal of his [Dryden's] work was job-work that most of it was done in a hurry, led him often to fill up a gap with the first anonymous opus that came to hand.
Lowell, New Princeton Rev., l. 155.

2. In printing, specifically, a class of miscellaneous work, generally requiring display or ornamentation.

jocant¹, a. [ME. jocant, < L. jocant(-s), ppr. of jocari, joke, jest: see joke, v.] Jesting; joking.

When the knyght harde this, he was jocant & murye.
Gesta Romanorum, p. 118.

jocantry (jɒ'kən-tri), n. [< jocant + -ry.] The act or practice of jesting. [Craiq.] jock¹ (jɒk), v. t. and i. [Of jog and shock¹.] To jolt. [Prov. Eng.]

Jock² (jɒk), n. [A var. of Jack: see jack¹.] 1. Same as Jack¹, 1.—2. [l. c.] Same as jackey.

Nor were the north-country jocks less witty on their masters than on the steeds.
Dorset, Memories of our Great Towns, p. 12.

Jock and Jock's man, a juvenile sport in which the follower is to repeat all the pranks the leader performs. [Brockett.] jockey (jɒk'i), n. [Also spelled jokey; being the familiar name Jokey, Joekie, North. E. and Sc. form of Jacky, dim. of Jack, North. E. and Sc. Jack, a common appellative of lads in service, groom, etc. Some enthusiastic writers about Gipsies would derive jockey in the third sense from Gipsy chuckin, a whip; but this is no doubt a mere fancy. Jockey in this peculiar E. sense has passed into other languages: F. jokey, joeket, Sp. jokey, joeket, Pg. jokey, G. jokey, etc.] 1. [cap.] A Northern English and Scotch diminutive of Jock², Jack¹; specifically, a Scotchman.

What could Lesly have done then with a few untrained, unarmed Jockies if we had been true among ourselves?
Sp. Hackst., Abp. Williams, II. 148.

37. A strolling minstrel. [Scotch.]

For example and terror three or four hundred of the most notorious of these villains (vagabonds, beggars) which we call Jockies might be presented by the Government to the State of Venice, to serve in their Gallies against the common enemy of Christendom.

A. Fletcher (1688), quoted in Ribton-Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 359.

38. A groom; a rider or driver of horses; specifically, a man or boy employed to ride horses in races.

Room for my lord! three jockies in his train;
Six huntmen with a shout precede his chair.
Pope, Dunciad, II. 192.

44. A dealer in horses; especially, a horse-dealer who is given to cheating; a tricky horse-trader: more commonly called a horse-jockey.

You know what cheating Tricks are play'd by our Jock-ey, who sell and let out horses.
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquia of Erasmus, I. 412.

5. A cheat; one who deceives or takes undue advantage in trade: from the reputation of horse-traders for trickery.

He [Frampton] is described as being the oldest and as they say the cunningest jockey in England; one day he lost 1,000 ga., the next he won 2,000, and so alternately.
Ashmole, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 306.

6. In coal-mining, a self-acting apparatus carried on the front tub of a set for releasing it from the hauling-rope at a certain point. [Eng.] — 7. In much, same as jockey-wheel. — 8. A thin walking-stick. [Prov. Eng.]

Jockey (jok'ī), n.; pret. and pp. jockeyed or jockeyed, pp. jockeying. [Also spelled jockey; < jockey, n.] I. trans. 1. To play the jockey to; trick; deceive in trade; hinder or defeat by trickery.

I see too well by the smile on his face that he thinks he has jockeyed you.
J. Baillie.

Here's your railways carried, and your neighbor's railways jockeyed.
Dickens, Dr. Marigold.

9. To jostle against in racing.

II. intrans. To act in the manner of a jockey; seek unfair advantage in a race, in dealing, etc.

jockey-box (jok'ī-boks), n. A box in a wagon, underneath the driver's seat, for carrying small articles.

jockey-club (jok'ī-klub), n. A club or association of persons interested in horse-racing, etc.

jockey-gear (jok'ī-gēr), n. The jockey-wheels and their coöperative mechanism in an apparatus for paying out submarine cables.

jockey-grass (jok'ī-grās), n. Quaking-grass, Brisa media. [Prov. Eng.]

jockeyism (jok'ī-izn), n. [< jockey + -ism.] The practice or tricks of jockeys; also, jockeys' talk.

He was employed in smoking a cigar, sipping brandy and water, and exercising his conversational talents in a mixture of slang and jockeyism.
Duiker, Belham, 121.

jockey-jurnal (jok'ī-jēr'nāl), n. [*< jockey + jurnal for jurnul.] One of the tubers of Bunium jaccosum, commonly called carthenut or pignut. [Prov. Eng.]

jockey-pad (jok'ī-pad), n. A cushion or kneepad on a saddle.

jockey-pulley (jok'ī-pul'ī), n. A small wheel which rides, or runs, on the top edge of a larger one, used for obtaining fast speed in dynamos and similar machinery, and also for keeping a rope or cable in the groove of a grooved wheel.

jockeyship (jok'ī-ship), n. [< jockey + -ship.] 1. The art or practice of riding horses, especially in races.

Go flatter Sawney for his jockeyship.
Chatterton, Resignation.

We justly boast
At least superior jockeyship, and claim
The honours of the turf as all our own!
Cropper, Task, II. 276.

9. A quasi-honorary title given in jest or banter.

Where can at last his jockeyship retire?
Cropper, Conversation, I. 430.

jockey-sleeve (jok'ī-slēv), n. A sleeve which carries part of a train of mechanism and rests on another part, used in some forms of electric arc-lights.

jockey-wheel (jok'ī-hwēl), n. A wheel used to ride upon and press a rope or cable into a groove of another wheel from which the rope or cable is paid out. The bearings of a jockey-wheel are often in the end of a lever by which the jockey is held to its duty. These wheels are much used in laying submarine cables. Also jockey.

jockey-whip (jok'ī-hwip), n. A whip used by a jockey.

jocko (jok'ō), n. An ape: same as jacko, 1.

jockteleg (jok'te-leg), n. [Also written jockteleg, jockteleg. Cf. E. dial. jock-lag-knife: see under jack-knife.] A large pocket-knife. [Scotch.]

An' g'it the custoo's sweet or sour,
Wi' jocktelegs they taste them.
Burns, Halloween.

jocolatte, n. An obsolete form of chocolate.

To a coffee house to drink Jocolatte — very good.
Pope, Diary, Nov. 24, 1684.
They drank a little milk and water, but not a drop of wine; they also drank of a sorbet and jocolatt.
Boslyn, Diary, Jan. 24, 1682.

jocund, a. An obsolete form of jocund.

jocose (jō-kōs'), a. [= Sp. Pg. jocoso = It. giocoso, < L. jocosus, full of jesting, sportive, < jocus, a jest, joke: see joke.] 1. Given to jokes and jesting; merry; waggish, as a person.

Jocose and pleasant with an adversary whom they would choose to treat in a very different manner. Shakespeare.

On [the first day of April] . . . their master was always observed to unbind, and become exceeding pleasant and jocose, sending the old gray-headed negroes on April-fool's strands for pigeon's milk. Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 463.

2. Of the nature of a joke or jest; sportive; merry: as, a jocose remark; jocose or comical airs. = Syn. Jocose, Jocund, Jocular, facetious, merry, waggish, witty, droll, humorous, funny. In jocose cheerfulness or light-heartedness is an accidental thing; in jocund it is the essential idea. The disposition to make good-humored jests is the essential thing in jocose, but is not necessarily implied in jocund.

jocously (jō-kōs'li), adv. In a jocose manner; in jest; for sport or game; waggishly.

jocoseness (jō-kōs'nes), n. The quality of being jocose; waggery; merriment.

If he wrote to a friend, he must beware lest his letter should contain any thing like jocoseness; since jesting is incompatible with a holy and serious life.

Buckle, Civilization, II. v.

jocoseries (jō-kō-sē'ri-us), a. [= Sp. jocosario, < NL. jocoserius, < L. jocus, a joke, & serius, serious.] Half jesting, half serious. [Rare.]

Or drink a jocoseries cup
With souls who've took their freedom up.
Green, The Spleen.

jocosity (jō-kos'ī-ti), n.; pl. jocosities (-tiz). [= Sp. jocosidad = Pg. jocundidade = It. jocosità; as jocose + -ity.] 1. Jocularly; merriment; waggery; jocoseness.

A laugh there is of contempt or indignation, as well as of mirth or jocosity.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err.

This scabious jocosity, as if they had known each other for three months, was what appeared to Macarthy so indelicate.
H. James, Jr., Harpers' Mag., LXXVII. 92.

2. A jocose act or saying; a joke. [Rare.]

jocoteleg, n. See jockteleg.

jocular (jok'ū-lār), a. [= It. giocolare, gioculare, < L. jocularis, < joculus, a little jest, dim. of jocus, a jest: see joke.] 1. Given to jesting; jocose; merry; waggish; said of persons.

— 2. Of the nature of or containing a joke; sportive; not serious: as, a jocular expression or style.

His broad good-humor, running easily into jocular talk, in which he delighted and in which he excelled, was a rich gift to this wise man.
Emerson, Lincoln.

jocularly (jok'ū-lār'ī-ti), n. [= It. giocolarità; as jocular + -ity.] The quality of being jocular; merriment; jesting.

On his departure he asked with bitter jocularly whether Becket had sought to leave the realm because England could not contain himself and the king.

Milman, Latin Christianity, viii. 8.

jocularly (jok'ū-lār'ī-ti), adv. In a jocular manner; in jest; for sport or mirth.

"Come," said Dr. Johnson jocularly to Principal Robertson, "let us see what was once a church."

Boswell, Tour to the Hebrides.

jocularly (jok'ū-lār'ī-ti), a. [= It. giocolaria, < L. jocularis, equiv. to jocularis, jocular: see jocular.] Jocular.

With arts voluptuary I couple practices jocularly; for the deceiving of the senses is one of the pleasures of the senses.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. 201.

joculator (jok'ū-lār'tor), n.; L. pl. joculatores (jok'ū-lār'tō-rēs). [= It. gioculatore, < L. joculator, a joker, jester, < jocularis, < joculus, a little joke: see jocular. Cf. juggler, ult. a doublet of joculator.] Formerly, a professional jester; also, a minstrel. See juggler and jongleur.

One great part of the joculator's profession was the teaching of bears, apes, horses, dogs, and other animals to imitate the actions of men.

Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 323.

It is certain that the Norman Conquest brought to England the species of minstrels into which the joculatores had in Normandy and Northern France developed; and it may be assumed, both that it likewise brought performers of a different and lower class, and that a distinction was not always maintained between them.

A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., I. 15.

The joculatores or joculatores, who played, sang, recited, contorted, men of versatile powers of entertainment, who performed at the houses of the nobility, and were liberally remunerated.
Engay, Brit., XVI. 478.

joculatory (jok'ū-lār'tō-ri), a. [< L. joculatorius, jesting, < joculator, a joker, jester: see joculator.] Jocular.

jocund (jok'und), a. [Formerly also jocund; < ME. jocund, jocund, < OF. jocunde, jocund, jocund = Sp. Pg. jocundo = It. giocundo, < LL. jocundus (erroneously accom. to L. jocus, a jest), prop. jūcundus, L. jūcundus, pleasant, agreeable, pleasing, lit. helpful, < juvare, help, aid: see ad-jute and adjutant.] Merry; lively; cheerful; blithe; gleeful; gay; mirthful; airy; sprightly; sportive; light-hearted.

Full glads and jocunde were the company of the rounde table for that they were a-borded with air Gwaldu.
Merlin (E. E. T. A.), III. 508.

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain-top.
Shak., R. and J., III. 5. 9.

The Romans jocund of this Victoria, and the spoil they got, spent the night.
Milton, Hist. Eng., II.

jocundly (jok'und-lī), adv. In a jocund manner; merrily; gaily.

I'll not stir: poor Folly, honest Folly, jocundly Folly, forsake your lordship!
Dickens and Ford, Sun's Darling, III. 1.

jocundity (jō-kun'dī-ti), n. [Also jocundity; < ME. jocundicia, < OF. jocundite, jocundite = Sp. jocundidad = It. giocondità, < L. jocunditas (-tās), agreeableness, pleasantness, < jucundus: see jocund.] The state of being jocund or merry; gaiety.

Learned and meditative as was Sir Thomas More, a jesting humor, a philosophical jocundity, indulged on important as well as on ordinary occasions, served his wise purpose.
I. D'Israeli, Amen, of Lit., I. 381.

jocundly (jok'und-lī), adv. In a jocund manner; merrily; gaily.

jocundness (jok'und-nes), n. [< ME. jocundnes; < jocund + -ness.] Jocundity. Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 160.

jod (jod), n. [Var. of jot, ult. < Gr. iōta, iota, < Heb. yōd: see jot, iota.] The letter J. [Prov.]

As surely as the letter Jod
Once cried aloud, and spake to God,
So surely shalt thou feel this rod,
And punished shalt thou be!
Longfellow, Golden Legend, III.

jodel, v. See yodel.

joe¹ (jō), n. [A particular use of the familiar name Joe, abbr. of Joseph. In sense 1, with ref. to Joseph Hume, M. P., at whose instance the fourpence was issued in 1836, especially for the convenience of paying short cab-fares.] 1. A fourpenny-piece. Also joey. [Slang.] — 2. [cap.] An old jest: same as Joe Miller.

Of what use a story may be even in the most serious debates may be seen from the circulation of old Joes in Parliament, which are as current there as their sterling namesakes used to be in the city some three score years ago.
Southey, The Doctor, xvi.

3. A lobster too small to be sold legally — that is, one under ten inches in length. [Cape Cod, U. S.]

joe² (jō), n. [Also jo; an abbr. of Johannes.] A Portuguese and Brazilian gold coin, worth from eight to nine dollars.

Be sure to make him glow
Precisely like a guinea or a jo.
Wolcott, Lyric Odes for 1783, vii.

"Has the Indian come yet?" "He was here last week."
"An't you afraid of him?" "No." . . . "That's you, for a broad Joe! Never be afraid of any body."
S. Judd, Margaret, I. 2.

Double Joe. See double.

joe³ (jō), n. [Also jo; usually considered as a form of joy, < OF. joye, F. joie; but this is not probable.] 1. A master; a superior. Hallwell. [North. Eng.] — 2. A sweetheart; a darling. [Scotch.]

Blessings on your frosty pow,
John Anderson, my jo.
Burns, John Anderson.

Ooh! owre aft thy joe ha's starv'd,
Mid a' thy favours!
Burns, On Pastoral Poetry.

joe-ben (jō'ben), n. [Prob. imitative of the bird's note.] The greater titmouse, Parus major, or some other titmouse. [Suffolk, Eng.]

Joe Miller (jō mil'ēr), n. [Also Joe; after Joe or Joseph Miller, an English comic actor, whose name was attached to a popular jest-book, published in 1789, the year after his death.] 1. An old jest; a stale joke; a "chestnut." [Colloq. or slang.] — 2. A jest-book. [Colloq.]

Joe-Millerism (jō mil'ēr-izm), n. [< Joe Miller + -ism.] The art or practice of making, reciting, or retelling jests; especially, the repetition of stale or flat jokes; also, an old jest. [Colloq.]

Joe-Millerism (jō'mil'ēr-iz), v. t. [< Joe Miller + -ism.] To give a jesting or jocular character to; mingle with jokes or jests, especially stale jests. [Colloq.]

If a man cuts all the dates, tosses in his facts anyhow, and is too busy to distinguish one important man from another, and yet is funny, and succeeds in Joe-Millerism history, he pleases somebody or other.

Saturday Rev., Nov. 10, 1886.

Joey-weed (jō-pi'wēd), n. An American plant, Eupatorium purpureum, a tall weed with corymbs of purple flowers, common in low ground. Also called trumpetweed. See Eupatorium.

Joewood (jō'wūd), n. A tree, Jaquinia amillarlis, found in the West Indies, Florida, and elsewhere. Its leaves are saponaceous. See Jaquinia.

Joey (jō'i), n. [Dim. of Joe, a familiar abbr. of Joseph. See Joel.] 1. In coal-mining, a man specially appointed to set the timber in a stall or working while coal is being raised. [Midland counties, Eng.]—2. Same as Joel, 1. [Slang, Eng.]

They [the potters] have an idea . . . that this nobleman [Sir James Graham] invented fourpenny-pieces, and now, they say, the swells give a joey where they used to give a "tanner."

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 267.

jog (jog), v.; pret. and pp. jogged, ppr. jogging. [< ME. joggan, also juggen (also jagen); < W. jogi, shake, agitate. Cf. W. gogis, a gentle slap, Ir. gogaim, I nod, gesticulate, Gael. gog, a nodding. The related W. yagogi, wag, stir, shake, suggests an ult. connection with Ir. shog, shock, and shake. Cf. Joek, jolt, and jag.] 1. trans. 1. To pierce; thrust. See jag.

Thorowe a ferownde schelde he jogges hym thorowe.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 2892.

2. To touch, push, or shake slightly or gently; nudge; move by pushing.

Snatch from Timo
His glass, and let the golden sands run forth
As thou shalt jog them.

Dekker and Ford, Sun's Darling, II. 1.

Jogging . . . her elbow, he whispered something arch in her ear.
Goldsmith, Citizen of the World, cxviii.

Jupiter, I think, has jogged us three degrees nearer to the sun.
Walpole, Letters, II. 193.

Hence—3. To stimulate gently; stir up by a hint or reminder: as, to jog a person's memory.

II. intrans. To move by jogs or small shocks, like those of a slow trot; move idly, heavily, or slowly; generally followed by on or along.

He jogged till a Justice. Piers Plowman (B), xx. 133.

One foot a little dangling off, jogging in a thoughtful way.
Compton, Way of the World, IV. 1.

Thus they jog on, still tricking, never thriving. Dryden.

The good old ways our sires jogged safely o'er.
Browning, Paracelsus, IV.

To be jogging, to go away; move on: as, it is time for me to be jogging.

The door is open, sir; there lies your way;
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;
For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself.
Shak., T. of the S., III. 2. 213.

jog (jog), n. [< jog, v.] 1. A slight push or shake; a nudge; especially, a shake or push intended to give notice or awaken attention.

I have none to guide me
With the least jog; the lookers-on deride me.
Quarles, Emblems, IV. 4.

All men believe he resides there inoog,
To give them by turns an inviolable jog.
Shelton, On the Irish Bishops.

2. Irregularity of motion; a jolting motion; a jolt or shake.

How that which penetrates all bodies without the least jog or obstruction should impress a motion on any is . . . inconceivable.
Glanville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, III.

A carriage with a pair of gray horses was coming along with the familiar jog of a hack carriage which is paid for at so much an hour.

Mrs. O'Connell, Poor Gentleman, XLVII.

3. In mech., a square notch; a right-angled recess or step. See cut under joint (fig. b).

Higher up it [the thickness of a wall] is less, diminishing every story by retreating jogs on the inside.
L. H. Morgan, Amer. Ethnol., p. 157.

4. Any notch or recess in a line; a small depression in a surface; an irregularity of line or surface. [U. S.]

jogel, jogelert. Middle English forms of joggle, juggler.

jogelryet, n. A Middle English form of jugglery. jogger (jog'ēr), n. [< jog + -er.] 1. One who jogs, or moves heavily and slowly.

They with their fellow joggers of the plough. Dryden.

2. One who or that which gives a jog or sudden push.

A receiving-table for cylinder printing presses, designed to facilitate the accurate piling of the sheets without the use of the ordinary form of jogger.
Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 340.

jogging-cart (jog'ing-kärt), n. A recent American pattern of village-cart. The Hub, July 1, 1887.

joggle (jog'l), v.; pret. and pp. joggled, ppr. jogging. [Freq. of jog, q. v. The second sense depends rather upon joggle, n., as a dim. of jog, n., 3.] 1. trans. 1. To shake slightly; give a sudden but slight push; jolt; jostle.

We grant that the earth is firm and stable from all such motions whereby it is joggled or uncertainly shaken.

By. Wilkins, That the Earth may be a Planet.

A foolish desire to joggle thee into preferment.
Beau. and Fl., The Captain, v. 4.

2. In carp. and masonry, to fit together, as timbers or stonework, with notches and projections, or with notches and keys, to prevent the slipping of parts upon one another.

II. intrans. To move irregularly; have a jogging or jolting motion; shake.

"My dear, is that a proper way to speak?" said Miss Mchabli, reprovingly; but 'Tina saw my grandmother's broad shoulders jogging with a secret laugh.

H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 230.

joggle (jog'l), n. [Dim. of jog, n. Cf. juggler, v.] 1. A jolt; a jog.

And then the earl, she grippit wi' me like grim death, at every joggle the coach glid.

Gait, Sir Andrew Wyllie, II. 6.

2. In carp., a stub-tenon on the end of a post or piece of timber, which prevents the timber or post from moving laterally. Also joggle-joint.

—3. In carp. and masonry, a notch in a piece of timber or stone, into which is fitted a projection upon a corresponding piece or counterpart, or a key also engaging a notch in a corresponding piece or counterpart, to prevent one piece from slipping on the other.

joggle-beam (jog'l-bēm), n. A built beam the parts of which are joined by projections on one part fitted into notches cut in the other part or parts, or by keys fitting notches in the meeting surfaces of the parts, to prevent slipping of the parts upon one another.

joggle-joint (jog'l-joiut), n. Same as joggle, 2.

joggle-piece (jog'l-pēs), n. In building, same as king-post.

joggle-post (jog'l-pōst), n. 1. In building, a post having shoulders or notches for receiving the lower ends or feet of struts. See king-post.

—2. A post built of two or more pieces of timber joggled together.

joggle-truss (jog'l-trus), n. In building, a truss with a single post placed centrally and fitted to the chord by a stub-tenon or its equivalent, the chord being at the top, and the post hanging downward and having its lower end connected with the ends of the chord by oblique braces.

jogglework (jog'l-wērk), n. In masonry, construction in which stones are internotched or keyed (joggled) together.

jogging-table (jog'ing-tā'bl), n. In metal., a machine for dressing or concentrating ore. It consists of an inclined table on which the ore is placed and over which water is allowed to flow. The separation of the heavier ore from the lighter rock or veinstone is assisted by a succession of blows struck on the edge of the table by machinery contrived for this purpose, thus causing the table to vibrate sufficiently for the particles to arrange themselves in the order of their specific gravity. In the form of jogging-table known as "Kittinger's slide-blow percussion table," the table is pushed violently from its position at rest by a cam acting upon the end of a rod, and when the cam has released the end of the rod the table is pushed back by a strong spring.

joglar, n. [Fr.: see juggler.] A Provencal minstrel or jongleur. See jaculator.

Now in the palmy days of Provencal song there were many professional joglers, such as Arnaut Daniel or Perdigon, who stood high among the most brilliant troubadours, and visited on terms of social equality with nobles and princes.
Encyc. Brit., XVI. 479.

jog-trot (jog'trot), n. and a. 1. n. 1. A slow, easy jogging motion on horseback.—2. A slow routine mode of performing daily duty to which one pertinaciously adheres.

As we grow old, a sort of equable jog-trot of feeling is substituted for the violent ups and downs of passion and disgust.
R. L. Stevenson, Crabbed Age and Youth.

II. a. 1. Monotonous; easy-going; humdrum.

All honest jog-trot men, who go on smoothly and dully and write history and politics, and are praised.
Goldsmith, Vicar, xx.

2. Adapted for an easy, jogging pace. [Rare.]

These roads are old-fashioned, homely roads, very dirty and badly made, and hardly endurable in winter, but still pleasant jog-trot roads, running through the great pasture lands.
T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, I. 1.

Johan (jō'an), n. [< ML. Johannes, John: see John.] St. John's-wort. See Hypericum. [Prov. Eng.]

Johannean (jō-han'ē-an), a. [< ML. Johannes, LL. Joannes, John (see John), + -an.] Of or pertaining to the apostle John, or to the gospel written by him. Also Johannine.

There is a marked difference between the contents and style of the Synoptic and the Johannean discourses of Jesus.
Schaf, Hist. Christ. Church, I. § 23.

The Johannean conception of the gospel, predominant for ethical depth and force.
Progressive Orthodoxy, p. 203.

Johannes, joannes (jō-han'ēz, jō-an'ēz), n. [ML. and NL. form of LL. Joannes (> Pg. João): see John.] A gold coin (called in Portuguese jollo) formerly current in Portugal, worth about 80: probably so called from having been first issued by one of the Portuguese kings named John.

He got of me sometimes a double joannes, sometimes a Spanish doubloon, and never less.
Franklin, Letters (The Century, XXXII. 275).

Johanne (jō-han'in), a. [< ML. Johannes, LL. Joannes, John (see John), + -ine.] Same as Johannean.

Johannisberger (jō-han'is-bēr-gör), n. [G., < Johannisberg, lit. John's mountain: Johannis (gen. of Johannes), John; berg = E. barrow, hill, mountain: see barrow, berg.] A white wine grown in the Rheingau near the Rhine. The best is produced in the vineyard belonging to Prince Metternich, and is known as Schloss Johannisberg, from the name of the castle; this is considered one of the finest of wines. The wine of the neighboring slopes (called Dorf Johannisberg) is also sold as Johannisberger.

Johannite (jō-han'it), n. [< ML. Johannes, John, + -ite.] 1. [cap.] One of the Order of the Hospitalers of St. John of Jerusalem. See hospitaler.—2. A mineral of an emerald-green or apple-green color, a hydrous sulphate of the protoxide of uranium.

John (jon), n. [The h is in E. a mere insertion, in imitation of the ML. form; prop. Jon (as in Jonson, etc.: cf. Janson, Jenkins, etc.), < ME. Jon, also Jan, < OF. Jan, Jean, Jehan, Johan, etc., mod. F. Jean = Sp. Juan = Pg. João = It. Giovanni, Gianni (> E. sany, q. v.), (Gian = AS. Iohannes = D. Jan, Hans = G. Johann, Hans = Dan. Sv. Johan, Hans, etc., = W. Rjan (> E. Evan, Evans, Ivins, etc.) = Russ. Ivan, etc. (in all European languages); < ML. Johannes, Joannes, LL. Joannes, < Gr. Ἰωάννης (with accom. Gr. termination), < Heb. Yōhānān, John, lit. 'Jehovah hath been gracious.' This name owes its wide currency primarily to the impression which the character of John the Baptist made upon the popular imagination in the middle ages; Baptist alone is also a common name in southern Europe. Owing to the extreme frequency of John as a given name, it came to be used, like its accepted E. synonym Jack, as a common appellative for a man or boy of common or menial condition, and, in its different national forms, E. John, F. Jean, D. and G. Hans, etc., has served as a popular collective name for the whole people.] A common name for a man or boy, often used, like Jack, its synonym, to designate a man or a boy in general or indefinitely, especially an awkward fellow.—Chaucer, John. See cheap.

John-a-dreamer, n. [That is, John o' dreams, for John of dreams.] A dreamy, idle fellow.

Yet I,

A dull and muddy-metled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreamer, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing.
Shak., Hamlet, II. 2.

Johannapest (jon'ā-nāps), n. Same as jack-anapes.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Johannes of John V., King of Portugal, 1793.—British Museum. (Size of the original.)

Join. If I were at leisure, I would make you show tricks now.

Join. Do I look like a Johnnape?
Shirley, Bird in a Cage, II. 1.

John-apple (jon'ap'li), n. [Also, transposed, apple-john, q. v. See etym. of johnnapping.] A variety of apple, good for use when other fruit is spent, since it long retains its freshness.

John-a-stile (jon'a-stil'), n. [From John-a-stile or Stile, now John Styles, a frequent name, lit. 'John at the stile,' so named from the place of residence.] Any common person.

What though some John-a-Stile will basely toyle,
Only incited with the hope of gain.
Marston, Scourge of Villanie, II. Prol.

Whereby every John-a-Stile shall intercept the Churches due.
Purkeas, Pilgrimage, p. 133.

John Barleycorn. See barleycorn.

John Bull (jon bul). [So called with ref. to the coarse burly form and bluff nature ascribed to the typical Englishman.] 1. An Englishman; also, the English collectively.—2. A game in which the contestants throw pennies upon a flat stone divided into sixteen small squares, each marked with a certain number, and score according to the numbers of the squares upon which the pennies remain. Strutt.

John-Bullism (jon'bül'izm), n. [John Bull + -ism.] 1. The typical English character.

Little Britain may truly be called the heart's cure of the city; the stronghold of true John Bullism.
Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 300.

2. An utterance or an act agreeing with the typical English character.

John Chinaman (jon chi'nā-mān). A Chinaman; the Chinese collectively. [Colloq.]

John Company (jon kum'pa-ni). An old colloquial designation for the Honourable East India Company, in familiar use in India and England.

John-crow (jon'krō'), n. In Jamaica, the turkey-buzzard, Cathartes aura.

John Crow beans. See bean.

John-crow's-nose (jon'krōz'nōz'), n. Same as Jim-crow's-nose.

John-dory, John-doree (jon-dō'ri, -dō'rō'), n. A fish: same as dory, 1.

John-go-to-bed-at-noon (jon'grō'tē-bed'at-nōn'), n. A popular name of several plants. (a) The meadow-salicy, Tragopogon pratensis. (b) The pimpernel, Anagallis arvensis. (c) The star-of-Bethlehem, Ornithogalum umbellatum. [Eng.]

Johnian (jon'i-an), n. [John (see def.) + -ian.] A member or graduate of St. John's College in the University of Cambridge, England.

To such a society [Trinity College] Bentley came, obnoxious as a Johnian and an intruder, . . . whose interests lay outside the walls of the college.
Knece, Brit., III. 679.

Johnny (jon'i), n.; pl. johnnies (-iz). [John + -y.] A familiar dim. of John, a man's name: see John. 1. [cap.] A diminutive of the name John. It was applied as a nickname by the Federal soldiers to the Confederates during the war of the rebellion.

There was pretty hot fighting in among those bushes for a while, and then the Johnnies began to fall back. It was just then that we were sent in.
The Century, XXXVI. 400.

2. In tooth, a cottoid fish, Oligocottus maculatus, with a naked skin, slender head narrowed above, and pointed snout. It is a small species, very abundant along the western coast of the United States.—3. Among sailors, a kind of penguin, Pygoscolia tentata.—4. The fish Etheostoma nigrum, a kind of darter. [Local, U. S.]

Johnny-cake (jon'i-kāk), n. 1. In the southern United States, a cake of Indian meal mixed with water or milk, seasoned with salt, and baked or toasted by being spread on a board set on edge before a fire. It is of negro origin.

To make a faultless johnny-cake, you must be black, you must be fat, you must be a pampered slave and a doting despot; and even so your secret shall be buried with you. You can never teach the world how to make a johnny-cake, because you never learned it: you were born so.
J. W. Palmer, After his Kind, p. 198.

2. In other parts of the United States, any unsweetened flat cake of Indian meal, sometimes mixed with mashed pumpkin (especially in New England), and usually baked in a pan: incorrectly used at times for corn-bread, pone, etc.

Some talk of hoe-cake, fair Virginia's pride;
Rich johnny-cakes this mouth has often tried.
Both please me well, their virtues much the same,
Alike their fabric, as allied their fame;
Except in dear New England, where the last Receives a dash of pumpkin in the paste.
Joel Barlow, Hasty Pudding.

Johnny-cocks (jon'i-kōks), n. A plant, Orchis mascula. [Eng.]

Johnny-crane (jon'i-krāns), n. The marah-marigold, Calitha palustris. [Prov. Eng.]

Johnny-jump-up (jon'i-jump-up'), n. The pansy, Viola tricolor; also, the bird-foot violet, V. pedata. [Prov. U. S.]

She set a heap o' store by flowers, too, an' when the johnny-jump-ups and dandelions begun to come out . . . she'd go up in the woods.
Boston Sunday Budget, 1888.

Johnny-raw (jon'i-rā'), n. A raw beginner; a novice; a boor. [Slang.]

Johnny-verde (jon'i-vērd'), n. [Johnny + Sp. verde, green: see vert.] A Californian serranoid fish, Serranus or Paralabrax nebulifer, of a greenish color relieved by irregular dark mottlings, and with traces of dark oblique cross-bars with wavy whitish streaks on the tail.

John-paw (jon'pā), n. A serranoid fish, of the genus Epinephelus, occurring along the Gulf coast of the United States. See grouper.

Johnnesse (jon-sōn-sā' or -sē'), n. [Johnson (see def.) + -ese.] The surname Johnson is also written Jonson, ME. Jonson, i. e. John's son: see John. The style or language of Dr. Samuel Johnson (1709-84), or an imitation of it; a pompous, inflated style, characterized by words of classical origin (often manufactured).

When he wrote for publication, he [Johnson] did his sentences out of English into Johnnesse.
Macaulay, Boswell's Johnson.

If the Easy Chair may speak in Johnnesse, laughter is a condiment, not a comestible.
G. W. Curtis, Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 637.

Johnsonia (jon-sō'ni-ā), n. [NI. (R. Brown, 1810), named after Thomas Johnson, a botanist of the 17th century.] A genus of plants of western Australia, of the natural order Liliaceae and tribe Johnsonieae. It comprises tufted herbs with simple stems, the leaves all radical, and the flowers terminal in oblong spikes, entirely concealed by an involucre of dry bracts. The perianth has a top-shaped tube and six spreading divisions. The stamens are 3; the ovary is 3-lobed, with 2 ovules in a cell.

Johnsonian (jon-sō'ni-an), a. [Johnson (see def.) + -ian.] Relating to or characteristic of Dr. Samuel Johnson, his writings (especially his English dictionary), or his style.

His pronunciation deviated even more from the Johnsonian standard than the specimen of modern New-English in the Biglow Papers.
Macmillan's Mag., Feb., 1861, p. 278.

Johnsonianism (jon-sō'ni-an-izm), n. [Johnsonian + -ism.] A word or an idiom peculiar to Dr. Johnson, or a style resembling his; also, his personal characteristics.

Johnsonisee (jon-sō-ni'ē-sē), n. pl. [NI., < Johnsonia + -ee.] A tribe of liliaceous plants, typified by the genus Johnsonia. The tribal marks are a rush-like or low and sometimes branching stem from a short or creeping rootstock, and a dense terminal inflorescence, with an involucre of thickly imbricated bracts.

Johnsonism (jon'sōn-izm), n. [Johnson (see def.) + -ism.] Same as Johnsonianism.

John's-wood (jonz'wūd), n. St.-John's-wort. See Hypericum. [Prov. Eng.]

John's-wort (jonz'wōrt), n. Same as St.-John's-wort. See Hypericum.

John-to-whit (jon'tē-hwīt'), n. [Imitative of the bird's note.] The common red-eyed greenlet, Tiroo olivaceus.

Joist, v. t. [ME. joysen, < OF. joier, stem of certain parts of joir, joier, enjoy: see joy, r. Cf. rejoice.] To enjoy.

To Joysen your Habitation.
Lauder, Bowtle of Kyngis (E. E. T. S.), I. 128.

Jolet, n. and v. A Middle English form of joy.

Join (join), v. [ME. joynen, joynen, < OF. joindre, joindre, F. joindre = Pr. jonher, junher, jonjer = It. giugnere, < L. jungere, pp. junctus (root jug, in jugum, yoke, etc.), = Gr. ζευγνύω (root zy in zygō) = Skt. yuj, join, > yuga = Gr. ζυγός = L. jugum = E. yoke, q. v. Hence join, adjoin, conjoin, disjoin, enjoin, rejoin, subjoin, etc., and (from L. directly) adjunct, conjoin, etc., junction, juncture, conjugal, conjugal, subjugate, etc.] I. trans. 1. To put or bring together; bring into conjunction, or into association or harmony; unite; combine; associate: as, to join two planks by tenons; to join forces in an undertaking.

When the kynge Bores saugh the socour come, he joyned his feet and leyt upon the dead bodies of men and horses that he hadde slain.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 333.

What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.
Mat. xix. 6.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., IV. 6, 38.

Join voices, all ye living souls.
Milton, P. L., v. 197.

2. To unite, as one thing to or with another; bring into conjunction or association; cause to be united or connected in any way: followed by to or with.

And Fabius, surnamed Maximus,
Could joynes such learning with experience
As made his name more famous than the rest.
Gascogne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 64.

Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field.
Isa. v. 8.

Sobriety and contemplation join our souls to God.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 611.

Pluto with Cato thou for this shalt join.
Pope, Dunciad, III. 309.

3. To unite or form a junction with; become connected with or a part of; come into association or union with: as, to join a church, party, or society; the Missouri river joins the Mississippi; to join one in an enterprise.

The goddess swift to high Olympus flies,
And joins the sacred senate of the skies.
Pope, Iliad, I. 294.

I but come like you to see the hunt,
Not join it.
Tennyson, Geraint.

4. To unite or take part in, in a friendly or hostile manner; engage in with another or others: as, he joined issue with his opponent; the forces joined battle.

Jehoshaphat . . . joined affinity with Ahab.
3 Chron. xviii. 1.

Thill winds the signal blow
To join their dark encounter in mid air.
Milton, P. L., II. 718.

5. To adjoin; be adjacent or contiguous to: as, his land joins mine. [Colloq.]—6. To enjoin; command.

Who joyned the be Instayne our lapses to blame,
That com a boy to this borg, thaz thou be burne ryche?
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), II. 877.

And they join them ponance, as they call it, to fast, to go pilgrimages, and give so much to make satisfaction withal.
Tyndale, Works, I. 281.

To join battle. See battle.—To join issue. See issue.—To join the majority. See majority.

II. intrans. 1. To be contiguous or close; lie or come together; form a junction.

She . . . lifte vp hir handes joynynge towards heuene, and thanked oure lordes of that socoure that he hadde hir sente.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 300.

A certain man's house . . . joined hard to the synagogue.
Acts xviii. 7.

2. To unite or become associated; confederate; league.

Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished.
Prov. xi. 21.

Hee and the Irish Rebels had but one aime, one and the same drift, and would have forthwith joyn'd in one body against us.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xii.

Now and then
The rougher voices of the men joined in the song.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 392.

3. To meet in hostile encounter; join battle.

Thus at the joynynge the gaunters are destroyed,
And at that journey far-justado with gentile lordes.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 2184.

He saw the armies join,
The game of blood begun.
Ritcher, Loyal Subject, II. 1.

But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day!
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., I. 2, 283.

Join (join), n. [< join, v.] The place where two things are joined; the line or surface of juncture; a joint; also, the mode of joining.

Should the join be in sight, by smoking the shelloe before applying it to the broken edge, it will be rendered the same colour as the jet itself.
Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 23.

The chief means of detecting modern from old Persian and Sassanid metal vessels is by examining the brazing joins, which in ancient vessels are rare.
Sci. Amer., N. S., I.V. 7.

Cross-join, in upholstery, a seam across the breadth of any material, as of a carpet, furniture-covering, or the like.

Joignant (join'nant), a. [ME. joynant, < OF. joignant, pp. of joindre, join: see join.] 1. Adjoining.

The grote tour that was so thikke and strong . . .
Was evenc joignant to the gardyn wal.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 302.

2. In her., conjoined.

Joinder (join'dér), n. [F. joindre, inf. used as a noun: see join, v. t.] 1. A joining; conjunction.

A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands.
Shak., T. N., v. 1, 100.

2. In law: (a) The coupling or joining of two causes of action in a suit against another: called more fully joinder of action. (b) The coupling of two or more persons together as defendants. (c) The acceptance by a party to an action of the point of controversy put in his adversary's previous pleading: called joinder in demurrer if the previous pleading was a demurrer, joiner of issue if it was an allegation of fact.—Joiner in error. See error.—Joiner of issue, joiner in issue. See issue.

joiner (joi'ner), n. [ME. joiner, < OF. joignour, a joiner (def. 2), < joindre, join: see join.] 1. One who joins. Specifically—2. One whose occupation is to construct things by joining pieces of wood by means of glue, framing, or nails; appropriately and usually, a mechanic who does the wood-work for the internal and external finishings of houses, ships, etc.

He would not be known that himself was priest, but said that he had by the space of 9 years ben beyonde the sea, & there liued by the joyners craft.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 245.

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut
 Made by the joyners squirrel, or old grub,
 Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.
Shak., R. and J., l. 1, 68.

3. In wood-working, a power-tool for sawing, planing, cross-cutting, etc. By means of attachments, it is capable of performing a great variety of work, as grooving and tonguing, mitring, molding and heading, wedge-cutting, boring, etc. E. H. Knight.—Joiners' chisel, a thin-bladed paring-chisel. E. H. Knight.—Joiners' gage, a scribing-tool for making a mark on a board parallel to its edge. E. H. Knight.—Joiners' plane, a long bench-plane used in facing and matching boards.
Joining (joi'ner-ing), n. [Joiner + -ing.] Same as join.
Joinery (joi'ner-i), n. [Join + -ery.] 1. The art or trade of a joiner.—2. Joiners' work.

He made an administration so checkered and speckled; he put together a piece of joinery so closely indented and whimsically dovetailed.
Burke, American Taxation.

Join-hand (joi'n-hand), n. Cursive writing; running-hand.

A little boy . . . told her that he was to go into join-hand on Thursday.
Addison, Spectator, No. 7.

Joining (joi'ning), n. [Verbal n. of join, v.] A line of junction; a joint.

In the steeples which stands before me at a small distance, the joinings of the stones are clearly perceptible.
Reid, Inquiry, vl. 22.

Fine joining, sewing together or securing by crocheting, as of lace.

Joining-hand (joi'ning-hand), n. Same as join-hand.

Joint (joint), n. [ME. joynit, < OF. joint, joinet, m., jointe, joynite, f., = Pr. junta, junta, = Sp. Pg. junta, a joint, = It. giunta, f., a joint, meeting, arrival, < L. junctus, m., a joining, ML. juncta, f., a joining, a joint, connection, < junctus, pp. of jungere, join: see join.] 1. The place or part in which two things, or parts of one thing, are joined or united; the mode of connection of two things, together with the contiguous parts connected, whether the latter are movable or not; juncture; articulation; hinge.

A sooty gauntlet now, with joints of steel,
 Must glove this hand.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., l. 1, 147.

Specifically—(a) In anat.: (1) An articulation.

The panto hath power to putten oute the joyntes, And to vnfolde the fust for hym hit bylongeth. And receyuen that the fyngers reachen and refuse, yf hym liked.
Piers Plowman (R), xx. 142.

Myself I then perused, and limbe by limbe Survey'd it, and sometimes went, and sometimes ran With supple joints, as lively vigour led.
Milton, P. L., viii. 300.

(2) A part between two articulations; an intermode; one of the pieces which form a jointed organ: as, the second joint of the tarsus.

There we pray'd a little; and there was shown us the middle Joint of a Man's Finger: I kiss'd it, and ask'd whose Belick it was.

N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquia of Erasmus, II. 11.

(b) In bot., same as articulation, 2 (b).

Kitte out a yoins of reede, and in the side
 Therof let make an hoole.
Palladius, Husbandrie (R. E. T. S.), p. 146.

(c) In arch., the surface of contact between two bodies that are held firmly together by means of cement or mortar, by a superincumbent weight, or otherwise: as, the joint between two stones. (d) In red., the place where the ends of two rails meet, or the mode in which they are connected. See fish-joint and fish-plate. (e) In carp. and joinery, the place where or the mode in which one piece of timber is side. (f) The junction of two portions of an electrical conductor, such as a telegraph-wire or cable-core. [Joints made between materials in masonry, carpentry, plumbing, and in other arts have received in many instances names that are compounds of the word joint with others that describe the position of the parts, as angle-joint, butt-joint, etc.; or the manner of forming the joint, as dovetail-joint, fish-joint, scarf-joint, dowel-joint, etc. Most of these joints are clearly defined by their names.]

2. In geol., a crack intersecting a mass of rock. Beds of considerable thickness, especially when homogeneous and somewhat crystalline, are frequently found to be traversed by a great number of fissures, nearly parallel with one another, and often very straight and regular in their course. Sometimes there are two systems of these joints, each set consisting of parallel fissures, and the two sets being at right angles, or nearly so, with each other. There may be even three systems of joint-planes, but in any case one set is almost always more decidedly well formed than the others. The cleat of coal is an illustrative example of the occurrence of a well-developed jointing; the distinctive scenery of certain picturesque limestone regions—as, for instance, that of the north of England—is due to the peculiar form of weathering caused by well-defined systems of joint-planes. The character and relative position of the systems of joints in rocks are of great practical importance from various points of view, and especially with reference to the facility with which the rock may be quarried into forms convenient for use. The jointing of granite is frequently such as to divide the rock naturally into unobdurate masses. The prismatic jointing of volcanic masses is frequently very perfectly and beautifully marked. See basalt.

3. One of the large pieces into which a carcass is cut up by the butcher: as, a joint of beef; also, such a piece roasted, or prepared for eating: as, a hot joint; a cold joint.—4. (a) A place of meeting or resort for persons engaged in evil and secret practices of any kind: as, a tramps' joint. Specifically—(b) Such a place, usually kept by Chinese, for the accommodation of persons addicted to the habit of opium-smoking, and where they are provided with pipes, opium, etc. [Collog., U. S.]—Abutting joint. See abutment, 2 (b).—Ball-and-socket joint. See ball.—Ball-hanger's joint, a method of joining wire in use by ball-hangers. The ends of the wires are bent and hooked together, and then twisted about the body of the wire to form linked loops.—Britannia joint, in wires for carrying an electric current, a joint made by slightly bending up the ends of the two wires to be joined, laying them side by side for a few inches, binding them tightly together with finer wire, and then soldering the whole.—Brodie's joint, a joint, especially the knee, exhibiting Brodie's disease. See disease.—Chelate joint. See chelate.—Composite joint. See composite.—Cramp-joint, (a) A joint between plates of metal in which the edges are thinned by hammering, one being left plain and the other notched obliquely with shears. Each alternate cramp is bent up, the next down, for the insertion of the plain edge, after which they are hammered together, brassed, and flattened. It is used for works requiring strength, as the parts of musical instruments. (b) See cramp-joint.—Cup-and-ball joint. Same as ball-and-socket joint.—Dovetail-joint. See dovetail.—Fast-joint butt. See butt.—Female joint. See female.—Foliated joint, in carp., a rabbeted joint.—French joint, a joint for wires in which the ends to be joined are placed side by side for a few inches, and then twisted.—Hooker's joint, a contrivance by which a motion of rotation is communicated from one shaft to another lying in the same plane, though in different direction. The two shafts are pronged at the end, and in the prong of each is pivoted one of the cross-bars of a cross-shaped piece, the axis of each cross-bar being perpendicular to that of the shaft to which it is pivoted.—Hydrostatic, incompressible, inflated, lapped, etc. joint. See the adjectives.—Loose-joint butt. See butt.—Opium joint. See def. 4 (b).—Out of joint, dislocated, as when the head of a bone is displaced from its socket; hence, figuratively, confused; disordered; gone wrong.

The jaundiced eye;
 To which all order festers, all things here are out of joint.
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

Round-joint file. See file.—Rustic joint. See rustic.—Second joint. (a) The thigh of a fowl (the leg, or drumstick, being the first joint), esteemed by many the best part for eating. (b) The middle piece or joint of a fly-rod, between the tip and the butt.—Square joint, a joint in wooden stuff in which the edges are brought squarely together without rabbeting, tongue, or feather.—To break joint in masonry, carp., etc. See break.—To flush a joint. See flush.—To put one's nose out of joint, to supplant one in another's love, favor, or confidence. [Collog.]—Universal joint, in mach., an arrangement by which one part of a machine may be made to move freely in all directions in relation to another. A familiar example is afforded by the well-known ball-and-socket joint, which consists of a solid working into a hollow sphere. See cut of ball-and-socket joint, under ball.—Water joint. See water. (See also pin-joint, plumb-joint, ring-joint, shackle-joint, toggle-joint, twist-joint, union-joint.)

Joint (joint), a. [OF. joint, F. joint, < L. junctus, pp. of jungere, join: see join, n.] 1. Joined in relation, action, or interest; having a common share; participating: as, joint owners; joint tenants.

Heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. Rom. viii. 17.

What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
 Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day?
Shak., Hamlet, l. 1, 78.

Man walk'd with beast, joint tenant of the shade.
Pope, Essay on Man, iii. 152.

2. Joined in use or participation; held jointly or in common; shared by different individuals:

as, joint stock or property; a joint interest in an enterprise.

For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence Upon our joint and several dignities.
Shak., T. and C., ii. 2, 128.

The generous Greeks their joint consent declare,
 The priest to reverence, and release the fair.
Pope, Iliad, l. 490.

3. Joined in amount or effect; combined; acting together: as, joint strength; joint efforts; a joint attack.

The Kentish men, all parties uniting against a common Enemy, with joint power so oppos'd him that he was constrain'd to retire back.
Milton, Hist. Eng., iv.

'Tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call,
 But the joint force and full result of all.
Pope, Essay on Criticism, l. 240.

Where priest and clerk with joint exertion strive
 To keep the ardor of their flock alive.
Crabbe, The Borough.

4. In law: (a) Of contracts, united in interest or liability in such manner that the law will not proceed without joining all, as distinguished from cases where a part may act, or sue or be sued, severally. Thus, partners are joint debtors, and notice to one is notice to all, and an action by or against any one of them respecting partnership affairs must be usually by or against all. See estate in joint tenancy (under estate), and several. (b) Of crimes and torts, combined or connected in the same transaction.—Joint and several, united in obligation or liability in such manner that the creditor may proceed against all together or each separately.—Joint batteries. See battery.—Joint committee, contract, convention, etc. See the nouns.—Joint indentment. See indentment.—Joint rights in rem, in civil law, same as condominium.—Joint tenancy, in law, a tenure of estate by unity of interest, title, time, and possession; possession or occupation by joint tenants. See estate.

Joint (joint), v. [Joint, n. Cf. Sp. Pg. juntar, join.] 1. trans. 1. To form with a joint or joints; articulate.

The fingers are jointed together for motion, and furnished with several muscles.
Ray, Works of Creation.

2. To prepare the edge of (a board or a piece of other material) for closely joining another piece; straighten the edge of (a board or plank), by means of a plane called a joiner. In coopers' work the edges of staves are joined by the coopers' joiner, which is a tool analogous to the carpenter's joiner, but having a curved instead of a plane under face, to impart the proper curvature to the stave.

3. To unite closely; combine; join.

The time's state
 Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst Omar.
Shak., A. and C., l. 2, 98.

4. To cut or divide into joints or pieces; separate the joints of; disjoint.

He joins the neck, and with a stroke so strong
 The helm flies off and bears the head along.
Dryden, Aeneid, ix. 1088.

II. intrans. To fit as by joints, or as parts adjusted to one another: as, stones cut so as to joint into each other.

Joint-coupling (joint'kup'ling), n. In shafting, a form of universal joint by which the sections are coupled and locked together.

Jointed (joint'ed), a. [Joint, n., + -ed.] Provided with joints; formed with knots or nodes.—Jointed charcoal. See charcoal.—Jointed rod, a flanging-rod made in sections, with male and female ferrules or male and female screws. See rod.

Jointedly (join'ted-li), adv. By joints.

Joint-end (join't-end), n. The iron end-piece on which a carriage-bow moves, as on a pivot.

*Joiner*¹ (join'ter), n. 1. One who or that which joins joints. Specifically—(a) In carp., a long plane used to straighten the edges of boards or planks, so that they will make a close joint with other pieces similarly jointed. (b) In coopers' work: (1) A tool used for jointing staves. It is analogous to the carpenter's joiner, but has its under face curved, to impart the proper curvature to the edges of staves. (2) A machine for jointing staves, which cuts them to the required curves on their edges. (c) In masonry, a tool for filling the cracks between the courses of bricks or stones.

2. In masonry, a bent strip of iron inserted into a wall to strengthen a joint. E. H. Knight.—Backing or side joiner, a joiner having a bit with a concave edge for dressing the backs of barrel-staves. Also called an overshave.—Heading-joiner, a joiner having a bit with a straight edge.—Stave-joiner, a large plane for working the edges of barrel-staves.

*Joiner*², n. An obsolete form of joinure.

*Joiners*³, n. One who has a joinure or a jointure-settlement.

In Laxfield here my land and living lies;
 I'll make thy daughter joiner of it all.
Greene, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

Joint-evil (joint's'vul), n. Same as lepra nervorum (which see, under lepra).

Joint-file (joint'fil), n. A small round file of uniform section throughout its length.

Joint-ir (join'tir), n. 1. A general name of the species of the natural order Gnetaceae (which see).—2. A name of the taxoid conifers.

Joints, in carpentry.
 a, joint concealed by the head; b, joint which may be nailed from both ends; c, joint used for pilasters; d, joint used for skirting, dados, doors, jambs, etc.; e, inter-joint; f, dovetail-joint; g, square joint; h, rabbet-joint with beads; i, tongue-and-groove joint; j, feather-joint; k, drip-joint.

connected with another. Pieces of timber are framed and joined to one another generally by mortises and tenons, of which there are several kinds, or by iron straps and bolts. (f) In bookbinding, the flexible cloth or leather which, serving as a hinge, connects the back of a book with its joint-grass (joint'grās), n. 1. The grass Paspalum distichum, of the southern United States. [U. S.]—2. Various species of Equisetum or horsetail. [Prov. Eng.]—3. The yellow bed-straw, Gallium verum. [Prov. Eng.]

joint-hinge (joint'hing), n. A strap-hinge.

jointing-machine (join'ting-ma-shēn'), n. A planing-machine adapted to fine cabinet- and piano-work.

jointing-plane (join'ting-plān), n. 1. A jointer; specifically, a power-tool which has largely superseded the hand-tool or jointer-plane; a stove-jointer. It is a circular plane, with a series of bits which pass in turn over the stove held against it. By changing the bits the machine can be used to mold, chamfer, etc.

2. A small supplementary share in a plow.

jointing-rule (join'ting-rūl), n. In painting, a straight rod about six feet long used as a guide in marking out with paint the joints of brickwork.

jointless (joint'les), a. [joint + -less.] Having no joint; without, or as if without, joints; hence, stiff; rigid.

"Let me die here," were her words, remaining jointless and immovable. Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, VI. 28.

jointly (joint'li), adv. In conjunction; together; unitedly; in concert.—Jointly and severally, collectively and individually.

joint-oil (joint'oil), n. The synovial fluid which lubricates joints; synovia.

An albuminous fluid called "synovia," and commonly known as joint-oil. Mearns, Kneecap, Brit., XXII. 111.

joint-pipe (joint'pip), n. A short section of a gas- or steam-pipe, threaded at both ends and used for joining lengths of pipe.

joint-pliers (joint'pli'brs), n. pl. A special form of small nipping pliers for watchmakers' use.

joint-racking (joint'rak'ing), a. Causing pain in the joints.

Dropsies, and asthma, and joint-racking rheuma. Milton, P. L., XI. 488.

jointress (join'tres), n. [Contr. of jointress, < jointure + -ess.] 1. A woman who has a jointure; a dowager. [Rare.]—2. A woman who joins with another person in rule or possession.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state. Shaks., Hamlet, I. 2. 9.

joint-ring (joint'ring), n. A ring jointed so as to consist of two equal parts; a gemel-ring.

Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps. Shaks., Othello, IV. 3. 73.

joint-rod (joint'rod), n. In bookbinding, a wooden rod with a curved face, used to hold a book in good shape for pressing.

joint-saw (joint'sā), n. A saw with a curved working-face, used in forming the joints of compasses, etc.

joint-snake (joint'snāk), n. A fragile limbless lizard of the southern United States: same as glass-snake.

joint-splice (joint'splis), n. Any form of reinforcing device for holding two parts of a structure or machine firmly in place, as the fish-plate of a rail-joint on a railroad.

joint-stock (joint'stok), a. Of or pertaining to or concerning joint stock, or the holding of stock in shares; having a capital divided into shares.

The development of the joint-stock principle gave it the chance to secure the requisite capital from a number of small investors. Science, VII. 222.

Joint-stock company. (a) An association the property or capital of which is represented by stock issued in shares to the members respectively, the object being that changes in membership shall depend, not as in partnership, upon the consent of all the members, but upon the transfer of shares, which any member may make without the consent of the others, and also that the death of a member shall not dissolve the association, as in case of a partnership, his right being simply transferred to his executors or administrators. Another object usually if not always involved is the rendering of the power of control separable from the right of ownership, by vesting the management in a committee or officers instead of leaving it, as in the case of a partnership, with each member. In the absence of any statute the liability of a joint-stock company and its members, and its means of enforcing its rights as to third persons, are nevertheless precisely those of partners: all the members must join in suing; all are liable for its debts, and all must be joined when sued; and on a change of membership pending a suit a corresponding change of parties may be required. To obviate these inconveniences, statutes have been passed in several of the United States allowing such associations to sue and be sued in the name of the president or treasurer. In respect to internal controversies, the courts, even without the aid of statute, follow the analogies afforded by the law of corporations, so far as this can be done without conceding to unincorporated associations the right to have a common seal, and to have succession and sue and be sued as a distinct artificial person. (b) An association for similar objects, but having the express sanction of statute for its organization as a corporation. In both classes of companies the members contribute.—Joint-stock Companies Act. British statute prescribing methods for the organization, management, and winding up of incorporated companies other than banking concerns.

joint-stool (joint'stōl), n. 1. A stool made of parts fitted or joined together, as distinguished from one more roughly made, as from planks.

Foot. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?
Lear. She cannot deny it.
Foot. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool. Shaks., Lear, III. 6. 54.

Joint-stools were then created; on three legs Upborne they stood, three legs upholding firm A massy alab, in fashion square or round. Cooper, Task, I. 19.

2. Any supporting rest or block used for holding the ends of two abutting parts, as the ends of rails, ships' ways, etc.

joint-strip (joint'strip), n. In railroad-cars, a strip of wood with rabbeted grooves for the insertion of corrugated metal roofing-sheets.

joint-test (joint'test), n. The electrical test to which the joints in the core of telegraph-cables are subjected to insure their soundness.

jointure (join'tūr), n. [Early mod. E. also jointer; < ME. joyniture, rarely joynier; < OF. jointure, later jointure, F. jointure = Pr. junctura, junctura = Sp. Pg. juntura = It. giuntura, < L. junctura, a joining; < jungere, pp. junctus, join: see join. Doublt juncture, q. v.] 1. A joining or coupling together; junction; union; conjunction.

It wanteth moevyng and joyniture of soule and body. Chaucer, Boethius, II. prose 5.
Yet all too mean to balance equal force,
And sympathise in jointure with thy courage. Ford, Fame's Memorial.

2. A joint of armor.

Joynier and gemowis he jogges in sondyre!
Morte Artoure (R. E. T. S.), I. 2294.

3. An estate in lands or tenements settled before marriage on the intended husband and wife jointly.—4. An estate or property settled on a woman in consideration of marriage, and to be enjoyed by her after her husband's decease.

It is utterly unaccountable to me why you, the widow of a City Knight, with a good jointure, should not close with the passion of a man of such character . . . as Mr. Surface. Sheridan, School for Scandal, I. 1.

jointure (join'tūr), v. t.; pret. and pp. jointured, ppr. jointuring. [< jointure, n.] To settle a jointure upon.

If thou, my dear, thyself shouldst prize,
Alas, what value wouldst suffice?
The Spaniard could not do it, though he Should to both Indies jointure thee. Cowley.

jointure (join'tūr-es), n. Same as jointress.

jointweed (joint'wēd), n. 1. Polygonum articulatum, an American plant: so called from its many-jointed spike-like racemes. [U. S.]—2. A name of a species of Equisetum.—3. The mare's-tail, Hippuris vulgaris.

joint-wire (joint'wir), n. In watchmaking and jewelry-manuf., tubular wire of silver, gold, or alloy, for use in hinge-joints. It is drawn over a steel wire, which after the drawing is pulled out. Pieces of this tubular wire are hard-soldered to the parts to be hinged together, and a wire pinle completes the hinge-joint.

joint-worm (joint'wērm), n. 1. A jointed worm; an intestinal worm of the genus Tenia; a tapeworm. See cut under Tenia.

In opening a dog the other day, I found this worm. . . . 'Tis the joint-worm which the learned talk of so much.—Ay: the Lumbrous Intus, or vulgarly in English the tape-worm. Mrs. Cushman.

2. The larva of a chalcid hymenopterous parasite of the genus Isosoma, as I. hordei, which is very destructive to crops of barley, wheat, and rye in the United States. The eggs are laid in the stems of these cereals, and the larva feed in slight enlargements near the joints. There is only one annual generation, and the insect winters in the stubble in both the pupal and adult states. All the species of Isosoma are phytophagous or plant-feeding, and work like I. hordei upon the stalks of various grasses and cereals. These worms are of small size, one tenth to one fifth of an inch long. They attack the crop when it is a foot or less in height, checking the growth, causing the green leaves to turn yellow, and making knots on the stem. The rye joint-worm is the larva of I. secalis; the wheat joint-worm, that of I. tritici; both of these are merely varieties of I. hordei, which is more fully called barley joint-worm. See Isosoma.

jointy (join'ti), a. Full of joints.

joint (join't), n. [The vulgar pron. jist (like jit, jist, hist, etc., for join, joint, hist, etc.) was formerly in good usage, and in this case is etymologically correct, the form joint, early mod. E. joist, being a corruption of jist (pron. jist), < ME. gieste, gyeste (with long vowel, as in ME. Christ, mod. Christ), a joist, beam, < OF. gieste, a bed, couch, place to lie on, a beam, F. gîte, a lodging, form (of a hare), bed or stratum (in geology), < OF. gesir, F. gisir, lie, < L. jacere, lie: see jacere, adjacent, etc., and cf. giest, a doublet of joist.] In building, one of the pieces of timber to which the boards of a floor or the laths of a ceiling are nailed, and which themselves rest on the walls or on girders, and sometimes on both. Joists are laid horizontally in parallel equidistant rows.

The joists of the loft fall, and they that were under it perished there. Ep. Hale, English Voyagers, I.

Bay of joists. See bay.

Binding-joists. See binding.

Ceiling-joists. See ceiling. (See also bridging-joist, trimming-joist.)

joist (join't), v. t. [< joist, n.] To fit or furnish with joists.

joke (jōk), n. [= D. jok = G. joke, a joke, = Dan. jux, trash (cf. gjøre jux, make fun); = F. jeu = Pr. joc, juec, juoc = Sp. juego = Pg. jogo = It. gioco, giuoco, jest, game, sport; < L. iocus, a jest, joke, perhaps orig. "diocus," "diucus"; cf. Skt. y div, play.] 1. Something said or done for the sake of exciting laughter; some witty or sportive remark or act; a jest; also, jesting; railleury.

A college joke to cure the dumps. Swift, Cassius and Peter.

The practice of turning every thing into joke and ridicule is a dangerous levity of imagination. Beattie, Moral Science, I. I. 7.

2. Something not real, or to no purpose; what is not in earnest or actually meant; an illusion.

Incluse whole downs in walls—'tis all a joke! Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ll. 261.

In joke, in jest; for the sake of raising a laugh; not in earnest; with no serious intention.—No joke, a serious matter. [Colloq.]—Practical joke. See practical.—To cut or crack a joke. See cut, crack.—Syn. See jest.

joke (jōk), v.; pret. and pp. joked, ppr. joking. [Of L. iocari, jest, joke; from the noun.] 1. Intrans. To jest; make merry about something.

Joking decides great things Stronger and better oft than earnest can. Milton, tr. of Horace.

Your Honour is pleas'd to joke with me. Steele, Conscious Lovers, IV. 1.

II. trans. To cast jokes at; make merry with; rally: as, to joke a man about his love-affairs.

joker (jō'kēr), n. 1. One who jokes, in speech or in deed; a jester; a merry fellow.

One tall joker . . . scrawled upon a wall with his finger dipped in muddy wine lees—Blood. Dickens, Tale of Two Cities, v.

2. A playing-card, either blank or having some comical or other special device, added to a pack, and used in some games, as in euchre. It is always a trump, and generally the highest trump. (Often called jolly joker.)

The White Knight, called the Joker, otherwise the Best Bower. J. B. Greenough, Queen of Hearts, III.

jokesmith (jōk'smith), n. A professional joker; one who manufactures jokes. [Humorous.]

I Year'd to give occasion to the jests of newspaper jokesmiths. Southey, Letters (1813), II. 336.

jokingly (jō'king-li), adv. In a joking manner; in a merry way.

jokiah (jō'kish), a. [< joke + -iah.] Inclined to joke; jocular.

Oh dear, how jocular these gentlemen are! O'Keefe, Fountainbleau, III. 1.

jole (jōl), n. and v. See jowl.

jollif, a. A Middle English form of jolly. Chaucer.

joll, n. and v. See jowl.

jollification (jō'l-i-f-i-kā'shon), n. [< jolly + -fication, after glorification, etc.] A scene, occasion, or act of merriment, mirth, or festivity; a carouse; merrymaking. [Colloq.]

He nodded, smiled, and rubbed his hands, as if Mrs. Rodgers had invited him to a Lord Mayor's feast, or some equally gorgeous jollification. L. M. Alcott, Hospital Sketches, p. 155.

jollily (jō'l-i-li), adv. [< ME. jollily; < jolly + -ly.] In a jolly manner; gaily; merrily; mirthfully.

jolliment (jol'i-mənt), n. [< jolly + -ment.] Mirth; merriment.

Triton his trumpet shrill before them blew,
For goodly triumph and great jolliment.

Spenser, F. Q., IV, xi, 12.

jolliness (jol'i-nēs), n. [< ME. jollinesse; < jolly + -ness.] The state or quality of being jolly; gaiety; festivity; jollity.

I saye na more, but in this jollinesse
I lete hem til men to the noper dremes.

Chaucer, Squire's Tale, l. 281.

jollity (jol'i-ti), n. [Early mod. E. also jollitie, jollity; < ME. jollite, jollite, < OF. jollite, jollite, also jollote, gayness, gaiety, < joll, jollif, gay, jolly; see jolly.] 1. Gayness; splendor; magnificence.

He showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and all their jollity.

Latimer, 4th Sermon bef. Edw. VI, 1549.

2. The quality or condition of being jolly; demonstrative merriment; festivity; gaiety.

From jollite myn hert is paste,

From rialte & riche aray.

Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 84.

All now was turn'd to jollity and game.

Milton, P. L., xi, 714.

3. Gallantry.

Their songs made to their mates or paramours, either upon sorrow or jollity of courage, the first amorous musicks.

Purcell, Arts of Eng. Poets, p. 30.

The halting knight, meeting the other, asking the cause of his going thitherward, and finding it was to defend Pamela's divine beauty against Artaeus's, with a proud jollite commanded him to leave that quarrel only for him.

Sir F. Sidney, Arcadia, l.

=Syn. 2. Joviality, fun, frolic, hilarity.

jollop (jol'up), n. [< Cf. gobble.] The cry of a turkey. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]

jolly (jol'i), a. [< ME. jolly, joll, older jollif, < OF. jollif, later joll, gay, trim, fine, gallant, neat, jolly, F. joll, pretty, = Pr. joll = It. giulivo, giulio, gay, merry, jolly. Origin uncertain; usually referred to leel. jol = Sw. Dan. jol = E. yule, the feast of Christmas: see yule.] 1. Gay; of fine appearance; handsome; well-conditioned; thriving.

This Morgain was a yonge damesell fresch and Jolye.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), III, 507.

You may go kiss your jolly brown bride,

And let our slakes alone.

Pair Margaret and Sweet William (Child's Ballads, II, 148).

2. Full of life and merriment; jovial; gaily cheerful; festive.

They be yonge men and Jolye, and have grete nede of counsell.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), I, 47.

Be jolly, lords.

Shak., A. and C., II, 7, 65.

He troth'd his bumpers to the brim;

A jollier year we shall not see.

Tennyson, Death of the Old Year.

3. Characterized or attended by joviality; expressing or inspiring mirth; exciting mirthfulness or gaiety.

And with his jolly Pipe delights the Groves.

Prior, Henry and Emma.

"A jolly place," said he, "in times of old!

But something ails it now: the spot is cursed."

Wordsworth, Hart-Leap Well, II.

But old Jack Falstaff . . . has bequeathed a never failing inheritance of jolly laughter, to make mankind merrier and better to the latest posterity.

Irons, Sketch-Book, p. 145.

4. Gallant; brave.

The tyte was Jous, that joly mane of armes,
That in Jerusalem oete fulle myoe joye lymppede.

Morte Artoure (E. E. T. S.), I, 341a.

5. Great; remarkable; uncommon; as, a jolly muf. [Slang.]—Jolly joker. See joker, 2.—Syn. 2. Jolly, Jovial, Mirthful, Merry, Facetious, playful, funny, sprightly, frolicsome, sportive. Facetious is distinguished from the first four words in applying to the making of witticisms rather than to the continuous flow of contagious good humor easily breaking into laughter. If there is any difference between jolly and jovial, it is that the latter is rather the more dignified of the two. Mirthful and merry imply most of laughter, and jolly stands next in this respect. There is little difference between mirthful and merry, but the former may be the more dignified and the latter the more demonstrative. Merry expresses the largest and freest overflow of animal spirits. See Mirthful and mirth.

jolly (jol'i), adv. [< jolly, a., 5.] Remarkably; uncommonly; very; as, jolly awkward; jolly drunk. [Colloq., Eng.]

For he's a jolly good fellow,

Which nobody can deny.

Old chorus.

"What's singing?" said Tom. . . "Well, you are jolly green," answered his friend.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, l. 6.

jolly (jol'i), v. i. [< jolly, a.] To rejoice; make merry.

His hands and feet with riving nails they tent,
And, as to disenroll his soul they meant,
They jolly at his grief.

G. Fletcher, Christ's Triumph over Death.

jolly-boat (jol'i-bōt), n. [< jolly, accom. of Dan. jolle = Sw. julle = D. jol, a yawl (yawl) being an E. form of the D., + boat. See yawl.] A clincher-built boat smaller than a cutter, usually hoisted at the stern of a vessel, and used for hack-work. It is about 4 feet in beam and 12 feet in length, with a bluff bow and wide transom.

Five of us went a-fishing in the jolly-boat; . . . but leave to go ashore was refused.

R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 82.

jolly-boys (jol'i-bois), n. pl. A group of small drinking-vessels connected by a tube or openings from one to another. [Slang.]

jollyhead (jol'i-hed), n. [< jolly + -head.] A state of jollity; jolliness.

Deported of those joys and jolly-head,

Which with those gentle shepherds here I want to lead.

Spenser, F. Q., VI, xi, 22.

jolt (jōlt), v. [Prob. an extension (appar. through the pret. and pp. jolted: cf. jolthead) of joll, jole, jowl, knock the head against anything: see jowl, v. Cf. dolt, similarly related, through pp. dulled, to dull.] 1. trans. To shake with sudden jerks, as in a carriage on rough ground, or on a high-trotting horse.

Oh the most inhumane, barbarous Hackney-Coach! I am jolted to a jolly.

Congress, Old Bachelor, IV, 8.

II. intrans. To move with short, abrupt risings and fallings, as a carriage on rough ground; have a shaking or jerking motion.

He whipped the horses, the coach jolted again.

Johnson, Rambler, No. 34.

They were stiff with their long and jolting drive from Whitcross, and chilled with the frosty night air.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxxiv.

jolt (jōlt), n. [< jolt, v.] 1. A shock or shake by a sudden jerk, as in a carriage.

The first jolt had like to have shaken me out, but afterwards the motion was easy.

Swift.

My daughter Evelyn going in the coach to visit in the City, a jolt (the door being not fast shut) flung her quite out, in such manner as the hind wheels passed over her.

Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 12, 1888.

2. pl. Cabbage-plants that in the spring go to seed prematurely. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]

=Syn. 1. Collusion, Concussion, etc. See shock.

jolter (jōl'ter), n. One who or that which jolts.

jolterhead (jōl'ter-hed), n. Same as jolthead.

I would rather have my own ugly vileness than any of their jolterheads, that have no more brains in them than a brickbat.

Scott, Kenilworth, 2.

jolthead (jōlt'hed), n. [Formerly also jollit head; < jolt (appar. for jolted, pp. of jolt) + head; as if one whose head has been jolted against another's, or against the wall, in punishment of his stupidity.] 1. A stupid head; a brainless head. [Rare.]

He must then have . . . had a jolthead, and so there would not have been body and blood enough to supply his brain with spirits.

Grew.

2. A dunce; a blockhead.

Fie on thee, jolt-head! thou canst not read.

Shak., T. G. of V., III, 1, 291.

joltingly (jōl'ting-li), adv. In a jolting manner; so as to jolt or shake.

jombret, v. i. A variant of jumber.

jompri, v. i. See jumper.

Jonah (jō'ng), n. [In allusion to the Biblical story of Jonah the prophet, who, having disobeyed the divine command to go to Nineveh, and fled to Tarshish by sea, was overtaken by a storm and thrown overboard by the sailors. Hence sailors often profess to regard clergymen as "Jonahs." A person on shipboard regarded as the cause of ill luck; any one whose presence is supposed or alleged to cause misfortune.—Jonah trip, an unlucky or unsuccessful voyage.]

Jonathan (jon'a-than), n. [So called from the personal name Jonathan.] An instrument used by smokers to light their pipes with. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]—Brother Jonathan, a name applied to the people of the United States collectively: said to have originated in Washington's thus designating Jonathan Trumbull, a governor of Connecticut, on whose advice he placed great reliance.

jondla (jond'la), n. [E. Ind.] The Indian millet, Sorghum vulgare.

jongler, n. An obsolete form of juggler.

jongleriet, n. An obsolete form of jugglery.

jongleur (F. pron. zhōn-g'ler'), n. [OF.: see juggler.] In medieval France, and in England under the Norman kings, a minstrel who went from place to place singing songs, generally of his own composition and to his own accompaniment; later, a mountebank.

The jongleurs or jogelors (joculatores) were originally minstrels who could perform feats of sleight of hand, etc., but they soon became mere mountebanks, and the name became . . . a term of contempt.

Piers Plowman's Credo (E. E. T. S.), Notes, p. 34.

The lyrics of the jongleurs were all run in one mould, and the Pastourelles of northern France had become as artificial as the Pastorals of Pope.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 285.

jonquil (jon'kwil), n. [Also jonquilla, formerly also junquile; < F. jonquille = Sp. junquillo = Pg. jonquilha, m. = It. giunchiglia, f., jonquil; so called from the color and form of the plant, dim.]

< L. juncus, a rush: see Juncus, junk.] 1. An ornamental plant, the Narcissus jonquilla, of the natural order Amaryllidaceae; the rush-leaved daffodil. It is an early-blooming bulbous plant, with narrow, half-cylindrical leaves, the scapes bearing from 2 to 5 small, pale-yellow, fragrant flowers. Some other species of Narcissus are sometimes called jonquil, as N. odoratus, the sweet-scented jonquil, and N. calathinus, the great jonquil.

2. A light-yellow color of the Sevres porcelain; also, a similar color in other porcelains.—3. A variety of the domesticated canary-bird.

jook, jookery. See jouk, joukery.

joram, n. See forum.

Jordan (jōr'dan), n. [Also Jorden, and formerly Jur-dan, Jurdan; < ME. Jordan, Jurdan, an abbr. of Jordan-bottle, a bottle containing water from the river Jordan; < L. Jordanes, Jordanis, < Gr. Iōrdāns, = Ar. Urdunn, < Heb. Yarden, the river Jordan, < yardd, descend.]

1. A bottle in which pilgrims brought home water from the river Jordan.—2. A kind of pot or vessel formerly used by alchemists, in shape not unlike a soda-water bottle, only that the neck was wider.—3. A chamber-pot.

I pray to God so soon thy gentill corn,
And ake thyu urnals, and thy Jordanes (var. Jordones).

Chaucer, Prol. to Pardoner's Tale, l. 19.

4. [cap.] [Named after the river Jordan.] An obsolete constellation, formed by Jacob Bartsch in 1624 of the stars which later went to Lynx and Leo Minor.

Jordan almond (jōr'dan ā'mōnd), [*< ME. "jardayne almande, amigdalum jardinum" (Prompt. Parv.), i. e. garden almond: see *jardm, gardm, and almond.] See almond, 1.

Jordanite (jōr'dan-it), n. [Named after Dr. Jordan of Saarbrücken in Prussia.] A native sulphid of arsenic and lead occurring in orthorhombic crystals of a gray color and brilliant metallic luster: from the dolomite of the Binnenthal, or valley of Binn, canton of Valais, Switzerland.

Jordeloo. See garayloo.

Jornada (Sp. pron. hor-ná'dá), n. [Sp., = E. journey, q. v.] 1. A march or journey performed in a day.—2. The name given by the Mexicans to a long reach of desert country which has to be traversed, and where there is no water.

Jornay, jorney, n. Middle English forms of journey.

jornet, n. [Perhaps a contr. of jurkinet*, jerkinet: see jerkinet.] An outer garment for men, described in 1598 as worn over bright armor by the "Midsummer Watch" in London.

Constables, the one halfe in bright harness, some over gilt, and every one a jornet of scarlet thereupon, and his heuchman following him.

Stowe, London (1590), p. 75. (Nares.)

Jorum (jō'rum), n. [Also foram; origin unknown.] A bowl or drinking-vessel with liquor in it; also, the contents of such a vessel: as, to mix a orum of punch. [Colloq.]

An' here's to them that, like oursel',
Can push about the orum.

Burns, O May, thy Morn was ne'er as Sweet.

The host . . . returned with a steaming orum, of which the first gulp brought water into Mr. Bumble's eyes.

Dickens, Oliver Twist, xxxvii.

Joseph (jō'zef), n. [Prob. in allusion to Joseph's "coat of many colors" (Gen. xxxvii. 3).] A garment made like a man's great coat, usually with a broad cape, and buttoning down the front, worn in the eighteenth century and later by women when riding on horseback and on occasions of similar exposure; sometimes, also, a similar garment worn by men.

Olivia would be drawn as an Amazon, . . . dressed in a green Joseph, richly laced with gold, and a whip in her hand.

Goldsmith, Vicar, xvi.

In the dear fashions of her youth she dress'd;
A pea-green Joseph was her favourite vest.
Crabbe, Parish Register.

Joseph-and-Mary (jō'sef-and-mā'ri), n. [So called in ref. to the red and blue flowers which the plant produces at the same time, and which suggested the common pictures of the Holy Family, with Joseph in red and Mary in blue.] The lungwort, Pulmonaria officinalis. [Prov. Eng.] Josephine knot. See knot.

Joseph's-coat (jō'sefs-kōt'), n. A cultivated variety of Amarantus tricolor, with variegated leaves.

Joseph's-flower (jō'sefs-flou'ēr), n. The yellow goat's-beard, Tragopogon pratensis.

Joshua-tree (josh 'ō-jā-trē), n. A small tree, Yucca brevifolia, found in some elevated desert regions of the western United States.

joskin (jō's'kin), n. [Origin obscure.] A clownish fellow; a countryman. [Thieves' slang.]

joss (jōs), n. [Pidgin-Eng. corruption of Pg. deus, God; see deity.] A Chinese god or idol. Down with dukes, earls, and lords, those pagan josses, False Gods! Wolcott, Odes to Kien Long, ll.

Critick in jars and josses, shews her birth, Drawn, like the brittle ware, from earth.
Colman, Jealous Wife, Epil.

The object of the bell-ringing seemed to be to notify the whole population of the town that his Excellency the governor was communing with his joss. G. Kewman, The Century, XXXVIII, 78.

jossat, interj. [ME.; origin obscure. Cf. joss-block.] An address to horses, possibly meaning 'stand still.'

These sely clerkes rennen up and down
With "Kepe! stand! stand! josses wardenere."
Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, l. 141.

joss-block, jossing-block (jōs'blok, jōs'ing-blok), n. [Cf. jossu.] A horse-block. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

joss-house (jōs'hous), n. [Pidgin-Eng.] A Chinese temple or place of idol-worship; sometimes used by the Chinese for a Christian church.

joss-paper (jōs'pā'pēr), n. Pieces of gold or silver paper made into the shape of ingots of silver, and burned by the Chinese at funerals and before the shrines of certain of their gods.

joss-pidgin (jōs'plj'in), n. [Pidgin-Eng.] Any religious ceremony or ceremonies.—Joss-pidgin man, a priest or clergyman.

joss-stick (jōs'stik), n. A small stick or perfumed pastil consisting of a hardened paste made from the dust of various kinds of scented wood mixed with clay, used in Chinese temples and houses as incense before the idols, as a slow-match in measuring time at night, for lighting pipes, etc.

jostle (jōs'l), v.; pret. and pp. jostled, ppr. jostling. [Formerly also justle, joustle; freq. of jost, q. v.] 1. trans. 1. To push against; crowd against so as to render unsteady; elbow; hustle.

There are two rocks . . . which for that so near, as many times appearing but as one, they were fained by the Poets unstable, and at sundry times to jostle each other. Sandys, Travels, p. 81.

While I was walking daily in and out great crowds of men, I could not be quit of thinking how we jostle one another. R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, p. 616.

2. To check. Halliwell. [Slang.]

II. intrans. To hustle; shove and be shoved about, as in a crowd.

For the things of this World are like Epicurus his Atoms, always moving and jostling against another. Stillingfleet, Sermons, II, 111.

There was no common party race,
Jostling by dark intrigue for place.
Scott, Marmion, l. 1, Int.

A crowd that was jostling in with me at the pit-door of Covent Garden. Lamb, Elia, p. 171.

jostle (jōs'l), n. [Cf. jostle, v.] A pushing about or crowding; a shock or encounter.

In Fleet Street, received a great jostle from a man that had a mind to take the wall, which I could not help. Pepys, Diary, Feb. 8, 1660.

jostlement (jōs'l-ment), n. [Cf. jostle + -ment.] The act of jostling, hustling, or crowding aside. [Rare.]

Anybody who had seen him projecting himself into Boho while he was yet on St. Dunstan's side of Temple Bar, bursting in his full-blown way along the pavement, to the jostlement of all weaker people, might have seen how safe and strong he was. Dickens, Tale of Two Cities, ll. 12.

jot (jōt), n. [Early mod. E. also jote; < LL. jota, < Gr. iōta, the letter i; a very small thing, a jot, < Phen. (Heb.) yōdā, the letter so called, the smallest letter of the Hebrew alphabet, hence used proverbially āhōn something very small. See jota, l.] An iota; a point; a tittle; the least quantity assignable.

So weak's my power, so sore my wounds appear,
That wonder is how I should live a jot.
Spenser, Sonnets, lvi.

Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Mat. v. 18.

jot (jōt), v. t.; pret. and pp. jotted, ppr. jotting. [Cf. jot, n.] To set down quickly and with few strokes in writing or sketching; make a brief note or memorandum of: usually with down.

It would not be altogether becoming of me to speak of the domestic effects which many of the things which I have herein jotted down had in my own family.

jot (jōt), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. jotted, ppr. jotting. [Contr. of jolt.] To jog; jolt; bump; nudge. [Prov. Eng.]

Numbers beneath their axle-trees; who, lying in flight's stream,
Made th' after chariots jot and jump in driving over them.
Chapman, Iliad, xvi. 860.

jot (jōt), adv. [Cf. jot, v.] Plump; downright. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

jotet, n. An obsolete form of jot.

jotter (jōt'ēr), n. 1. One who jots, or makes brief notes or memoranda.—2. A book in which jottings or memoranda are made. Imp. Dict.

jotting (jōt'ing), n. [Verbal n. of jot, v.] A brief written note or remark; a memorandum.

Tut, your honour! . . . I'll make a slight jotting the morn'; it will cost but a charter of resignation in favorem; and I'll have it ready for the next term in Exchequer. Scott, Waverley, lxxi.

jotun (yō'tūn), n. [Dan., < Icel. jötunn = AS. ēotan, a giant.] In Scand. myth., one of a supernatural race of giants, enemies of the gods.

A great mist-jotun you will see Lifting himself up silently.
Lowell, Appledora.

joubarb (jō'bārb), n. [Also jobarbe; < F. joubarbe, < L. (ML.) Jovis barba, Jupiter's beard.] The house-leek, Sempervivum tectorum. Also called Jupiter's-beard.

jonga (jō'ga), n. [Cf. OF. joug, a yoke, < L. jugum = E. yoke.] An instrument of punishment formerly used in Scotland, consisting of an iron collar which surrounded the neck of the criminal, and was fastened to a wall or tree by an iron chain.

jouisance, jouissance (jō'i-sāns), n. [Early mod. E., < OF. (also F.) jouissance, enjoyment, < joir, joir, enjoy; see joy, v.] 1. Enjoyment; joy; mirth.

To see those folks make such jouissances,
Made my heart after the type to dance.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., May.

The time
Craves that we taste of nought but jouissances.
Greene, Frier Bacon and Frier Bungay.

2. In law, possession and use, as distinguishing from ownership.

jouk (jōk), v. t. [Also dial. juke; < ME. jouken, < OF. joquer, joquier, jokier, jochier, juchter, roost, lie down, F. jucher, Wall. joukt, roost, perch.] 1. To roost; perch.—2. To lie down; be flat.

For certes it non honour is to the
To wepe, and in thy bed in jouken thus.
Chaucer, Troilus, v. 400.

jouk (jōk), v. t. [Also juko; perhaps a dial. variation of duck; but cf. jouk, 2.] 1. To stoop or incline the body with a quick motion, or suddenly shift one's position so as to avoid or mitigate a blow, or conceal one's self; duck or dodge. [Scotch.]

Nae help was thairfor, nane wald jouk,
Feras was the fecht on ilka syde.
Battles of Harlaw (Child's Ballads, VII, 186).

I jouk beneath misfortune's blows.
Burns, To James Smith.

2. To bow or courtesy; make obeisance.

When within the hall he came,
He jouked and couch'd o'er his tree [staff].
John Thomson and the Turk (Child's Ballads, III, 854).

But why should we to nobles jouk?
Burns, Electon Ballads, l.

joukery, jookery (jō'kēr-i), n. [Cf. jouk + -ery.] Trickery; jugglery. [Scotch.]

I was so displeased by the jookerie of the baillie that we had no correspondence on public affairs till long after.

joukery-pawkery (jō'kēr-i-pā'kēr-i), n. [Cf. joukery + pawk extended with -ery, to assort with the first element.] Trickery; pawky cunning; hypocrisy. [Scotch.]

And then lay overthrown
Numbers beneath their axle-trees; who, lying in flight's stream,
Made th' after chariots jot and jump in driving over them.
Chapman, Iliad, xvi. 860.

joule (jou), n. [Named after J. P. Joule (born 1818), an English physicist.] An electrical unit proposed by Siemens. It is the work done in one second when the rate of working is one watt; in other words, that done in one second in maintaining a current of one ampere against a resistance of one ohm.

joule-meter (jou'l-mē'tēr), n. [Cf. joule + Gr. μέτρον, a measure.] Any form of energy-meter in which the joule is used as the unit of work or energy.

Joule's equivalent. Same as mechanical equivalent of heat (which see, under equivalent).

jounce (jouns), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. jounced, ppr. jouncing. [See jaunce, jaunt, v.] To jolt; shake, especially by rough riding. [Colloq.]

jounces (jouns), n. [See jaunce, jaunt, n.] A sudden, violent up-and-down jolting motion; a jolt or shake.

Here she made straight for a bench. . . sat herself down upon it with a jounce, as one has seen a child set down into a safe and penitential place out of some mischief.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

And on the xith tour of Pentecoste, the kynge satte at mete, and with hym the Duke of Tintagel.

jour (jūr), n. [ME., < OF. jour, for, F. jour = It. giorno, a day, daylight, an opening, < L. diurnus, daily; see diurn, journal.] 1. Day.

journalary (jér'nal-á-ri), a. [< [journal] + -ary].
Of the nature of a journal or diary. [Rare.]

That the propagation of Methodism hath occasioned many and great violations of peace, Mr. Wesley hath amply shown in the journalary history of his adventures.
Wardlaw, Doctrine of Grace, II. 9.

journal-bearing (jér'nal-bér'ing), n. In mach., the immediate support of an axle or a shaft. It usually consists of two parts, sometimes called the brasses, resting in a pillow-block and inclosed in the journal-box. There are many varieties, and all are connected with some lubricating device. See hydrostatic pivot, under hydrostatic.

Journal-bearing.
A, cap; B, pillow; C, D, screws with set nuts for adjustment.

journal-book (jér'nal-bók), n. A book for making daily records.
Shelf.

journal-box (jér'nal-boks), n. In mach.: (a) The bearings about a journal. (b) A cast-iron box which contains a car-axle journal, together with the journal-bearing and key, and the oil-packing with which the journal is lubricated. Also called housing-box.

journal-brass (jér'nal-brás), n. In mech., a bearing of a journal or an axle.

journalise, v. See journalize.

journalism (jér'nal-izm), n. [< F. journalisme = Sp. Pg. jornalismo, journalism; as journal + -ism]. 1. The business of a journalist; the occupation of writing for, editing, or producing a newspaper or public journal; the diffusion of intelligence or of opinions by means of journals or newspapers and periodicals.

The habits of journalism train one to a daily capacity of production.
D. J. Hill, Bryant, p. 144.

2. The keeping of a journal; the practice of journalizing. [Rare.]

journalist (jér'nal-ist), n. [< F. journaliste = Pg. jornalista = It. giornalista; as journal + -ist]. 1. The writer of a journal or diary.

The force with which he [Gama] went out is . . . circumstantially described by Herman Lopez de Castaneda, contemporary writer, and careful journalist of facts.
Mickle, Dissertation on the Lusitana, App.

2. A person who conducts a public journal or regularly writes for one; a newspaper editor, critic, or reporter.

journalistic (jér-ná-lis'tík), a. [< [journalist] + -ic]. Pertaining to journals or newspapers, or to journalism; descriptive or characteristic of journalism or journalists; as, journalistic literature; journalistic enterprise.

Mommsen's enemies have had much to say against the freedom of his style, which is supposed to be too journalistic.
Amer. Jour. Philol., VI. 483.

journalize (jér'nal-iz), v.; pret. and pp. journalized, ppr. journalizing. [< F. journaliser; as journal + -ize]. 1. trans. 1. To enter or record in a journal.

He kept his journal very diligently, but then what was there to journalize?
Johnson.

Specifically—2. In double-entry bookkeeping, to systematize and enter in the journal, preparatory to posting to the ledger.

II. intrans. 1. To keep or make entries in a journal; make a daily record of events or observations.

I have too much to attend to in my weak state to journalize.
Kane, Sec. Grinn. Exp., I. 230.

2. To take part in the preparation of a public journal; as, he is engaged in journalizing.

Also spelled journalise.

journal-packing (jér'nal-pák'ing), n. Waste cotton, wool, or other fibrous material, saturated with oil or grease, and placed in a journal-box to lubricate the axle. E. H. Knight.

journey, journeer, n. Obsolete forms of journey.
Thanne had she don al hir journe.
Rom. of the Rose, I. 570.

journey (jér'ni), n. [< ME. journee, journe, jorne, journey, jurnei, < OF. journee, jornee, jorneie, F. journée = Pr. Sp. jornada = It. giornata (ML. reflex jornata), < ML. diurnata (jornata, after Rom.), a day's work, a day's journey, a fixed day, a day, < L. diurnus, daily: see diurn, diurnal, journal. Cf. jornada.] 1. A day's work, occupation, or travel; a day of battle or of toil of any kind; hence, labor; work; service; task; trouble.

Thessus . . . conveyede the kynge worthily Out of his toune a journee lary.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 1880.

Thet hadde wasted and distroied that more than two journeyes sholde not have founde n[on] other house ne town that a man myght herberwe in.
Morte (E. E. T. S.), II. 292.

All the lordes that died at the journey are buried at St. Albanes.
Paston Letters.

For all the labour and journey is your.

Rom. of Partney (E. E. T. S.), Int., I. 141.

2. A course of travel or transit, as from one place to another, or indefinitely from point to point in space or time: as, a journey from London to Paris or to Rome; a week's journey; the journey of life.

So atte last they come to the village,
Ther for to rest as for a nyghtis space.
A dayes Journey owt of the kynge place.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), I. 230.

Some, having a long journey from the upper regions, would float up and down a good while.

T. Burnet, Theory of the Earth.

This same philosophy is a good horse in the stable, but an arrant jade on a journey.

Goldsmith, Good-natured Man, I. 1.

I know not whether the exact limits of an excursion, as distinguished from a journey, have ever been fixed.

H. James, Jr., Little Tour, p. 73.

3. In glass-making, a single cycle or round of work, in which the raw materials are converted into glass, and the glass is withdrawn from the pots in which it has been melted; the time employed in converting a certain quantity of material into glass.—4. The weight of finished coins delivered simultaneously to the master of the British mint. This journey or journey-weight, on which the trial of the pyx depends, is understood to be what could be completed in a day when the operations of coining were done by hand. Its amount is 15 pounds troy of gold (coined into 701 sovereigns, or 1,402 half-sovereigns) or 60 pounds troy of silver.

The blanks (in minting) are weighed . . . in drafts of about 720 ounces, and placed in bags; each bag, therefore, contains four journeys of about 180 ounces each.

Ure, Dict., III. 347.

Day's journey. See day's.—Journey's account, an early English writ, originally allowed for the revival of an action which had abated without plaintiff's fault; so called because the Court of Chancery which issued it being itinerant and the plaintiff being required to apply immediately, he had to give an account of his journey to obtain it, so as to show that he had not delayed.—Sabbath-day's journey, among the ancient Jews, the distance which a Jew might lawfully traverse on the sabbath day. It was a very short journey—supposed to represent the space left between the ark and the tents when the Israelites were encamped in the wilderness, said to be about 2,000 Hebrew yards.

Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.
Acts I. 12.

Josephus (War, v. 2, 3) makes the Mount of Olives to be about six stadia from Jerusalem; and it is the distance between these two places which in Acts I. 12 is given as a Sabbath-day's journey.

McClintock and Strong, Cyc. Bib. Lit., IX. 180.

To go a journey. See go, Byn. 2. Journey, Travel, Voyage, Trip, Tour, Excursion, Pilgrimage. Journey is a rather general word, yet journeys are usually of considerable length, without implication as to the time of return. Travel is the common word for journeys taken for pleasure in sight-seeing, etc., for education, or for the transaction of business: as, the benefits of foreign travel; a line of travel. Voyage in Chaucer's time (C. T., Foul., I. 723, etc.), and later (Milton, P. L., II. 918) meant journey, but is now limited to a considerable passage by sea: as, to make a voyage round the world. A trip is a comparatively short journey: as, our trip across the ocean. A tour is a journey that makes a round, stopping here and there and returning to the starting-point: as, the usual Scotch tour. An excursion is a limited trip or journey, taken for pleasure, to some point or points of interest: as, an excursion down the bay, or to the Yellowstone Park. We speak of a journey, voyage, etc., and of travels, but not of a travel. A pilgrimage is a journey to a place hallowed by religious or other sacred or tender associations: as, a pilgrimage to the old home. See pilgrim.

Journey (jér'ni), v. i. [< ME. journeyen; < journey, n.] To make a journey; travel; go from place to place.

The men which journeyed with him stood speechless.
Acts ix. 7.

My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home.
Shak., Rich. III., II. 2, 143.

journey-bated (jér'ni-bá'ted), a. Fatigued or worn out with a journey.

So are the horses of the enemy
In general journey-bated and brought low.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iv. 3, 23.

journeyer (jér'ni-ér), n. One who journeys; a traveler.

The mortal journeyer through this unknown space must have been thrown down with violence, had he not been upheld by his supernatural companion.
Scott, Monastery, xli.

journeyman (jér'ni-man), n.; pl. journeymen (-men). [< journey, n., I. + man]. 1. A man hired to work by the day; a day-worker.—2. A workman or mechanic who has served his apprenticeship; specifically, a qualified mechanic employed in the exercise of his trade, as distinguished from a master mechanic or a foreman.

O, there be players that . . . have so strutted and bel-lowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.
Shak., Hamlet, III. 2, 26.

Among the Tailors of Silicia we find that in 1861 the system of journeymen travelling in search of work was already completely organized.

English Golds (E. E. T. S.), Int., p. cxli.

Journeymen parson, a curate. [London slang.]

He once told a parson, or a journeymen parson, I don't know what he was, that if over he prayed it was for a hard winter. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 133.

Journey-ring (jér'ni-ring), n. A portable sundial of round form. See ring-dial.

Journey-weight (jér'ni-wát), n. Same as journey, 4.

Journeywoman (jér'ni-wóm'an), n.; pl. journeymen (-wim'en). A woman hired by the day.

No journeymen sempstresses is half so much a slave as I am.
Fielding, Miser, I. 2.

An Over Seer, who walk'd about with a very flexible Weapon of Offence, to Correct such Humpen Journey Women who were unhappily troubled with the Spirit of Idleness.
Quoted in J. Ashton's Social Life in Belgu of [Queen Anne, II. 240.]

Journey-work (jér'ni-wérk), n. 1. Work done by the day.—2. Work done for hire by a mechanic in his trade.

The kindred and masters are extremely careful of breeding him to industry, that he may repay it himself by his labour, in three years' journey-work after his time is out, for the use of his securities.
Steele, Spectator, No. 544.

Joist, jouster, etc. See joist, etc.

Joistler, v. An obsolete form of joistic.

Joistest, n. pl. [ME., also joistes, jules, coovius, < OF. joiste, < ML. jula, jutta, a kind of broth or porridge; prob. of Celtic origin, < Bret. tot = W. wed = OIr. ith, porridge.] A kind of broth or porridge.

I was the piousness potage and other poure ladyes,
And made hem joistes of languynge.
Piers Plowman (B), v. 158.

Jove (jöv), n. [< ME. Jove, Jovis (AS. Inb) = It. Giove, < L. Jovis, OL. also Jovos, in classical L. only in oblique cases, gen. Jovis, etc., the nom. being supplied by the compound Jupiter, Juppiter, OL. Jovpiter: see Jupiter and Zeus.] 1. The highest god of the Romans; Jupiter; the supreme ruler of heaven and earth, manifesting himself especially in atmospheric phenomena: as, Jove's thunderbolts. See Jupiter.

See what a grace was seated on his brow:
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself.
Shak., Hamlet, III. 4, 56.

2. The planet Jupiter. [Poetical.]
Or ask of yonder argent fields above
Why Jove's satellites are less than Jove.
Pope, Essay on Man, I. 42.

St. [L. c.] In alchemy, the metal tin.—Bird of Jove, the eagle.

Joves (jövz), n. pl. [Origin not ascertained.] In fort, the two sides in the epaulment of a battery which form the embrasure. Wilhelm, Mil. Dict.

Jove's-fruit (jövz'früt), n. A shrub, Lindera molnauifolia, native in the United States, and related to wild allspice.

Jove's-nuts (jövz'nuts), n. pl. The acorns of the British oak, Quercus robur. [Prov. Eng.]

Jovial (jöv'i-ál), a. [< F. jovial = Sp. Pg. jovial = It. joviale, < LL. Jovialis, equiv. to Jovius, of or pertaining to Jove or Jupiter, < Jovis, Jove: see Jove.] 1. Pertaining to or characteristic of the god Jove or Jupiter; Jove-like; powerful; majestic: as, Jovial attributes.

His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—Murder in heaven?—How?—This gone.
Shak., Cymbeline, IV. 2, 311.

Thou Jovial hand, hold up thy scepter high.
Heywood, Rape of Lucrece.

2. Of or pertaining to the planet Jupiter: as, the Jovial satellites.

Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.
Shak., Cymbeline, v. 4, 103.

3. In astrol., under the influence of the planet Jupiter; derived from Jupiter as a natal planet, which, like Jove himself, was regarded as the source of joy and happiness: as, the Jovial temperament.

The fixed stars are astrologically differentiated by the planets, and esteemed Martial or Jovial according to the colours whereby they answer these planets.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err.

Hence—4. [I. c.] Characterized by cheerfulness or gaiety; joyous; merry; jolly; opposed to grave: as, a jovial fellow.

On him they call, the aptest mate
For jovial song and merry feat.
Scott, Rokeby, 22. 14.

He had a cheerful open exterior, a quick jovial eye.
Lamb, Two Races of Men.
 And there is no jovial companionship equal to that where the jokes are rather small and the laughter abundant.
Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 261.
St. [l. c.] In alchemy, or of pertaining to tin.
—Syn. & Ant., etc. See Jolly.
jovialist (jō'vi-əl-ist), n. [l. c.] A person of jovial character or disposition.
[Rare.]
 O brave and spirited! he's a right Jovialist.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 2.
joviality (jō'vi-əl-ī-ti), n. [l. c.] Jovialité (= Sp. jovialidad = Fr. jovialité = It. giovialità), jovialness; as jovial + -ity. The state or quality of being jovial; jovial conduct or amusement; merriment; jollity; festivity.
 The first day vapours away in tobacco, feasts, and other joviality.
Sir T. Herbert, Travels in Africa, p. 308.
 The old manor house . . . seemed echoing back the joviality of long departed years.
Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 289.
—Syn. Joy, Glee, etc. (see Jollity); gaiety, jollity, jocularly, sportiveness.
jovialize (jō'vi-əl-īz), v. t.; prot. and pp. jovialized, ppr. jovializing. [l. c.] To make jovial; cause to be merry or jolly.
 An activity that jovialized us all.
Mrs. D'Arbigny, Diary, I. 364.
jovially (jō'vi-əl-ī), adv. In a jovial manner; merrily; gaily; with jollity.
jovialness (jō'vi-əl-nēs), n. Joviality; gaiety; jollity.
 Swearing, with such persons, is but a grace and lustre to their speech: lying, but wit's craft or policy; drunkenness, jovialness or good fellowship:—thus do they baptize vice by the name of virtue.
Heynt, Sermons (1658), p. 82.
jovialty (jō'vi-əl-ti), n. [l. c.] Joviality. [Rare.]
 To think that this perhaps might be the last banquet they should taste of . . . could not but somewhat spoil the gust of their highest delicacies, and disturb the sport of their loudest jovialities.
Barnes, Works, III. xiv.
Jovian (jō'vi-ən), a. [After LL. Jovianus, of Jovius, a surname of Diocletian, < L. Jovis, Jove: see Jove.] Of or pertaining to the god Jove or the planet Jupiter; Jovial.
jovianic (jō'vi-ən-īk), a. [l. c.] Jovian, Jove, Jupiter, + centrum, center.] In astron., having relation to Jupiter as a center.
jovilate (jō'vi-lāb), v. [l. c.] Jovis, Jove, Jupiter, + -labe, as in astrolabe.] An instrument for finding the apparent situations of Jupiter's satellites.
Jovianist (jō'vin-ī-ən-ist), n. [l. c.] Jovianista, < Jovianus, a man's name, < L. Jovius, of Jove, < Jovis, Jove: see Jove.] Eccles., one of a short-lived sect, adherents of Jovianus, a Milanese monk of the fourth century, who at Rome opposed the prevalent esteem for celibacy, monasticism, fasting, and martyrdom, and maintained the equality of all sins, rewards, and punishments. He was excommunicated about 360, and went to Milan.
jovv (jō'vi), a. [l. c.] Jovius, of Jove or Jupiter: see Jove, jovial.] Jovial; gay.
 Pss. I'll have the Jovial Tinker for To-Pan's sake.
Twelfth. We'll all be jovv this day.
B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, I. 2.
 I was a poor servant of hers, I must confess, sir, And in those days I thought I might be jovv, And make a little bold to call in to her.
Mitcher, Wildgoose Chase, III. 1. jow, n. An obsolete variant of jawl. Chaucer.
jow (jou), v. [Said to be imitative; but prob. merely a Sc. form of jowl, v.] I. trans. To strike (a bell); toll; ring. [Scot.].—To jow out, to ring; set ringing, as a bell.
 If you'll just gar your servant jow out the great bell in the tower, there's me and my twa brothers . . . will be wi' you.
Scott, Black Dwarf, II.
II. intrans. To toll, as a bell. [Scot.].
 Now Clinkumbell, wi' rattlin' tow,
 Begins to jow and croon.
Burns, Holy Fair.
 To jow in, to be rung rapidly, as a bell at the close of a peal.
 There is the council-bell clinking in earnest; and if I am not there before it jows in, Balfie Laurie will be trying some of his manoeuvres.
Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. 2.
jow (jou), n. [l. c.] The stroke of a bell; a ringing. [Scot.].
 Every jow that the dead-bell gaid,
 It cry'd "Woe to Barbara Allen!"
Bonny Barbara Allen (Child's Ballads, II. 156).
 The look of those old familiar houses, the jow of the old bell, went to my heart.
Coryell, in Froude.
jowder (jou'dér), n. Same as jowler. [Prov. Eng.] jowli, n. A Middle English form of jewel. jowl (jōl or joul), n. [Also joll, joie, and formerly geoule; < ME. jolle, a var. (with change of orig.

ch to j, as also in jar, ajar] of chowl, < ME. choul, chaul, a contr. of chavel, < ME. chavel (chavel), < AS. ceaf, jaw, pl. ceafas, jaw: see chavel.] 1. The cheek.
 I found after some time that the merit of his wit was founded upon the shaking of a fat paunch, and the tossing up of a pair of rusty jowls.
Beale, Guardian, No. 42.
 2. The cheek or head of a pig, salmon, etc., prepared for the table: as, jowl and greens is a Virginia dish. [Now only local.]
 You shall receive by this Carrier a great Wicker Hamper, with two Geoules of Sturgeon, six Barrels of pickled Oysters.
Hovell, Letters, I. v. 15.
 Sirrah, set by a chine of beef, and a hot pasty, And let the joll of sturgeon be corrected.
Fletcher (and others), Bloody Brother, II. 1.
Cheek by jowl. See cheek.
jowl, joll (jōl), v. [Also jole; < late ME. jollen, scold; appar. orig. slap or knock the cheek or head, < jowl, joll, the cheek: see jowl, n.] I. trans. To strike or dash, as the jowl or head; butt; clash with violence, as horns. [Obsolete or archaic.]
 They may jowl horns together, like any deer I'll the herd.
Shak., All's Well, I. 3. 59.
 Why, how now? shall we have an antic? Whose head do you carry upon your shoulders, that you joll it so against the post?
Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, II. 1.
II. intrans. 1. To scold; "jaw."
 Take heed to yourse lordis estate,
 That none jangill nor jolle at my gate.
York Plays, p. 207.
 Her father o' th' other side, he joles at her and joles at her, and she leads such a life for you, it passes.
Why Beguiled (Hawkins's Eng. Drama, III. 342).
 2. In coal-mining, to hammer on the coal for the purpose of ascertaining what thickness intervenes between two contiguous workings.
[Eng.]
jowler (jō'lér or jou'lér), n. [So called in ref. to its thick jowls; < jowl + -er.] A strong- or heavy-jawed dog, as a hound, beagle, or other hunting-dog; hence used as a name for such a dog.
 What gravity can hold from laughing out,
 To see him drag his feeble legs about,
 Like hounds ill-coupled? Jowler lugs him still Through hedges, ditches, and through all that's ill.
Dryden, Essay on Satire.
 Get out a horsewhip or a jowler,
 The longest thong, the fiercest growler.
Burns, Address of Beelzebub.
jowl, jowl, jowl, n. See jowl.
jowler (jou'tér), n. [Also jowder, appar. a dial. var. of jowler.] One who carries fish about the country for sale; a fish-hawker; a cadger.
[Eng.]
 Mr. Penruddock gave a spiteful hit, being, as he said, of a cantankerous turn, to Mr. Troloudder, principal jowler, i. e. fish-salesman, of Aberlady.
Kingsley, Two Years Ago, xiv.
joy (joi), n. [ME. joye, joie, < OF. joie, joye, joy, pleasure, also F. joie, joy, assimilated form of joie, goye, goy, a gaud, jewel, = Pr. joie, m., joia, f., = Sp. joya, a gaud, jewel, = Pg. joia = It. gioia, joy, a jewel, < ML. gaudia, f., joy, a jewel, orig. neut. pl. of L. gaudium, joy, < gaudere, rejoice: see gaud.] Hence ult. joy, v., enjoy, rejoice, jewel, etc.] 1. An emotion of pleasure, generally sudden, caused by the gratification of any passion or desire; ardent happiness arising from present or expected good; exultant satisfaction; exhilaration of spirits; gladness; delight.
 When Gawein vndirstode the speche of his brother, he hadde of hym hertely joye, and moche he hym preyed.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), II. 184.
 So the joy, and the sense of salvation, which the pure in heart have here, is not a joy severed from the joy of heaven, but a joy that begins in us here, and continues.
Donne, Sermons, 2.
 To know intense joy without a strong bodily frame, one must have an enthusiastic soul.
George Eliot, Middlemarch, I. 306.
 Joy finds expression in dancing, clapping the hands, and meaningless laughter, and these actions are not only pleasurable in themselves but such as increase the existing pleasure.
J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 72.
 2. A source of enjoyment or rejoicing; that which causes gladness or happiness.
 So wilde a beast so tame taught to bee,
 And buxome to his bands, is joy to see.
Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, I. 632.
 Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion.
Ps. xlviii. 2.
 For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.
Shak., Hamlet, IV. 5. 180.
 A thing of beauty is a joy forever.
Keats, Endymion, I.
St. Diversion; festivity.
 And when thei dyen, thei maken gret Feste and gret Joye and Revelle, and thanne thei casten hem in to a gret Fyrr breunynge.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 298.

4. An occasional name of the plant Ranunculus acris.—To give one joy, to congratulate or felicitate one: as, I give you joy of your success.—Syn. 1. Pleasure, Delight, etc. (see gladness); Glee, etc. (see Jollity); happiness, felicity, rapture, bliss.
joy (joi), v. [ME. joyen, joien, < OF. joir, joir (F. joir), assimilated form of joir = Pr. gaudir, jausir, gausir = Sp. Pg. gozar = Oit. gaudire, It. gaudere, < L. gaudere, rejoice: see gaud.] and cf. joy, n., enjoy, rejoice, etc.] I. intrans. To take or feel joy; rejoice; be glad; exult. [Now chiefly poetical.]
 I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people.
Isa. lrv. 19.
 Singing and murmuring in her feastful mirth,
 Joying to feel herself alive.
Tennyson, Palace of Art.
II. trans. 1. To give joy to; cause to rejoice; gladden; delight.
 Neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits.
Shak., Pericles, I. 2. 9.
 Your worship's heartily welcome;
 It joys my very heart to see you here, sir.
Fletcher (and another), Queen of Corinth, II. 4.
 2. To enjoy; possess with pleasure, or have pleasure in the possession of.
 And let her joy her raven-colour'd love.
Shak., Tit. And., II. 3. 83.
 We will strive to show how much we joy
 Your presence with a courtly show of mirth.
Ford, Love's Sacrifice, III. 4.
 Who might have liv'd and joy'd immortal bliss.
Milton, P. L., ix. 1186.
 3. To wish joy to; felicitate; congratulate.
 "Sir," said Merlin, "I wolde ye dide joy and honour these lordes that here be assembled to defende youre reame, and goth to theire tentes ech by hym-self, and thanke hem for the accour that thei haue brought."
Martin (E. E. T. S.), III. 579.
 As soon as Secretary Morrice brought the Great Seal from my Lord Chancellor, Bab. May fell upon his knees, and caught the King about his legs, and joyed him, and said that this was the first time that ever he could call him King of England, being freed from this great man.
Peggs, Diary, III. 300.
joyance (joi'ans), n. [OF. joyance, joiance, < joyant, joiant, ppr. of joir, joy, rejoice: see joy, v.] Enjoyment; rejoicing; festivity; gladness. [Archaic.]
 She cheerfull, fresh, and full of joyances glad,
 As if no sorrow she ne felt ne drad.
Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 18.
 Is it a matter of joyance to those who and sober personages that the government which reared and nurtured them to all their wisdom and sobriety . . . should be now extinct?
Landor.
joy-bells (joi'belz), n. pl. Bells rung on a festive occasion.
joyful, n. A Middle English form of jewel.
joyful (joi'fūl), a. [ME. joyful, joyfull; < joy, n., + -ful.] 1. Full of joy; very glad; feeling delight; exulting.
 Grotly was the kyng at that feaste, and joyfull and mery.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), I. 66.
 2. Manifesting joy or rejoicing; arising from or expressing gladness; exultant.
 Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands.
Ps. lxxi. 1.
 Thou, too, great father of the British floods!
 With joyful pride survey at our lofty woods.
Pope, Windsor Forest, I. 230.
 3. Causing joy or gladness; giving happiness; delightful; as, a joyful sight.
 If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
 My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.
Shak., R. and J., v. 1. 2.
 The joyful morning appearing, they found their Boat and goods drive ashore, not farre from them.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 98.
—Syn. 1. Festive, blithe, gay, joyous, happy, glad, delighted.
joyfully (joi'fūl-ī), adv. [ME. joyfully; < joyful + -ly.] In a joyful manner; with joy; gladly.
 As I ryse up lustily when sluggish sleepe is past,
 So hope I to ryse joyfully to judgement at the last.
Goswold, Flowers, Good Night.
joyfulness (joi'fūl-nēs), n. The state of being joyful; gladness; lively happiness.
 The King with his Son returns into England, where with all joyfulness they were received.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 55.
joying (joi'ing), n. [ME. joynge; verbal n. of joy, v.] Joy; rejoicing.
 Heen, my king and my joying!
 Wilt we were y to thee led?
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 23.
joyingly, adv. [ME. joyningly; < joying, ppr. of joy, v., + -ly.] Joyfully.
 If thi body were but bigoon,
 What bitter medecyn gotten thee wore,
 Joyingly thou woldist it take anon,
 Thi bodily hale thee to restore.
Poetical Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 192.

joyless (joi'les), a. [< ME. joyles, joiles; < joy, n., + -less.] 1. Destitute of joy; having no joy; sad.

With a joyless smile she turns away
The face. Shak., Lucrèce, I. 1711.
With downcast eyes the joyless victor sat.
Dryden, Alexander's Feast.

2. Affording no joy or pleasure.

A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful lane.
Shak., Tit. And., iv. 2. 66.
Climb thy thick noon, joyless day;
Touch thy dull goal of joyless gray.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxii.

joylessly (joi'les-ly), adv. In a joyless manner; without joy.

joylessness (joi'les-ness), n. The state of being joyless.

In comparison of the joylessness and the ingloriousness of this world.
Donna, Devotions (1626), p. 426.

joyousant, a. A Middle English form of joyant.

joyant, n. An obsolete form of join.

joyous (joi'us), a. [< ME. joyous, < OF. joyous, joyous, F. joyeux (= Pr. joyos = It. gioioso, joyous), < joie, joy: see joy, n.] 1. Feeling or manifesting joy; joyful; glad; merry.

Her berth was of the wombe of Morning dew,
And her conception of the joyous Prime.
Spenser, F. Q., III. vi. 3.
Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs Whisper'd it to the woods. Milton, P. L., viii. 516.
To admire the great, reverence the good, and be joyous with the good, was very much the bent of Shirley's soul.
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xli.

2. Causing joy; making glad.

A harder lesson to learn Contenance
In joyous pleasure than in grievous pains.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 1.
Each object of the joyous scene around Vernal delight inspires. J. Warton, Eclogues, II.

-Syn. See list under joyful.

joyously (joi'us-ly), adv. In a joyous manner; with joy or gladness.

joyousness (joi'us-ness), n. The state of being joyous.

joysome (joi'sum), a. [< joy + -some.] Causing or inspiring gladness; joyful.

Nearer to the end of this all joyous grove.
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, II. 2.

J. P. An abbreviation of Justice of the Peace.

Here at any rate lived and stopped at home Squire Brown,
J. P. for the County of Berks.
T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, I. 1.

Jr., jr. An abbreviation of junior.

Juanulloa (jū-an-u-lō'), n. [NL. (Ruiz and Pavon, 1794), named after Juan and Ulloa, Spanish scientists, who visited South America to measure the meridian.] A genus comprising 6 or 7 species of shrubs of the order Solanaceae, some of them epiphytes, found in Peru, Colombia, and Central America. The flowers have a colored calyx and a short-lobed corolla, its tube sometimes contracted at the throat. They are solitary or loosely cymose. The leaves are coriaceous and entire, and the fruit is a berry. Several species, especially J. parsonsii, are cultivated in conservatories.

jub (jub), n. [< ME. jubbe; origin obscure. Cf. juy.] A vessel for holding liquors.

Breed and chose and good ale in a jubbe.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, I. 442.

jub, n. Same as jupon. Florio.

juba (jū'bā), n.; pl. jubas (-bē). [= OF. juba = Pg. juba = It. giubba, < L. juba, the flowing hair on the neck of an animal, the mane.] 1. In zool., the long, thick-set hair on the neck, chest, or back of certain quadrupeds; a mane. —2. In bot., a loose panicle with the axis deliquescent; also, a dense cluster of awns, as in the spikes of some grasses. [Rare.]

juba (jū'bā), n. [Negro.] A characteristic dance of the plantation negroes in the southern United States. It is performed by one or more dancers, and is accompanied in a rickling manner by the spectators, who keep time by clapping the hands, slapping or patting the knee or thigh (called patting juba), tapping the ground with the foot, and occasionally joining in a childish refrain in which the word juba is often repeated. It is an invariable feature in the negro breakdown.

The juba-dance and the corn-shucking were equally invested with elements of the unreal and the grotesque, where the flickering and shifting lights of the unconventional lantern touched the dusky faces.
The Century, XXXVI. 770.

Nearly every Negro above the average is a hymn-maker, or at least co-operates with others in the production of hymns, songs, plantation rhymes, "corn-shucking" glees, "jubas," and the like.
Proc. of Amer. Philol. Ass., 1885, p. xxxiii.

juba-patting (jū'bā-pat'ing), n. The patting of the knee or thigh practised by negroes in keeping time to the juba-dance. [Southern U. S.]

To . . . have the negro urchins dance for them to the juba-patting of a presumptive Uncle Tom.
The Century, XXXVIII. 152.

Juba's-bush, Juba's-brush (jū-bā's-bush, -brush), n. The plant Iresine colostoides.

jubate (jū'bāt), a. [< L. jubatus, maned, < juba, mane: see juba.] Having a mane; having long pendent hairs in a continuous series, like a mane.

jubbah (jub'g), n. [Hind. jubbah, < Ar. jubbah, jubbah, a garment so called. Hence ult. E. jupe, jupon.] A long outer garment, usually of cloth, similar to the caftan, but with shorter sleeves and open in front, worn by respectable Mohammedans in Egypt, Arabia, and Hindustan. As the outer garment of Moslem women, it is made less full than that of the men, and commonly of more delicate material. Among the wealthier classes it is often of velvet or silk, and embroidered with silver or gold.

My Alexandrine Shaykh, whose heart fell victim to a new jubbah, which I had given in exchange for his tattered maubut.
R. F. Burton, El-Mednash, p. 30.

jubbet, n. A Middle English form of jub.

jube (jū'bē), n. [F. jube; < L. jube, 2d pers. sing. impv. of jubere, bid, command: this being the first word of the sentence, jube Domino benedicere, 'Sir, bid bless me,' used by the reader in requesting the priest's blessing before the gospel and lessons, which were chanted in the rood-loft.] 1. In a cathedral or church, the rood-loft or gallery over the entrance to the choir. See cut under rood-loft. —2. Sometimes, an ambo.

jubilance (jū'bi-lāns), n. [< jubilan(t) + -ce.] Gladness; exultation; jubilation.

She saw a jubilance in every sunrise, a sober sadness in every sunset.
George MacDonald, What's Mine's Mine, xxv.
The hymn rose with a solemn jubilance, filling the little house.
M. N. Murrell, Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains, x.

jubilant (jū'bi-lant), a. [= F. jubilant, < L. jubilans (-tis), ppr. of jubilar, shout for joy, < jubulum, a shout of joy, a shout: see jubilate.] 1. Rejoicing, as with songs or acclamations; uttering sounds or expressions of joy: as, to be jubilant over success.

While the bright pomp [train of beings] ascended jubilant.
Milton, P. L., vii. 564.
The night-birds all that hour were still,
But now they are jubilant anew.
Coleridge, Christabel, I. Concl.

2. Expressing or exciting joy; manifesting or denoting exultation or gladness.

The tone of sorrow is mournful and plaintive; the notes of joy, exulting and jubilant. Sp. Morse, Works, VI. II.
Great organs surged through arches dim
Their jubilant floods in praise of him.
Lowell, A Parable.

-Syn. Exultant, triumphant.

jubilantly (jū'bi-lant-ly), adv. In a jubilant manner; with manifestations of joy; exultingly.

jubilant (jū'bi-lānt), a. [= F. jubilant = Pg. jubilante, < ML. jubilantius, one who served fifty years, prop. adj., irreg. < L. jubileum, jubelant, the year of jubilee among the Jews: see jubilee.] Relating to or having the character of a jubilee.

The tenth compleat year of our Constantine [James I.] deserves to be solemn and jubilant.
Sp. Hall, Holy Panegyricke, Sermons, vi.

jubilare (jū'bi-lāt), v. i.; prot. and pp. jubilatus, ppr. jubilans. [< L. jubilatus, ppr. of jubilar, > It. giubilare, giubilare = Pg. Sp. jubilar = F. jubiler, shout for joy, < jubulum, a wild cry, ML. jubulus (> MHG. jūbilus, G. jubel = D. Dan. Sw. jubel), a cry of joy. Cf. jubilee, etym., at the end.] To utter jubilant sounds or expressions; rejoice; exult.

Hope jubilating cries aloud. Carlyle, French Rev., I. v. i.
The hurrahs were yet ascending from our jubilating lips.
De Quincey, Autobiog. Sketches, II.

Instead of jubilating over the extent of the enemy's retreat, it will be more worth while to lay siege to his last stronghold.
Huxley, Critiques and Addresses, p. 242.

Jubilare (jū'bi-lāt), n. [L., 2d pers. pl. impv. of jubilar, shout for joy: see jubilate.] 1. In the Anglo-Saxon liturgy, the canticle or psalm (Ps. c.) that follows the second lesson in the morning service: so called from the first word of the Latin version. —2. A musical setting of this canticle. —3. The third Sunday after Easter: so called from the 66th Psalm (which in the Vulgate begins with the same words as the 100th) being used as the introlit on that day.

jubilare (jū'bi-lāt), n. [*< ML. jubilaris (?), equiv. to jubilarius, one who has served fifty years, irreg. < L. jubilans, jubilee: see jubilee.] A monk, canon, or doctor who has served fifty years. E. Phillips, 1706.

jubilatio (jū'bi-lā'shi-ō), n. [NL.: see jubilatio.] In Rom. Cath. music, the melodic coda often appended to the gradual, and sung to the last syllable of the "halleluiahs." See sequence. Also jubilus.

jubilation (jū'bi-lā'shon), n. [= F. jubilation = Sp. jubilation = Pg. jubilação = It. giubilazione, giubilazione, < L. jubilatio(n-), a shouting for joy, < L. jubilar, shout for joy: see jubilate.] The act of jubilitating or exulting; a rejoicing; exultation; triumph.

Honour, empire, and jubilant shout
To Jesus Christ in special thanks.
Palladius, Hushondrie (E. E. T. A.), p. 120.

At the conversion of one sinner there is jubilation, and a festival kept among the angels.
J. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 45.

jubilee (jū'bi-lē), n. [< ME. jubilee, jubile, < OF. jubile, F. jubilé = Pr. jubileu = Sp. jubileo = Pg. jubileo, jubileu = It. giubileo, giubileo, giubileo, jubileo = D. jubileum = G. jubelium (jubel-jahr) = Dan. jubileum = Sw. jubileum = Russ. jubilet, < L. jubilaus, the jubilee year, prop. adj. (see annus), of the jubilee, < Heb. yōbēl, a blast of a trumpet, a shout of joy, the year of jubilee announced by a blast of the trumpet. Note that jubilee is of Heb. origin, and has no connection with the L. jubulum, a wild cry, ML. jubulus, a cry of joy, L. jubilar, shout for joy, whence E. jubilate, jubilate, etc. The words have been more or less confused in E. and Rom.] 1. Among the ancient Jews, according to the law in Lev. xxv., a semi-centennial epoch of general restoration and emancipation, when liberty was to be proclaimed throughout the land with the blowing of trumpets. The year of jubilee was the fiftieth year — each being separated from that which preceded it by an interval of "seven sabbaths of years," or forty-nine years. In that year the land was not tilled, all lands that had been sold were restored to the original owners or their heirs, and all bondsmen of Hebrew blood were liberated. Whether all debts were canceled, as is commonly supposed, is uncertain; there is no express provision to that effect.

A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be. Lev. xxv. 11.

2. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., a year in which remission from the penal consequences of sin is granted by the church to those who repent and perform certain acts. The ordinary jubilee is now granted once in twenty-five years. Extraordinary jubilees are sometimes proclaimed on special occasions. The institution dates from 1300, in the pontificate of Boniface VIII., the interval being then fixed at one hundred years, and plenary indulgence granted to all who visited the churches of St. Peter and St. Paul at Rome for a certain number of days with offerings. The period was shortened successively to fifty, thirty-three, and twenty-five years, and certain works of charity and devotion were substituted for the pilgrimage to Rome.

3. Now, in general, the completion of the fiftieth year of any continuous course of existence or activity, or a celebration of the completion of fifty years, whether on the anniversary day or in a succession of festivities or observances: as, the jubilee of a town or of a pastorate; the jubilee of Queen Victoria.

Our sixtieth and ours seventieth,
That has ben twelve freres fifty year —
They may now, God be thanked of his loons, Maken hiv jubilee, and walks allons.
Chaucer, Summoner's Tale, I. 154.

Hence — 4. Any exceptional season or course of rejoicing or festivity; a special occasion or manifestation of joyousness.

Joy was then a masculine and a severe thing; the recreation of the judgement, or rejoicing, the jubilee of reason.
South, Sermons.

And over Earth's full jubilee
Shall deeper joy be felt in heaven.
Whittier, Pastoral Letter.

Who that has ever known it can forget the jubilee of Nature in Virginia's woods in April!
The Century, XXXVII. 224.

5. The fiftieth year; the year following any period of forty-nine (or sometimes fifty) years.

But is 't possible he should believe he is not of age? why, he is fifty, man; in 'a jubilee, I warrant.
Fletcher (and another), Queen of Corinth, III. I.

6. A period of fifty years; a half-century.

Don Crispiano, the famous corregidor of Seville, who by his mere practice of the law, in less time than half a jubilee, hath gotten thirty thousand ducats a year.
Webster, Devil's Law-Case, II. 1.

jubilist (jū'bi-list), n. [< jubili(ce) + -ist.] One who takes part in the celebration of a jubilee.

Her lecturer described the feeling the Jubilate entertained toward their sovereign as "chivalrous."
Harper's Mag., LXXX. 102.

jubilus (jū'bi-lus), n. [ML.: see jubilare.] Same as jubilatio.

juchten (G. pron. yōch'ten), n. [G., also juchten (D. jucht-leider), < Russ. tyukht, tyuf = Bo-hem. juokta = Pol. juokt, juokta, Russia leather. [Russia leather: a German form of the Russian name, sometimes used in English. Also juft.]

The Russians have long been possessed of a method of making a peculiar leather, called by them Juden, dyed red with the aromatic saunders wood. Ure, Dict., III. 80.

juk (juk), v. t. [Imitative; cf. jug.] To make a peculiar sound resembling this word, as a partridge.

juund (juk'und), a. [L. jucundus, pleasant; see juund.] An obsolete form of juund. Barley. juundity (jū-kun'di-ti), n. [L. jucunditas], pleasantness, jucundus, pleasant, juund: see juund, and cf. juundity.] Pleasantness; agreeableness.

The new, unusual, or unexpected juundities, which present themselves to any man in his life, at some time or other, will have activity enough to excite the earthiest soul, and raise a smile from most composed temper.

Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii. 16.

jud (jud), n. [Cl. jad.] 1. In Eng. coal-mining, a block of coal, about four yards square, holed, kivered, or undercut, and nicked, ready to be thrown down.—2. In Eng. quarrying, same as jud, 2.

J. U. D. An abbreviation of the Latin (Middle and New Latin) titular degree Juris utriusque Doctor (doctor of both laws)—that is, Doctor of both Civil and Canon Law.

Judean, a. and n. See Judean. Judeophobia (jū-dē-ō-fō-bi-ā), n. [Gr. Ioudaios, a Jew, + -phos, fearing, phobos, fear.] One who has a strong dislike or fear of the Jews; a Jew-hater.

Judeophobia (jū-dē-ō-fō-bi-ā), n. [NL., L. Iudaeus, Gr. Ioudaios, Jew, + -phos, fear, phobos, fear.] Fear or hatred of the Jews, or of their influence; dread of Jews and opposition to their admission to full citizenship: a sentiment still prevalent in some countries.

Judeo (jū-dē-ō), a. [F. judaïque = Sp. Pg. judaico = It. giudaico, L. Iudaicus, Gr. Ioudaios, of or pertaining to Judea, Ioudaia (L. Iudaea), Judea: see Judean.] Pertaining or relating to the Jews; Jewish in condition or tendency.

Judeal (jū-dē-ō-kāl), a. [Gr. Iudaios + -al.] Same as Judeo.

Judeally (jū-dē-ō-kāl-i), adv. After the Jewish manner.

Judeisation, Judeise, etc. See Judaization, etc.

Judaism (jū-dē-ō-izm), n. [F. judaïsme = Sp. judatismo = Pg. judaismo = It. giudaismo, L. Iudaismus, Gr. Ioudaismos, Judaism, Ioudaismos, Judaize: see Judaize.] 1. The religious system and polity of the Jews, as enjoined in the laws of Moses.

But we are told, we embrace Paganism and Judaism in the arms of toleration. A most audacious calumny! Milton, Articles of Peace with the Irish.

Judaism alone, of all the ancient religions, went at least so far as to lay the basis of a spiritual or universal religion. Faiths of the World, p. 300.

2. Conformity to the Jewish rites and ceremonies.—3. A Jewish quarter or Jewry. [Rare.]

The Jews had also their Jewries, or Judaisme, not for a "corporation" merely, but also for the requirements of their faith and worship, and for their living together. Mayhew, London Labour and Living Poor, II. 128.

The Judaism, in Eng. Hist., a term used to designate revenues arising from exactions imposed on Jews.

The revenue of the Judaism, as it was termed, was managed by a separate branch of the exchequer, termed the exchequer of the Jews. S. Dowell, Taxes in England, I. 90.

Judaist (jū-dē-ō-ist), n. [Gr. Iuda(ism) + -ist.] An adherent of Judaism; a Judaizer.

Judaistic (jū-dē-ō-ist'ik), a. [Gr. Iudaist + -ic.] Relating or pertaining to Judaism.

Judaistically (jū-dē-ō-ist'ik-ly), adv. In a Judaistic manner; with a tendency to Judaism.

It can have been designed only for Judaistically-disposed readers. Encyc. Brit., XXX. 729.

Judaization (jū-dē-ō-iz-ā-shon), n. [Gr. Iudaize + -ation.] The act of Judaizing; a conforming to the Jewish religion or ritual. Also spelled Judaization.

Judaize (jū-dē-ō-iz), v.; pret. and pp. Judaized, pp. Judaizing. [F. judaïser = Sp. judaizar = Pg. judaizar = It. giudaizzare, L. Iudaizare, Gr. Ioudaizein, live or act in the manner of the Jews, Ioudaizein, a Jew: see Judean.] I. intrans. 1. To conform to Judaism in any respect; adopt or affect the manners or customs of the Jews.

They say . . . that usurers should have orange-tawny bonnets, because they do Judaize. Bacon, Usury (ed. 1587).

They . . . prevailed on the Galatians to Judaize so far as to observe the rites of Moses in various instances. Manser.

2. To reason or interpret like a Jew.

By their socratic doctrine of formalities they take the way to transform them out of Christian men into Judaizing beasts. Milton, Apology for Smectymnua.

II. trans. To bring into conformity with Judaism: as, to Judaize the Christian sabbath.

Error by that time had brought back again Priests, Altars, and Oblations; and in many other Points of Religion had miserably Judaized the Church.

Milton, Touching Hirelings.

The English translation of the Bible had to a very great degree Judaized, not the English mind, but the Puritan temper. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 278.

Also spelled Judaize.

Judaizer (jū-dē-ō-iz-er), n. 1. One who conforms to Judaism in any respect; one who reasons or interprets according to Jewish ideas or teachings.

The Judaizers clamored for other criterions; not so "James, Cephas, and John." The Century, XXXII. 487.

Specifically.—2. One of a class of persons in the early church who, though converted from Judaism to Christianity, still insisted on obedience to the Mosaic law. Also called Jewish Christian.

Also spelled Judaizer.

Judas (jū-dās), n. [F. Judas, a treacherous person, a peephole (so called with reference to the treachery of Judas Iscariot, one of the apostles), L. Judas, Gr. Ioudas, Judas, Judah, Jude, a Greek form of Judah, Gr. Iouda, Yehudah, Judah, a name first known as that of one of the sons of Jacob: see Judean, Jew.] 1. A treacherous person; one who betrays under the semblance of friendship.—2. [L. c.] In some old houses, a lattice with small openings in a door, through which those inside could look without being seen designed to prevent the admission of objectionable persons.

A Judas (in certain old Parisian houses) is a square iron lattice, with such small spaces in the metal that no weapon could be thrust through them while the warder was reconnoitering the visitor. Some Judas have a double lattice; all have an iron flap inside to keep inquisitive eyes from prying into the house and yard. The Century, XXVII. 75.

Hence.—3. [L. c.] In a prison, a small opening in the door or wall of a cell to enable the guards to watch the prisoners; a Judas-hole.

Immediately over it [a door] is a narrow horizontal slit about as large as the opening for letters in a street letter-box, covered by a pivoted strip of wood which can be raised and lowered like the blade of a jack-knife so as to open or close the aperture. This contrivance, which is known to the political prisoners as the Judas, enables the guard to look into the cell at any time without attracting the attention of the occupant. The Century, XXXV. 522.

Judas of the paschal. See the extract.

This wooden imitation of a candle, which rested on the socket of the middle branch of the seven-branched candlestick was called — it is not known why — the Judas of the paschal, at the top of which was let in the true wax candle. Rock, Church of our Fathers, III. II. 244.

Judas-colored (jū-dās-kul'ord), a. Red: applied to hair, from the notion that Judas had red hair.

I do not like his oath, there's treachery in that Judas-colored beard. Dryden, Amboyna.

With leering Looks, Bullfac'd and Froekled fair,
With two left Legs, and Judas-colour'd Hair. Dryden, On Jacob Tonsion.

Judas-cup (jū-dās-kup), n. A wooden bowl used in medieval times at monastic and domestic refectory on Maundy Thursday evenings.

Judas-ear (jū-dās-ēr), n. Same as Jew's-ear.

Judas-hole (jū-dās-höl), n. A small trap or hole in a door made for peering or watching, either from within or from without. Also Judas. See Judas, 3.

He knew the world as he had seen it through Judas-holes, chiefly in its foulness and impurity. C. Reade, Never too Late to Mend.

Judas-light (jū-dās-lit), n. A wooden imitation of the paschal candle. See paschal.

Judas-li (jū-dās-li), a. [Gr. Judas, (see Judas) + -ly.] Like Judas; treacherous.

Shall any of them prove a devil, as Christ said of Judas? or ever, as these with us of late, have to do with any devilish or Judas fact? By Andrews, Works, I. 15.

Judasly (jū-dās-ly), adv. [Gr. Judas (see Judas) + -ly.] Like Judas; treacherously.

Thou shalt understand, most deare reader, that William Tynnell was Judasly betrayed by an Englishman. Tyndale, Works, p. 420.

Jonas . . . hyred a shyppe to thenthat he myght Judasly flee from the face of our lorde God. Sp. Fisher, Works, p. 208.

Judas-tree (jū-dās-trē), n. [NL. arbor Judas: so called because, according to tradition, Judas hanged himself on a tree of this kind. Cf. Jew's-ear.] 1. Originally, the Cercis Siliquastrum of southern Europe, a small leguminous tree with handsome purple flowers.—2. The similar American tree, Cercis Canadensis, the red-bud.—3. The older-tree of the old world, Sambucus nigra, which grows to a height of 25 feet. [Prov. Eng.—California Judas-tree, Cercis remiformis (C. occidentalis).

Judas-tree or Redbud (Cercis Canadensis).
1, branch with flowers; 2, branch with leaves and fruit; 3, flower.

Judcock (jud'kok), n. [Also Judcock, jedcock.] Same as jack-snipe, 1.

Judcock (jud'ok), n. Same as judcock.

Judean, Judean (jū-dē-ān), a. and n. [L. Iudaeus, Gr. Ioudaios, Jewish, a Jew, Ioudaia, Judea, Palestine, Gr. Ioudaia, Judah, son of Jacob, whose name was also given to the kingdom so called: see Judas, Jew.] I. a. Relating to Judea, the southernmost division of Palestine in the time of Christ, lying south of Samaria.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Judea; a Jew.

judge (juj), n. [ME. juggle, juge, OF. juge, F. juge = Pr. juigo = Sp. juez = Pg. juiz = It. giudice, L. iudex (iudicis), one who declares the law, a judge, Gr. iudex, the law, + dicere, say, declare: see ju and diction. Cf. judge, v.] 1. A public officer invested with authority to hear and determine causes, civil or criminal, and to administer justice between parties in courts held for the purpose; a public officer appointed to exercise the judicial power; a justice; a magistrate.

But seldom sits the judge that may not err. Puttenham, Parthenidae, v.

The charge is prepared, the lawyers are met,
The judges all ranged: a terrible show!
Gay, Beggar's Opera, III. 2.

2. [cap.] A title of God as supreme arbiter of all things.

The Lord the Judge he judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon. Judges xi. 27.

3. In a more general sense, any one intrusted with authority to arbitrate on the rights of others: as, no man ought to be a judge in his own cause.—4. A person appointed to decide in any competition or contest; an authorized arbiter: as, to make one a judge in a dispute; the judges of a competitive exhibition.

The controversy of beauteous sovereign grace;
In which, to her that doth the most excel,
Shall fall the girdle of faire Flormell. . .
The judges, which thence selected were,
Into the Martian field adowne descended. Sponsor, F. Q., IV. v. 6.

O, Heaven be judge how I love Valentine. Shak., T. G. of V., v. 4, 28.

5. A person skilled in determining the true nature or quality of anything; one qualified or able to discriminate, as between good and bad, right and wrong, genuine and spurious, etc.; a connoisseur; an expert: as, a judge of wines or of paintings; a judge of character or of qualifications.

Mr. Briak, you're a Judge: was ever anything so well bred as my Lord? Compton, Double-Dealer, II. 2.

A man who is no judge of law may be a good judge of poetry or eloquence, or of the merits of a painting. Dryden.

6. In Jewish hist., an administrative officer who stood at the head of the Hebrew state in the intermediate period between the time of Moses and Joshua and that of the kings. These officers were generally military leaders, without any regular transmission of their authority, not supreme magistrates succeeding to the rule of Moses and Joshua. None of the judges had authority over all the tribes, and sometimes two or more were contemporaneous.

And it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel. 1 Sam. vii. 1.

7. [cap.] pl. The seventh book of the Bible, properly the "Book of Judges" (Liber Judicum, Vulgate). It contains the history of the Israelites under the administration of the judges from the death of Joshua to about the time of the birth of Samuel. The date and authorship are unknown. Some critics regard Samuel as the author; others find traces of several authors or compilers, and place the final revision as late as the eighth century B. C.

8. In coal-mining, the measuring-rod with which the depth of a holing or jad is ascertained.

[Eng.]—Associate judge, the designation usually given to each of the judges of a court other than the chief or presiding judge.—Chief judge, a judge who presides over the sessions and deliberations of a court. The office of chief judge is often a distinct office, having a slightly higher salary; but in some cases the position belongs to the member of the court who may be chosen by his associates, or who is entitled to it by virtue of seniority in office.—Circuit judge. (a) The judge of a circuit court; specifically, in the United States, the judge appointed to preside over one of the nine circuits into which the country is divided. A circuit court is commonly held by him with the district judge, or with a justice of the Supreme Court; but it may be held by any one of the three alone, or by any two together. Formerly the justice of the Supreme Court allotted to a circuit was called the circuit judge. (b) The term has sometimes been employed to designate a special judge, or one of a class of special judges, added to a court for the purpose of holding trials, but without being a member of a court in banc.—City judge, the usual title in the United States of a local magistrate having criminal or civil jurisdiction, or both, within the limits of a city.—County judge, a local magistrate having a limited jurisdiction within a county.—District judge, a judge whose jurisdiction is confined to a particular district; specifically, in the United States, the judge of a district court in one of the numerous districts into which the country is divided for judicial purposes, there being usually two or more districts within each State.—Judge ordinary, in England, formerly, the judge of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes.—Judges' chambers. See chambers.—Law judge, a judge who is not a lawyer.—Municipal judge. Same as city judge.—Presiding judge. (a) The judge for the time being holding a court or presiding in a court. (b) A chief judge.—Probate judge, or judge of probate, a judge having jurisdiction of testamentary causes; a surrogate.—Puisne judge, a junior judge: the title formerly used in the English superior courts of common law for a judge other than the chief judge.—Side judge, a designation sometimes given to a magistrate, or each of two magistrates, of inferior rank, associated with a magistrate of higher grade for the purpose of constituting a court.—Trial judge, the judge before whom a cause is tried; used particularly in appellate courts to designate the judge whose rulings are brought under review. — Syn. 1 and 8. Judge, Unpers, laferre, Arbitrator, justice, arbiter. Judge is a technical word for a legal officer with duties clearly defined: as, a judge of probate; or a general word for a person empowered to arbitrate or award: as, to act as judge at contests, an exhibition of paintings, a competitive examination, etc. Unpers is a name applied to the person selected to decide all disputed points connected with a public contest; as, the umpire in a game of base-ball. laferre is somewhat more loosely used. In legal usage referee means one to whom a pending cause or some branch of it is referred, with the sanction of the court, to act in place of the judge, or in aid of his determination, the result being a decision of the court; while an arbitrator is one to whom a question is referred simply by agreement of the parties, without sanction of the court. The reference of a pending cause to an arbitrator takes it out of court, and precludes further proceedings in court. In a boxing-match, boat-race, foot-ball game, etc., the referee is the same as an umpire. Sometimes an umpire is legally appointed to decide where arbitrators disagree. Thus all these words may have technical senses when used as legal terms.

judge (ju), v.: pret. and pp. judged, ppr. judging. [ME. juggen, jugen, < OF. juger, F. jugar = Pr. jugar, jugar = Sp. jugar = Pg. jugar = It. giudicare, < L. judicare, declare the law, judge, decide, < judex (judic), one who declares the law, a judge: see judge, n. Cf. ad-judge, adjudicate.] I. intrans. 1. To act as a judge; pronounce upon the merits of a cause or controversy; pass judgment.

The Lord judge between me and thee. Gen. xvi. 8.
Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged. Mat. vii. 1, 2.

It is not ours to judge — far less condemn. Byron.

2. To form a judgment or mental assertion; say to one's self that so and so is or is not true; make up one's mind about the truth of a matter.

When I shall conferre the things I see with those I have read, I will judge accordingly. Lyly, Epithes and his England, p. 247.

We uniformly judge improperly when we assent to what we do not clearly perceive, although our judgment may chance to be true. Descartes, Prin. of Philos. (tr. by Veitch), i. § 44.

3. To make a critical determination; decide as to what is true or false, good or bad, genuine or spurious, etc.; estimate the value or magnitude of anything.

They are employed to judge of commodities, such as raw silk, by handling them. H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 30.

II. trans. 1. To hear and determine authoritatively, as a cause or controversy; examine into and decide upon.

Rewards and punishments are not received, but at the hands of such as, being above us, have power to examine and judge our deeds. Hooker, Ecclies. Polity, i. 2.

2. To try at the bar of justice; pass judgment upon.

God shall judge the righteous and the wicked. Eccl. iii. 17.

3. To pass sentence upon; adjudge; sentence; condemn. [Rare.]

And the barons and alle the peple seide she was no-thinge trewe, and thei judged (her) to be brent. Morte (R. E. T. S.), iii. 480.

Vpon the oon of them our Savyor stode whanne he was judged to Deth. Torkington, Diaries of Eng. Travell, p. 32.

4. To form a judgment or opinion of or upon; decide upon critically; estimate.

Some censure this act as cruel and tyrannical; but, consider'd well, it may be judg'd more favourably. Milton, Hist. Eng., v.

We judge ourselves by what we feel capable of doing, while others judge us by what we have already done. Longfellow, Kavanaugh, i.

5. To hold as an opinion; esteem; consider.

If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord. Acts xvi. 15.

If men judge that learning should be referred to action, they judge well. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 109. (He) judged it highly expedient to use despatch. Goldsmith, Vicar, xxi.

Syn. 5. To account, hold, believe, deem, consider, regard.

judge-advocate (juj'ad'-vō-kāt), n. See advocate.

judgement, n. [ME. juggeman; < judge + man.] A judge; doomsman.

Full arely the juggemen demed hym to dye, Both prestis and prelatis to Pilate made praying, And alle curaid carytims and kene on criste gan thei crye, And on that lele rode made many a leying. York Plays, p. 427.

judgement, n. See judgment.

judger (juj'er), n. One who judges or forms a judicial or critical opinion; a judge.

Readie speakers generally be not the best, playnest, and wisest writers, nor yet the deepest judgers in weightie affairs. Aescham, The Scholemaster, p. 115.

That within her which a wanton fool Or hasty judger would have call'd her guilt Made her cheek burn. Tennyson, Geraldine.

judgeship (juj'ship), n. [< judge + -ship.] The office of a judge; authority to judge; also, the period of incumbency of a judge.

To pass over those concerning the Pope, his universal pastourship, judgeship in controversies, power to call councils. Barrone, The Pope's Supremacy.

judgingly (juj'ing-li), adv. In the manner of a judge; as one qualified to judge; judiciously.

This work neither his own ministers nor any els can discerningly enough or judgingly perform without his own immediat direction, in his own fit season. Milton, Civil Power.

judgmental (juj-mat'i-kəl), a. [Irreg. < judge + -mat'cal, as in dogmatical.] Judicious; skillful; done with or manifesting good judgment. [Colloq.]

So a judgmental rap over the head stiffened the lying impostor for a time. J. F. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, xxv.

The tone [of the book] is moderate and judgmental throughout. Athenaeum, No. 3195, p. 580.

judgment, judgement (juj'ment), n. [< ME. juggement, jugement, < OF. jugement, F. jugement = Pr. jugamen = OSp. jugamentu = Pg. jugamento = It. giudicamento, < ML. judicamentum, a judgment, < L. judicare, judge: see judge, v.]

1. The faculty of judging.

When one goeth about to prove anything, he must firste invente somewhat to prove his cause, the whiche when he hath dooen, he must use judgements bothe in framing the same reason so invented, and also to see whether it serveth for the purpose or not. Sir T. Wilson, Rule of Reason (1552).

Specifically—(a) The intellectual power of perceiving relations between ideas, as the relations of similarity, difference, etc.

When the notice touches upon two or more ideas together, there generally arises another, not compounded or extracted from them, but generated by them, to wit, an idea of comparison, resemblance, identity, difference, relation, distance, number, situation, or other circumstance belonging to them; all which, in metaphysical language, are comprehended under the general term of judgment. A. Tucker, Light of Nature, i. xi.

(b) The power of recognizing the true or just relations between ideas; the power of judging wisely and justly; correct, sound, or acute intellectual perception; understanding; good sense.

And hence perhaps may be given some reason for that common observation that men who have a great deal of wit and prompt memories have not always the clearest judgment or deepest reason; for, wit lying most in the assemblage of ideas and putting those together with quickness and variety wherein can be found any resemblance or congruity, thereby to make up pleasant pictures and agreeable visions in the fancy, judgment on the contrary lies quite on the other side, in separating carefully, one from another, ideas wherein can be found the least difference, thereby to avoid being misled by similitude, and by affinity to take one thing for another. Locke, Human Understanding, II. xi. § 2.

To speak therefore of judgment as it is in the best poets; they who have the greatest proportion of it want other help than from it, within. As for example, you would be loth to say that he who is endued with a sound judgment has no need of history, geography, or moral philosophy, to write correctly. Judgment is indeed the master-workman in a play; but he requires many subordinate hands, many tools to his assistance. Dryden, Dramatick Poesy.

2. The act of judging. (a) The act of affirming (or denying) a relation (as of similarity or difference) between two ideas.

Judgment . . . is the putting ideas together, or separating them from one another in the mind, when their certain agreement or disagreement is not perceived, but presumed to be so. Locke, Human Understanding, IV. xiv. 4.

(b) The process of arriving at a conclusion or decision; the determination of a doubtful or debatable matter.

Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment. Lev. xix. 15.

A Daniel come to judgment! yes, a Daniel! O wise young judge, how I do honour thee! Shak., M. of V., iv. 1, 222.

3. The product of the mental act of judging; the recognition of a relation between objects; a mental affirmation or proposition; the thought that a given general representation is really applicable to a certain object; the actual consciousness of belief. The Kantian logicians speak of judgments where other logicians speak of propositions, in order to show that they study thought, and not merely its expression in language.

We find him [Kant] distinguishing two kinds of judgments; judgments of perception, and judgments of experience. The former are judgments which merely express a connection of individual experience, and which, therefore, give rise only to a subjective association of ideas. The latter are judgments in which the connection is determined by one of the categories, and which therefore express an objective relation of things. K. Ostro, Philos. of Kant, p. 284.

An accurate judgment is one which corresponds precisely to the realities represented, or which faithfully expresses the relations of things. J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 408.

4. The decision of a judge, or of one acting as a judge; an authoritative determination; specifically, the judicial decision of a cause in court; adjudication; award; sentence.

Than commanded the kyng Ieodogan that Jugement sholde be yoven be the rede of his barouns. Morte (R. E. T. S.), iii. 400.

Another Difference . . . was between the two Archbishops of England, about the Jurisdiction of Canterbury over York, which being referred to the Pope, he gave Judgment on Canterbury's side. Baker, Chronicles, p. 58.

The Lord and his Spirit puts into the preacher's mouth a judgment against oppression, against extortion, against usury, and he utters that judgment. Demos, Sermons, x. Specifically—(a) the determination of the rights of the parties in a common-law action, as distinguished from a decree in chancery; (b) the determination of the rights of the parties in any action, legal or equitable, under the reformed procedure; (c) the document embodying such determination. When these rights have been conceded, or established by evidence, and it only remains to compel compliance with the judgment, the judgment is called final. If before enforcing the judgment it is necessary to take proceedings to determine the application of those rights — as, for instance, to take an accounting, or to turn lands or chattels into money for the purpose of division — the determination of the rights of the parties first had is an interlocutory judgment or decree; and after such further proceedings have been had the court gives a final judgment or decree, which can be immediately enforced.

5. An opinion formed or put forth; a conclusion drawn from premises; a decision based on observation or belief; an estimate; a view.

By the judgment of the most antithetical physicians. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iv. 4.

Where blind and naked Ignorance Delivers brawling judgments, unassumed, On all things all day long. Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

6. A divine allotment or dispensation; a decree or commandment of God; specifically, an event or experience regarded as a direct manifestation of the divine will, especially of the divine displeasure.

How unsearchable are his judgments! Rom. xi. 33.
You have more fearful Examples of miraculous Judgments in this particular [of swearing], than of any other Sin. Hensell, Lectures, i. v. 11.

Through thorns of judgment mercies bloom In sweet relief. Whittier, Anniversary Poem.

7. The final trial of the human race in the future state; the judgment-day.

The angels which kept not their first estate . . . he hath reserved . . . unto the judgment of the great day. Jude 6.

One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell. Shak., C. of E., iv. 2, 40.

Accumulative judgment. See accumulative. — Alternative judgment. See alternative. — Arrest of judgment. See arrest. — Breastplate of judgment. See breastplate, i. — Confession of judgment. See confession. — Constitutive, regulative judgment. See principle. — Critical suspension of judgment. See critical.

—Declaratory judgment. See declaratory.—Definitive, determinative, or final judgment, the decision of the mind that a certain relation is true, and that the matter requires no further examination.—Demonstrative, determinative, discursive judgment. See the adjectives.—Disjunctive judgment. Same as alternative judgment.—Ethical judgment, a judgment of taste; a judgment which pronounces an object to be sublime or beautiful, or the contrary.—Explicative judgment. See explicative.—Function of judgment. See function.—Immanent judgment, a judgment concerning things of nature and experience.—Interlocutory, interrogative, etc., judgment. See the adjectives.—Intuitive judgment, a judgment which is based on direct perception.—Judgment by confession. See confession.—Judgment by default. See default.—Judgment creditor, a creditor who has reduced his claim to judgment; a creditor who has recovered judgment awarding his payment.—Judgment creditor's action, an action by a judgment creditor to enforce payment. See action.—Judgment debt. See debt.—Judgment debtor. See debtor.—Judgment in personam, a judgment which binds only the right of a party and his representatives, as distinguished from a judgment in rem, which is available as conclusive respecting the right of the subject of action against all the world.—Judgment non obstante verdicto, a judgment rendered by the court notwithstanding a contrary verdict, as, for instance, because some matter relied on in avoidance and found to be true by the verdict is insufficient in law.—Judgment of experience, an empirical judgment having objective validity.—Judgment of God, a phrase formerly applied to extraordinary trials of secret crimes, as by arms and single combat, by ordeal, etc., it being imagined that God would work a miracle to vindicate innocence.—Judgment of perception, the judgment that one has a certain feeling; a subjectively valid judgment.—Judgment of retractit, a judgment suffered at common law by a plaintiff voluntarily retracting his claim.—Judgment record or roll. (a) In ancient common law practices, the roll of parchment upon which the record terminating in a judgment was engrossed, for permanent preservation. Hence—(b) In modern practice, the documents (usually the process complaint, answer, verdict or findings and judgment thereon) fastened and folded together, and filed as the record of the judgment.—Judgment respondent oster, an interlocutory judgment requiring the defendant to put in a more substantial defense.—Preliminary judgment, the judgment that certain probabilities require the examination of a given hypothesis.—To confess judgment, in a general sense, to acknowledge liability; specifically, to give a formal consent, upon which the clerk of a court or a justice may enter judgment against the consenting party, without the necessity of process or pleading for the bringing of an action.—To sit in judgment, to exercise the function of a judge; hence, to assume the right to criticize or judge; usually in an adverse sense.—Transcendent judgment, in the Kantian terminology, a judgment which relates to an object which can never be presented in experience.—Syn. 1. Judgment, Sagacity, Perceptivity; discrimination, penetration, wisdom, brains. Judgment, as compared with sagacity and perceptivity, is a general word; as, sound judgment in business; good judgment as to cloth. Sagacity is a power to discern the real facts of a situation, to see the course that is wisest to avoid failure or achieve success. (See astute.) Sagacity is especially the word applied to brutes that have a large discernment and a quickness of mind like those of man. Perceptivity is essentially the same as discernment, except that it is more vividly figurative, suggesting the actual use of the eyes in looking into things. See discernment.—2. Verdict, Report, etc. See decision and inference.—3. Taste, Judgment (see taste); opinion, belief, conclusion.

judgment-cap (juj'ment-kap), n. Same as black cap (a) (which see, under cap).

judgment-day (juj'ment-dä), n. In theol., the last day, or the day when final judgment will be pronounced on the subjects of God's moral government; doomsday. Roman Catholic theologians hold to two judgment-days: the first at death, when the eternal lot of the soul is determined by God—this being designated the private or particular judgment; the second, the great or general judgment-day, at the end of the world.

Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., l. 1.

judgment-hall (juj'ment-häl), n. A hall where courts are held.

Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus.
John xviii. 33.

judgment-note (juj'ment-nöt), n. A promissory note of the usual form, containing also a power of attorney to appear and confess judgment for the sum therein named. It is not negotiable. Bourcier.

judgment-seat (juj'ment-sät), n. A seat or place of judgment; specifically, the seat or bench on which judges sit in court.

Pilate . . . sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement.
John xix. 13.

We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.
Rom. xiv. 10.

Judica (jü'di-kä), n. [So called from the opening words in Latin of the introit, the 43d Psalm, Judica me, Deus, "Judge me, O God": L. judica, 2d pers. sing. impv. of judicare, judge; see judge, v.] A name sometimes given in England to Passion Sunday, or the fifth Sunday in Lent.

judicable (jü'di-kä-bl), a. [= It. giudicabile, < L.L. judicabilis, that can be judged, < L. ju- dicare, judge: see judge, v.] Capable of being judged or tried.

They were heretics . . . towards God and towards man, and judicable in both tribunals.

Jor. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 515.

judicative (jü'di-kä-tiv), a. [= F. judicatif = Pr. judicativ = It. giudicativo, < L. as if judicativus*, < judicare, judge: see judge, v.] Having ability to judge; judging.

The former is but an act of the judicative faculty.
Hammond, Works, IV. 492.

The judicative power as to writing, speaking, or publishing of gross reflections upon the whole parliament or upon either house, though perhaps originally questionable, seems now of too long a standing and of too much frequency in practice to be well counteracted.

Hargraves, Juridical Arguments, II. 183.

judiciary (jü'di-kä-ti-ri), a. and n. [= It. giudicatorio, < L.L. judicatorius, pertaining to judging (neut. judicatorium, a court of justice), < L. judicare, judge: see judge, v.] 1. a. Pertaining to the passing of judgment; belonging to the administration of justice; dispensing justice.

He who had power to admonish had also power to reject in an authoritative or judicatory way.

Ep. Hall, Cases of Conscience, III. 5.

II. n.; pl. judicatories (-riz). 1. A court of justice; a tribunal; any body of persons endowed with judicial authority: as, a church judicatory.

To have brought the King to condign punishment hath not broke the Covenant, but it would have broke the Covenant to have say'd him from those Judicatories which both Nations declar'd in that Covenant to be supreme against any person whatsoever.
Milton, Elikonoklastes, xxviii.

2. Administration of justice.

No such crime appeared as the lords, the supreme court of judicatory, would judge worthy of death.

Clarendon, Great Rebellion.

judicature (jü'di-kä-tür), n. [= F. judicature = Sp. Pg. judicatura = It. giudicatura, < ML. judicatura, < L. judicare, judge: see judge, v.] 1. The power of administering justice by legal trial and determination; judicial authority.

Give me a man that buyes a seat of judicature; I dare not trust him for not selling of justice.

Ep. Hall, The Best Bargain.

The Parliament of England has no Arbitrary Power in point of Judicature, but in point of making Law only.
Selden, Table-Talk, p. 89.

The manorial system, and the ecclesiastical and civil judicature of old times, are either falling into desuetude or being ruthlessly abolished.

Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 51.

2. A court of justice; a judicatory.

One of the five judicatories of Palestine was held at it [Shephon].
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 62.

3. Legality; lawfulness, as constituted by statute or enactment.

Our Saviour disputes not here the judicature (for that was not his office) but the morality of divorce.
Milton.

4. Extent of jurisdiction of a judge or court.—Judicature Acts, English statutes regarding the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, particularly those of 1873 (36 and 37 Vict., c. 66), 1875 (38 and 39 Vict., c. 77), 1877 (40 and 41 Vict., c. 9), and 1881 (44 and 45 Vict., c. 68), by which the said court has been established and organized in its two permanent divisions, the Court of Appeal and the High Court of Justice.

judicial (jü'dish'al), a. [= Sp. Pg. judicial = It. giudiciale, giudiziale, < L. judicialis, of or belonging to a court of justice, judicial, < judicium, judgment, decision of a court of justice, also the court itself, < judex (judicō), a judge: see judge, n.] 1. Of or pertaining to a judge; proper to the character of a judge; judge-like; hence, critical; discriminating; impartial; formerly, judicious.

I know I shall be taxed for writing so much of my selfe, but I care not much, because the judicial know there are few such Bouldiers as are my examples.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 92.

Her brains a quiver of jests, and she does dart them abroad with that sweet, loose, and judicial action.

B. Jonson.

I confess it to me a meer toy, not deserving any judicial man's view.

Nashe, Pierce Penitence.

His mind was rather judicial than forensic in its cast.

Sumner, John Pickering.

A measure of calm becomes the judicial function, and a parent or teacher carried away by violent feeling is unfit for moral control.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychology, p. 568.

2. Pertaining to the administration of justice; proper to a court of law; consisting of or resulting from legal inquiry or judgment: as, judicial power or proceedings; a judicial decision, writ, sale, or punishment.

In this distinct and separate existence of the judicial power in a peculiar body of men, nominated indeed, but not removable at pleasure, by the crown, consists one main preservative of the public liberty.
Blackstone, Com., i. vii.

3. Enacted by statute, or established by constituted authority. [Rare.]

It was not a moral, but a judicial law, and so was abrogated; . . . which law the ministry of Christ came not to deal with.
Milton.

4. Determinative; giving judgment; deciding, as about a point in contest or about future events: as, judicial astrology.

Judicial duels (which were the authorized substitutes for private wars between families) continued in France down to the close of the 14th century.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 522.

5. Having the nature of a judgment or punishment.

Judicial blindness: such as Pharaoh's, who, from resisting God's will, at length did not know the difference between light and darkness.

J. H. Newman, Parochial Sermons, I. 221.

Judicial act, an act involving the exercise of judicial power (which see, below). Hence—(a) An act of a court or magistrate in deciding a question of right litigated before him or referred by law to his judgment. (b) An act of any public officer involving the exercise of his judgment or discretion on a question affecting the right of any party. Thus, the act of the fiscal officer of a municipality in auditing a claim is usually judicial, but his paying a lawful warrant or order for payment is ministerial. (See ministerial.) A judicial act implies deliberation, and therefore, if to be done by several jointly, those who are to do it must be together (or under modern statutes a majority after notice to all); while a ministerial act may ordinarily, unless otherwise required by law, be the concurrent act of each separately.

The distinction between a judicial and a legislative act is well defined. The one determines what the law is, and what the rights of parties are, with reference to transactions already had; the other prescribes what the law shall be in future cases arising under it.

Justice Stephen J. Field, 99 U. S. 761.

Judicial astrology. See astrology.—Judicial bribery. See bribery.—Judicial comity, the deference which courts in any state usually pay to the rules of law maintained in other states or nations, although different from their own, in cases where the persons, property, or transactions in question are within the foreign jurisdiction. The laws of a state can have no extraterritorial effect; but when a civil controversy arises in the courts of one state as to matters wholly or partly within the territory of another, and the law of the two states differs, and there is contest as to which ought to control the case, the courts often apply the extraterritorial law to extraterritorial persons or property, etc., in furtherance of justice as between the parties, not as the binding rule of law, but by way of comity.—Judicial confession. See confession, 1 (d).—Judicial declaration. See declaration.—Judicial discretion. See discretion.—Judicial evidence. See evidence, 3 (d).—Judicial factor, in Scott law, a factor or administrator appointed by the Court of Session (sometimes by the sheriff), on special application by petition, settling forth the circumstances which render the appointment necessary. Such factors are usually appointed in cases where a father has died without a settlement, leaving his children in pupilarity, and also where a party has become incapable of managing his own affairs.—Judicial murder, the execution of one convicted as criminal legally, but in reality unjustly.—Judicial notice. See notice.—Judicial power. (a) The authority to determine rights of person or property, by arbitrating between adversaries in specific controversies, at the instance of a party thereto. (b) The power conferred upon and exercised by the judiciary or a court as such. (c) A power conferred upon a public officer involving the exercise of judgment and discretion in the determination of questions of right in specific cases affecting the interests of persons or property, as distinguished from ministerial power, or authority to carry out the mandates of judicial power or of the law.—Judicial sale, a sale made pursuant to a specific judgment, decree, or order of a judicial tribunal, as distinguished from one made by a ministerial officer in execution of process to enforce a money judgment.—Judicial separation. See separation.

judicially (jü'dish'al-i), adv. 1. In a judicial manner; in the forms of legal justice: as, a sentence judicially declared.

When the cardinal asked Blinney whether he had not taken the oath before not to preach or defend any of Luther's doctrines, he confessed he had done it, but not judicially (judicialiter in the register).

Sp. Burnet, Hist. Reformation, I.

2. In the manner of a judge, as opposed to that of a pleader; impartially.

He [the critic] should discuss the subject-matter judicially and as a whole, . . . gauging the work by the author's standard as well as his own.

Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 53.

3. By way of a judgment or punishment.

Reflect that . . . those truths divine
Are never long vouchsaf'd, if push'd aside,
And that, judicially withdrawn, disgrace,
Error, and darkness occupy their place.

Cowper, Expostulation, l. 692.

judiciary (jü'dish'al-i-ri), a. and n. [= F. judiciaire = Sp. Pg. judicario = It. giudicario, < L. judicatorius, of or belonging to a court of justice, < judicium, judgment, a court of justice: see judicial, a.] 1. a. Pertaining to courts of justice or legal tribunals; judicial.

But to lay such a censure on a clergyman as a suspension, without proof, in a judiciary proceeding, was contrary both to law and justice.

Sp. Burnet, Hist. Own Times, an. 1695.

To enable the federal head to exercise the powers given it to best advantage, it should be organized . . . into legislative, executive, and judiciary.

Jefferson, Correspondence, II. 64.

Judiciary Act, an act of the United States Congress of September 24th, 1789 (1 Stat., 73), establishing the federal courts of the United States, defining their jurisdiction and powers, and regulating procedure: now embodied with amendments in the provisions of the Revised Statutes. — Judiciary annexation. See annexation. — Judiciary astrology. Same as judicial astrology (which see, under astrology).

The consideration of his judiciary astrology.

Hakewill, Apology, p. 164.

Judiciary law. See law.

J. n. That branch of government which is concerned in the trial and determination of controversies between parties and of criminal prosecutions; the system of courts of justice in a country; the judges taken collectively.

The committee . . . reported a provision that the jurisdiction of the national judiciary should extend to all "questions which involved the national peace and harmony."

Calhoun, Works, I. 245.

judicious (jū-dish'us), a. [= F. judicieux = Sp. judicioso = It. giudizioso, < ML. judiciosus, prudent, judicious, < L. judicium, judgment; see judicial.] 1. Having or exercising sound judgment; well-judging; prudent; discreet; sensible: as, a judicious parent or teacher; a judicious historian.

This overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve.

Shak., Hamlet, III. 2, 29.

2. Manifesting good judgment; well-judged; carefully considered or planned: as, a judicious use of time or money; judicious treatment of the insane.

I shall give as particular an Account of . . . the several sorts of Winds as my own Observations and the judicious Informations from others will afford me Matter to do.

Dampier, Voyages, II. III. 2.

A tale made for judicious, clear, succinct; The language plain, and incidents well link'd.

Cropper, Conversation, I. 235.

3. Relating to a court or to the administration of justice; judicial.

His last offences to us

Shall have judicious hearing.

Shak., Cor., v. 4, 127.

— Syn. 1 and 2. Prudent, rational, wise, discreet, intelligent, skillful, discerning, sagacious, sound, cool, politic. See sensible and astute.

judiciously (jū-dish'us-ly), adv. In a judicious manner; with good judgment; with discretion or wisdom.

By judiciously availing himself of several . . . rare moments, he [Temple] succeeded in establishing a high character for wisdom and patriotism.

Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

judiciousness (jū-dish'us-ness), n. The quality of being judicious, or of acting or being according to sound judgment.

Judy (jū'di), n.; pl. Judies (-diz). [A familiar form of the fem. name Judith.] 1. The puppet taking the part of Punch's wife in a "Punch and Judy" show. — 2. In China, a native courtesan: so called by foreigners. [Slang.] — 3. A kelt, or spent male salmon. [Local, Ireland.]

juel, n. A Middle English form of jewel.

juffery (juf'er), n. [Origin obscure.] In carp., a piece of timber four or five inches square.

juft (yūft), n. [Russ. yūft: see juchten.] Same as juchten.

jug (jug), n. [In def. 1 (whence def. 2) of prov. origin, and prob. a particular use of Jug, a familiar form of Judith, a common name for a woman. Cf. jack and jill, as names of drinking-vessels, also from familiar personal names. In def. 3 also from the name Jug, perhaps with allusion also to jug in def. 1.] 1. A vessel, usually made of earthenware, metal, or glass, of various sizes and shapes, and generally provided with a handle or ear, used for holding and conveying liquids; a drinking-vessel; a picher; a ewer; in the United States, specifically, an earthenware vessel with a swelling or a cylindrical body, a handle, and a narrow neck and orifice, usually stopped by a cork. As a quantity of ale or beer, a jug is usually a pint.

Yet would you . . . rail upon the hostess of the house, . . . because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts.

Shak., T. of the S., Ind., 2, 90.

I observe another fly in the cream-jug.

Dickens, Barnaby Rudge, xv.

2. A prison; a jail: often called the stone jug.

[Low.]

He shall be kept in the stone-jug, Charley, like a gentleman.

Dickens, Oliver Twist, xlii.

3. A low woman. [Slang.]

Doest thou think I am a six-penny jug?

J. Preston, Cambyes.

Hark ye, don't you marry that ill-manner'd Jug, the relic of a cheating old rogue that has not left a foot of estate but what he deserved to be hang'd for.

Mrs. Cressiter, Platonic Lady, III.

Bank-jug, the bird Phylloscopus trochilus, or P. rufus, so called from the site and shape of the nest. Also bank-bottle. — Toby-fillpot jug, a jug or picher having the form of a man with a three-cornered hat. Generally toby.

jug¹ (jug), v. t.; pret. and pp. jugged, ppr. jugging. [*Jug*¹, n.] 1. To put into a jug; cook by putting into a jug, and this into boiling water. — 2. To commit to jail; imprison. [Low.] — Jugged hare, hare cut into pieces and stewed with wine and other seasoning.

jug² (jug), v. t.; pret. and pp. jugged, ppr. jugging. [Perhaps a var. of juck, jouk.] Hardly < leel. Njuka, nurse, cherish.] To nestle together; collect in a covey, as partridges: sometimes used as transitive with reflexive pronoun.

Yet when they hear the queeting spaniels gone, They in the evening get together all, With pretty jugging, and each other greet.

Drayton, Miseries of Queen Margaret.

jug³ (jug), v. t.; pret. and pp. jugged, ppr. jugging. [Imitative. Cf. juck.] To utter a particular sound resembling this word, as certain birds do, especially the nightingale.

Who [the nightingale] will jug it forth, but cheerfully and sweetly too. Parthenia Sacra (1688), p. 140. (Latham.)

jug⁴ (jug), n. [Early mod. E. also chuk: see *jug*⁵, v.] A sound fancied to resemble the note uttered by the nightingale and some other birds.

Skelton.

His Jug, Jug, Jug (in griefe) had such a grace.

Goswigne, Complaint of Philomene (ed. Arber).

juga, n. Plural of jugum.

jugal (jū'gal), a. and n. [= F. jugal = Pg. jugal, < L. jugalis, pertaining to a yoke, yoked, matrimonial, < jugum, a yoke: see jugum.] I. a. 1. Relating to a yoke or to marriage; conjugal.

This deed was done When heaven had witness to the jugal knot; (Only the barren ceremony wants, Which by an adverse father is abridg'd.

Middleton and Rowley, Fair Quarrel, II. 2.

2. Pertaining to the jugal; malar; zygomatic. — Jugal point. See craniometry. — Jugal process, the external angular process of the frontal bone. See angular process, under angular.

J. n. One of the bones of the zygoma or zygomatic arch; the malar bone, or principal cheek-bone, especially in those animals, as birds, in which it is a slender rod interposed between a quadrate or quadratojugal bone and the superior maxillary or lacrymal bone. When short and stout, as in man, it is usually called the malar, or malar bone. See quadratojugal. See cuts under Cydnus, Gallinæ, Icthyosaurus, and struth.

jugate (jū-gā'tē), n. pl. [NL. (sc. capita, heads), neut. pl. of L. jugatus; connected: see jugate.] In numis, two or more heads represented upon a medal side by side, or one overlapping the other.

jugate (jū-gāt), a. [J. jugatus (= E. yoked), pp. of jugare, bind, connect, yoke (= E. yoke, v.), < jugum, a yoke (= E. yoke, n.): see jugum. Cf. conjugate, a.] 1. In bot., having the leaflets in pairs: said of pinnately compound leaves: used seldom or never except in composition with unt-, bi-, etc., as in unijugate, etc. — 2. In numis, same as accolated.

Jugate busts of Ptolemy IV. and Arsinoë (?).

E. V. Head, Historia Numorum, p. 578.

jugated (jū-gā'tēd), a. Same as jugate.

jug-bitten, a. Drunk. Naren. [Slang.]

When any of them are wounded, pot-shot, jug-bitten, or cup-shaken, so that they have lost all reasonable faculties of the mind.

John Taylor, Works (1630).

juget, n. and v. A Middle English form of judice.

Chaucer.

jugement, n. A Middle English form of judgment.

Chaucer.

jugerum (jū'je-rum), n.; pl. jugera (-rē). [L.] In Rom. antiq., the common measure of land, a surface 240 Roman feet long and 120 wide, equal to 0.622 acre, or 0.252 hectare.

jug-fishing (jug'fish'ing), n. A method of fishing with empty jugs or bottles, which are corked and thrown overboard to serve as buoys, carrying a line, at the end of which is the hook. It is used for pike, bass, etc. C. Hallock.

jugful (jug'ful), n. [*Jug*¹ + ful.] The amount a jug holds. — Not by a jugful, not by a great deal; by no means. [Slang. U. S.]

jugger, n. See jigger.

jugger, juggement, n. Middle English forms of judge, judgment.

Chaucer.

jigger, jagger (jug'er, -jē), n. [E. Ind.] The common falcon of India, Falco jagger, which is trained to fly at large game. It belongs to the group of noble falcons, like the peregrine. Its nearest relatives are the lanner, Falco saker, of Europe, Asia, and Africa, and F. polygramus, the American lanner, a common falcon on the prairies of the Western States. Also jagger, and jigger or jigger falcon.

Juggernaut (jug'er-nāt), n. [An E. rendering of Hind. Jagannāth.] 1. The popular form of Jagannāth, the name of the famous Hindu idol. See Jagannāth, 2.

About the year 1790 no fewer than 25 Hindus were crushed to death at Isihara on the Ganges, under the wheels of Juggernaut. Quoted in Asiatic Journal, XXIII. 702.

2. Figuratively, something, as an idea, custom, fashion, requirement, etc., to which one either devotes himself or is blindly sacrificed.

Poor Johnny Tetterly staggering under his Moloch of an infant, the Juggernaut that crushed all his enjoyments.

Forster, Dickens, II. 418.

jugging (jug'ing), n. [Verbal n. of *jug*¹, v.] Juggling.

juggle¹ (jug'l), v.; pret. and pp. juggled, ppr. juggling. [J. juggle, jugelen, juggle, play false, < OF. jogler, F. jongler = It. gioculare, juggle, < L. joculari, jest, joke, ML. also play tricks, juggle, < joculus, dim. of jocus, a jest, joke: see joke, jocular.] I. intrans. 1. To play tricks by sleight of hand; perform acts which make a show of extraordinary powers; practise legerdemain; conjure.

A juggling, tooth-drawing, prating mountebank.

B. Jonson, Volpone, II. 2.

What juggling was there upon the boards! What thrusting of knives through many a nose! What baysings of forms! what holdings of swords! What puttyngs of hotkyns through legges and hose!

Jugeland, quoted in Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 287.

2. To play false; practise artifice or imposture.

He these juggling fends no more believed.

Shak., Macbeth, v. 4, 19.

I am in a riddling, rather juggling indisposition, fast and loose, and therefore dare not stir far.

Donne, Letters, cxli.

She never juggles or plays tricks with her understanding.

Leadb., Mackery End.

Shut, shut those juggling eyes, thou ruthless man!

Keats, Lamia, II.

J. trans. To deceive by trick or artifice; impose upon by sleight of hand; trick.

Is 't possible the spells of France should juggle Men into such strange mysteries?

Shak., Hen. VIII., I. 3, 1.

My hope is that the people of England will not suffer themselves to be jugg'd thus out of their faith and religion by a mist of names cast before their eyes.

Milum, Church-Government, I. 6.

juggle¹ (jug'l), n. [*J. juggle*¹, v.] A trick by legerdemain; an imposture; a deception.

I think we may freely conclude that the notion of a God did not come from the Court, that it was not the invention of politicians, and a juggle of state to cozen the people into obedience.

Philosop., Works, I. 1.

Am I to be overawed By what I cannot but know Is a juggle born of the brain?

Tennyson, Maud, xiv. 5.

juggle² (jug'l), v. and n. A dialectal variant of juggle.

juggle³ (jug'l), n. [Cf. juggle, n.] A block of timber cut to a length, either in the round or split. E. H. Knight.

juggler¹ (jug'ler), n. [Early mod. E. also jugler, < ME. jugler, juguler, jogelour, < OF. jogleur, juglor, jogleur, etc., also with inserted n, jongleur, jongleur, F. jongleur (cf. Pr. joglar) = It. giocatore, < L. joculator, a jester, joker, ML. also juggler, trickster, < joculari, jest, joke: see *juggle*¹.] 1. One who juggles or practises sleight of hand; one who performs tricks of great dexterity.

Ther saugh I pleyen jugelours, Magiellens, and tregeours.

Chaucer, House of Fame, I. 1250.

Nimble jugglers that deceive the eye.

Shak., C. of E., I. 2, 94.

The joculator regia, or king's juggler, was anciently an officer of note in the royal household: and we find from Domesday Book that Burd, who held that office in the reign of the Conqueror, was a man of property.

Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 280.

2. A cheat; a deceiver; a trickish fellow.

O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom! You thief of love! what, have you come by night And stolen my love's heart from him?

Shak., M. N. D., III. 2, 222.

They were no jugglers, but really were that which they appeared to be.

De Quincey, Rhetoric.

juggler² (jug'ler), n. [Cf. *juggle*², joggle, n.] In coal-mining, one of several timbers resting against one another at the top, so as to leave a triangular passageway. [Pennsylvania.]

jugglery (jug'ler-es), n. [*J. juggler*¹ + -ery.]

A woman who practises jugglery. T. Warton.

jugglery (jug'lar-i), n.; pl. juggleries (-iz). [ME. joglerie, < OF. joglerie, < jogler, juggle: see juggle.] The art or performances of a juggler; legerdemain; trickery; hence, imposture; deception.

jugglingly (jug'ling-ly), adv. In a juggling or deceptive manner.

Juglandaceae (jō-glan-dā'sē-ē), n. pl. Same as Juglandea.

Juglandet, n. [ME., < L. juglans (jugland-), walnut: see Juglans.] The walnut.

Juglans in lands now spryng.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 28.

Juglandea (jō-glan'dē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (De Candolle, 1813), < Juglans (jugland-) + -ea.] The walnut family; a natural order consisting of about 30 species of trees, belonging to the north temperate zone of both hemispheres. The flowers are monocious, the sterile ones being commonly borne in loose catkins; the calyx, when present, is adherent to the scale; and the stamens are numerous. The fertile flowers are solitary, or in a small erect spike. The perianth is adherent to the ovary, which contains a single erect ovule. The fruit is mostly a dry, nut-like drupaceous nut. The leaves are alternate, odd-pinnate, without stipules. Many species are valuable for their timber, nuts, and other products. The important genera are Carya and Juglans. See cuts under Hickory and walnut. Also Juglandaceae.

Juglans (jō'glanz), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), < L. juglan (jugland-), a walnut, a walnut-tree, < Jove, Jove, Jupiter (contr. as in Jupiter), + glans, an acorn: see glans, gland.] A leading genus of the Juglandea, or walnut family. In contrast with Carya, the hickory, the nut of this genus has a ridged surface, with the husk closely adherent. J. regia is the common walnut of Europe, though indigenous chiefly in Persia and northern India. It is valued for its light, tough, and well-colored wood, its nuts and the oil they yield, and some medicinal products. J. nigra is the black walnut of North America, which furnishes the well-known rich-brown cabinet-wood. J. cinerea, the butternut, yields a lighter-colored and softer but durable wood, a more oily nut, and an official cathartic. These species all afford dyestuffs. Both leaves and fruit of this genus occur abundantly in a fossil state in many Cretaceous and Tertiary deposits. Forms which vary slightly from the living plant are sometimes called Juglandites; those founded on leaves alone are often distinguished as Juglandiphylla, and fossil wood with nearly the structure of walnut has been named Juglandinum. See cut under walnut.

jugula, n. Plural of jugulum.

jugular (jō'gū-lār), a. and n. [= F. jugularis = Pg. jugular = It. giugulare, < NL. jugularis, < L. jugular, also jugulus, the bone which joins the shoulders and the breast, the collar-bone, also the hollow of the neck above the collar-bone, dim. of jugum, a yoke: see jugum.] I. a. 1. In anat., pertaining to the throat in general.—2. In ichth.: (a) Having the ventral fins situated at the throat, in advance of the pectorals: as, a jugular fish. Cf. Jugularon. (b) Situated in advance of the pectorals: as, jugular fins.—3. In ornith., pertaining to the jugulum.—Jugular foramen, fossa juglion, etc. See the nouns.—Jugular plate. (a) In ichth., one of two plates developed between the ram of the mandible, as in the ganoid fishes of the genera Amblo and Polypterus: supposed by some to represent branchiostegial rays. (b) In entom., one of the large corneous plates covering the maxillae in certain Coleoptera.—Jugular process, a prominence of the lateral border of the occipital bone, partly circumscribing the jugular foramen.—Jugular sclerites. In entom., a pair of small sclerites situated in the membrane connecting the head with the thorax in certain insects. These sclerites are believed by Newport to be displaced portions of the prothorax and to represent prothoracic parapsara.—Jugular vein. (a) One of two large veins of the throat. The external jugular vein collects the blood from the superficial parts of the head and neck, and discharges it into the subclavian vein. In man it may be observed just below the skin, running perpendicularly down on each side of the neck from near the angle of the jaw. The internal jugular vein returns the blood from the inside of the skull, beginning at the jugular foramen by confluence of the sinuses of the skull, descending the neck deeply in the carotid sheath on the outer side of the carotid artery, and ending by confluence with the subclavian to form the innominate vein. See cuts under neck and thoracic. (b) In ichth., one of the anterior cardinal veins, which bring back blood from the head and anterior extremities. Also called vena jugularis.

II. n. 1. In anat., a jugular vein.

He is pinned to the floor by a hand fixed in his collar . . . and four knuckles embedded in his jugular.

D. Jerrold, Men of Character, II. 7.

2. In ichth., a jugular fish.

Jugulares (jō-gū-lā-rēs), n. pl. [NL., pl. of L. jugularis, jugular: see jugular.] A Linnean order of fishes having jugular fins. [Not in use.]

jugulate (jō'gū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. jugulated, ppr. jugulating. [L. jugulatus, pp. of jugulare (> Pg. jugular = F. juguler), cut the throat of, kill, < jugulum, the hollow of the neck above the collar-bone: see jugular.] To kill by cutting the jugular vein; cut the throat of. Cariyle, French Rev., I. iii. 7. [Rare.]

jugulation (jō-gū-lā'shon), n. [L. jugulatio, a cutting of one's throat, a killing, < L. jugulare, pp. jugulatus, cut the throat of, kill: see jugulate.] The sudden cutting short of a disease by therapeutic interference.

jugulator (jō'gū-lā-tor), n. [L. jugulator, a cutthroat, < L. jugulare, cut the throat of: see jugulate.] A cutthroat or murderer. Cowell. jugulocephalic (jō'gū-lō-sē-fal'ik or -sēf'g-lik), a. [L. jugulum, the throat, + Gr. κεφαλή, head.] In anat., of or belonging both to the head and the throat.—Jugulocephalic vein, a vein which sometimes occurs in man, uniting the jugular and cephalic veins.

jugulum (jō'gū-lum), n.; pl. jugula (-lā). [NL. use of L. jugulum, the throat: see jugular.] 1. In ornith., the lower part of the throat; the fore part of the neck, between the gula and the pectus. See cut under bird.—2. In entom.: (a) A name proposed by Knoch and used by some writers to indicate the lower surface of the prothorax of a beetle. (b) A name given by Kirby to the basal piece on the lower side of an insect's head, now generally known as the gula. (c) A name sometimes applied to the occipital foramen, an orifice in the back of the head, through which the alimentary canal and other organs pass to the thorax.

jugum (jō'gum), n.; pl. jugula (-gā). [L., a yoke (for oxen), a collar (for horses), a cross-beam, cross-rail, the ridge or summit of a mountain (= Gr. ὄρος = E. yoke), < jungere (root jug), join: see join and yoke.] 1. In bot.: (a) A pair of leaflets in a compound leaf. (b) A ridge on the carpal of an umbelliferous plant.—2. [cap.] A yellow star of magnitude 3.3, in the constellation of the Lyre; γ Lyrae.

Jugurthine (jō-ger'thin), a. [L. Jugurtha (see def.) + -ine.] Relating or pertaining to Jugurtha (died 104 B. C.), King of Numidia.—Jugurthine war, the war (about 110–106 B. C.) waged by the Romans against Jugurtha and rendered famous by Sallust's history.

juice (jūs), n. [ME. juis, juce, june, jus, < OF. jus, F. jus, < L. jus, broth, soup, juice, = Skt. yusha, soup.] 1. The watery part of vegetables, especially of fruits; the expressible or extractive fluid of a plant or fruit.

Thel seyn that if the juice of the eerbe that is called morous galline rubri be putt in hise nose-thrills whanne he blygneth to suffre the access of the quarteyn, he schal be hool. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnival), p. 20.

Now no more

The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.

Shak., A. and C., v. 2, 284.

2. The fluid part of an animal body or substance; in the plural (its most common use in this sense), all the fluid constituents of the body.

Perch'd like a crow upon a three-legg'd stool
Till all his juice is dried. Tennyson, Andley Court.
Gastric intestinal, etc., juice. See the adjectives.—Spanish juice, the extract of the root of the licorice, Glycyrrhiza glabra.

juice (jūs), v. t.; pret. and pp. juiced, ppr. juicing. [juice, n.] To moisten or provide with juice. [Rare.]

Some gallants perchance count all conquests dry meat which are not juiced with blood.

Fuller, Holy War, p. 164.

juiceful (jōs'fūl), a. [juice + -ful.] Full of or abounding in juice.

Beside in Med'ine simples had that power
That none need then the planetary hour
To help their working, they so juiceful were.

Drayton, Noah's Flood.

juiceless (jōs'les), a. [juice + -less.] Destitute of juice; dry; without moisture.

So does an ivy, green when old,
And sprouting in decay,
In juiceless, joyless arms infold
A sapling young and gay.

Somerville, Canidia's Epithalamium.

juiciness (jōs'i-ness), n. The state of being juicy or of abounding with juice; succulence in plants or fruits.

juicy (jō'si), a. [juice + -y.] Abounding with juice; moist; succulent.

And, when his juicy salads fall'd,
Sle'd carrot pleas'd him well.

Cowper, Epitaph on a Hare.

juilt, n. A Middle English form of July. Chaucer.

juisset, n. [ME., also jowise; < OF. juise, juys, juise, juise, etc., < L. judicium, judgment: see judicious.] Judgment; sentence.

Therefore I ake deeth and my juysse.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 881.

jube (jō'bē), n. [F. jube (the fruit) (ML. reflex juba) (cf. It. dim. giuggiola, the fruit, giuggiola, the tree), < L. styphium, the fruit, styphium, the tree, < Gr. ὕψος, jube (the fruit), < ἵψος, jube-tree, < Ar. sisuf, Pers. sayesufun, sisafun, siafun, the jube-tree. Cf. Pg. açofusa, jube, from the Ar., with the Ar. article al.] 1. The name of several species of Flowering Branch of Jube-tree (Zizyphus juba).

a, flower; b, fruit.

plants of the genus Zizyphus.—2. The edible fruit of these plants.—3. A confection made of gum arabic or gelatin, sweetened and flavored so as to resemble the jube-fruit. Also called jube paste, a name originally applied to a jelly made from the jube.

jube (jūk), v. i. A dialectal variant of jouk.

jube, v. t. See jouk.

Julaceae (jō-lā'shē-ā), a. [L. julus, catkin, + -aceus.] In bot., resembling an ament or catkin.

julep (jō'lep), n. [F. julep = Pr. julep = It. giulebbo, giulebbo, < Sp. julepe = Pg. julepo, < Ar. jūlāb, < Pers. jūlāb, assibilated form of gūlāb, julep (a sweet drink), also rose-water, < gūl, a rose, + āb, water.] A sweet drink; a demulcent, acidulous, or mucilaginous mixture.

A coarser julep well may cool his worship;
This cordial is for gallants.

Masinger, Parliament of Love, tit. l.

And first, behold this cordial julep here,
That flames and dances in his crystal bounds,
With spirits of balm and fragrant syrups mix'd.

Milton, Comus, l. 672.

Camphor julep, a watery solution of camphor.—Mint julep, an American drink made by pouring liquor (originally and preferably brandy) upon sugar and broken ice, to which are added sprigs of fresh mint in sufficient quantity to flavor the whole very strongly.

Julian (jō'lyan), a. [= F. Julien = Sp. Pg. Julian = It. Giuliano, < L. Julianus, pertaining to Julius Cæsar (also a Roman prænomen), < Julius, Julius. Cf. July.] Pertaining to or derived from Julius Cæsar.—Julian calendar, epoch era. See the nouns.—Julian epoch. Same as Julian era.—Julian period, a period of 7,980 Julian years, proposed by Joseph Scaliger in 1582 as a universal standard of comparison in chronology, consisting of the years of the solar and lunar cycles and the cycle of the indiction multiplied into each other (28 × 19 × 15). The first years of these cycles coincided in the year 4713 B. C., from which the period is reckoned. The first year of the Christian era being found by calculation to correspond to the year 4714 of the Julian period, all previous and subsequent comparisons can be made by simple subtraction or addition. This period is still used in the computations of chronologists and astronomers.—Julian year, the average year of 365.25 days according to the calendar as adjusted by Julius Cæsar. See Julian calendar, under calendar.

Julianist (jō'lyan-ist), n. [Julian (see def.) + -ist.] Eccles., one of a sect of Monophysites which held the body of Christ to be incorruptible: so called from Julian, Bishop of Halicarnassus early in the sixth century.

julians (jō'lyans), n. [A var. in pl. or poss. form of the fem. name Julian, Gillian: see jūz.] The daffodil. See Narcissus. [Prov. Eng.]

Julidinae (jō-lī-dī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Julis (-id-) + -inae.] A subfamily of labroid fishes, typified by the genus Julis, to which different limits have been applied. As generally understood by American ichthyologists, it includes labrids with a continuous lateral line abruptly bent behind, caniniform teeth in front of the jaws and moderate ones in the sides, dorsal continuous and with 8 or 9 spines, and 8 weak anal spines. The species are numerous in all tropical seas, and a few extend into temperate ones. The pudding-wife (Platyglanis radiatus) occurs along the southeastern coast of the United States, and the kelp-fish (Platyglanis semidolatus) is a Californian representative.

julienne (F. pron. zhū-lī-en'), n. [Cooks' F., said to be so called from a French caterer in Boston named Julien. The F. name Julien = E. Julian.] A clear soup containing various herbs or vegetables cut in very small pieces.

Juliflora (jū-lī-flō-rā), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, about 1840), < L. julus, catkin, + flos, floris, flower.] In bot., a group of plant-orders including, according to some recent authors, the Amentaceae (birches, oaks, willows, etc.), the Piperaceae (peppers, etc.), and the Urticaceae (nettles, breadfruits, elms, etc.), characterized in general as exogens having their flowers in catkins or compact clusters, and wanting both true calyx and corolla.

Juliform (jū-lī-flōrm), a. [L. julus, catkin, + forma, form.] In bot., having the form of a catkin. [Rare.]

Juliet (jū-lī-ō), n. [It. giulio, < L. Julius, Julius.] A coin formerly current at Leghorn and Florence, in value about 12 cents. Bailey.

He spent there in six months
Twelve thousand ducats, and (to my knowledge)
Received in dowry with you not one Julio.
Webster, White Devil.

Take here, and pay him, and give him this Julio over and above, to hang himselfe.
Bensons, Passengers' Dialogues (1619).

Julis (jū-līs), n. [L., a kind of rockfish.] The typical genus of fishes of the subfamily Julidinae. J. mediterranea or vulgaris is known as the rainbow-trout, from its brilliant colors.

July (jū-lī), formerly jū-lī, n. [ME. July, Julye, also Julie; < OF. jule, jul (also juillet, juignot, juniot, etc., F. juillet) = Sp. Julio = Pg. Julho = It. Giulio = D. G. Dan. Sw. Juli, < L. Julius, July, prop. adj. (sc. mensis), month of Julius, so called after Julius Cæsar, who was born in this month. The name was imposed by Cæsar himself when reforming the calendar. It was previously called Quintilis, or the fifth month, according to the old Roman calendar, in which March was the first month of the year. The name Julius in ME. and early mod. E. was commonly July.] The seventh month of the year, consisting of thirty-one days, during which the sun enters the sign Leo.

Memorandum, of a-wardes y-made bi the Maister and Wardens the xvjth day of July, the yeres of the Reigne of Kyng Edward the vijth.

English Glosse (E. E. T. S.), p. 322.

Er that daies eighte
Were passed er the month of July bisille.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 892.

Proofs as clear as founts in July, when We see each grain of gravel.
Shak., Ham. VIII., l. 1, 154.

July-flower (jū-lī-flōw'er), n. [From a mistaken notion that this is the uncorrected name.] 1. The gillyflower, Manthus Caryophyllus.

The July-flower declares his gentleness.
Drayton, Pastoral, Eol. ix.

2. In Jamaica, the leguminous tree Prosopis juliflora. See mesquite.—July-flower grass. [Accom. from gillyflower, the carnation.] Same as carnation-grass.

Julmart (jū-märt), n. [F. jumart; cf. jument, a mare; see jument.] A fabulous animal, the offspring of a bull and a mare or a she-ass, or of a horse or an ass and a cow.

Mules and jumarts, the one from the mixture of an ass and a mare, the other from the mixture of a bull and a mare, are frequent.
Locke.

jumbalt, n. Same as jumble, 2.

Jumbals, certain sweetmeats.
Dunston, Ladies' Dictionary.

jumber, v. t. [ME. jumbren, jombren, var. of jumpren, early mod. E. jumper, mix: see jump, jumpers, and jumble.] To mix confusedly; jumble.

No jombre ake no discordant thing yfere.
Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 1037.

jumble (jum'bl), v.; pret. and pp. jumbled, ppr. jumbling. [ME. jumbolen; a var. of jumber, with freq. term. -le (-el) for -er.] I. trans. 1. To mix in a confused mass; put or throw together without order: often followed by together or up.

Where th' Elements lay jumbled all together,
Where hot and colde were larring each with either.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 1.

The coach jumbled us insensibly into some sort of familiarity.
Steele, Spectator, No. 152.

2. To stir up; arouse.

34th. To write what letters I had to write, that I might go abroad with my wife, who was not well, only to jumble her, and so to the Duke of York's playhouses.
Pope, Diary, III. 228.

II. intrans. 1. To meet or come together confusedly or promiscuously; be mixed up.

They will all meet and jumble together into a perfect harmony.
Swift.

2. To act or work confusedly; stumble along; founder.

Than to the hymn (churn) that he did stoure
And jumble at it quhill he swett.
Wyl of Awchermuchty (Child's Ballads, VIII. 119).

I have forgotten my logic, but yet I can jumble at a syllogism, and make an argument of it to prove it by.
Latimer, Works, l. 247.

jumble (jum'bl), n. [Formerly also, in def. 2, jumbal; < jumble, v.] 1. A confused mixture, mass, or collection; a state of disorder or confusion.

Had the world been cemented from that supposed fortuitous jumble, this hypothesis had been tolerable.
Glanville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, xviii.

A jumble of musical sounds on a viol or a flute . . . gives pleasure to the unskillful ear.
Emerson, Art.

2. A thin crisp cake, composed of flour, sugar, butter, and eggs, flavored with lemon-peel or sweet almonds.—Syn. 1. Farrago, Medley, etc. See mixture.

jumble-head (jum'bl-hēd), n. A seed of the Indian licorice, Abrus precatorius.

jumblement (jum'bl-ment), n. [< jumble + -ment.] The act of jumbling, or the state of being jumbled; confused mixture. [Rare.]

Shall we think this noble frame was never made? or that it was made by a casual jumblement of atoms?
Hancock, in Boyle's Lecture Sermons, II. 210. (Latimer).

jumbler (jum'bl-er), n. One who jumbles things or mixes them confusedly.

jumbly (jum'bl-ly), adv. In a jumbling or confused manner.

jumbo (jum'bō), n. [So called from Jumbo, the name of a very large elephant, the largest known in captivity, made well known in England and America in connection with shows about 1880-85. The name was given as having an African semblance; cf. mumbo-jumbo.] A very large individual of its kind or class. [Colloq.]

A combination that would have knocked into crepuscular nebulosity the combined successes of that jumbo of successful business men.
Muscle and Drama, X. ii. 2.

jume (jūm), n. [Prob. a native name.] A saline chenopodiaceous plant (Salscornea), growing extensively in the Argentine Republic and Patagonia, yielding when burned an unusual amount (41 per cent.) of carbonate of soda. U. S. Consular Reports, No. lxix (1886), p. 98.

jumelt, n. An obsolete form of gemel.

The yates jumelles, mighty and strong,
To smite the trouth, ful large were and long.
Rom. of Parthenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 1182.

jumelle (F. pron. zhū-mel'), a. and n. [F., fem. of jumeau, twin: see jumel, gemel, gimbal.] I. a. Twin, or forming a couple: said of certain tools and objects of use or ornament which are always in pairs: as, a jumelle opera-glass (one having two tubes).

II. n. In the plural, the side pieces of a loom, in which the cylinders are fitted.

jument (jū-ment), n. [OF. jument, a beast of burden, F. jument, a mare, = Sp. Pg. jumento, an ass, jumenta, a female ass, = It. giumento, a beast of burden, jumenta, a mare, < L. jumentum, a beast of burden, contr. of jugmentum*, < jungere, join, yoke: see jugum, join.] A beast of burden; also, a beast in general.

They are born to labour, to misery, to carry burdens like juments.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 214.

Jumenta (jū-men'tā), n. pl. [NL., pl. of L. jumentum, draft-cattle.] In soöl., same as Pachydermata. Cuvier.

jump (jump), v. [ME. jumpen (also found in freq. form jumbren, jombren: see jumber, jumpers, jumble), < Sw. dial. gump, spring, jump, = Dan. gump, jolt, = MEG. gumpen, jump: cf. G. dial. gampen, jump, hop. These words are connected with a large number of words, mostly dial., of related import.] I. intrans. 1. To rise off one's feet by a sudden muscular effort; throw one's self in any direction with both feet raised from the ground; spring from the ground or from any support; leap: as, to jump up and down; to jump over a hurdle.

Not the worst of the three but jump twelve foot and a half by the squle.
Shak., W. T., iv. 4, 347.

The lightly jumpin' glowrin' trout
That thro' my waters play.
Burns, Humble Petition of Bruar Water.

2. To go or move with a leap or with leaps; spring quickly; hence, figuratively, to jolt; throb violently, etc.

The wynde blew not so straynably as byfore, by reason wherof the sayde ancre helde vs frome jumpynge and betynge vpon the sayde rok.
Sir R. Grayford, Fylgrymage, p. 62.

The noise of the rattling of the wheels, and of the prancing horses, and of the jumping chariots.
Nahum III. 2.

Jenny kissed me when we met,
Jumping from the chair she sat in.
Leigh Hunt, Jenny Kissed Me.

3. To go along; agree; tally; coincide: followed by with.

In some sort it *jump*s with my humour.
Shak., I Hen. IV., i. 2, 72.

The sad aspect this prison doth afford
*Jump*s with the measure that my heart doth keep.
Webster and Dekker, Sir Thomas Wyatt.

4. To meet accidentally. [Prov. Eng.]—Jumping-off place, the "end of the world"; the border of civilization. [Slang.]—Jumping plant-louse. Same as sea-louse.—To jump at, to embrace or accept with eagerness; catch at: as, he jumped at the offer. [Colloq.]—To jump over, to pass over, disregard, or omit something intervening.—Syn. 1 and 2. Leap, Spring, etc. See skip.

II. trans. 1. To pass by a leap; spring or leap over; pass over suddenly or hastily: as, to jump a stream.—2. To give a jumping motion to; move with a spring or bound; propel by a jump or jumps; drive onward: as, to jump a child up and down.

Jump her and thump her.
Shak., W. T., III. 1, 195.

The light-draught, broad-bottomed stern-wheeler, constructed with a view to jumping her over the bars at low water.
The American, VI. 40.

3. To skip over; pass by or neglect; give no heed to; act or proceed in disregard of: as, to jump all minor considerations; to jump a claim (which see, below).—4. To drive forward or through as if by leaps; act upon or about impetuously.

To jump a body with a dangerous physis
That's sure of death without it.
Shak., Cor., III. 1, 154.

Why, there was Sir John Moneyman could jump
A business quickly.
B. Jonson, Devil is an Ass, iv. 1.

5. In the game of checkers, to pass by or skip over (an opposing man) in moving. The man which is jumped is removed from the board.—6. Among sportsmen, to start or cause to start; cause to leap or spring, as game from a cover; flush.

We had half an hour's good sport in jumping these little ducks.
T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 62.

7. In forging, to upset or shape, as a bar or rod, by endwise blows. A transverse piece forged on the end of a bar is said to be jumped on.—8. To risk or hazard.

You must . . . jump the after inquiry at your own peril.
Shak., Cymbeline, v. 4, 122.

If . . . that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come.

Shak., Macbeth, l. 7, 7.

To jump a claim, in the United States and Australia, to take possession of public land to which another has previously acquired a claim, the first occupant, by squatter law and custom, and under the preemption laws of the United States, having the first right to the land.—To jump one's bail, to abscond in order to avoid trial, as an indicted person, leaving one's sureties liable for the bail-bond. [Slang, U. S.]

jump¹ (jump), n. [*< jump*¹, v.] 1. The act of jumping; a leap; a spring; a bound; hence, a passing over; an omission: as, a high jump; the jump of a gun; a jump of a whole century.

We believe . . . that Nature does make jumps now and then.
Huxley, Lay Sermons, p. 297.

2. A risk; a venture; a hazard.

Our fortune lies upon this jump.

Shak., A. and C., III. 2, 7.

3. In geol. and mining, a slight fault or dislocation of a vein.—4. In building, an abrupt rise in a level course of brickwork or masonry, to accommodate the work to the inequality of the ground.—5. A kind of dance. Formerly also called dump.—From the jump, from the start or beginning. [Colloq.]—Full jump, full speed.—Hop, skip, and jump. See hop.—On the jump, on the keen jump, on the go; on the rush; busily engaged; hard at work. [Colloq., U. S.]

De tar-kittle's a-billin' on de keen jump, Mas'r Mellany.
T. Winthrop, Sacchariana Mellany.

jump² (jump), a. [< jump, v. t., 4.] 1. Matched.

And thou to be jump with Alexander.

Lyly, Alexander and Campaspe (1584).

He said the musike best thlike powers pleasd
Was *jump*s concord betwene our wit and will.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, III.

2. Exact; precise; nicely fitting.

Acrosticks and telestichs on jump names.

B. Jonson, Excursion upon Vulcan.

jump³ (jump), adv. [*< jump*¹, a.] Exactly; precisely; fitly.

How *jump*s he hitteth the nails on the head.

Shakespeare, p. 24. (Hamlet).

Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Shak., Hamlet, l. 1, 28.

jump² (jump), n. [Prob. < *jump*¹, as a garment to be 'slipped' on; cf. slip and slop, names of garments to be 'slipped' on. Less prob. a nasalized form of jup, jupo. Cf. *juniper*².] A garment of loose make, worn especially for undress. (a) In the seventeenth century, a short loose coat.

Instead of lac'd coats, Belts, and Pantaloon,
Your Velvet Jumps, Gold Chains, and grave Fur Gowns.

Wycherley, Gentleman Dancing-Master, Epil.

A jacket, jump, or loose coat reaching to the thighs, . . .
with sleeves to the waist. Randle Holme.

(b) pl. Toward the close of the eighteenth century, a kind of bodice for women, which apparently took the place of stays when the wearer was not carefully dressed. Also called jump.

Bless me, Mr. Carmina, don't mind my shape this bout, for I'm only in jumps. Poole, Taste, l. 1.

jumpable (jum'pə-bl), a. [*< jump*¹ + -able.] Capable of being jumped.

Plenty of fair jumpable fencibles. Sainsbury Rev., CLXVI. 282.

jump-about (jum'pə-bout'), n. The goutwort, Agopodium Podagraria. [Prov. Eng.]

jump-coat (jum'kōt), n. Same as *jump*² (a).

jump-coupling (jum'kup'ling), n. In mech., same as thimble coupling (which see, under coupling).

juniper¹ (jum'pēr), n. [*< jump*¹, v., + -er.] 1. One who or that which jumps. Specifically—
2. One who practises leaping or dancing as a part of divine worship. The practice has prevailed among certain Methodists, chiefly in Wales, sometimes among Irvingites, and among the Shakers. A Russian dissenting sect bears a name translated by Junipers.

* Jenny [was] a Welshwoman; her rude forefathers were gout-herds on week-days, and Junipers on Sundays.
Savage, R. Medlicott, III. 12.

Another sect is the Junipers, among whom the erotic element is disagreeably prominent.

D. M. Wallace, Russia, p. 302.

3. One who jumps a claim to land. [U. S. and Australia.]

The funeral of a well-known juniper, who had been shot in a quarrel over a piece of disputed land.
The Century, XXXVII. 778.

4. In soöl., any animal which habitually jumps, leaps, or hops as a mode of progression. (a) A fish which often leaps out of water. (b) Any saltatorial insect, as a hallowid, payllid, grasshopper, etc. (c) The maggot or larva of the cheese-fly; a cheese-hopper.

5. In mech., a tool or contrivance which works with a jumping motion. (a) In quarrying: (1) A drill worked by hand and struck by a hammer. (2) A long drill worked by hand, but not struck by a hammer. It has a chisel-edge at each end, and is swollen in the middle to give more weight and thus add to the force of the blow. (Morgan, Mining Tools, p. 48.) Called in the United States a cheese-drill. (b) A spring controlling the star-wheel of a clock or a click in a repeating watch.

There must also be a slight spring or juniper somewhere on the ratchet teeth to keep them exactly in the proper place for the click to catch next time.

Sir E. Beckett, Clocks and Watches, p. 141.

(c) A bit used in a jointer. (d) A special form of plowshare for rough soil, or soil filled with roots. (e) In telegr., a wire used to cut out an instrument or part of a circuit, or to close temporarily a gap in a circuit.

6. A kind of sleigh: usually a simple box on runners, especially on runners which are parts of the poles forming the thills, and the middle parts of which are made thinner so as to bend. [U. S.]—7. Naut., a preventer-rope made fast in such a way as to prevent a yard, mast, or boom from jumping, or giving way in an upward direction, in heavy weather.—Minute-jumper, an electric clock in which the hands move only at the end of each minute, the minute-hand moving over a whole minute at each step.

juniper² (jum'pēr), n. [Cf. *jump*².] A kind of loose jacket with sleeves worn by some classes of laborers, as seamen and stovedores, usually with overalls, reaching to the thighs, and buttoned the whole length in front; also, any upper garment of similar shape.

Men and women [Eskimo] are alike clothed with jacket and trousers. The jacket is a hooded juniper with openings only for face and hands. The hood is enlarged when necessary so as to admit of an infant being carried inside against the woman's back.

A. W. Greeley, Arctic Service, p. 32.

A green-check cotton waist or blouse sewed into a belt—the masculine uniform of Fairharbor: he calls it a juniper.

E. S. Phelps, Old Maid's Paradise.

juniper³ (jum'pēr), v. t. [*< ME. jumpren. jumpren, also found in var. form, jumbren, jombren, mix. freq. of jumpen, jump; see juniper, jump.] To mix together; mingle; jumble.

Ne juniper eke no discordant thing yfere.

Chaucer, Troilus, II. 1087.

jumping-bean (jum'ping-bēn), n. Same as jumping-seed.

jumping-betty (jum'ping-bet'i), n. The garden-balsam, Impatiens balsamina: so called from the elastic bursting of the pods and projection of the seeds. [Prov. Eng.]

jumping-bug (jum'ping-bug), n. Any insect of the family Halticoridæ. See Halticoridæ.

jumping-deer (jum'ping-dēr), n. The black-tailed deer of North America, Capreolus macrotis. See cut under mule-deer.

jumping-hare (jum'ping-hār), n. A jerboa-like rodent quadruped of South Africa, Pedetes capifer or Helamys capensis, of the family Dipodidæ and subfamily Pedetina, nearly as large as a hare, which it somewhat resembles. The hind feet are 4-toed, with stout hoof-like claws; the tail is about as long as the body and bushy throughout; and the ears are high. The jumping-hares clear many feet at a bound. They replace the true jerboas in South Africa.

jumpingly (jum'ping-li), adv. So as to be jump or exact; closely; exactly.

Do not imitate
So jumpingly, so precisely,
And step for step so strytha.
Drant, tr. of Horace's Art of Poetry.

jumping-mouse (jum'ping-mous), n. Same as deer-mouse, 1.

jumping-mullet (jum'ping-mul'et), n. 1. Same as jump-rocks.—2. A fish of the family Mugilidæ, Mugil albula. [Cape Hatteras, U. S.]

jumping-rat (jum'ping-rat), n. A jerboa, or other animal of the family Dipodidæ.

jumping-seed (jum'ping-sēd), n. The seed of a Mexican euphorbiaceous plant, infested by the larva of a small tortricid moth, Carpocapsa saltitans. See Carpocapsa. The uneasy movements of the imprisoned larva when it is warmed make the seed roll about on a flat surface, or even jump a slight distance in the air. The larva pupates in January or February, and the moth soon after issues through a hole previously cut by the larva. Also called jumping-bean, dart-bean.

jumping-shrew (jum'ping-shrō), n. An insectivorous mammal of the family Macroscelididæ; an elephant-shrew. See cut under elephant-shrew.

jumping-spider (jum'ping-spi'dēr), n. A spider of the family Attidæ, which spins no web, but captures its prey by leaping upon it; any attid.

jump-joint (jum'pjoint), n. A butt-joint; in ship-building, the characteristic joint of a carvel-built vessel.

jumply (jum'pli), adv. [*< jump*¹, a., + -ly.] In a jump manner; exactly; suitably; opportunely.

My meeting so jumply with them makes me abashed with the strangeness of it. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia.

jump-ring (jum'ping), n. In metal-work, particularly in jewelry, a ring made of a bar or wire with plane ends abutted against each other, but not welded.

jump-rocks (jum'p-roks), n. [*< jump*¹, v., + obj. rocks.] A catostomine fish, Moxostoma valenciennum, with a 3-lobed air-bladder, from 10 to 12 dorsal rays, and a very slender body, rarely attaining a foot in length. It inhabits the South Atlantic States from the James to the Chattahoochee river. Also called jumping-mullet.

jump-seat (jum'p-sēt), n. An extra seat under the main seat of a buggy so arranged that the main seat can be shifted to a position further back, and the extra seat brought up in front.

jump-up-and-kiss-me (jum'p-up-and-kis'mē), n. The pansy, Viola tricolor. [Prov. Eng.]

jump-up-Johnny (jum'p-up-jon'i), n. Same as Johnny-jump-up. [Local.]

Walks branching thence in four directions, and along them beds of jump-up-Johnnies.

The Century, XXXV. 947.

jump-weld (jum'p-weld), n. A butt-weld.

jun. or Jun. An abbreviation of junior.

Juncaceæ (jung-kā'sē-s), n. pl. [NL. (C. A. Agardh, about 1825), < Juncus + -aceæ.] A natural order of endogenous plants, the true rushes, typified by the genus Juncus. In technical characters this order is closely allied to the Liliaceæ, having a perianth of 6 segments in two series, 6 or rarely 8 stamens, and a superior ovary, with 3 cells or placentas. But it is distinguished by the glumaceous, calyx-like texture of the perianth, on account of which, as well as of its appearance, it resembles the sedges and grasses. The species number about 300, belonging to 14 genera. These plants prefer wet ground and the cooler latitudes. The genera Juncus and Luania (the wood-rush) are almost cosmopolitan; others are more local. Also Juncos. See cut under Juncus.

juncaceous (jung-kā'shius), a. [< NL. juncaceus, < L. juncus, a rush; see Juncus, junk.] In bot., pertaining to or resembling the Juncaceæ, or those plants of which the rush is the type; juncous.

Juncaginæ (jung-kā-jin's-ē), n. pl. [NL. (C. Richard, 1808), < Juncago (Juncagin), a former generic name, + -æ.] A natural order of plants. It consists of erect herbs with rush-like leaves, and spikes or racemes of inconspicuous flowers, with a perianth of six divisions and an ovary of 3 or more carpels. They are unimportant plants growing in marshes. The genera are Triglochin, Scheuchzeria, and Tetrorchium.

juncal (jung'kal), a. [< NL. juncalis, < L. juncus, a rush; see Juncus.] 1. Belonging to or concerned with the genus Juncus.—2. Belonging or relating to the Juncaceæ.

Juncalæ (jung-kā'lēz), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1846), pl. of juncalis; see juncal.] According to Lindley, an "alliance" of plants embracing the orders Juncaceæ and Araceæ.

juncatet, n. An obsolete form of *junket*².

Juncos (jun'sē-s), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1815), < Juncus + -os.] A synonym of Juncaceæ.

junciform (jun'si-fōrm), a. [< L. juncus, a rush, + forma, shape.] Reed-like; growing like a rush: as, a junciform polyp.

junkerite (jung'-or yōng'kēr-it), n. [Named after M. Junker, director of the mines at Poullaouen, France.] In mineral., same as siderite.

Junco (jung'kō), n. [NL.; origin uncertain.] 1. A notable genus of the finch family, Fringillidæ; the North American snowbirds. Junco hiemalis is the black snowbird so abundant in winter in most parts of the United States, about 6½ inches long, of a blackish slate-color with white belly and white lateral tail-feathers and pink bill. Several other species or varieties occur in the western United States and Mexico, chiefly in mountainous regions, as the Oregon snowbird (J. oregonus), the gray-headed snowbird (J. oasiceps), and the Mexican snowbird (J. albicollis). The genus was instituted by Wagler in 1831, and later called by Audubon Niphasa. See cut under snowbird.

2. [i. c.] Any bird of this genus; a snowbird.

juncos (jung'kus), a. [= Sp. Pg. juncoso = It. giuncoso, < L. juncosus, full of rushes, < juncus, a rush; see Juncus, junk.] Full of rushes; resembling rushes; juncaceous. [Rare.]

junction (jungk'shon), n. [= F. jonction = Sp. juncción = Pg. junctão, < L. junctio (-n), a joining, < jugere, pp. junctus, join; see join.] 1. The act or operation of joining; the state of being joined; union; combination; coalition: as, the junction of two armies or detachments.

Though there was a junction, there never was a real union, of the slave with the free States.

Nineteenth Century, XXIII. 98.

2. A place or point of union or meeting; especially, the point or locality where two or more lines of any kind come into union: as, a town at the junction of several rivers. The word is often used specifically in naming a place, otherwise unimportant, where two or more railroads meet.

There is one joint so perfect that it can only be discerned by the minutest search; it is not even so perceptible as the junction of two pieces of paper which have been pasted together.

H. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 109.

=Syn. 1. Connection, etc. See union.

junctional (jungk'shon-al), a. [< junction + -al.] Pertaining to a junction: as, "junctional lines," Encyc. Brit., II. 289.

junction-box (jungk'shon-boks), n. A chamber connecting two or more lines of pipe.

In submarine mining, when it is necessary to employ a multiple cable, a junction-box is used to facilitate the connection of the several separate wires diverging from the extremities of such a cable. Furrow, Mil. Encyc., II. 147.

junction-plate (jungk'shon-plāt), n. A welt or break-joint plate, secured by rivets over the edges of boiler-plates which form a butt-joint.

junctor, n. An obsolete variant of junio.

junctura (jungk-tū'rā), n.; pl. juncturæ (-rē). [L.: see junction.] In soöl. and anat., same as junction, 2.

junction (jungk'tār), n. [< L. junctura, a joining, a joint, < jugere, pp. junctus, join; see join. Cf. jointure, from the same L. source.] 1†. A joining; junction.

Nor are the soberest of them so apt for that devotional compliance and junction of hearts which I desire to bear in those holy offices to be performed with me.

Ricton Basilide.

2. The line or point at which two bodies are joined; a joint or articulation; a seam.

Swift to perform heav'n's fatal will it [the dart] fled,
Full on the junction of the neck and head,
And took the joint, and out the nerves in twain.

Pope, Iliad, xiv. 544.

3. A point of time; particularly, a time rendered critical or important by a concurrence of circumstances; a conjunction.

O what Luck it is, Sir Rowland, that you were present at this Juncture!

Congress, Way of the World, iv. 15.

Juncus (jung'kus), n. [NL., < L. juncus, a rush: see junk.] The most important genus of the Juncaceae or rushes, containing about half of the species. They are plants of a rigid habit, with smooth, commonly simple and slender, hollow or pithy stems, and small greenish or brownish flowers in heads or irregular panicles, the capsule containing a large number of seeds. Economically they are not very important. They are often planted on sea- and river-embankments to fix the soil. Some are used for matting, especially in Japan, for chair-bottoms, and for bands. Their pith furnishes wicking for the rush candle or rush-light used in Europe and in China. Four fossil species of Juncus have been described from the Tertiary, one from Spitzbergen and the rest from the continent of Europe.

1. Juncus acuticus, a. J. tenuis; a. flower of same.

jungle (jun'di), v. t. or i. [Origin obscure.] To jog with the elbow; jostle. [Scotah.]
June (jün), n. [ME. June, Juynne, < OF. Juin, Guing, F. Juin = Pr. Junh = Sp. Junio = Pg. Junho = It. Giunio, Giugno = D. G. Dan. Sv. Juni, < L. Junius, June, prop. adj. (ac. mensis, month), of the family Junius, < Junius, a Roman gentile name, akin to juvenis, young; see juvenile, young.] The sixth month of the year, consisting of thirty days, during which the sun enters the sign Cancer.

And Merlin seide "The xj day of Juynne."

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 54.

And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days.

Lowell, Vision of Sir Launfal.

June-apple (jün'ap'l), n. Same as jennoting. Fallows.

junestang (jü'nē-tang), n. A falsified form of jennoting.

June-berry (jün'ber'i), n. 1. The shad-bush or service-berry of North America, Amelanchier Canadensis, of the natural order Rosaceae. It is a bush or small tree, sometimes attaining the height of 30 feet, covered in spring with graceful white racemes, and yielding later a small berry-like pome of a deep-purple color and pleasant subacid flavor. The fruit sometimes ripens in June.
2. The fruit of the shad-bush.

June-bug (jün'bug), n. 1. In the northern United States, a beetle of any one of the numerous species of the genus Lachnosterna, as L. fusca, common in the whole country. They are large brown olivaceous beetles of the melon-thine group of the family Scarabaeidae. Their larvae, found in turf, are large whitish grubs, popularly known as white-grubs, fish-worms, and ground-hogs. Also called don-bug (which see for another cut). In the south these beetles are often called May-beetles, since they appear there earlier.

June-bug, or May-beetle (Lachnosterna fusca), side view.

a. larva. (Both natural size.)

2. In the southern United States, a beetle very different from the preceding, Allorhina nitida, a large, smooth, greenish species of the cetonian group of Scarabaeidae, which appears in June, and the larvae of which resemble those of the northern June-bug in habits and appearance, being likewise known as white-grubs. See cut under Allorhina. Also Juny-bug.—3. One of various European beetles of the genus Rhinotrogus, related to Lachnosterna.

June-grass (jün'gräs), n. The Kentucky blue-grass, Poa pratensis. It flowers in June.

Junetini, n. An obsolete form of jennoting. E. Phillips, 1708.

Jungermanniaceae (jung-ger-man'i-ä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (J. Lindley, 1846), < Jungermannia + -aceae.]

According to Lindley, a suborder of the Jungermanniaceae, founded on the tribe Jungermannidae. Jungermannia (jung-ger-man'i-ä), n. [NL., named after Jungermann, a German botanist (1872-1858).] A genus of Hepaticae, or liverworts, giving its name to the order Jungermanniaceae. It formerly embraced nearly the whole order, but has been much divided, and still contains heterogeneous forms. It may perhaps be characterized as having the involucre leaves free, the inner involucre tubular and more or less angular, and the mouth lacinate. It comprises small creeping and branching herbs of damp places. About a dozen fossil species of this genus are known, found for the most part, beautifully preserved in the amber of North Prussia.

Jungermanniaceae (jung-ger-man-i-ä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Dumortier, 1832), < Jungermannia + -aceae.] An order of cryptogams, the largest of the class Hepaticae; the scale-mosses. It consists of chiefly moss-like plants, sometimes merely with a flat leafless thallus, much oftener differentiated into a filiform stem with broadly inserted sessile leaves. In the foliose species the leaves are commonly in two rows on the upper side of the stem; sometimes there is a third row of rudimentary ones beneath. The fructification consists of oblong stalked capsules inserted on the stem, which split into valves, ordinarily four, discharging numerous spores and spirally marked elaters. These plants are to be found nearly everywhere in damp soil and on trunks of trees, being especially abundant in humid climates.

Jungermanniaceae (jung-ger-man-i-ä-ä), n. pl. Belonging to or resembling the Jungermanniaceae.

Jungermannidae (jung-ger-man'i-ä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (J. Lindley, 1846), < Jungermannia + -idae.] According to Lindley, a tribe of the Jungermanniaceae.

Jungermannia (jung-ger-man'i-ä-ä), n. pl. [NL. (Nees von Esenbeck, 1833), < Jungermannia + -ae.] 1. Originally, and with some authors still, the equivalent of Jungermanniaceae.—2. Now, more commonly, a tribal division of the order Jungermanniaceae, typified by the genus Jungermannia.

jungle (jung'gl), n. [CF. F. jungle (< E.); < Hind. jangal, a desert, a forest, jungle (cf. jangla, a coppice, thicket, fence, railing, grating, lattice), < Skt. jangala, dry, desert.] 1. A dense growth of rank and tangled vegetation, large and small, often nearly impenetrable, such as is characteristic of some parts of India, especially in the swampy regions at the base of the Himalaya mountains.

As we proceeded, the full luxuriance of this tropical jungle became more and more apparent, and we soon found that owing to the tangled mass of vegetation it was absolutely impossible to leave the beaten path.

Bull, Jungle Life in India, p. 177.

A damp belt of lowland, the terai, stretches along their [the Himalayas] foot, and is covered with dense fever-breeding jungle. W. W. Hunter, The Indian Empire, p. 30.

2. A tract of land covered by such vegetation; a wilderness of dense overgrowth; a piece of swampy thicket forest-land.

To an eye accustomed for years to the wild wastes of the jungle, the whole country presents the appearance of one continuous well-ordered garden.

E. J. Waring, Tropical Resident at Home, p. 7.

jungle-bear (jung'gl-bär), n. The sloth-bear of India, Prochilus labiatus. See cut under aswail.

jungle-bandy (jung'gl-ben'di), n. An East Indian tree, Tetrameles nudiflora.

jungle-cat (jung'gl-kat), n. Same as chaus.

jungle-cock (jung'gl-kok), n. See jungle-fowl.

jungled (jung'gl-d), a. [< jungle + -ed.] Covered with jungle; tangled with wild growths.

The savages were posted on a thickly jungled island in the lake. N. A. Rev., CXXVI. 55.

jungle-fever (jung'gl-fē-ver), n. A severe variety of remittent fever prevalent in the East Indies and other tropical regions. It is characterized by the paroxysmal recurrence of the cold and hot stages. Also called hill-fever.

jungle-fowl (jung'gl-foul), n. 1. A gallinaceous bird of India, Gallus sonnerati, the first species of the genus known to naturalists, supposed to be one of the wild originals of the domestic hen, though the Gallus bankiva (see Gallus) Jungermannia minuta.

a. capsule with its perianth, on larger scale.

resembles the common hen more nearly. It closely resembles the common black-red pit game-cock, and is abundant in the higher wooded districts of India. The name extends to other species of the same genus.

2. Any megapod of Australia, as Megapodius tumulus.

jungle-gau (jung'gl-gau), n. Same as jungle-ox.

jungle-nail (jung'gl-nail), n. The East Indian tree Acacia tomentosa.

jungle-ox (jung'gl-oks), n. An Indian bovine quadruped of the subgenus Bibos, B. sylhetensis, inhabiting Sylhet and other mountainous parts of northeastern India. It is nearly allied to the gayal and to the common ox.

jungle-sheep (jung'gl-shēp), n. A ruminant animal, Kemas hypocirinus, of India.

jungly (jung'gl), a. [< jungle + -y.] Of the nature of jungle; consisting of or abounding with jungle.

In closely-wooded or jungly tracts all kinds of survey operations are prosecuted at a disadvantage.

R. A. Proctor, Light Science, p. 272.

Junian (jü'nian), a. [< L. Junianus, pertaining to Junius, < Junius, the name of a Roman gens. See def.] Of or pertaining to "Junius," a writer who published under this name a series of letters which appeared in a London newspaper, the "Public Advertiser," between November 21st, 1768, and January 21st, 1772, denouncing various abuses in the administration of the British government. After voluminous discussion, the authorship of the letters remains disputed, but the strongest evidence appears to assign it to Sir Philip Francis, a contemporary politician.

junior (jü'nyor), a. and n. [< L. junior, contr. of juvenior, compar. of juvenis, young; see juvenile.] 1. a. Younger; not as old as another. It is applied to distinguish the younger of two persons bearing the same name in one family or town, and especially to distinguish a son bearing the same name as the father: opposed to senior; as, John Smith, junior. In this use commonly abbreviated Jr. or Jun. 2. Younger or lower in standing, as in a profession, especially the bar: as, a junior counsel; a junior partner in a firm or company.

Mr. Smith, the assistant at a cheap shop; the junior partner in a slippery firm of some three weeks' existence. Dickens, Sketches.

3. In American colleges and schools, pertaining to the third year of the course, the next below the senior or last year; in institutions having a three years' course, usually pertaining to the first year (the second being called the middle year): as, the junior class; junior students.

II. n. 1. A person younger than another.

The fools, my junior by a year,
Are tortur'd with suspense and fear;
Who wisely thought my age a screen,
When death approach'd to stand between.

Swift, Death of Dr. Swift.

2. One of less experience or inferior standing in his profession than another, who is called his senior; one employed as the subordinate of another, especially at the bar.

Not one of them but he thinketh himself to have had a great jumble down vnto him: if he goes on the left hand of another y^e smeth to be his junior or inferior.

J. Udall, On Lake xiv.

He had been retained as Mr. Sergeant Snubbins's junior.

Dickens, Pickwick, xxii.

3. In American colleges and seminaries, a member of the junior class; a student in the junior year.

juniority (jü'nior-i-ti), n. [< junior + -ity.] 1. The state of being junior or a junior: opposed to seniority.

He admits as probable upon present knowledge, in the person of Homo sapiens, the juniority of man.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXVIII. 224.

2. In law, same as borough-English.

We have a choice between "ultimogeniture," the awkward term proposed by the Real Property Commissioners of the last generation, and such foreign terms as Jungenat-Recht and Juvelgnieric, . . . or one must coin a new phrase like juniority or junior-right.

C. Elton, Origins of Eng. Hist., p. 125.

junior-right (jü'nyor-rit), n. In law, same as borough-English.

If we are to describe the area from which we must collect examples of junior-right, we shall find that it has flourished not only in England and in most parts of Central and Northern Europe, but also in some remote and disconnected regions. C. Elton, Origins of Eng. Hist., p. 125.

It appears also that until quite recently the custom of what we English call Borough-English, but for which the book-word junior right has of late been invented, existed "in the Thetlands at Norden, in East Friesland, not far from the mouth of the Ems."

N. and Q., 7th ser., VII. 222.

juniorahip (jü'nyor-ship), n. [< junior + -ship.] 1. The state of being junior or a junior; juniority. Imp. Dict.—2. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., same as juvenate.

Juniper (jŭ'ni-pər), n. and a. [< ME. junyppor; altered, to suit the L., from earlier gynnyppor, jenu- per, etc. (also prob. "gencore," ult. geneva and gins, q. v.)] *< OF. genciere, genciore = Pr. gencibre, gencibre = OSp. gencbro, Sp. enebro = Pg. simbro = It. ginepro, giun- pero, < L. jun- perus, a juniper, so called as renewing its youth, i. e. being evergreen, < juvenis (contr. juni-), young, + parore, produce: see parent.] I. n. A coniferous evergreen shrub or tree, belonging to the genus *Ju-

Juniper (Juniperus Virginiana). a, branch with male flowers; b, branch with fruit; c, scale of male flower with two anthers; d, seed.

niperus. There are about 80 species, distributed through the northern parts of the globe or on mountains further south. J. communis, the common juniper of Europe and North America, is a spreading shrub or small tree, whose purple aromatic berries yield a volatile oil used as a diuretic and stimulant and also in the manufacture of gin. J. Sabina of southern Europe, the true sayin, is a small tree whose tops form the official sayin. J. Virginiana, the North American red cedar or pencil-cedar, is a generally small but sometimes large tree, yielding a fragrant, light, imperishable wood, highly valued for pencil-making, cabinet-work, posts, etc. The wood of J. Bermudiana serves similar purposes. (See cedar.) (For botanical characters, see Juniperus.) The name is locally applied to other trees, the so-called juniper-swamps of the southern United States consisting of the white cedar, Chamaecyparis sphaeroides.

And that Tro hath many Leves, as the Gynnyppor hath. Mandeville, Travels, p. 236.

Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper roots for their meat. Joh xxx. 4.

Gum juniper. Same as sandaraq.—Irish and Swedish juniper, columnar varieties of J. communis, elegant in cultivation.

II. a. Bitter; sharp; severe.

Bishop Gronthead, offended therat, wrote Pope Innocent the fourth . . . a juniper letter, taxing him with extortion and other vicious practices. Fuller, Ch. Hist., III. iv. 23.

When women chide their husbands for a long while together, it is commonly said, they give them a juniper lecture; which, I am informed, is a comparison taken from the long lasting of the live coals of that wood, not from its sweet smell; but comparisons run not upon all four. Birk, Modern Husbandman (1750), VII. li. 142.

juniper-brandy (jŭ'ni-pər-bran'di), n. Gin. Juniperina (jŭ'ni-pər-i-nə), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, 1847), < Juniperus + ina.] A subtribe of coniferous plants of the tribe Cupressineae, embracing the single genus Juniperus.

juniperite (jŭ'ni-pər-it), n. [< NL. Juniperites.] A petrified trunk or fossil impression belonging to the genus Juniperus or Juniperites.

Juniperites (jŭ'ni-pər-itēs), n. [NL., < Juniperus, q. v.] A genus of plants, the fossil form of Juniperus.

juniper-oil (jŭ'ni-pər-oil), n. A volatile oil distilled from the berries and probably the tops of Juniperus communis. It is an official drug with stimulant, carminative, and diuretic properties. juniper-resin (jŭ'ni-pər-rez'in), n. Sundarac. Juniperus (jŭ-nip'g-rus), n. [L., the juniper-tree: used as a genus by Tournefort, Inst., 361. 1700, but with a wider meaning, including Cedrus. Restricted to present sense by Linnaeus.] A genus of coniferous plants, the true junipers, embracing about 30 species, widely distributed. The few scales of the strobile in this genus are fleshy, and consolidated into an indurated berry or drupe, containing from 1 to 8 hard seeds, either distinct or united in a woody mass. The leaves are either scale-like or slender and spreading (acutose), or both in the same plant. (See Juniper.) Eight or ten fossil species are described from various parts of the world, largely from the Tertiary of Europe and the Cretaceous and Tertiary of the arctic regions. When deviating slightly from the living plant, these fossil forms are often called juniperites.

junk (jungk), n. [< ME. jonke, < OF. jonc, a rush, a rush-light, P. jonc = Sp. Pg. junco = It. giunco, a rush, bulrush (in Pg. also junk, cordage (orig. or sometimes made of rushes), whence the E. word in def. 2), < L. junceus, a rush. From L. junceus also come ult. E. junket and jonquill.] 1. A rush; a reed.

It [the crown] was of Jonkes of the See, that is to say, Bishes of the See, that pryken als schargely as Thornes. Mandeville, Travels, p. 13.

2. Naut., old or condemned cable and cordage cut into small pieces, used when untwisted for making points, gaskets, swabs, mats, etc., and plied into fibers to make oakum for caulking seams. Hence—3. Worn-out and discarded material in general that may be turned to some use; especially, old rope, chain, iron, copper, parts of machinery, and bottles, gathered or bought up by tradesmen called junk-dealers; hence, rubbish of any kind; odds and ends.—4. Salt beef or pork supplied to vessels for long voyages: so called from its resemblance in toughness to old ropes' ends.

The purser's junk had become as tough as the foretopseel weather-earrings. Dickens, Bleak House, xvii.

5. The mass of blubbery and cellular tissue which fills the cavity of the head of the sperm-whale between the case and the white-horse, containing oil and spermaceti.

The dense mass of cellular tissue beneath the case and nostril, and which is technically called the junk, also contains spermaceti, with which oil and its tissue is infiltrated. Urs, Dict., III. 668.

junk (jungk), n. [A var. of chunk.] A thick piece; a lump; a chunk.

There were two eggs, a junk of bread, and a bottle of wine on board the Arethusa.

R. L. Stevenson, Inland Voyage, p. 25.

junk (jungk), n. [= F. jonque, < Sp. Pg. junco, < Malay ajong, or Chinese ch'uan, ch'u'en, t'w'an, a ship, boat, bark, junk; otherwise < Javanese jung, a large boat.] A large sea-going sailing vessel used in the Chinese seas. It has a flat bottom,

A Canton Trading-junk.

a square prow, and high full stern, from one to five heavy masts carrying lug-sails, sometimes made of matting, and a huge rudder, which at sea is lowered below the bottom. The name is also given to the larger-sized river-craft of China.

China also, and the Great Atlantis (that you call America), which have now but junks and canoes, abounded then in tall ships. Bacon, New Atlantis.

It became a difficult task to thread our way between the fleets of sampans and junks. The latter are the most extraordinary looking craft . . . with high, overhanging sterns. Lady Brassey, Voyage of Sunbeam, II. xxi.

junk-bottle (jungk'bot'l), n. A thick strong bottle, usually made of green or black glass.

Just stopping to take a lusty dinner, and bracing to his side his junk-bottle, well charged with heart-inspiring Hollands, he issued jollily from the city gate. Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 447.

junk-dealer (jungk'dē'ler), n. The keeper of a junk-shop; a junkman.

junker (yŏng'kēr), n. [G., a young noble, contr. of jung herr (MHG. juno herre): see young and herre, and cf. younger, the E. form of junker.] 1. A young German noble or squire.

A "Junker (Jung Herr), or younker," says Herr Bamberger, "is essentially the son of a noble house which has devoted itself to military service—a mixture of Charles I. cavalier, Prussian lieutenant, German feudal lord, and Spanish Don Quixote." Loose, Bismarck, I. 82, note.

2. [cap.] A member of the aristocratic party in Prussia which came into power under Bismarck when he was made prime minister (1862).

Junkerism (yŏng'kēr-izm), n. [< junker + -ism.] The political principles and social ideas of the aristocratic party in Prussia called Junkers.

junkerite (jungk'kēr-it), n. Same as siderite.

junket (jungk'et), n. [< ME. junket, jonket, < jonke, a rush: see junk.] Cf. OF. jonchiere, a basket of rushes, < jonc, a rush. Cf. junket.] 1. A basket made of rushes.

Whanne he [the father of Moses] mygte hilde hym no longer, he tok a jonket of reashen [a leap of asps, Furr.] and glewde it with glewshie clay and with ploche, and putte the littil saunt with yune. Wyclif, Ez. li. 4.

2. A long basket for catching fish. [Prov. Eng.]

junket (jungk'et), n. [Formerly junket, jun- cate, dial. jonket; = F. joncade, < It. giuncata, a sweetmeat, cream-cheese, so called as being brought in or served on rushes, < giunco, rush: see junk. Cf. junket.] 1. Curds mixed with cream, sweetened, and flavored. Hence—2. Any sweetmeat or delicacy.

And bears with you both wine and junketes fit, And bid him cate. Spenser, F. Q., V. iv. 42.

With stories told of many a feast, How lacy Mab the junketes eat. Milton, L'Allegro, l. 102.

3. A feast or merrymaking; a convivial entertainment; a picnic.

Such junketes come not every day.

Massinger, Great Duke of Florence, iv. 2.

George, taking out his wife to a new jaunt or junket every night, was quite pleased with himself as usual, and swore he was becoming quite a domestic character.

Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxviii.

junket (jungk'et), v. [< junket, n.] I. intrans. To feast; banquet; take part in a convivial entertainment.

She which stands at the head being Godmother; and after this they junket together.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 192.

II. trans. To entertain; feast; regale.

The good woman took my lodgings over my head, and was in . . . a hurry to junket her neighbours. H. Walpole.

junketer (jungk'et-er), n. One who takes part in a junket.

On what principle . . . are these junketers . . . allowed the use of steamboats at an expense of from $300 to $500 per day? New York Tribune, June 14, 1868.

junketing (jungk'et-ing), n. [Verbal n. of junket, v.] A lively feast or entertainment; a season of conviviality; picnicking.

All was fun, frolic, courtship, junketing, and jollity. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 133.

St. Martha's Day was occasion for junketings on the Giudecca Canal, when a favorite fair, being in season, was devotionally eaten. Honells, Venetian Life, xvii.

junketry, n. [Formerly also junquetry; < junket + -ry.] Sweetmeats.

You would prefer him before tart and gallingale, which Chaucer prebeminest encomiounseth above all junqueries or confectionaries whatsoever. Masse, Lenten Stuffe (Harl. Misc., VI. 158).

junking (jungk'ing), n. [Cf. junk.] In coal-mining, a passage through a pillar of coal. [North. Eng.]

junkman (jungk'man), n.; pl. junkmen (-men). A dealer in junk.

junk-ring (jungk'ring), n. In steam-engines, a ring fitting in a groove round a piston to keep it steam-tight by confining the packing.

junk-shop (jungk'shop), n. A place where junk is bought and sold. See junk, 2.

Junk Shop was defined by the Supreme Court of South Carolina to be a place where odds and ends are purchased or sold. Bishop, Stat. Crimes (2d ed.), § 296.

junk-strap (jungk'strap), n. In the whale-fishery, a chain used to hoist aboard the junk of a sperm-whale.

junk-vat (jungk'vat), n. In tanning, a large vat for holding ooze or tan-liquor which has been weakened in the layers.

junk-wad (jungk'wad), n. In ordnance, a wad made of oakum bound with spun-yarn and filling the bore of the gun, used in proving cannon and to hold the shot in place.

June (jŭ'nō), n. [L., a name ult. connected with Jovis, Jupiter, Jove, Jupiter, Diana, etc.: see deity.] 1. In Rom. myth., the queen of heaven, the highest divinity of the Latin races in Italy next to Jupiter, of whom she was the sister and the wife. She was the parallel of the Greek Hera, with whom in later times she became to a considerable extent identified. She was regarded as the special protectress of marriage, and was the guardian of woman from birth to death. In Rome she was also the patron of the national finances, and a temple which contained the mint was erected to her, under the name of Junio Moneta, in the Capitoline. In her distinctive Italian character, June (called Lavinia, from the site at Lavinium of her chief sanctuary, or Hospita, Juno of Lavinium.—Colonial statue in the Vatican Museum, Rome.

the Protectum) was a war-goddess, represented as clad in a mantle of goat-skin, bearing a shield and an uplifted spear, and accompanied, like Athena, by a sacred serpent. The third planetoid, discovered by Harding, at Lillenthal, in 1804.—Bird of Juno, the peacock, Pavo cristatus.

Junonian (jō-nō'ni-an), a. [< L. Junonius, of Juno, < Juno(n-), Juno: see Juno.] Of or pertaining to Juno; resembling Juno, or partaking of her characteristics.

Junonian fulness and grand development of features.
C. O. Müller, Manual of Archaeol. (trans.), § 375.

Junonical (jō-nō'ni-kal), a. [< L. Juno(n-), Juno, + -ical.] Junonian.

Yest do I still feare me theese fayre Junonical harbours.
Santhure, Enneid, l. 605.

Juno's-rose (jō'nōz-rōz), n. The white lily, Lilium candidum.

Juno's-tears (jō'nōz-tērz), n. The European vervain, Verbena officinalis.

junt (junt), n. [Appar. a var. of junk, chunk.] 1. A large piece; a chunk. [Scotch.]—2. A squat clumsy person. [Scotch.]—3. A worthless woman.

Hoa. Daintily abused! you've put a junt upon me!
Lucre. Ha, ha, ha!
Hoa. A common strumpet!
Wk. Nay, now
You wrong her, sir; if I were she I'd have
The law on you for that.

Middleton, Trick to Catch the Old One, v. 2.

junta (jun'tā), n. [= F. junta, < Sp. junta (orig. fem. of junto, used as pp. of juntar, convoke, congregate) = Pg. junta, f., a council, meeting, < L. junta, fem. of junctus, joined, pp. of jungere, join: see join. Cf. junio.] 1. A meeting; a council. See junto. Specifically—2. In Spain, a consultative or legislative assembly, either for the whole country or for one of its separate parts. The most celebrated juntas in history were that convened by Napoleon in 1808 and the later revolutionary juntas.

I had also Audience of the King [of Spain], to whom I delivered two Memorials since, in his Majesty's Name of Great Britain, that a particular Junta of some of the Council of State and War might be appointed to determine the Business.
Houssell, Letters, l. 111. 10.

junto (jun'tō), n. [An erroneous form of junta, < Sp. junta, a council: see junta. The K. form junto came into use at a time when Sp. words in -a were commonly taken with the term -o, as appearing as seeming more Spanish. Cf. bastinado, < Sp. bastonada.] A private council or assembly; a combination of persons openly or secretly engaged for a common purpose, especially of a political character; a club of partisans or intriguers; a faction; a cabal; specifically, in Eng. hist., a group of leading Whig politicians in the reigns of William III. and Anne, of whom the most important were Somers, Wharton, Russell, and Montague.

How venerable were this junto! How admirable this assembly!
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), l. 382.

The puzzling sons of party next appeared,
In dark cabals and mighty juntos met.
Thomson, Castle of Indolence, l.

That the republic might be governed by lawful magistrates, and not by a junto of particular persons.
J. Adams, Works, V. 98.

Essex Junto, in U. S. Hist., a name, first used about 1781, which was chiefly applied to a group of extreme Federalist leaders, mostly connected with Essex county, Massachusetts, about the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century. During the presidency of John Adams they were adherents of Hamilton rather than of the President. Later the name was applied to the Federalists in general.—Wyn. Fustion, Camarillo, etc. See cabal.

junt, n. Same as jupo.

jupardiet, n. A Middle English form of jeopardy.

jupart, v. t. An early form of jeopard.

jupartiet, n. An early form of jeopardy.

jupati-palm (jō'pa-tē-pām), n. [< Jupati, a S. Amer. name, + E. palm.] Raphia tedi-gera, a palm which grows on the rich alluvial soil on the banks of the Lower Amazon and Pará rivers in Brazil. It has cylindrical leaf-stalks, which measure from 12 to 15 feet in length, and are used by the natives for a variety of purposes, as for the walls of houses and for baskets and boxes.

jupet (jūp), n. [Also jup, jub (Florio); < ME. jupe, gipe (= MHG. juppe, jupe, joppe, jupe, gippe, gippe), < OF. jupe, juppe, jube, jubb, gipe, gippe, a silk stuff, a garment made of it, F. jupe = Fr. jupa = It. giuppa, giubba (ML. jupa), < Sp. juda (al-juda), < Ar. jubbah, al-jubbah, a garment so called: see jubbah. MHG. schube, G. schauhe, is prob. from the same source. The name was applied to various forms of garments. Hence jupon.] Same as jupon.

This play of ours, just like some vest or top Worn twice or thrice, was carefully laid up.
Florio, Epigrams (1670).

jupel, n. [OF., also juppel, juplet, dim. of jupo, a jupe: see jupo.] Same as jupon.

jupette (jō'pēt'), n. [Dim. of jupo.] A jupon having a very short skirt.

Jupiter (jō'pi-tēr), n. [In older English frequently Juppiter; = F. Sp. Pg. Jupiter, < L. Jupiter, more correctly Juppiter, OL. Joupiter = Gr. Ζεύς πατήρ, voc. Ζεύς πάτερ = Skt. Dyauṣ pit-ātar, lit. 'Jove (Zeus) father': see Jove, Zeus, deity, and father.] 1. In Rom. myth., the supreme deity, the parallel of the Greek Zeus, and the embodiment of the might and national dignity of the Romans. The central seat of his cult was the Capitoline Hill at Rome, where he had the title of Optimus Maximus (Best Greatest). He was primarily a divinity of the sky, and hence was considered to be the originator of all atmospheric changes. His weapon was the thunderbolt. He controlled and directed the future, and sacrifices were offered to secure his favor at the beginning of every undertaking. He was also the guardian of property, whether of the state or of individuals. White, the color of the light of day, was sacred to him; hence, white animals were offered to him in sacrifice, his priests wore white caps, his chariot was drawn by four white horses, and the consuls were dressed in white when they sacrificed to him upon assuming office. The eagle was especially consecrated to him. The surviving artistic representations of Jupiter are comparatively late, and betray Greek influence, imitating the type of the Greek Zeus. Also called Jove.

2. The brightest of the superior planets, and the largest body of the solar system except the sun itself. Its sidereal period of revolution is 11.86198 Julian years, and its synodical period 399 days. Its mean distance from the sun is about 483,000,000 miles. Its equatorial diameter at its mean distance subtends an angle of 38", so that its real diameter is about one tenth of that of the sun (which subtends 1,922"), and about 11 times that of the earth (the solar parallax being 8".9). Jupiter is flattened at the poles by no less than one seventeenth of its diameter. Its mass is about 317.7 of that of the sun, or 304 times that of the earth, making its mean density only 1.3 that of the earth being taken at 5.5. Gravity at its surface is 24 times that at the earth. The most remarkable feature of the appearance of this planet is the equatorial fasciae or bands which cross its disk. These fasciae subside generally for months or even years, but sometimes form in a few hours. They sometimes have a breadth of one sixth of the apparent disk of the planet. There are also spots of much greater permanence. It is, however, probable that no solid matter can be seen, and quite doubtful whether any exists in the planet. The spots revolve about the axis in 9 hours, 55 minutes, and 35 seconds, but the white clouds in 54 minutes less time. From his photometric observations, Zöllner calculates the albedo of Jupiter to be 0.6, so high a value as to suggest that the planet must be self-luminous. Jupiter has five satellites or moons. Their periods of revolution are as follows: I. 1d. 18h. 28m. 35.945s.; II. 3d. 13h. 17m. 53.785s.; III. 7d. 8h. 56m. 35.854s.; IV. 16d. 18h. 5m. 43.928s.; V. 11h. 574m.

3. In alchemy, tin, which was supposed to be under the control of the planet Jupiter.—4. In her., the tincture azure or blue in blazoning by the planets. See blazon, n., 2.—5. In svöl., a snubbed whale. Also called Jupiter-fish.

Rondelet . . . gives a figure of a "Balema ura," . . . which the whale fishers of Saintonge call Gibbar, or gibbero dorso.
From this provincial name came Gibbartas, Gubartas, Jubart, Jubartas, Jupiter, etc.
J. H. Trumbull, in Fisheries of U. S. (1884), l. 29.

Jupiter's-beard (jō'pi-tēr-z-bērd), n. 1. The houseleek, Sempervivum tectorum.—2. An evergreen leguminous plant, Anthyllus Barba-Jovis, also called silver-bush; also, less properly, Anthyllus Pulveraria, or lady's-fingers.—3. A large fungus with a white fibrous margin, Radulum quercinum (Hydnium Barba-Jovis).

Jupiter's-distaff (jō'pi-tēr-z-dis'tāf), n. A labiate plant, or wild sage, Salvia glutinosa, or perhaps Phlomis frutescens. [Prov. Eng.]

Jupiter's-eye (jō'pi-tēr-z-eye), n. The houseleek, Sempervivum tectorum. [Prov. Eng.]

Jupiter's-flower (jō'pi-tēr-z-flou'ēr), n. A translation of Dianthus, the name of the pink-genus, also of the specific name of Agrostemma (Lych-nis Flos-Jovis).

Jupiter's-nut (jō'pi-tēr-z-nut), n. [Translation of Juglans.] The European walnut, Juglans regia.

Jupiter's-staff (jō'pi-tēr-z-stāf), n. The mullen, Verbascum Thapsus.

jupon (jō'pon or jō'pon'), n. [Also juppon; < ME. jupone, jopowne, gipoun, gypown, gepoun, < OF. jupon, juppon, gippon, F. jupon = Fr. jupon, jupio (cf. Sp. judon = Pg. gibão = It. giubbone, prob. after F.), a short casack, etc., dim. (or aug.) of jupo, a jupe: see jupo.] A garment worn by men in the fourteenth and early part of the fifteenth century. Especially—(a) A jacket of heavy material, sometimes stuffed and quilted to serve as a coat of fence, and often worn under the iron armor. (b) A surcoat worn over the armor, with skirts reaching about to mid-thigh, and with short sleeves or none. In heraldry it is represented without sleeves and daggled or jagged at the bottom. It was introduced about the middle of the fourteenth century.

The felon with the fyne swerde freschely he strykes, . . .
Thorowes jopowne and jesserawte of gentille males!
Morie Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 1422.

jurt, v. t. [A var. of jarl, v.] To clash; strike with a harsh noise.

By that time that the multitude ran thither in great numbers, and presented themselves ready to defend, the ramme was jurted also at the other part.
Holland, tr. of Livy, p. 363.

jurt, n. [A var. of jarl, n.] A crashing collision; a harsh-sounding blow; a crash.

Jura (jō'rā), a. and n. In geol., same as Jurassic.—Jura limestone. See limestone.

Jural (jō'ral), a. [< L. jus (jur-), right, law (see jus), + -al.] 1. Pertaining to natural or positive right.

By the adjective jural we shall denote that which has reference to the doctrine of rights and obligations; as by the adjective "moral" we denote that which has reference to the doctrine of duties.
Wheatell.

2. Of or pertaining to jurisprudence.

jurally (jō'ral-i), adv. 1. As regards or in accordance with natural or positive right.—2. By means of or with reference to jurisprudence.

juramentally (jō-rā-men'tal-i), adv. [< "juramentum, pertaining to an oath (< L. juramentum (> It. giuramento = OF. jurement), an oath, < jurare, swear: see jury), + -ly.] With an oath.
A promise juramentally confirmed.

Urguarcz, tr. of Rabelais, iii. 12.

jurant (jō'rānt), a. and n. [< F. jurant, ppr. of jurar, swear: see jury.] 1. a. Taking an oath; swearing. [Rare.]

2. n. One who takes an oath. [Rare.]

Jurant and Discontent with their shaved crowns argue frothing everywhere; or are ceasing to argue and stripping for battle.
Carlyle, French Rev., II. iv. 2.

Jurassic (jō-ras'ik), a. and n. [< Jura (see def.) + -assic, as in Triassic.] 1. a. Pertaining or relating to the Jura mountains, and specifically, in geol., to the Jurassic series.

2. n. In geol., that part of the geological series which includes all the groups and subgroups older than the Cretaceous and newer than the Triassic: so called from the predominance of rocks of this age in the Jura mountains. The Triassic, Jurassic, and Cretaceous together form the Mesozoic series. The flora of the Jurassic is distinguished by a predominance of cycadaceous forms, ferns being also plentiful. Its fauna is rich and varied. The most highly developed animals in this geological position are certain small marsupials. The oldest known bird, possessing also some marked reptilian characters, is found in the Upper Jurassic. The Jurassic series covers a wide area in Europe, and is also of great interest and importance in the Cordilleran region of the United States. The name Oolite was originally applied to the rocks of Jurassic age in England by William Smith, by whom the order of succession of this part of the series was first worked out and published. The Jurassic of England includes the Lias as its lower member, and above this the Lower, Middle, and Upper Oolites. In northwestern Germany the Jurassic is divided into the Lower or Black Jura, the Middle or Brown, and the Upper or White. Of these divisions the lower corresponds to the English Lias. The fossil remains of the Jurassic series in the United States are of great interest. Among them is the Adamantinosaurus, a dinosaur, supposed to have been a hundred feet in length and thirty or more in height. The surficial rocks of the western edge of the North American continent are, at least in large part, of Jurassic age.

jurat (jō'rāt), F. pron. zhi-rāt, n. [Formerly also jurate; < F. jurat (veracuarily juré, a jurymen) = Sp. Pg. jurado = It. giurato, < ML. juratus, an alderman, a warden, juror, jurymen, lit. one sworn, < L. juratus, pp. of jurare, swear: see jury.] A sworn officer; a magistrate; a member of a permanent jury. The word is now chiefly used as a title of office in the Channel Islands, where the jurors are judges and legislators chosen for life, Jersey and Guernsey having twelve each, and Alderney six.

Open your gates, we command you in the name of the kyns. The watchmen sayde, Sirs, the keyes be within the towne with the jurats.
Berners, tr. of Froissart's Chron., l. 1061.

jurat (jō'rāt), n. [< L. juratum, neut. of juratus, sworn: see jurat.] In law, the official memorandum subscribed at the end of an affidavit, showing the time when and the person before whom it was sworn. Wharton.

juratet (jō'rāt), n. An obsolete form of jurat.

juratiōn (jō-rā'shōn), n. [= It. giurazione, < LL. juratio (n-), a swearing as on oath, < L. jurare, swear: see jury.] In law, the act of swearing; the administration of an oath.

jurative (jō'rā-tiv), a. Pertaining to or having the purpose or the sanction and effect of an oath; juratory. [Rare.]

juratori, n. [< L. jurator, a swearer, a sworn witness, a sworn magistrate, ML. a juror, < jurare, swear: see jury, juror.] A juror.

juratory (jō'rā-tō-ri), a. [= F. juratoire = It. giuratorio, < LL. juratorius, of an oath, < L. ju- vator, a sworn witness, < jurare, swear: see jurator, jury.] Of, pertaining to, or comprising an oath.

How often does St. Paul . . . repeat . . . his juratory caution before the Lord: as, God is my witness?

Donne, Sermons, vi.

Juratory caution, in Scots law, a form of caution sometimes offered in a suspension or advocacy, where the complainant is not in circumstances to offer any better. It consists of an inventory of his effects, given up upon oath, and assigned in security of the sums which may be found due in the suspension.

juridicount, n. A Middle English variant of jurisdiction.

jure divino (jŭ-rē di-vi-nō), [L.: jure, abl. of ius (jur-), right, law; divino, ubl. of divinus, divine: see divine.] By divine right. See divine.

jural (jŭ-rel), n. [Sp.] A fish of the genus Caranx, as C. piquetus, C. fulax, in Florida, etc. jurema-bark (jŭ-rē-mā-bārk), n. An astringent bark obtained from the Brazilian tree Acacia Jurema. The natives are said to prepare a narcotic decoction from it.

juribali, juriballi (jŭ-ri-bal-i), n. [Native name.] A West Indian tree, Trichilia moschata, of the natural order Meliaceae, the astringent bark of which is said to possess a high value in typhoid fevers. The name is also applied to two other melaceous trees, Symida febrifuga, of India and Ceylon, and Khaya Senegalensis, of tropical Africa, which possess similar properties.

juridic (jŭ-rīd-ik), a. [= F. juridique = Sp. juridico = Pg. juridico = It. giuridico, < L. juridicus, relating to justice or law, as a noun a judge, < ius (jur-), law, + dicere, point out, declare, say, declare. Cf. judge, ult. of same elements.] Same as juridical. [Rare.]

juridical (jŭ-rīd-i-kal), a. [< juridique + -al.] 1. Pertaining to the promulgation or dispensation of law; founded upon or according to the forms of law; relating to or concerned with administrative law: as, a juridical argument; juridical methods; juridical oppression.

The influence of Christianity on a much more famous system than the Brehon law has always seemed to me to be greatly overstated by M. Troplong and other well-known juridical writers. Maine, Early Hist. of Institutions, p. 61.

2. Subsisting in contemplation of law; of the nature of an abstract legal conception: as, a juridical person, or a juridical transaction (that is to say, a person or transaction legally supposed or conceived of to some extent irrespective of actual existence and of incidents and circumstances not recognized by the law).—Delivery of juridical possession. See delivery.—Juridical days, days in court on which law is administered; days on which the court can lawfully sit.

juridically (jŭ-rīd-i-kal-i), adv. In a juridical manner; according to forms of law; with legal authority.

juridicial, a. An obsolete variant of juridical. jurinite (jŭ-ri-nit), n. [Named by Loret (1822) after Louis Jurine (1751-1819), a Genevan naturalist.] In mineral, same as brookite.

juriconsult (jŭ-ris-kon-sult), n. [= F. jurisconsulte = Sp. Pg. jurisconsulto = It. giuriconsult, < L. jurisconsultus, also jureconsultus, also separately juris consultus and consultus juris, one skilled in the law, < juris, gen. of ius, law, + consultus, pp. of consulere, consult: see consult.] One who gives his opinion in cases of law; one learned in jurisprudence; a jurist; specifically, a master of the civil law.

In divers particular sciences, as of the juriconsults, . . . there are set down some small memorials of the schools, authors, and books.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. 120.

jurisdiction (jŭ-ris-dik-shon), n. [< ME. jurisdiction, juridicoun, < OF. jurisdiction, F. juridiction = Sp. jurisdicción = Pg. jurisdição = It. giurisdizione, < L. jurisdictio (n.), juris dictio (n.), administration of the law, jurisdiction, < juris, gen. of ius, law, + dictio (n.), a declaring: see diction.] 1. Judicial authority; the legal power of hearing and determining controversies or accusations; the right of exercising the functions of a judge or of a legal tribunal. It includes the power to compel a person to appear and answer a complaint, or to punish him for not doing so; the power to take property in dispute into the custody of the law; the power to compel production of evidence, and hear the contention of the parties; the power to determine questions of right between the parties, and to enforce the determination. Jurisdiction of the person depends usually on the giving of due notice to the person, or a voluntary appearance by him. Jurisdiction of the subject-matter usually depends on the statutory or common-law powers conferred on the court with reference to the nature of the controversy or property affected, and sometimes upon the seizure of the property into the custody of the law.

By the long uniform usage of many ages, our kings have delegated their whole judicial power to the judges of their several courts, which are the grand depositaries of the fundamental laws of the kingdom, and have gained a known and stated jurisdiction, regulated by certain and established rules, which the crown itself cannot now alter but by act of Parliament.

Blackstone, Com., I. vii.

2. Controlling authority; the right of making and enforcing laws or regulations; the capacity of determining rules of action or use, and exacting penalties: as, the jurisdiction of a state over its subjects.

To live exempt
From heaven's high jurisdiction.

Milton, P. L., II. 519.

The jurisdiction of the several States which constitute the Union is, within its appropriate sphere, perfectly independent of the federal government.

T. E. Benton, Thirty Years, II. 283.

3. The domain within which power is exercised; specifically, the territory over which the authority of a state, court, or judge extends.

The Mr. and Warden shall make serche onely within the jurisdiction of the cite and touchinge the same crafts onely.

English Gilds (E. T. S.), p. 307.

4. The function or capacity of judging or governing in general; the natural right to judge; inherent power of decision or control.

A new book astonishes for a few days, takes itself out of common jurisdiction.

Emerson, Courage.

Man's language is higher than himself, more spiritual, more ethereal, and still less subject than he to the jurisdiction of the laws of material nature.

G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xii.

Appellate jurisdiction. See original jurisdiction, below.—Concurrent jurisdiction. See concurrent.—Contentious jurisdiction, that jurisdiction exercised when one invokes the aid of the law against one that disputes his demands, as distinguished from voluntary jurisdiction, when the person having a right to resist the demand appears as a consenting applicant.—Delegated jurisdiction. See delegated.—Foreign jurisdiction Act, an English statute of 1843 (6 and 7 Vict., c. 94, and amendments) relating to the exercise of powers in foreign countries under rights acquired by treaty or otherwise.—General jurisdiction, jurisdiction in respect to either persons or property generally, within the boundaries of the state.—Jurisdiction Acts. See Foreign Jurisdiction Act, above, and Summary Jurisdiction Act, below.—Limited jurisdiction, a jurisdiction extending only to a certain district, or to certain classes of subjects or persons, etc., or to certain amounts.—Original jurisdiction, the power to entertain an action from its commencement, as distinguished from appellate jurisdiction, or power to review the exercise of the jurisdiction of an inferior tribunal.—Plea to the jurisdiction, a plea denying the jurisdiction of the court to entertain an action.—Proper jurisdiction, in Scots law, that jurisdiction which belongs to the judge or magistrate himself, in virtue of his office.—Summary Jurisdiction Act, an English statute of 1849 (11 and 12 Vict., c. 43) for facilitating proceedings in criminal cases before justices of the peace. It was amended in 1849 (12 and 13 Vict., c. 45), 1879 (42 and 43 Vict., c. 49), and 1884 (47 and 48 Vict., c. 43), and extended to Ireland in 1871 (34 and 35 Vict., c. 76) and to Scotland in 1881 (44 and 45 Vict., c. 33).—Voluntary jurisdiction. See contentious jurisdiction, above.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

Civil and jurisdictional powers . . . were conferred on the council established by this charter.

H. Everett, Orations, II. 221.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

jurisdictional (jŭ-ris-dik-shon-al), a. [< jurisdiction + -al.] Pertaining or relating to jurisdiction: as, jurisdictional rights or interests.

ment, and of the use of water and the riddance of debris were regulated.—Particular jurisprudence, that which in the laws of a given state or nation is peculiar to that state or nation.

jurisprudent (jŭ-ris-prŭ-dent), a. and n. [= OF. jurisprudent = Sp. Pg. jurisprudente = It. giurisperdente, having knowledge of the law, < L. juris, of the law, gen. of ius, law, + prudens (n.), having knowledge: see prudent. This adj. is later than the noun.] 1. A versed in the law; understanding law.

II. n. A person learned in the law; one versed in jurisprudence. [Rare.]

Klosterheim in particular . . . had been pronounced by some of the first jurisprudentes a female appanage.

De Guiney.

jurisprudential (jŭ-ris-prŭ-den-shal), a. [< jurisprudence (L. jurisprudentia) + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or relating to jurisprudence.

Traverse the whole continent of Europe, ransack all the libraries belonging to all the jurisprudential systems of the several political states, add the contents together, you would not be able to compose a collection of cases equal in variety, in amplitude, in clearness of statement, . . . to that which may be seen to be afforded by the collection of English Reports of adjudged cases.

Bentham, Works, IV. 461.

jurist (jŭ-ris-t), n. [= F. juriste = Sp. Pg. jurista = It. giurista, < L. ius (jur-), law.] 1. One who professes the science of law; one versed in the law, or more particularly in the civil law; one who writes on the subject of law.

It has ever been the method of public jurists to draw a great part of the analogies on which they form the law of nations from the principles of law which prevail in civil community.

Burke.

2. In universities, a student in the faculty of law. juristic (jŭ-ris-tik), a. [< jurist + -ic.] Pertaining to a jurist or to jurisprudence; relating to law; juridical; legal.

juristical (jŭ-ris-ti-kal), a. [< juristic + -al.] Same as juristic.

It is not rarely that we refuse respect or attention to diplomatic communications, as wide of the point and full of verbiage or conceits, when, in fact, they owe those imaginary imperfections simply to the juristical point of view from which they have been conceived and written.

Maine, Village Communities, p. 283.

juristically (jŭ-ris-ti-kal-i), adv. In a juristic manner or way; juridically.

jur-nut (jŭ-rut), n. [A dial. form of earthnut.]

1. The earthnut, Bunium flacuosum.—2. The fruit of Arachis hypogæa, the peanut. [Prov. Eng.]

juror (jŭ-rŭr), n. [< ME. jurour, < OF. jureur, jureur, jurour, F. jureur = Sp. Pg. jurador = It. giuratore, < L. jurator, a swearer, a sworn witness, a sworn magistrate, ML. a juror, < jurare, swear: see jury. Cf. jurator.] 1. One who takes or has taken an oath; one who swears; an oath-taker. Compare nonjuror.

I am a juror in the holy league,

And therefore hated of the Protestants.

Mariotte, Massacre at Paris, II. 3.

2. One who serves on a jury; a jurymen; a person sworn to deliver the truth on the evidence given him concerning any matter in question or on trial. See jury.

If your will pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror.

Shak., Hen. VIII., v. 3, 60.

3. The syndie of a gild or trade, elected by the members of a craft to act as arbiter between master and man, examine apprentices, initiate masters, and represent the body of them.—4. One of a body of men selected to adjudge prizes, etc., at a public exhibition or competition of any kind.—Challenge of jurors. See challenge. 2.—Grand juror, a member of a grand jury.—Petty juror, a member of a petty jury.

jur-t, n. See yurt.

jury (jŭ-ri), n.; pl. juries (-riz). [Early mod. E. jurie, < ME. jurie, < OF. juree, an oath, a judicial inquest, a jury (F. jury, jur, < E.), < ML. jurata, a jury, a sworn body of men, orig. fem. pp. of L. jurare (> F. juror = Sp. Pg. jurar = It. giurare), swear, bind by an oath, < ius (jur-), law: see just.] 1. A certain number of men selected according to law, and sworn to inquire into or to determine facts concerning a cause or an accusation submitted to them, and to declare the truth according to the evidence adduced. Trial by jury signifies the determination of facts in the administration of civil or criminal justice by the arbitrament of such a body of men, subject to the superintendence of a judge, who directs the proceedings, decides what evidence is proper to be laid before the jury, and determines questions of law. The juries in the ordinary courts of justice are grand juries, petty or petit or common juries, special or struck juries, and sheriff's juries. Of these, the first and last are not trial juries in the proper sense. (See phrase below.) The principle of trial by jury existed in different forms among the ancient Greeks, Romans, and Germans; but it early fell into general disuse. The existing system gradually grew up under the English common law, from which it passed into American use, but has been only partially adopted in modern times by the nations of continental Europe.

For in good faith I never saw the days yet but that I durst as well trust ye truth of one judge as of two sires.
Str. T. More, Works, p. 368.

The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
 May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. Shak., M. for M., II. 1, 12.

2. A body of men selected to adjudge prizes, etc., at a public exhibition or other competition. Often called jury of award.—Coroner's jury, a jury summoned by a coroner to investigate the cause of a death.—Grand jury (l. a. 'large' jury, with reference to the number of members, which is greater than that of a petty or 'small' jury), in law, a body of men designated from time to time from among the people of a community, by authority of law, to inquire what violations of law have been committed therein, and by whom, their function being not to establish guilt, but to ascertain whether there is sufficient ground of suspicion of any person to justify trial by a petty jury. At common law, and generally by statute, there must be not less than twelve and not more than twenty-three members in a grand jury, and the concurrence of twelve is necessary to find an indictment. (See indictment.) In some jurisdictions grand juries are intrusted with some other duties relating to public welfare in their county. There is no grand jury in Scotland.—Juries (Ireland) Acts, English statutes of 1871 (24 and 25 Vict., c. 65), 1872 (35 and 36 Vict., c. 26), and 1875 (39 and 40 Vict., c. 87), which relate to the qualifications, selection, and summoning of juries in Ireland.—Jury de medietate linguae (literally, of halfness of language), a jury composed of one half natives and one half aliens, allowed in cases where one of the parties is an alien. It has been generally abolished in the United States, but is still allowed in Kentucky.—Jury of annoyance. See annoyance.—Jury of matrons, a jury of "discreet and lawful women" impaneled to try a question of pregnancy: as where a widow alleges herself to be with child by her late husband, or a woman sentenced to death pleads, in stay of execution, that she is with child.—Mixed jury, a jury of mixed races, particularly a jury including both white men and colored men.—Petty or petty jury (l. a. 'small' jury; cf. grand jury). Same as trial jury.—Sheriff's jury, a jury selected by a sheriff from the list of persons qualified to serve as jurors, and summoned by him to hold inquests, as for assessing damages in an action in which the defendant makes no defense, or for ascertaining the mental condition of an alleged lunatic.—Special jury, a jury selected from among men of special qualifications, as merchants or freeholders.—Struck jury, a jury selected by allowing each party alternately to strike off from a list a name not acceptable to him, until the number is reduced to twelve.—To hang a jury. See hang.—Trial jury, petty or petty jury, traverse jury, or common jury, a jury formed for the trial of an issue of fact in a civil or criminal action. At common law, both in England and in the United States, a trial jury must consist of twelve, and unanimity is necessary to render a verdict. The constitutional right of trial by jury in the United States implies these conditions. By statute, in cases where the Constitution does not secure this right, juries of six are sometimes allowed, as in justices' courts. By the Constitutions of several States (California, Nevada, and North and South Dakota), three-fourths of a jury may render a verdict in civil actions. According to the law of Scotland, the number of the jury in criminal cases is fifteen; and the decision of a majority determines the verdict. Instead of an absolute verdict of "guilty" or "not guilty," they may return one of "not proven," which frees the accused, but leaves him under a suspicion of guilt. In civil cases the number of the jury is twelve, and the jurors are not required to be unanimously agreed in their verdict. In cases of high treason the jury consists of twelve, and their verdict must be unanimous, as in England.

jury-box (jû'ri-boks), n. In a court of justice, an inclosed space in which the jury sits.

jury-leg (jû'ri-leg), n. [See jury-mast.] A wooden leg. [Slang.]

jury-list (jû'ri-list), n. In law, a list of persons who may be summoned to act as jurymen.

jurymen (jû'ri-mən), n.; pl. jurymen (-mən). 1. One who is impaneled on a jury, or who serves as a juror.

Here therefore a competent number of sensible and upright jurymen, chosen by lot from among those of the middle rank, will be found the best investigators of truth, and the surest guardians of public justice.
Blackstone, Com., III. xxiii.

2. A member of any body of persons chosen to try a case at law or to inquire into the merits of a cause presented to them, as one of the dicasts of ancient Athens, or of the judges of ancient Rome, or of a modern jury of award.

All cases of importance, civil or criminal, came before courts of sixty or seventy jurymen. Freunde, Caesar, p. 30.

jury-mast (jû'ri-mast), n. [The element jury, found first in jury-mast and later in similar naut. compounds, jury-rudder, jury-rig, jury-rigged, and the slang term jury-leg, is usually supposed to be an abbreviation of injury; but this presupposes a form injury-mast*, a highly improbable name for a new mast substituted for one which has been lost. The accent also makes an abbr. to jury-improbable. More improbable still are the etymologies which refer the word to Dan. kiøre, a driving, < kiøre (= Sw. köra = Norw. kørra = Icel. koyra), drive (Skeat), or to journey ("a journeiere mast, i. e. a mast for the day or occasion") (Grose). It suits the conditions best to take the word as simply < jury + mast, it being prob. orig. a piece of nautical humor, designating a more or less awkward mast hastily devised by the captain and carpenter consulting as a 'jury.' Naut., a temporary mast erected on a ship, to supply the place of one that has been broken or carried away, as in a tempest or an engagement.

jury-process (jû'ri-pros'es), n. The writ for the summoning of a jury.

jury-rig (jû'ri-rig), n. [< jury- (see jury-mast) + rig.] Naut., a temporary rig when the permanent rig has been disabled.

jury-rigger (jû'ri-rig'gér), n. Naut., rigged in a temporary manner on account of accident.

jury-rudder (jû'ri-rud'ér), n. [< jury- (see jury-mast) + rudder.] Naut., a temporary rudder rigged on a ship in case of accident.

jurywoman (jû'ri-wrûm'an), n.; pl. jurywomen (-wim'en). One of a jury of matrons (which see, under jury).

just, n. A Middle English form of justice.

just (jus), n. [L. law, right; see just, justice, etc., jurat, jurist, etc.] Law; right; particularly, what is declared to be law or right by a judge; matter of rule administered by a magistrate.—Jus civile, the interpretation of the laws of the Twelve Tables, and now of the whole system of the Roman law. Rapaez and Lawrence.—Jus duplicatum, in old law. See droit, 1.—Jus fedale, in Rom. law, international law, or the law of negotiation and diplomacy.—Jus gentium, the law of all nations; the law which natural reason establishes among all races of men; also, international law.—Jus honorarium, the body of rules established by magistrates by a course of adjudication upon matters within their jurisdiction.—Jus in rem, a right conceived of with reference to the thing which is subject to its dominion (that is, a right to the thing itself as against all the world), as distinguished from jus in personam, a right considered with respect to some particular person against whom it may be asserted, such as a debt.—Jus Italicum, the right, law, or liberties of a Roman colony, including quiritarian ownership and exemption from land-tax to the republic.—Jus naturale, jus naturale, the law of nature; natural law; the principles of justice conceived to be common to all just minds, and necessary to human welfare.—Jus prætorium, the body of law resulting from the adjudications of the Roman prætor.—Jus publicum, the public law of the status of persons, officers, the priesthood, and crimes.—Jus scriptum, written law; that which is committed to writing by the act of its creation, as a statute, as distinguished from unwritten law, which may result from custom or decisions of the courts irrespective of written form.

just, n. A Middle English form of justice.

justel (jus'el), n. [ME. justel, < OF. justel, juwel, < LL. jucellum, dim. of L. juculum, broth, soup, dim. of jus, broth; see juice.] A medieval dish. See the extract.

Justel. Recipe brede gratyd, & oggis; & swyng tham to-gydere, & do thereto sawge, & saferon, & salt; than take gode brothe, & cast it ther-to, & bole it enforseyd, & do ther-to as to charlete &c. Harleian MS., 5401, p. 128.

Jussieu (jus-i-è'sh), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), named after Bernard de Jussieu, founder of the natural system of botany developed later by his nephew. See Jussieu.] A genus of plants of the natural order Onagraceae, containing about 40 species, mainly herbs, inhabiting swamps and ponds, mostly in tropical and subtropical regions. The adherent calyx-tube is elongated, but not produced beyond the 4-celled ovary. There are from 4 to 8 entire or 2-lobed petals, with twice as many stamens. The leaves are alternate, and the yellow or white flowers are axillary and solitary. Several species are grown in collections, but none is conspicuous for its flowers or medicinal properties. J. douglasii and J. repens are natives of the United States; the latter also grows in the West Indies. The genus is sometimes very properly called primrose-willow. The name has also been written Jumieus, Jumieus, Jumieus, Jumieus.

Jussieu (jus-i-è'sh), n. [< Jussieu (see def.) + -an.] Of or pertaining to one of the French botanists Jussieu, especially Antoine Laurent de Jussieu (1748-1836).—Jussieu system, in bot., the natural (as contrasted with the artificial or Linnaean) system of classification, promulgated by A. L. de Jussieu in 1789 in his "Genera of Plants disposed according to Natural Orders." His uncle, Bernard de Jussieu (1699-1776), had proceeded in the same direction. To the nephew more than any one else is due the received classification of genera under orders based upon proper characters. Of these he founded one hundred, within which he included nearly all known genera. His primary division of the vegetable kingdom was into Acotyledones (the Cryptogamia of Linnaeus), Monocotyledones, and Dicotyledones. Subordinate divisions among flowering plants were based upon the position of the stamens. His system has been improved by A. P. de Candolle and many later workers.

justive (jus'iv), a. and n. [< L. jussus, pp. of judere, command, + -ive.] 1. a. In gram., expressing command.

II. n. In gram., a form or construction expressing command.

just¹ (just), a. [< ME. juste, < OF. juste, F. juste = Sp. Pg. justo = It. giusto, < L. justus, just, lawful, rightful, true, due, proper, moderate (neut. as noun justum, what is right or just), < jus, law, right. From L. jus come also E. juridical, jurisdiction, jurist, jury, injury, injury, etc.] 1. Right in law or ethics. (a) In accordance with true principles; agreeable to truth or equity; equitable; even-handed; righteous: as, it is just that we should suffer for our faults; a just award. They shall judge the people with just judgment. Deut. xvi. 18.

If it be so easy to shake off your sins, remember that your condemnation will be so much more just if you do it not. Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. iii.

(b) Based upon truth or equity; rightful; legitimate; well-founded: as, just claims or demands. We now return To claim our just inheritance of old. Milton, P. L., II. 28.

I see, however impracticable honest actions may appear, we may go on with just hope. Steele, Grief A-la-Mode, v. 1.

2. Right in character or quality. (a) Rightly adjusted; conformed to a standard; correct; suitable; such as should be: as, just measurement; a just allowance. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have. Lev. xix. 35.

His taste of books is a little too just for the age he lives in; he has read all, but approves of very few. Steele, Spectator, No. 2.

The text receiving proper light from a just punctuation. Goldsmith, Criticisms.

(b) Strictly accurate; exact; precise; proper. Or less than a just pound, If thou cut'st more Thou dost. Shak., M. of V., IV. 1, 27.

In just array draw forth th' embattled train, Lead all thy Grecians to the dusty plain. Pope, Iliad, II. 28.

Seem'd to me ne'er did limner paint So just an image of the Saint, . . . The loved Apostle John! Scott, Marmion, IV. 16.

(c) Agreeable to the common standard; full; complete. He [Henry VII.] was a Comely Personage, a little above just stature. Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII.

Forced men by tortures from their Religion; with other execrable outrages, which would require a vast volume to describe. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 84.

3. Right-minded; good in intention. (a) Doing or disposed to do right; actuated by truth and justice; upright; impartial: as, to be just in one's dealings. Shall mortal man be more just than God? Job iv. 17.

(b) Carefully mindful; faithful: followed by to, and formerly also by of: as, to be just to one's engagements. He was very just of his promise, for oft we trusted him, and would come within his day to keep his word. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 28.

Just of thy word, in every thought sincere. Pope, Epitaph, VII.

4. In music, harmonically pure, correct, and exact; in perfect tune: as, just interval, intonation, temperament: opposed in general to impure and incorrect, and specifically to tempered.—Syn. 1. Deserved, condign, even-handed.—2. True, proper, correct, regular, normal, natural, reasonable.—3. Rightful, Upright, etc. (see righteous); conscientious, honorable.

just¹ (just), adv. [Also dial. jest, jet (= D. juist = G. Dan. Sw. just), < just, a.] 1. Exactly, in space, time, kind, or degree; precisely; without interval, deviation, or variation; absolutely: as, just five miles; just noon; just so; just as I thought. It is just so high as it is. Shak., A. and C., II. 7, 48.

He so well employed them they did just nothing. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 286.

This education forms the common mind; Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined. Pope, Moral Essays, I. 150.

2. Within a little; with very little but a sufficient difference; nearly; almost exactly: as, I stood just by him; I saw him just now. It was our fortune to arrive there just as they were going to their Evening Service. Mansfield, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 27.

The stage languished, and was just expiring when it was again revived by King William's licence in 1695. Life of Quin (reprint 1867), p. 12.

3. Merely; barely; by or with a narrow margin: as, you just missed the mark; he is just a little displeased. Life can little more supply Than just to look about us, and to die. Pope, Essay on Man, I. 4.

They were just decent bien bodies;—any poor creature that had face to beg got an alms, and welcome. Scott, Chron. of Canongate, IV.

4. But now; very lately; within a brief past time. I am just come from paying my adoration at St. Peter's to three extraordinary relics. Gray, Letters, I. 68.

5. Quite; in intensive use: as, just awful. [Colloq.]—Just now. (a) A short time ago; lately: as, he was here just now. (b) Directly; immediately; without delay: as, I will attend to it just now. [Scottish.]

just, joust¹ (just or jōst), v. i. [Early mod. E. also giust (after It.); < ME. juston, justion, < OF. justier, jouster, jouster, bring together, come together, touch, strike with a lance, tilt, just, F. jouter, tilt, just, contend, = Pr. jostar, justar = Sp. Fig. justar = It. giostare (for giostare*), tilt, < ML. justare, approach, come together, tilt, just, < L. justa (> OF. juste, joste, jouste), close to, hard by, prob. orig. jugista*, abl. fem. superl. of jugis, continual, < jugere (> jug*), join: see join. Cf. adjust.] To engage in a tournament or just; tilt.

Then seyde Bofeye to Tarry,
Wyll we to-morrowe justy.

MS. Cantab. M. ii. 88, f. 121. (Halliwell.)

There are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love.

Shak., Pericles, II. 1, 116.

just², joust² (just or jōst), n. [Early mod. E. also giust (after It.); < ME. juste, < OF. joste, jouste (F. joute), also justice = It. giostia (for giostia*), a just; from the verb.] A military contest or spectacle in which two adversaries attacked each other with blunted lances, rarely with sharp weapons as in war; a knightly tilt. The just was sometimes held at the barrier; that is, the charging knights were separated by a solid structure of wood, which each kept on his left hand, the lance being held diagonally across the neck of the horse. The shield was hung from the neck, leaving the left hand free to manage the horse and the right to direct the lance. The shock of the lance was sometimes received on the helmet, and on this account the tilting-helmet had commonly the openings for air on the right side. From the beginning of the fourteenth century the armor for the just differed from the armor for war, and became more and more heavy and unwieldy, the tilter being almost immovable in his saddle, in which he was secured by high pommel and cantle, and often by a garde-cuisse completely covering the left thigh and leg. The sport was usually declared to be in honor of one or more ladies who presided as judges and awarded the prizes.

Lift up thy selfe out of the lowly dust,
And sing of bloody Mars, of wars, of giusts.

Spenser, Shep. Cal. October.

Some one might show it at a joust of arms, Saying, "King Arthur's sword, Escalbur."

Tennyson, Morte d'Arthur.

just³, joust³ (just or jōst), n. [OF. juste, juste, juyete, guiste, a sort of pot or pichler of tin, silver, or gold, with handles and a lid.] A pot or jug, made of earthenware or metal, with large body and straight neck, for holding liquids.

justacorpse, n. See juste-au-corps.

just-borne (just'borne), a. Justly borne; borne in a just cause.

By this hand I swear, . . .

Before we will lay down these just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, gainst whom those arms we bear.

Shak., E. John, II. 2, 346.

juste-au-corps (zhüst'ô-kôr'), n. [F., < juste, close, + au, to the (< à, to, + le, the), + corps, body. In E. (Sc.) justacorpse, corrupted to justicoat, jenticcoat, etc.] 1. A close body-coat with long skirts, worn at the close of the seventeenth century and early in the eighteenth by men of different classes, as by noblemen on journeys or when hunting, and by the coachmen in Paris. — 2. An outer garment worn by women about 1650, resembling the hungerlin, which it succeeded.

Give her out the flower'd Justacorpse, with the Petticoat belonging to it.

Dryden, Limberham, IV. 1.

justament, n. An obsolete aphetic form of agistment.

juste milieu (zhüst mē-lyé'). [F.: juste, just; milieu, the medium.] The true mean; a just medium or balance between extremes; specifically, judicious moderation, as between extremes of opinion or conduct; defined as a political term by Montesquieu, but first brought into common use by Louis Philippe in 1831 in characterizing his own system of government.

For me, the juste milieu I seek;

I fain would leave alone

The girl who rudely slaps my cheek,

Or volunteers her own.

J. G. Saxe, tr. of Martial's Epigrams.

juster, jouster (jus'ter or jōs'ter), n. 1. One who justs or takes part in a just. — 2. A horse for tilting. Halliwell.

justice (jus'tis), n. [< ME. justice, < OF. justice, justice, joustice, F. justice = Pr. Sp. justicia = Pg. justiça = It. giustizia, < L. justitia, justice, < justus, just; see just.] 1. Justness; the quality of being just; just conduct. (a) Practical conformity to the laws and principles of right dealing; the rendering to every one of that which is his due; honesty; rectitude; uprightness; also, the ethical idea of just conduct, either of individuals or of communities; the moral principle which determines such conduct.

This was the trouble that the kynge leodogan was a noble knight, and kepte well justice and right.

Morley (A. E. T. S.), III. 463.

Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been, and ever will be pursued, until it be obtained, or until liberty be lost in the pursuit.

A. Hamilton, Federalist, No. 51.

(b) Conformity to truth; right representation and sound conclusion; impartiality; fairness; trustworthiness.

When we approached Sicily, . . . I had a view of the cities and places on the shore, I could not but observe the justice and poetical beauties of the descriptions of the great master of the Latin Epic poetry.

Poeticks, Description of the East, II. II. 184.

(c) Agreeableness to right; rightfulness; moral soundness: as, he proved the justice of his claim.

Ye sons of Mars! partake your leader's care, Heroes of Greece, and brothers of the war!
(Of partial Jove with justice I complain,
And heavenly oracles believ'd in vain.

Pope, Iliad, II. 141.

2. Vindication of right; requital of desert; the assignment of merited reward or punishment; specifically, execution or vindication of law.

Earthly power doth then show likst God's When mercy seasons justice.

Shak., M. of V., IV. 1, 197.

This reasonable moderator, and equal piece of justice, Death.

Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, I. 82.

3. Rights of jurisdiction. — 4. Jurisdiction; authority.

The six kynges . . . commaunded alle hem that were vnther thre justice, that eche man shoulde euer be redy and make goodde waiches.

Morley (A. E. T. S.), III. 576.

5. Precision; justness; exactness.

O lady,

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a prince's
To equal any single crown of the earth!

I the justice of compare! Shak., Pericles, IV. 3, 2.

6. A person commissioned to hold court for the purpose of hearing complaints, trying and deciding cases, and administering justice; a judge or magistrate; generally in specific uses: as, a justice of the peace; the justices of the Supreme Court.

Thurgh sentences of this justice Apinus.

Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, I. 204.

Bed of justice. See bed. — Bureau of Military Justice. See bureau. — Chief justice, the highest in rank of the judges of a court; particularly, the presiding judge in the King's (or Queen's) Bench and Common Pleas divisions of the English High Court of Justice, in the United States Supreme Court, and in the supreme courts of the States. Often abbreviated C. J. — College of Justice. See college. — Department of Justice. See department. — Fugitive from justice. See fugitive. — Gate of justice. See gate. — Jeddard or Jedwood justice, executing a prisoner and trying him afterward: an expression referring to Jedburgh, a Scotch border town, where many of the border rulers are said to have been hanged without the formality of a trial. [Scotch.]

We will have Jedwood justice — hang in haste, and try at leisure.

Scott, Fair Maid of Perth, xxiii.

Justice of the peace, an inferior or local judge chosen in each county or town or other district, to preserve the peace, to try minor causes, and to discharge other functions, as the legalizing of papers for record. Abbreviated J. P.

Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., IV. 7, 45.

Justice of the quorum, a distinction conferred upon some, and sometimes on all, the justices of the peace of a county in England, by directing, in the commission authorizing the holding of quarter sessions, that among those holding the court must be two or more of several specially named. — Justices in eyre. See eyre. — Justices' justice, the kind of justice administered by the unpaid magistrates: in satirical reference to the disproportionate sentences and extraordinary decisions of some of these officials. [Eng.] — Justice's warrant. See warrant. — Lord Chief Justice, the title given in England to the chief judge of the Court of King's (Queen's) Bench; in full, the Lord Chief Justice of England. The title of Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas lapsed with the abolition of that court. — Lord Justice Clerk, the Scottish judge who ranks next to the Lord Justice General. He presides over the Outer House or Second Division of the Court of Session, and is vice-president of the High Court of Justiciary. — Lord Justice General, the highest judge in Scotland, also called the Lord President of the Court of Session. — Lords justices, persons formerly appointed by the English sovereign to act for a time as his substitute in the supreme government either of the whole kingdom or of some part of it. — To do justice to, to appreciate; treat in a manner showing appreciation of: as, he never did justice to his son's ability. — Trial justice, a justice assigned to hold court for the trial of causes, usually before a jury. [U. S.] = Syn. 1. Right Justice, Equity, Law; Justness, Justice. Right is the standard word for what ought to be. Justness and equity are essentially the same, expressing the working out of the principles of right under law, but law is often contrary to justice or equity; hence the occasional remark, "That may be law, but it is not justice." Law in such a case means the interpretation of written law by the courts. A court of equity deals with and corrects the injustices of the working of the law. Equity more expressively represents the idea of fairness, and justice that of sacred rights. (See just and honesty.) Justness has a field of meaning peculiar to itself, by which we speak of the justness of observations, criticisms, etc., — that is, their conformity to admitted principles. As to conformity to right, we use justice for the abstract quality, justice of the person, and justness of the thing. We speak of the justness of a cause, a claim, a plea, etc.

justice (jus'tis), v. t. [< justice, n.] To administer justice to; deal with judicially; judge.

Hilt waitz sen in that sythe that gedethys [Jedediab] reigned,
In Inda, that justified the layne kynges.

Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), II. 1170.

The next inheritor to the crown . . . had no sooner his mistress in captivity but he had usurped her place, . . . but, which is worse, had sent to Artaxia, persuading the justifying her, because that unjustice might give his title the name of justice.

Sir F. Sidney, Arcadia, II.

justiceable (jus'tis-a-bl), a. [< OF. justiciable, justiciable, justiciable, < justice, law: see justice and -able. Cf. justiciable.] Amenable to law; subject to judicial trial: as, a justiceable offender. Sir J. Hayward.

justice-broker (jus'tis-brō'kér), n. A magistrate who sells his judicial decisions.

The devil take all justice-brokers.

Dryden, Amphitryon, IV. 1.

justicehood (jus'tis-hūd), n. [< justice + -hood.] The office or dignity of a justice; justiceship. [Rare.]

Should but the king his justice-hood employ
In setting forth of such a solemn toy.

E. Jonson, Epitaphium with Inigo Jones.

justicement (jus'tis-mēt), n. [< justice + -ment.] Administration of justice; procedure in courts. E. Phillips, 1706.

justicer (jus'tis-ér), n. [< ME. justicer, < OF. justicier, also justicior, < ML. justitarius, one who administers justice, < L. justitia, justice: see justiciary.] An administrator of justice; a justice or judge.

Vnto the which justicers . . . we give and graunt especial power and authoritie to sitte and assist in court.

Ulrich's Voyages, I. 206.

justiceship (jus'tis-ship), n. [< justice + -ship.] The office or dignity of a justice. Holland, tr. of Ammianus, p. 61.

Justicia (jus-tish'i-ā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), named after J. Justice, a noted Scotch horticulturist and botanist. The surname Justice is derived from justice, a judge: see justice.] A genus of plants of the natural order Acanthaceae, the type of the tribe Justicieae. Its corolla-tube is enlarged above and mostly shorter than the bilabiate limb; the upper lip is interior in evagination, concave, and entire or slightly 2-lobed, the lower spreading and 2-cleft. The stamens are two, affixed in the throat. The two anther-cells are separated, the lower with a small white spur; there are two ovules in a cell. These plants are herbs or rarely shrubs, with the leaves entire, and the flowers middle-sized or small, colored white, violet, pink, or red, and variously disposed. There are about 110 species, belonging to the warmer parts of the globe, many being handsome in cultivation. J. Adnata, called Makabar nut, is reputed to have the properties of an anti-spasmodic and febrifuge.

justiciable (jus-tish'i-a-bl), a. [< OF. justiciable, F. justiciable, pertaining to justice or law, also just: see justiciable.] Proper to be brought before a court of justice, or to be judicially disposed of.

A person is said to be justiciable in a country when liable to be tried therein, or to be brought under the operation of its laws; a thing, when the rights and incidents of its ownership may be settled by the courts of that country. J. N. Pomeroy.

justiciar (jus-tish'i-ār), n. [Also justitiar; < ML. justitarius, justicior: see justicior, justicarius.] Same as justiciary, 2.

justiciarship (jus-tish'i-ār-ship), n. [< justiciar + -ship.] The office of justiciar.

The unpopularity of Longchamp enabled John, aided by the archbishop of Rouen, to lead a revolutionary movement by which Longchamp was deprived of the justiciarship, and John recognized as summus rector of the kingdom. Eneyc. Brit., XIII. 713.

justiciary (jus-tish'i-ār-i), n. and n. [< ML. justitarius, one who administers justice, < L. justitia, justice: see justice. Cf. justicer, justiclar, ult. < ML. justitarius.] 1. a. Pertaining to the law; legal; relating to the administration of justice.

He was brought into the justiciary court, upon an indictment for the crime to which it was expected he should plead guilty.

Scrype, Memorials, E. Charles, an. 1674.

Justiciary power, the power of judging in matters of life and death. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

II. n.; pl. justiciaries (-riz). 1. An administrator of justice; a justice or judge. Burke. [Rare.] — 2. In early Eng. hist., the chief administrator of both government and justice. The justiciary or chief justiciary was the king's deputy from the time of William the Conqueror to that of Henry III., presiding in the king's court and the exchequer, supervising all departments of government, and acting as regent in the king's absence. His functions were afterward divided between the lord chancellor, the chief justice, the lord high treasurer, etc. Also justiclar.

His [Stephen's] brother had been made Bishop of Winchester, and by adding to it the place of his chief justiclar.

ary, the king (Henry I.) gave him an opportunity of becoming one of the richest subjects in Europe.

Burke, Abridg. of Eng. History, III. 3.

The officers whom, by a faint analogy, we may call the Prime Ministers of the Norman Kings, are spoken of by more names than one. On these great officers the title of Justiciar or Chief Justiciar definitely settled.

E. A. Freeman, Norman Conquest, V. 288.

34. In theol., one who trusts in the justice or uprightness of his own conduct.

O Saviour, the glittering palaces of proud justiciaries are not for thee; thou lovest the lowly and ragged cottage of a contrite heart.

Ep. Hall, Zacchena.

I believe it would be no hard matter to unravel and run through most of the pompous austerities and fastings of many religious operators and splendid justiciaries.

South, Sermons, IX. 142.

4. Administration of justice or of criminal law; judiciary. [Scotch.]—Clerk of Justiciary. See clerk.—Courts of Justiciary, the highest criminal tribunals of Scotland. The supreme tribunal, whose decisions are final is the High Court of Justiciary. Its judges, called Commissioners or Lords of Justiciary, are the Lord Justice General, the Lord Justice Clerk, and five judges of the Court of Session, appointed by patent. Circuit Courts of Justiciary are held by judges of the High Court at ten different towns throughout the country, usually twice a year.

Justices (jus-ti-ā-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Dumortier), < Justitia + -es.] A large tribe of acanthaceous plants. Besides Justicia, the type, this includes 75 genera, agreeing with it most obviously in having the upper lip or upper lobes of the corolla interior, or at any rate the corolla not twisted in the bud.

justices (jus-tish-i-ēz), n. [ML., 2d pers. sing. pres. subj. (used as impv.) of justicare, justitiare, dispense justice, < L. justitia, justice: see justice.] In Eng. law, a writ, now obsolete, directed to the sheriff, empowering him to hold plea of debt in his county court: so called from the significant word in the opening clause of the writ, in Latin, "we command you that you justice A. B.," etc.

justicing, n. [MH. justising; verbal n. of justice, v.] The act of judging or ruling.

The amiral haneth to his justicings
Other half hondert of riches kinge
The alre richeste kinge.

King Horn (R. E. T. S.), p. 107.

justicing-room (jus-tis-ing-rōm), n. A room in which causes are heard judicially and justice is administered; especially, such a room in the house of a justice of the peace. [Eng.]

justicot, justicoat, n. Corruptions of juste-aucorpin.

justifiability (jus-ti-fi-a-bil-i-ti), n. Justifiable-ness. The Lancet. [Rare.]

justifiable (jus-ti-fi-a-bil), a. [F. justifiable, < LL. as if justificabilis*, < justificare, justify: see justify.] Capable of being justified or proved to be just or true; defensible; warrantable: as, justifiable resentment.

The stile of a Souilder is not eloquent, but honest and justifiable.

Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 60.

It is justifiable by Caesar that they used to shave all except their head and upper lip, and wore very long hair; but in their old clime I see no such thing warranted.

Reiden, Illustrations of Drayton's Polyolbion, VIII.

His (Bacon's) conduct was not justifiable according to any professional rules that now exist, or that ever existed in England.

Macaulay, Lord Bacon.

Justifiable homicide. See homicide 2. = SYN. Vindicable. See exculpable.

justifiableness (jus-ti-fi-a-bil-ness), n. The quality of being justifiable; possibility of being defended or excused.

You bring the confessions of the French and Dutch churches, averring the truth and justifiableness of their own government.

Ep. Hall, Del. of Humb. Remount.

justifiably (jus-ti-fi-a-bil-ly), adv. In a justifiable manner; so as to admit of justification or excuse.

justification (jus-ti-fi-kā-shon), n. [= F. justification = Sp. justificación = Pg. justificação = It. giustificazione, < LL. justificatio (-n), < justicare, justify: see justify.] 1. The act of justifying, or of showing something to be just or right; proof of fairness, propriety, or right intention; vindication; exculpation; upholding.

I pray, proceed to the justification or commendations of Angling.

I. Wallon, Complete Angler, p. 23.

The love of books is a love which requires no justification, apology, or defense.

Langford, Praise of Books, Prelim. Essay.

Specifically—2. In law: (a) The showing of a sufficient reason in court why a defendant did what he is called to answer: as, a plea in justification.

For liberty of frank speech, being a part of justification and defence in law, is allowed to use great words for plea.

Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 250.

(b) Proof by a surety offered for a party of whom security is required in legal proceedings that he is of adequate pecuniary ability.

Mr. M—— said that Recorder S—— had fixed bail at $25,000, and justification in $50,000 would be enough.

Philadelphia Times, April 10, 1893.

3. In theol., the act by which the soul is reconciled to God. According to Roman Catholic authority, justification is an act by which God imparts his own character to the believer, making him truly just or righteous. According to the common Protestant doctrine, it is a forensic act by which, on certain conditions, God treats as just or righteous one who is not personally worthy of such treatment. In this sense it is nearly equivalent to the forgiveness of sins.

Justification . . . is not remission of sins merely, but also the sanctification and renewal of the inner man, through the voluntary reception of the grace, and of the gifts, whereby man of unjust becomes just, and of an enemy a friend, that so he may be an heir according to hope of life everlasting.

Canons and Decrees of the Council of Trent, quoted in Schaff's "Creeds of Christendom," II. 95.

Justification is thus a forensic term; it is equivalent to the remission of sins. To justify signifies not to make the offender righteous, but to treat him as if he were righteous, to deliver him from the accusation of the law by the bestowal of a pardon.

G. P. Fisher, Hist. Reformation, p. 461.

4. The act of adjusting or making exact; the act of fitting together, as the parts of anything: as, the justification of lines or types, in printing.

Are we to seek here for the justification of the frontier which struck us as artificial and needless?

E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 44.

When he [the printer] comes to the end of his line, and finds that he has a syllable or word which will not fill out the measure, he has to perform a task which requires considerable care and taste. This is called justification.

Ure, Dict., III. 644.

= SYN. 1 and 2. Exoniation, exoneration.

justificative (jus-ti-fi-kā-tiv), a. [= F. justificatif = Sp. Pg. justificativo = It. giustificativo, < LL. as if justificativus*, < justificare, justify: see justify.] Justifying; having power to justify; justificatory.

Those same justificative points you urge Might benefit . . .

Count Guido Franceschini.

Browning, King and Book, II. 513.

justificator (jus-ti-fi-kā-tor), n. [= F. justificateur = Sp. Pg. justificador = It. giustificatore, < LL. justificator* (in fem. justificatrix), < justicare, justify: see justify.] One who justifies; in law, a compurgator who in former times justified accused persons by oath; also, a jurymen (because the jurymen justify that party for whom they deliver their verdict).

justificatory (jus-ti-fi-kā-tō-ri), a. [< ML. justificatorius, < LL. justificare, justify: see justify.] Tending to justify; vindictory; defensorial.

justifier (jus-ti-fi-ēr), n. 1. One who justifies; one who vindicates, supports, defends, or upholds; also, one who pardons and absolves from guilt and punishment.

That he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

Rom. III. 26.

2. In printing: (a) The workman who makes of just length, and with just spaces between the words, the lines of type set by a type-setting machine. (b) An attachment to a type-setting machine which does automatically some or all of the work of justification.—3. In type-founding, the workman who fits up a suite of strikes or unjustified matrices for use on one mold, making each and all just or uniform in height as to body, of even line as to face, and of proper nearness to mated letters.

justify (jus-ti-fi), v.; pret. and pp. justified, ppr. justifying. [< ME. justifien, < OF. (and F.) justifier = Sp. Pg. justificar = It. giustificare, < LL. justificare, act justly toward, do justice to, justify, < justificus, that acts justly, < L. justus, just, + facere, do.] I. trans. 1. To prove or show to be just or conformable to reason, justice, duty, law, or propriety; vindicate; warrant; uphold.

He boldly answered him. He there did stand

That would his doings justify with his owne hand.

Spenser, F. Q., V. xi. 4.

We are, therefore, unable to discover on what principle it can be maintained that a cause which justifies a civil war will not justify an act of attainer.

Macaulay, Nugent's Hampden.

2. To declare innocent or blameless; absolve; acquit; specifically, to free from the guilt or penalty of sin; reconcile to God.

I cannot justify whom the law condemns.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., II. 3. 16.

And by him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

Acts XIII. 39.

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Rom. v. 1.

By works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

Jas. II. 24.

3. To prove (any one) to be. [Rare.]

I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors.

Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 121.

4. To make exact; cause to fit or be adapted, as the parts of a complex object; adjust, as lines or columns in printing.

When so many words and parts of words as will nearly fill the line have been composed, it is made the exact length required by inserting or diminishing the space between the several words. This is called justifying the line, and is effected by means of the spaces already mentioned.

Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 700.

5. To judge; pass judgment upon; hence, to punish with death; execute. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]

Bathe jurees, and juggle, and justices of landes,

Luke thou justify theme wile that injurie wykes.

Morte Arthure (R. E. T. S.), I. 603.

Their conspirators desired, at all times, to have this Duke [of Albany] put to death. . . . It was concluded by the king and council that he should be justified on a certain day.

Pittcoatie, Chron. of Scotland, p. 83. (Janssen.)

Justified matrix, in type-founding. See drive, 1 (c).—To justify bail, in law. See bail 2. = SYN. 1. To defend, maintain, exonerate, excuse, exculpate.

II. intrans. To agree; match; conform exactly; form an even surface or true line with something else: as, in printing, two lines of nonpareil and one of pica justify.

justifying-stick (jus-ti-fi-ing-stik), n. An attachment to some forms of type-setting machine, in which lines of type are made of even length, and with uniform spaces between the words; practically, a composing-stick.

justing, jousting (jus'ting or jōs'ting), n. [< ME. justing; verbal n. of just, v.] The act of tilting; a tilt, just, or tournament.

Ne stede for thi justing wel to goon.

Chaucer, Good Women, I. 1113.

At the metynge of this turnment we sein many justinges, that gladly were be-holden.

Mervin (R. E. T. S.), II. 134.

justing-helmet (jus'ting-hel'met), n. The helmet used in the just. See just 2 and tilting-helmet.

justing-target (jus'ting-tār-j), n. A shield especially made for the just. See tilting-target.

Justinian code. See code.

Justinianist (jus-tin-i-an-ist), n. [< Justinian, Emperor of the East from 527 to 565, + -ist.] One who is instructed in the Institutes of Justinian; one acquainted with civil law.

justle, v. and n. An occasional form of jostle.

justly (jus'tli), adv. 1. In a just manner; in conformity to reason, law, or justice; by right; honestly; fairly; equitably: as, to deal justly; an opinion justly formed.—2. In conformity to fact or rule; accurately: as, his character is justly described.

justment (jus'tment), n. [< just + -ment.] That which is due. Davies.

That for seven lusters I did never come

To doe the rites to thy religious tombe;

That neither haire was cut or true teares shed

By me o'ur then as justments to the dead,

Forgive, forgive me.

Herriot, To the Shade of his Religious Father.

justness (jus'tness), n. 1. The quality or state of being just, equitable, or right; conformity to truth or justice; lawfulness; rightfulness; honorableness.

The Enquire Katrington was a Man of a mighty justness, the Knight, Annesley, a little Man; yet through the justness of his Cause, after a long Fight, the Knight prevailed.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 123.

We may not think the justness of each act

Such and no other than event doth form it.

Shak., T. and C., II. 2. 119.

2. Conformity to fact or rule; correctness; exactness; accuracy: as, justness of description or of proportions.

Their justness in keeping time by practice much before any that we have, unless it be a good band of practiced soldiers.

Pepys, Diary, III. 66.

Every Circumstance in their Speeches and Actions is with great justness and delicacy adapted to the Persons who speak and act.

Addison, Spectator, No. 308.

= SYN. Propriety, fitness, fairness. See justice.

jut (jut), v. 1.; pret. and pp. jutted, ppr. jutting. [Early mod. E. jutt, jutto; a var. of jet, v.] 1.

To strike; shove; butt.

And all thy bodie shall have the fruition of this lighte,
In such wise as it shal no where stumble nor tette against any thing.

J. Udall, On Lake xl.

Insulting Tyranny beginses to jut
Upon the innocent and awlesse Throne.

Shak., Rich. III., II. 4. 51 (fol., 1623).

2. To project forward; extend beyond the main body or line: as, the jutting part of a building; often with out.

A very pleasant little tarrance . . . jutting or butting out from the maine building.

Coryat, Creditia, I. 203.

jut (jut), n. [A var. of jet, n.] 1. That which juts; a projection.

He, stepping down
By sig-mag paths and juts of pointed rock,
Came on the shining levels of the lake.
Tennyson, Morte d'Arthur.

2. A jostle; a shove; a thrust.

I will not see him, but glue him a jute indeed.
Udall, Roister Doister, iii. 3.
The band, with a jut of his foot, may keep off the old, from dread of the future. Mrs Burney, Cecilia, ii. 3.

Jute¹ (jüt), n. [= Dan. Jyde = Sw. Jute, < AS. Jútas, Eótas, Geótas, Jótas, Ytas, pl., the Jutes.] One of a Low German tribe originally inhabiting Jutland, Denmark, which, with the Saxons and Angles, invaded Great Britain in the fifth century. See Anglo-Saxon.

Jute² (jüt), n. [< Beng. jüt, the fibers of the plant Corchorus, also the plant itself, Malayalam jat, < Skt. jatā (also jūta), matted hair (as worn by Shiva or Hindu ascetics), also the fibrous roots of a tree (as of the banyan).] 1. A plant of the fiber-producing genus Corchorus, natural order Tiliaceae; chiefly, one of the two species C. capsularis and C. olitorius, which alone furnish the jute-fiber of commerce. The latter is called Jow-mallum, a name also occasionally given to the former. C. capsularis is the larger, and has a, flower; b, seed; c, fruit of C. ziziquarum.

Fruiting Branch of Jute (Corchorus capsularis).

short globular pods, while those of C. olitorius are elongated and cylindrical; but there is no clear difference in the quality of their product. The two species are native and cultivated in Bengal, whence comes the great mass of the jute of commerce, 60,000 tons being exported per year. Jute likes a warm, moist climate. It has been introduced into Egypt, and into the southern United States, where its success appears to be hindered only by the want of a sufficiently cheap means of separating the fiber.

2. The fiber of this plant. It is obtained by maceration from the inner bark. It is of fair tenacity, glossy, and susceptible of so fine division as to mix well with silk, and can take on a bright and permanent coloring. Hitherto, however, its commercial use has been in the manufacture of coarse fabrics, such as gunny-bags, for which it is consumed in vast quantities. It is of inferior value for ropes, not enduring moisture well. The refuse makes good paper. Dundee, in Scotland, is the great seat of jute-manufacture.—American jute (improperly so called), the velvetest, Abutilon Avicennae, belonging to the Malvaceae; introduced from India, and now too common as a cornfield weed. Its fiber is pronounced equal to jute, and its economical importance seems to depend on the adaptation of suitable machinery.—Eastard jute, Bidens cannabinus, the fiber of which is inferior both to jute and sunn-hemp, and with the better H. esculentus, is used to adulterate jute.—Jute-butts or cuttings, the woody stump of the jute-plant, the fiber of which is used for various purposes.

jute-fiber (jüt'fī'bér), n. Same as *jute*², 2.

Jutes, n. pl. See Jouties.

Jutish (jüt'tish), a. [< *Jute*¹ + -ish.] Pertaining to the Jutes.

The advance-guard of these tribes (Saxon) was called Jutes, and their point of attack was Kent, the southeastern county of England. This they soon subdued, and erected it into a Jutish kingdom, with Canterbury as its capital. Schulz, Stud. Med. Hist., p. 199.

Jutlander (jut'lan-dér), n. [< Jutland (< *Jute*¹ + land) + -er.] A native or an inhabitant of Jutland, a peninsula of Europe comprising the mainland of Denmark and the adjoining part of Germany.

Jutlandish (jut'lan-dish), a. [< Jutland + -ish.] Of or pertaining to Jutland, or to the people of Jutland.

juttingly (jut'ing-li), adv. In a jutting manner; projectingly.

jutty (jut'i), n. [A var. of jetty.] A projection, as in a building; also, a pier or mole; a jetty. [In the quotation below, also interpreted as an adjective, jutting.]

No jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coigne of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procrustean cradle.
Shak., Macbeth, i. 6, 7.

jutty (jut'i), v. [A var. of jetty.] I. trans. To project beyond.

As doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. 1, 12.

II. intrans. To jut; to project.

For he took away all those jutting galleries of pleasure which even by ancient laws also were forbidden to be built in Rome. Holland, tr. of Ammianus, p. 318.

jut-window (jut'win'dō), n. A projecting window; a bow-window or bay-window; a window that projects from the line of a building. Con-grove.

juvenal (jū've-nal), n. [< L. juvenalis, youthful, < juvenis, youthful, a youth; see juvenile.] A youth; a young man; a juvenile.

I will . . . send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 2, 22.

Juvenalian (jū've-nā'li-an), a. [< L. Juvenalis, Juvenal (see def.), < juvenalis, youthful; see juvenal.] Of or pertaining to Juvenal, a celebrated Roman satirist (about A. D. 100); characteristic of Juvenal or of his style.

juvenate (jū've-nāt), n. [< NL. juvenatus, < L. juvenis, a youth; see juvenile and -ate.] In the Rom. Cath. Ch., the two years devoted by a novice preparing for the priesthood to the study of Latin, Greek, and rhetoric. Also called juniorship. Worcester (Supp.).

juvencence (jū've-nēs'ens), n. [< juvencen (t) + -ce.] The state of being juvenescent or of growing young.

juvenescent (jū've-nēs'ent), a. [< L. juvenescen (t)-s, ppr. of juvencere, grow to the age of youth, grow young again, < juvenis, young; see juvenile.] 1. Becoming young; growing young in appearance. [Rare.]—2. Immature; undeveloped. [An inaccurate use.]

juvenile (jū've-nīl), a. and n. [= F. juvenile = Pr. juvenil, juvenil = Sp. Pg. juvenil = It. giovenile, giovanile, < L. juvenilis, youthful, juvenile, < juvenis, young, akin to juvencus, young, = AS. lung, geong, E. young; see young.] 1. a. 1. Young; youthful; as, a juvenile manner; a juvenile part in a play.

Cousin Fenix . . . is still so juvenile in figure and manner, and so well got up, that strangers are amazed when they discern latent wrinkles in his lordship's face. Dickens, Dombey and Son, xxxi.

2. Pertaining or suited to youth; as, juvenile sports or books.

Here [in "Romeo and Juliet"] is one of the few attempts of Shakespeare to exhibit the conversation of gentlemen, to represent the airy sprightliness of juvenile elegance. Johnson, On Shakespeare's Plays.

—Syn. Boysish, Puerile, etc. See youthful.

II. n. 1. A young person; a youth.

"Yes, yes, yes," cried the juveniles, both ladies and gentlemen; "let her come, it will be excellent sport." Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xviii.

2. A book written for young persons or children. [Trade use.]

Juveniles, classified in series according to price. Publishers' Trade List, 1899.

3. Theat., an actor who plays youthful parts: as, a first juvenile.

juvenilence (jū've-nīl-nēs), n. Juvenility. Bailey, 1727. [Rare.]

juvenility (jū've-nīl'i-ti), n. [= F. juvénilité = Sp. juvenilidad, < L. juvenilitas (t)-s, youthfulness, < juvenilis, youthful; see juvenile.] 1. The state of being young; youthfulness, or a youthful manner or appearance.

Cleopatra, who in her juvenility was always playfully disposed, . . . pushed Florence behind her couch. Dickens, Dombey and Son, xxx.

2. Anything characteristic of youth; a juvenile act or idea; juvenile crudity or volatility; a youthful proceeding or performance.

Customary strains and abstracted juvenilities have made it difficult to commend and speak credibly in dedications. Glennville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, Ep. Ded.

juventate, n. [< L. juvenitas (t)-s, the age of youth, youth, < juvenis, young; see juvenile.] Youth; the time of youth. Chaucer.

juventet, n. [ME., < OF. juvenile, juvente, < L. juvenis, the age of youth, youth, < juvenis, young; see juvenile.] Same as juventate.

In his Juvenis this Iesus atte Iuven feste Water in-to wyn tourned as holy writ telleth.
Piers Plowman (B), xix. 104.

juvia (jū'vi-ā), n. [S. Amer.] The Brazil-nut, Bertholletia excelsa.

juviset, n. See juse.

juxta-. [L. juxta, prefix, juxta, near, close; see juxta, v.] A prefix of Latin origin, signifying 'near, together, in close proximity.' See juxtaposition, juxtapose, etc.

juxtapose (jūks-tā-pōz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. juxtaposed, ppr. juxtaposing. [< F. juxtaposer, < L. juxta, near (see juxta), + ponere, place; see pose.] To place (two or more objects) close together; place side by side.

When red and green are juxtaposed, the red increases the saturation of the green and the green that of the red, so that both colours are heightened in brilliance. J. Ward, Ensaye Brit., xx. 69.

juxtaposit (jūks-tā-pōz'it), v. t. [< L. juxta, near, + positus, pp. of ponere, place; see posit. Cf. juxtapose.] To place near together or in close relation; juxtapose.

Manufactured articles, similar articles of home and foreign production, juxtapositioned. Contemporary Rev., LI. 166.

juxtaposition (jūks'tā-pō-zish'on), n. [= Fg. juxtaposition, < F. juxtaposition, < L. juxta, near, + positio (n-), a placing; see position. Cf. juxtapose.] The act of juxtaposing, or the state of being juxtaposed; the act of placing or the state of being placed in nearness or contiguity.

Putting the case of English style into close juxtaposition with the style of the French and German.

De Quincey, Style, I.

The juxtaposition in space of two objects greatly assists in the detection of likeness or unlikeness. J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 332.

juxtapositional (jūks'tā-pō-zish'on-al), a. [< juxtaposition + -al.] 1. Pertaining to or consisting in juxtaposition.—2. Having its parts or elements juxtaposed, as a language the construction of which depends upon the connection of its words rather than their inflection.

Our own language, though claimed as inflectional, . . . is in many respects as isolating and juxtapositional as any language of that class. W. Smith, Bible Dict., Confusion of Tongues.

jymjam, n. An obsolete form of jimjam.

jymold, n. Same as gimbal.

Jyngids, Jyngins. See Iyngids, Iyngins.

jytee (jin'tē), n. [E. Ind.] The plant Sesbania Egyptiaca, from which charcoal for use in the manufacture of gunpowder is made.

Jyzzet. See Gie.

jyzi, n. See gizi.

sondants and its claimed originals (see A), is as follows:

K was little used in classical Latin, its office having been transferred to C (as is explained under C); hence it is not common in most alphabets derived from the Latin, as Italian and French. It was scarcely used in Anglo-Saxon, the k-sound being regularly represented by c, of which k was only an occasional variant; but it became common in early Middle English, from the thirteenth century, and gained rapidly in frequency, being needed to represent the k-sound where the c would be ambiguous, owing to the assimilation of c before certain vowels. (See C, ch.) It is now the regular symbol for the sound it denotes in all the Teutonic languages, except English. In the modern English spelling of words of Anglo-Saxon, Romance, or Latin origin it occurs for this sound before e and i; c being used before other vowels and before consonants. In foreign words not of Romance or Latin origin k is the usual initial symbol for the sound. Medially and finally, the sound is denoted in English by ck, as in back, hacker, etc. K has no variety of pronunciation in English, being everywhere the surd or breathed correspondent to the sonant or voiced c (hard). It is called a guttural, or, better, a back-palatal, being the audible result of a breach of contact between the upper surface of the back part of the tongue and the opposite surface of the palate; it is related to g (hard) and ng as t is related to d and n, and p to b and m. It is, however, now silent before n, in words like knave, knave; and, while itself no longer doubled in English words, it is used with c as a substitute for double c or double k, as in sick, smack. In words belonging to the Teutonic part of our language, the k-sound represents to a large extent a more original g-sound, as in kin, answering to Latin gens, Greek γενος (Sanskrit jana). Owing to the variable English transliteration of Oriental words (Arabic, Hebrew, Hindustani, Persian, Turkish, etc.), k (or c) may represent any one of several different kinds of g-sounds, more precisely represented (as in the etymologies of this Dictionary) by k, kh, g, gh, h, etc. Such words are preferably entered under the form nearest the original; but usage is too arbitrary and various to be brought under any rule.

2. In chem, the symbol for potassium (NL. kalium).—3. As an abbreviation: (a) [i. c.] In meteor, of cumulus (c being used for cirrus). (b) Of king, knight, etc.: as, K. G., Knight of the Garter. (c) Of carat.—4. In math, k is generally a constant coefficient. It is also a unit vector perpendicular to i and j.—5. As a numeral in medieval use, 250.

ka¹, kæ (kà, kâ), n. [An obs. or dial. var. of cool.] The jackdaw. [Scotch.]

In spite o' a' the thievish kae
That haunt St. Jamies'!

Burns, Prayer to the Scotch Representatives.

ka², kaat, v. t. See ca².

Kae me, kae thee, runs through court and country, Marston, Jonson, and Chapman, Eastward Ho, II. 1.

ka³, v. i. A variant of ko, for quoth (often for quoth ho).

Enamoured, quod you? have ye spied out that?
Ah, sir, mary now, I see you know what is what.

Enamoured, ka³ mary, sir, say that againe.

Udall, Rolister Dolister, I. 2.

Kaaba, Qaaba (kà'bà or kâ'g-bà), n. [< Ar. ka'bah, a square building, < ka'b, a cube.] A cube-shaped, flat-roofed building in the center of the Great Mosque at Mecca: the most sacred shrine of the Mohammedans. In its southeast corner it contains the sacred black stone called hajar al aswad, said to have been originally a ruby which came down from heaven, but now blackened by the tears shed for sin by pilgrims. This stone is an irregular oval about seven inches in diameter and is composed of about a dozen smaller stones of different shapes and sizes. It is the point toward which all Mohammedans face during their devotions. The Kaaba is opened to worshippers twice or three times a year, but only the faithful are permitted to approach it.

The Kaaba stands in an oblong square (enclosed by a great wall) 250 paces long, and 200 broad, none of the sides of which run quite in a straight line, though at first sight the whole appears to be of a regular shape.

Burckhardt, quoted in Burton's El-Medina, p. 303.

kaama, n. See caama, 2.

kaarewan (kà-ré'wân), n. [Native name.] A tree of Queensland, Acacia glaucescens, 50 feet or more in height, with a wood of handsome appearance, hard, close, and tough.

kab, n. See cab¹.

kabab, n. and v. See cabob.

kabala, n. See cabala.

kabalassou, cabalassou (kab-a-las'ô), n. The priodontine or giant armadillo, Priodontes gl.

kabassou, cabassou (ka-bas'ô), n. [S. Amer. name.] A xenurine armadillo, as Xenurus wainatus or X. neptidus.

kabbala, kabbalah (kab'g-là), n. See cabala.

kabob, n. and v. See cabob.

kabook, n. Another spelling of cabook.

Kabye (ka-bil'), n. [< F. Kabyle; < Ar. Qabîl, prop. pl. of qabîla, a tribe, horde, species.] 1. One of a Berber race dwelling in Algeria, particularly in the mountains of the coast. Allied tribes are found in the neighboring countries of North Africa. The Kabyles are believed to be of Hamitic origin, and are Sunnite Mohammedans.

2. A dialect of Berber, spoken by many of the Kabyles.

Kachuga (ka-kû'gâ), n. [NL.] The typical genus of Kachugina. J. E. Gray.

Kachugine (kak-q-jî'nê), n. pl. [< Kachuga + -ine.] A subfamily of tortoises of the family Bataguriidae, typified by the genus Kachuga. It was named by J. E. Gray for species having five claws on the fore and four on the hind feet, the snout slightly produced, the alveolar surface of the upper jaw with one straight angular ridge and a central longitudinal ridge. It includes a number of Asiatic species, referred to four genera.

kachugine (kak'û-jîn), a. [< Kachuga + -ine¹.] Having characteristics of the Kachugine.

Kadarite (kad'a-rî't), n. [< Ar. (Turk.) qadar, predestination, divine fiat (< qadara, be able), + -ite².] One of a Mohammedan school or sect which denies the doctrine of predestination and maintains that of free will.

kaddish (kad'ish), n. [Hob.] In Jewish ritual, a form of thanksgiving and prayer, containing special reference to the approach of the kingdom of God, used at funerals, annual commemorations, etc.

Is any harm come to him because the eleven years went by with no wretched Kaddish said for him? I can not tell. If you think Kaddish will help me, say it, say it.

George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, III.

kades (kâds), n. [< Of. ka¹.] Sheep's dung.

Hallwell; Davies. [Prov. Eng.]

I rather think the kades and other filth that fall from sheep do so glut the fish that they will not take any artificial bait.

W. Lawson (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 196).

kadi, cadîl (kâ'dî or kâ'dî), n. [Formerly also caddè, caddes; Turk. kadi, kast, a judge, < Ar. qadî (qadhî), a judge, magistrate, < qaday, judge: cf. alcalde.] A judge in Moslem countries.

kadi-kane (kâ-dê-kâ'nâ), n. The Indian name of a large grass, Panicum miliaceum, extensively cultivated in tropical Asia for its seed. Also called warree.

kadileker, cadileker (kad-i-les'kér), n. [< Turk. kadi (kadiyyu) + -asker, kast'asker, judge of the army: kadi, kast, judge; al, the; asker, army.] The chief judge in the Turkish empire: so called because originally he had jurisdiction over the soldiery, who now, however, can be tried only by their own officers.

kadle-dock (kâ'dî-dok), n. 1. The ragwort, Senecio Jacobaea.—2. The wild chervil, Anthriscus sylvestris. [Prov. Eng. in both uses.]

Kadisee (kad'mê), n. [Pers.] A member of one of two sects of the Parsees of India, the other being the Shenshais. They do not differ in faith, but only in regard to the correct chronology of the era of Yezdegerd, the last king of the Sassanian dynasty, who was dethroned by the Calif Omar about A. D. 640, and consequently as to the correct dates for the celebration of their festival.

kados (kâ'dos), n. [Gr. nâdor; see cadus.] Same as cadus.

Kadsura (kad-sû'ra), n. [NL. (Kämpfer, 1810), < Jap. kadsura.] A genus of climbing shrubs of the order Magnoliaceae, tribe Schisandraceae: distinguished from Schisandra, the only other genus of the tribe, by the berry-like and globose, instead of elongated, fruit. There are about 7 species, natives of tropical Asia.

kæ, n. See ka¹.

Kämpferia (kemp-fê'ri-jâ), n. [NL. (Linnæus), named after one Kämpfer (1681-1716), a German who traveled many years in Asia.] A genus of plants of the order Scitamineae, natives of tropical Africa, eastern India, and the Malay archipelago, having flowers in spikes with imbricated scales at the apex of short, few-leaved, or leafless and scaly stems; a slender calyx-tube, bearing a curious, irregular, three-lobed corolla; and a single crested stamen whose filament is wrapped about the style. There are about 15 species, several of which are cultivated for ornament, and one, K. Galanga, furnishes one of the drugs known as galanga.

Kaffer, Kafir, n. and a. See Kafir.

kaffiyeh (kaf'î-ye), n. [Syrian.] In Syria, a small shawl or scarf worn about the head, and bound with a colored cord.

As we ride on we see to the left a large herd of camels, and pass their driver, a fierce-looking dark-skinned man, with bare arms, legs, and feet, astride a skinny little horse, a coloured kaffiyeh on his head, a striped abaya or burnous over his shoulder.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLIII. 634.

kaffe, n. Same as caffè.

Kaffarian (kaf-râ'ri-an), a. and n. [< Kaf-fraria, Caffraria (see def.) (< Kafir, Kafir, 2), + -an.] 1. a. Pertaining to Kaffaria or Caffraria, the country of the Kafirs in South Africa. — n. An inhabitant of Kaffaria.

kafila (kaf'î-lâ), n. [= Turk. Pers. qâfila, kâfila = Hind. qâfilah, < Ar. qafilâ, a caravan: see coffle.] A train of loaded camels; a caravan. Also caffila, caffilah, kafilah.

Kafir, Kafir (kaf'êr), n. and a. [= Pers. kâfir = Turk. kâfir (kyâfir), < Ar. kâfir, an unbeliever, an infidel.] 1. n. 1. An unbeliever; an infidel: applied malevolently by Mohammedans to Christians and pagan negroes.—2. One of a South African race, inhabiting parts of Cape Colony, Natal, and neighboring lands: so called originally by the Mohammedan inhabitants of eastern Africa, on account of their refusal to accept the faith of Mohammed. They are divided into several branches or tribes, of which the Zulus are the best-known, are of a bronze color, with woolly, tufted hair, tall, well-made, athletic, and acute in intellect.

3. The language of the Kafirs, a branch of the South African or Bantu family. It is also called Zulu-Kafir.—4. One of a race inhabiting Kafiristan, a mountainous region on the northeast of Afghanistan, who have always maintained their independence and resisted conversion to Mohammedanism. Little is known of them, but they appear to be of Aryan stock, and are divided into a number of tribes speaking different languages or dialects.—Kafir's similitar-tree. See Herpophyllum.

II. a. Of or belonging to the Kafirs: as, the Kafir tongue; Kafir customs.

Also written Caffer, Caffre, Kaffer, Kafre.

Kafir-boom (kaf'êr-bûm), n. A tree of the genus Erythrina.

Kafir-bread (kaf'êr-bred), n. The spongy, farinaceous pith of the stem of a South African cycadaceous plant, Enecephalartos Caffer. See Enecephalartos and breadfruit.

Kafir-corn (kaf'êr-kôrn), n. Indian millet, Sorghum vulgare, which is cultivated in parts of Africa as a cereal. See durra, sorghum.

Kafir's-tree (kaf'êr's-trê), n. Same as Kafir-boom. See Erythrina.

Kafir-tea (kaf'êr-tê), n. The plant Holcorysum nudifolium.

kaka (kaf'is), n. An Arabian measure of capacity, nearly equal, according to Queipo, to 33 liters. According to Ellyah and the Sheikh Hasan el Jahert, generally 90 rot (which see), or 8 maktouk, but sometimes less. Also spelled cafa.

kakab (kafab), n. [Pers. kafab, ka'ab.] In Persia, a slipper, one of several kinds having the heel folded down.

kakfa (kaf'fā), n. [Ar.] The leaves of Catha edulis. Also cafa, khai.

kakfan, n. See cafan.

Kageneckia (kaj-e-nek'i-ā), n. [NL. (Ruiz and Pavon, 1794), named for Count F. von Kageneck, Austrian minister at Madrid.] A genus of South American rosaceous trees, of the tribe Quillajeae, but differing from Quillaja, the type of the tribe, in having the calyx-lobes imbricated instead of valvate in the bud and the leaves serrate. They are evergreen trees with coarse leathery leaves and unisexual flowers, the male racemose or corymbose, the female solitary and terminal. The fruit is a large follicle. Three species only are known, growing in Chili and the mountains of Peru. K. oblonga yields wood valuable for building purposes, and very bitter leaves and seeds, which are used by the inhabitants as a remedy for fevers. It is cultivated as a greenhouse plant for its white flowers. K. eravogoides is a tall ornamental tree; it was introduced into England in 1831.

kago (kag'ō; Jap. pron. kīng'go), n. [Jap.] A small basketwork palanquin slung from a pole carried on the shoulders of two men. The kago was formerly the commonest mode of conveyance in Japan, but is now confined almost entirely to mountainous regions, having been superseded on the plains by the jinrikisha. Also gango.

Kago.

kagu (kū'gū), n. [Native name.] A remarkable gallatorial bird, Rhinoceros jubatus, the sole member of the family Rhinocerotidae, peculiar to New Caledonia. It is an isolated form, without very near relatives, in some respects intermediate between herons and rails. It is gray, paler below, with dark cross-marks on the wings and tail; the bill and feet are red; and the nape has a pendent crest. It is nocturnal, inhabits mountain ravines, lives chiefly on animal food, runs rapidly like a rail, has a habit of standing a long time motionless like a heron, and emits a guttural cry. Also kagou.

Kagu (Rhinoceros jubatus).

kahikatea (kā-i-kat'ā-ā), n. [Maori name.] The coniferous tree Podocarpus dacrydioides of New Zealand, called by the colonists white pine. It grows to the height of 100 or 150 feet, forming forests on swampy ground. Its wood is white and tough, and of excellent service when protected from wet. Its whitest fruit is eaten by the natives. Also kai-katea, kahikatea, and kakatero.

kahoon (ka-hūn'), n. [E. Ind.] A Calcutta unit of weight, equal to 40 factory maunds, or 1½ tons; also, a money, 4 annas, or ½ rupee.

kai-apple, n. See kai-apple.

kalei, n. A Middle English form of *key*¹.

kaiif (kīf), n. [Ar. qaf, quiescence.] Undisturbed quiescence, regarded as a state of high happiness.

And this is the Arab's Kaf. The savoring of animal existence; the passive enjoyment of mere sense; the pleasant languor, the dreamy tranquillity, the airy castle-building. R. P. Burton, El-Medinal, p. 21.

kai-ku (kā'kū), n. [Maori name.] An evergreen climbing plant of New Zealand, Parsonia albiflora (P. heterophylla). It is cultivated in greenhouses.

kai¹, n. See kale.

kai² (kāl), n. [Formerly also kayle, keil, keel; < ME. kayle = MD. keghel, D. kegel, a pin, nine-pin, = MLG. LG. kegel = OHG. chegil, a pin, plug, MHG. G. kegel, a wedge, cone, ninepin, = Sw. kägl, kägl = Dan. kegle, a cone, ninepin; root unknown.] 1. A ninepin; a skittle-pin.

All the Furies are at a game called nine-pins, or kai, made of old usurers' bones, and their souls looking on with delight, and betting on the game! B. Jonson, Chloridia.

2. pl. A game in which nine holes ranged in threes are made in the ground, and an iron ball is rolled in among them.

In skales, or kayles, the shepherds-joynts was probably the bone used instead of a bowl.

And now at kale they try a harmless chance; And now their curre they teach to fetch and dance. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, l.

kai³ (kā'li), n. [E. Ind.] The Himalayan Pinus azoica, or Bhtan pine.

kaim, n. See kame.

kaimakam (ki-mā-kam'), n. [Also caimacam, caimacan, caymacan, kaimkan, etc.; < Turk. and Hind. kāimkān, < Ar. qāim-makām, a lieutenant, < qāim, firm, fixed, + makām, a deputy.] 1. An officer in the Turkish service, especially a lieutenant-colonel.—2. An administrative officer in Turkey; specifically, the administrator of a subdivision of a vilayet.

Fozzan is governed by a kaimakam or lieutenant-governor. Encyc. Brit., IX. 129.

kain, n. See *cane*². [Scotch.]

kain-fowl (kān'foul), n. A fowl paid or to be paid by a tenant as kain (cane). See *cane*².

kain-hen (kān'hen), n. A hen paid or to be paid by a tenant as kain (cane). See *cane*².

Yet it shall never be said the fairest maid in the Fair City was couped up in a convent like a kain-hen in a cage. Scott, Fair Maid of Perth, xiv.

kainite (kī'nit), n. [Prop. carnite* or canite*, < Gr. καίνις, new, recent, + *-ite*².] A hydrous magnesium sulphate with potassium chlorid, occurring in beds of considerable extent at the salt-mines of Stassfurt, Germany. The impure kainite, which contains twelve per cent. or more of potash, is used largely as a fertilizer.

Kainozoic (kī-nō-zō'ik), a. Same as Canozoic.

kairot, v. See cair.

kairine (kī'rin), n. [< (f) Gr. καίρις, the right time, + *-ine*².] A whitish crystalline powder (C₁₀H₁₃ON.HCl + H₂O), bitter-salt in taste, soluble in water and alcohol, and used in medicine as an antipyretic.

kairni, n. An obsolete spelling of cairn.

kaiser (kī'zēr), n. [Early mod. E. also keiser; < ME. caiser, cayser, kaiser (North.), < AS. cæser, emperor, < L. Cæsar, Cæsar, emperor; see Cæsar.] 1. An emperor. Compare Cæsar, 1.

Wel kud kīnges & kayser krauen me i-now, I nel leic mi lous so low now at this time. William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 483.

King nor kaiser Shall equal me in that world. Fletcher, Mad Lover, II. 1.

2. [Recent, G.] The emperor of Germany (or of Austria).

kaisership (kī'zēr-shīp), n. [< *kaiser*² + -ship.] The office of kaiser or emperor.

He was ready for the Kaisership before the Kaisership was ready for him. Contemporary Rev., LIV. 622.

kajak, n. See kayak.

kajeput, n. See kajeput.

kaju-apple (ka-jū'ap'ī), n. [Anglo-Ind.] The cashew-nut. Cyclopaedia of India.

kaka (kā'kā), n. [Maori; prob. imitative; cf. cockatoo.] A parrot of the genus Nectar, peculiar to New Zealand. The common kaka is N. hypoleucos, and the mountain kaka N. notabilis. See Nectar.

kakapo (kak'ā-pō), n. [Maori; cf. kaka.] The owl-parrot or ground-parrot of New Zealand, Strigops habroptilus, a large and noteworthy parrot, by some made the type of a family Strigopidae, distinct from the Psittacidae. It is nocturnal, unable to fly, and in danger of rapid extermination. It is of a mottled-greenish color, and about as large as a raven.

kakarali (kak'ā-rāl'i), n. [S. Amer.] A tree of British Guiana, Leocythia Ollaria. Its wood is very durable in salt water, resisting the depredations of the sea-worm and barnacle. Its bark is composed of a great number of thin layers, which the natives separate by beating and use for wrapping. Also kakaralk.

kakali, v. i. A Middle English form of cackie.

kakemono (kak-e-mō'nō), n. [Jap., < kake, root of kakuru, hang, + mono, thing.] A Japanese wall-picture or decoration, painted in transparent colors on a band of silk, gauze, or paper, and mounted on a roller. It is generally long and narrow, and is the common form of wall-picture in Japan: to be distinguished from makimono, a roll-picture or scroll, sometimes of great length, intended to be unrolled and examined in the hands.

kaki (kā'kē), n. [Jap.] The persimmon of Japan, or Chinese date, Diospyros Kaki, or its fruit.

The kaki, or Japan persimmon, is a comparatively recent introduction. Sci. Amer., N. S., LX. 222.

kakistocracy (kak-is-tōk'rā-si), n.; pl. kakistocracies (-sīz). [< Gr. kakistos, superl. of kakos, bad, + -spatia, rule; see -cracy.] Government by the worst men in the state: opposed to aristocracy, government by the best men. [Rare.]

Jacobin democracy differs from ancient and medieval merely in this, that it is not an aristocracy, or government of the best, but a kakistocracy, or government of the worst. Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 44.

kaklet, v. i. A Middle English form of cackie.

kakodyl, kakodyle, n. See caodyl.

kakoxene, kakoxine, n. See caoxene.

kai, n. A variant spelling of cal.

kai, n. An abbreviation of kalends. See calends. kaladana (kal-ā-dā'nā), n. [Origin unknown.] A species of morning-glory, Ipomoea (Ipomoea) Nil, found in the warmer parts of the Old World.

kaladana-seed (kal-ā-dā'nā-sēd), n. The seed of Ipomoea Nil, used as a cathartic.

kalandan (kal'am-dan), n. [Also kalemdan; Pers. (> Ar. Hind.) qalam-dān, a pen-case, < qalam, a pen, pencil, reed (see calamus), + dān, having, holding.] A Persian writing-case, consisting of a long and narrow box of wood or paper-maché painted in bright colors and varnished, having at one end the ink-pot, in a slightly projecting compartment, and including a receptacle for pens, a knife, etc.

kalankari (kal-am-kār'i), n. [< Pers. qalam-kārī, < qalam-kār, a painter, < qalam, a pen, pencil, + -kār, denoting an agent.] Color-decoration of certain special kinds in Indian countries; specifically, a chintz of which the pattern is produced by many separate dyeings, the ground being covered in places by repellent preparations, and also by printing from small blocks.

kalan (kā'lan), n. The sea-otter. See cut under Enhydra.

An adult kalan is an animal not much larger than a mature and well-conditioned beaver. . . . It will measure from the tip of its tail, which is short, to the extremity of the muzzle, 3½ to 4½ feet, the tail not being over 6 to 8 inches long, and it has a proportionate girth of a little over 2 feet. Fisheries of U. S., V. II. 487.

Kalanchoe (kal-an-kō'ē), n. [NL. (Adanson, 1763), from the Chinese name of the plant.] 1. A genus of tropical herbs or shrubs belonging to the natural order Crassulaceae, or orpine family, differing from most other plants of the order by having the calyx 4-parted. The leaves are opposite and fleshy, and the flowers are large, white, yellow, or purplish, and disposed in many-flowered panicle cymes. There are about 20 species, one of which is a native of Brazil, all the rest occurring in tropical Africa and Australia. K. ornata of Sierra Leone is a succulent shrub cultivated in greenhouses, and is called scallop kalanchoe. The name is sometimes written Calanchoe.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

Kalends (kal'andz), n. pl. [Probably from L. Kalendæ, the first day of the month.] A religious brotherhood which originated in northern Germany in the thirteenth century, and extended to France and other countries. Its objects were the establishment of solemn burial rites, common religious exercises, and mutual support. The meetings occurred on the first of each month, and terminated with a feast; these feasts gradually degenerated into excesses, and the fraternity was abolished. Also called Calender brothers.

kalathos (kal'ā-thos), n. [< Gr. κάλαθος.] Same as calathus, 1.

kaldt, a. A Middle English form of cold.

kale, kali¹ (kā), n. [Formerly also keal; a dial. var. of *cole*².] 1. In Scotland, loosely, cabbage in general, and by extension any kind of greens; specifically, both there and elsewhere, any variety of cabbage with curled or wrinkled leaves not forming compact heads like the common cabbage, nor yielding a fleshy edible inflorescence like the cauliflower and broccoli, and usually having a long stalk; borecole.

The first ceremony of Halloween is pulling each a stock or plant of kali. Burns, Halloween, note.

2. A broth made in Scotland in which kale or cabbage is a principal ingredient; hence, any soup, no matter of what composed, and, by a further extension, dinner: as, will you come and tak' your kale wi' me? [Scotch.]

But there is neither bread nor kale,
To fend my men and me.

Battle of Otterbourne (Child's Ballads, VII. 31).

When he brings in the messe with Kale, Beef, and Brewesse, what stomack in England could forbear to call for flanks and briskeets?

Milton, Apology for Smectymnua.

But hear ye, neighbour, . . . I will be back here to my kail against ane o'clock.

Scott, Black Dwarf, I.

Corn-kale, Brassica Sinapistrum, the charlock or wild mustard: so called from its growing in fields of grain.
Also field-kale.—Indian kale, Caladium grandiflorum, a plant of the Araceae. The rootstocks contain a large quantity of starch, which is used by the natives, after boiling to extract the noxious properties.—Kale through the rock, bitter language or treatment: in allusion to the unpalatableness of smoky broth. [Scotch slang.]—Seakale, a cruciferous plant, Crucifera maritima, found wild on the western shores of Europe and on the Black Sea. It has broad, wavy-toothed leaves, which are gray-colored, and like the stem, glaucous. For two centuries it has been cultivated for its young shoots, which make a pleasant and wholesome dish.—Wild kale. (a) Brassica Sinapistrum, or charlock. (b) Brassica oleracea, the cabbage-plant, in its wild state.

kale-bell (kāl'bel), n. The dinner-bell.
[Scotch.]

But hark, the kale-bell rings, and I

Maun gae link aff the pot.

Watty and Madge (Herd's Collection, II. 109).

kale-blade (kāl'blād), n. A cabbage-leaf.
[Scotch.]

Your hose shall be the brade kale-blade,

That is balth brade and lang.

The Gardener (Child's Ballads, IV. 98).

kale-brose (kāl'brōz), n. A pottage made of meal and the skimmings of broth.

Ane wadna hae thought that gude meal was so scant amang them, when the quean threw sae muckle gude kalebrose scalding hot about my lug.

Scott, Old Mortality, xxviii.

kaleege (ka-lēj'), n. [E. Ind. kali.] A pheasant of the genus Euplocamus and that section of the genus called Gallophas, closely related to the silver-pheasants and firebacks. There are several species, such as E. albertianus, E. melanotus, and E. hornfieldi, inhabiting the upper parts of India from the foothills to an elevation of 8,000 feet. They are noted for their pugnacity, and for making a drumming noise, but in general habits resemble other pheasants of the same genus. Also spelled kali and kalidje.

kaleidograph (ka-li-dō-grāf), n. [Irreg. < Gr.
kalos, beautiful, + eidōs, form, + γράφω, write.] An apparatus for throwing on a screen or on a glass disk the colored patterns produced by a kaleidoscope.

kaleidophone, kaleidophon (ka-li-dō-fōn,
-fōn), n. [Irreg. < Gr. kalos, beautiful, + eidōs, form, + φωνή, sound.] An instrument invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone for exhibiting the vibrations of an elastic plate or rod, in order to illustrate the phenomena of sound-waves.
A polished knob, reflecting a point of light, is attached to the vibrating plate or rod, and in its vibrations produces (by virtue of the persistence of visual impressions) a variety of visible curves. Also written kaleidophona.

kaleidoscope (ka-li-dō-skōp), n. [F. kaleidoscope (< E.); irreg. < Gr. kalos, beautiful, + eidōs, form, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An optical instrument creating and exhibiting, by reflection, a variety of beautiful colors and symmetrical forms. In its simplest form the instrument consists of a tube containing two reflecting surfaces inclined toward each other at any angle which is an aliquot part of 360°. A clear eye-glass is placed immediately against one end of the mirrors and a similar glass at their other end; the tube is continued a little beyond this second glass, and its termination is closed by a disk of ground glass. In the cell thus formed are placed beads, pieces of colored glass, or other small, bright-colored, diaphanous objects, and the changing of their positions by rotating the tube produces, by the repeated reflection in the mirrors, different symmetrical figures. The polyangular kaleidoscope multiples the effect by having three or four mirrors; a larger number destroys the symmetry of combination. Besides the use of the kaleidoscope as a toy, it serves the practical purpose of furnishing an endless variety of patterns for decorative work. Sir David Brewster invented the instrument about 1815, although the idea of it had been vaguely suggested before. He also made it applicable to distant objects by replacing the object-box at the outer end with a double-convex lens, controlled by an adjusting-screw.— Jewel kaleidoscope, an enlarged and superior form of kaleidoscope mounted on a stand, with a wheel to regulate its adjustment: so called because furnished with very richly colored pieces of glass.

kaleidoscopic (ka-li-dō-skōp'ik), a. [< kaleidoscope + -ic.] Relating to the kaleidoscope; varying or variegated like the forms and colors in a kaleidoscope: as, kaleidoscopic views; kaleidoscopia combinations of color.

Her generation certainly would have lost one of its representative and original creations: representative in a versatile, kaleidoscopic presentment of modern life and issues.

Sudman, Vict. Poets, p. 141.

kaleidoscopic (ka-li-dō-skōp'ik), a. [< kaleidoscopia + -ic.] Same as kaleidoscopic.

kalemdan, n. See kalamdan.

kalendar¹, kalendarial. Variant spellings of calendar, calendarial.

Kalendar², n. See *Calenier*³.

kalendar⁴, n. A Middle English form of calendar.

Kalendar⁵, n. See *Calender*³.

kalenda, n. pl. See calends.

kale-pot (kāl'pōt), n. A pot in which soup is made. [Scotch.]

kale-runt (kāl'runt), n. The stem of the cabbage. [Scotch.]

Fient haet o't wad hae pierced the heart

O' a kale-runt.

Burns.

kalestock (kāl'stok), n. [Formerly also kale-stock, calstock (= Sw. kålstock = Dan. kaalstock); < *kale*¹ + stock.] A cabbage-plant; colewort.
[Scotch.]

kale-turnip (kāl'tēr'nip), n. Same as kohlrabi, of which it is merely an English translation.

Kalevala (kal-e-vā'lā), n. [Also written (as G.) Kalevala; Finn. Kalevala, lit. 'place or home of a hero,' < Kaleva, a hero, + -la, denoting place.]
A Finnish epic compilation, in a meter reproduced in Longfellow's "Hiawatha." Orally preserved from antiquity, it was first partially published in 1835, and completed in 1849 in 22,785 verses, gathered from the recitations of many persons, and collected and arranged by Elias Lönnrot. kalewife (kāl'wif), n.; pl. kalewives (-wivz). A woman who sells vegetables; a marketwoman;

a huckstress. [Scotch.]

kale-worm (kāl'wērm), n. The larva of the cabbage-butterfly, Pieris brassicae, and of some closely related species.

kaleyard (kāl'yārd), n. A cabbage-garden.
[Scotch.]

kali¹ (kal'i or kāl'i), n. [= G. kali (NL. kali);
< Ar. qāl: see alkali.] 1. The plant Salsola Kali, the prickly saltwort or glasswort. See alkali and Salsola.—2. Potash: so called by German chemists.

Also kalin.

Lemon and kali. Same as lemon-kali.

kali² (kāl'is), n. [Pers. (> Turk.) kālī, a large carpet.] 1. A carpet with a long pile, as distinguished from the carpets without nap. Hence—
2. The largest in the set of carpets commonly used in a Persian room, filling the center of the room.

kali³. For words beginning thus, see cali.

kalian (kal'i-an), n. A name for the Eastern tobacco-pipe in which the smoke is drawn through water. See hooka and narghile.

kalidium (ka-li'di-um), n.; pl. kalitida (-ā). [NL., < Gr. kalidion, dim. of kala, cot, granary.] In the florideous alga, an oval capsule or cysto-carp containing undivided spores. Le Maout and Decaisne, Botany (trans.), p. 968.

kali, kalifate. See calif, califate.

kaliform (kal'i-fōrm), a. [< kali + L. forma, form.] Resembling Salsola kali, the prickly saltwort.

kaligenous (ka-lij'e-nus), a. [< *kali*¹ + Gr.
-γενής, producing: see -genous.] Producing alkalis: specifically applied to certain metals which form alkalis with oxygen. The true kaligenous metals are potassium and sodium.

kali, n. See calvege.

kalin (kal'in or kāl'in), n. [< *kali*¹ + -in.] Same as *kali*¹.

kalinite (kal'i-nit), n. [< kalin + -ite.] In mineral, native potash alum.

kaliphilite (kal-i-ōf'i-lit), n. [< *kali*¹ + Gr.
φίλος, loving, + -ite.] A silicate of aluminum and potassium, allied to nephelite, found in volcanic bombs ejected from Monte Somma, Vesu-vius.

kali (kāl'i-um), n. [NL., < kali (Ar. qāl), potash: see *kali*¹.] Potassium: from this name its symbol K is derived.

kaliyuga (kal-i-yū'gā), n. [Skt., < kali, the ace on the die, + yuga, a generation, age: see yuga.]
The last of the four Hindu periods contained in a mahāyuga, or great age of the world, and analogous to the iron age of classic mythology. It consists of 432,000 solar sidereal years, and began, as determined by Hindu astronomical science, 3,102 years before the Christian era.

kalkulet, v. t. Same as calcule.

kali, kaliet, n. Obsolete spellings of caul.

kalli. For words beginning thus, see calli.

Kalliope, n. See Calliope, 1.

kallo. For words beginning thus, see callo.

Kallymenia (kal-i-mē-ni-ā), n. [NL. (J. G.
Agardh, 1842), < Gr. καλλός, beauty, + μύμη, a membrane.] A genus of red-spored alga, the type of the family Kallymenia, characterized by a flat, fleshy, nerveless frond, sometimes perforated, irregularly cut and lobed. The cystocarps or halidia which are formed in the middle of the frond are hemispherical, at first immersed, afterward swelling and protruding, and finally becoming free by the rupture of the adjacent tissue. The sphaerospores are formed by the superficial cells. The genus embraces about 20 species, found in the seas of both hemispheres.

Kallymenia (kal'i-mē-ni-ā), n. pl. [NL.
(Harvey), < Kallymenia + -ia.] A tribe of redspored alga of which Kallymenia is the type, characterized by the cells of the frond being round, the nuclei enveloped, and the sphaerospores (tetraspores) scattered in the cortical cells. The tribe belongs to the order Gelatinosae of the class Florideae, and embraces the two genera Kallymenia and Calophylla.

kallynteria (kal-in-tē-ri-ā), n. pl. [< Gr. καλλυντήρια, neut. pl. of καλλύντης, for beautifying, < καλλύνω, beautify, < καλός, beautiful.] An ancient Attic festival occurring on the 19th of the month Thargelion (May-June), when the tutelary image of Athena Polias was adorned with fresh draperies and ornaments.

Kalmia (kal'mi-ā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus), dedicated to Peter Kalm, a pupil of Linnaeus who traveled in America.] A genus of American ericaceous shrubs belonging to the tribe Rhodorea, distinguished by the open bell-shaped

American Laurel (Kalmia latifolia).

a, flower; b, same, cut longitudinally, showing the position of the stamens before fertilization, and the pistil; c, same, after fertilization; d, fruit.

corolla and ten hypogynous stamens with elongated filaments. The anthers have the peculiarity (though free in the early bud) of becoming embedded in specialized pits or pockets of the corolla as it expands, the filaments bending over and acquiring tension, and finally straightening elastically, withdrawing the anthers suddenly, and projecting the pollen to some distance over adjacent flowers. The plants are for the most part handsome evergreen shrubs with shining leaves and showy flowers in corymbs. There are 6 species, one of which grows in the West Indies, and one extends to the Rocky Mountains and California, the remainder being confined to eastern North America. K. latifolia, the American laurel, also called calico-bush from the color of its flowers, is one of the most wide-spread and beautiful of American shrubs, and was proposed by Darlington as the national emblem. It is a large shrub, often from 10 to 20 feet in height, with ample shining leaves and a profusion of very showy flowers varying from nearly white to deep pink. The stems are crooked and straggling, the bark brown and scaly, and the wood very hard and useful for various purposes. K. angustifolia, the sheep-laurel, lambkill, or wicky, is a smaller shrub with bright crimson or rose-colored flowers, common in New England, and ranging from Hudson's Bay to Georgia. It is believed to poison sheep when the deep snows of winter drive them to the extremity of eating it. K. glauca, the pale laurel, prefers cold peat-bogs, and is the only species that ranges across the continent. It is a low straggling bush, with the leaves whitened underneath, and lilacpurple flowers.

Kalmuck, Oalmuck (kal'muk), n. [Also Calmuc; = F. Kalmouk = G. Kalmucke, < Russ.
Kalmuk.] 1. A member of a branch of the Mongolian family of peoples, divided into four tribes, and dwelling in the Chinese empire, Western Siberia, and southeastern Russia. They are nomads, adherents of a form of Buddhism, and number over 200,000.—2. The language spoken by the Kalmucks.—3. [i. e.] A kind of rough cloth having a hairy nap.

kalo. For words beginning thus, see calo.

kalong (ka-long'), n. [E. Ind.] A general name of the large fruit-bats, fox-bats, flying-foxes, or rousettes belonging to the genus Pteropus.

kalonge (ka-long'gō), n. Same as kalong.

kalpa (kal'pā), n. [Skt., lit. formation, arrangement.] In Hindu chron., a day of Brahma, a period of 4,320,000,000 years, equivalent to a thousand great ages (mahāyuga); an eon. At the end of the sun, the cosmos is resolved again into chaos, and has to be created anew at the end of another like period, constituting a night of the Supreme Being. Also applied to kalpa.

kalpak, n. See calpac.
kalpis (kal'pis), n.; pl. kalpōis (-pīs). [Gr. κάλπις (see def.).] In Gr. archaeol., a water-vase, usually of large size, resembling the hydria, and like it having three handles, but differing from the Kalpis.—Examples of Greek red-figured pottery.

hydria in that the posterior handle does not extend above the rim.

kalsomine (kal'sū-min or -mīn), n. and v. A common but incorrect form of calceimine.

kalumb, kalumba, kalumba-root, n. See columbo.

kalusite (kal'us-it), n. [Gr. Κάλυς, a town in Galicia, + -ite.] A mineral: same as synonite.
kalyptra (ka-lip'trā), n.; pl. kalyptrae (-trē). [Gr. καλύπτρα, a veil: see calyptra.] In anc. Gr. costume, a veil of thin stuff very commonly worn to cover the hair. It is to be distinguished from the himation or mantle, which was often made to fill its place by being drawn up over the head. Compare calyptra, i.

kam¹. An obsolete form of came¹, preterit of come.

kam², a. See cam².

kamachi (kam'g-chi), n. See kamichi.

kamecite (kam'g-sit), n. [Gr. κάμας (kámas), a vine-pole, any pole or shaft, + -ite.] One of the names given by Reichenbach (in German Balkenstein) to various peculiar forms observed in meteoric iron. See Widmannstätten figures, under figure.

Kamakura lacquer. See lacquer.

kamala, n. See kamila.

kamarband, n. See cummerbund.

kamas, n. See camass.

kamassi (ka-mas'i), n. [S. African.] A South African tree, Gonioma kamassi, of the dogbane family, with fragrant flowers, and a hard, tough, and close-grained yellow wood, which is used in cabinet-work, for the handles of tools, etc.

kambala (kam-bā'lā), n. [E. Ind.] An East Indian tree, Sonneratia apetala, of the natural order Lythraceae. Its hard red wood is used for making packing-boxes and for house-building.

kambodja (kam-bō'jā), n. [Malay.] The Plumeria acutifolia, an apocynaceous tree, with numerous large white flowers, very common in the villages of Burma.

kambou (kam'bō), n. [Kurile Islands.] A seaweed, Laminaria saccharina. It is a favorite dish among all classes in Japan, and is called by the Russians sea-cabbage. In England it is known as sea-belt and swet-tangle.

Kamchadale (kam'cha-dāl), n. [= F. Kamtschadale = G. Kamtschadale, < Russ. Kamchadale, an inhabitant of Kamchatka, < Kamchatka, Kamchatka.] A member of a native tribe of Kamchatka, a peninsula in Eastern Siberia. The tribe is sometimes classed among Mongolians. It numbers only from 2,000 to 3,000. Also Kamchadal, Kamchatkan.

Kamchatkan (kam-cha'tkan), a. and n. [Gr. Καμχατκα + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Kamchatka.

An Eskimo offshoot, though mixed with Tuki or Kamchatkan blood. Athenaeum, No. 3148, p. 270.

II. n. 1. An inhabitant of Kamchatka.—2. The language of Kamchatka.

kame, kaim (kām), n. 1. Dialectal (Scotch) forms of comb¹.

And lang, lang may the maidens sit,
Wi' their good kames in their hair,
A' waiting for their ain dear luv.
See Fairies' Songs (Child's Ballads, III. 156).

2. A peculiar elongated ridge, made up of detrital material. See skar, and horseback, 2. [Scotch, but frequently used by geologists writing in English.]

Go where one will in the Lowlands of Scotland, . . . the kames, gravel-mounds, knolls of boulder clay, etc., still retain in most cases their original form.
J. Crall, Climate and Time, p. 242.

3. A camp or fortress. [Scotch.]

His route . . . conducted him past the small ruined tower, or rather vestige of a tower, called by the country people the Kaim of Derndelagh. Scott, Guy Mannering, xlv.

kame (kām), r. t. An obsolete or dialectal (Scotch) form of comb¹.

Thy hands see thou wash.
Thy head likewise kame,
And in thine apparel
See thou be no seams.
Schools of Virtue. (Halliwell.)

O who will kame my yellow hair
With a new made silver kame?
Border Minstrelsy, II. 58.

kamechi, n. See kamichi.

kameela, kamela, n. See kamila.

kamees, n. See kamis.

kamera (kam'g-rā), n. [= L. camera, a room: see camera, chamber.] A room; apartment; chamber.

It [a political prison at the mines of Kara, in Siberia] contains four kameras, exclusive of the hospital or lazaret, and in each of them there are three windows, a large table, a brick oven, and sleeping-platform accommodations for about twenty-five men.
G. Kennan, The Century, XXXIII. 588.

kami (kā'mi), n. [Jap., upper, superior, a lord.] 1. A lord; a title applied by the Japanese to daimios and governors.—2. A term used by the Japanese to designate (a) all the gods or celestial beings who formed and peopled Japan; (b) the descendants of these gods, the mikados and the imperial family, as terrestrial kami; and (c) such heroes and worthies as have been deified by the mikados.

In Japan it is interesting to observe that a national Kami—Ten-ō-dai-sin—is worshipped as a sort of Jahveh by the nation in general.
Huxley, Nineteenth Century, XIX. 494.

3. [cap.] [= Chin. shin, god, spirit.] The name used by the Protestant missionaries and the native Protestant Christians of Japan for the Supreme Being; God: the term used by Roman Catholics is Tenshu, or Lord of Heaven, whence Roman Catholics are known as the Tenshū-kio, or 'Lord-of-Heaven sect.'—Way of the Kami, the way of the gods; Shinto, the so-called native religion of Japan. See Shinto.

kamichi (kam'i-chi), n. [F. kamichi; from a native name.] The horned screamer, Palamedea cornuta. Also written kamachi, kamechi.

kamila, kamela (ka-mē'lā), n. [Hind. kamila, kamela.] 1. An East Indian dyestuff consisting of a powdery substance which invests the pods of the euphorbiaceous tree Mallotus Philippinensis (Rottlera tinctoria). It yields a rich orange color, which is imparted almost exclusively to silk. It is also an effective vermifuge.

2. The tree which yields this dyestuff. Also kameela, kaimale, kamula, and kambil. Sometimes called spoonwood.

kamis, kamees (ka-mēs'), n. [Ar. qamis: see camis, chemise.] The loose shirt, having sleeves reaching to the wrist, worn by men of Moslem nations. It is made of linen or cotton, or sometimes of a fabric of cotton and silk, etc.

The body dress is simply a Kamis or cotton shirt; tight sleeved, opening in front, and adorned round the waist and collar and down the breast with embroidery like network, it extends from neck to foot.
R. F. Burton, El-Medinah, p. 150.

kampt, n. and v. An obsolete spelling of camp¹.

kampong (kam'pong), n. [Malay, also kampung. See compound.] An inclosure or compound.

It is impossible to doubt that, among the English in our Malay settlements, compound is used in this sense in speaking English, and Kampung in speaking Malay.
Pyle and Burnell, Anglo-Ind. Gloss., p. 126.

kamptulicon (kamp-tū'li-kon), n. [= F. kamptulicon; a trade-name, < Gr. καμπτός, flexible, + οἶλος, thick.] A kind of floor-cloth composed of india-rubber, gutta-percha, and ground cork. It is warm, soft, and elastic. The material was introduced about 1885. It is usually of a uniform dark-gray color, but is sometimes varied with colored patterns. Also called cork carpet.

kampylite, n. See campylite.

Kampylorhynchus, n. See Campylorhynchus.

kamin, n. See khamin.

kan¹, v. An obsolete spelling of can¹.

kan², n. and r. An obsolete form of can².

kan³, n. An obsolete form of khan¹.

kana (kā'nā), n. [Jap., short for kari-na, borrowed names.] Japanese writings as distinguished from Chinese, which is also used in Japan. It is syllabic and consists of 47 letters, each representing a syllable ending with a vowel-sound, to which is added a final a, making 48 in all. Kana is so called because it is made up of Chinese characters whose form (somewhat modified) and name (but not their meaning) have been borrowed, and is of two kinds: Mōryō or cursive hand, in common use, and katana or 'side-borrowed letters,' used chiefly for proper names and foreign words. See Mōryō and katana.

Kanaka (ka-nak'ā), n. [Hawaiian, a man.] 1. A Hawaiian or Sandwich Islander. Also Kanacha, Kanaker, Kanak. [Pacific coast and islands.]

In the rough winter of Forty-nine and Fifty the poor Kanakas of San Francisco, quite childlike in their helplessness, . . . died under filthy sheds of hide, and in the bush.
J. W. Palmer, The New and the Old, p. 82.

2. One of the brown laborers brought from the Pacific islands, on a three years' agreement, and largely employed in northern Queensland, especially on the sugar-plantations. [Australia.]

Whereupon she moved loftily away, and began to interrogate a Kanaka boy, who was digging a few paces off.
Mrs. Campbell Frazar, The Head Station.

kanari (ka-nā'ri), n. [Javanese.] The oil-producing Java almond, Canarium commune. See Canarium.

kanari-oil (ka-nā'ri-oil), n. An oil derived by expression from Canarium commune, which yields it in large proportion. It is preferred to coconut-oil, both for culinary purposes and for burning.

kanchil, kantjil (kan'chil), n. [E. Ind.] A small deer of the genus Tragulus, found in Java; a pygmy deer, deerlet, or chevrotain, as Tragulus pygmaeus or T. kanchil. See Tragulus.

kand (kand), n. A variant spelling of cand.

kande (Dan. pron. kē'nē), n. [Dan., = Norw. kanna = E. can, a vessel: see can.] A measure of capacity used in Denmark and Norway, equal to 4.1 United States pints or 8.4 imperial pints.

kandel (kan'del), n. [The native name on the Malabar coast.] A tree, Kandelia Rheedii, related to the mangrove. See Kandelia.

kandele, n. See kantelot.

Kandelia (kan-dē'lā), n. [NL. (Wright and Arnott, 1834), < kandel, q. v.] A genus of tropical East Indian trees belonging to the order Rhizophoraceae, or mangrove family, differing botanically from Rhizophora, the mangrove, in its 5- to 6-parted calyx, lacerated petals, and 1-celled, 6-ovuled ovary. The genus consists of a single species, which is a small tree with opposite, coriaceous, oblong, entire leaves, and large white flowers on axillary peduncles. The fruit is leathery, ovoid, 1-celled and 1-seeded, the seed, as in the mangrove, germinating within the fruit. The bark of K. Rheedii, the only species, is used in dyeing red, probably as a mordant. It is also used for tanning. Mixed with ginger or pepper and rose-water, it is said to be a remedy for diabetes. Like most plants of the family, this tree is found only on the coast.

kandy, n. See candy.

kane¹, n. See canē.

kane², n. See khan¹.

kaneh, n. See caneh.

kaneite (kā'nē), n. [Named after B. J. Kane of Dublin, who first observed it.] A doubtful manganese arsenide, supposed to have been found in Saxony.

kang¹, kong (kang, kong), n. [Chin.] A large glazed earthenware jar, containing from 60 to 100 gallons, used in China for storing water.

kang² (kang), n. [Chin.] A kind of oven-like erection built of bricks, used in the northern provinces of China and in Manchuria as a bed, fire being placed underneath it in winter. Kangs are about three feet high, and vary in size; some of those provided in inns and hostels afford sleeping-accommodation for many persons.

kangan, n. See cangan.

kangaroo (kang-gā-rō'), n. [Orig. kangaroo, > F. kangaroo: a native Australian name.] 1. A large marsupial mammal of Australia, Macropus giganteus; by extension, any herbivorous and saltatorial marsupial of the family Macropodidae (which see for technical characters). The great kangaroo, the first Australian species of this large family to become known to Europeans, was discovered by Cook in 1770. The male stands 6 or 7 feet high; the female is a third smaller. The hinder parts of the animal enormously preponderate over the fore parts; the thighs and tail are very muscular, the lower leg and the tail very long. The second and third digits are much reduced, the weight of the body falling chiefly on the fourth and fifth. The fore limbs are very small, used chiefly for prehension, and not in locomotion; during the flying leaps the animal makes, said to be from 10 to 30 and even 80 feet in extent, they are closely clasped to the breast. The head and neck are slender, the ears high. The general color is yellowish brown, darker above and paler below. The front teeth are fitted for nipping herbage; the stomach is long and sacculated; and there is a large cecum. In their whole structure and economy the kangaroos represent ruminants in the Australian, Austro-Malayan, and Papuan regions. They are gregarious, inoffensive, and timid, but when brought to bay prove formidable antagonists, using the claws of the hind feet with great effect. They are killed by being closed in upon and knocked down with clubs, or driven into ambush and shot like deer. There are many species, 23 of the genus Macropus, 6 of Petrogale, and 3 of the genus Onychogalea, in which the tail ends in a kind of nail. They inhabit not only Australia and Tasmania, but New Guinea, New Ireland, the Aru Islands, and other islands. A large number of smaller species with naked muzzles, called brush-kangaroos, pademelons, wallabies, etc., constitute the subgenus Halmaturus. The rock-kangaroos form the genus Petrogale. Hare-kangaroos or kangaroo-hares belong to the genus Lagorchestes. (See out under Hare-kangaroo.) A peculiar type of kangaroo, inhabiting New Guinea and Misol, is the genus Dorcopsis. (See out under Dorcopsis.) Kangaroo-rats, potoroos, or bettongs are small animals constituting the subfamily Hypsignathinae.

Giant Kangaroo (Macropus major).

This animal is called by the natives kanguroo.

Cook's Voyages, quoted in N. and Q., 6th ser., VI. 58.

She might have said that it was not convenient to come in and find a tame kangaroo, as big as a small donkey, lying on his side on the hearth-rug.

H. Kingsley, Hillmans and Burtons, xxi.

24. A kind of chair. Davies.

It was neither a lounge, nor a dormouse, nor a Cooper, nor a Nelson, nor a kangaroo: a chair without a name would never do; in all things fashionable the name is more than half. Such a happy name as kangaroo Lady Cecilia despaired of finding.

Mrs Edgeworth, Helen (1834 ?), xvi.

kangaroo-apple (kang-ga-rü'äp'l), n. 1. The yellow, egg-shaped berry of Solanum aviculare (S. laciniatum), which is edible when fully ripe. It is a native of Australia and New Zealand.—2. The plant which yields this fruit. It is a plant with shrubby stems 6 or 8 feet high, long and narrow or pinnatifid leaves, and cymes in the axils or on the branches.

kangaroo-bear (kang-ga-rü'bär), n. The native Australian bear, Phascogaleos cinereus. See kooda.

kangaroo-beetle (kang-ga-rü'bä'tl), n. A beetle of the genus Sagra, having enlarged hind legs.

kangaroo-dog (kang-ga-rü'dog or -dög), n. Same as kangaroo-hound.

kangaroo-foot plant (kang-ga-rü'füt plant), n. An Australian plant, Amigozanthus Manglessii, of the natural order Hamodraceae. The perianth, 3 inches long, is cleft and split nearly to the base on the under side. As in the other members of the genus, the exterior of the perianth, as also the inflorescence, and to some extent the stem, is clothed with plumose wool, which in this plant is very dense and bright-green, except at the base of the flower, where it is crimson.

kangaroo-grape (kang-ga-rü'gräp), n. Same as kangaroo-vine.

kangaroo-grass (kang-ga-rü'gräs), n. The Australasian grass Anthistipa ciliata (A. australis), also diffused through southern Asia and the whole of Africa. It is a leafy-stemmed grass, 3 or 8 feet high, with long, bent awns; it is highly esteemed for the nutritious fodder it yields.

kangaroo-hare (kang-ga-rü'här), n. Same as hare-kangaroo.

kangaroo-hound (kang-ga-rü'hound), n. A kind of deer-hound or greyhound used in hunting kangaroos in Australia. Also kangaroo-dog.

kangaroo-mouse (kang-ga-rü'mous), n. An American rodent mammal of the family Sacomysidae and genus Perognathus; a pocket-mouse. The kangaroo-mice are closely related to the species of Dipodomys (see kangaroo-rat, 3), but are smaller. They inhabit the same parts of the United States.

kangaroo-rat (kang-ga-rü'rat), n. 1. An Australian marsupial of the family Macropodidae, subfamily Potoroinae or Hypsignathinae, and genus Potorous (or Hypsignathus), Epityr-

Kangaroo-rat (Potorous tridactylus).

mus, or Bettongia; a bettong; a potoroos.—2. An American rodent of the family Sacomysidae and subfamily Dipodomysinae, as Dipodomys philippii or D. ordii. They resemble jerboas rather than kangaroos, and are common in the southwestern parts of the United States and Mexico. See Dipodomys.

kangaroo-thorn (kang-ga-rü'thorn), n. A spiny shrub, Acacia armata, of extratropical Australia. It is grown there for hedges, and is valuable for fixing coast-sands.

kangaroo-vine (kang-ga-rü'vin), n. An Australian climbing plant, Cissus Baudiniana (C. antarctica). Also kangaroo-grape.

kangy, a. Another spelling of cangy.

kankar (kang'kär), n. [Hind. kankar, limestone, stone, gravel, any small fragments of rock, whether rounded or not.] In India, an impure concretionary carbonate of lime, usually occurring in nodules, in alluvial deposits, and especially in the older of these formations. It is an important rock in India, especially in the valley of the Lower Ganges, where it is much used as a building-stone in the absence of anything better. Also written kankur.

The commonest and also the most useful stone of India is kankar, a nodular form of impure lime, which is found in almost every river valley, and is used from one end of the peninsula to the other for metalling the roads.

W. W. Hunter, Indian Empire, p. 493.

kanker, n. A Middle English spelling of canker.

kanker-dort, n. A variant of canker-dort.

kanna (kan'ä), n. [Sw., = E. can.] The principal Swedish unit of capacity, equal to 100 cubic inches, Swedish measure, or 2.615 liters = 2.764 United States quarts = 2.302 imperial quarts. The Swedish system was to be abolished in 1899.

kans (kans), n. [E. Ind.] A grass, Saccharum spontaneum, allied to the sugar-cane, very common in India. It grows from 8 to 15 feet high, and is rendered very showy by the large amount of silvery-white wool which surrounds the base of the flowers. It may be used for fodder, thatching, twine, etc., and is proving a noxious weed, extremely difficult to eradicate.

Kansas-Nebraska Bill. See bill.

kanti, a. An obsolete form of canti.

kanteli, n. An obsolete form of cantile.

kantelet, n. [Finn.] A five-stringed harp or dulcimer used by the Finns. Also kandelet.

kanten (kan'ten), n. [Jap.] A kind of gelose or gelatin, sometimes called Japanese isinglass, prepared in Japan from several species of seaweed, particularly from the cartilaginous Flori-dea, and used for soups, as well as in the trades, as, for example, in dressing woven goods. It is usually sold in irregular prismatic sticks, resembling glue.

kantharos (kan'thä-ros), n. [Gr. κάθαρος; see cantharus.] Same as cantharus, 1.

Kantian (kan'ti-an), a. and n. [Kant (see def.) + -ian.] 1. a. Of or belonging to Immanuel Kant, the great German philosopher (1724-1804), or to his system of philosophy.

The ultimate decision . . . as to the truth of the Kantian Criticism of Pure Reason must turn upon the opposition of perception and conception, as factors which reciprocally imply, and yet exclude, each other.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 663.

II. a. A follower of Kant; a Kantist.

Kantianism (kan'ti-an-izm), n. [G. Kantianismus; but Kantism is a product of a more recent fashion in word-formation.] The doctrine of the German philosopher Immanuel Kant (1724-1804), one of the most influential of metaphysicians. His leading work, published in 1781 (second edition in 1787), is the "Kritik der reinen Vernunft," or "Critique of the Pure Reason" (the word critic, borrowed from Locke, being the name of a science analogous to logic). His fundamental position is that just as blue and red are said to be "imputed" qualities, which do not exist in the outward things themselves, but are only the modes in which these things affect the eye, so every attribute is merely a mode in which the mind is affected, and has no application to a thing in itself. This is true even of such predicates as existence and possibility, and equally so of non-existence and impossibility. In short, a thing in itself is absolutely unthinkable. But just as it is quite true that one thing is blue and another red, in the sense of really so affecting the eye, so Kant does not attack the real externality of matters of fact, but only that of the forms under which alone they can be apprehended by us. The ideas which the mind thus imports into knowledge are of two kinds—those which are presented in sensation, and those which are introduced in the process of thinking. The first kind, that of the forms of intuition, consists of the ideas of space and time. Space is the form under which alone we can have external perceptions. Time is that in which all our inward experience must clothe itself, and thus our outward sensations, too, when they come to be reproduced in reflection. Thought, on the other hand, is obliged to assume the forms of propositions, and thus arise twelve general conceptions (categories). For as a proposition is either universal, particular, or singular, so the object of thought must have quantity; as propositions are either affirmative, negative, or infinitated, so the object of thought must have degree of reality; as propositions are either categorical, hypothetical, or disjunctive, so the object of thought must be either a substance with attributes inhering in it, or a cause with its effect, or mutually reacting elements; and, finally, as a proposition is either contingent, necessary, or problematical, so the object of thought must possess corresponding modes of being. In attributing an unchangeable character to these conceptions, Kant is profoundly hostile to the spirit of empiricism; but in limiting human knowledge strictly to objects of possible experience, he seemed to strike a severe blow to metaphysics. Religious ideas are, however, to be admitted as regulative principles. Kant is a severe moralist, his rule being "Act so that the maxim of thy will can likewise be valid as a principle of universal legislation."

kantikoy, canticooy (kan'ti-koi), n. [Also cantico, cantica, kantikie, and in the earliest form (as a verb) kintekaooy; an Algonkin word.] 1. A dance, especially a religious dance, among American Indians.—2. An entertainment with dancing; a dancing-match. [U. S.]

Through every day of the season half the population of the entire village go and come to the summit of the bluff which overhangs it, where they peer down for hours at a time upon the methods and evolutions of the kantikie below, the seals themselves looking up with intelligent appreciation of the fact that, though they were in the hands of man, yet he is wise enough not to disturb them there as they rest.

Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 237.

kantikoy, canticooy (kan'ti-koi), v. i. [Also cantico, etc., in the earliest form kintekaooy; from the noun.] To dance as an act of worship, or in festivity: said of American Indians.

The first of these Indians, having received a horrible wound, . . . wished them to let him kintekaooy—being a dance performed by them as a religious rite, etc.

Broad Advice (1649), 2 N. Y. Hist. Coll., II. 252.

These Indians had canticooyed (getintahay) there to-day—that is, conjured the devil, and liberated a woman among them who was possessed by him, as they said.

Dankers, Voyage to N. Y. (1679), p. 276.

Kantism (kan'tizm), n. [Kant (see Kantianism) + -ism.] Same as Kantianism.

Kantist (kan'tist), n. [Kant (see Kantianism) + -ist.] A disciple or follower of Kant.

kantjil, n. See kanchil.

kantry (kan'tri), n. Same as cantred.

Kannock, n. and a. See Canuck.

kanun (ka-nün), n. [Turk.] A kind of dulcimer or zither, used in Turkey. Also written canoon.

kaoliang (kou'li-ang), n. [Chin.; < kao, tall, + liang, millet.] Tall millet; the name in China of Sorghum vulgare or Indian millet.

kaolin (kä'ō-lin), n. [Chin. kaoling, 'high ridge', the name of a hill in China where it is found.] A fine variety of clay, resulting from the decomposition of feldspar. It is a hydrated silicate of aluminium. When pure it is perfectly white, and forms compact, friable, or mealy masses, made up of scale-like crystals. It is soft and unctuous to the touch. Kaolin forms one of the two ingredients in Oriental porcelain; the other, called in China petuntse, is a quartose feldspathic rock. Kaolin occurs in China, Japan, Saxony, Cornwall, near Limoges in France, and at several localities in the United States; that from Limoges is used for the famous Sevres porcelain. In mineralogy called kaolinite.—Kaolin porcelain, a name sometimes given to true or hard porcelain, such as that of the Oriental nations and of Sevres and other factories of the continent of Europe.

kaolinic (kä'ō-lin'ik), a. [kaolin + -ic.] Pertaining to or of the nature of kaolin: as, kaolinic substances. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 624.

kaolinite (kä'ō-lin-it), n. [kaolin + -ite.] Kaolin in its crystalline form.

kaolinization (kä'ō-lin-i-zä'shən), n. [kaolinize + -ation.] The process by which certain minerals, particularly common feldspar, have been altered into kaolin.

Though occasionally clear and fresh, the feldspar has often suffered from kaolinization. Geol. Jour., XLIV. 552.

kaolinize (kä'ō-lin-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. kaolinized, ppr. kaolinizing. [kaolin + -ize.] To convert into kaolin: as, kaolinized feldspar.

The original crystals . . . have been much cracked, and sometimes even partially kaolinized.

Philosophical Mag., XXVII. 372.

kapel, n. An obsolete form of capel.

kapelle (kä-pel'e), n. [G.; see chapel.] In Germany, a musical establishment consisting of a band or orchestra, with or without a choir, under the direction and training of a kapellmeister. In the eighteenth century such establishments were maintained at most of the German courts and by many of the nobility.

kapellmeister, capellmeister (kä-pel'mis'tär), n. [G.; < kapelle, capelle, chapel, chapel-choir, orchestra, + meister = E. master.] 1. The leader or conductor of a kapelle, or of any large musical establishment, involving, at least in central Europe, extensive duties of composition, training, accompaniment, and conducting.—2. The conductor of any band or orchestra.

Sometimes translated chapel-master.

kaph, n. See caph.

kaphar, n. See caphar.

kaptia (ka-pi-ah'i-ā), n. [E. Ind.] A resin which exudes from a Ceylonese tree, Ocotea aromatica (C. lacciferus).

kapnographic (kap-nō-graf'ik), a. [< kapnography + -ic.] Of or pertaining to kapnography; executed by kapnography.

kapnography (kap-nog'gr-ā), n. [< Gr. καπνός, smoke, + γράφω, < γράφειν, write.] Drawing by means of smoke; especially, the art of producing decorative designs, pictures, etc., with a point more or less fine, in a coating of carbon deposited from a flame. Successive coats of the lampblack are allowed to form, and the drawing may in this way be made to give subtle gradations of tint, as well as white or light lines drawn on the dark background. The work is fixed finally by the use of some varnish or other fixative.

kapnomor, n. See capnomor.
kapok (ka-pok'), n. [E. Ind.] The silky wool which invests the seeds of Eriodendron anfractuosum, a species of silk-cotton tree botanically related to the cotton-plants, found in the East and the West Indies. Like the wool of some allied trees, it is used for stuffing pillows, cushions, etc. It has become a considerable article of export from Ceylon.

kappa (kap'pā), n. The Greek letter κ: represented in English by k, and sometimes by c.

kapland (Sw. pron. káp'lánd), n. A Swedish land-measure, equal to 437½ Swedish square ells, or 6.1 English square rods.

Karaim (ká-rá-izm), n. [< Kara(ite) + -ism.] The doctrines or tenets of the Karaites.

Karaites (ká-rá-it), n. [Heb. karaim, readers, scribes (< kara, read), + -it.] A member of a Jewish sect which adheres to Scripture as contrasted with oral tradition, and consequently denies the binding authority of the Talmud. The Karaites originated in Bagdad at least as early as the middle of the eighth century, and are now scattered in Turkey and elsewhere, their chief seat being in the Crimea. They are distinguished for morality and honesty, and have considerable literature. Also spelled Caraites.

karamani-resin (kar-a-man'i-rez'in), n. A resin obtained in British Guiana from a guttiferous tree, Symphonia globulifera. See hog-gum and resin.

karat, n. See carat.

Karatas (kar-á-tas), n. [S. Amer.] 1. Bromelia (Nidularium) Karatas, a plant allied to the pineapple, native in South America and the West Indies. It is one of the fiber-yielding species of Bromelia, and is sometimes called silk-grass.—2. [cap.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants of the natural order Bromeliaceae, closely related to Bromelia, from which it differs chiefly in having the flowers in dense, sessile, terminal heads among the upper leaves. The genus is now restricted to two or three West Indian species, the more numerous Brazilian species formerly referred to it being placed in the genus Nidularium. They are low terrestrial plants with the habit of the pineapple, the leaves spiny-margined, often very long, and collected in a rosette at the base, the flowers in heads subtended by the upper cauline leaves. The principal species, B. Plumieri (Bromelia Karatas), is the karatas or Jamaica silk-grass, and yields a valuable fiber.

karat-seed (kar'at-séd), n. See karat-tree.

Karatfo, n. Same as keratfo.

karat-tree (kar'at-tré), n. An Abyssinian leguminous tree, Erythrina abyssinica, whose small equal seeds share with those of the carob the reputation of being the original of the carat-weight.

Karchesium (kár-ké'si-on), n.; pl. karchesia (-ē). [< Gr. κάρχησιον: see carchesium.] In Gr. archaeol., same as carchesium, 1.

Karecti, n. Same as charict.

Karelinite (kar'e-lin-it), n. [After M. Karelin, the discoverer.] A rare oxy sulphid of bismuth, occurring in crystalline masses of a lead-gray color. It is found in the Altai.

Karengia (ka-ren'ji-ā), n. [African.] A grass of central Africa, Pennisetum distichum, closely allied to the millet, the seed of which is largely used as food by the natives of the southern borders of the Sahara.

Kareynet, n. An obsolete form of carrión.

Kargas (kár'gas), n. [E. Ind.] A dagger with a curved blade, used in northern India; a sacrificial knife.

Karinghote (kar-ing-gō'th), n. [Malay.] A small tree, Samadoura (Samadera) Indica, of the Simarubaceae, found in Hindustan and Ceylon. Its bark yields a tonic and febrifuge, and its seed an oil used for rheumatism. Its wood is light, but durable.

Karite (kar'i-te), n. [Native name.] A sapotaceous tree, Butyrospermum (Baasia) Parkii, abounding in central Africa. Its seeds, when treated, yield a butter-like substance, which is used by the natives as food, and is now, under the name of shea-butter, imported into Europe in considerable quantities for the manufacture of soap. Recent investigations indicate that the coagulated gum of this tree is nearly identical in its properties with gutta-percha.

Karkaneth, n. An obsolete form of carcanet.

Karkot, n. An obsolete form of carik.

Karl, n. See carl.

Karlovianing (kár-lō-vin'ji-ān), a. and n. Same as Carolingian.

karma (kár'mā), n. [Skt. karman (nom. karma), act, action, work, fate as the consequence of acts (see def.), < < kar, do, perform, cause, effect: cf. L. creare, create: see create.] 1. In Hindu religion, one's action or acts considered as determining his lot after death and in a following existence; the aggregate of merits and demerits of a sentient being in one of his successive existences.—2. In theos.: (a) The doctrine of fate, destiny, or necessity as an invariable sequence of cause and effect; the theory of inevitable consequences. (b) In the concrete, the result of one's actions; that which happens to one for better or worse, in matters over which one may exercise any choice or volition.

The Buddhist theory of karma or "action," which controls the destiny of all sentient beings, not by judicial reward and punishment, but by the inflexible result of cause into effect, wherein the present is ever determined by the past in an unbroken line of causation, is indeed one of the world's most remarkable developments of ethical speculation. E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 11.

Karmathian (kár-mā'thi-ān), n. [So named from Karnat, the principal apostle of the sect, a poor laborer, who professed to be a prophet.] One of a Mohammedan sect which arose in Turkey about the end of the ninth century. The Karmathians regarded the Koran as an allegorical book, rejected all revelation, fasting, and prayer, and were communistic, even in the matter of wives. They carried on wars against the califate particularly in the tenth century, but soon after disappeared. According to some accounts the Druses developed from them.

As to the special tenets professed by the Karmathians, they were, in their ultimate expression, pantheistic in theory and socialistic in practice. Encyc. Brit., II. 259.

karmic (kár'mik), a. [< karma + -ic.] 1. Of or pertaining to the doctrine of karma: as, karmic laws or principles.—2. Affected or determined by karma: as, the karmic consequences of an action.

Thus, on a careful examination of the matter, the Karmic law . . . will be seen not only to reconcile itself to the sense of justice, but to constitute the only imaginable method of natural action that would do this. A. P. Sinnett, Esoteric Buddhism, xi.

karn (kár'n), n. [Corn. karn: see cairn.] In Corn. mining, a pile or heap of rocks; sometimes, the solid rock.

karob (kar'qb), n. [Cf. carob.] Among goldsmiths, the twenty-fourth part of a grain. Compare carat.

Karoo, karroo (ka-rō'), n. [Said to be from Hot-tentot karroo, hard, with, to the hardness of the soil under drought.] In phys. geog., the name given to immense barren tracts of clayey table-land in South Africa, which often rise terrace-like to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea-level. It is only the want of water which prevents them from being highly productive. In the wet season they are covered with grasses and flowers, but on the return of the dry season they become hard and steppe-like.—Karoo series, in geol., an important group of rocks in South Africa, consisting largely of sandstones, with much volcanic matter intercalated and overlying. The geological age of this group has been the object of much study, and it is generally believed to represent both the Permian and Triassic. The fossils of the upper division of the Karoo are peculiar and remarkable. Among them are labyrinthodonts, dinosaurs, theriodonts, etc. The formation is also of importance, because in this rock are found the diamonds for which South Africa is famous. These occur in a peculiar much-altered volcanic tuff which has come up from below through chimney-like orifices, an entirely unique mode of occurrence for this gem.

Kaross (ka-ros'), n. [S. African.] A garment of fur worn by the natives of South Africa. Also spelled carrosse.

karpi, v. An obsolete form of carpi.

karpholite (kár'fō-lit), n. See carpholite.

karphosiderite (kár'fō-sid'g-rīt), n. See carphosiderite.

Karrawant, n. An obsolete spelling of caravan.

From thence by Karrawans to Coptos.

Sterner, Tristram Shandy, v. 12.

Karoo, n. See karroo.

Karrowt, n. See carrowt.

Kars, Karset, n. Obsolete variants of crass.

Karstenite (kár'sten-it), n. [Named from D. L. G. Karsten (1768-1810), a mineralogist.] Same as anhydrite.

Karvet, v. An obsolete spelling of carvet.

Karvelt, n. An obsolete form of caravel.

Karynt, karynet, n. Same as caroné.

karyokinesis (kar'i-ō-ki-nē'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. κάρυον, a nut (nucleus), + κίνησις, movement, change, revolution.] In embryol., the series of active changes which take place in the nucleus of a living cell in the process of division. Also written caryokinesis.

karyokinetic (kar'i-ō-ki-net'ik), a. [< karyokinesis, after kinetic.] Characterized by or exhibiting or resulting from karyokinesis. Also caryokinetic.

The latter [the endodermal nuclei] are characterized by their angular shape, and by never presenting the karyokinetic figures characteristic of the ectodermal nuclei. A. Sedgwick, Proc. Royal Soc., XXXIX. 243.

karyolysis (kar-i-ol'i-sia), n. [NL., < Gr. κάρυον, a nut, + λύσις, dissolution, < λύω, loose, dissolve.] Same as karyomolysis.

karyolytic (kar'i-ō-lit'ik), a. [< karyolysis (-lyt) + -ic.] Same as karyomolitic.

Radiating lines of granules making up the so-called karyolytic figure. Diaper, Path. Anat. (trans.), I. § 75.

karyomitic (kar'i-ō-mit'ik), a. [< karyomolysis + -ic.] Pertaining to karyomolysis; exhibiting or resulting from karyomolysis.

Abundant evidence of the occurrence of karyomitic figures in [columnar epithelium cells]. Proc. Royal Soc., XXXVIII. 91.

karyomitosis (kar'i-ō-mit'ō'sis), n.; pl. karyomitoses (-sēs). [NL., < Gr. κάρυον, a nut, + ΝΛ. mitosis.] In biol., the splitting of the chromatin fibers of a nucleus; also, a figure resulting from such splitting.

The coils of lymphoid tissue multiply abundantly by karyomitosis. Proc. Royal Soc., XXXVIII. 91.

karyoplasm (kar'i-ō-plazm), n. [< Gr. κάρυον, a nut, kernel, + πλάσμα, anything formed.] The substance of which the more definitely formed portions of the nucleus of a cell, including the nuclear wall, the nucleoli, and the intranucleolar network, are composed. The remaining substance of the cell is called the nuclear matrix or nuclear fluid. Also called nucleoplasm.

Kashmirian (kash-mir'i-ān), a. See Cashmerian.

kasintu (ka-sin'tū), n. [E. Ind.] The common red jungle-fowl of India, Gallus bankiva. See Gallus.

kasu (kas'ū), n. [E. Ind.] A kind of catechu made from the fruit of the betelnut-palm, Dreaca Catechu, serving in India the same purposes as the true catechu.

kassydony, n. See causidony, chalcidony.

Kastril, n. An obsolete spelling of kestril.

kat (kat), n. The principal ancient Egyptian unit of weight, equal almost to one fiftieth of a pound avoirdupois, according to several well-preserved standards. Also ket.

Kata, a form of catu, in closer following of the Greek.

katabolic, a. See catabolic.

Katabolism, n. See catabolism.

katakana (kat-g-kā'nā), n. [Jap., < kata, side, + kana, q. v.] One of the two styles of writing the syllabary of 48 letters in use among the Japanese, the other being hiragana. The katakana letters are said to have been invented by Kibi Dajin, about the middle of the eighth century, are formed of a part—one side—of square Chinese characters used phonetically, and are confined almost exclusively to the writing of proper names and foreign words. In katakana there is but one form for each letter, whereas in hiragana many of the letters may be written in a variety of ways.

Katalysis, n. See catalysis.

Kataphrygian, n. See Cataphrygian.

Katataste, n. See catataste.

katatonia (kat-g-tō'ni-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. κάρδ, down, + τόνος, tone, tension: see tone.] A form of insanity characterized by periods of acute mania and melancholia, and by cataleptoid and epileptoid states. Kahlbaum.

katatoniac (kat-g-tō'ni-ak), n. [< katatonia + -ac.] One who is affected with katatonia.

Kiernan found four head injuries among 80 katatoniacs. Allen and Newell, IX. 458.

katchung-oil (ka-čung'oil), n. [E. Ind.] Arachis-oil (which see, under Arachis).

katchup, n. See catchup.

katelectrotonus, n. See catelectrotonus.

kathenothelam (ka-then'ō-thē-lam), n. [< Gr. κάρδ, according to, + τίς (tis), one, + θέω, god, + -ism.] Same as henothelism.

kathetal, kathetometer, etc. See cathetal, etc.

kathodal, kathode, etc. See cathodal, etc.

kathodic (ka-thod'ik), a. [< Gr. κάρδ, against + θέω, way.] In bot., turned away from the direction in which the genetic spiral runs: said of that half of a leaf which has this characteristic. The opposite half is anodic. Göbel.

kation, n. See cation.

katipo (kat'i-pō), n. [Maori.] A venomous spider of the family Therididae, the Latrodectus katipo, of a black color with a marked red spot, found in New Zealand usually among the rushes and sedges near the sea-shore. The bite of this spider is dangerous and sometimes fatal.

katsup (kat'sup), n. Same as catchup.

kattimundoo (kat-i-mun'dō), n. See cattimundoo.

katydid (kā'ti-did), n. [So called in imitation of its peculiar note.] An orthopterous insect of the family Locustidae, of large size, green color, and arboreal habits. Its note (which is imitated by its name) is produced by stridulation. The common katydid is Cyrtophyllum or Platyphylum conocephalum. It is abundant in the central and eastern United States, where its shrilling call is one of the most familiar sounds of a summer night. The wing-covers are long, entirely covering the hind wings, and of a pretty pale-green color. By means of the long similar-shaped ovipositor, the eggs are pushed into crevices in the soft bark and stems of plants. The round-winged katydids are several species of Amphipycnia, as A. rotundifolia, abundant in the northern United States and Canada. Microcentrum retinervis is the angular-winged katydid. Another katydid, of slender form, is Phaneroptera curvicauda.

Broad-winged Katydid (Cyrtophyllum conocephalum).

I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou art hid,
Thou testy little dogmatist,
Thou pretty Katydid!
O. W. Holmes, To an Insect.

kaucei, n. A Middle English form of causey. See causeway.

kauila, kauwila (kou'i-lū), n. [Hawaiian.] One of two trees of the buckthorn family, Alphitonia ponderosa and Colubrina oppositifolia. The former is a tall tree useful to the inhabitants on account of its close-grained, hard, and heavy wood, which turns black in drying, and was formerly used for clubs, spears, the rafters of their sacred buildings, etc. The latter is a small branching tree of comparatively little importance.

kauiti, n. An obsolete form of *khan*².

kauri (kou'ri), n. [Maori.] Same as kauri-pine.

kauri-gum (kou'ri-gum), n. The resin which exudes from the thick bark of the kauri-pine. Masses weighing even 100 pounds are found in the soil where the trees have formerly grown. It is used in making varnish. Also kauri-resin, coudie-gum.

kauri-pine (kou'ri-pin), n. The coniferous tree Agathis (Dammara) australis, the finest forest-tree of New Zealand. It sometimes attains the height of 180 feet, and affords a remarkably durable, straight-grained timber, easily worked, and susceptible of a high polish. It is used for masts, decking, and other ship-building purposes, for houses, bridges, and railway-ties, for furniture, and for numerous other objects. The name kauri is sometimes extended to the other species of the genus. It appears variously spelled as coudie, coudie, coudie, kawrie, kawry, kourie, etc. See kauri-gum, and also Dammara.

kauri-resin (kou'ri-rez'in), n. Same as kauri-gum.

kauseia, n. See causia.

kauwila, n. See kauila.

kava (kā'vā), n. [Hawaiian.] 1. A Polynesian shrub, Macropiper latifolium (Piper methysticum), of the pepper family. It is an erect, knotted, soft-stemmed plant with dark-green heart-shaped leaves. Its root has aromatic and pungent qualities, and affords by fermentation an intoxicating drink.

2. A beverage derived from this plant. The native method of preparation was by chewing the root, adding water to the result, and straining, the last process being accompanied by ceremonial chanting. Also cava, kava, and caa.

kavass, n. See cavass.

kave, v. and n. See *cave*².

kavel, n. See *cavel*¹.

kaver, n. See *caverr*².

kawi, v. and n. See *caw*¹.

kawa, n. See kava.

kawa-kawa (kā'wā-kā'wā), n. An ornamental shrub of New Zealand, Macropiper (Piper) excelsum, sometimes cultivated.

kawass (ka-was'), n. See cavass.

ka-wattle (kā'wat'i), n. Same as *ka*¹.

Kawi (kā'wī), n. [Javanese.] The ancient and sacred language of Java. Also written Kawi.

Javanese as now spoken is far from being the same as the language of the old inscriptions and manuscripts. The latter (which is usually called Kawi, though some scholars insist on the name Old Javanese) was probably based on the Javanese of Mādākerā, while the Krama of the present day finds its type in that of Surakarta. Encyc. Brit., XIII. 608.

kawn (kān), n. See khan.

kawrie, n. See kauri-pine.

kaxes, n. A form of kez.

kay (kā), n. An obsolete or dialectal variant of *key*¹.

kay² (kā), n. Same as *key*².

kay³ (kā), n. Same as *key*³.

kay⁴ (kā), n. [*< ME. ka, < AS. ka = D. G. Dan. Sw., etc., ka, < L. ka, the name of the letter K, k, called in Gr. κάρρα.] The name of the letter K, k. It is rarely so written, the symbol K, k, being used instead.

kaya (kā'yā), n. [Chin.] A coniferous tree of China, Torreya grandis. It has a height of sixty feet, bears an umbrella-shaped crown, and affords a good timber.

kayager, n. Same as keyage.

kayak (kā'yak), n. [Also kajak, kayack, kyack, kjak; a native Greenland (Eskimo) name.] In Greenland, a light fishing-boat, made of seal-skins stretched over a wooden frame, having in the middle of the upper side an opening to receive the fisherman, who wraps himself in a flap of sealskin, which is laced close around the hole to prevent the penetration of water.

kayaker (kā'yak-ēr), n. One who fishes in a kayak.

Almost in an instant the animal charged upon the kayaker. Kane, Sec. Grinnell Exp., I. 418.

Kayea (kā'ē-ā), n. [NL. (Wallich, 1832), named in honor of Dr. R. Kaye Greville of Edinburgh.] A genus of dicotyledonous polypetalous trees, belonging to the natural order Guttifera, tribe Calophylleae, characterized by the small sub-globose anthers, the 4-ovuled ovary, and the 4-parted apex of the style. The leaves are oblong and finely pinnately veined; the flowers are usually small and numerous, in terminal panicles; and the fruit is a rounded fleshy drupe. There are six species, all natives of tropical Asia. K. floribunda is a large and handsome evergreen tree with narrow, opposite, laurel-like leaves, and terminal panicles of tetramerous white flowers tinged with pink. It grows in Sylhet. K. stylosa of Ceylon is said to yield a useful timber and to have fragrant flowers.

kaylet, n. An obsolete form of *kail*².

kaynard, n. [ME., < OF. caignard, cagnard, idle, slothful.] See caynard.

A kaynard and a olde folte,
That thyrthe hath loste and boghte a bolte.
MS. Harl. 1701. l. 55. (Halliwell.)

Sire, olde kaynard, is this thy nary?
Why is my neighbors wyf so gay?
She is honoured over al ther she goth;
I sitte at hoom, I have no thrifty cloth.
Chaucer, Prologue to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 237.

kayret, v. See cair.

kaza (ka-zā'), n. [Turk. qaza, a judging, decree, also a judicial district; cf. qāṣ, a judge: see kail, cadit.] A small administrative district in Turkey, being a subdivision of a sanjak.

kazardly, kazardly (kaz'urd-li), a. [Also kazardly; *< *kazarā, kazarā, < OF. casard, tame, home-keeping; < casa, < L. casa, a house, cottage: see casa.] Liable to disease or accident; lean; not thriving: used in the north of England, especially of cattle.

kazi, n. Same as kadi.

kasoo (ka-zō'), n. [Appar. a made word.] A so-called musical instrument or toy, consisting of a wooden tube of peculiar shape, containing a vibrating strip of catgut. A sound is produced by singing into the tube, so as to set up a kind of rattling sympathetic vibration in the catgut.

kazardly, a. See kazardly.

K. B. An abbreviation (a) of Knight of the Bath, and (b) of King's Bench.

K. C. B. An abbreviation of Knight Commander of the Bath.

kea (kā'ē), n. [Australian.] The sheep-killing parrot of Australia, Nestor notabilis.

A mob of hoggets were attacked by keas, and in one night no less than 200 sheep were killed.
Canterbury Times, March 12, 1884.

keach (kēch), v. t. [Perhaps a dial. form and use of *kech*¹, catoh.] To dip out (water). [Prov. Eng.]

keack, v. t. [Var. of cack* for cackle.] To cackle like a goose. Nares.

The sober goose (not thinking ought amiss)
Amongst the rest did (harshly) keack and hiss.
John Taylor, Works (1630).

keamer (kā'mēr), n. [Origin obscure.] A kind of ferret. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

kearn, n. An obsolete form of *kern*⁴.

keave¹, n. and v. See keove.

keave², v. Same as *cave*².

keb (keb), v. t.; pret. and pp. kebbed, ppr. kebbing. [Origin obscure.] To cast a lamb immaturity; lose a lamb in any way: said of a ewe. [Scotch.]

keb (keb), n. [See keb, v.] 1. A ewe that has brought forth immaturity, or has lost her lamb. [Scotch.]—2. A tick or sheep-louse. [Scotch.]

kebab (ke-bāb'), n. Same as cabob.

kebar, n. Same as caber.

kebbie (keb'i), n. [Origin obscure.] A cudgel; a club; a rough walking-stick with a hooked head. [Scotch.]

Ans o' them was gann to strike my mother wi' the aide o' his broadsword. So I gaid up my kebbie at them, and said I wad gie them as guid. Scott, Old Mortality, xiv.

kebbock, kebbuck (keb'uk), n. [< Gael. cabag, a cheese.] A cheese. [Scotch.]

Weel can she milk cow and ewe,
And mak a kebbuck weel o.
Laird of Drum (Child's Ballads, IV. 119).

A huge kebbuck (a cheese, that is, made with ewe milk mixed with cow's milk) and a jar of salt butter were in common to the company. Scott, Old Mortality, viii.

keb-ewe (keb'ū), n. Same as keb, 1.

keblah, n. See kiblah.

keblock (keb'lok), n. Some kind of wild turnip, probably Brassica Rapa. [Prov. Eng.]

kebah (kebash), n. [Ar.] The wild sheep of Barbary: same as aoudad.

kechil, n. See kichol.

keck¹ (kek), a. [< dial. var. of quick, prob. due to leel kykr, var. of keikr = E. quick. Cf. kedged, kidge.] Quick; lively; pert. [Prov. Eng.]

keck² (kek), v. t. [A var. of *kink*², both (like G. kiken, vomit) imitative of the sound of retching.] 1. To heave the stomach; retch, as in an effort to vomit. Also keckle.

If his conscience were come to that unnatural dyscrasie, as to digest poison and to keck at wholesome food, it was not for the Parliament, or any of his Kingdoms, to feed with him any longer. Milton, Elknonoklastes, II.

Hence—2. To feel or manifest strong disgust.

The faction—is it not notorious?—
Keck at the memory of glorious. Swift.

3. To act as if retching; arch the neck and protrude the head, as in the act of vomiting.

The hawk now and again affords healthy excitement to a score of crows, who keck at him as he flaps unconcerned on his wide, ragged wings through the air. P. Robinson, Under the Sun, p. 31.

keck² (kek), n. [*< keck*², v.] A retching or heaving of the stomach.

keck³ (kek), n. [< kez, in the form kecks, taken as a plural: see kez.] 1. Same as kez, 1.—2. A plant having a hollow stem.—Broad-leaved keck, Hieracium Spondylium.—Trumpet-keck, the hollow stem of Anemone sylvestris, or some allied plant, which boys make into trumpets.

Keckia (kek'i-ā), n. [NL. (E. F. Glocker, 1841), named in honor of General Michael Keck von Keck, a patron of geology.] A genus of fossil algae belonging, according to Schimper, to the group Caulerpiaceae, of uncertain affinities, consisting of a phyllome from a cylindrical, apparently solid, many times branching stem, the branches arising at an acute angle, simple or again branched, gradually thickened upward, and covered with large thick, scale-like rings or annular swellings which leave crescent-shaped scars when removed, indicating that they were hollow or sack-like. The typical species is K. annulata, described by Glocker from the Quader-sandstein (Gonomanian) of Moravia. Other species have been reported from strata of the same age in Saxony, Sillesia, Switzerland, and Russia, while forms referred by Heer to Muensteria, from the Flysch (Lower Eocene) of Switzerland, are now regarded as belonging to Keckia. Some half-dozen species of this genus are known to science.

keckish (kek'ish), a. [*< keck*² + -ish.] Having a tendency to retch or vomit.

Inordinate passion of vomiting, called cholera, is nothing different from a keckish stomach and a desire to cast, but only according to augmentation.

Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 640.

keckle¹ (kek'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. keckled, ppr. keckling. [Perhaps a var. of kinkle for *kink*¹, as *keck*² for *kink*².] Naut., to cover or guard by winding with something. Thus, hemp cables are keckled to protect them from chafing by winding old rope around them.

keckle² (kek'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. keckled, ppr. keckling. [Freq. of *keck*².] Same as *keck*², 1.

keckle³ (kek'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. keckled, ppr. keckling. [A var. of cackle: see cackle, gaggle, giggle.] To cackle; chuckle. [Scotch.]

I kek the wee stools o' the mickie,
As round the fire the glistie kekke
To see me loup. Burns, To the Toothache.

The said carles kekke with fairness as they saw the young dancers. Galt, Annals of the Parish, xiv.

keekle (kek'l), n. [*keekle*³, v.] A chuckle.

"I gude faith," cried the ballie, with a keekle of exultation, "here's proof enough now." Galt, Provost, xii.

keekle-meekle (kek'l-mek'l), n. In mining, lead-mines of the poorest kind. E. Hunt.
[Eng.]

keekle-pint (kek'l-pin), n. [Appar. connected with keeks, kez.] A keez.

It lighted on her cheek,
And syne upon her chin,
And sang the pulpit o' her yellow hair,
And she burnt like keekle-pint.
Young Hunting (Child's Ballads, III. 300).

keekling (kek'ling), n. [Verbal n. of *keekle*¹, v.]
Naut., the material used to keekle a cable.

keeklish (kek'lish), a. [*keekle*³ + -ish. Cf.
keekish.] Keekish.

The verie small tendrils of the vine, . . . being punned and taken in water, staleteth and represseth vomiting in those whose stomacks use ordinarily to be keekish and soon to overturne. Holland, tr. of Pliny, xlii, Proeme.

keeklock (kek'lok), n. Brassica Sinapistrum, or charlock. [Prov. Eng.]

keeks (keks), n. Same as *keek*³ or kez.

You are so thin a body may see thro' you, and as dry as a keeks. N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, I. 23.

keekhouse, n. Same as keekhouse.

keekson (kek'son), n. [See kezen.] Same as kez, 1.

keeky (kek'si), n. [See kez.] Same as kez.

Nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, keekies, burs, Loosung both beauty and utility. Shaks., Hen. V., v. 2, 52.

keeky (kek'i), a. [*keek*³ + -y.] Of the nature of a keek; keek-like.

A sort of cane, without any joint, and perfectly round, consisteth of hard and blackish cylinders, mixed with a soft keeky body, so as at the end cut transversely it looks as a bundle of wires. Grew.

ked, kedd, Past participles of kithe.

keddle-dock (ked'l-dok), n. The plant ragwort or kettledock, Senecio Jacobaea.

kedged (kej), v.; pret. and pp. kedged, ppr.
kedging. [According to Skeat, <Sw. dial. keka, tug, work continually; drag oneself slowly forward;
but the verb, though appar. older, may be from the noun: see *kedged*¹, n.] 1. trans. To warp, as a ship; move by means of a light cable or hawser attached to an anchor, as in a river.

II. intrans. To move by being pulled along with the aid of an anchor.

He said she went to windward as if she were kedging.
R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 232.

Then followed a curious kedging barge, with high bow and stern and a horse-power windlass amidships, pulling itself slowly up-stream by winding in cables attached to kedge anchors which were carried ahead and dropped in turn by two or three boats' crews.

The Century, XXXVI. 15.

kedged (kej), n. [See *kedged*¹, v. The noun may be simply short for kedged-anchor.] A small anchor with an iron stock. Its principal use is to hold a ship steady when riding in a harbor or river, and to keep her clear of her bower-anchor, particularly at the turn of the tide. It is also used in moving the ship from one part of a harbor to another in warping or kedging. Kedges are also used as ordinary anchors for boats and smaller vessels.
kedged², kedge (kej, kij), a. [ME. kygge, kygge, for orig. kykke* (cf. E. dial. keek), < Icel. kykr, a contr. form of kykr = E. quick: see quik.
Cf. *keek*¹.] 1. Brisk; lively.

I'm surely growing young again,
I feel myself so kedged and plump.
Blumfeld, Richard and Kate.

E—himself . . . is exceedingly kedged about me, anxious beyond measure for golden opinions of his God-dedicated Epie. Carlyle, in Froude, I. ii. 12.

2. Stout; potbellied. [Prov. Eng.]

Also kedgy.

kedged (kej), v. t.; pret. and pp. kedged, ppr.
kedging. [Cf. *kedged*², a.] To fill; stuff. [Prov.
Eng.]

kedged-anchor (kej'ang'kor), n. Same as *kedged*¹.

kedger (kej'er), n. [*kedged*¹ + -er.] A small anchor used in kedging.

kedger (kej'er), n. [A var. of *cadger*¹.] A fisherman; a dealer in fish; a cadger. See cadged. [Prov. Eng.]

kedge-rope (kej'röp), n. Naut., the rope which is attached to the kedge.

kedgy (kej'i), a. [*kedged*² + -y.] Same as *kedged*².

kedjeree (kej'e-rë), n. [E. Ind.] 1. A dish much eaten in India, made of rice cooked with the kind of pea called dhol, onions, eggs, butter, and various condiments. Also kitchery.

Hence—2. A mixture; medley; hodgepodge.

kee (kë), n. pl. A variant of ky.

A lass, that Cloty hight, had won his heart—
Cloty, the western lass that tends the kee.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Tuesday, I. 21.

keech (këch), n. [Perhaps an assimilated form, with mutated vowel, of *cake*¹. Cf. kitche.] A mass of fat rolled up in a round lump by a butcher.

I wonder
That such a keech can with his very bulk Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun.
Shaks., Hen. VIII., I. 1, 55.

keek (këk), v. t. [ME. kyken = D. kyken = MLG. kiken, LG. kicken = G. kucken (cf. MHG. gucken, gucken, G. gucken) = Icel. kíkja = Sw.
kika = Dan. kige (secondary form kikke), look, peep.] To peep; look pryingly. [Prov. Eng.
and Scotch.]

This Nicholas sat gapyng evers uprighte,
As he had kiked (var. loked) on the newe moone.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, I. 250.

Then up she rose, put on her clothes,
And keekit through at the lock-hole.
Lockmaben Harper (Child's Ballads, VI. 9).

keek (këk), n. [keek, v.] A peep. [Prov.
Eng. and Scotch.]

I wad nae gie the finest sight we has seen in the His-lands for the first keek o' the Gorbals o' Glasgow.
Scott, Bob Roy, xxxvi.

keeker (kë'kër), n. [keek + -er.] In coal-mining, an inspector of underground mining.
[North. Eng.]

keeking-glass (kë'king-glàs), n. A lookingglass. [Scotch.]

A breast-plate you might see to dress your hair in, as well as in that keeking-glass in the ivory frame that you showed me even now. Scott, Monastery, xiv.

keel (kël), n. [Early mod. E. also kyel (kiel*); < ME. kèle*, not found; the reg. form from the
AS., also not found, would be cheol*, chele*, E.
as if cheel*, as shortened in Cholesea and Cholsey, AS. cedelwig, (a) partly (in def. 1) < AS. ceol, ceol, a ship (chiefly poetical), = D. kiel = MLG.
kel, kiel, LG. kiel = OHG. kiol, keol, chial, cheol, MHG. kiel = Icel. kjöll (chiefly poetical; pl.
kjölur), a ship (perhaps = Gr. γαλῆρα, a round-built Phœnician merchant vessel); and (b) partly (in def. 2) from an orig. diff. word, namely Icel. kjölur (pl. kjölur) = Dan. kjøl = Sw. köl, the keel of a vessel, whence also appar. D. and G.
kiel, in this sense. The F. quille = Sp. quilla = Pg. quilha = It. chiglia, chiela, the keel of a vessel, is prob. from the E. (the Sp. Pg. It. through the F.). In def. 5 (and 6) the word is prob. a fig. use of def. 2. Cf. bottom, in the sense of 'ship.' The AS. term for 'keel' in def. 2 was scipes botm, 'ship's bottom,' or bytime, 'bottom.'] 1. An early form of galley or small ship; a long boat: used with reference to Anglo-Saxon history.

Hingstus and Horsa, two brethren, and most valliant Saxon princes, had the conduction of these forces over into Brittaine in three great and long shippes, then called keeles.
Verriegan, Rest of Decayed Intelligence, v.

In three keels—so ran the legend of their conquest—and with their cademmen, Hengist and Horsa, at their head, these Jutes landed at Ebbsfleet in the Isle of Thanet.
J. R. Green, Making of Eng., p. 27.

2. The principal timber in a ship or boat, extending from stem to stern at the bottom, supporting the whole frame, and consisting of a number of pieces scarfed and bolted together; in iron vessels, the combination of plates corresponding to the keel of a wooden vessel.

Her cedar keels, her mast of gold refined,
Her table and sayles as silver and silk.
Puttenham, Partheniades, x.
He hearkned, and his armes about him took.
The whiles the nimble bote
so well her sped
That with her crooked keels
the land she strooke.
Spenser, F. Q., II. xii. 93.

A little vessel . . . was riding at anchor, keel to keel with another that lay beneath it, its own apparition.
Longfellow, Hyperion, I. 2.

3. In bot.: (a) A central longitudinal ridge along the back of any organ, as a leaf or glume. (b)
In a papilionaceous corolla, the lower pair of petals, which are more or less united into a prow-shaped body, usually inclosing the stamens and pistil. (c) Another structure of similar form, as the lower petal in Polygala. Also called corina. See cut under banner.—4. In zool., a projecting ridge extending longitudinally along the middle of any surface. Specifically, in ornith.: (a) The gonyx of the bill. (b) The carina of the sternum, or crest of the breast-bone: as, the sternal keel. See cut under corina.

5. A ship.

From what unheard-of world, in what strange keel,
Have ye come hither to our commonweal?

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 2.

6. A strong, clumsy boat; a barge such as is used by the colliers at Newcastle in England.
[Eng.]

Bottoms or keeles. Harrison, p. 6. (Halliwell.)

Thou and thy most renowned noble brother Came to the Court first in a keele of See-coale.
Chapman, Revenge of Bussy D'Ambois, I.

He had come to Newcastle about a year ago in expectation of journeyman work, along with three young fellows of his acquaintance who worked in the keel.
Smollett, Roderick Random, viii.

Weel may the keel row
That my lad's in. Newcastle Song.

Hence—7. A measure of coal, 8 Newcastle chaldrons, equal to 424 hundredweight. This would be about 15½ London chaldrons of 36 bushels. But a statute of 1421 makes the keel 30 chaldrons (chaldre).
[Eng.]—False keel, a second keel of a ship fastened under the main keel to preserve it from injury. See cut above.
—On an even keel, in a level or horizontal position: said of a ship or other vessel.

Thus I steer my bark, and sail
On even keel, with gentle gale.
M. Green, The Spleen.

To give the keel (naut.), to careen. Florio.

keel (kël), v. [*keel*¹, n.] 1. trans. 1. To plow with a keel, as the sea; navigate. [Poetical.]—2. To furnish with a keel.

A conspiracy has long existed in America for the purpose of buying a stout keeled yacht.
The Academy, Nov. 10, 1883, p. 302.

II. intrans. 1. To turn up the keel; show the bottom.—2. To give over; cease. [Prov.
Eng. and U. S.]—To keel over. (a) To capsize or upset. (b) To fall suddenly; tumble down or over, as from fright or a blow, or in a swoon. [Colloq., U. S.]

keel² (kël), v. [ME. kelen (also assimilated chelen), < AS. celan (OFries. kēla = OHG. chuolan, kualen, MHG. küelen, G. kühlen = Icel. kala), make cool, < cel, cool: see *cool*¹. Cf. *cool*¹, v.] 1.
trans. 1. To make cool; cool; moderate the heat of, as that of the contents of a pot boiling violently by gently stirring them.

And lerode men a ladel bygge with a long steele,
That cast fur to kele a crokke and saue the fatte aboue.
Piers Plowman (C), xlii. 280.

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.
Shaks., L. L. L., v. 2 (song).

2. To moderate the ardor or intensity of; assuage; appease; pacify; diminish.

Be-cause of his courage was keelt with age,
He shuld turne to the toun, the traytors with all,
To spir at hom specially of hur spee for.
Destruction of Troy (R. E. T. S.), I. 11464.

Loved be that lord that giftes all grace,
That kyndly thus cure care wolde kele.
York Plays, p. 51.

And, sires, also it keleth jalouzie.
Chaucer, Prologue to Pardoner's Tale, I. 80.

And doune on knees full humbly gan I knele,
Beseeching her my farvant wo to kele.
Court of Love, I. 775.

II. intrans. To become cool; cool down.

Come forth, thou cursed knave,
Thy comforte some schall kele.
York Plays, p. 350.

keel³ (kël), n. [*keel*², v.] In brewing, a broad flat vessel used for cooling liquids; a keelfat.

Liquor salt my keel doth fill.
Sonnet (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 461).

keel⁴ (kël), n. [Ir. Gael. cúl, ruddle.] Red chalk; ruddle. [Scotch and U. S.]

keel⁵ (kël), v. t. [*keel*², v.] To mark, as a sheep, with ruddle. [Scotch.]

keel⁶ (kël), n. A variant of *keel*², 1.

keel⁷ (kël), n. An obsolete or dialectal form of *keel*², keel.

keelage (kë'laj), n. [*keel*¹ + -age.] The right of demanding a duty or toll for a ship entering a harbor; also, the duty so paid.

keel-block (kël'blok), n. One of a series of short timbers on which the keel of a vessel rests while building or repairing, and which afford access to work beneath.

keel-compelling (kël'kqm-pel'ing), a. Driving onward a keel or boat. [Poetical.]

Blow, swiftly blow, thou keel-compelling gale!
Byron, Childe Harold, II. 20.

keeled (kæld), a. [< keel¹ + -ed².] Having a keel; furnished with or exhibiting a longitudinal ridge resembling the keel of a boat, as a leaf or other object; ridged lengthwise in the middle underneath, as the sternum of a carinate bird (see cut under carinate); carinated.

The imitation of keeled scales on the crown produced by the recumbent feet, as the caterpillar threw itself backward.
A. R. Wallace, Nat. Select., p. 92.

keelery, keelery, n. See keelock.

keeler¹ (kē'ler), n. [< keel¹, n., 2, + -er¹.] One who works on a barge or keel. Also keelman.

keeler² (kē'ler), n. [< keel², v., + -er¹. Cf. keel², n.] The equiv. fr. oilier is appar. from the E. word. 1. A small shallow tub used for some domestic purposes, as dish-washing, also to hold stuff for calking ships, etc.

Their wisdoms, who with certain grained tolde fortunes, and diuined, looking into keelers and pallets full of water.
Purche's, Pilgrimage, p. 408.

2. A square or oblong wooden box, from 3 to 4 feet long and 6 to 8 inches deep, used in dressing mackerel, and also to hold the salt used in the process. More fully called gib-keeler.

keeler-tub (kē'ler-tub), n. Same as keeler², 1. Lowell, Biglow Papers, 2d ser., Int.

keelfat (kē'l'fat), n. [< keel² + fat².] A cooler; a vat in which liquor is set for cooling.

keelhaul (kē'l'hāl), v. t. [Also keelhale (= D. L.G. kielhalen = G. kielholen = Dan. kjølhale = Sw. köhala); < keel¹ + haul, hale¹.] The E. word is prob. adapted from the D. 1. To haul under the keel of a ship. Keelhauling was formerly a punishment inflicted in the English and other navies for certain offenses. The offender was drawn through the water under the bottom of the ship, and back on board on the opposite side, by ropes and tackles attached to the yards.

Whoever told him so was a lying lubberly rascal, and deserved to be keelhauled.
Smollett.

Some also have an effigy of Judas, which the crew amuse themselves with keel-hauling and hanging by the neck from the yard-arms. R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 147.

2. Figuratively, to reprimand severely; haul over the coals. Also keelrake.

keelhauling (kē'l'hā'ling), n. [Verbal n. of keelhaul, v.] Punishment by hauling under the keel of a ship.

He would have undergone a dozen keel-haulings rather than have satisfied Vannlyperken.
Marryat, Snarleygown, x.

keelie (kē'li), n. [Imitative of its cry.] The keestrel. [Scotch.]

A combination of young blackguards in Edinburgh hence termed themselves the Keelie Gang.
Scott.

keeling (kē'ling), n. [Sc. also keling, kelting, kelling; < ME. keling, kelynge; cf. Icel. keila, Sw. kölja, a kind of cod.] A codfish. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Keling he tok and tumberel.
Hering and the makorol. Havelok, l. 757.

For the sailing of them were made use of eleven hundred hides of brown cow, shapen like the tail of a keeling.
Urynkert, tr. of Rabelais, l. 2.

Before they catch their great fishes, as Keeling, Ling, etc., they must put far out into the sea with their little boats.
Brand, Orkney, p. 30.

keelvine, keelyvine (kē'li-vin), n. [Also quiltvine; origin obscure. Cf. keels, ruddle, tellows, black-lead, killow, blackish earth.] A pencil of black or red lead. [Scotch.]

Put up your pocket-book and your keelvines pen then, for I downa speak out an' ye hae writing materials in your hands.
Scott, Antiquary, xxxviii.

keelless (kē'l'es), a. [< keel¹ + -less.] In soil, bot., etc., having no keel or carina; eocarinate.

keelman (kē'l'man), n.; pl. keelmen (-men). Same as keeler¹.

keel-molding

(kē'l'mōl'ding),

n. In arch.,

a round on which there is a small fillet, projecting like the keel of a ship. The fillet was originally small,

but became more and more pronounced.

This form of molding is characteristic in medieval architecture, from early in the thirteenth to the middle of the fifteenth century.

keel-petals (kē'lpet'als), n. pl.

Those petals in a papilionaceous flower which unite to form the keel.

Keel-molding. a, a, keels.

I have thrice seen humble-bees of two kinds, as well as hive bees, sucking the nectar [of the sweet-pea], and they did not depress the keel-petals so as to expose the anthers and stigma.

Darwin, Cross and Self Fertilisation (Amer. ed.), p. 155.

keelrake (kē'l'rāk), v. t.; pret. and pp. keelraked, ppr. keelraking. Same as keelhaut.

keel-shaped (kē'l'shāpt), a. In bot., having the form of a keel; carinate.

keelson, kelson (kē'l'son), n. [Also kilson, and formerly kelvino; < Sw. kölvin = Dan. kjölvinn = D. kolsen, kolswyn (Sewel) = East Fries. köl-swin = L.G. kielswien, kielachwin = G. kiel-schwein, keelson; appar. with corruption of the second element (simulating Sw. Dan. svin = G. schwein = E. swine), which appears in what is prob. the correct form in Norw. kjölvitill, keelson, < kjöll, keel, + svill, sill, = Icel. syll, svill = Sw. syll, dial. svill = Dan. syld = G. schwelle = E. sill: see keel¹ and sill.] A line of jointed timbers in a ship laid on the middle of the floor-timbers over the keel, fastened with long bolts and clinched, thus binding the floor-timbers to the keel; in iron ships, a combination of plates corresponding to the keelson-timber of a wooden vessel. See cut under keel¹.

The top-mast to the kelvins then with halyards downe they drew.
Chapman, Illad, l.

Engine-keelson, boiler-keelson, heavy timbers placed fore and aft in the bilge of a steamer, on which the engines or boilers rest.—False keelson, a piece of timber fastened longitudinally over the top of the true keelson.—Inter-costal keelson, a short piece between the frames.—Rider keelson, an additional keelson above the main keelson, for the purpose of strengthening it.—Sister keelson, a timber placed alongside the main keelson and bolted to it.

keelvat (kē'l'vat), n. Same as keelfat.

keelyvine, n. See keelvino.

keen¹ (kēn), a. [< ME. keen, bold, bitter, sharp, < AS. cēne, rarely cyme, bold (used in this sense only) (= D. keen = OHG. kuoni, kuant, chuoni, chuone, MHG. küene, G. kühn, bold, daring; = Icel. kænn for kænn), wise, clever, able]: lit. 'able,' with orig. suffix -ya, < cann, inf. cunnan, be able, can: see can¹.] The physical sense 'sharp' has been developed from that of 'bold, eager.' 1. Bold; daring; brave; active: applied to men.

There-at Kotor was angry, & out of his wit!
Two kynges he kyld of the keene Grekes—Amphenor the furer, and the freke Durus.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7704.

Of Phocens the ferse men forthoughten hem all,
That euer thei fard to fight with Philip the keene.
Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. E. T. S.), l. 444.

2. Grim; fierce; savage; rapacious: applied to wild animals.

A wilderness that ful of wilde bestes as sene
Als lions, llyardes, and wolues keene.
Hampole, Prick of Conscience, l. 1324.

3. Vehement; earnest; eager; ardent; fierce; animated by or showing strong feeling or desire: as, a keen fighter; to be keen at a bargain.

He drank, and made the cuppe ful dene,
And aith he spake wordis keene.
M.S. Cantab. F. v. 48, t. 50. (Halliwell.)

Never did I know
A creature that did bear the shape of man
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
Shak., M. of V., III, 2, 278.

The sheep were so keen upon the acorns.
Sw. R. L'Estrange.

The school has obtained so high a reputation that the demand for admission is very keen.
Quarterly Rev., CXLV, 325.

4. Such as to cut or penetrate easily; having a very sharp point or edge; sharp; acute: as, a keen edge.

Sedar was sorry for sake of his coyn,
Carue coyn at Castor with a keene sword.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 1388.

A bow he bar and arwes brighte and keene.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1108.

Still with their fires Love tipt his keenest darts.
Tennyson, Fair Women.

Gleams, quick and keen, the scalping-knife.
Widdler, Mogg Megone, l.

5. Sharp or irritating to the body or the mind; acutely harsh or painful; biting; stinging; tingling.

Whi sayst thou thanne I am to the so keene?
Chaucer, Fortune, l. 37.

Although I tell him keen truth, yet he may beare with me, since I am like to chafe him into some good knowledge.
Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

Genial days Shall softly glide away into the keen
And wholesome cold of winter.
Bryant, Conjunction of Jupiter and Venus.

If our sense of the misery or emptiness of life became for some reason much more keen than it is, life would at last become intolerable to us.

J. A. Seelye, Nat. Religion, p. 52.

6. Having a cutting or incisive character or effect; penetrating; vigorous; energetic; vivid; intense: as, keen eyes; a keen look; a keen rebuke; keen-witted.

To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method.
Shak., Rich. III., l. 2, 115.

Their weekly trands his keen replies detect.
Dryden, Abs. and Achit., II, 1023.

7. Having or manifesting great mental acuteness; characterized by great quickness or penetration of thought; sharply perceptive: as, a keen logician or debater; keen insight.

For keen and polished rhetoric he is singularly unfitted.
De Quincy, Rhetoric.

The keen intelligence with which the meaning was sought should be the test of the seeker's being entitled to possess the secret treasure.
Hawthorne, Septimius Felton, p. 129.

On the keen jump. See jump¹.—Keen. See acute, sharp, and list under eager¹.

keen¹ (kēn), v. t. [< keen¹, a.] 1. To make keen or sharp; sharpen. [Rare.]

Cold winter keens the brightening flood.
Thomson

2. To chafe, as the hands. [Prov. Eng.] keen² (kēn), n. [< Ir. caoine, a cry of lamentation for the dead.] A loud lamentation made over the dead; a wailing. [Ireland.]

A thousand cries would swell the keen,
A thousand voices of despair
Would echo thine.
Owen Ward.

keen² (kēn), v. t. [< keen², n.] 1. To make a loud lamentation over the dead; lament; wail. [Ireland.]

From the road outside there came a prolonged ear-piercing wail, that made the window-panes tremble. I have never heard any earthly sound at once so expressive of utter despair, and appealing to heaven or hell for vengeance. . . . "It is the loud Irish women *keen*ing over their dead."
G. A. Lawrence, Guy Livingston, xviii.

Customs that have hardly disappeared from Finland and Ireland, or are fresh in tradition, existed in both countries, such as . . . *keen*ing and wailing the dead.

The Century, XXXVII, 372.

2. To wail over any loss, or in anticipation of loss.

Was it for this that I *keen*ed over the cold hearthstone at Garoopa, when we sold it to the Brentwoods?
H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtons, vii.

The wind shifts to the west. Peace, peace, Banahoe—*keen*ing at every window. Charlotte Brontë, Villetta, xiii.

keena (kē'nā), n. [E. Ind.] An East Indian tree, Calophyllum tomentosum. Its timber supplies the valuable poon spars of western India, and its seeds yield keena-oil.

keena-nut (kē'nū-nut), n. The oil-bearing seed of the keena.

keena-oil (kē'nū-oil), n. An oil extracted in Ceylon from the seeds of the drupaceous fruit of the keena.

keener (kē'nēr), n. [< keen², v., + -er¹.] One who keens; especially, a woman who keens or wails as a hired or professional mourner at wakes and funerals. See keen², v. [Ireland.]

keenly (kēn'lī), adv. [< ME. keenly, konly, keneliche, < AS. cēnlīce (= MD. kenelich, D. kenelike; = MHG. keneliche, G. kühnliche), boldly, < cēne, bold: see keen¹, a.] In a keen manner; eagerly; sharply; with keenness or intensity; acutely.

keenness (kēn'nes), n. The state or quality of being keen in any sense of that word; sharpness; acuteness; intensity.

keen-witted (kēn'wit'ed), a. Having acute wit or discernment.

keep (kēp), v.; pret. and pp. kept, ppr. keeping. [< ME. kepen, kipein, < AS. cēpan (pret. cēpte, pp. cēped, cēpt) (= MD. kepen), observe, keep, take care of, regard, await, take. AS. cēpan in this sense is usually supposed to be a diff. use of cēpan, cēpan, traffic, sell (cf. cedpian, traffic), < cedp, price, bargain (see cheap, n. and v.); but such connection is very doubtful. Cf. kip¹.] I. trans. 1. To observe; heed; regard; attend to; care for; be solicitous about.

Psyche counsel as thou lythes keps I none of,
That will lede me to lose, & my lond hoole.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 11340.

While the stars and course of heaven I keep.
Dryden, Amcl., vi, 474.

2. To observe or carry out in practice; perform; fulfil: as, to keep the laws; to keep the sabbath-day; to keep one's word or promise.

Then keppit was the counsell of Calcas belyue.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 4092.

Keep hospitality amonge thy Neighbour.
Booke of Precedences (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), l. 71.

When thou borrowest, keep thy day though it be to thy payne.

Robert Beak (E. E. T. S.), p. 98.

But, abstracting from the reason, let us consider who keeps the precept best.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1838), II. 265.

3. To celebrate or observe with all due formalities or rites; solemnise: as, to keep Lent.

The day is very solemnly kept in all the Cities.

Coryat, Crudities, I. 103.

This day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord.

Here am I come down to what you call keep my Christmas.

Walpole, Letters, II. 139.

4. To hold; have or carry on: as, to keep court; to keep an act at a university.

In the same Towne there ys a merkett, wekely kept, and havyng in yt about M.D. houselyng people.

English Glasse (E. E. T. S.), p. 222.

Chambery . . . is the Capitall City of Savoy, wherein they keep their Parliament.

Coryat, Crudities, I. 79.

5. To tend; care for; have the charge, oversight, or custody of.

They did apoynt four men of the manner to keep the wood, for the proffit of the tenants commodity of the manner.

English Glasse (E. E. T. S.), p. 437.

Humble, and like in eche degree
The flocks which he did keep.

Spenser, Shep. Cal., July.

And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.

The shadow cloak'd from head to foot,
Who keeps the keys of all the creeds.

Tennyson, In Memoriam, xxiii.

6. To guard; protect; preserve; especially, to maintain inviolate or intact; preserve from danger, mishap, loss, decay, etc.: as, to keep the peace.

I schal thee take a trows fore
That trewly schal *keep*en thee
While in erthe thou schalt be.

King Horn (E. E. T. S.), p. 76.

And behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.

In yon strait path a thousand
May well be stopp'd by three.
Now who will stand on other hand,
And keep the bridge with me?

Macaulay, Horatius.

There heroc's wits are kept in pond'rous vases,
And beaux' in snuff-boxes and tweezer-cases.

Pope, R. of the L., v. 115.

7. To retain or hold possession of; retain in one's own power or possession; continue to have, hold, or enjoy; retain: as, he got it to keep; to keep a thing in mind; to keep a secret; to keep one's own counsel.

Thet cone wel wynnens lond of Strangers, but thci cone not *keep*en it.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 252.

My Memory hath kept the bad, and let go the good.

Hovell, Letters, I. vi. 51.

Keep a thing, its use will come.

The remotest descendant of a continental noble keeps all the privileges of nobility; the remote descendant of an English peer has no privilege beyond his faint chance of succeeding to the peerage.

E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 300.

8. To have habitually in stock or for sale.

A . . . housewife of the neighborhood burst breathless into the shop, fiercely demanding yeast: . . . the poor gentlewoman, with her cold shyness of manner, gave her hot customer to understand that she did not keep the article.

Hawthorne, Seven Gables.

9. To have habitually in attendance or use; employ or maintain in service, or for one's use or enjoyment: as, to keep three servants; to keep a horse and carriage.

Thou dost not keep a dog Whom I would imitate.

Shak., T. of A., iv. 3, 300.

We dined there the next day, and went on the lake in a boat, which they keep in order to bring wood from the other side.

Poole, Description of the East, II. l. 69.

I keep but a man and a maid, ever ready to slander and steal.

Tennyson, Maud, iv.

10. To maintain; support; provide for; supply with whatever is needed.

What shall become of my poor family?
They are no sheep, and they must keep themselves.

Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, III. 2.

Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee.

Mardon, Jonson, and Chapman, Eastward Ho.

"When they found that 'ere boy," continued Sol, "he was all worn to skin and bone; he'd kept himself a week on berries and chestnuts and such, but a boy can't be kept on what a squirrel can."

H. B. Snow, Oldtown, p. 224.

11. To maintain or carry on, as an establishment, institution, business, etc.; conduct; manage: as, to keep a school or a hotel; to keep shop; to keep house.

A wif is keepers of thyn houseboudrye;
Well may the alke man bivalle and wepe,
Ther as ther nys no wif the hous to keep.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 136.

If he love her not, . . .
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

Shak., Hamlet, II. 2, 167.

The court also sent for Mrs. Hutchinson, and charged her with divers matters, as her keeping two public lectures every week in her house.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 294.

This is the only House in Paris I saw kept, in all the parts of it, with the most exact cleanliness and neatness, Gardens and all.

Liter. Journey to Paris, p. 185.

12. To receive; go to meet; receive as a friend or guest.

Hastily that lady hende,
Cumand al her men to wende,
And light than in their best aray,
To keep the King that ilk day.

Str. Yvonne, M.S. Cotton, ap. Warton, III. 108, 181. (Hamlet.)

Again the coming of Jesus Christ
To keep him when he doun sal come.

Lampade, Prick of Conscience, l. 5022.

13. To take in and provide for; entertain.

Call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term,
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Shak., Hen. V., II. 1, 83.

14. To hold; detain: as, what keeps him here?

How much a dunce that has been sent to room
Exceeds a dunce that has been kept at home.

Cowper, Progress of Error, l. 416.

Excuse me for having kept you so long.

Bulwer, Money, III. 5.

Lunatics who are dangerous to society are kept in confinement.

E. W. Lane, Modern Egyptians, I. 291.

15. To hold or hold back; restrain.

In chamber among ladies bryth,
Kepe thy tongue & spende thy syth.

Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 15.

I have kept you from a crying sin would damn you
To mon and time.

Fletcher and Rowley, Maid in the Mill, v. 2.

How hard it is when a man meets with a Poole to keep his tongue from folly! Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

16. To continue, or continue to maintain or preserve, as a state or course of action: as, to keep the same road; to keep step.

He kept his course along the coast of the Kingdoms of Sicilia.

Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 7.

Her servants' eyes were fix'd upon her face,
And, as she mov'd or turn'd, her motions view'd,
Her measures kept, and step by step pursued.

Dryden.

Justice is an old lame hobbling beldame, and I can't get her to keep pace with Generosity for the soul of me.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, iv. 1.

17. To cause to be or continue in some specified state, condition, action, or course: as, to keep the coast clear; to keep things in order.

In the Time of this Sedition, the Duke of Lancaster had been sent into Scotland, to keep the Scots quiet.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 140.

In each City is an Officer that hath charge of the wale, whereby they are kept faire and strong.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 436.

They [Chinese women] are kept constantly to their work, being fine Needle-Women, and making many curious Embroideries.

Danbyer, Voyages, I. 408.

The sounds we are hearing tend very decidedly to keep out of consciousness other sounds of which we wish to think.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 98.

We could not keep him silent; out he flash'd!

Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien.

18. To stay or remain in; refrain from leaving: as, to keep the house; to keep one's bed.

If any infected person, commanded to keep house, shall contrarie to such Commandment wilfully and contemptuously gon abroad, etc.

Lives of James I. (1603), quoted in Ribton-Turner's [Vagrants and Vagrancy], p. 135.

The Prince had newly got a Fall off a Horse, and kept his Chamber.

Have you observ'd a sitting Hare,
List'ning, and fearful of the Storm
Of Horns and Hounds, clap back her Ear, Afraid to keep or leave her Form?

Prior, The Dove, st. 13.

19. To maintain habitually: same as keep up.

It [the river] keepeth almost as terrible a noyse as the river Cooitus in Hall.

Coryat, Crudities, I. 85.

20. To scare away: same as keep off: as, to keep crows. [Prov. Eng.]—21. To maintain a regular record of or in; have or take charge of entering or making entries in: as, to keep accounts; to keep the books of a firm; to keep a diary.

The Governor or chief of the Factory ought to know more than barely how to buy, sell, and keep accounts.

Dampier, Voyages, II. l. 103.

To keep a good house, a length, a line. See the nouns.

—To keep an act, to hold an academical disputation. See act, n., 5.

The students of the first class that have been these four years trained up in University learning . . . have lately kept two solemn Acts for their Commencement.

Mass. Hist. Coll., I. 245.

To keep an eye on, to keep at arm's-length, to keep a term. See the nouns.—To keep back. (a) To reserve; withhold; fail to deliver, disclose, or communicate.

I will keep nothing back from you.

A certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession, and kept back part of the price. Acts v. 2.

(b) To restrain; hold back.

Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins.

A conscientious praise of God will keep us back from all false and mean praises, all fulsome and servile flatteries, such as are in use among men.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. 1.

To keep chapel, at Oxford and Cambridge, in England, to attend service in the college chapel.

The Undergraduate is expected to go to chapel eight times, or, in academic parlance, to keep eight chapels a week.

C. A. Bristol, English University, p. 32.

To keep company, compass, consort, count. See the nouns.—To keep counsel, to keep secret the matter and result of a confidential discussion; be discreet or silent.—To keep out with, to follow the example of.

O that a boy should so keep out with his mother, and be given to dissembling!

Middleton, More Dissemblers Besides Women, I. 4.

To keep down, to prevent from rising; hold in subjection; restrain. Specifically—(a) In painting, to subdue in tone or tint, so that the portion of a picture kept down is rendered subordinate to some other part, and therefore does not obtrude on the eye of the spectator. (b) In printing, to set in lower-case type, as a word or initial letter.—To keep early or late hours, to be customarily early or late (as the case may be) in returning home or in going to bed. See hour.

What early philosophic hours he keeps.

How regular his meals, how sound he sleeps!

Cowper, Retirement, l. 428.

To keep house. See house!.—To keep in. (a) To prevent from escaping; hold in confinement; specifically, to detain (a pupil) in the schoolroom after hours, either as a punishment for misconduct or in order that a lesson may be mastered. (b) To conceal; avoid telling or disclosing. (c) To restrain; curb, as a horse.—To keep it up, to continue anything vigorously, especially a frolic; persist in merriment. [Colloq.]

We keep it up for half an hour, or an hour . . . if the browns tumble in well.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 57.

To keep off, to hinder from approach or attack: as, to keep off an enemy or an evil.

If they would not do his Commandments, but despise his Statutes and abhor his Judgments, all the care and policy they could use would not be able to keep off the most diabolical judgments which ever befell a Nation.

Stillington, Sermons, II. iv.

Far beyond,
Imagined more than seen, the skirts of France. . . .
"God bless the narrow sea which keeps her off."

Tennyson, Princess, Conclusion.

To keep one at a distance. See distance.—To keep one going in (something), to keep one supplied with (it).

He kept us going in sherry. F. W. Farrar, Julian Home.

To keep one's countenance, distance, foot. See the nouns.—To keep one's feet, to maintain one's footing; avoid falling.

It was with the greatest difficulty that she kept her feet.

Lever, One of Them, p. 444.

To keep one's hand in, to keep up one's acquirements; maintain one's skill by practice.—To keep one's self to one's self, to shun society; keep one's own counsel; keep aloof from others; keep close.

"Stay then a little," answered Julian, "here, And keep yourself, none knowing, to yourself."

Tennyson, Lover's Tale, iv.

To keep open house. See house!.—To keep out, to hinder from entering or taking possession.

No iron gate, no spiked and panelled door,
Can keep out death, the postman, or the bore.

O. W. Holmes, A Modest Request.

To keep the bones green. See green!.—To keep the crown of the canopy. See crown.—To keep the field, the house, the peace, etc. See the nouns.—To keep the land aboard (west).—To keep the land, to continue close to the wind.

—To keep time, touch, etc. See the nouns.—To keep under, to restrain; hold in subjection or under control.

Need and poverty doth hold down and keep under stout courages, and maketh them patient purfours, taking from them bold and rebelling stomachs.

Sp. Tr. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), I.

I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection.

The fire was kept under for the rest of the day, but all attempts to extinguish it were vain.

Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., xv.

To keep up. (a) To support; hold in an existing state or condition; prevent from lapsing: as, to keep up the price of goods; to keep up one's credit.

Ptolemy had been a soldier from his infancy, and consequently kept up a proper military force, that made him everywhere respected in these warlike and unsettled times.

Brue, Source of the Nile, I. 457.

He would undertake to prove before a committee of the House of Commons that there existed a combination to keep up the price of muffins.

Dieters, Nicholas Nickleby, II.

(b) To maintain; continue; prevent cessation of.

Little disputes and quarrels . . . are chiefly kept up and bandied to and fro by those who have nothing else to do.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. xxiv.

In joy, that which keeps up the action is the desire to continue it. Looks.

(e) To maintain in good order or condition: as, to pay so much a year to keep up a grave.—To keep up to the collar, to keep hard at work; "keep at it": in allusion to the straining of a working horse against his collar. [Colloq.]

Not that he neglected these [the proper studies of the place], for Hardy kept him pretty well up to the collar, and he passed his little go creditably.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Oxford, II. xii.

=Syn. 7, etc. Keep, Retain, Reserve. Keep is a very general idiomatic word, meaning, in this relation, not to dispose of or part with; hold on to: as, to sell half and keep half. Retain covers the idea of not giving up where there is occasion or opportunity: as, to surrender on condition that the officers retain their side-arms. To reserve is to keep back at a time or in an act in which other things are given up; also, to keep back for a time: as, to reserve judgment.

They only fail, that strive to move,
Or lose, that care to keep.

Owen Meredith, Wanderer, III.
Why should not man,
Retaining still divine similitude
In part, from such deformities be free?
Milton, P. L., xi. 612.

Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me? Gen. xxvii. 26.

These jests are out of season;
Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Shak., C. of E., I. 2, 69.

6. Keep, Defend, Protect, Shelter, Preserve. Keep is the general word in this relation also. To defend is to keep by warding off attacks; the word does not so much imply success as the others do. To protect is to keep by covering from danger. To shelter is to keep by covering on one side, or on all sides, especially above, from exposure. Shelter seems figurative when not applied to keeping from exposure to the weather, and protect and defend when not applied to the physical. To preserve is in various senses to protect or keep from destruction or injury: as, to preserve forests, the bank of a river, fruit, vested rights, life, or one's dignity.

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.
Ps. cxxi. 4.

Nor could the Muse defend
Her son.
In youth it shattered me,
And I'll protest it now.
G. P. Morris, Woodman, Spare that Tree!

History has sometimes been called a gallery, where in living forms are preserved the scenes, the incidents, and the characters of the past. Sumner, Orations, I. 201.

2 and 3. Observe, Commemorate, etc. See celebrate.

II. Intrans. 1. To care; be solicitous.
"Sir preest," he sayde, "I kepe han [to have] no loos
Of my craft, for I wolde it kept were close."
Chaucer, Canon's Yeoman's Tale, I. 357.

The third me thinks shruggingly saith, I kept not to sit asleep with my Poetie till a Queene came and kissed me.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetie, p. 15.

2. To take care; be on the watch; be heedful.

Keep that the lusts shake not the word of God that is in us.
Tyndale.

3. To lodge; dwell; hold one's self, as in an abiding-place. [Now colloq. or rare.]

Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps.
Shak., Tit. And., v. 2, 5.

The Tarentines [Indians] . . . rifled a wigwam where Mr. Craddock's men kept to catch sturgeon, took away their nets and biscuit, &c. Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 72.

But yet he could not keep
Here with the shepherds and the silly sheep.
M. Arnold, Thyrsis.

He was foolish enough to tell where these quail kept in his orchard. Forest and Stream, XXVIII. 252.

4. To keep one's self; remain; stay; continue:
as, to keep at a distance; to keep in with some one; to keep out of sight; hence, in familiar speech, used with a present participle almost as an auxiliary of continuous or repeated action:
as, he keeps moving; she kept crying out; they have kept asking for it this hour past.

Those that are married already, all but one, shall live;
the rest shall keep as they are. Shak., Hamlet, III. 1, 106.

The Privateers keep out of their way, having always intelligence where they [the Barlaventa fleet] are.
Dampier, Voyages, II. II. 128.

We kept down the left bank of the river for a little distance, and then struck into the woods.
B. Taylor, Northern Travels, p. 48.

Innumerable instances are known to every naturalist of species keeping true, or not varying at all, although living under the most opposite climates.

Darwin, Origin of Species, p. 189.

All the place is holy ground; . . .
So keep where you are: you are foul with sin.
Tennyson, The Poet's Mind.

5. To last; endure; continue unimpaired.

If the malt is not thoroughly dried, the ale it makes will not keep.
Mortimer, Husbandry.

The best fruits of the season fall latest and keep the longest.
Alcott, Tablets, p. 134.

The dam was a subject of conversation that would keep.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, I. 3.

To keep at it, to continue hard at work; persist. [Colloq.]—To keep dark. See dork.—To keep from, to abstain from; refrain from; refrain away from.

I should kick, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,
You would keep from my heels. Shak., C. of E., III. 1, 19.

To keep in with. See in, adv.—To keep on, to go forward; proceed; continue to advance.

The Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontic and the Hellespont.

Shak., Othello, III. 2, 455.

To keep to, to adhere strictly to; avoid neglecting or deviating from: as, to keep to old customs; to keep to a rule; to keep to one's word or promise.

Not finding the Governor keep to his agreement with me;
nor seeing by his carriage towards others any great reason
I had to expect he would, I began to wish my self away again.

Dampier, Voyages, I. 618.

Well, if they had kept to that, I should not have been such an enemy to the stage. Sheridan, The Critic, I. 1.

To keep up, to remain unsubdued, as by illness, age, or grief; be yet active, or not confined to one's bed; not to fall behind. [Colloq.]

keep (kēp), v. [ME. kepe, heed, care; < keep, v.]

1. Heed; notice; care.
We love no man that taketh kepe or charge
Where that we goon; we wol ben at our larges.
Chaucer, Prologue to Wife of Bath's Tale, I. 821.

Youth is least looked vnto when they stand [in] most needs of good kepe and regard.

Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 50.

And unto Morpheus comes, whom drowned deepe
In drowale fit he findes: of nothing he takes kepe.
Spenser, F. Q., I. 1. 40.

2. Custody; keeping; oversight.
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is.
Shak., T. of the S., I. 2, 118.

If the justice have the maid in keep,
You need not fear the marriage of your son.
B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, III. 2.

3. That which is kept or cared for; charge.
Often he used of hys keepe
A sacrifice to bring,
Nowe with a Klilde, now with a sheepe,
The Altars hallowing.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., July.

4. The stronghold or citadel of a medieval castle; the innermost and strongest structure or central tower. It was the final dependence for keeping the castle against assault.
In the lower parts of the structure prisoners were kept,
with stores, etc.;
and in the upper parts the family lived, especially in times of danger.
Also called dungeon or dunjon, dungeon-keep, or dungeon-tower. See dunjeon, dunjon.

It stands on a knowle, which, tho'
insensibly rising, gives it a prospect over the keepe of Windesor, about three miles N. E. of it.

Evelyn, Memoirs, [Oct. 23, 1694.]

My malice is no deeper than a moat,
No stronger than a wall: there is the keep;
He shall not cross us more. Tennyson, Geraldine.

5. Subsistence; board and lodging; maintenance or means of subsistence: as, the keep of a horse. [Colloq.]

I performed some services to the college in return for my keep.
T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Oxford, I. viii.

Moreover, we could not bear the idea that she should labor for her keep. R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xlv.

6. pl. In coal-mining, wings, catches, or rests for holding the cage when it is brought to rest at some point above the bottom of the shaft. See cage-shuts.—7. A meat-safe. Halliwel. [Prov.
Eng.]—8. A large basket. [Prov. Eng.]—9.

A reservoir for fish by the side of a river.
[Prov. Eng.]—For keeps, to be kept or retained; to be held or retained as one's own: for good: as, to play marbles for keeps (that is, each player to retain the marbles he wins). [U. S.]

We, the undersigned, promise not to play marbles for keeps, nor bet nor gamble in any way.

The Advance, Dec. 9, 1886.

Out at keep, feeding in a hired pasture. Halliwel.
[Prov. Eng.]

keeper (kē'pér), n. [ME. keperre; < keep, v., + -er.] 1. One who keeps, observes, or obeys.

I am a keeper of the law
In some sma' points, altho' not a'.
Burns, Verses to John Rankine.

2. One who has the charge or keeping of anything; a caretaker; a custodian: often forming the second element of a compound: as, the

Keep or Donjon of the Castle of Coucy, France, as seen from the inner court.

keeper of the seals; a housekeeper; a gamekeeper.

Hit speketh of riche men ryght nouht ne of riche lordes,
Bote of cleunnesse and of clerkes and keepers of beuten.
Piers Plowman (C), xv. 68.

And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother?
And he said, I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?
Gen. iv. 2.

Young Logie's laid in Edinburgh chapel,
Carmichael's the keeper of the key.
The Laird o' Logie (Child's Ballads, IV. 110).

The persecuted animals [rats] bolted above-ground: the terrier accounted for one, the keeper [gamekeeper] for another.

Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xiv.

3. One who maintains or carries on as proprietor; an owner or independent controller: as, a storekeeper; an innkeeper.

Now here is a man . . . who is really nothing but a weakly, aged keeper of a little shoe-store in a village.
W. M. Baker, Tom Timothy, p. 167.

4. One who stays or abides.

To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home. Titus II. 5.

5. One who holds or maintains possession.
He will have need of getters and keepers.
L. Wallace, Ben-Hur, p. 228.

6. That which keeps; something that serves as a guard or protection. Specifically—(a) A ring which keeps another on the finger. See guard-ring.

Quite devoid of any jeweller's ware, save her wedding ring and keeper. G. A. Sala, Riddington Peasage, II. 111.

(b) A key which admits of being readily inserted and removed at pleasure to keep an object in its place.

It [a glove-fastener] has a cylindrical keeper with one lower edge struck up to form a lip, and a radial locking bar, with a series of teeth on the under surface, adapted to project through the keeper and engage the lip.
Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 408.

(c) A loop on the end of a strap fitted with a buckle, through which the other end is run after passing through the buckle; a small clasp. (d) The box on a door-jamb into which the bolt of a lock protrudes when shot. (e) A jam-nut. (f) A piece of soft iron placed in contact with the poles of a magnet when not in use, which tends, by induction, to maintain and even increase the power of the magnet; an armature. (g) In the electromagnet of a dynamo, one of the lateral projections from the polar extremities to bring them just as near to the revolving armature as they can be without actually touching it. (h) A reel-keeper. (i) The mousing of a hook, which keeps it from being accidentally disengaged. (j) The gripper of the flint in a flint-lock gun.—Keeper of the Great Seal, or Lord Keeper, a high officer of state in Great Britain, who has the custody of the great seal. The office is now vested in the lord chancellor.—Keeper of the king's conscience, the lord chancellor. See chancellor, 3 (a).—Keeper of the Privy Seal, or Lord Privy Seal, a British officer of state, through whose hands pass all charters, pardons, etc., before they come to the great seal. He is a privy-councillor, and was formerly called Clerk of the Privy Seal.

keeperess (kē'pér-ess), n. [< keeper + -ess.] A female keeper, custodian, or warden.

In Drayton House [a lunatic asylum] the keeperesses eclipsed the keepers in cruelty to the poorer patients.
C. Reade, Hard Cash, xii.

keeperless (kē'pér-less), a. [< keeper + -less.] Without the supervision or care of a keeper; free from restraint, custody, or superintendencence.

Among the group was a man . . . who, of all the people accounted sane and permitted to go about the world keeperless, I hold to have been the most decidedly mad.
T. Hook, Gilbert Gurney, I. III.

keepership (kē'pér-ship), n. [< keeper + -ship.]
The office of a keeper.

The earl gave the former a tan-house, and keepership of one of his games. Stryke, Queen Mary, an. 1558.

keep-friend, n. [< keep, v., + obj. friend.]
An iron ring with a chain attached, used to confine a prisoner.

And he had besides two iron rings about his neck, the one of the chain, and the other of that kind which are called a keep-friend, or the foot of a friend, from whence descended two irons unto his middle.

History of Don Quixote, 1678, I. 45. (Nerves.)

keeping (kē'ping), n. [< ME. kypinge; verbal
n. of keep, v.] 1. Care; custody; charge.

This maiden was the fairest lady that ever was in any londe; this same maiden hadde in keepinge the blessed saint Graal.
Martin (E. E. T. S.), II. 220.

He swore us thus, never to let this treasure
Part from our secret keepings.
Fletcher, Loyal Subject, II. 6.

This morning I wrote to my banker in London to send me certain jewels he has in his keeping—hair-locks from the ladies of Thornfield.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxiv.

2. Guardian care; guard; watch.

In that Cesonne, that the Bawme is growynge, Men put there to [thareto] gode keepynge, that no Man dar ben hardy to entre.
Manderly, Travels, p. 60.

3. Maintenance; support; subsistence; feed;
fodder: as, the cattle have good keeping.

Call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox?
Shak., As you Like It, I. 1, 8.

4. Just proportion; conformity; congruity; consistency; harmony; as, his words are not in keeping with his deeds.

B—would have been more in keeping if he had abided by the faith of his forefathers.

Lamb, Imperfect Sympathies.

Her lord and master, in the spotless whiteness of his ruffles on wrist and bosom, and in the immaculate keeping and neatness of all his clerical black, and the perfect pose of his grand full-bottomed clerical wig, did honor to her conjugal cares.

H. B. Stines, Oldtown, p. 380.

The "Rape of the Lock." For wit, fancy, invention, and keeping, it has never been surpassed.

Louell, Study Windows, p. 407.

He did not offer to stab me and sink my body in the Grand Canal, as, in all Venetian keeping, I felt that he ought to have done.

Hovell, Venetian Life, II.

Upon one's keeping, upon one's guard.

I doo promise you that I am upon me keeping every day.

M. S. Letter, dated 1662. (Nares.)

keeping-room (kē'ping-rōm), n. The common sitting-room of a family; also, in English universities, the sitting-room of a student. [New Eng. and prov. Eng.]

All the attractions of a house were concentrated in one room: it was kitchen, chamber, parlor, and keeping-room.

Thorau, Walden, p. 381.

Like many other buildings of the same date and style, that which was designated as the keeping-room or parlour was the passage of the house.

J. Freeman, W. Kirby, p. 219.

keep-off (kēp'ōf), a. and n. I. a. Intended or adapted to keep a foe at a distance; hence, long; reaching far.

He fought not with a keep-off spear, or with a farre-shot bow.

Chapman, Iliad, vii.

II. n. A guard; defense; something to keep a foe at a distance.

A lance then took he, with a keene, Steele head,

To be his keep-off, both 'gainst men and dogges.

Chapman, Odyssey, xiv.

keepsake (kēp'sāk), n. [Irreg. < keep, v., + sake.] Anything kept or given to be kept for the sake of the giver; a token of friendship. The word was used as the title of some of the holiday gift-books formerly published annually. See annual, n., 4.

And now! ah, I see it—you just now are stooping

To pick up the keepsake intended for me.

Keats, To Some Ladies, on Receiving a Curious Shell.

I have before me the Keepsake for the year 1831, . . . a collection much lower in point of interest and ability than the worst number of the worst shilling magazine of the present day. . . . Somewhere about the year 1837 the world began to kick at the Keepsake, and they gradually got extinguished. Then the lords and countesses put away their verses and . . . wrote no more.

W. Beant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 194.

keep-worthy (kēp'wēr'wē), a. Worthy of being kept or preserved. [Rare.]

Other keep-worthy documents.

W. Taylor, Survey of German Poetry, I. 182.

kees (kēs), n. [Ar. kis.] The Egyptian purse, a sum of five hundred piasters or about twenty-five dollars. See purse.

keesh, n. See *kish*².

keeslip (kēs'lip), n. A Scotch form of keslop.

keethie (kēs'thi), n. [Origin obscure.] A certain fish, the angler, Lophius piscatorius. [Scotch.]

keeve (kēv), n. [Also keave, kieve, kioe; < ME. keve*, kiove, < AS. cyfe, a tub or vat.] A large vat or tub used for various purposes, as for dressing ores in mining, for holding the lye in bleaching (in which sense it is also called a keir), as a brewers' mashing-tub, etc.

keove (kēv), v. t.; pret. and pp. keoved, ppr. keoving. [< keene, n.] 1. To put in a keeve for fermentation, etc.—2. To overturn or lift up, as a cart, so as to unload it all at once. [Prov. Eng.]

keover (kē'vēr), n. A keeve. Also kiver.

kefekil, n. See kiefekil.

kefiah (kē'fī-ā), [Ar.] The head-dress of the men of the Bedouin or desert tribes of the Moslem East. They do not wear the turban, but a kerchief secured directly upon the head by a cord called an ahel. The kerchief is generally worn cornerwise, so that two corners fall upon the shoulders, and can be drawn over the face or the back of the head at pleasure.

The red and yellow kefiah, folded and tied in hereditary fashion about his swarthy face and over his neck and shoulders by the Bedouin Arab of the desert.

Encyc. Brit., VI. 460.

keg (keg), n. [Also (dial.) cag; < Icel. kaggi = Sw. Norw. kagge, a keg, a round mass or heap.] 1. A small cask or barrel; a cask-shaped vessel of indefinite size, but in capacity less than half a barrel, usually from 5 to 10 gallons.—2. A lump; piece.

The surgeon cut to keggs (too big to handle whole)

Gives many a dainty bit out of his lusty jowl.

Drayton, Polyolbion, xrv.

keg, a small wooden cask, strongly made, large at the base, tapering to the top, with bung-hole and bung for taking out the water in the closed top: used to carry fresh water in small boats.—keg fig. See fig.—keg-leveling and -trussing machine, a machine for pressing and holding the staves in position for trussing.

kei-apple, kai-apple (kī'ap'pl), n. [< S. African kei or kai + E. apple.] 1. A tall evergreen shrub, Diospyros (Aberia) Caffra, of South Africa. It can be used for hedges, and yields an edible fruit.—2. The fruit of this shrub, which resembles a small yellowish apple. It serves for a pickle when green, and when ripe can be made into a preserve.

kelet, n. A Middle English form of *key*¹.

keight, n. An obsolete preterit of *catch*².

keil, n. An obsolete spelling of *keil*².

keilhaute (kī'hau'tē), n. [After Prof. Keil of Norway.] A rare Norwegian mineral, related to titanite in form; a silicetitanate of iron, aluminum, yttrium, and calcium.

keir, kier (kēr), n. [< Icel. ker = Sw. Dan. kar, a tub, vat, or other vessel, = OHG. char, MHG. kar, Goth. kas, a vessel, perhaps = L. vas (orig. vasat*), a vessel: see vaso, vessel.] In bleaching, a large boiler which contains the bleaching-liquor; the alkaline vat of a bleachery. See *ducking*³ and keove.

For yarn and thread, it is very usual to have the false bottom of the bleaching kier, or pot, movable.

Spons. Bryoz. Manuf., I. 515.

keisari, n. See kaiser, Cæsar. Shak., M. W. of W., I. 3, 9.

keillos (kī'lō-ŷ), n. [S. African.] The two-horned black rhinoceros of South Africa, Rhinoceros keillos, or Sloan's rhinoceros. The two horns are of nearly equal size, attaining a length of about a foot. The animal is about 11 feet long and 6 feet high. It is ill-tempered, and a very dangerous antagonist.

kekryphalos (ke-krif'ā-lōs), n. [< Gr. kekryphalos, a woman's head-dress, < κρυπτα (perf. κρυπτα), hide, cover: see crypt.] In Gr. antig., a simple form of female head-dress, consisting of a net, or a light cloth or kerchief, so placed about the head as to inclose the hair completely and almost without folds, and projecting behind in a graceful curve. It is common in works of art of the fifth and fourth centuries B. C., being beautifully illustrated on some Syracusan coins; and it is still worn in exactly the ancient form by many Greek peasant women.

Figure of Aphrodite, wearing the Kekryphalos.—From a polychrome kylix of the 5th century B. C., now in the British Museum.

keld, v. t. A Middle English form of cheld.

keld (keld), n. [< Icel. kelda = Sw. källa = Dan. kilde (cf. Finn. kaltio, < Scand.), a spring, fountain, well; from the verb represented by OHG. quellan, MHG. G. quellen, swell, spring, gush (AS. pp. collen, swollen), > quelle, a spring, fountain, source.] A spring. [North. Eng.]

keld, a. See kelled.

kelder (kē'dēr), n. [A var. of *keeler*², perhaps after the related *keld*¹.] A cooler; especially, a large vat or caldron used in brewing.

kelet, v. A Middle English form of *kelet*².

kelebe (kē'ē-bē), n. [< Gr. κελεβη (see def.)] In Gr. archaeol., a large ovoid, wide-mouthed vase, with a broad flat rim and two handles connecting the rim and the body, and not extending above the rim.

keif (keif), n. [Origin obscure.] A foolish fellow.

One squire Ennas, a great keif,

Some wandering hangman like himself.

Cotton, Works (1784), p. 85.

kelf (kelf), n. [Origin obscure.] In coal-mining, the vertical height of the back of the excavation in holing or undercutting the coal. [Derbyshire and Leicestershire, Eng.]

kelling, n. See *keeling*².

kelis (kē'lis), n. [NL.: see *cheloid*².] In pathol.: (a) Morphœa. (b) Cheloid. Also keloid.—Addison's kelis, morpheæ.

kelk¹ (kelk), n. [< ME. kelk, roe; cf. OHG. chelch, MHG. kelch, struma.] The roe of a fish. [Prov. Eng.]

Take the kelkes of tymba anon

And the liver of the tymba, sethe hom anon.

Lib. Ours Cocorum, p. 12.

kelk² (kelk), v. t. [Prob. imitative, like belk, belch.] To belch; also, to groan. [Prov. Eng.]

kelk³ (kelk), n. [Perhaps < Gael. and Ir. clach, a stone.] A large stone or detached rock. [Prov. Eng.]

kelk⁴ (kelk), v. t. [Supposed to have meant orig. 'stone, pelt with stones, < *kelk*³, n.] To beat soundly. [Prov. Eng.]

kelk⁵ (kelk), n. [< *kelk*⁴, v.] A blow. [Prov. Eng.]

kelk⁶ (kelk), n. [Cf. *keek*³.] 1. The wild cherry, Anthracis sylvestris.—2. The poison hemlock, Conium maculatum.—brood kelk, broad-leaved kelk, Haracolum Sphondylium.

kelk⁷ (kel), n. [A var. of *caul*¹, *caul*²: see *caul*¹.] A covering of some kind; a film or membrane; a network. [Obsolete or provincial in all uses.] Being found, He finde an urne of gold, t' enclose them, and betwixt

The ayre and them two *kel*s of fat lay on them.

Chapman, Iliad, xliii.

Specifically—(a) The caul or omentum.

I'll have him [the hart] out to the kel, then down the seams.

Beau. and Fl., Philaster, v. 4.

(b) The membrane or canl which sometimes envelops the head of a child at birth.

A silly jealous fellow, . . . seeing his child new born included in a kel, thought sure a Franciscan . . . was the father of it, it was so like a friar's wall.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 617.

(c) The chrysalis of an insect.

The o'ergrown trees among,

With caterpillars' kelles and dusky cobwebs hung.

Drayton, Polyolbion, III. 120.

(d) A net; especially, a net in which women inclose their hair; the back part of a cap.

Hir bair and hir breast was brochede alle over,

With kelles and with correnalle cleenliche arrayede.

Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 8250.

And as it falls out, many times

As knots been knitt on a kel,

Or merchant men gone to leese London,

Either to buy ware or sell.

Childs Maurice (Child's Ballads, II. 814).

(e) A film.

His wakeful eyes . . .

Now covered over with dim cloudy kelles.

Drayton, The Owl.

(f) One of the dew-covered threads often seen on the grass in the morning.

Neither the immoderate moisture of July, August, and September, nor those kelles, which, like cobwebs, do sometimes cover the ground, do beget the rot in sheep.

Boyle, Works, VI. 358.

kelk⁸ (kel), n. A variant of *kilk*², kiln.

kelk⁹, n. Same as kale, 2.

kelkaut, n. See kilkut.

kellock, n. See killock.

kelled (keld), a. [< *kel*¹ + -ed.] Having a kel or covering; having the parts united as by a kel or thin membrane; webbed. Also keld.

And feeds on fish, which under water still

He with his keld feet and keen teeth doth kill.

Drayton, Noah's Flood.

Kellia (kē'lī-ā), n. [NL., named after J. M. O'Kelly of Dublin.] The typical genus of Kellidae. The shell is small, thin, and rounded, with the ligament internal, the cardinal teeth 1 or 2 in number, and the lateral teeth 1-1 in each valve. There are numerous species, both recent and fossil, such as the British K. subreticularis and K. nitida.

Kellidae (kē'lī-ā-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Kellia + -idae.] A family of siphonate bivalve mollusks, typified by the genus Kellia. They are small but elegant bivalves, living in the crevices of rocks, or on shells or seaweeds, or lying free. Also written Kellidæ.

kellin (kē'līn), n. [Perhaps a corruption of *keeling*².] The ling. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

kellock (kē'lōk), n. See killock.

kellow (kē'lō), n. [Cf. kilow, collow.] Black-lead. [Prov. Eng.]

kelly (kē'lī), n. [Cf. colly.] In brick-making, surface-soil or mold. C. T. Davis, Bricks, etc., p. 108.

kelly (kē'lī), v. t.; pret. and pp. kelled, ppr. kellying. [< kelly, n.] In brick-making, to cover with soil or mold.

keloid (kē'lōid), n. Same as cheloid and kelis.

keloidal (kē-lōi'dal), a. [< keloid + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of keloid.

Slight keloidal growths sometimes follow in the wake of the largest vesicles.

Medical News, LIII. 442.

kelotomia, kelotomy (kē-lō-tō'mī-ā, kē-lō-tō'mī), n. See celotomy.

kelp (kelp), n. [Early mod. E. also kylp, kylp, < ME. kylp, a hook for a pot, also a sheath (orig. hilt?), < Icel. kylpr, a handle of a vessel, a loop; cf. kelpa, a trap for otters.] 1. A hook or crook by means of which a pot or kettle is hung over a fire. [Prov. Eng.]

A kylpe (var. kelpa) of a caldron, [L.] perpendiculum. Cath. Angl., p. 203.

3†. A sheath.

The fend that al this world wolde kille

His sword he pulte vp in his kelp.

Holy Rood (ed. Morris), p. 140.

kelp (kelp), n. [Also kylp; origin unknown.] 1. (a) Large seaweeds, such as are used in producing the manufactured kelp. In coast regions kelp is largely employed as a fertilizer, especially in the west of Ireland. It is composed chiefly of Phaeococcus and Laminaria. In New England it includes especially species of Laminaria called Rock-sage, Agarum Turner, the sea-collander, and Alaria esculenta, besides littoral species of Phaeus called rockweed.

As for the reits, kylps, tangle, and such like sea-weeds, Nicander saith they are as good as treasure.

Holland, tr. of Pliny, xxxii. 6.

A line of the sand-beach Covered with walls of the tide, with kelp and the slippery sea-weed.

Longfellow, Evangeline, v. 1.

(b) Specifically, the seaweed Macrocystis pyrifera, of the Pacific coast of North and South America, etc. Its tough, slender stems are said to grow sometimes more than 600 feet long. Ascending from submarine rocks, it reveals their presence to sailors; and it forms an extensive tangled mass which serves on exposed coasts as a natural breakwater.

There is one marine production which from its importance is worthy of a particular history; it is the kelp, or Macrocystis pyrifera.

Darwin, Voyage of the Beagle, p. 230.

2. The product of seaweeds when burned, from which carbonate of soda is obtained. It was formerly much used in the manufacture of glass and soap, and large quantities of iodine are now obtained from the residue after the carbonate of soda is separated.—Bull-head kelp, Nereocystis lutescens of northwestern America, the long filaments of which are used by the Indians for fishing-lines.—Great kelp, of California, the Macrocystis pyrifera. See def. 1 (b), above.—Kelp glass. See glass.—Kelp salt, a by-product of the manufacture of potash from the ashes of seaweeds. It contains sodium sulphate, carbonate, and chlorid, and small quantities of potassium sulphate. Formerly used in glass-making.—Rock-kelp. Same as rockweed. See def. 1 (a), above.

kelp (kelp), n. [Origin obscure.] A young crow. [Prov. Eng.]

kelp-fish (kelp'fish), n. 1. A blennioid fish, Heterostichus rostratus. It has a scaly body with a conspicuous lateral line, a small pointed head, and a very long dorsal fin with about 37 spines and 13 rays, the 5 anterior spines being wide apart, and separated from the rest by a notch. It attains a length of about 15 inches, and is common along the Pacific coast of America, from San Francisco to Santiago.

2. A labroid fish, Platygllossus nemictotus, with 9 dorsal spines, and of a greenish-brown color with bright reflections. It is common southward along the Lower Californian coast.—3. Any fish of the family Ditremitidae, found on the west coast of the United States.

kelp-goose (kelp'gōs), n. Chloephaga antartica of South America. Also called rock-goose.

kelpie, kelpy (kel'pi), n. [Origin unknown.] An imaginary spirit of the waters, generally appearing in the form of a horse, who was believed to give warning of approaching death by drowning, and sometimes maliciously to assist in drowning persons. [Scotch.]

These ponderous keys shall the kelpies keep,

And lodge in their caverns so dark and deep.

Queen Mary's Escape from Lochleven.

That birds are second-sighted is nae joke,

And ken the lingu of the spritual folk;

Faye, Spunkies, Kelpies, a, they can explain them.

Burns, Bride of Ayr.

kelp-pigeon (kelp'pij'gn), n. The sheathbill, Chionis alba, of the Falklands: so called by sailors from its size and white color and its habitual resorts.

kelp-whaling (kelp'hwā'ling), n. The pursuit of the California gray whale: so called from its resorts.

kelpwort (kelp'wört), n. The prickly glasswort, Salsola Kali, burned to produce barilla, a substance resembling kelp. See kelp, 2.

kelpy, n. See kelpie.

kelson, n. See keelson.

kelt, n. See Celt.

kelt (kelt), n. [Origin obscure.] A spent salmon—that is, one that has spawned. [Scotch.]

When they [salmon] are descending rivers after spawning, they are termed kelts or black salmon.

St. Nicholas, XIII. 740.

kelt (kelt), n. [Origin obscure.] Cloth made of black and white wool mixed and not dyed. Fairholt. [Scotch.]

Na dentie get this Doctor seekie—

Ane hamale hat, a coat of kelt.

Legend, Sp. St. Andria, Poems of 16th Cent., p. 237.

kelter, n. See kilter.

keltier (kel'tér), a. [kelt + -er.] Made of kelt. [Scotch.]

He put him on an old Keltier coat.

And Hose of the same above the knee.

Roosburgh Ballads, II. 250.

Keltic, Kelticism, etc. See Celtic, etc.

keltie, kalty (kel'ti), n. [Said to be so called from a famous champion drinker in Kinross-shire.] A large glass or bumper, imposed as a fine on those who, as it is expressed, do not drink fair. [Scotch.]—Cleared keltie off, having drunk one's glass quite empty, previous to drinking a bumper.

Fill a brimmer—this is my excellent friend Baille Nicol Jarvie's health. . . . Are ye a cleared keltie off? Fill anither.

Scott, Rob Roy, xxviii.

Keltie's mends. See mends.

kelyphite (kel'i-fti), n. [Gr. κελύφος, a sheath, case, + -ite².] An alteration-product forming a zone about crystals of pyrope, found in Bohemia. It nearly resembles serpentine in composition.

kembt (kem), v. t. [ME. kemben, < AS. kemban (= MD. kemben, D. kammen = LG. keimen = OHG. kemben, chempen, MHG. kemben, kemmen, G. kämmen = Icel. kemba = Dan. kjæmme = Sw. kamma), comb. < camb, comb: see comb, 1. Cf. comb, v. Hence pp. kempt, and the negative unkempt, the latter still common in literary use.] To comb.

He kembeth hisse lokkes brode and made him gay.

Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 188.

More kembed, and bathed, and rubbed, and trimmed.

B. Jonson, Catiline, l. 1.

kembt (kem), n. [A var. of comb = kame, after kemb, v.] A comb.

My alster Malsry came to me,

Wi' silver bason, and silver kemb,

To kemb my headle upon her knee.

Alison Grou (Child's Ballads, l. 170).

kembing (kem'ing), n. [Cf. kemelin, kimelling.] A brewing-vessel.

kembot, a. and v. See kimbo.

kembolli, kemboldi, n. Same as kimbo. See akimbo.

kembster (kem'stér), n. [Also kempster: < ME. kempstare, kemster (= OLG. kemstero); < kemb + -ster.] A woman who cleaned wool. Halliwel.

kemelin, kemlint, n. Same as kimnel.

kemest, n. A Middle English form of camis.

keming-stock, n. [< "keming" (a form of chimney) + stock.] The back of a chimney-grate.

He fell backward into the fyre.

And brake his head on the keming-stock.

Wyf of Aushermuchty (Child's Ballads, VIII. 120).

kemp (kemp), v. t. [A var. of camp (after kemp, n.): see camp, v.] To strive or contend in any way; strive for victory, as in the quantity of work done by reapers in the harvest-field. [Scotch and old Eng.]

There es no kyng undre Criste may kemps with hym one!

He will be Alexander ayre, that alle the erthe lowttede.

Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 2334.

kemp (kemp), n. [< ME. kempe, < AS. kempa (= OFries. kampa, kempa = Icel. kempa = Dan. kjæmpe = Sw. kämpe), a warrior: see camp, v., and champion.] 1†. A champion; a knight.

"O knight," quath the king, "what kemp is that like,

That wan so on my none is he so dough?"

William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3746.

2. The act of striving for superiority in any way. [Scotch.]

kemp (kemp), a. and n. [< ME. kempe, campe, shaggy, rough.] 1†. a. Shaggy; rough.

Lik a griffoun lokede he aboute

With kemps [var. kemped] heron on his browes stoute.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1576.

II. n. Coarse hair which is closely mingled with the finer hair or wool, and has to be separated from it before the manufacturing of fine goods, especially in goat's hair of choice and expensive kind.

An element in all bad-bred wool is the presence of kemps, a small white hair, which is very brittle and which will not take any dye.

Ure, Diet., IV. 976.

Also kempy.

kemp (kemp), n. [< ME. kempe, an eel; prob. a particular use, as also in def. 2, of kemp, a champion: see kemp, n.] 1. An eel. Prompt. Parv., p. 270; Palsgrave, 1530.—2. A boar.

kemp (kemp), n. [Cf. Sw. kämpar and kampergräs.] The ribwort-plantain, Plantago lanceolata, more especially the stalk and spike; also, the common plantain, Plantago major, and perhaps P. media.—See kamp, Plantago maritima, the sea-plantain. [Scotch.]

kemper (kem'pér), n. [= D. kemper = MLG. kemper = G. kämpfer = Dan. kæmper; as kemp, v., + -er.] One who kemps, or strives for superiority; specifically, one striving to complete the largest amount of work. [Scotch.]

Mark, I see naught to hinder you and me from helping to give a hot brow to this bevy of notable kempers.

Blackwood's Mag., Jan., 1821, p. 401.

kempery-man (kem'pér-i-man), n. [Appar. meant for kemping-man, < kemping (Sc. kempin), verbal n. of kemp, v.] A champion; a fighter.

Up then rose the kemperey men,

And loud they gan to crye:

Ah! traitors, yee have slayne our king,

And therefore yee shall dye.

King Banners (Child's Ballads, III. 170).

I only want an excuse like that for turning kempery-man—knight-errant, as those Norman puppies call it.

Kingsley, Hereward, l.

kemple (kem'pl), n. [Origin obscure.] A Scottish weight of straw, from 14 to 16 stone tron.

kemps (kemps), n. pl. [Pl. of kemp.] A children's game in which plantain-stems are the weapons, the object aimed at being to strike off the head. Compare cocks. [Scotch.]

kempster, n. See kembster.

kempstock, n. [Cf. keming-stock.] A capstan. Panurge took two great cables of the ship, and tied them to the kempstock or capstan which was on the deck towards the hatchway.

Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, II. 22.

kempt (kempt), a. past participle of kemb.

kempty (kemp'ti), a. and n. Same as kemp, 2.

kemset, n. A Middle English form of camis.

kemster, n. See kembster.

ken (ken), v.; pret. and pp. kenned, ppr. kenn-ing. [(a) < ME. kennen, show, declare, teach, < AS. cennan, cause to know, = OFries. kanna, kenna = OS. kennian (in comp. ant-kennian), cause to know, = D. kennen = OHG. kennan, chennan* (in comp. ar-, bi-, in-kennan), MHG. G. kennen = Icel. kenna = Sw. känna = Dan. kjænde, know, = Goth. kannjan, also in comp. us-kannjan, cause to know; (b) < ME. kennen, know, < Icel. kenna, know (above); an orig. casual verb, < AS. (etc.) ownnan, ind. cann, know: see can, 1.]

I. trans. 1†. To show; declare; teach; point out; tell.

Y louted not hem that me good kende,

I castide me no thing to be in that meen

To lone myn enemyes y wolde not entende.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 109.

"For thi mekenesse, man," quod she, "and for thi mylde speche,

I shal kenne the to my coeyn that Clergye is hosen."

Piers Plowman (B), x. 148.

2. To see; discern; recognize. [Obsolete or archaic.]

After many dayes sayling, they kenned land afarre off, whereunto the Pilots directed the ships.

Habington's Voyages, l. 246.

The shepherdes awayne you cannot wel ken, But it be by his pryde, from other men.

Spenser, Shep. Cal., September.

None but a spirit's eye

Might ken that rolling orb.

Shelley, Queen Mab, II.

3†. To lie within sight of; have a view of.

Pliny called a place in Pleadry Portum Morinorum Britannicum: that is, The British haven or port of the Morines, either for that they tooke ship there to passe over into Britain, or because it kenned Britaine over against it on the other side of the Sea.

Holland, tr. of Camden, II. 221.

4. To know; understand; take cognizance of. [Archaic or Scotch.]

By this mater I meane what myschefe befell,

There no cause was to ken but vnkynnd wordes.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 1432.

Wit and hus wit wisned me to hym,

To kenne and to knowe kyndliche Dowel.

Piers Plowman (O), xii. 141.

Fel. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.

Shak., M. W. of W., l. 2, 40.

5. In Scots law, to acknowledge or recognize by a judicial act: as, to ken a widow to her terce (that is, to recognize or decree by a judicial act the right of a widow to the life-terce of her share of her deceased husband's lands). See terce.

II. † intrans. To look around; gain knowledge by sight; discern.

At once, and far as angels ken, he views

The dismal situation waste and wild.

Milton, P. L., l. 28.

ken (ken), n. [< ken, v.] Cognizance; physical or intellectual view; especially, reach of sight or knowledge.

Let this suffice, that they are safely come within a ken of Dover.

While here, at home, my narrower ken Somewhat of manners saw, and men.

Scott, Marmion, iv, Int.

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken.

Keats, Sonnet on Chapman's Homer.

ken² (ken), v. [*< ME. kennon, < AS. cennan = OS. kennaian = OHG. *kennan, chennan (in comp. gi-chennan), beget, bring forth; causal of a primitive verb found in Teut. only in derivative, = L. root of gignere (OL. genero), beget, genus, kind, race, family, = Gr. root of γενεα, γενεα, be born, become, be, = Skt. jan, beget, intr. be born: see *kin*¹, *kind*¹, *kind*², *kindle*¹, etc., and genus, gender, generate, -gen, -genous, gony, etc.] I. trans. To beget; bring forth.

II. intrans. To breed; hatch out.

With his corps keutereth hem [eggs] till that they kenne,
And fowthith and fowthith till fowthith schewe
And outis of kynde hem keureu all aboute.

Richard the Redeless, III. 51.

ken³ (ken), n. pl. A dialectal variant of *kin*¹, plural of *cow*¹. Halliwel.

ken⁴ (ken), n. [*Cf. kern*².] A churn. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

ken⁵ (ken), n. [Perhaps an abbr. of *kennel*¹.] A place where low or disreputable characters lodge or meet: as, a padding-ken (a lodging-house for tramps); a sporting-ken. [Slang, Eng.] ken⁶ (ken), n. [Jap., < Chin. hien, q. v.] A prefecture or territorial division of Japan, governed by a kenrei. Japan is now divided into 3 fu and about 40 ken.

ken⁷ (ken), n. [Jap.] A Japanese measure of length, equal to 7½ English inches.

kench (kench), n. [Also kinch; a var. of canch: see canch.] 1. Same as canch.—2. A box or bin for use in salting fish or skins.

The seal-jakins are all taken to the salt-houses, and are salted in kenches, or square bins.

C. M. Seamount, Marine Mammals, p. 161.

The salt-house is a large, barn-like frame structure, so built as to afford one third of its width in the center, from end to end, clear and open as a passage-way, while on each side are rows of stanchions with sliding planks, which are taken down and put up in the form of deep bins, or boxes—kenches, the sealers call them.

Fisheries of U. S., v. II. 370.

kench-cured (kench'kurd), a. Cured with dry salt: said of fish, in distinction from pickled-cured. kendal (ken'dal), n. and a. [So called from Kendal, a town in Westmoreland, England, where it was first made.] I. n. A coarse woolen cloth.

Of kendal very coarse his coat was made.

Thynne, Pride and Lowliness.

He [Henry VIII.] was attended by twelve noblemen, all apparelled in short coats of Kentish kendal, with hoods and hoseen of the same. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 457.

II. a. Made of or resembling the woolen cloth called kendal.

A kendal coat in summer, and a frieze coat in winter.

Stafford (1581).

Three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green came at my back and let drive at me. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., II. 4, 240.

Kendall's case. See *case*¹.

kenet, a. and adv. Middle English form of *keen*¹. kenbowet, n. Same as kimbo. See akimbo.

Kentworth ivy. See *ivy*¹.

kenk (kengk), n. Same as *kin*¹.

Kennedy (ke-nē'di-ē), n. [NL. (Ventenat, 1804), named after Mr. Kennedy, a gardener of Hammersmith near London.] A genus of perennial leguminous herbs, belonging to the tribe Phaseoleae, or bean family, most nearly related to Hardenbergia, but differing from it in the more showy red or purple flowers and longer keel (relatively to the wings). There are 17 known species of this genus, all natives of Australia and Tasmania, many of which are cultivated for their showy flowers, under the name of bean-flower, but are more or less confounded by florists with Hardenbergia. K. rubicunda, the red bean-flower, is the species most frequently seen in conservatories of England and the United States. Numerous leaf-impressions found in the Tertiary rocks of Bohemia, Croatia, and Carinthia have been referred with confidence to this genus by competent specialists, and four fossil species are described.

Kennedyana (ken-e-di-ē-ā), n. pl. [NL. (Bentham, 1838), < Kennedy + -ana.] A subtribe of leguminous plants of the tribe Phaseoleae, embracing, in the systems of Endlicher and Lindley, the genera Kennedyia, Hardenbergia, Zichya, Physoleobium, and Leptocyanus. Originally written Kennediea.

kennel¹ (ken'el), n. [*< ME. kenel, kenell, < AF. kenil, OF. chenil = lt. canile, < ML. canile, a kennel, a house for a dog, < L. canis, a dog, + -ile, a suffix denoting a place where animals are kept, as in ovile, sheepfold, bovile, bovile, an ox-stall, etc.: see cane, canine, and *cf. kennel*¹.] 1. A house or cot for a dog, or for a pack of hounds.

Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out Shak., Learn, I. 4, 124.

2. A pack of hounds; a collection of dogs of any breed or of different breeds.

A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Mazed with a yelping kennel of French curs!
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 2, 47.

3. The hole of a fox or other beast; a haunt.

kennel² (ken'el), v.; pret. and pp. kennelled or kennelled, pp. kennelling or kennelling. [*< kennel*¹, n.] I. intrans. To lodge or dwell in a kennel, or in the mansion of a dog or a fox.

Who'd . . .
Kennel with his dogs, that had a prince Like this young Pennyboy to sojourn with!
B. Jonson, Staple of News, iv. 1.

Look you! hereabout it was that she [the other] kennel.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 60.

The dog kennelled in a hollow tree. Str. R. L'Ettrange.

II. trans. To keep or confine in a kennel.

kennel³ (ken'el), n. [< ME. canel, < OF. canel, assimilated chanal, > ME. chanel, E. channel: see channel (and canal), of which *kennel*³ is a doublet.] A little canal or channel; specifically, the drainage-channel of a street; a gutter.

If any of them happen to be hustled down by a post,
. . . so resins them into the kennel, who takes them vp or leads them home? Dekker, Seven Deadly Sins, p. 28.

The next rain wash'd it [the street-dust] quite away, so that the pavement and even the kennel were perfectly clean.
Franklin, Autobiog., I. 308.

Most of these Essays have been regularly reprinted twice or thrice a year, and conveyed to the public through the kennel of some engaging compilation.

Goldsmith, Essays, Prof.

kennel-coal (ken'el-kōl), n. See cannel-coal.

kennel-raker (ken'el-rā'kēr), n. One who rakes gutters; a low fellow.

Give your pottions
In seemly sort, and keep your hat off decently,
A fine paraphrase of a kennel-raker.

Fletcher (and another), The Prothetess, III. 1.

You did not love cruelty, you kennel-raker, you gibbetcarrier! Arbuthnot, Miscellaneous Works (ed. 1761), I. 49.

kennet¹, n. [< ME. kenet, kenit, < AF. kenet, dim. of ken, OF. chen, F. chien = Pg. cdo = It. cane, < L. canis, a dog: see cane, canine.] A small dog of some particular breed.

A kennet kryes therof, the hunt on hym callas.

Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), I. 1701.

My lord hadde a kennet fel,
That he loved awyth wel.

Seven Sages (ed. Wright), I. 1762.

kennet² (ken'et), n. [Origin obscure.] A cleat; a cavel.

kennet³ (ken'ing), n. [< ME. kenning = Dan. kjending, verbal n. of *ken*¹, v.] 1. Slight; view; especially, a distant view at sea.

Nawther company by course hade kennying of other,
but past to there purpos & no price made,
And sailit vpon syde vnto sere costye.

Deconstruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 2387.

2. Range or extent of vision, especially at sea; hence, a marine measure of about twenty miles.

"Scylley is a kennying, that is to say, about xx. miles from the very Westeste pointe of Cornewallia." Itin.
III. f. 6. Rom. of Parthenay (E. E. T. S.), Notes, p. 250.

Three kennyinges ferre on the see, that is, one and twenty leghes ferre.
Prose Romance of Melusine, fol. 61.

The next day about evening we saw, within a kennying, thick clouds, which did put us in some hope of land.
Bacon.

3. As little as one can recognize or discriminate; a small portion; a little: as, put in a kennying of salt. [Scotch.]

Though they may gang a kennin wrang,
To step aside is human.

Burns, To the Unco Guid.

kennying², n. [*< ken*² + -ing.] The cicatricula or tread of an egg. Also kinnin.

Ovi umbilicus. The straine or kennying of the eggs.
Nomenclator (1585).

There is found in the top or sharper end of an egg, within the shell, a certain round knot resembling a drop or a navill rising above the rest, which they call a kennying.

Holland, tr. of Pliny, x. 62.

keno (kē'nō), n. [Also spelled kino; origin obscure.] A game of chance depending on the drawing of numbers. Each player selects a card or cards bearing a series of numbers in lines of five each, paying a set price for each card. Each player puts a button on any number on his card which is announced as drawn from a wheel, and he who first has five buttons in a row wins all the money taken for that round, minus the bank's discount.

kenogenesis (ken-ō-jen'e-sis), n. [< Gr. κενός, empty (see cenotaph, etc.), + γενεσις, generation.] Vitiating evolution, as distinguished from hereditary evolution; ontogenesis modified by adaptation, and therefore not true to its type; that development of an individual germ which does not truly epitomize and repeat the phylogenetic evolution of its race or stock: the opposite of palingenesis. See biogeny. Also kenogeny.

The ontogenetic recapitulation of the phylogeny is the more perfect the more the palingenetic process is conserved by heredity, and the more imperfect in proportion as the later modified evolution (kenogenesis) is introduced by adaptation. Haeckel, quoted in Encyc. Brit., XX. 432.

kenogenesis (ken'ō-jē-net'ik), a. [< kenogenesis, after genetic.] Of or pertaining to kenogenesis.—Kenogenetic process. See the extract.

The term kenogenetic process (or vitiation of the history of the germ) is applied to all such processes in germ-history as are not to be explained by heredity from primordial parent-germs, but which have been acquired at a later time in consequence of the adaptation of the germ or embryo form to special conditions of evolution.

Haeckel, Evol. of Man (trans.), I. 10.

kenogenetically (ken'ō-jē-net'ik-lī), adv. In a kenogenetic manner. Haeckel.

kenogeny (ke-noj'e-nī), n. [< Gr. κενός, empty, + -γενεα, < γενεσις, producing: see -genous.] Same as kenogenesis.

kenosis (ke-nō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. κένωσις, an emptying, depletion, in theological use with ref. to Phil. II. 6, 7, "who, being in the form of God, . . . emptied himself" (εἰς τὴν ἐκείνου), taking the form of a servant" (revised version); < κενόω, make empty, < κενός, empty.] In theol., the self-limitation and self-renunciation of the Son of God in the incarnation.

Some restrict the kenosis to the laying aside of the divine form of existence, or divine dignity and glory; others strain it in different degrees, even to a partial or entire emptying of the divine essence out of himself, so that the inner trinitarian process between Father and Son, and the government of the world through the Son, were partially or wholly suspended during his earthly life.

Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, III. § 142, 8.

kenotic (ke-not'ik), a. [< Gr. κενωτικός, pertaining to emptying, < κενόω, emptying: see kenosis.] Of or pertaining to the kenosis.

Instead of raising the finite to the infinite, the modern Kenotic theory lowers the infinite to the finite.

Schaff, Christ and Christianity, p. 110.

kenoticist (ke-not'ik-sist), n. [< kenotic + -ist.] One who believes in the theory of the kenosis.

The Chalcedonian Christology has been subjected to a rigorous criticism in Germany by Schleiermacher, Baur, Dörner, Rother, and the modern Kenoticists.

Schaff, Christ and Christianity, p. 67.

kensback (kenz'bak), a. [See kenspeak.] 1. Conspicuous; evident; clear.—2. Perverse. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng. in both senses.]

kenspeak (ken'spek), a. [Also corruptly kensback; more commonly kenspeckle, q. v.; < leel, kennspek, the faculty of recognition, < kennit, a mark (cf. G. kennzeichnen), < kenna, know, recognize, ken, + spek, wisdom, < spakr, wise, having prophetic vision or insight: see *ken*¹.] Known by marks; strongly marked or conspicuous; readily recognizable. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

The Homeric text is . . . certainly kenspeak, to use a good old English word—that is to say, recognizable; you challenge it for Homer's whenever you see it.

De Quincey, Homer, III.

kenspeckle (ken'spek-l), a. [E. dial. also kenspeckled; in pop. apprehension "speckled or marked so as to be conspicuous" (Halliwel): see kenspeak.] Same as kenspeak, and the more common form. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Eng. Men. What kind of a Woman is it you enquire after?

Gib. Gend troth, she's no Kenspeckle, she's aw in a Clowd [she had a Spanish veil over her].

Mrs. Centlivre, The Wonder, III.

I grant ye his face is kenspeckle,
That the white o' his e's is turn'd out.

Nicol, Poems, II. 187.

It is a kenspeckle hoof-mark, for the shoe was made by old Roke of Canuoble—I would swear to the curve of the cawker.

Scott, Monastery, xxxiv.

ken¹ (kent), n. [Perhaps a var. of *can*¹, n., taken in sense of "that which cants or tilts": see *can*¹, v. and n.] 1. A long staff used by shepherds for leaping over ditches and brooks; a rough walking-stick; a pole. [Scotch.]

A better lad ne'er lean'd out o'er a ken.

Ramsay, Richy and Sandy.

He bade me fling down my ken, and see me and my mither yielded ourselves prisoners.

Scott, Old Mortality, xiv.

He carried a long pole or ken, like the alpenstock, tolerably polished, with a turned top on it, on which he rested.

Dr. J. Brown, Spare Hours, 1st ser., p. 424.

2. See the extract.

A hand of fat . . . is left round the neck [of the whale], called the kent, to which hooks and ropes are attached for the purpose of shifting round the carcass.

Ore. Dict., III. 451.

kent¹ (kent), v. [< kent¹, n.] I. trans. 1. To propel, as a boat, by pushing with a kent or long pole against the bottom of a river; punt. [Scot.].—2. To tilt or turn over (a whale) by means of a hook and tackle inserted into the kent.

II. intrans. To propel a boat by pushing it with a kent.

"They will row very slow," said the page, "or kent where depth permits, to avoid noise."

Scott, Abbot, xxxv.

kent² (kent). A dialectal preterit of ken¹. [Scot.].

kentalt, n. An obsolete form of quintal.

I give this towel to thee, richly worth

A kentalt, or an hundred-weight of gold.

Chapman, Blind Beggar of Alexandria (Works, 1874, I. 5).

Kent bugle (kent bu'gl). [So called after the Duke of Kent.] Same as key-bugle.

Kentia (ken'ti-ä), n. [NL. (Blume, 1836), named after Miss Kent, author of "Sylvan Sketches," London, 1825.] A genus of feather-palms belonging to the tribe Areceae, formerly including a number of the finest palms of that tribe which have latterly been referred to various other genera, as Areca, Hydrastele, Nemagella, Hedyoscepe, Rhoplostylis, Chionostigma, and Howea. It is now restricted to three species of New Guinea and the Moluccas, characterized by pointed leaf-segments and sharply four-angled branches of the spadix. K. Moluccana attains a height of 90 feet, and is comparatively hardy.

Kentish (ken'tish), a. [< ME. Kentish, < AS. Centisc, < Cent, Cent (L. Centium), Kent.] Of or pertaining to Kent, the southeasternmost county of England.

The Citizens and East Kentish men coming to composition with them [the Danes] for three thousand pound, they departed thence to the Isle of Wight.

Milton, Hist. Eng., vi.

Kentish balsam, the herb Mercurialis perennis, dog's mercury, whose leaves resemble those of the garden-balsam. [Eng.].—Kentish crow, the hooded crow, Corvus cornix.—Kentish fire. (a) The continuous cheering common at the Protestant meetings held in Kent in 1828 and 1829, with the view of preventing the passing of the Catholic Relief Bill. (b) The shouting practised by Orangemen at political meetings, in derision of Roman Catholics. [Eng.].—Kentish glory, a beautiful moth, Endromis versicolora, of an orange-brown color with black and white markings, expanding about 2½ inches: the only British representative of the group to which it pertains. The larva is very pale green, and is found feeding on birch late in the summer; the moth appears in April.—Kentish plover. See plover.—Kentish rag, in geol., a dark-colored, tough, highly fossiliferous, arenaceous limestone, belonging to the Lower Greensand. It occurs at Hythe and other places in Kent, England, and from its durability is much valued for building.—Kentish tern, Sterna cantabrigia. See tern.

kentlet (ken'tl), n. An obsolete form of quintal.

kentledge (kent'lej), n. [Appar. *< kent, var. of cantl (see kentl), + ledge (a thing laid down).] Naut., pig-iron laid in the hold of a ship for ballast. Also kintledge.

kentrolite (ken'trō-lit), n. [< Gr. κεντρον, point, center, + λίθος, stone.] A rare silicate of lead and manganese occurring in southern Chili in acutely terminated crystals, also in sheaf-like aggregates of a reddish-brown color.

Kentuckian (ken-tuk'i-an), a. and n. [< Kentucky (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Kentucky, one of the southern United States, bordering on the Ohio.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Kentucky.

Kentucky blue-grass. See blue-grass.

Kentucky warbler. See warbler.

Keokuk limestone. See limestone.

keora-oil (kē-ō' rā-ōil), n. [E. Ind.] A volatile oil derived from the male flowers of the fragrant screw-pine, Pandanus odoratissimus. Also ket-goo-oil.

keout (kē-out' or kyout), n. [Perhaps imitative.] A mongrel crowd. Hallwell. [Prov. Eng.]

